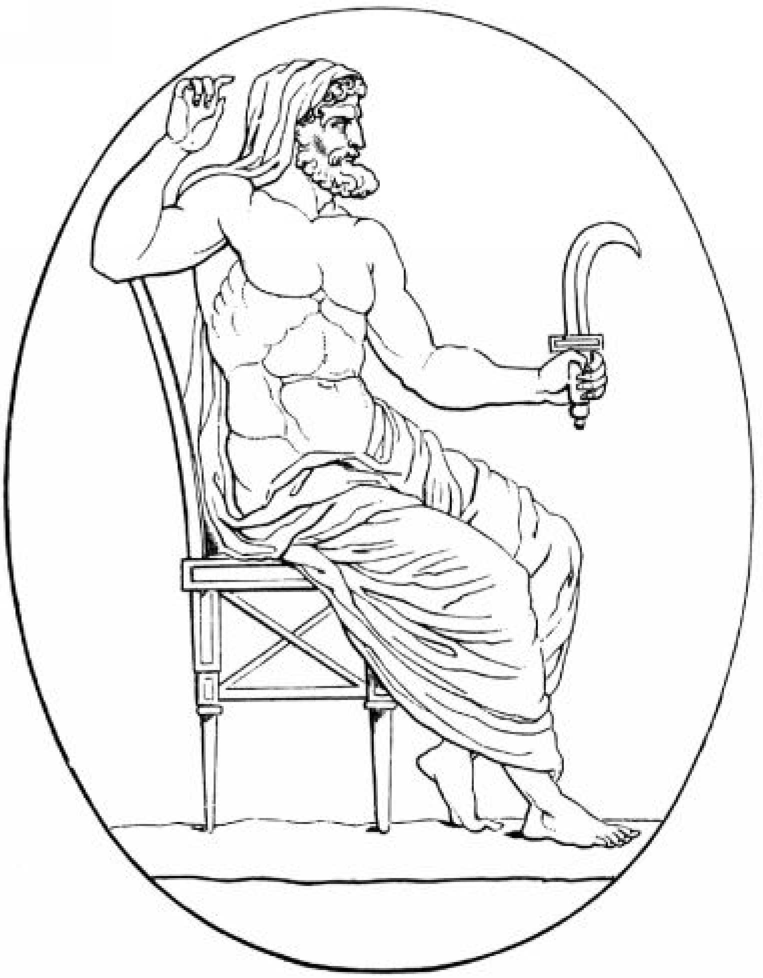
I have reached out to nearly everyone of note in the "alternative media" community and been shunned by each and every one. Felipe Robles came to me. Since then, his research, writing and aid have become foundational to my efforts to expose the Great Harlot and I am honored to have him write the Forward to this exposé.



Cronus depicted with the specialized ritual knife he used to castrate his father. (Wikimedia Commons) According to Hesiod, the Titan Cronus so lusted for power that he castrated his father Uranus, then married his sister Rhea and reigned with her as king and queen.

When it was prophesied that one of his own children would dethrone him, he began devouring them as they were born.

In Roman mythology Cronus was adopted and renamed Saturnus, a title with roots in the Hebrew Satan.

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements..i
Preface..vii
Forward..viii
Chapter 1: The Devil’s Simulation...1
Truth Mixed With Lies..3
Phrygian “Freedom”..13
The First “Orgy Island”..32
Chapter 2: The Beast Transformed..39
Saint Simon..49
Chapter 3: Slavers...51
For Whom The Bell Tolls..74
Chapter 4: The Pedocracy Puts on a Lab Coat.............................78
The Pedophiles of Pseudo-Science..108
Criminal Behavior..118
Networking the Devil’s Simulation...143
Chapter 5: Preyed Upon..145
Chapter 6: “Lolita”..167
“Baby Burlesks”...190
Satanic Serendipity?..191
Stockholm Syndrome..193
Chapter 7: No Laughing Matter..194
Chapter 8: Spotlighting...207
Boston Catholic Outreach to “Sexual Minorities”.......................217
Chapter 9: Helter Skelter..237
Young Charlie..242
“Charlie’s Girls”...248
Helter Skelter..255

Chapter 10: Maskell—The Real Murdering Monster, Not Manson......258
But Nun Are Brave.......269
Black Sabbath.......270
Serial Lawlessness.......275
Murder(s).......296
Chapter 11: "A Gross Breach Of Trust..".......298
John Charles McQuaid: Ruler of Catholic Ireland.......321
Chapter 12: The Milwaukee Cannibal.......329
Chapter 13: Paedophiles Prove War is Pointless.......348
Chapter 14: Federal Bureau of Obfuscation.......363
Chapter 15: House of Horrors.......370
All Roads Still Lead To Rome.......387
London.......390
Shirley Oaks / Lambeth.......393
Chapter 16: Who Took Johnny?.......408
Where's Johnny?.......427
Depressed.......437
Chapter 17: In The Heart Of The Beast.......443
Chapter 18: Milk Carton Kids.......450
Chapter 19: "Satanic Panic".......456
The Mayor of Sin City.......461
Hysterical.......467
Chapter 20: "Just A Cog".......473
Taken.......486
Chapter 21: The Boys Town Cover-Up.......498
Author, Author.......502
Under Sus-Spence.......503
Good Morning Vietnam!.......509
Chapter 22: Muddy Waters In Arkansas.......512

Chapter 23: Primæ Noctis..524
Ridsdale & Pell..527

Chapter 24: Grove Ritual..579
Richard Allen Davis...581
Three Strikes...583
No Klaas...585
Bohemian..588

Chapter 25: River's End..592

Chapter 26: Maddie...608

Chapter 27: The Black Waters of Malta...613
Joseph Schmitz...620
J. Cofer Black...623
Special..634

Chapter 28: Vampire of the Caribbean...641
The Patron Saint of NAMBLA..646

Chapter 29: Child Predator Services..647

Chapter 30: Pedd State...655
Both Sides of the Street..663

Chapter 31: "#PizzaGate"..672
Learning Against Learning...678

Chapter 32: CONCLUSION...692

About the Author..693

Preface

“How could ‘they’ keep a conspiracy secret?”

“Of course we went to the moon!”

Of course Lee Harvey Oswald fired three shots from an antiquated 6.5mm bolt-action Manlicher-Carcano from 200 yards away in 8.3 seconds blowing off the back of President Kennedy’s head (shooting from behind him).

What you are about to read in these pages will forever put to bed any notion of normalcy, trust in your major institutions or ease of sleep that you ever had.

A system of evil controls your government, your military, your law enforcement, your judges and even your entertainment that is so vile the details of it may very well leave you catatonic.

It is, quite literally, of “Biblical proportions”.

AUTHOR’S NOTES:

Multiple citations are not redundantly attributed but the bibliography is meticulous and exhaustive. It was my intent to give you all the tools you would need to verify my work and pick up where I left off. I have maintained hyperlinks, color and a few highlights for digital versions of this book.

In dealing with these issues, I will frequently rely upon my own Christian Faith for moral references as well as passages from the Bible to validate my positions. In no way do I wish this to alienate non-Christians as this information is for anyone who lives as a slave under the current system of secret oppression.

That’s about “99%” of you.

FORWARD

Growing up as a Seventh Day Adventist, I was quickly introduced to the concept that the Roman Catholic Church was some sort of devilish cult. Grandma would shout “Beast!” as soon as the Pope appeared on TV, usually to address and/or condemn any random act of violence happening in the world. Of course, at the time I gave little to no importance to what the old man dressed in white had to say. If only I knew...

Time passed and my heart was continually hardened as I made my way through the Godless system of secular education. Even the daily Bible readings I had with my parents as a child felt silly and vague by the time I was in college. It seemed that the fears of Martin Luther concerning the Universities turning into gates to hell were indeed true. The world, or more precisely the Devil’s Simulation, had successfully convinced me that all I had ever learned about God was based on fairy tales: moral stories not to be taken literally.

By destiny, or by God’s Plan (as I prefer to think), I decided to move to the United States as many Latinos do in search of a better life. Digging for the Truth was in no way part of my plan. However, as I started browsing countless “conspiracy theory” websites and watching even more YouTube videos on the topic, my view of the world radically changed. All the sudden names like “Rockefeller”, “Rothschild” and “Bilderberg” popped up on my radar and I thought I had everything figured out: “It’s the Jews!”. Well, not all of them. Just the bad ones…

But at this stage, I came across an interview with a researcher named “Johnny Cirucci”. Never heard of him before anywhere around the “Truth Community” but decided to give him a chance not knowing at the time that that particular interview would change my life forever. Johnny was exposing with sources and citations what could easily be tracked: who was really responsible for the endless War on Terror, 9/11, the Kennedy and Lincoln assassinations and more. He proved that, to this very day, all roads lead to Rome. More precisely, they lead to the Vatican and the Jesuits.

As a result, I reached out to Johnny and to my surprise, he got back to me. Anyone that ever spent time researching these topics knows that it’s not the norm. Soon enough I was tracking for myself the Catholics or Jesuits in the woodpiles of many prominent people in the world. From politics to entertainment, I was able to find the Catholic connections with no effort. It’s like they were there all the time, but only at that moment I had acquired the proper glasses to see past the innumerous distractions. Practically, what started out as a hobby evolved into a volunteer job.

The peak of our collaboration was a program Johnny and I did together in which we re-examined the infamous Franklin Cover-Up that took place in Omaha, Nebraska and surfaced publicly in the late 80’s. The information we gathered on this case alone was impressive. More astounding was the fact that it’s never been exposed the way it should. Did you know that Lawrence E. King Jr., then high-level Republican official and manager of the Franklin Federal Credit Union, procured boys to be abused by the Elite from Boys Town, a Catholic non-profit organization supposedly dedicated to care for children? How did such an organization manage to brilliantly disassociate itself from this story? Could it have been the fact that the lead perspective in the case, John DeCamp, studied in a Catholic monastery as a boy intending to be a priest? Or the fact that DeCamp was the lawyer of Monsignor Robert Hupp, the overseer of Boy’s Town at the time? Do you think Hupp’s actions at Boys Town contributed to him being nominated as a representative to the United Nations on behalf of children? Why did the FBI try to intimidate Alisha Owen, one of the victims? Why did it do whatever it took to cover-up the pedophilia allegations? Is it possible that their interests are not aligned with those of the American people?

[ix] It’s my opinion that the Boys Town Cover-Up (as it should be named) re-directed our attention towards exposing the underbelly of the world system, namely the rape and torture of kids and young adults. It wasn’t for the sake of devious pleasure alone, but as a requirement to anyone who wished to acquire power and influence. Hence: the “Pedocracy”. Recent developments in the case brought to light by the mainstream and alternative media as “PizzaGate” prompted common people to research this dark subject. However, as well-intentioned as a person can be, their efforts will lead to little results without knowing the root cause of the problem. As Red Skull stated in the movie Captain America: the First Avenger, “cut off one head and two more shall take its place”.

In a world where it’s convenient to find information anywhere, disinformation agents and opportunists can be found in hoards. Who is to blame? Is it the Democrats or the Republicans? Or perhaps is it the bankers? How about the Satanists? The blame is cleverly shifted to fit the bias of each individual.

In the face of these odds, Johnny took upon himself the task of going against this terrible Babylonian Hydra that has been feeding off of our children since the beginning of time. As a true Protestant of his age, Johnny exposes the Roman Catholic Church and its Special Forces, the Jesuits, as the foundational structure through which the Devil has built and runs his simulation. In contrast to the movie Spotlight, which only focus on the dioceses of Boston and treats the problem as a recent one, you will learn that pedophilia in the priesthood is endemic and rampant throughout the world. Moreover, this behavior is not only tolerated but encouraged and can be traced back to the origins of the Papacy as it incorporated its philosophy from the Babylonian and Roman Empires that came before it. Johnny really goes deep into the rabbit-holes to explore the Catholic connections behind Jimmy Savile, Charles Manson, “Doctor” Alfred Kinsey, Jeffrey Epstein, Johnny Gosch and the Maddie McCann abduction, as well as many others. They are all the tie-ins that were meticulously covered-up or purposively ignored by agents of the Whore of Babylon in order to erase her tracks.

This is a book that perhaps none of us would like to write, but it’s paramount that this information come to light as the rape, torture, and murder of kids is ongoing. Even though it’s our firm belief that we’re entrusted with this knowledge and charged to act upon it by the Lord Jesus Christ, it should be the duty of every man, Christian or non-Christian, to care for the well-being of women and children. The Bible commands us to have nothing to do with the fruitless deeds of darkness, but rather expose them (Ephesians 5:11-12). It also guarantees us that Christ, upon His Return, will break them in pieces (Daniel 2:34) and this System shall be thrown down and shalt not be found forevermore (Revelation 18:21). It’s also worthy to remember that if you’re a Roman Catholic, Jesus has lovingly called you to come out of her, lest you share in her sins, and lest you receive her plagues (Revelation 18:4).

It’s impossible to tell all the stories of countless victims of Luciferian abuse in one work but at this time it’s the best we can do with the resources we have available. With this work, we show that we care for the little ones and exhort you to do the same as we patiently await the right time given by the Lord to take the next step and physically stand against the evildoers. Trust us, the time is coming!

I thank God for the opportunity to have met Johnny and the rest of the team. We will drive on as there is no coming back once you know the Truth. If you haven’t already, it’s my hope that you experience the same and, if possible, take the Lord with you in this journey.

~ Your Huckleberry, “Doc”

And it came about when Samuel was old, that he installed his sons as judges for Israel. ...

They were judging in Beersheba. But his sons did not walk in his way, for they followed after unlawful gain, and they took bribes, and they perverted justice.

And all the elders of Israel gathered together and they came to Samuel at Ramah. They said to him, "You are old and your sons do not walk in your ways. Now, install for us a king to govern us like all the nations."

But the thing was evil in the eyes of Samuel, because they said, "Give us a king to govern us." And Samuel prayed to the Lord.

The Lord said to Samuel, "Obey the voice of the people in relation to all that they say to you. For it is not you they have rejected, but Me they have rejected from reigning over them. Just as all the deeds which they have done to Me, from the day I brought them up from Egypt even to this day, in that they have forsaken Me and have served other gods, so they are doing also to you now. Now then, obey their voice. Only you will testify against them and proclaim to them the judgment concerning the king who will reign over them."

So Samuel said all the words of the Lord to the people who were asking from him a king. And he said, "This will be the judgment concerning the king who will reign over you:"

"Your sons he will take..."

— "And your daughters will be taken..."

~ I Samuel 8:1, 2-11, 14 (Modern English)

Chapter 1

The Devil's Simulation

~29 AD: The Temptation of Christ.

> Again, the devil took Him up on a very high mountain and showed Him all the kingdoms of the world and their grandeur, and said to Him, "All these things I will give You if You will fall down and worship me."
>
> Then Jesus said to him, "Be gone, Satan! For it is written, 'You shall worship the Lord your God, and Him only shall you serve.'"
>
> Then the devil left Him, and immediately angels came and ministered to Him. ~ Matthew 4:8-11 (Modern English)

Certainly, in our spinning-globe-Earth-modern-reality, such Bible passages seem quaint, perhaps even ridiculous.

But what if some version of the devil's narrative (remembering that he is the very "father of lies", [John 8:44]) were accurate?

Perhaps he has utilized whatever advantages he retained as an inter-dimensional entity, along with those loyal to him, and conducted a malignant version of the game "Sims" — slowly building empires from the ground up and giving his most trusted lieutenants control over principalities. (Daniel 10:13)

Perhaps God allowed this to take place for several reasons:

- He places restrictions upon His interventions to guarantee free will is granted His created beings.
- The malignancy of the empires created by the devil are used by God to test and refine His Children; to perfect them as companions for His Son. [Romans 8:29]
- He has pity for the angelic beings that do not receive the opportunity for redemption that human souls have. [Matthew

25:41; II Peter 2:4]

- He is giving those who choose to participate “enough rope to hang themselves” as a Testimony to His Justice.

500
500
100
100
STONE AGE
Menu
Chat Diplomacy

Screenshot from the Microsoft video game Age of Empires.

(Wikimedia Commons/Fair Use)

If true, does this put the words of Jesus to Pontius Pilate in a different light, “My Kingdom is not of this world”? [John 18:36]

The Greek κόσμου (“kosmou”) translated as “world” has an interesting double meaning to include “adornment” or “trappings”. Is there a hidden metaphor that implies a malignant system at work; the devil’s empire-building simulation?

How can Christ be “King of kings and Lord of lords” (Revelation 19:16) and yet not rule “in this world”?

Was Jesus giving Pilate a false sense of security by actually saying “That which empowers Me is not the system which has elevated you...”?

This further makes sense in light of the assertion that all of Creation was made through Christ and for Him. (Colossians 1:16)

If true, then the Devil’s Simulation would be a tenuous parasite, controlling God’s Creation. As a fallen angel, he has the handicap of needing to co-opt human hands to do the work for him. He would need a system that insured the loyalty of anyone he empowered. It would be a system that guaranteed any human he used would someday share in his judgment.

Those who choose loyalty to God would be known by partaking of His Nature; compassion and selfless love. (I John 4:7-21) The devil would force his followers to show their allegiance by going as far in the opposite direction as possible: lust of any kind, feeding self-interest, creating a callous, inhuman monster.

This is exactly what history shows.

The Bible states that the first rebellion by man against God was led by Nimrod in Babylon.

Historian Alexander Hislop (1807 to 1865) wrote in his epic exposé on the Catholic Church — The Two Babylons[1] — that Nimrod (also known as “Ninus”) was executed by Noah’s son Shem, the progenitor of the Hebrew race, for apostasy. His body was cut into pieces and sent to the four corners of the Earth as a warning to anyone who might follow after him.

Thus began the deification and mythologizing of rebellion against God via a methodology so powerful it seems almost certainly to have come from a source outside our time/space continuum.

Truth Mixed With Lies

The Greek Titan Prometheus was said by the poet Hesiod to have stolen fire from Olympus to give to man. Furious with him, Zeus bound him to a rock amongst the mountains in the Caucasus where an eagle pulls out and devours his liver daily, as the immortal Titan's organ regenerated each night.

Prometheus is considered by the powerful Elite to be a metaphor for Lucifer, "the light-bearer", and "fire" is likened to the secret knowledge and power Lucifer bestows upon his worshippers.

Although the average rational adult sees such myths as laughable, the Luciferian Elite believe them to be the reality which guides their every move.

Their reverence for them is betrayed in their favorite, highly-controlled medium: movies.

In the climax of the $165,000,000 Disney/Marvel comics science fantasy extravaganza, Doctor Strange (starring Benedict Cumberbatch, Rachel McAdams, Mads Mikkelsen and Tilda Swinton), Strange faces off against interdimensional, world-ending evil in Dormammu. The hero (destined to become "Sorcerer Supreme") levitates into Dormammu's dimension against impossible odds and manages to trap Dormammu in a never-ending time loop but in order to do so, Strange must accept the dragon-creature killing him over and over and over again until Dormammu submits to a "bargain" in exhausted frustration.

Dr. Stephen Strange, by Maxifajardo, Wikimedia Commons

In that fantasy, Prometheus wins.

To add further twist, Benedict Cumberbatch also voiced and acted the computer-graphics-interfaced (“CGI”) Dormammu.

Also in 2016 was an even more blatant homáge to the unbelievable: the story of Osiris, Isis, Horus and Set retold with a $140,000,000 budget in Gods of Egypt starring 300’s Gerard Butler.

A title search in the Internet Movie Database for “Hercules” turns up no fewer than two hundred works spanning from 1938 to 2017 (excluding documentaries on the propeller-driven military transport of the same name).

In the midst of Adam’s fall from grace came the promise of a Redeemer —

> And the Lord God said unto the serpent,
> Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life:
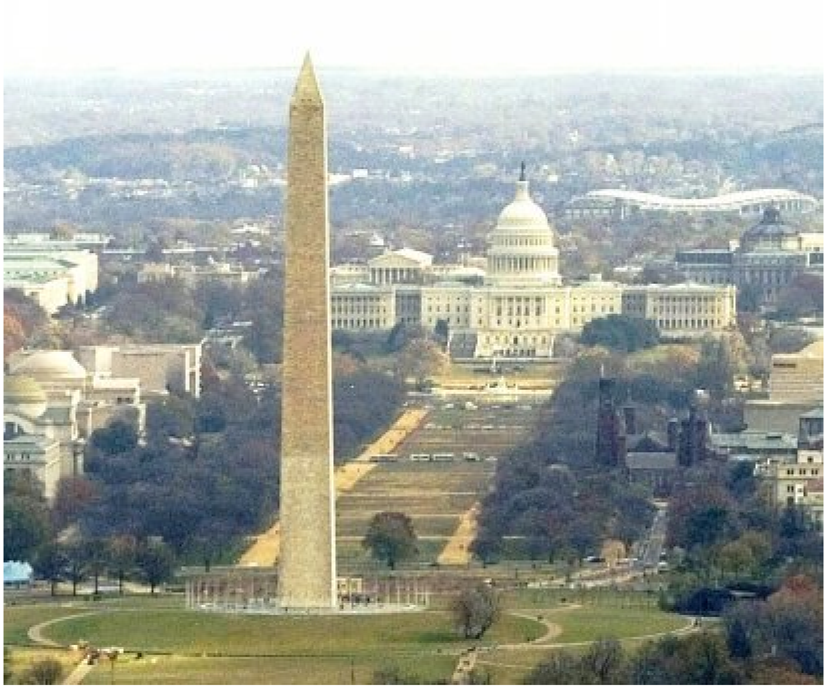
> And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her Seed; [“He”; Hebrew ה֖וּא] shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise His Heel. ~ Genesis 3:14-15 (King James Version, capitalization added)

This prophecy of a Messiah who would arrive via a virgin birth (“Seed of the woman”, confirmed in Isaiah 7:14) and be cut off, but not for Himself (Daniel 9:26), only to return in power and glory (Acts 1:11, Isaiah 9:6-7) was co-opted and powerfully used by the worshippers of Lucifer — “Luciferians”.

Their legends had the wife of Nimrod (executed and dismembered by Noah’s son Shem for his rebellion against YHWH), Semiramis, seek out his body parts to re-assemble him. Unable to locate his genitals, some stated she fashioned them herself, others that the fish god Dagon pulled them from the water for her. She then applied sex-magic (designated by occultist Aleister Crowley as “magick”) and impregnated herself with the “child of promise” — her husband reincarnated and renamed Tammuz.

St. Peter’s Square, Daryl Mitchell, Wikimedia Commons



Chief Photographer’s Mate Johnny Bivera, U.S.N., Wikimedia Commons

This “sex-magick” is conjured in the architecture of the Vatican; an obelisk (phallus) across from a dome (womb).

> The Egyptian version of the legend of Nimrod has a fascinating twist; the good god Osiris (Nimrod) is murdered by his evil brother Set (Shem) while his wife Isis (Semiramis) manages to conceive his son Horus with him, posthumously.
>
> It is this undead body part of Osiris that sprouts up the many obelisks around the world and the most significant of them are erected across from domed structures that represent the womb of Isis. ~ Illuminati Unmasked[2]

This pattern was cunningly duplicated by Roman Catholic Freemason Pierre Charles “Peter” L’Enfant for Washington, District of Columbia, and finalized with the greatly exaggerated phallic obelisk of architect Robert Mills.

The “mother goddess” has taken on many forms through the centuries, “Columbia” being one of the more recent versions.

What has been consistent, however, has been the connection to debauchery, fixation on reproduction and proof of dedication by causing the innocent to suffer.

Bust of Attis, Jastrow, Wikimedia Commons

These are all foundational to the Devil's Simulation.

In Greece, the mother-goddess Cybele was honored in such fashion. The most iconic example of blood-sacrifice to Cybele was the slaughter of a bull upon her altar, known as the Taurobolium.

The consort of Cybele was Attis, a youth who was so dedicated to her that he cut off his own genitals in her service.

The voluntary or involuntary castration of young men became a key part of pagan rites.

Such boys were presented to kings as cowed servants, guaranteed not to interfere with royal harems.

These abominable practices go back to the dawn of "civilization".[3]

Across the centuries it was learned that court "eunuchs" could also be employed as minstrels known as "castrati" (singular, "castrato").

> ... lack of testosterone meant that [the victim's] epiphyses (bone-joints) did not harden in the normal manner. Thus the limbs of the castrati often grew unusually long, as did the bones of their ribs. This, combined with intensive training, gave them unrivalled lung-power and breath capacity.[1] Operating through small, child-sized vocal cords, their voices were also extraordinarily flexible, and quite different from the equivalent adult female voice. Their vocal range was higher than that of the uncastrated adult male. ~ Wikipedia[4]

With good reason is the practice known by an Italian term. It wasn't until 1861[5] that the practice was finally outlawed in Italy but it continued to be openly “tolerated” and secretly encouraged by the Vatican at least until 1959.

Thousands of boys were mutilated regularly, ostensibly to give them singing voices unattainable any other way but most never sang after they were victimized. As the Guardian admitted —

> ... let us remember the many thousands of boys who did go under the knife (up to 4,000 a year, between the age of eight and 13), but whose names are long forgotten. ... hundreds [ended up] on the streets as beggars or prostitutes.[6]

“Prostitute” is extremely misleading. It conjures images of male gigolos servicing desperate women.

The reality (then and now) is that the majority of male “prostitutes” are violated serving homosexual men.

This was particularly the case for boys who had been feminized by castration.

Fitting in perfectly with the agenda was how most boys never survived the “procedure”. Excused as having fallen to incompetent “surgeons”, they were offered up before Attis and Cybele regardless of the reason, whether truth or propaganda.

> And those were the ones who survived the operation. Depending on the executant — at best a skilled surgeon, at worst a back-street barber or abortionist, or the knife-wielders of Norcia, Umbria’s pig (and boy) castration capital — there was a very high mortality rate. Some of these deaths were the result of haemorrhaging or post-operative infection in a pre-antibiotic age. Others came from overdoses of opium, used as a sedative in conjunction with a hot bath and judicious pressure on the carotid arteries.[7]

Even as anger rose over the practice, castrati like Alessandro Moreschi (1858 – 1922) continued to entertain Papal courts in the Sistine Chapel.

His voice was captured by phonograph recordings and again the Guardian must admit the mutilation did him little good.

> The strange, swooping, curdled sound of Moreschi's voice was subsequently captured for posterity on phonograph rolls in the early 1900s. This is fascinating, but by no means easy listening; ... these recordings from his early 40s show him in less than lovely vocal shape. [8]

The fact that castroti were common in Rome into the 20th century is labeled by such media as "ambivalent" at best and "hypocritical" at worst, citing supposed Vatican "restrictions" against the practice.

The reality is that no modern Pope has acknowledged the practice, not to mention outlawed it or even apologized for being the bastion of its proliferation.

> Italy's leading newspaper, Corriere della Sera, said the Pope ... should follow up his admission of church wrongs ... by expressing sorrow for the castrati.
>
> "Despite the willingness to address just about any issue, the current pope has yet to confront an unresolved problem of ... history. Why doesn't he suggest prayers and remorse for the church's past connivance with the practice of castrating males?"
>
> Human rights activists and academics endorsed the call. Amnesty International said the value of recognising past wrongs in an apology should not be underestimated.
>
> "Many of those afflicted by ongoing human rights abuses — including genital mutilations of women and rape as torture — desperately desire official recognition of the terrible wrongs done to them. An apology from those involved may be the hardest thing of all to achieve, and the most valued."[9]

In fact, the only Papal documents referenced are those supporting the barbarism!

> Pope Sisto V ... sanctioned their presence in the Vatican by a papal bull in 1589.[10]

When sources like The Guardian greatly over-state the musical excuse for the ancient rite, without ever calling it a ritual of pagan worship, one wonders how the research could be so short-sighted.

When media goes even further by misquoting and blaming the Bible, the "wonder" is solved (they're agents of the Vatican).

> Their ability to sing beyond normal human limits enraptured opera-goers, emperors and popes, who commissioned a choir of castrati to perform in the Sistine chapel. An edict by St. Paul prevented women singing in church.[11]

Note that no such "edict" is cited.

There are several New Testament passages from Paul, Peter and even Jesus regarding gender roles but they usually pertain to the relationship between a husband and wife.

Wives are told to submit to the authority of their husbands [I Peter 3:1] but immediately following husbands are told to cherish and care for their wives in honoring their submission. The consequences of their failure to do so would affect their very communion with God!

> Likewise, you husbands, live considerately with your wives, giving honor to the woman as the weaker vessel, since they too are also heirs of the grace of life, so that your prayers will not be hindered. ~ I Peter 3:7, Modern English

Essentially, God will turn His Back upon a husband who fails to cherish his wife with the sacrificial love equal to that which put Christ on the cross. [Ephesians 5:25]

With that context, Paul addressed women as students of the Word (not in worship). He also made it clear that such an "edict" was his in keeping with Jewish Law [I Corinthians 14:34], not as a specific Commandment from God.

> A woman must quietly receive instruction with entire submissiveness. But I do not allow a woman to teach or exercise authority over a man, > but to remain quiet. For it was Adam who was first created, and then Eve. ~ I Timothy 2:11-13, New American Standard

As one understands that the agenda of the Roman Catholic "Counter-Reformation", masterminded by the Jesuits, is to discredit the Bible, it becomes clear whom the editors at The Guardian (and other major papers) answer to.

However, a little-reported story has surfaced from the Netherlands which proves beyond any doubt that mutilation of boys has a much more sinister purpose for Rome.

The Handelsblad en de Nieuwe Rotterdamse Courant, a Dutch newspaper (usually abbreviated "NRC"), broke the story briefly in 2012 and it was subsequently remarked upon by the Telegraph. Beyond that, media ignored it — more proof of who is actually in control.

In 1956, young Henk Heithuis reported that he had been sexually abused by clergy at a Roman Catholic boarding home. In response to his report, he was forcibly castrated.

When he attempted to go to the police, he was turned back over to Catholic authorities.

> Two clergymen were convicted of abuse but Mr. Heithuis, a victim, was nonetheless transferred by police to a Catholic psychiatric hospital before being admitted to the St. Joseph Hospital in Veghel later that year.[12]

When NRC reporter Joep Dohmen tracked the story down, he was shocked to learn of collusion between Dutch Catholic leadership and government officials to punish Henk for being an unruly victim of institutionalized pedophilia; an unwilling sacrifice to Attis and Cybele.

> There, court papers confirm, he was castrated "at his own request", despite no submission of his written consent. Sources told Mr. Dohmen that the surgical removal of testicles was regarded as a treatment for homosexuality and also as a punishment for those who accused clergy of sexual abuse.[13]

Would that this “treatment” should be inflicted upon all pedophiles in power, particularly Papal predators, the positive results would be instantaneous.

Henk Heithuis went public in 1956. Within two years he was dead from a “car accident”.

Upon examination of the deep corruption that mingled both Catholic and governmental authorities, foul play is practically a foregone conclusion.

What’s more, Henk’s case was just one of a sickening and unreported large number.

> Cornelius Rogge, 79, a well-known Dutch sculptor whose family knew Mr. Heithuis in the 1950s, reported the castration to an official inquiry into abuse within the Catholic Church. But his evidence was ignored.
>
> “We once asked Henk to drop his pants when the women were gone. He did that. He was maimed totally. It was a huge shock,” he said.
>
> Last December, an official investigation by Wim Deetman, a former Dutch minister, received 1,800 reports of sexual abuse by clergy or volunteers within Dutch Catholic dioceses in the period since 1945.
>
> The Deetman inquiry received a report of the Heithuis case from Mr. Rogge but it was not followed up because “there were few leads for further research”.
>
> Evidence emerged on Monday that government inspectors were aware that minors were being castrated while in Catholic-run psychiatric institutions.
>
> Minutes of meetings held in the 1950s show that inspectors were present when castrations were discussed. The documents also reveal that the Catholic staff did not think parents needed to be involved.
>
> There are also allegations that Vic Marijnen, a former Dutch Prime Minister, who died in 1975, was linked to the case.
>
> In 1956, Mr. Marijnen was the chairman of the Gelderland children’s home where Mr. Heithuis and other children were abused. He > intervened to have prison sentences dropped against several priests convicted of abusing children.[14]

Phrygian "Freedom"

Attis is often depicted wearing a "Phrygian cap" and was later associated with the Roman mystery cult of Mithras.

Worship of Cybele blended into following the Earth goddess Gaia, though the importance of debauchery and brutality was more likened to what was done in honor of Dionysus, known to the Romans as Bacchus. [italics suspended, except in the original, for ease of reading]

> Ancient followers of Dionysus believed he was the presence that is otherwise defined as the craving within man that longs to "let itself go" and to "give itself over" to baser earthly desires. What a Christian might resist as the lustful wants of the carnal man, the followers of Dionysus embraced as the incarnate power that would, in the next life, liberate the souls of mankind from the constraints of this present world and from the customs which sought to define respectability through a person's obedience to moral law. Until that day arrive, the worshippers of Dionysus attempted to bring themselves into union with the god through a ritual casting off of the bonds of sexual denial and primal constraint by seeking to attain a higher state of ecstasy. The uninhibited rituals of ecstasy (Greek for "outside the body") was believed to bring the followers of Dionysus into a supernatural condition that enabled them to escape the temporary limitations of the body and mind and to achieve a state of enthousiasmos, or, outside the body and "inside the god." In this sense Dionysus represented a dichotomy within the Greek religion, as the primary maxim of the Greek culture was one of moderation, or, "nothing too extreme." But Dionysus embodied the absolute extreme in that he sought to inflame the forbidden passions of human desire. Interestingly, and most students of psychology will understand, this gave Dionysus a stronger allure among the Greeks who otherwise tried in so many ways to suppress and control the wild and secret lusts of the human heart. Dionysus resisted every such effort, and, according to myth, visited a terrible madness upon those who tried to deny him free expression.

This Dionystic idea of mental disease resulting from the suppression of secret inner desires, especially aberrant sexual desires, was later reflected in the atheistic teachings of Sigmund Freud. Freudianism might therefore be called the grandchild of the cult of Dionysus. Conversely, the person who gave himself over to the will of Dionysus was rewarded with unlimited psychological and physical delights. These mythical systems of mental punishments and physical rewards based on resistance and/or submission to Dionysus, were both symbolically and literally illustrated in the cult rituals of the Bacchae, as the Bacchae women (married and unmarried Greek women had the “right” to participate in the mysteries of Dionysus) migrated in frenzied hillside groups, dressed transvestite in fawn skins and accompanied by screaming, music, dancing, and licentious behavior. When, for instance, a baby animal was too young and lacking in instinct to sense the danger and run away from the revelers, it was picked up and suckled by nursing mothers who participated in the hillside rituals. On the other hand, when older animals sought to escape the marauding Bacchae, they were considered “resistant” to the will of Dionysus and were torn apart and eaten alive as a part of the fevered ritual. Human participants were sometimes subjected to the same orgiastic cruelty, as the rule of the cult was “anything goes,” including lesbianism, bestiality, etc. Later versions of the ritual (Bacchanalia) expanded to include pedophilia and male revelers, and perversions of sexual behavior were often worse between men than they were between men and women. Any creature that dared to resist such perversion of Dionysus was subjected to sparagmos (“torn apart’) and omophagia (“consumed raw”).

In B.C. 410, Euripides wrote of the bloody rituals of the Bacchae in his famous play, The Bacchantes:

> the Bacchantes...with hands that bore no weapon of steel, attacked our cattle as they browsed. Then wouldst thou have seen Agave mastering some sleek lowing calf, while others rent the heifers limb from limb. Before thy eyes there would have been hurling of ribs and hoofs this way and that, and strips of flesh, all blood bedabbled, dripped as they hung from the pine branches. Wild bulls, > > that glared but now with rage along their horns, found themselves tripped up, dragged down to earth by countless maidens hands.[1]

>
> Euripides went on to describe how Pentheus, the King of Thebes, was torn apart and eaten alive by his own mother as, according to the play, she fell under the spell of Dionysus. ~ Horn[15]

In Rome, worship of Cybele was said to give priestesses the ability to attain great knowledge or see into the future — a process known as the Sibylline Oracle.

Sexual perversion also translated into military power, especially in Greece.

Sparta practiced homosexual pairing amongst warriors but the most renowned and successful was the Sacred Band of Thebes; an elite unit of no more than 150 soldiers each having a homosexual lover.

2nd century Roman marble of Mithras slaughtering a sacrificial bull, always depicted as being aided by a serpent and a scorpion which attacks the bull’s genitals. This piece was transported from Rome and brought to the British Museum because of its secret importance. Carole Raddato, Wikimedia Commons

These practices are not as removed from our modern times as one would think. The glorifying by movies and militaries of Spartans as ultimate warriors is a sign.

A top proponent of liberalizing regulations restricting homosexuality in the United States military has been four-star Special Forces General Stanley McChrystal.[16] A powerful figure, McChrystal served as head of Joint Special Operations Command, Commander of the International Security Assistance Force and Commander, U.S. Forces Afghanistan as well as Director of the Joint Staff.

McChrystal's treasonous, bloody fingerprints were all over the body of NFL star-turned Army Ranger Pat Tillman, as well as Rolling Stone journalist Michael Hastings.[17]

McChrystal also —

- Ordered the rules of engagement that put American soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines in needless danger.[420]
- Pushed the integration of overt homosexuals into the military ranks to destroy effectiveness and cohesion[cxxii].[421]
- Banned "Conservative" Fox News from his entire Headquarters (hundreds of soldiers effected in their orbit around McChrystal's arrogance).[422]
- Joined Jesuit-trained[423] Barack Obama with Jesuit-trained[424,cxxiii] Secretary of Defense/Director of the Central Intelligence Agency Leon Panetta in asserting[425] that "serious action[426]" needs to be taken on confiscating privately-owned weapons from the American people.

~ Secret History[18]

On April 19th (a date of strong Luciferian significance[19]), 1989, Turret Two of the USS Iowa battleship exploded killing 47 sailors. Gunner's Mate 2nd Class Clayton Hartwig was said by the Navy to have rigged the explosion as a funeral pyre for himself.

The Iowa was the lead ship in her class; the most powerful sea-going vessel anywhere at the time and Gunner’s Mate Hartwig was the Navy’s warrior.

> Hartwig, who was 6 feet 2 and weighed more than 200 pounds, “always liked to portray the bad-ass image,” according to another shipmate. “He used to talk about gassing people... about sticking gasoline-soaked toothpicks in people so they would die in a slow way.” “Death and destruction was Clay’s power trip,” said a sailor who spent a lot of time with him on the Iowa. “That’s everything he did; everything he said. It always led back down to the bottom line of death and destruction. ~ The Washington Post[20]

The Iowa in Los Angeles. Jonathan Williams, Wikimedia Commons

Hartwig was also homosexual.

The Phrygian cap worn by Attis and Mithras was seized upon by the Luciferian Elite who manipulated the “revolutions” of the 18th century in America and France.

Maintaining the Templar duality of their icon, the two-headed Roman eagle —

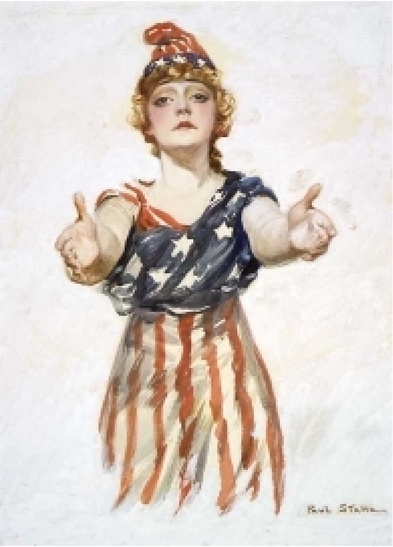
Templar Seal

The two heads are the two faces of secrecy; one for the initiated and the other for the uninitiated. ~ Secret History[21]

— the Phrygian cap was re-branded as a symbol of “freedom”.

If the uninitiated asked any questions, they were told it was the cap worn by emancipated Roman slaves. There was little danger the uneducated masses would connect the dots to satanic debauchery and brutality, though such was the fruit of the French Revolution, in particular.

You can even name your artwork “The Furies of the Guillotine” and the masses still wouldn’t understand.



“Columbia”, Paul Stahr

Les Furies de Guillotine*, Baron & Massard

Wikimedia Commons

The “Furies” were vicious goddesses of vengeance, birthed when Cronus castrated his own father Uranus and cast his genitalia into the sea. They arose from the resulting foam to torment their victims mercilessly.

Who has preserved this satanic system (the Devil’s Simulation) into modern times?

— A surprising source: the Roman Catholic Church.

Although there have been several orders of knights, priests and nuns who have served “the Church” in this evil endeavor, none have rivaled the inversely-named “Society of Jesus”, founded by Ignatius de Loyola in 1534. They have been ruefully nicknamed “Jesuits”; jesuita, “Are you Jesus-like?” It is meant as an ironic accusation as “the Company” specializes in any method necessary to further the hegemony of the keepers of the Devil’s Simulation from war to assassination to blackmail to organized crime like trafficking in narcotics or human beings.

The guillotine was invented by a Jesuit priest and professor, Dr. Joseph-Ignace Guillotin.[i]

The Jesuits are as equally responsible for the American Revolution[22] as they are the French Revolution — [italics suspended except in the original]

> The Jesuit Order was created by Catholic Ignatius Loyola in 1500s to counter the Reformation and uplift the authority of the Papacy.
>
> Since the beginning, the purpose of the Jesuits has included global political domination, as Loyola himself once said:
>
> > Finally, Let all with such artfulness gain the ascendant over princes, noblemen, and the magistrates of every place, that they may be ready at our beck*, even to sacrifice their nearest relations and most intimate friends, when we say it is for* our interest and advantage (emphasis added).[i]
>
> The world’s wars and revolutions occur because the Jesuits want to establish a one-world government with the Papacy at its head. Even over a century ago their plans were succeeding, as 19th-century theologian Luigi De Sanctis tells us:
>
> > At what then do the Jesuits aim? According to them, they only seek the greater glory of God; but if you examine the facts you will find that they aim at universal dominion alone. They have rendered themselves indispensable to the Pope, who, without them, could not exist, because Catholicism is identified with them. They have rendered themselves indispensable to governors and > > hold revolutions in their hands*; and in this way, either under one name or another, it is* they who rule the world (emphasis added).[ii]

>
> As the sources below attest, the Jesuits have been involved in — and even spearheaded — many of the world's worst wars, revolutions, and massacres. At times, the Jesuits are directly involved, at other times, they use their influence over the Freemasons and other secret societies. ...
>
> The French Revolution and the spread of the antiChristian Cult of Reason were the result of Jesuit, Masonic, and Illuminati influence.
>
> Jesuit Professor Adam Weishaupt created the Order of the Illuminati in 1776 in Bavaria, Germany. These Illuminati were part of the coalition of rebels that became the Jacobins — the group responsible for the French Revolution.
>
> > The Jacobins currently terrorizing France, Barruel argued in his preface, could not have appeared out of thin air...The principal authors of the conspiracy, he claimed, were Voltaire, Jean-le-Rond d'Alembert, and King Frederick of Prussia, who had secretly planned to destroy Christianity...These "sophists" had formed an alliance with the Freemasons, whose antireligious conspirital origins Barruel traced back to the medieval Knights Templars. The final and most utterly evil group in this triple conspiracy, however, were the Bavarian Illuminati, under their satanic leader Adam Weishaupt. Jacobinism had emerged out of the union of these three groups.[x]
>
> The French philosopher Voltaire, whose ideas were instrumental in the French Revolution, was a Freemason — as was Napoleon... ~ Amazing Discoveries[23]

Much more than a Freemason, François-Marie "Voltaire" Arouet was a Jesuit-trained Roman Catholic who supposedly "left the Church" yet his efforts brilliantly advanced the Devil's Simulation for the Jesuits by taking the crimes of Catholicism and wrongfully applying them to Christianity.

The Catholic Church has far more in common with her predecessor — the Roman Empire — than with Christianity, and it was even prophesied to be so in the Christian Bible.

The Prophet Daniel had a vision of the four beasts (empires) that would rule from his day forward, recounted in Chapter 7 of the Book of Daniel.

> The first was like a lion and had eagle's wings. I watched until its wings were plucked and it was lifted up from the Earth and made to stand on the feet as a man, and a man's heart was given to it. ~ Daniel 7:4 (Modern English)

Babylon conquered with the ferocity of a lion and the swiftness of an eagle. Despite the recounting of Nebuchadnezzar's relationship with YHWH in Daniel, it is a nation the Bible uses as a metaphor for all of man's rebellions against God.

> Another beast appeared, a second, like a bear, and it raised itself up on one side, and it had three ribs in its mouth between its teeth. And they said to it, "Arise, devour much flesh." ~ Daniel 7:5 (Modern English)

The Medes and Persians allied together and quickly overthrew the empire of Lydia (546 B.C.) before conquering Babylon (539 B.C.) and even bested Egypt (525 B.C.). At first the Medes lead the coalition but soon the Persians became the stronger.

> After this I looked and there was another, like a leopard, which had on its back four wings of a fowl. The beast also had four heads. And dominion was given to it. ~ Daniel 7:6 (Modern English)

Greece, under Alexander, overcame nations even faster than Babylon did (perhaps twice as fast).

But in 323 B.C., Alexander died suddenly at only 32 years of age — numbers not lost on the Luciferians. Whether his age played a role in his death can not be known for sure but Diodorus, Plutarch, Arrian and Justin all entertain the notion that Alexander was murdered by poisoning.

Upon his death, Greece was divided into four empires ruled by each of his most powerful generals: Lysimachus, Cassander, Ptolemy and Seleucus.

But it was the last beast that frightened Daniel the most.

> After this I saw in the visions at night a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, and exceedingly strong. And it had great iron teeth. It devoured and broke in pieces, and stamped the rest with its feet. And it was different from all the beasts that were before it, and it had ten horns.
>
> I considered the horns, when there came up among them another little horn before whom three of the first horns were plucked up by the roots. And there, in this horn, were eyes like the eyes of man, and a mouth speaking great things. ~ Daniel 7:7-8 (Modern English)

Rome was, indeed, a dreadful empire, but is there a dichotomy in this final beast?

Do the ten horns replaced by one speak of the suppression of the Roman Senate in favor of the Emperor or does this bespeak of the office of the Papacy?

— or both?

The teeth of iron are consistent with the dream Nebuchadnezzar had of the same four empires presaged as four metals that composed the statue of a giant man — the legs and feet of the statue were made of iron. (Daniel 2)

But why do both visions end with the Roman Empire? Are these prophecies incomplete and useless to modern readers, or is Rome still secretly in control?

It is only within the last century that we even must ask this question as Rome’s control was a clear and present danger, not a secret.

The Protestant historian Henry Grattan Guinness felt it was obvious and specifically referenced Daniel 7 in proving his point. [italics suspended except in the original]

> It is important that we should clearly grasp one great historical fact; i.e. the rule of Rome has never, since it first commenced, ceased to exist, save once, for a very brief period during the Gothic invasions. It has changed in character, as we have seen, but it has continued.

Rome ruled the known world at the first advent of Christ, and still rules hundreds of millions of mankind, and will continue so to do right up till the second advent of Christ.

So this prophecy teaches; for not until the Son of man takes the dominion of the earth, and establishes a kingdom that shall never pass away, is the monster representing Roman rule destroyed.

The rule of Rome, we repeat, has never ceased.

It was a secular pagan power for five or six centuries; it has been an ecclesiastical and apostate Christian power ever since, that is to say, for twelve or thirteen centuries.

There lay a brief period between these two main stages, during which professing Christian emperors ruled from Rome, followed by an interval when, for a time, it seemed as if the great city had received a fatal blow from her Gothic captors. ...

The rule of Rome revived in a new form, and was as real under the popes of the thirteenth century as it had been under the Caesars of the first.

It was as oppressive, cruel, and bloody under Innocent III as it had been under Nero and Domitian.

The reality was the same, though the forms had changed.

The Caesars did not persecute the witnesses of Jesus more severely and bitterly than did the popes; Diocletian did not destroy the saints or oppose the gospel more than did the Inquisition of Papal days.

Rome is one and the same all through, both locally and morally.

One dreadful wild beast represents her, though the symbol, like the history it prefigures, has two parts. There was the undivided stage, and there has been the tenfold stage. The one is Rome pagan, the other Rome Papal; the one is the old empire, the other the modern pontificate; the one is the empire of the Caesars, the other is the Roman Papacy.[24]

Even the “great boasts” of the little horn correspond with depictions of this same office described in the Book of Revelation.

In fact, Revelation states that this final beast will have the traits of the previous 3 empires (the pagan beliefs of which have been retained by the Vatican).

> I stood on the sand of the sea. And I saw a beast rising out of the sea, having seven heads and ten horns, with ten crowns on his horns, and blasphemous names on his heads.
>
> The beast which I saw was like a leopard. His feet were like those of a bear, and his mouth like the mouth of a lion. The dragon gave him his power and his throne and great authority.
>
> I saw one of his heads as if it was mortally wounded, but his deadly wound was healed, and the whole world marveled and followed the beast.
>
> They worshipped the dragon who gave authority to the beast. And they worshipped the beast, saying, “Who is like the beast? Who is able to wage war with him?”
>
> He was given a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies. And he was given authority to wage war for forty-two months.
>
> He opened his mouth to speak blasphemies against God, to blaspheme His Name and His Tabernacle and those who dwell in Heaven.
>
> It was granted to him to wage war with the saints and to overcome them. And authority was given him over every tribe and tongue and nation.
>
> All who dwell on the earth will worship him, all whose names have not been written in the Book of Life of the Lamb who was slain from the foundation of the world. ~ Revelation 13:1-8

A “beast” in the Bible describes an empire, a “woman” describes a religious system. Rome is shockingly, accurately described as both.

One of the seven angels who had the seven bowls came and talked with me, saying to me, "Come, I will show you the judgment of the great prostitute who sits on many waters, with whom the kings of the Earth committed adultery, and the inhabitants of the Earth were made drunk with the wine of her sexual immorality."

Then he carried me away in the Spirit into the wilderness. I saw a woman sitting on a scarlet beast which was full of blasphemous names, having seven heads and ten horns.

The woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet, and adorned with gold and precious stones and pearls, having in her hand a golden cup full of abominations and the filth of her sexual immorality.

On her forehead a name was written:

MYSTERY,
BABYLON THE GREAT,
THE MOTHER OF PROSTITUTES
AND OF THE ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH.

I saw the woman, drunk with the blood of the saints and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus. ~ Revelation 17:1-6 (MEV)

Monsignor Rauber, Cardinal Danneels, Monsignor Vangheluwe, Bishop of Bruges and his successor Monsignor Jozef De Kesel. Vangheluwe was forced to step down due to predatory pedophilia cover-up. Carolus, Wikimedia Commons.

Sexual infidelity in the Bible is often used as a metaphor for blasphemy, but it can also speak of literal sexual perversion.

If you say the words “Passion Play” by themselves, you wouldn’t think they had a “religious” connotation but contemporary society automatically understands them to be Roman Catholic “Easter” depictions of the trials, torture and crucifixion of Jesus Christ.

However they are all cunning remembrances of pagan sexual perversion masquerading as Christian observance.

> The Sumerian goddess Inanna, or Ishtar, was hung naked on a stake, and was subsequently resurrected and ascended from the underworld. One of the oldest resurrection myths is Egyptian Horus. Born on 25 December, Horus and his damaged eye became symbols of life and rebirth. Mithras was born on what we now call Christmas day, and his followers celebrated the spring equinox. Even as late as the 4th century AD, the sol invictus*, associated with Mithras, was the last great pagan cult the church had to overcome. Dionysus was a divine child, resurrected by his grandmother. ...*
>
> In an ironic twist, the Cybele cult flourished on today’s Vatican Hill. Cybele’s lover Attis, was born of a virgin, died and was reborn annually. This spring festival began as a day of blood on Black Friday, rising to a crescendo after three days, in rejoicing over the resurrection. There was violent conflict on Vatican Hill in the early days of Christianity between the Jesus worshippers and pagans who quarreled over whose God was the true, and whose the imitation. What is interesting to note here is that in the ancient world, wherever you had popular resurrected god myths, Christianity found lots of converts. So, eventually Christianity came to an accommodation with the pagan Spring festival. Although we see no celebration of Easter in the New Testament, early church fathers celebrated it, and today many churches are offering “sunrise services” at Easter – an obvious pagan solar celebration. The date of Easter is not fixed, but instead is governed by the phases of the moon – how pagan is that?

> All the fun things about Easter are pagan. Bunnies are a leftover from the pagan festival of Eostre, a great northern goddess whose symbol was a rabbit or hare. Exchange of eggs is an ancient custom, celebrated by many cultures. Hot cross buns are very ancient too. In the Old Testament we see the Israelites baking sweet buns for an idol, and religious leaders trying to put a stop to it. The early church clergy also tried to put a stop to sacred cakes being baked at Easter. In the end, in the face of defiant cake-baking pagan women, they gave up and blessed the cake instead. ~ Heather McDougall, The Guardian[25]

Miss McDougall is either a criminally ignorant writer for one of England's most popular newspapers or she's as cunning as François-Marie "Voltaire" Arouet (and on the same payroll).

She has carefully re-branded all of the misdeeds of Rome as "Jesus-worshipping" and "Christian". For instance, the date of "Easter" was made to float because of the gnostic calendar created by Jesuit Christopher Clavius.

> Papal, Catholic, pagan Rome adopted the pagan sungod calendar of her predecessor and mentor, Caesar's Imperial Rome. Julius Caesar got his calendar from the pagan religions of both the Eastern and Western sun worshiping religions of his ancestors. Roman Catholicism viciously attacked all who kept the Scriptural calendar and slaughtered millions of Jews and true Christians who followed Yahweh's ancient ways. She insisted on controlling the calendar and ordered all to adopt her corrupt computations. The results were predictable. By the year 1582 the Julian calendar was off by 11 days and began to be embarrassing to the "fisherman, lord god, the pope". Pope Gregory XIII then called on his own church version of the "Gestapo", the Jesuits for a fix. They then provided a Jesuit, Christopher Clavius, S.J.[546], who became the architect of the Gregorian calendar! This heathen was a German Jesuit mathematician and "pseudo astronomer" and became the main engine of the modern Gregorian calendar used by Christianity today. With this Jesuit calendar, came also the Jesuit astronomy or, as is known today, the "heliocentric universe". With his introduction of the new Catholic > calendar, Pope Gregory XIII demonstrated to the world that the changing of "times and seasons" is centered in Rome, and not on Scripture and certainly not centered on the Holy One of Israel. This was an interesting "trick" and was probably related to countering the Protestant reformation, which was going on in Europe at the time. The protestors failed to protest or counter this change and the Christian Church remains ignorant of it to this present day! ~ Talbott[26]

At no point does Miss McDougall betray that everywhere the pagan practices were adopted it was via the Roman Catholic Church and she even goes to great lengths to mask Papal paganism when there's no clear alternative by claiming that pagans had a conflict with "Vatican Hill".

Although the icons of these practices are left to be "fun" for the uneducated masses, they certainly weren't (or aren't) for the victims of these observances still done in secret today.

> It's here that we begin to discover the real meaning of the term "passion plays", because it is sexual passion which ignites the alchemical operation of the Divine Marriage. The passion plays were centred on the goddess Demeter who, in myths, is found wandering the Earth in grief after her daughter, Persephone, is abducted into the Underworld by Hades. The sexual seed was represented by wheat and, at the culmination of the rituals, the hierodule would make love with the high priest, or hierophant. ... ~ Ishtar Babilu Dingir[27]

Throughout history, when initiations into the Devil's Simulation couldn't be masked as "Christian" they were masked as "agricultural"; yet they were nothing of the sort.

> Because of the focus on the wheat in the dramatic performances, and the theme of the land remaining barren until Persephone re-emerges in the Spring, some commentators believe that the purpose of fertility rites was to placate the gods in order to get a good harvest and increased yields of cattle. But fertility rites existed long before the agricultural period ... and so it is obvious that there was a much more profound purpose behind these sacred passion plays than merely material abundance on the Earthly plane.

> The Lesser Mysteries would end with a water baptism, while the Greater Mysteries climaxed with a fire initiation. [Here, the author carefully avoids describing the vicious brutality of “fire initiation”.]
>
> At the Lesser Mysteries, the teachings were given in the form of allegorical stories in which the true meanings were hidden. All of this was to prepare those few who were going forward to the Greater Mysteries, where the inner meanings of the stories would be revealed and the fire initiation would take place.
>
> In other words, it was only at the Greater Mysteries that the initiates were shown that these plays were allegories which had a dual purpose – as both spiritual and astronomical/astrological teaching stories that were a precursor to spiritual initiation. But the students of the Greater Mysteries were also under pain of death never to reveal anything of what they had been taught or seen. ...
>
> Sex and death are very close together in that they are both initiations into another portal. What men are not receiving through sacred sex magic, they seek for in promiscuity, rape, violence and war... due to a yearning for that portal... and the Masters of War know it. ...
>
> The Christian Church now only gives the water initiation to the masses, in the form of the baptism, as if their congregations were attendees of the Lesser Mysteries; if the Church ever does give a fire initiation, the rank and file of this religion never get to hear about it. [28]

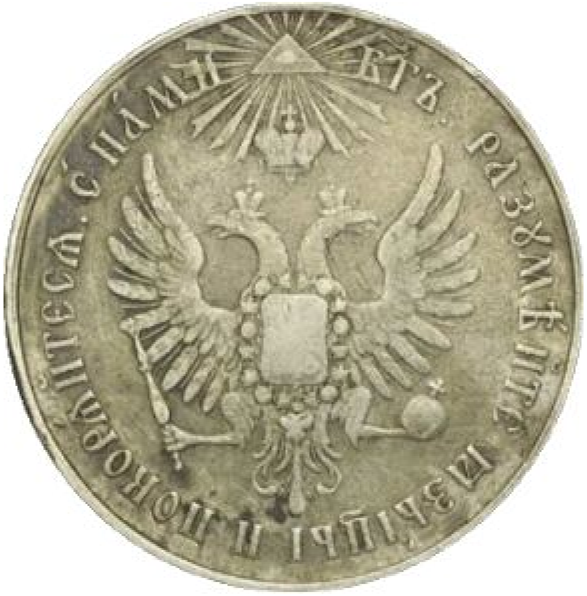
Again, we have a disingenuous author who calls Catholic “Christian” and implies the truth but keeps it hidden; the “duality” of one explanation for the masses and another for the initiates is necessary because the true practices used to attain the “Mysteries” would horrify anyone with a conscience.



In Russia, the Templar influence manifested into a Jesuit influence.
Prussian interloper "Catherine the Great" gave the Jesuits safe harbor during their brief 1773-1814 suppression and their hand can be seen in this medal commissioned by Czar Nicholas I in 1849 for the suppression of Hungary and Transylvania; particularly the All-Seeing Eye pyramid in a sunburst.

"Holy" Rome has taken up seamlessly from her imperial predecessor. The Papacy's vicious persecutions of faithful Christians are both legion and legendary yet the Popes speak as the "Vicar of Christ on Earth".

> As early as 1087, the Dictatus papae (attributed to Hildebrand of Sovana, a.k.a. Pope Gregory IX) had stated that no one can judge the Pope and that "the Roman Church has never erred." So, with capitalized pronouns, Innocent pronounced the "Will of God". ...
>
> To Catholics, this is simply the authority of the successor of Peter, but to Protestants, it was a cynical maneuver to assure the primacy of the Bishop of Rome, and arch blasphemy. ~ Secret History[29]

Hidden from the uninitiated, the Vatican has maintained the Devil's Simulation for the pagan powers that preceded her.

The First "Orgy Island" [italics suspended]

This was the original pleasure palace. In the sumptuous gardens, young men and women dressed as nubile nymphs and coquettish Pans openly prostituted themselves to guests in woodland “lechery nooks” beneath the stars.

Inside the imperial cliff-top villa, fortified by the finest food and wines served by nude handmaidens, wanton license took hold. Troupes of beautiful youths of both sexes, gathered from all corners of the Roman world and trained in unusual sexual practices, reclined in vast marble halls ready to excite the elderly Emperor’s flagging libido.

Known as spintriae, their role was to perform erotic sexual practices in groups before the head of the empire — a man who was commonly known by his subjects as “the old goat”.

Many of the lavish regal rooms were furnished with pornography and explicit sex manuals from Egypt — in case any of their number was unsure precisely what was expected of them.

In a private chamber, the Emperor indulged his most obscene desires to the full. He had little boys trained as minnows or “tiddlers” to chase him when he went swimming in the imperial pool, nibbling between his legs.

This was the royal residence at Capri, where Tiberius the Tyrant lived a life of extraordinary debauchery. For more than a decade in the early part of the first century AD, this picturesque Italian island was the principal home of the Roman emperor.

Here, he practised lechery and bloodlust in equal measure, hosting endless summer orgies and watching his enemies being tortured before being thrown 300ft off the cliffs into the sea below. ...

The estate stands on the grounds where 12 villas were built by Tiberius during his reign from AD 14 to 37.

At risk of assassination, he chose the site chiefly because the remote location made it easy to defend — but also so that he could indulge his sordid predilections away from prying eyes. ...

Power was forced upon him ... events would transform him from a sullen recluse into a despotic and carnal fiend.

Indeed, it was during the brutal reign of Tiberius that Jesus was crucified, under the authority of the Roman governor of Judea at the time, Pontius Pilate. ...

He ... became Emperor in AD 14 at the age of 56. Before the old Emperor’s body was cold, Tiberius had ordered the execution of Augustus’s young grandson and son of the disgraced Julia’s first marriage to her cousin — presumably in case he became a rival.

A mathematician who displeased Tiberius was beaten to death and decapitated. ...

The vengeance of Tiberius was terrible. [Lucius Aelius] Sejanus [Prefect of the Praetorian Guard] was killed after being tortured and dragged through the streets of Rome.

Next, according to the historian Tacitus, writing some 70 years after Tiberius’s reign, the Emperor ordered revenge against Sejanus’s young children, a boy and a girl. Tacitus quoted contemporary writers who reported that, because capital punishment of a virgin was unprecedented, the daughter was violated by the executioner. Then both children were strangled and their young bodies thrown on the Gemonian Steps.

Frenzied with bloodlust, the Emperor next ordered the execution of all those associated with Sejanus. Heaps of victims lay in the streets, with relatives forbidden to give the rotting bodies a proper burial.

In AD 26, Tiberius retreated to the island of Capri, never to return to Rome — according to Tacitus, in order to indulge his carnal desire. There, he established a new office, master of the imperial pleasures, whose job was to gather the most beautiful youngsters in the land together, for the Emperor to defile. ...

His lusts reached ever lower depths and he preyed on the children who lived in and around his court. Tacitus tells us “new names for types of perversions were invented”, such was Tiberius’s depravity. Tiberius hired slaves to find him children to satisfy his urges. These agents were entirely above the law and they kidnapped victims if parents or relations put up a fight. Some even violated the children before they reached their lustful master. It was, says Tacitus, “like the sack of a captured city”. ...

His gardens, where he arranged “a number of nooks of venery where boys and girls solicited outside bowers and grottos”, were called by locals “the old goat’s garden”, punning on Capri’s name, which translates as “goat island”.

His particular fantasy, which small boys were taught to carry out, was to swim in the blue, lukewarm waters of the Capri grottos surrounded by lascivious youngsters swimming like little fish alongside an old shark, licking and nibbling at his private parts.

He was also a sexual voyeur and enjoyed watching groups of youngsters copulate before him.

Once, at a religious sacrifice on Capri, driven to a frenzy by the beauty of the priest’s assistant, he lost control of himself in the temple and, hardly waiting for the ceremony to end, rushed him off and debauched him and his brother, the flute-player, too. Subsequently, when they complained of the assault, he had their legs broken.

Women were also of interest to him — no matter how unwilling they were. One historian, Suetonius, says: “How grossly he was in the habit of abusing women even of high birth is very clearly shown by the death of a certain Mallonia.”

“When she was brought to his bed and refused most vigorously to submit to his lust, he turned her over to the informers, and even when she was on trial he did not cease to call out and ask her ‘whether she was sorry’; so that finally she left the court and went home, where she stabbed herself, openly upbraiding the ugly old man for his obscenity.”

Increasingly ravaged by the years and his vile excesses, Tiberius had certainly become the most unattractive of men. His once handsome > face was disfigured by a form of eczema and covered with blotches, scars and the unguents prescribed by his physicians.

>
> Brutality, too, marked his years in exile. When his litter was struck by a bush, he had the centurion who had been sent ahead to clear the way stretched out and flogged half to death before him. Facing the Emperor’s apartments was a precipice called Tiberius Fall, because from it, he would dispense with unwelcome visitors or disobedient servants. Tiberius would watch as they fell towards the sparking water, and their bodies were mutilated at the bottom of the cliff by armed soldiers.
>
> Suetonius says: “Among various forms of torture he had devised this one: he would trick men into loading themselves with copious draughts of wine, and then on a sudden tying up their private parts, would torment them at the same time by the torture of the cords and of the stoppage of their water.”
>
> Tiberius died at the age of 78, during the 23rd year of his reign. It is said that he was eventually smothered beneath a pile of mattresses, although there are other accounts that he was poisoned by his heir, Caligula. ~ Brennan[30]

Sadly, Gaius “Caligula” Julius Caesar Germanicus would be little better.

Tiberius raised him on Capri where he fell in love with his sister Drusilla, eventually consummating the relationship with incestuous sex (although he would also bed his other two sisters as well).

A life-threatening illness in October 37 A.D. would take his perverse upbringing and transform it into a monstrous personality.

Caligula returned from the brink of death less human then when he entered it. The loss of his one and only true love, Drusilla to an apparent unknown illness, finished whatever hope of conscience the Empire had in its despot.

Impressed with her perverse prowess, he married the illegitimate whore Milonia Caesonia in order to produce an heir.

Caligula used debauchery as power over Consuls, raping their wives, sons and daughters, sometimes as they watched.

Having exhausted the treasury, he opened a brothel in Rome and forced the wives of Senators to earn his party-wealth back.

This staggering perversion and brutality was transferred with ease into the Papacy. A mirror of Caligula's lifestyle insured the Protestant Reformation! From Secret History:[31][italics suspended unless original]

> In 1488, Giovanni de Medici's father, Lorenzo il Magnifico ("Lorenzo the Magnificent"), ruler of the Province of Florentine, prevailed upon his relative, Giovanni Battista Cybo (Pope Innocent VIII) to make his son a cardinal, which Cybo did.
>
> Having bought Giovanni the cardinalcy at such a young age (13) he was forbidden to wear the insignia or deliberate as Cardinal for another 3 years.
>
> In 1513, de Medici was "elected" Pope. Clearly a political decision, after it was made, the College of Cardinals realized de Medici had never been ordained a priest. This minor oversight was rectified on a date that proved the Papacy was far more "Roman" than "Christian" — the Ides of March (the 15th) of that same year — the date memorialized as the assassination of Julius Caesar.
>
> Medici maintained and even increased his lavish lifestyle which included the sexual perversions of the upper class. Pope Leo was well-known as a "lover of boys".
>
> > Leo X was said to have invited guests to lavish banquets with up to 65 courses at which little boys jumped naked out of puddings.
> >
> > It was no secret Leo was "a lover of boys" who possessed also "an insatiable love of pleasure".
> >
> > Like Pope Paul II, Leo loved parades and his passion was to travel around Rome at the head of a long procession featuring panthers, jesters, and a white elephant called Hanno a gift from the King of Portugal.

> Scholar Joseph McCabe said Leo was “a coarse, frivolous, cynical voluptuary, probably addicted to homosexual vice in the Vatican”.
>
> Leo spent much of his childhood in numerous abbeys which, like many monasteries since the time of Leo III (795-816), had become homosexual haunts.
>
> Even before he became pope, Leo X allegedly had been a practicing sodomite.
>
> On the day of his election, Leo suffered from chronic ulcers [venereal skin ulcers, not of the stomach] and had to be carried into the conclave on a stretcher.
>
> Not a few remarked that the ulcers had been caused by his “boyish predilections” ... ~ D. Christie Sinton[113]

Medici was far from unique as a corrupt, immoral and depraved Pope.

- Pope Sergius III had his predecessors Pope Leo V and Antipope Christopher murdered. He sired a bastard son who would later become Pope John XI.
- Pope John XII cut off the nose and tongue and two fingers of the Cardinal-Deacon, flayed the skin off Bishop Otger, cut off the hands of Notary Azzo, and beheaded sixty-three of Rome’s clergy and nobility. He kept a brothel at the Vatican and let his mistress Maricia run it. During drunken gambling revelry he was heard to toast Satan. While having sex with a married woman, he was caught by the husband who (being quite Italian) ignored his Holy Office and smashed the Pope’s head in with a hammer, killing him.
- Roderic Borgia, Pope Alexander VI (1492-1503)...in this devilish roll-call of nefarious names, none sends such a chill up the spine as that of “Borgia”. It is impossible to imagine a family more heavily tainted by the stains of sin and immorality, and – as even those who have not seen the eponymous television series will know – there is scarcely one of their number who does not seem to be cloaked in an aura of iniquity. The founder of the family's fortunes, Alfons de Borja (1378-1458) – who reigned as Pope Callixtus III – was decried even by his closest allies as the "scandal of [his] age" for his monstrously corrupt ways. His nephew, Rodrigo (1431-1503) – who he himself elevated to the cardinalate, and who would be elected Pope Alexander VI in 1492 – was reputed to be even worse.

- Pope Julius III kidnapped and seduced a homeless teenage boy whom he maintained as his lover and rewarded with a Cardinalcy.

Chapter 2

The Beast Transformed

21 March 1475: Two year old boy found murdered, the victim of a ritual sacrifice, in Trento, Italy on Easter Sunday.

> The small Simon, a little boy from Trent, was slayed on the 21st March, 1475 A.D., on Maundy-Thursday during Holy Week. The Jews of this town wanted to celebrate their Passover in their own way; so they secretly abducted the small boy and carried him to the house of the Jew Samuel. During Holy Week on Maundy-Thursday, the day before Good Friday, "and" on the day before the outlawed "Perfidious Passover", about three hours after supper, the little boy, like children do, was sitting in front of his parents' house. Neither his father nor mother were home at the time as they were at Church. It was at this time that the Jew Tobias approached the child, who was not quite 30 months old, and while speaking kindly and offering the boy a piece of money, picked him up and carried him at once to the house of the Jew Samuel.
>
> When night fell, the twin brothers Saligman and Samuel, with Tobias, Vitalis (Veitel), Moses, Israel and Mayr, undressed the little boy and unmercifully butchered him. While Moses strangled him with a handkerchief as he lay across Samuel's knee, pieces of flesh from his neck were cut with a knife and the blood collected in a bowl. At the same time, they punctured the naked offering with needles and murmured Hebrew curses. They then cut pieces of flesh from the boy's arm and legs and collected the blood in pots.
>
> Finally the torturers imitated the crucifixion by holding the twitching body upside down and the arms outstretched... ~ St. Simon of Trent.com[32]

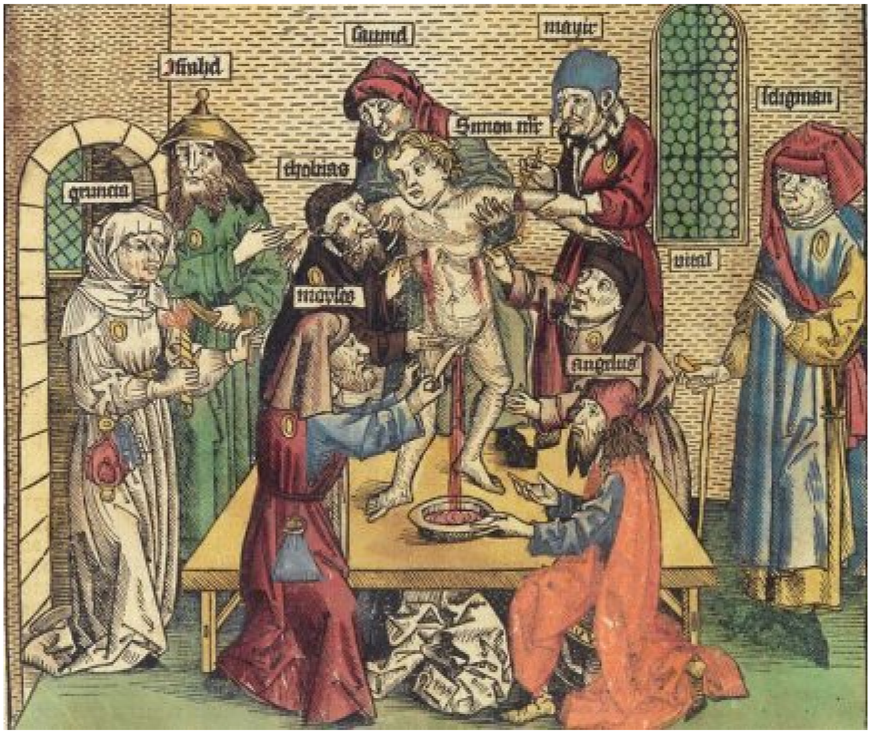
The attacks upon Judaism by the Catholic Church, especially in the Middle Ages, were almost as vicious as the literal Crusades against Christians.



Were the Vaudois and Valdneses the Remnant ekklēsia*, maintaining the Truth of Christ against the Dragon?*

Certainly, Rome thought so, and Crusaders pursued the inoffensive Alpine Christians with vicious ruthlessness perhaps even unseen in Palestine.

To combat the "heretics", Rome needed a special office designed to use every means necessary to force the wayward children back into the fold. As the Crusader/Inquisitor saying went; aut Mass aut mortem — be at Mass or be dead.

In haughty power did Rome seek to bring all Christians under her dominion.

> "You said, 'I am forever — the eternal queen!' ... lounging in your security and saying to yourself, 'I am, and there is none besides me. I will never be a widow nor suffer the loss of children.'" ~ Isaiah 47:7-8 (NIV)[xxiv] Christians have been > thrilled by Papal propaganda depicting heroic Crusaders battling bloodthirsty Muslims but the picture erased from history is that of knights ruthlessly slaughtering Christian men, women and children in the most heinous fashion they could. ~ Secret History[33]

Slightly better known (because it serves the Luciferian "clash of civilizations" Hegelian Dialectic[ii]) is the persecution of Jews by Rome.

Suspiciously, anti-Semitism was already being stirred in Trento before the heinous incident.

> Shortly before Simon went missing, Bernardine of Feltre, an itinerant Franciscan preacher, had delivered a series of sermons in Trent in which he vilified the local Jewish community. ~ Wikipedia[34]

A more detailed account is found in the Jewish Encyclopedia. [italics suspended]

> The Disappearance of Simon.
>
> The harmonious relations between the Christians and the Jews in Trent had excited the anger of the semidemented Franciscan friar Bernardinus of Feltre, who was a son of a notorious enemy of the Jews. In his Lenten sermons (1475) he endeavored to incite the people against them, but instead provoked displeasure on the part of the Christians. Then he predicted that at the next Jewish Passover a ritual murder would occur. In accordance with this prediction, the child Simon, twenty-eight months old, disappeared on March 23, 1475. Bernardinus of Feltre, Johannes Schweizer (a neighbor of the Jews), and, at last, the excited people themselves declared that the child would be found among the Jews; but a careful search through the Jewish quarter, ordered by Bishop Hinderbach and executed by the podestà of Trent, Johann Sala, proved fruitless.
>
> On the eve of Easter Monday, March 26, some Jews noticed the body of a child in the river, near the house of one of their number named Samuel. Without a moment's delay three of them, Tobias (a physician), Samuel, and Angelus, hastened to notify the bishop, but were not > admitted to his presence. The podestà, however, visited the house of Samuel, took possession of the child’s body, and ordered the arrest of those present — Samuel, Angelus, Tobias, Israel, Bonaventura, Toaff, and a second Bonaventura (the cook). After a medical examination of the body it was stated that death was the result of violence, not of accidental drowning. A baptized Jew, Johann of Feltre, who had been a prisoner for several years for theft, seized the apparent opportunity to shorten the term of his imprisonment by declaring that the Jews use the blood of Christians for ritual purposes at the Passover. On the strength of this allegation all the members of the Jewish community, women and children included, were arrested. The proceedings against them began on March 28. The accused pleaded not guilty, and denounced two men: Johannes Schweizer, who had access to the river flowing by Samuel’s house and who for a long time had been an enemy of the Jews; and the German tailor Enzelin. Johannes Schweizer and his wife were arrested, but proved an alibi as regards the 23d of March, though only for the daytime; they were finally liberated from prison in a “miraculous” manner.

>
> ### Torture Suffered by the Jews.
>
> Then began days and nights of torture for the Jews, in which numerous methods of compelling “confession” were tried. For a long time the sufferers remained steadfast and faithful; but after weeks of torture had weakened the will, they “confessed” in the exact words dictated by their clerical tormentors and assassins. These abominable practises caused Duke Sigmund and others to intercede and stop the proceedings (April 21). But the persecutions were resumed on June 5, and were maintained until the Jew Moses, aged eighty years, after terrible tortures and persistent denials, likewise “confessed.” Toward the end of June (21-23) eight of the wealthiest Jews, after receiving baptism, were put to death, some being burned at the stake and the rest beheaded.[35]

It is significant that a Jewish prisoner, already baptized into the Roman Catholic religion, was the “witness” who condemned the accused.

It was neither the first nor the last example of Jewish treachery within the ranks.

During the Passover in Judea of ~32 A.D. Jewish religious leadership betrayed the people and convinced their Roman task-masters to put to death an innocent and extremely popular Rabbi from Nazareth because he (He) threatened their abusive control. [Matthew 27:20]

Hungarian Jewish billionaire George Soros is constantly demonized by supposed “Right-wing” media like Fox News. Fox News was founded by Australian “purveyor of pornography”[36] Rupert Murdoch, a Knight of Malta[37] who has received the Order of St. Gregory personally from Pope Saint John Paul II[38],[iii]. Yet it is little-known that Soros was a Nazi collaborator.

> As a young man, in Budapest, George Soros was a courier for the Jewish Council, the Nazi-established and Nazi-run organization that ran the Jewish community. The Jewish Council was ultimately controlled by Adolf Eichmann, the man known as the “architect of the Holocaust,” who was in charge of the mass deportation of the Jews of Poland and Hungary to the extermination camps. Eichmann arrived in Budapest in early 1944, to take charge of the elimination of the Hungarian Jews. Before Eichmann left, 430,000 Hungarian Jews had been put to their death. In 1960, agents of the Israeli Mossad kidnapped Adolf Eichmann from Argentina, and brought him to Israel, to stand trial as a war criminal. During the trial, Eichmann was kept in a glass cage. He was convicted, sentenced to death, and was executed in 1962.
>
> In his 1965 memoir of the wartime, Masquerade — Dancing Around Death in Nazi-Occupied Hungary*, George Soros’ father, Tivadar Soros, devoted an entire chapter to the Jewish Council, and his son’s involvement.*
>
> “When systematic persecution of the Jews began,” Tivadar Soros wrote, “it was carried out not by the Germans, nor by their Hungarian lackeys, but — most astonishingly — by the Jews themselves. One of the first things the Germans did was to form a so-called Jewish > Council, consisting of the leaders of the Jewish community. Council members were made personally responsible for the implementation of the various German measures relating to the Jewish population. As a reward, they, their families, and those who worked for them were exempted, at least at the beginning, from these restrictions... The Jewish Council carried out the German wishes far more conscientiously than the Germans could themselves."

>
> Tivadar Soros described his son George's role. "As Jews couldn't go to school any more and their teachers couldn't teach, they were ordered to report to council headquarters. The children were enlisted as couriers under the command of their teachers. My younger son, George, also became a courier. On the second day, he returned home at seven in the evening.
>
> "'What did you do all day?' 'Mostly nothing. But this afternoon I was given some notices to deliver to various addresses.' 'Did you read what they said?' 'I even brought one home.' He handed me a small slip of paper, with a typewritten message [a summons]. 'Do you know what this means?' I asked him. 'I can guess,' he replied, with great seriousness. 'They'll be interned.'" ~ LPAC[39]

Apparently, the Jews who are empowered by Rome to be Vatican scapegoats don't even mind when the Papacy steals and traffics their children.

The opportunity came during the Holocaust — an outrage also engineered by Rome.

> The Catholic Intelligence Agency
>
> The CIA (then the OSS) was founded by Catholic Wall Street lawyer, and Knight of Malta,[447] William Donovan.
>
> Donovan was specifically selected because his loyalties to Rome far outweighed any scruples he had about honoring an allegiance to America, her citizens or her Constitution.
>
> Well before the conclusion of World War II in July of 1944, Eugenio Pacelli ("Pope Pius XII") awarded Donovan Knight Grand Cross by

the Order of St. Sylvester.[448]

It certainly wasn't because Pacelli was interested in conquering the Nazis (at least, not quickly). He was personally responsible for their rise, having been the Papal Nuncio (Vatican Ambassador) to Prussia from (1926-29) and to Germany (1917-30). So much so, in fact, he has been named "Hitler's Pope".[449] This, too, is subterfuge as Adolf Hitler was only a pawn of the Papacy.[450] They even had a viciously anti-Semitic Jesuit named Bernhardt Staempfle write Mein Kampf for Hitler.[451] ...

Rome and her Special Forces, the Jesuits, were absolutely determined to needlessly raise up antagonists in Germany and Russia to brutally punish the birthplace of the Reformation and the world for receiving it. In the process, her minions treasonously played both sides and made billions in the process. ...

Inside Germany, Rome had double agents like "Lutheran" Martin Bormann. Bormann was one of the most powerful men in the regime. He was head of the Nazi Party Chancellery (the Parteikanzlei) and Adolf Hitler's private secretary who personally controlled the flow of information and access to Hitler.*[455]

He was also an active participant in "Red Orchestra" (Die Rote Kapelle) — a cell of traitors who gave German intelligence to the Soviet Union. It was further evidence that Bormann worked for Rome. Between the Allies and the Communists, the Allies were a far more lucrative recipient of important intelligence. One could easily negotiate their way into a very posh retirement by pulling the right strings (as many Nazis did). ...

Not working directly with the Allies forced Rome to intervene to provide for Bormann's "retirement" and he was put into the Vatican rat lines disguised as a Jesuit priest and he ended up safely in [Jorge "Pope Francis" Bergoglio's] Argentina[456] where he died peacefully and unmolested.

> His wife, Gerda, was carefully screened from harassment by any intelligence agencies[cxxv] and she appointed a Roman Catholic priest as executor of her will. Bormann's eldest son, Adolf, (named after his godfather, Adolf Hitler) became a Jesuit and was given special deference and consideration because of his father's contribution to Rome.[457] ~ Secret History[40]

As a result of the Holocaust, desperate Jewish parents turned their children over to Catholic institutions — hospitals, orphanages, etc. — as well as Elite Catholic families, to give them a chance to survive the War.

They were never seen again.

> A letter from Pope Pius XII to his representative in Paris on November 20, 1946 shows that he ordered Jewish babies baptized during the Holocaust not to be returned to their parents. ...
>
> Former Chief Rabbi Yisrael Meir Lau has said that the Holocaust-era Pope Pius XII refused several requests by Chief Rabbi Isaac Herzog to meet with him before and during the war to discuss how the Church could either help save Jewish lives or locate Jewish orphans cared for by Catholic families.
>
> On the other hand, Rabbi Lau said that the previous pontiff, Pope John Paul II, told him in 1993 that he had refused to baptize a Jewish child whose parents had died, "because the parents had specifically requested that the child be brought up as a Jew."
>
> However, the same John Paul II did not respond to a request by Ukraine's Chief Rabbi Yaakov Dov Bleich to open church archives and reveal the names of Jewish children who were raised as Catholics during World War II. ~ Arutz Sheva[41]

In 2005, the Times printed what was purported to be Pacelli's letter.

> Paris, October 23, 1946
>
> Concerning Jewish children who were entrusted to Catholic institutions and families during the German occupation and are now demanded by Jewish institutions to be handed over to them, the Holy > Congregation of the Holy Office has made a decision that can be summarized in this way: 1) Avoid, as much as possible, responding in writing to Jewish authorities, but rather do it orally.

>
> 2) Each time a response is necessary, it is necessary to say that the Church must conduct investigations in order to study each case individually.
>
> 3) Children who have been baptized must not be entrusted to institutions that would not be in a position to guarantee their Christian upbringing.
>
> 4) For children who no longer have their parents, given the fact that the Church has responsibility for them, it is not acceptable for them to be abandoned by the Church or entrusted to any persons who have no rights over them, at least until they are in a position to choose themselves. This, evidently, is for children who would not have been baptized.
>
> 5) If the children have been turned over by their parents, and if the parents reclaim them now, providing that the children have not received baptism they can be given back.
>
> It is to be noted that this decision of the Holy Congregation of the Holy Office has been approved by the Holy Father.[42]

Media, in general, and the New York Times very specifically, is run by Jews emplaced by the Vatican to both do Roman biding and insure Vatican deniability.

The releasing of Pacelli’s letter was another Papal chess move; giving up a pawn to gain a bishop.

- Surely edited, it allowed for damage control. As we’ve seen, little consideration has been given by criminal clergy whether children are “baptized” Catholic and much more their use in sacrifice and to bring money.
- It gave the Times credibility as a “real paper”.

- It continued to foment racial divide by bringing the topic to light.

These suppositions were proven true by the Jewish professor in Roman Catholic France, Catherine Poujol, who “examined” the issue...for the Vatican!

> For almost a decade, Poujol has refused to talk to the press about her discovery. Now, she explains the reasons behind her silence. ...
>
> “I didn’t want to add fuel to the fire without properly investigating the subject — and this was a very complex, lengthy process,” she told The Times of Israel. ...
>
> “The Church felt cornered, and at first adopted an inward-looking stance. But soon it realized that denying the access to these postwar documents would fuel the scandal even more.”
>
> After examining countless sources and traveling throughout Europe, the U.S. and Israel, Poujol came to the conclusion that even if this document clearly outlines the Church’s intention of keeping baptized Jewish children under its custody, it doesn’t cast blame on the entire Catholic Church.
>
> “Many priests and bishops acted completely independently and didn’t abide by the directive,” she says.
>
> In 1944, two Jewish boys, Robert and Gerald Finaly, were sent by their parents to a Catholic nursery in Grenoble. After the parents were deported and died at Auschwitz, their uncle and aunt, who were living in Israel, attempted to get the children back.
>
> In 1948, French Catholic nurse Antoinette Brun baptized the children without the family’s permission and formally adopted them, omitting to tell the judge about the existence of other relatives.
>
> The affair reached the national spotlight when a police investigation found that several nuns of the Notre Dame de Sion order and Basque priests had arranged and executed the kidnapping and smuggling of the children in Spain in February 1953. ...

> “French public opinion was divided into two opposing camps, clericals against anti-clericals, Zionists against anti-Zionists, and canon law against Republican law,” she adds. ~ Times of Israel[43]

“Two Jewish boys in 1944”?

Rome has stolen and trafficked tens of thousands of children but when it suits her she will show her hand on two of them to give up the pawn of a momentary “sin” and gain the bishop of stoking racial hatred toward Jews.

Saint Simon

Despite the controversy surrounding the question of who really murdered two year-old Simon in ritual torture honoring castrated gods like Attis, he was soon canonized as the Patron Saint of kidnap and torture victims.

A sickening number have fallen under his patronage ever since.

540 years later, children would again come into the spotlight in Trento when Roman Catholic priest Don Gino Flaim told a local La7 News crew that he “understands” pedophilia, that it needs to be “accepted” as any other sin.

> Unfortunately there are children who seek affection because they don’t receive it at home and I understand that some priests can give up. ...
>
> I could accept pedophilia, but I’m not so sure about homosexuality.[44]

La7 appeared to be following up on a story (which also surfaced at that time) that the Venturini monastery in Trento had become a “rehabilitation resort” for Rome’s deviant clergy. Apparently immune to prosecution by any secular authority, there they could attain “a period of training, personal reflection and enlightenment.”[45]

But, surely, it must be the Jews.

Chapter 3

Slavers

1609: The Spanish governor of Asunción, Phillip III, brokers a deal with the Jesuit Provincial of Paraguay to set up communes populated by natives at strategic points along the Paraná river.

Spurred by the property-sharing philosophies of Thomas Aquinas, Jesuits created the first communist villages across South America.

Known as Reduccións in Spanish or Reduções in Portuguese these "Reductions" served several purposes:

- Maintain a strategic presence for Spain or Portugal without the overt appearance of armed soldiers.
- "Convert" natives to become Catholic citizens of their imperial conquerors.
- Enrich the elites of Spain, Portugal and Rome with slave labor that cost little to maintain...unless you were a slave.

> Containing undesirables from Indian reservations to Nazi concentration camps to Soviet gulags to Franklin Roosevelt's Japanese/American internment, all have the common ancestor of Jesuit "reductions" in South America. ...
>
> Before the days of Avtomat Kalashnikov rifles and Schmeisser submachine guns, large groups of prisoners were hard to handle with just a few Jesuit priests. The Company needed to use brains over brawn. Later, they would be able to appropriate the "brawn" of whole nations.
>
> The appeal of wealth redistribution is that recipients can live a somewhat easier life, though it is a utopia that has always disappointed.

> In South America, "social justice" would become the cry for taking from "the rich" and giving to "the poor". What usually happens, however, is that the super-rich exploit the poor to bleed the few real producers in the Middle Class.
>
> If this seems like the perfect weapon to be used in the Counter-Reformation, it's not by coincidence.
>
> The phrase "social justice" was coined by the Jesuit theologian and mentor to Pope Leo XIII, Father Luigi Taparelli D'Azeglio. ...
>
> The utility of Communism was immediately seized upon by the Vatican. ...
>
> The Jesuits took their experiences with the South American reducciones and fed them to a German Jewish aristocrat who had never held a "proletariat" working-class job in his life — Karl Heinrich Marx. ~ Illuminati Unmasked[46]

1618: Home Children Scandal — "vagrant" children rounded up in England and sent to Canada, America, Australia as slave labor against their will. The process was used by the Catholic Church, first behind "secular" and "Protestant" fronts, then directly, for predation.

Because the governments of several nations were involved in the child slave trade (and still are), "official histories" are whitewashes, at best.

Yet, even the Australian government must admit that "child migration" has been "chequered", to put it lightly.

> Child migration had a long and chequered history surrounded with controversy and marred by scandal. It was, actually, never a single policy pursued continuously: rather it was a complex tangle of competing private schemes, government initiatives, charismatic personalities, muddled priorities and confused agendas. It was critically affected by the economic, political and social pressures of particular times.
>
> The first 100 children – "vagrants" – were despatched from the London area to Virginia in the Americas in 1618, their passage

> arranged by the City Fathers, while the last nine children were flown to Australia in 1967 under the auspices of Barnardo's.[iv] It follows that the origins of child migration were linked to Britain's acquisition of an empire in North America during the early seventeenth century. In the wild, untamed, thinly-populated continent, there was an insatiable demand for men and women to populate and exploit the new territories. The demand was so great, and the perils of the sea journey and the initial pioneering so desperate, that those whom it was convenient for England to send abroad – the convicted felons, the parish poor and abandoned children were considered suitable and many were despatched.
>
> It was in January 1615 that the Privy Council issued a warrant to exile certain convicted felons to the New England colonies and four years later that these provisions were confirmed and extended by a further order from the Council.[4] Child migration was commenced – in 1618 – in this context as state officials cast around for other sources of labour in the colonies. Later in that year, the Virginia Company requested a second consignment of "vagrant" children (i.e. street kids) and the City Fathers cooperated in procuring them – by having the constables arrest vagrant children and place them in the Bridewell or gaol until ships were ready for their departure.[5] However, many of the children did not wish to go and under challenge it became clear that the first group had been despatched illegally. The City made urgent representation to the Privy Council and on 31 January 1620 the Council gave its approval to despatch the "recalcitrant" children...[47]

In the schizophrenia of official whitewash, the Australian government first claimed that "the consent of the children or their parents was not an issue" then immediately follows with how the children were basically kidnapped.

The fact that Protestants were used as cover for the heinous practice is also leaked in the admitted reaction of real American Puritans who outlawed and attempted to police up the crimes and protect the children.

> The consent of the children or their parents was not an issue, although it is clear that many of the young people were runaways and > abandoned children, beyond the interest or control of surviving parents or guardians.[7]

>
> It was likely to follow that where there was a commercial need, i.e., the desperate labour shortage in the colonies, then private enterprise was likely to follow the clear, unambiguous lead taken by the state authorities. There opened a ready cash market for any able-bodied man, woman or child who could be persuaded, fooled, forced or "spirited" to the new colonies. In a word "spiriting" was kidnapping, and for the next 150 years child migration operated on three levels: some children were sent to the North American or West Indian colonies by various Poor Law authorities and government bodies who worked within the 1620 ordinance of the Privy Council; a few were escorted by religious philanthropists; and the majority were kidnapped or "spirited" from towns close to the ports for despatch to and sale in the colonies. There the children's labour was purchased by planters and other farmers until the child reached majority, a procedure given a thin veneer of legality by the signing of indentures.[8]
>
> The traffic in children being "spirited" to the Americas increased during the civil wars of the 1640s, and the Puritan-dominated parliament on 9 May 1645 passed a strongly-worded ordinance against the practice.[9] Ships were to be searched by justices of the peace where there was reason to believe they held kidnapped children. [48]

The reaction of the Protestants in America to the slave trade was again attested to in the Australian government timeline —

> 1783: American War of Independence confirms the Declaration of Independence of the Thirteen seaboard colonies in North America; end of adult convict transportation to the American colonies.[49]

The inversely-named "Sisters of Charity" handled many of the details of the child sex slave trade[50] and we will see more of them shortly.

The "Protestant" face of the slave trade was handled by Freemasonry. It is an extremely convenient arrangement for Rome, delivered by the hands of the Jesuits.

No less a source than high Luciferian Helena Blavatsky can be found on this.

> As to the modern Knights Templar and those Masonic Lodges which now claim a direct descent from the ancient Templars, their persecution by the Church was a farce from the beginning. They have not, nor have they ever had any secrets, dangerous to the Church. Quite the contrary; for we find J. G. Findel saying that the Scottish degrees, or the Templar system, only dates from 1735-1740, and "following its Catholic tendency, took up its chief residence in the Jesuit College of Clermont, in Paris, and hence was called the Clermont system."
>
> Count Ramsay, a Jesuit, was the first to start the idea of the Templars being joined to the Knights of Malta. Therefore, we read from his pen the following: "Our forefathers (! ! !), the Crusaders, assembled in the Holy Land from all Christendom, wished to unite in a fraternity embracing all nations, that when bound together, heart and soul, for mutual improvement, they might, in the course of time, represent one single intellectual people."
>
> This is why the Templars are made to join the St. John's Knights, and the latter got into the craft of Masonry known as St. John's Masons.[51]

"Scottish Rite" Freemasonry is especially useful to the Company and, as a result, they keep their supposed "arch enemies" very close, indeed.

> ...both the Scottish Rite Supreme Council 33° of the Gran Loggia d'Italia (GLDI, founded in 1910 after a schism with the Grande Oriente d'Italia*) & the Church of the Gesù – the mother church of the Jesuits – are located in Piazza del Gesù! In fact the GLDI is known as the Piazza del Gesù obedience. This body is recognised by the Scottish Rite's U.S. Southern Jurisdiction ("Mother of the World") Supreme Council 33° in Washington, D.C.* ~ Troy Space, London[52]

As Jesuit code, the name of the "Scottish Rite, United States, Southern Jurisdiction" is often simply abbreviated "SJ".

Although far from conclusive, it should be taken with suspicion that “Protestant” child traffickers of the 19th century (a very active era for Jesuit Freemasonry) like “Quaker” Annie Parlane MacPherson would hail from Scotland.

However, when using dupes and shell organizations, one doesn’t get the responsiveness necessary for full exploitation.

As the 19th century rolled into the 20th, it was time for “the Church” to get actively involved in the “Home Children” source of prey items.

Again, the Australian government lets the cat out of the bag —

> [Child trafficking] was associated with the founding of the Knights of the Southern Cross in Perth in 1922 as a Catholic counterpart to the Freemason Lodge. One of the Knights’ objectives was increasing Catholic migration to Western Australia, and more specifically child immigration.
>
> In 1926, the Knights’ executive found ready support from Brother Paul Keaney, the newly-appointed Director of the Clontarf orphanage near Perth. Brother Keaney with financial support from the Knights, planned a farm school at Tardun near Mullewa, west of Geraldton, to cater for the farm training of older Australian boys in care and also for British child migrants.[53]

Then and now, orphanages (especially Catholic ones) were prime pens for pedophiles.

Unfortunately, because the abuse of children is a massive, systemic gateway to power (here-forward referred to as the “Pedocracy”), government documents must be carefully parsed for disinformation and subterfuge.

Even so, the truth comes out.

Although the Australian “Home Children” report — another meaningless “report” provided as subterfuge in lieu of pedophile prosecutions — dramatically downplays the role of the Catholic Church, it can not avoid the crimes committed by the order of the “Christian Brothers” (another sect as inversely named as the “Society of Jesus”).

> By this time, the Christian Brothers were managing child care for Catholic boys and young men in four coordinated institutions, at Clontarf and Castledare orphanages in the suburbs of Perth, at the farm school at Tardun and on the new property at Bindoon, one hundred kilometres north of Perth, a property recently donated to the Order by a wealthy benefactor.[54]

It is noteworthy that the official "well-researched" government document doesn't give any detail about the "wealthy benefactor" who believed Catholic child trafficking was important enough to bankroll.

Even more so is how co-operative the "Anglican" / "Protestant" government of the United Kingdom was in the effort.

> It seemed relatively easy to integrate child migrants from Britain within the four orphanages according to their ages and talents. The British, Commonwealth and Western Australian governments were willing to assist with maintenance of the children.
>
> In this situation, the Western Australian bishops arranged for Brother A Conlon [full name, Patrick Aloysius Conlon] to proceed to London to negotiate for ... child migrants with the British Catholic Rescue Societies in 1938. Conlon's task took longer than he anticipated, but over 1938–39 some three groups of boys ... sailed for Western Australia to be educated and trained within the Christian Brothers four orphanages, collectively referred to as "the Scheme".[55]

Why name a "humanitarian relocation" effort for the "welfare" of young boys as "the Scheme"?

Maybe it was the type of "education and training" the "Christian Brothers" had in mind.

Finally, in 2016, yet another do-nothing "committee" put together another impotent "report" on monsters who had been raping children for generations.

> In Australia, 853 people have made a claim or substantiated complaint of child sexual abuse against one or more Christian Brothers, with > 75% of victims under the age of 13 at the time, a royal commission has heard.

>
> The royal commission into institutional responses to child sexual abuse has turned its attention to the Christian Brothers as the third round of its hearings into the diocese of Ballarat began on Monday. A religious community within the Catholic church, the Christian Brothers primarily worked in educational facilities for children.
>
> In all, 281 individual members of the Christian Brothers in Australia have been subject to one or more claims or substantiated complaints of child sexual abuse, the commission heard... ~ The Guardian[56]

Certainly, when you have a monster who targets pre-teens (it takes a special kind of demon to rape kids who haven't even hit puberty), you want to protect his identity.

> The commission's data showed that the highest number of claims of child sexual abuse were against a brother identified only as Brother CCK, who had 46 complaints made against him about incidents in Victoria and Tasmania. The average age of his victims was 11 years old and the abuse occurred between 1963 and 1987, including in Ballarat.[57]

Does the Catholic Church maintain the Devil's Simulation?

Do pedophiles run the halls of power?

Both questions were just answered — crimes first reported over half a century ago are only handled by a meaningless government commission and even there the identity of a single Catholic predator priest is kept in confidence.

The shocking lawlessness in Australia is, sadly, the same everywhere.

Even when predator priests are identified, they are never brought to justice. In fact, they are allowed to stay in the company of children and rape until they die.

> Another Brother, Stephen Farrell, a Christian Brother at St. Alpius Boys' School in Ballarat East, had allegations of sexual abuse made > against him from six people, with the abuse allegedly occurring between 1971 and 1974. In 1997, Farrell was convicted of nine counts of indecent assault against two boys aged nine and 10 at the school but his two-year prison sentence was wholly suspended.

>
> He was convicted of a further charge of indecent assault against a 10-year-old boy, with his sentence suspended on appeal. The commission heard another Brother, Gerald Leo Fitzgerald, was forced to retire from teaching at St. Alpius Boys' School, with a report saying he had "reached that stage of life when, for some men, control of emotional impulses becomes lessened".
>
> He was allowed to continue to live within the St. Patrick's religious community, the commission heard. A separate report stated he went into the junior dormitory to "play with boys". He died in 1987 and was never charged.[58]

In fact, when there's no fear of justice (because law enforcement and judiciaries are also owned by Rome and run by pedophiles), priests can be downright bold about their abominations.

> One, Brother Edward Dowlan, "made little attempt to conceal his behaviour", Barlow said, frequently placing his hands down boys' pants while they walked around. In a previous commission hearing about Ballarat held last year, the commission heard from a witness that he was raped by Dowlan.[59]

Organizations other than the Freemasons have been very helpful to Rome in trafficking children, such as the Knights of Malta.

This can be deduced by the role the tiny island nation played in the Home Children Scandal.

> While he was in Europe, Brother Conlon explored the possibilities of bringing Maltese children to Western Australia, but negotiations broke down at this stage. There were also tentative arrangements to bring a party of girls to the Nazareth Sisters Home in Geraldton, WA...
>
> During this 1946–47 trip to Europe, both Archbishop [Justin Daniel] Simmonds and Brother Conlon visited Malta to explore the migration

> possibilities: the Archbishop to explore the overall migration scene and Conlon to arrange juvenile immigration.[60]

Malta is no bigger than 300 square kilometers with a total (current) population of 400 thousand. By comparison, the wide-open state of Texas is twice as big and is 70 times more densely populated.

But who are we to argue with such wisdom as traveling to Malta to arrange for the island to give up her children to the tender care of Rome?

The location of the Grandmaster's Palace on the island in the city of Valetta was no coincidence. It was named after its founder, Grand Master of the Knights of St. John, Jean de Valette in 1566 — a short time after the Protestant Reformation.

The "capital" for "The Sovereign Military Hospitaller Order of Saint John of Jerusalem of Rhodes and of Malta", however, remains in Rome.[61] The Order is itself, a sovereign entity[62] "free" of the insignificant laws of the nations in which its insurgency operates. Despite ludicrous propaganda to the contrary (such as the January 2017 "condom controversy"[v]) the KoM have never been anything other than loyal footsoldiers of the Papacy since their founding in 1048 A.D.

The Knights of Malta remain a key player in the movement of children to this day.

By another "coincidence", at this writing, the Order is hosting an "International Children's Day conference" with emphasis on "assistance for child victims of conflict".[63]

Six months prior to this, the grandiosely-named Grand Hospitaller Dominique de La Rochefoucauld-Montbel addressed Ban Ki-moon and the United Nations General Assembly in New York on the issue of children and the "migration challenge" caused by incessant wars.[64]

What de La Rochefoucauld-Montbel didn't address is how many of those wars were enabled, started, enflamed and profiteered from by Knights of Malta: almost all of them.

No one illustrates this better than Erik Dean Prince, the founder of "Blackwater" — the most notorious war profiteers perhaps of all time (for more, see Chapter 27).

1758: The first Magdalene "asylum" for women is founded in "Anglican" Whitechapel, England.

Preying upon the innocent in order to defile them, to make them suffer as a show of willingness to enter into the Devil's Simulation takes malice and callousness.

Yet, humanity (as a whole) rejects such a system which is why the Devil's Simulation is only open to a very small number of monstrous sociopaths who are able to rid themselves of the best of what it means to be human; compassion, empathy, protectiveness towards the vulnerable, self-sacrifice and selfless love.

For Christians it is the shocking reality that Jesus Christ has been far more victorious than we ever realized — particularly on the Cross.

He even conquered the Roman Empire.

> Rome was an empire splintered and scattered when the armies of Marcus Maxentius and Flavius Constantinus met in 312 A.D. Both were vying for complete control of the most powerful nation ever seen before or since.
>
> Just prior to the critical battle of Milvian Bridge it was reported that Flavius Constantinus — Constantine — had a miraculous intervention by the Christian Messiah, Jesus.
>
> According to Church historian Eusebius[2] — an adoring contemporary of the future emperor — Constantine was threatened by the "black magic" of his enemy, Maxentius, (and his rival also had an army twice the size of his).
>
> Desperate for some way to counter it, Constantine compared the beliefs of other great men he had known. One after another, the pantheon of pagan gods had failed them. But the beliefs of one man stood out — his own father (Emperor Constantius Chlorus[3]) who had > adopted the Christian God and commended the safety of the Empire to Him.

>
> This seems like propaganda but Constantinus Chlorus was more benevolent to Christians then, say, Nero.
>
> While imploring the Christian God, Constantine received an answer in a vision, “In this Sign, conquer!”
>
> The “Sign” was the lambarum*; the intersection of the Greek letters* chi (X) and rho (P) as an acronym for Christ and Christians. ...
>
> The historian Lactantius states[5] that Constantine ordered his men to place the “Sign” upon their shields, and so they did.
>
> At the conclusion of the battle, Maxentius had drowned in the Tiber and his army was completely routed.[6]
>
> Constantine now ruled Rome ... [whose] Edict of Milan in 313 AD that officially ended Christian persecution. ~ Secret History[65]

Though many experts question the sincerity of Constantine’s conversion even now, none can argue that he made the rituals and rites of the Luciferians illegal and drove them underground.

Within a few years of the Edict of Milan he increased in his animosity towards pagans and began raiding their shrines.

They never again had the power to return to the open debauchery of Sodom; even Tiberius needed to retreat to an island for his outrages. This made the Luciferians desperate as to how to carry on.

They would start by attacking and taking back the instrument that was their downfall: the Roman Empire.

If Constantine ruled as a true Christian (there are few reasons to believe he did not) he was still a Roman Emperor. This led him to the error of coalescing ecclesiastical authority for Christianity in Rome. When he began arbitrating doctrinal differences amongst Christian sects, it set the stage for Rome’s transformation.

It would take almost 10 emperors hence but Theodosius I finished the job with the Edict of Thessalonica in 380 A.D. In it he required all Romans to become Christians and thus the Luciferians had their answer: syncretism.

They would put on the mantel of Christianity while conducting all of the same ancient rituals they had always done.

Thus was born “Roman Catholicism”.

Outwardly, there was feigned love and compassion but inwardly they were ravenous parasites who fed off the lives of others.

Such were the Magdalene “asylums”.

Billed as homes for single mothers and children in need of shelter and compassion, they were Jesuit Communist slave labor camps, every bit as cruel and barbaric as their Nazi, Stalinist or Maoist counterparts (and each of those regimes have the same roots in Rome).

Perhaps most shocking of all, these institutions had the full and complete co-operation of their host nation’s governments; Australia, Canada, England, Ireland, France, Spain, the United States and all of South America. Sometimes they worked openly and in unison.

That was the case in Ireland. As a result, the atrocities that have been buried elsewhere have come to the surface in that country where the government has been forced to take responsibility (though it was the junior partner).

In 2012, Ireland’s The Journal ran just one story of the thousands that have been kept out of the public eye —

> The treatment of women incarcerated in Magdalene Laundries – and the level of State involvement in these Church-run institutions – has been highlighted yet again this month. There was disappointment among survivors and relatives of those kept in the Laundries when it was announced that a State committee’s final report into the matter would be delayed until the end of the year.
>
> To reiterate the urgency of revealing the inter-departmental findings, the Justice for Magdalene advocacy group last week distributed some redacted statements of women detailing their lives in such institutions.

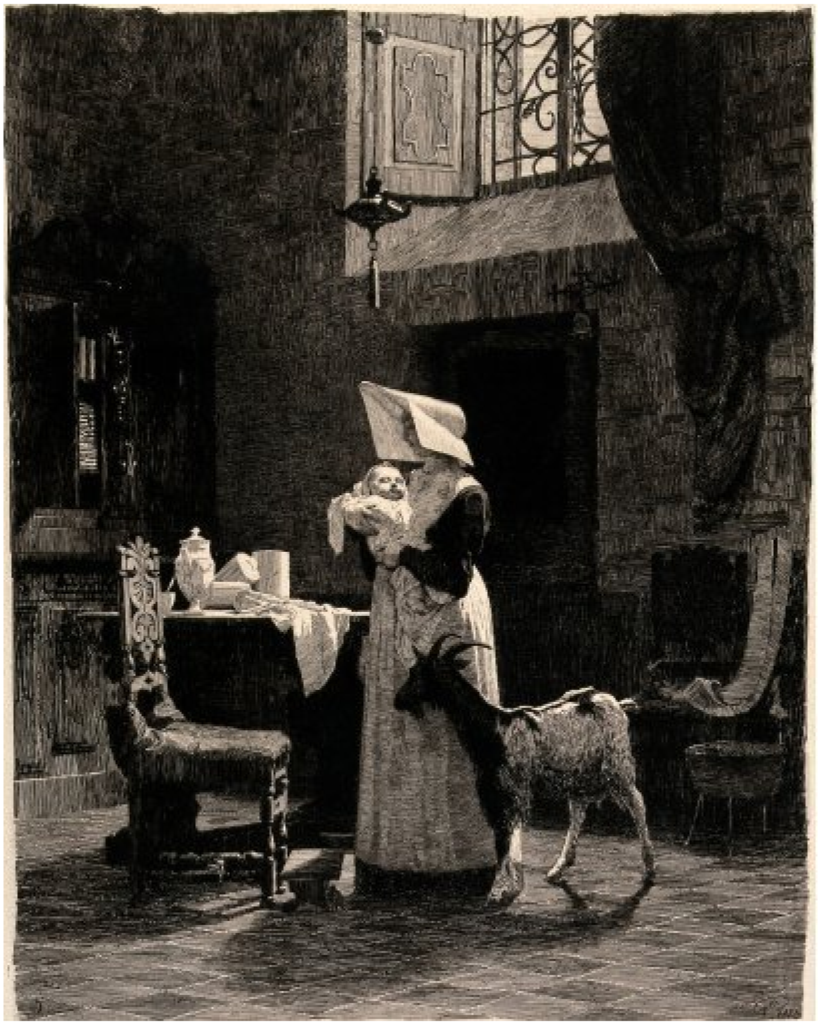
(The group claims that there was State involvement in the operation of the Laundries as places to send women considered to be “problem girls”, due to poverty or pregnancy outside marriage for example.)

Samantha Long’s mother Margaret Bullen was placed in Gloucester Street (now Sean McDermott Street) Laundry c.1967 and died 35 years later, never having been released into society and her own home. Margaret died of an illness known as Goodpasture Syndrome, a disease of the kidneys and liver – one of the causes is exposure to industrial-strength chemicals such as those used in the Laundries.

Samantha made a lengthy statement to the interdepartmental committee, led by Senator Martin McAleese, about her mother’s life. Margaret Bullen had a tragic start in life: she was born in a mental institution in Grangegorman, Dublin to a mother who already had six children, Margaret being the youngest. Margaret was sent home to Kimmage to live with her siblings and father, where she remained until she was three years old. At that point, Margaret’s brother was sent to Artane industrial school and Margaret and her sister closest to her in age sent to the notorious High Park industrial school and Laundry in Drumcondra. That, as Samantha says of her mother, “was the end of her and the outside world”.[66]



Etching by Alberto Maso Gilli. Wikimedia Commons

Margaret suffered fits as a child which went ignored and untreated by the nuns of the facility, ironically named the Sisters of Charity of Refuge. They are now the Sisters of Our Lady of Charity; “Our Lady” being “the Queen of Heaven”, Semiramis, Isis, Columbia, or Cybele. That is the “charity” that was shown Margaret — that of Cybele, not Miriam, the mother of Yeshua of Nazareth.

Margaret was deemed “mentally unfit” for education but fit for slave labor.

As a young teenager, uneducated and mentally impaired, she was preyed upon under the supervision of the nuns and the sexual attacks left her pregnant...twice. Each time, the nuns stole her baby and trafficked the child for cash.

The fact that this vast system was controlled from stem to stern by agents of the Papacy made it well-suited for providing pedophiles with their prey.

Such was what happened to Mary Monaghan — ripped from her mother's arms at two years old by the Sisters of the Sacred Heart and sent to vicious pedophile William O'Brien in California.

She was immediately set upon by the monster (imagine what it takes to sexually assault a two year-old toddler).

> "My mother was a fallen woman," [Roman Catholic terminology for pregnant, unwed teenager] says Ms. Monaghan, who now lives in Massachusetts. "I really do not remember a lot [about the actual moment]."
>
> "But even though you're so young, you still have feelings. You remember being ripped away even if you don't remember the physicalities of it."
>
> To the outside world, her new family appeared perfect for a lonely child taken from her mother and transported more than 5,000 miles away to California. ~ Daily Mail[67]

Fitting the profile the nuns sought, Mary's adoptive pedophile father was rich, respected and Roman Catholic.

> Mary's new father, William, was a prosperous businessman and well-respected in the local community...
>
> "When I first got there, I would often be ill," she says of her early years with the family. "I would have all kinds of allergies and break out because I was allergic to the food."
>
> But worse was to come. "My memories [of childhood] are terrible," Ms. Monaghan says, sadly. "I was physically punished for not being able to eat."
>
> "If I did what a little child does and wet the bed, then I was literally put in the toilet. Then the sexual abuse started and it just progressed."[68]

O’Brien was no run-of-the-mill monster accidentally hit upon by incompetent Catholic nuns; he was plugged in to the Devil’s Simulation — well-versed and trained in how to administer trauma-based mind control on an innocent, vulnerable victim.

> “I had to be kept in my little routine as it were, so I tried to break away. It was all systematic. It was very serious paedophile thinking.”
>
> With the O’Briens keeping up appearances in front of friends and neighbours, the bewildered little girl found herself alone and with no one to turn to.
>
> “I could not perceive of any way of doing something [to alert the authorities] and I had to protect myself. Because if I had said something and it had come to light, then I probably would not have lived another day.”
>
> “And that is not an exaggeration. He had the world fooled.”
>
> The abuse lasted throughout her childhood with Mary fleeing her abusive family as soon as she was old enough.[69]

Not even Mary, herself, understood that she had been trafficked for the very purpose of ritual abuse. Bolstered by media, government and Vatican disinformation, she naively believed what happened to her was “mismanagement”.

Nothing could be further from the truth.

> “I still have flashbacks sometimes and I still struggle with substance abuse occasionally. And I have been diagnosed with post-traumatic stress disorder.”
>
> Although Ms. Monaghan did eventually find her birth mother, it wasn’t until she was 52 that she was able to come to London to meet her.
>
> “Well, that was quite a moment when we first met,” she smiles. “I went up to her and I hugged her and she froze. She literally froze. So it came through to me that I needed to tread lightly.”

> Tragically, her mother's shame at being an unwed parent followed her to London and Ms. Monaghan says she was very reluctant to admit the truth to her Irish family.
>
> "It was very clear that I was to keep my mouth shut. That I was a secret. That I was a long lost cousin. I did play along even though it was hard. But some people did guess."
>
> The pair had just 10 years together, with Mary's mother Theresa dying in 2010. "It's just unfortunate that she had to take so much shame to her grave," she adds. "It just isn't right."[70]

Margaret Bullen's two daughters — Samantha and Etta — experienced similar heartache even after all that had already been done to their mother.

They were wounds that continued on long after the initial crimes were committed.

> Margaret was only 42 at the time but looked much older. She was carrying a handbag but it was completely empty, because she didn't own anything nor did she have any money. Samantha recalls:
>
> > And, she was just lovely, and she was asking extremely innocent questions like, she, it was the first time she ever had coffee and it was very exciting for her to have coffee and she hadn't seen brown sugar before either and obviously in the Gresham there was brown and white sugar cubes on the table and it was all very fancy to her. And she was just overjoyed to be there and absolutely wowed by everything.
> >
> > She looked, she looked like a pensioner. I couldn't believe she was forty-two, I kept looking, I kept looking into her face to find a forty-two year old and I couldn't, because she had the face of hard work, that face that you see in so many women that have just had to work too hard and have never had a rest and have never had anyone to take care of them or tell them to put their feet up, and who have just, just worked too hard. Because, as I said on the radio a few years ago, this was slavery and I don't use that term lightly and I'm not an emotive person but slavery is a form of > work for which you get no pay and you can't leave and these were the white slaves of Ireland and they were never emancipated. And nobody stood up for them until now, until you guys (Justice for Magdalenes) did.[71]

All of Samantha's efforts at redress of grievances have been directed towards the government of Ireland while the Catholic Church keeps entirely out of the spotlight.

Few media sources are to be found on the topic so again we return to The Journal for another story; that of Kathleen Legg.

Kathleen was born out of wedlock under troubled circumstances. Her mother turned her over to her grandmother to raise but her grandmother died when she was 14. Not willing to take her back and believing she would get a good education from the Sisters of Charity, Kathleen was delivered to St. Mary's Stanhope Street Training Centre in Dublin.

> This was simply not the case.[72]
>
> Rather than getting an education, once she entered the convent and was stripped naked and given a uniform, she wouldn't see another classroom for four years.[73]
>
> For the next four years I would scrub, polish and clean every inch of that building, working long hours in the laundry. I had my name changed and I was known as number 27. This was an institution, which generated enormous amounts of wealth, and all the time I was there I had little to very basic food. In fact it was dismal and how we survived I'll never know. I was constantly hungry and on the verge of starving.
>
> The Nuns treated me and indeed others in there as slaves. They gave to the world a false sense of what was being done. So much so that they even sent out school reports saying how well I did in class and how great I was at cooking, housewifery and other such subjects. I never attended a class. I never even met the mother superior. I never saw a clock, book or newspapers when I was there.

> Every morning you would awake to the sound of a bell. You operated like a robot and you did not dare question a nun. We bathed once a week and I remember the lice from our hair used to float around the top of the water so if you were one of the last to get washed it was horrific.[74]

The slave labor of young girls was very lucrative for "the Church" as well as the major corporate interests Rome was in bed with.

> There was no privacy, no care, no love or support in there. The nuns controlled your every movement and they hated it if you took ill, as this meant you were holding up the work that had to be done. We did laundry for all the big hotels, hospitals, companies and other individuals. It was hard tenuous work, which involved heavy lifting.
>
> I was told years later that due to the heavy lifting I did in there this impeded me having my own children. The Nuns robbed me of my life and the life I could have given to others.[75]

There has been a government "investigation" but Kathleen's experience will not be addressed as it has been deemed that the facility at St. Mary's, Stanhope Street in Dublin, was not a "Magdalene Laundry" according to the official definition.[vi]

> "There were great big heavy rollers. The sheets would be red hot. It would be the work of an adult man. I was up at six in the morning and every time the bell rang you went where you were told to go."
>
> "I didn't know how old I was. There were no mirrors and birthdays were never celebrated."
>
> She also described how the nuns systematically ensured the girls there did not make friends.
>
> "We didn't speak to each other. We were too frightened," she said. "In the room we sang hymns all day long."[76]

Like any concentration camp, escape was impossible.

> Others have spoken about trying to escape but being unable to scale the high walls, often topped with glass.[77]

With order names like “Charity” and “Mercy” women working for Rome conducted barbarism not seen since the overt Roman occupation of the islands.

> Mary Merritt, 83, who was “in the care” of the nuns for 14 years before escaping, spoke out in September, 2014, about her ordeal.
>
> She was born in 1931 to a single mother in a workhouse and went on to an orphanage, run by an order of nuns called the Sisters of Mercy where, she says, the children were made to work and were beaten if they refused.
>
> Mary, who now lives in Tunbridge Wells, said that at the age of 11, she was so hungry that she took apples from the convent orchard and as punishment was sent to work in a Magdalene laundry at High Park in Dublin run by another order, the Sisters of Our Lady of Charity.
>
> “They told me that I would stay in the laundry until I learned to stop stealing. Fourteen years they kept me there. You get less for murder these days.” ~ Daily Mail[78]

When Mary did manage to run away, she was treated with the same brutality (perhaps worse) than when Roman occupiers wore breastplates and carried swords.

> She said: “The laundry was heavy, heavy work and the heat was terrible and you didn’t break until 12 o’clock when you broke for your dinner, such as it was – potatoes and cabbage and fish – and then after you went straight back to the laundry again to work and you worked in the laundry until at six o’clock.”
>
> Most shocking of all, Mary claims that after running away she was raped by a priest, but despite this terrible violation she was ignored by police and then shamed by the nuns.
>
> Mary said: “When the police took me back to the laundry, they didn’t [address my complaint that] I had been raped but shaved my head, > made me apologise for running away and put me in the punishment cell."

>
> But when Mary became pregnant as a result of the rape and gave birth to a daughter, in a stunning act of cruelty, the nuns took the baby against Mary's will and [sold] her away for adoption.[79]

Shocking collusion with government authorities who are sworn and paid to protect the citizenry from such atrocities has been the unbelievable norm in every country that Rome controls (which appears to be nearly all of them).

In fact, taxpayers, not the Vatican, gave Irish victims their payoff.

> ... in February 2013 that survivors received an apology from the Irish government and have since received £50million in compensation.[80]

The outrageous irony was not noted by the Daily Mail.

While many more victims wait for justice, compensation or even recognition, the Irish government astoundingly continues to hand the wheel over to the Vatican for essential services.

At this writing, it has been announced that the very same "Sisters of Charity" are to be given "sole ownership" of Ireland's newest, taxpayer-funded, state maternity hospital, "Saint Vincent's".[81]

As anyone with qualms about how the nuns conduct themselves jumps ship[82], Ireland's newborns continue to be placed into the hands of the charitable sisters.

For Whom The Bell Tolls

In Spain, hundreds of thousands of babies were stolen from their parents and trafficked by the Fascist government of Francisco Franco via the Catholic Church.

> Up to 300,000 Spanish babies were stolen from their parents and sold for adoption over a period of five decades, a new investigation reveals.
>
> The children were trafficked by a secret network of doctors, nurses, priests and nuns in a widespread practice that began during General Franco's dictatorship and continued until the early Nineties. ...
>
> Several mothers say they were told their first-born children had died during or soon after they gave birth. ...
>
> But the women, often young and unmarried, were told they could not see the body of the infant or attend their burial.
>
> In reality, the babies were sold...
>
> Official documents were forged so the adoptive parents' names were on the infants' birth certificates. ...
>
> Journalist Katya Adler, who has investigated the scandal, says: "The situation is incredibly sad for thousands of people."
>
> "There are men and women across Spain whose lives have been turned upside-down by discovering the people they thought were their parents actually bought them for cash. There are also many mothers who have maintained for years that their babies did not die – and were labelled 'hysterical' – but are now discovering that their child has probably been alive and brought up by somebody else all this time."
>
> Experts believe the cases may account for up to 15 per cent of the total adoptions that took place in Spain between 1960 and 1989.
>
> It began as a system for taking children away from families deemed politically dangerous to the regime of General Franco, which began in 1939. The system continued after the dictator's death in 1975 as the > Catholic church continued to retain a powerful influence on public life, particularly in social services. ~ Daily Mail[83]

What made the scheme easy to accomplish was that the Catholic Church ran schools, orphanages and hospitals, and still does (even in “Protestant” countries like America).

In Fascist Spain, however, the power of the Catholic Church was as blatant and all-encompassing as it is in Ireland.

> *On April 1, 1939, Generalísimo Francisco Franco, crusading leader of the rebellious Nationalist forces, triumphantly declared the Spanish Civil War over. The Catholic Church was the institution that most benefitted from Franco’s victory. Its hierarchy had blessed the Nationalist uprising as a crusade and had justified the war to the world as an “armed plebiscite.” Now it reaped the reward. Franco quickly abolished all those Republican measures that had undermined the Church’s spiritual and social roles, and entrusted it with more power and privilege than it had enjoyed since the 18th century.*

Generalísimo Francisco Franco, Kutxa Foundation

> For the Church, the privileges constituted a spiritual “reconquista” complementing the political “reconquista” enjoyed by Franco and his Nationalists. What the political “reconquista” meant was the return to Castilian centralism and the elimination of other ideologies. The “reconquista” for the Church signified Catholic monopoly over the life of all Spaniards, a vital privilege if society was to be “re-Catholicised”. This “re-Catholicisation” was not an easy undertaking keeping in mind that, in supporting the Nationalists during the War, the Church had alienated a large percentage of the population. ...

> For Cardinal Gomá, primate of Spain, the only way was to impose "divine totalitarianism", i.e. the imposition of Catholic values on all Spanish society. Franco was only too glad to help.
>
> The privileged status of the Church was granted immediately following the Civil War. A little later —in June 1941— its rights were outlined in an Agreement between the Vatican and the Franco government, and finally formalised in a Concordat signed in August, 1953. Amongst the provisions were:
>
> > 1. recognition of Catholicism as the official religion of the country;
> > 2. Mandatory religious instruction at all educational levels in conformity with Catholic dogma;
> > 3. Financial support of the church by the state (paying the salary of priests and contributing to the (re)construction of church buildings);
> > 4. Guaranteed representation in both press and radio.
>
> ~ Spain Then And Now[84]

The fact that the government of Spain, in collusion with the Catholic Church, were the institutions that kidnapped babies meant that it is impossible to account for them all. Despite media white-washing, it is a foregone conclusion that many of the children weren't simply "sold" to good Catholics who wanted them, they were trafficked, tortured and ritually slaughtered.

Proof is found in how Rome maintained these crimes against the Spanish people long after Franco's death.

Generalísimo Francisco Franco was personally assisted by Father Josemaria Escriva, the founder of Opus Dei.[85]

It would not be the last time Opus Dei was the vehicle by which children were trafficked, abused and murdered.

Chapter 4

The Pedocracy Puts on a Lab Coat

1948: “Doctor” Alfred C. Kinsey — an unrepentant sexual deviant — publishes Sexual Behavior in the Human Male with the intent of using pseudo-science to legitimize sexual anarchy and give cover for the Pedocracy.

He is more successful than he could possibly have imagined.

If we understand the Pope as the titular head of the Pedocracy with the Jesuits running the Pentagon (pentagram) and “War Department” then Alfred C. Kinsey was their Minister of “Science”.

This arrangement has actually been quite fruitful for Rome because Kinsey has been scrubbed of all ties to the Papacy.

As a result, he is a favorite target of agents of the Vatican who seek to emphasize his debauchery in order to give cover for the Devil’s Simulation as the over-arching mechanism of power for all.

The repeatedly-used stage prop for this propaganda is that Kinsey had a "very strict Methodist upbringing" in Hoboken, New Jersey and the unbearable repression caused him to "rebel".

The reality, however, is quite different.

Kinsey was sickly and abnormal both mentally and emotionally from a young age.

Under his picture in his high school year book he quoted Hamlet: "Man delights me not; no, nor woman either."[86]

But the truth was, man delighted him much.

Friendly biographer and Georgetown Fellow[87] Dr. James H. Jones was given full access to the Kinsey archives. Jones contradicted the standard lines that Kinsey was "bisexual" or "asexual". He stated with derision (betraying his own bias and why he was warm towards someone like Kinsey) that Kinsey was forced by "middle class morality" to keep his homosexuality "in the closet".[88]

Despite being frail and sickly, Kinsey became a fervent Boy Scout and relished the "outdoors".

Exactly why would come out later.

However anyone wishing to research Kinsey has only two sources: fawning sycophants in pseudo-science or devout Roman Catholics.

Critics run from pundits like Jesuit-trained (in both high school and college) Patrick Joseph Buchanan to Notre Dame Professor E. (Eugene) Michael Jones who eventually left Notre Dame because it was a Catholic college that wasn't Catholic enough.

In fact, hearing an "expert" carefully avoid the avalanche of evidence against systemic pedophilia carried out by the Catholic Church to instead zero in on Kinsey is a clear indication that such an "expert" is an agent of Rome.

An excellent example is "atheist" author Joseph Atwill. Atwill is an archetypical Jesuit operative who writes books such as Caesar's Messiah:

The Roman Conspiracy to Invent Jesus. Atwill is also, “oddly”, a foe of Kinsey.[89]

It’s not quite so “odd” that he attacks both Kinsey and the legitimacy of Jesus Christ given that he was educated by the Jesuits at St. Mary’s Military Academy in Japan.[90]

In his agency for Rome, Atwill has been invited on “alternative media” shows like that of “Vinny Eastwood” to brilliantly mix truth with lies: “Jesus Never Existed, Rome Never Fell”.[91]

Tactics like these truly show whom the “Society of Jesus” actually serves.

But for the hardest-hitting critiques of Kinsey, Rome chose a Jew: Judith Ann Reisman (née Gelernter[vii]).

Reisman has an extensive and impressive bio, including a Ph.D. in Communications from Case Western in 1980. She is currently a tenured Research Professor and the Director of the Child Protection Institute at the Liberty University School of Law.

Liberty is billed as an “Evangelical Christian” University.

As a result of her position as pedophile gate-keeper (giving phenomenal information on one specific criminal and then immediately stomping the breaks to go no further), she’s cleared to instruct at all the Roman-controlled institutions.

> An author and lecturer, Dr. Reisman has been a consultant to three U.S. Departments of Justice administrations; Education; and Health and Human Services. Dr. Reisman has consulted with members of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff...
>
> Special thanks to the Naval Aviation Foundation...
>
> I am indebted to the research staff at the Guggenheim Foundation, the National Research Council, the Rockefeller Archives, The American Law Institute, and the Eli Lilly Foundation for their professionalism and aid in providing me with my requested materials.[92]

What is usually left out of her bios and resumés is her work as "a Vatican consultant on legal matters"[93] or her many trips to Rome for "seminars".[94]

This relationship is particularly disturbing given the unspeakable horrors that Catholic Church in general, and the Inquisition in specific, have visited upon the Jewish people.

At minimum, her collaboration with the likes of arch anti-Semites such as E. Michael Jones[95] and Patrick J. Buchanan[96] are troubling.

The impetus for her selection appears random and tragic enough —

> I was born Judith Ann Gelernter in 1935 in Newark, New Jersey. Mine was a large and thriving second-generation Jewish-American family...
>
> My mother, Ada, was of more common Goldberg stock. ...[viii]
>
> I lived at a wonderful time. My mother welcomed me home every day and my father supported anything I did. I felt safe with neighbors, uncles or cousins as was the custom of that time. I married, and the hedge of protection about my life was not breached until 1966, when my 10-year-old daughter, Jennie, was molested by a 13-year-old adored and trusted family friend. She told him to stop, but he persisted. He knew she would like it, he said, he knew from his father's glossy magazines, the only "acceptable" pornography of the time. The boy left the country a few weeks later, after it came to light that my daughter was but one of several neighborhood children he had raped, including his own little brother.[97]

It certainly is helpful when you have a child-raping child to be able to have the resources to "up and leave the country" before the heat gets turned on.

From here Reisman's selection becomes a little more apparent.

Robert James "Bob" Keeshan (1927 – 2004) was beloved by millions of families, especially children.

He enlisted in the United States Marine Corps Reserve in 1945 and so he did not serve in World War II.

He began his Jesuit instruction at Fordham but transferred to the more general “Judeo-Christian tradition” at Hillsdale.

This is a common practice for those who will be used by “the Church” yet are instructed to erase her fingerprints.

Other “transfers” out of Jesuit tutelage include Donald Trump, his daughter Ivanka, Donald Rumsfeld and many more.

When one adds “dropouts” from Jesuit seminary like California Governor Jerry Brown, Kennedy Assassination conspirator and CIA pilot David Ferry,[ix] “alternative media” talk show host Doug Hagmann, Godfather of European Unification and the Bilderberg Group Józef Retinger, Clinton hatchet-man and child-rapist John Podesta, amongst others, the tactic becomes clear.

One can just imagine a cold, calm voice saying, “We’ve decided you’ll be of more use in service to us outside of this institution.”

— And, like Bob Keeshan, they all have been!

Bob was better known by his stage name: Captain Kangaroo.

The Jesuit-trained Keeshan had a staff of Jews on the show like Producer Jim Hirschfeld who picked the young Jewish woman for a task that required minimum training and modest talent (not that Dr. Judith wasn’t thoroughly qualified) — writing and performing children’s songs.

With this empowerment, Reisman had the financial comfort to get a Masters and a Doctorate in Communications.

If one can get past Reisman’s betrayal of her own people and how she gives cover to the most heinous pedophiles in human history by fixating on just one key enabler, her work shows itself to be exemplary.

Like his nemesis, Kinsey was selected and enabled very early on and his sexual perversions are what pointed him toward entomology.

> Kinsey reportedly secured a scholarship,[19] and money from an “elderly widow,”[20] to finance his final two years at Bowdoin College (1914-1916). According to Christenson, he devoted most of his time to > zoology (16 credit hours the first year) and biology (four hours), while "[s]ociology and psychology courses rounded out the year's work."[21] He was primarily interested in insects and animals.[98]

He was already gaining skill in manipulation that would weaponize his deviancy.

> During his last year at Bowdoin he added "fifteen hours more of zoology" and began to collect wasps. His courses in psychology, especially those dealing with Pavlovian concepts of control through conditioned reflex, would serve him well in later years.[22] In Female, Kinsey cites Russian physiologist Ivan Petrovich Pavlov's use of dogs as "subjects"[23] to detect the "conditioned reflex, a physiological reaction to environmental stimuli" that shaped the development of behaviorism.[24] [99]

Not surprisingly, other "scientists" whose mission it was to sow a false reality were his heroes.

> Another major influence on Kinsey was Charles Darwin, the English naturalist who is credited with formulating the theory of evolution in such works as The Origin of Species (1859).[25] Kinsey was so impressed ... that, upon graduating magna cum laude from Bowdoin in 1916, he quoted him in his commencement address.[26] [100]

He continued to prove himself of the same sociopath "stock" as other monsters hiding under lab coats, and do so via safe, "non-Catholic"[x] institutions.

> Following graduation, Kinsey continued his studies at Harvard's Bussey Institution, which was a hotbed of Darwinism and the "New Biology" that led scientists to envision improving the human species through "eugenics." Jones identifies Kinsey as one of the scholarly pre-World War II eugenicists who issued a "terrifying" call for the mass sterilization of "lower level" Americans and a breeding plan for superior classes.[27]...

> Sir Thomas Huxley (1825-1895), the foremost proponent of Darwinism in England, was credited by Kinsey with crafting a scientific "declaration of independence."[28] ...
>
> Kinsey would also play in the same elite eugenic league as Sir Thomas Huxley's grandsons, Aldous and Julian. Sir Julian Huxley, a geneticist and first director-general of UNESCO (United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization) became acquainted with Kinsey's work through Indiana University President Herman Wells. In 1932, Aldous Huxley wrote Brave New World*, which became required reading in many American schools.*[101]

It is instructive to learn that Kinsey's attraction to men and boys found an outlet in the Boys Scouts.

Kinsey joined the Scouts when nearly an adult and was a YMCA "Youth Counselor" who lured boys into his circle with pornography. [italics suspended except in original]

> As "shy" as he was around women, Kinsey was much at home with young boys. He preferred their company in both outdoor and indoor settings. He joined the Boy Scouts at about age 17, and later as a married man continued to wear his Scout uniform, take boys on nature hikes and the like, and sleep alongside them in tents. The Boy Scout movement, which was founded in Great Britain in 1907, has helped to instill such character traits as honesty, courage, tenacity, cooperation, and devotion to God and country in tens of millions of boys worldwide. Additional millions of devoted men have served as leaders in the Boy Scouts of America (hereafter BSA), founded in 1910, providing young Scouts with positive role models and rewarding experiences. Sadly, however, Scouting has too often been exploited by deviates with less honorable objectives in mind.
>
> Claiming that Kinsey's obsession with boys was entirely platonic, Pomeroy and Christenson insist that he led a largely sexless life. Evidence from Kinsey's own writings, however, raised serious questions about his sexual orientation long before publication of Jones' Alfred C. Kinsey confirmed his deviancy. Even in college he opted for the companionship of youths and boys. A fellow counselor describes Kinsey (then age 21) at the Newark YMCA: His tent, with his nature “library” of a dozen volumes, was a rendezvous for dozens of campers during the day and well into the night, even after taps had sounded and we were supposedly tucked in. ... The boys loved “Al” and couldn’t get enough of him. He had a merry eye, a wide smile and a hearty laugh. ... Always ready for the latest camp prank, he was just as ready to pitch in and help any kid in trouble...

> Unlike most of us, Kinsey had experience at several other camps also; was an active leader in Boy Scout work, often wore his Scout uniform. A camp history refers to war games in 1914… “under… Field Marshal Alfred Kinsey.” [While Kinsey was a student at Bowdoin] he was by far the greatest specialist in that group of young men… [H]e was thoroughly enjoyed as a companion by everyone.[30]

Note that Pomeroy places nature “library” in quotation marks. People in the 1920’s would have understood this to mean that Kinsey collected nature (nudist) magazines, with drawings and photographs of nude youths and adults.

Biographer James H. Jones confirms that Kinsey received nudist magazines at the family home-certainly an interest in conflict with his public “conservative” persona.[34]

Years later, Kinsey would write a curious letter to an old Scouting friend, perhaps one of the boys with whom he had shared his “nature library,” or to whom he devoted so much attention during his adolescent, college, postgraduate, and even married years.[35] Kinsey wrote, “We did have good times together, and you must understand from that Scout troop I began to learn some of the things that made it possible for me to do some of the research that we are now engaged in.”[36] Clearly, Kinsey was not referring to wasp collecting, but to the sexual research and experimentation that would eventually result in publication of Male.

> According to Pomeroy, “Kinsey began to leave Scouting and the sexually sterile world of his boyhood behind him when he graduated from high school.”37 Not mentioned is Kinsey’s continuing close association with boys through his leadership activities, as above, during his college years at Bowdoin and in the Bethany Boys’ Club. According to Christenson: A major activity during his three years of postgraduate studies was the Bethany Boys’ Club at the local Bethany Methodist Episcopal Church. [There were] *Saturday hikes and weekend overnight camping trips with Kinsey.*38
>
> Indeed, Kinsey so enjoyed the Scouting atmosphere that he continued to lead a summer camp program after he was married. He and his wife, Clara, once examined property with the thought of “establishing a boys’ camp of their own.”39 [[102]]

At that time, the Scout Handbook warned Scout Masters to dissuade curious boys from using masturbation to explore sex. Kinsey was able to get that warning removed.[103]

Although Reisman paints a picture of the Boy Scouts as an institution of high standards targeted and perverted by deviants, she later acknowledges they were founded by someone of Kinsey’s persuasion.

> Kinsey’s interest in Scouting appears to have been similar to that of the movement’s founder, Sir Robert Baden-Powell. Like Baden-Powell, Kinsey married relatively late for his time (age 26) and seemed obsessed with nude males. These and other similarities to Baden-Powell, who is known to have collected “nature” photographs of young boys engaged in such activities as skinny-dipping, is both noteworthy and disturbing.[104]

With a background like this, Kinsey was a shoo-in to begin teaching at Indiana University.

Once there, he immediately began seducing his male students by exploiting and abusing their trust in order to satiate his perverse desires.

> Kinsey’s interest in camping with young boys continued after college. His professorship at Indiana University, as well as his field research in > zoology, placed him in close contact with young male students. One was Ralph Voris, a friend whom Kinsey nicknamed "Mr. Man." From as early as 1926 the two shared intimate correspondence. Sex historian and friendly Kinsey biographer Paul Robinson depicts Voris as Kinsey's most intimate, though possibly latent, homosexual companion. ...

>
> Interviewed for the 1996 Yorkshire program, "Kinsey's Paedophiles," Jones described how,
>
> [T]wo male students, Brayland and Coons, worked under Kinsey's supervision in 1934/35. There were numerous episodes, nude and whatnot nude. [There is an explicit] photograph of Kinsey in the buff. On that trip [they engaged in] masturbation sessions, group masturbation. Both of the young men were trying to keep Kinsey at arm's length.
>
> Asked what Brayland's wife thought about it, Jones recalled: "I can tell you that she didn't like Alfred Kinsey. [She responded] that they were just kids from Mississippi and that Alfred Kinsey hurt them." And in his recent biography, Jones notes, Kinsey bathed with his students… striding about camp naked… [Confided one student] "You'd see him… going to the bathroom, and all that sort of thing… He'd just take a leak right there in front of us…" Professors simply did not engage in that sort of behavior with their graduate students. Yet Kinsey seemed totally oblivious to sexual taboos… as though he was determined to flaunt them… Kinsey had become a sexual rebel… manipulative and aggressive, a man who abused his professional authority and betrayed his trust as a teacher… [O]nly… a compulsive man would have taken such risks.[47] [105]

However, these were times when the outing of such behavior brought consequences. Kinsey would need a "beard"; the appearance of normal life brought by a woman with little to no will of her own — someone who could be manipulated into full co-operation with any criminal act or behavior.

Such was Clara Bracken McMillen. Kinsey brutalized and manipulated her from the beginning, training her to be his willing slave.

> Christenson describes how Alfred Kinsey used the couple's honeymoon to "test" his wife's courage and stamina. Though his bride was allegedly an outdoor girl, she had never climbed a mountain. Kinsey, who worked for years to overcome his sickly youth, had acquired mountain-climbing skills and commonly utilized them to establish his superiority over other men. Christenson writes, They climbed Mount Washington in a blizzard. Since Clara had never seen a mountain before, this was a real initiation into rugged climbing and all-weather camping. On the first stiff ascent Alfred selected a fire-warden's trail, which was the shortest feasible route and, in Clara's words, "straight up." Alfred, in good trim, led the way, with his new bride lagging somewhat behind.[52]
>
> As the honeymoon trek continued, Kinsey would forge ahead, then wait for his bride to catch up. Christenson notes: "It was clearly a test of her mettle, and she was equal to it."[53]
>
> Christenson does not ask why Dr. Kinsey did not opt for a traditional honeymoon of blissful togetherness. Instead of wine and roses, he brought pitted prunes and prepackaged trail foods. Instead of a cozy cottage with a warm fire, the future sex authority chose wind, rain, and frigid nights outdoors — conditions virtually guaranteed to preclude consummation of their marriage: "When necessary they built a lean-to for shelter from the wind and rain. The evening routine was to take off their boots and belts and to put on clean socks, plus all the extra clothing available, before climbing into their blankets."[54] [106]

They were married in 1921 and even Wikipedia notes that it was a ceremony avoided by Kinsey's father.[107]

Their children would all be exploited to varying degrees with some overcoming it (even dismissing it) better than others.

> Appearing on the 1996 BBC program "Reputations," Kinsey's two (by then elderly) daughters claimed that their father was a typical middle-class dad who was thoughtful in all things. Surviving son Bruce has repeatedly refused interviews with anyone writing about his father.[108]

For Kinsey, “religion” was still a part of life but biographers and “critics” like Jewish Judith Reisman don’t give specifics.

> Christenson notes that “Alfred described in detail to Clara his church work with the Bethany Boys’ Club while he was at Harvard,”[50] which suggested to Clara that Kinsey was “too churchy” for her.[51] Pomeroy insists, to the contrary, that by age 26 Kinsey was a committed atheist. If so, he apparently hid that fact from Clara. ...
>
> A later incident, while Kinsey was mentoring his sexology disciples, further underscored [Reisman mislabels this Kinsey’s “atheism”]. He and Pomeroy were talking about theological matters. Pomeroy, puzzled by the impression “that [Kinsey] still entertained religious feelings,” interjected, “...Do you really believe in God?” Kinsey was irate and “surprised” ...
>
> Alfred and Clara were married on June 3, 1921. She gave birth to their first son, Donald, in mid-1922. A diabetic, he died at a young age. They had three other children: daughters Anne (1924) and Joan (1925), and son Bruce (1928). Little is known about the Kinsey children, other than that one took piano lessons, they were forbidden to receive confirmation despite attending church and that they eventually gave their sex histories to Pomeroy and their father. Jones reports that Kinsey led his family on nudist vacations to the Smoky Mountains, and that nudist magazines were perused in the home. Kinsey himself would often shave in the nude in the presence of the children.[56] We are not told at what age this practice ended, or if it ended.
>
> All of the young Kinseys attended church. “Both parents,” Pomeroy explains, “felt it was a cultural experience they should have.” It is conceivable that Dr. Kinsey attended primarily to enhance an aura of respectability. Years earlier, Jones reports, he had joined with leaders of the eugenics movement, whose devotees disdained the Judeo Christian belief system. But a churchgoing image would provide useful cover for his secret life and unorthodox research.[109]

What “church” (lower case) did the children attend?

— The one where teenagers are “confirmed” (and, apparently, one which Dr. Reisman wishes to screen out of the Kinsey family experience): Roman Catholicism.

The connection would be even more clear later in Kinsey’s life.

One of Kinsey’s favorite lines to wow future sexual deviants in his classroom was to impress them with how the “Kinsey Institute’s” collection of pornography was second only to the Vatican’s.

Jewish Dr. Judith “invalidates” this habit of Kinsey’s by quoting shameless anti-Semite E. Michael Jones. It seems Jones called the Vatican and the representative he spoke with denied the charge.[110]

Case closed!

Regardless, it is clear that both the Kinsey Institute and the Vatican prioritize pornography in their agendas.

As proof of how much power the Vatican has, Kinsey’s work is intimately intertwined with the Godfather of porn: Hugh Hefner.

> Kinsey disciple Hugh Hefner launched the “other” revolutionary book, Playboy*, in 1953, the same year that Kinsey’s* Female volume was published.
>
> Hefner said that Kinsey was the researcher and that he was the “pamphleteer.” Hefner marketed Kinsey’s view of men as “Playboys,” and women and children as their sexual “Playmates.”[111]

The connection is more clear with Playboy’s companion magazine, Penthouse, founded by Italian Roman Catholic media magnate Robert C. “Bob” Guccione.

Interestingly, Guccione is not mentioned by Reisman.

In 1979, Guccione spent nearly $20 million of his personal fortune to memorialize the Roman Emperor Caligula with a pornographic “epic” by the same name. He was surprisingly able to recruit big-named talent. The explicit sex movie starred Malcolm McDowell as Caligula and included

Teresa Ann Savoy, Sir John Gielgud, Sir Peter O'Toole and Dame Helen Mirren.

One can only guess how much their participation has guaranteed their continued success. At this writing, Hollywood.com has published the glitz article — 50 Cent: "I'm in love with Helen Mirren"

> 50 Cent has fallen for the charms of Dame Helen Mirren, insisting he finds it hard not to just stare at her whenever he's in her company.
>
> The 69-year-old Oscar winner and the rapper, who is almost 30 years younger, met up on the red carpet at the 57th Monte Carlo TV Festival on Tuesday (20Jun17) in Monaco, and he is happy to admit he now has a major new crush.
>
> 50 Cent posted a photo of the odd couple together on Instagram and added the caption: "70 is the new 50… Yeah, I think I love her, man. I'm trying not to stare at her.*[112]

If only "50 Cent" had been with Dame Helen 40 years ago, he could've played one of her Nubian consorts in Caligula's Court.

Although Judith Reisman stands dutiful guard before the Vatican's porn vaults, she's absolutely correct when she assails and assesses the damage (but not without, again, taking a swipe at a "Methodist minister" and his sleazy operation) — Pomeroy tells us that Kinsey had a "grand scheme,"[52] and that sexualized images were vital to his dream of moving American society from its traditional moral standard based on marriage, to one predicated on "free love." Images intended to promote and legitimize deviant behaviors were critical to this moral and cultural conversion – what the IASHS calls the brain's "restructuring."

> The widespread availability of limitless varieties of pornographic magazines, videos, and computer graphics has institutionalized an assault on the fabric of our country that is, among other things, alienating an increasing number of men from real-life women, their wives, and their families.[53] As the institution of marriage has eroded, sexual violence toward women and children has escalated.[113]

As to the Institute's own pornography, admiring Kinsey biographer Jonathan Gathorne-Hardy admitted — The Kinsey Institute already moved Kinsey's notorious sex-films to a secret location. And they have vowed to destroy painstakingly accumulated material (including a $40 million erotic art collection almost never seen) if the police arrive with warrants — as the Tate documentary suggests is desirable... I'm afraid a lot of material has probably already been destroyed... I think it's inevitable that things will be got rid of. They're under siege...Tate...marks Kinsey down as a fifth-columnist gay man — the very image of deceit and lies.[114]

Kinsey's homosexual student conquest[xi], Ralph "Mr. Man" Voris, remained "intimate" with him even to the point of collecting "data" on Greek boy-love.

> Regarding "aesthetic admiration for the bodies of Greek youth," Kinsey wrote to Voris about his collection of "gorgeous" male homosexual photographs[14] in a manner somewhat reminiscent of Scouting founder Sir Robert Baden Powell's remarks about young male nudes:[15]
>
> > What I would have done without your earlier help, I do not know. ... I have whole albums of photographs of their friends, or from commercial sources-fine art to putrid. Some of the art model material is gorgeous. I want you to see it.[16] [115]

Voris died just as their "research" was getting underway — supposedly of pneumonia — at only 38 years of age in 1940.

The whitewash by Kinsey's fellow deviant Wardell Baxter Pomeroy (regurgitated faithfully by The Atlantic) is a clinic in spin.

> After remarking on the unexceptional character of Kinsey's professional and domestic life before 1938, Pomeroy continues, with an air of mystery and significance: "Yet there was one event that made these years far from ordinary for him. It was his friendship for a student, Ralph Voris ... Voris became the closest friend Kinsey ever had; their relationship probably meant more to him than any other." Voris died of pneumonia in 1940, and Kinsey was heartbroken, > especially as he had hoped to share the challenge of his new project with this younger friend.[116]

With "friendship" actually meaning seduction by abuse of trust for sodomy, we already see how trustworthy "Kinsey Institute" conclusions are.

Voris' wife repeatedly begged Kinsey to visit his "younger friend" — the one who meant more to him than any other — but he was too busy with "sex research".

However, after Voris died, Kinsey did decide upon a visit.

> Alfred Kinsey's close friend Ralph ("Mr. Man") Voris died on May 9, 1940. Despite repeated requests by Voris' wife for a bedside visit, Kinsey was too deeply involved in sex interviews to see him. He and Clara did, however, drive immediately to Springfield, Missouri, to comfort the widow and attend the funeral service. Then, [U]nder the cover of darkness, he [Kinsey] entered Voris' office and removed certain items, including copies and originals of their private correspondence. This accomplished, Kinsey and Clara returned to Bloomington, without staying for the interment two days later...[2] [117]

In 1938, Kinsey managed to finagle a position teaching a marriage course. It was something he was completely unqualified to do but it was a position that allowed him the cover to begin a lifetime of sex crimes masked as "science".

Perhaps more than any other enabler was the fact that Kinsey again avoided service in war. While the flower of America's youth was being shredded in World War II, Kinsey was a jackal amongst their wives and children.

He quickly arranged for deferments for his entire sex staff[118]: a feat which betrays the support of powerful "friends".

During this time, Kinsey was honing his skills as a predator and master manipulator; taking boys (Scouts, church youth groups and students) out on "camping trips" in which he insisted they all bathe daily and openly.[119]

Kinsey was a textbook maladjusted homosexual deviant who secretly despised women including his own wife. This was apparent as he badgered and brutalized young females into openly discussing their most intimate sex lives for his “research”. He then berated them for what he perceived were “lies”, often fabricating what he thought he should’ve found had they told him what he wanted to hear.

This was particularly outrageous for the 1940’s but Indiana University stood by their “scientist” then and still does today.

Kinsey biographer James Jones openly admits that Kinsey’s “interviews” for sex histories were primarily used to arouse the “scientist” and not for any semblance of “research”.[120]

Kinsey’s personal perversions consumed him with lust and he actively sought the most depraved acts possible until, eventually, nothing aroused him and, ironically, he became impotent.[121]

What any of Kinsey’s admirers fail to admit is that “research” with a predetermined outcome isn’t “science”, it’s propaganda.

It takes merely the slightest familiarization with Alfred Kinsey to understand that he was a sexual pervert on a mission to normalize deviancy yet this is never admitted.

The conclusion is startling: each and every Kinsey peer in “science” approves of what Kinsey did and is satisfied to maintain the lies despite how it destroys their own credibility and offends real science.

As a result of this agenda of pseudo-science, Kinsey needed to be assured of the co-operation of willing agents of disinformation.

He did that with blackmail.

He recruited only young people and then immediately demanded they give every detail of their previous sex lives which he meticulously chronicled and filed away.

If they wished to advance, they were entirely reliant upon him.

> Kinsey’s principal assistants and coauthors of the Male volume — Wardell Pomeroy and Clyde Martin — were both young, inexperienced, and without doctorates or published academic work.

> Their lack of professional standing was unusual for such a controversial and high profile research study. For Kinsey, their loyalty would be reinforced by their lack of academic achievement. The team was entirely dependent on Kinsey for professional advancement.[122]

Pomeroy described Kinsey's bullying and manipulation in a very distinct way —

> That was Kinsey, the mother superior keeping us within the strict boundaries of his schedule, yet we did not often resent it.[123]

But he didn't stop there.

He then required them to be filmed in sexual activity of all kinds, done in a special sound-proof room provided him by Indiana University.

> Kinsey's fixation on direct participation in, and observation of, sex acts led eventually to the construction of a soundproof laboratory at Indiana University's Wiley Hall, where Kinsey, his staff, their wives, and invited guests could engage in all sorts of sexual antics. Some were documented on film. Kinsey believed that sexual experiments on humans should not differ measurably from those on "other animals." Wrapped in the protective aura of "scientific research," he sought [any depraved act possible] ... [124]

Friendly Kinsey biographer James H. Jones told the BBC "there was more than a little masochism filmed at the institute." Jones admitted Kinsey's "personal interest" in making sado/masochistic pornos.[125]

For ultimate secrecy (and participation — which he often did, being the good scientist) Kinsey created a sex studio in the attic of his own home.[126]

Most of the men on Kinsey's staff were also his homosexual conquests.

> It is to be remembered that both Pomeroy and Martin were, reports Jones, Kinsey's "lovers" from time to time.[127]

If they were particularly pleasing to him, he allowed them to have sex with his wife.[xii]

But only after he sodomized them first.

Vincent Nowlis was the only heterosexual to join Kinsey and that didn't last long. He was the exception: choosing to resign rather than participate in the "homosexual experience".[128]

> The "public" might indeed have been "astounded," since the "eminent scientists" who appeared in the Institute's sex films included all of the carefully selected Kinsey team, including Kinsey, his wife, the wives of all or most of Kinsey's coauthors, the timid Martin, the eager Pomeroy (who occasionally performed sexually with Kinsey and his wife), and a sexually-coerced Dallenback. In a brazen example of sexual workplace harassment parading as "science," Kinsey hired only those who would yield to his demands for "primary" sources.[20] His methodology included secrecy and deception, which he deemed necessary to accomplish his goals while hiding his techniques from the public.
>
> The histories were taken in soundproof facilities constructed, according to Jones, between 1942 and 1943 (approximately when Pomeroy joined the team), with additions in 1950. Christenson writes: The "lab" — as we always called it — presented a uniform, trim, antiseptic appearance… all well locked. At Wiley Hall where the Institute was housed on the ground floor, windows… were carefully fitted with strong metal grills. ... All doors to private offices had to be soundproofed and special locks were installed to insure privacy in discussion and interviewing.[21]...
>
> The 1996 World Book Almanac and Book of Facts states that 40 decibels are comparable to "light traffic," 70 decibels to "normal traffic, quiet train," and 80 decibels to "rock music or a subway."[23]
>
> Kinsey's "eighty decibels" would conceal quite a lot, including the shrieks and screams of the sadomasochistic acts performed by Samuel M. Steward, whom Kinsey labeled a "masochist." Steward would later become a well-known homosexual psychologist whose special interests included boy "hustlers" and tattooing.[24] [[129]]

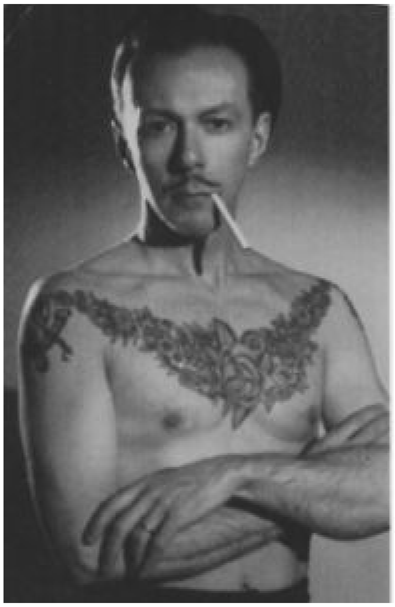
Here, again, Jewish Dr. Judith seems to have missed Samuel Morris Steward's full resumé.

Steward was a deviant who wrote homosexual eroticism under the names Phil Andros, Phil Sparrow[xiii] and others.

It is amazing that a sexual pervert and "tattoo artist" like Steward should have such a long life (1909 – 1993), perhaps there were other factors involved.

Most importantly, Samuel Morris Steward was a Roman Catholic, highly sought after by Catholic institutions of higher learning.



He first taught at Archbishop John Carroll College in Montana but then received a promotion to Jesuit Loyola University in the "Windy City", Chicago (a Jesuit stronghold where future Jesuit protégés like Barack Obama would be taught how to "community organize"[130]).

Seeking more "intimacy" with his students, Steward transferred again (but still to another Catholic college in Chicago), to DePaul.

Clearly, Samuel Steward was the kind of man clergy wanted mentoring their students.

It was here that Steward and Kinsey were brought together.[131]

Steward was a "scientist", too.

> Openly consorting with like-minded authors, teachers, students, artists and performers, pick-ups, and tricks, Steward kept detailed diaries and lists of all his sexual "conquests" and escapades in a box marked

> “Stud File.” The liaisons number into the thousands. He also took photographs and filmed his sexual orgies. Considering that he could have been arrested and blackmailed for any of these indiscretions, it’s remarkable that these documents survived. ... He was encouraged in this endeavor by his good friend and guide, Alfred Kinsey, who saw in Steward an invaluable entree into the homosexual demimonde (to which he was himself drawn) and a unique example of a sexual gourmand, for want of a better word, for whom quantity was more important than quality. ~ Huffington Post[132]

Steward was brought to Kinsey to be mentored in perversion.

It was a match made in Hell and Steward marked the connection with an interesting characterization of Kinsey that only Luciferians would understand — In spring of 1950, at Kinsey’s invitation, he was filmed engaging in BDSM sex with Mike Miksche, a New York-based erotic artist also known as Steve Masters. ... Kinsey was Steward’s most important mentor; he later described Kinsey ... as a god-like bringer of enlightenment to mankind, thus giving him the nickname, “Doctor Prometheus.”[3] ~ Wikipedia[133]

This homosexual porn film was especially organized although what lead to it has received little-to-no scrutiny.

Judith Reisman gives more detail —

> SEX-TORTURE EXPERIMENTS
>
> Writing in the November 13, 1980, issue of The Advocate, a homosexual monthly, Steward recalled the time he was flown to Indiana to be filmed in a sex sadism film produced and directed by Kinsey. Pomeroy described Steward as a “partner” in a “homosexual couple,”[25] but Steward wrote that he had never met the “partner” (Mike Miksche) until they were introduced in Kinsey’s garden. Shortly thereafter, the two prepared for the filming of an act of sexual sadism as Kinsey’s “scientists” watched and took notes.
>
> Pomeroy claims that the sadism filmed that day was merely part of the couple’s “normal” sex life. He recalls that Kinsey, while in New York > observing men battering one another in sadistic rituals, “was particularly intrigued by the intercourse of a homosexual couple in which one of the partners had an orgasm,” so he invited Steward to his “lab” for a demonstration.[26]

>
> Steward wrote that by the time he arrived on campus, Kinsey had gotten Miksche “half-drunk on gin.” The subsequent sadism film sequences were not quite what Steward had anticipated: I was marked and marred, all muscles weakened… my jaws were so tired and unhinged… Mike slapped me hard and [unprintable]... During the sessions I was vaguely conscious of people dropping in now and then to observe, while Mrs. Kinsey, a true scientist to the end… sat by, and once in a while calmly changed the sheets upon the workbench.[27]
>
> While Pomeroy suggests that the “partners” had a clear idea of who was in charge, operationally speaking Kinsey and Pomeroy were in charge of the entire scenario. The Kinsey team admittedly solicited victim and offender, paid for the service, and engaged in deception to bring it about.[134]

Alfred Kinsey and Samuel Steward were true soulmates having walked (or been guided through?) the same path from Methodism to Roman Catholicism.

> Born into a Methodist household, Steward converted to Catholicism during his university years, but had long since abandoned the Catholic Church by the time he accepted his teaching position at Loyola. ~ Wikipedia[135]

Interesting that Steward should “long-abandon” Catholicism but be selected to teach for the Jesuits and then transfer again to yet another Catholic college.

Protestants in general and Methodists in specific would be targeted even further when Kinsey homosexual partner and subordinate “scientist” Wardell Pomeroy was sent from the “Institute” to further the work of another sexual deviant, Ted Mcllvenna. Mcllvenna was masquerading as a Methodist (in this case, a “minister”, to boot), in the Jesuit stronghold of San Francisco.[xiv]

Dr. Reisman is careful to expunge what “church” Kinsey kept his children from being “Confirmed” in (but specifically sent them to for training), or how Kinsey’s connection with pornography “Professor” Samuel Steward was arranged on the campus of Catholic DePaul University but she had no problem calling Ted Mcllvenna, a “Methodist minister”.

> After leaving Bloomington, Wardell Pomeroy became Academic Dean of the Institute for the Advanced Study of Human Sexuality in San Francisco alongside the Rev. Ted Mcllvenna, a Methodist minister.
>
> Like the Kinsey Institute, the IASHS filmed sexual acts among staff members, including scenes of these sex professionals engaged in graphic homosexual and heterosexual orgies seen in Meditations, an IASHS by-product. The IASHS sold its child pornography to Hustler magazine for widespread publication.[136]

If we were to contrast whether the Vatican truly has the world’s greatest collection of pornography or Ted Mcllvenna should be honestly labeled a “Methodist minister” without qualification, there’s a good chance the Methodists would be able to make the finer point.

In his position as a trusted Catholic sexual deviant, “professor” and “author”, special arrangements were made[137] to have Steward meet and promote two infamous Jewish lesbians residing in Catholic Paris; Gertrude Stein and Alice Toklas.

With surreal obedience, like Ygor to Dr. Frankenstein, Kinsey’s wife Clara submitted to any and all sexual perversions foisted upon her by “guests” and “researchers” alike. When not a participant, she would bring milk and cookies to the porn studio in between sets and replace the sheets soiled by semen, urine and excrement.[138]

Kinsey biographer James Jones characterized this as “befitted the wife of the high priest of sexual liberation.”[139]

“High priest”, indeed. However few have been as hopelessly enslaved as Alfred Charles Kinsey.

As Kinsey continued to collect “sex histories”, he became a junior J. Edgar Hoover — carefully assimilating dirt on anyone he could, dragging them into the Devil’s Simulation.

> Kinsey’s aggressive, intrusive, and arguably illegal conduct was protected by Indiana University’s public relations apparatus. We now know that some of the women and children in publicity photographs may have paid a high price to maintain the carefully honed Kinsey image. In October 1997, syndicated columnist Mona Charen, commenting on James Jones’ biography, noted that “according to one wife of another employee, there was ‘sickening pressure’ to agree to have sex on film.”[78]
>
> Many officials and scholars covered up Kinsey’s highly improper activities during his lifetime, and continue to do so at the Kinsey Institute and Indiana University today. Pomeroy adds some perspective to what was foisted onto the public and misrepresented as an objective scientific quest for human betterment: I think he liked secrets, that their possession gave him a sense of power. And there was no question that the histories did give him unique potential power. On the Indiana campus alone, there were at least twenty professors with homosexual histories unknown to anyone else, not to mention the numerous extramarital experiences recorded. ... With his intimate knowledge of the sexual lives of important people, Kinsey could have figuratively blown up the United States socially and politically. [P]erhaps he liked to feel sometimes that he was putting something over on the world.[79] [Emphasis added.][140]

Perhaps a better description would be “Jesuit Confessor”. It’s one Kinsey made himself.

> Kinsey once claimed that he and his team had earned the rights of “a priest...”[63] to keep confidential the information provided by rapists, murderers, child-molesters, and pedophile murderers.[141]

Kinsey took particular pleasure in terrorizing children in the guise of "science" such as showing explicit films of animal copulation — particularly violent or graphic ones like porcupines.

Note the expressions of Kinsey and his wife Clara (second from the right).

Keep all this in mind whenever Alfred Kinsey is mentioned with hallowed reverence as an esteemed "scientist".

With a totalitarian iron fist no different than Nazis or Communists, Kinsey pushed for the "right" to commit any heinous sex crime on man, woman, child or beast and mask it as "science".

Sadly, even his detractors allow this subterfuge.

> Kinsey often expressed an elitist right to unlimited, uncontrolled "scientific research" into everyone's sexuality, including that of children from birth. It should hardly surprise us, then, that in the chapter on child sexuality in the Male volume he writes wistfully of the great things that science might accomplish with absolute freedom to conduct human experiments: "Erotic arousal [of children] could be subjected to precise instrumental measurement if objectivity among scientists and public respect for scientific research allowed such laboratory investigation."[84] This noxious attitude caused Ashley Montagu to accuse Kinsey of "scientomania:"
>
> > The analyst must first and foremost be human, must be responsive to the emotions which motivate human beings. Kinsey doesn't > appear to be very interested in emotions. ... 85 [[142]]

This is, at best, a gross misunderstanding of what "science" is and, at worst, a purposeful deception.

Nonsensical words like "scientomania" or "scientism" spin pseudo-science as "pure" but misguided when, in reality, it is neither.

The foundation of science is the Scientific Method:

- Make an observation.
- Develop an hypothesis.
- Conduct experiments in a sterile environment (isolating known variables) to replicate the observation, thereby proving the hypothesis.
- Present to peers of equal or greater reliability in this method who can prove or disprove using the same steps (peer review).

Many would be shocked to learn just how much pseudo-science is taught as real science in every school with neither the requirement to obey their own disciplines nor the acceptance of cross-examination or dissent of any kind. Along with Kinsey's "sex science" are the frauds of evolution, paleontology and astronomy. Their suppositions are neither observable, testable nor repeatable yet they are commanded to be taught without exception or criticism.

When laymen make observations that contradict the "experts" they are ridiculed or targeted for insider jargon they aren't meant to make sense of.

For instance, an unbiased observation tells us the sun and moon are roughly the same size and relatively close to us yet the "experts" say it's merely an optical illusion: the sun is 400x bigger than the moon and, "coincidentally" 400x further from us.

"Experts" like the National Aeronautics and Space Administration tell us that —

- The Earth is spinning at 1,000 mph (breaking the 767mph sound barrier).

- The Earth revolves around the sun at 67,000 mph.
- The solar system moves through the Milky Way at 500,000 mph.
- The Milky Way moves through the universe at 670,000,000 mph.

Yet the North Star remains absolutely fixed.

Again, we're told this is an "optical illusion".

The North Star is so far away, it only seems fixed.

The keepers of the Devil's Simulation own our very reality and our most trusted institutions are our most vicious enemies.

Doctor of Communications Judith Reisman admits that big money like the Rockefeller Foundation hands weaponized tactics to government agencies like the CIA on how to manipulate public opinion with the goal to get innocent citizens to approve that which would ultimately cause great harm to themselves and their children.[143]

As a key player in this deception — the complete destruction of traditional, Christian sexual morays and norms — "Dr." Alfred Kinsey's "research" had been based on the experiences of deviants, prisoners, homosexuals in bars and baths, and child molesters.[144]

> For his database, Kinsey classified more than 1,400 criminals and sex offenders as "normal,"[4] on grounds that such miscreants are essentially the same as normal men. ...
>
> Kinsey associate Paul Gebhard explained that even the prison sample was heavily weighted toward sexual disorder, since the Kinsey team specifically sought the worst sex offenders...[145]

Gebhard later admitted to Yorkshire Television (for their 1998 BBC documentary Secret History: Kinsey's Paedophiles) that when they went to prisons, they told each administration, "'Give us the list of everyone who is up on a pedophilia charge', and we'd go after them."

Even more astoundingly, Gebhard outed the existence of the Devil’s Simulation child sex slave network: “There was also a pedophile organization, in this country. They co-operated with us. Some of them, of course, were not incarcerated.”[146]

Even after picking the most outrageous subjects, even after coercing them into explicit detail and encouraging them to be as wild and perverse as possible, the Kinsey team still didn’t get enough of the “results” they were looking for so they often “embellished” the accounts.

> Kinsey’s figure of 10 percent homosexuality, for example, mirrors what is called the statistical “fudge factor.” It can also be applied to his data on adultery, sodomy, etc. If a subject stubbornly refuses to admit committing acts recited by the interviewer, the latter simply speculates about what really happened. Among scientists, such manipulation is euphemistically termed “massaging the data.”[147]

Yet, today, 70 years after the publication of Sexual Behavior in the Human Male, believing that 1 person in 10 is homosexual is as accepted as the spinning of the Earth or the Age of the Dinosaurs.

Because they receive, use, and even facilitate themselves, “data” derived from criminal acts, the Kinsey staff (then and now) lives in an alternate reality that allows them to validate any aberrant behavior as “normal”.

> ...it is apparent that Kinsey’s peculiar definitions of such terms as “college,” “married,” “rape,” “contacts,” and “partner” were precisely designed to bolster his team’s bizarre views of rape, crime, marriage, and child molestation.[148]

Their enablers in law enforcement, justice and government see that they have no need of leaving this alternate reality.

The Pedophiles of Pseudo-Science

First and foremost, Alfred Kinsey, his subordinates and all they employed were pedophiles.

In this, they were (and are) true members of the Devil’s Simulation.

In 1965, the “Kinsey Institute” published Sex Offenders: An Analysis of Types.

It was a one thousand page subterfuge whose biggest deception was to paint the abuse of the innocent in grades.

It was immediately brought in as definitive text for cops, judges, lawyers, doctors and teachers who were all taught that, if a child walks away from abuse without a swollen face and internal bleeding, it’s much less a crime.

Reality is just the opposite. The latent harm done to the rape of children may not manifest for decades. It can run the gamut from mood-swings like depression or inexplicable rage to schizophrenia. It can include the inability to normally interact with others from basic office co-workers to friends, family, spouses or children.

Almost every time, child abuse leads the victim to harmful addictions and often ends in suicide.

One of the “trusted Institute researchers” for Sex Offenders was Glenn Ramsey, a Peoria school teacher — himself a sex offender having “interviewed” 350 “sexually aberrant” boys. He was subsequently getting fired for “improprieties”. Even here, Ramsey escaped being arrested and prosecuted.

Judith Reisman noted —

> Nevertheless, Kinsey defended Ramsey vociferously, and obtained Rockefeller Foundation money to pay his legal fees.[149]

She then quoted Kinsey out of context as being deathly afraid of “Catholics” because they harassed his “researchers”.

The Rockefeller family and Foundation is another “safe” target, seemingly devoid of connections to the Catholic Church but the strings are attached if one takes just a little time to look for them.

For instance, one of the Presidents of the Rockefeller Foundation was Father Theodore Martin Hesburgh (1917 – 2015) — one of the most powerful Roman Catholic priests in America.

Hesburgh was also the President of Notre Dame for 35 years (just a few hours north of Indiana University).

Father Hesburgh was an invisible hand in every Presidential administration from Eisenhower to Obama and he served openly as a United States Government representative in a variety of posts such as the “National Science Board” or the Civil Rights Committee as well as the Civil Rights Commission and the President’s Blue Ribbon Immigration Reform Commission.

Each position promoted a treasonous agenda of lies and deceit.

Father Hesburgh was a VIP guest of the United States Navy and joined them in a supposed secret expedition to the South Pole — except that such a journey remains impossible both then and now.

“Immigration Reform” was and still is code for the Catholic Church’s agenda to endlessly flood the United States with Roman Catholic illegal aliens from the south, trained by countless Jesuit institutions to demand socialism and communism from their host nation. Open borders means aliens go through no assimilation process and they are used to accent the “clash of civilizations” causing chaos and anger wherever they accumulate.

Even the Catholic Church’s involvement in “civil rights” has a poisonous end-state.

On the surface, “civil rights” seems a praiseworthy endeavor but harmonious reconciliation was not on the agenda for Hesburgh or any of the thousands of Catholic priests and nuns who helped fan the flames of racial unrest, especially in the 1960’s.

It was all part of the “Divide and Conquer” technique still in use today.

As a result of Theodore Hesburgh’s power in the American government he was honored in a way unique to Rome’s authority over the United States military — Father Ted was given a “ride” in the Air Force’s most secret platform in his day, the SR-71 Blackbird.

Interracial Council RESTAURANT HALL BE GHT
EGATION NOW
ILLIONS FOR BUILDINGS; MUCH FOR STICE?
CATHOLICS Do NOT DISCRIMINATE
CATHOLIC STUDENTS PROTEST DISCRIMINATION

Underneath the façade of a scholarly college president, Hesburgh was just as much the deviant as Kinsey which is why he fit perfectly at the Rockefeller Foundation, bankrolling Kinsey's work. From abortion to "sex education", Hesburgh outraged conservative Catholics with his politics.[150] He even promoted SIECUS, the "Sex Information and Education Council of the United States" — a radical organization that teaches complete depravity to the youngest of children captive in both public and private schools.

Judith Reisman notes —

> In 1964, the Sex Information and Education Council of the United States (SIECUS) was launched at the Kinsey Institute. Its objective was to teach Kinseyan ideology as sex education in our schools.
>
> SIECUS (which now calls itself the Sexuality Information and Education Council of the United States) imprinted the new Kinsey variant standard on almost all sex education curricula. Its early leader, Dr. Mary Calderone (past medical director of Planned Parenthood) was the direct link between Kinsey's university-based research, Planned Parenthood's grassroots outreach, and SIECUS.
>
> SIECUS was a "Resource Center [operating] Specialized Programs to Distribute Information about Human sexuality [through] learned > journals, research studies, training materials for health professionals and sample classroom curricula."[111]

>
> As SIECUS is regularly funded by the State, questions need to be asked about the January 1979 Annual Playboy *which announced that "*Playboy Foundation provide[d] the first of several major grants to The Sex Information and Education Council of the United States to support its nationwide educational programs."
>
> As Christie Hefner added, Playboy also provided the original seed money for SIECUS: Through the Playboy Foundation, Hefner put his money where his mouth was. It made the initial grant to establish an Office of Research Services of the Sex Information and Education Council of the U.S. (SIECUS) in the late 60s.[151]

However, Roman Catholic priests like Hesburgh aren't shown by Kinsey critics in their role behind the scenes, Jews are. Again, eager to betray her own people to serve the Authors of the Inquisition, Judith Reisman connects the dots from SIECUS to eugenics and Planned Parenthood founder Margaret Sanger through Kinsey's propaganda of sexual perversion in patsy Jews like David Loth and Morris Ernst.

When Kinsey published Sexual Behavior in the Human Male, "historians" like Loth and "jurists" like Morris simultaneously applied it to their fields.

> The fourth book published in tandem with Kinsey's Report was American Sexual Behavior and the Kinsey Report*. This very important contribution to the growing "free love" legal debate was co-authored by ACLU attorney, Morris L. Ernst, and historian David Loth. The book's dedication was to the accommodating Kinsey team who "enriched the market-place of thought."*[28] Ernst advocated legalization of adultery, obscenity, and abortion throughout his career, as well as Kinsey's full panoply of sex law changes: Let me mention a few items on which law must say thank you [to Kinsey]. Our laws have attempted to abolish all sexual outlets, except marital intercourse, … [including] sodomy [and] seduction… Forty-four states have laws against adultery. … Yet the Kinsey report may well… show that one third of all husbands [commit adultery] …Those who are concerned > with juvenile delinquency, treatment of homosexuals, and the frightening attitudes of our penal institutions will have a glimmer of what the Kinsey report will do to the stream of law.[29]

>
> Ernst was influential. He served as a "personal representative for President Roosevelt during World War II."[30] Moreover, he was well credentialed as a legal radical for serving as a founding member of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU).[31] Ernst was also the attorney for Kinsey, Margaret Sanger, the Kinsey Institute, the Sex Information and Education Council of the United States (SIECUS), and Planned Parenthood of America. Ernst had close ties to influential and progressive Supreme Court Justices Louis Brandeis, [William Joseph] Brennan, [Felix] Frankfurter and Judge [Billings] Learned Hand,[32] among others. Through the considerable efforts of Ernst, the Kinsey study would have special salience in the courtroom as its findings were plied there. In 1945, Ernst declared, "[w]e had fun educating juries and judges" with their new "scientific" sex information...[152]

The United States Supreme Court is another excellent case study in Roman Catholic control.

From its inception, the Court was never intended to wield the tyrannical, autocratic power it does. That power was fabricated by Chief Justice John Marshall through his decision in Marbury v. Madison (1803).

> Thomas Jefferson had just won the presidency from John Adams. Adams, before leaving office, appointed William Marbury as Justice of the Peace in the District of Columbia. President Jefferson ordered his Secretary of State, James Madison, to withhold the appointment and Marbury brought suit.
>
> Part of the decision of Marbury v. Madison came down to "who had the final authority" given that the Judiciary Act of 1789 appeared to give powers not found in Article III of the Constitution. Although Marshall's overall decision was not to expand the powers of the Central Government, he crowned the Supreme Court as the ultimate arbiter in the question of constitutionality. This unprecedented power is today known as "Judicial Review".

> It has been the root of treasonous tyranny throughout American history ever since, where as few as 5 Supreme Court Justices can subvert the will of the entire American populace... ~ Illuminati Unmasked[153]

If Justices are sick, absent or recused from a decision, less than five individuals unaccountable to the American citizenry can dictate “law” to them.

Some of the most heinous agendas have been accomplished in just this fashion from the “right” to murder the unborn to the safeguarding of pornography as “free speech”.

While America was vigilant, Rome had to rely upon Freemasonic faux Protestants, committed Communist Jews and an occasional overt Catholic serving on the Court.

As that vigilance waned, by 2016 the Vatican was confident enough to openly own the Supreme Court with a solid majority of six Roman Catholics flanked by three token Leftist Jews.

On February 13th, 2016, one of those Roman Catholic Justices — Antonin Scalia — was reported dead at the secluded Cibolo Creek, Texas Ranch of wealthy investment banker John Poindexter. The official story was that, after “quail hunting” the day before, the 79 year-old “died in his sleep”.[154]

Scalia was immediately attended to by his doctor, Rear Admiral Brian P. Monahan. Monahan is also the Attending Physician of the United States Congress. He, too, is a Roman Catholic who was trained at not one, but two Jesuit institutions; Fairfield and Georgetown.[155]

However, suspicions immediately arose when the Cibolo Ranch and Scalia were implicated in ritual child sex abuse.[156]

The alternative media web site Veterans Today ran this byline without explaining it — Worst person in the world found dead in Texas “rent boy ranch,” playground for Mike Jagger and Charlie Sheen.[157]

Perhaps it remained unexplained because Veterans Today and Senior Editor Gordon Duff are vicious anti-Semites (which is why they’ve been seeded into alternative media on behalf of Rome).

More specifically, speaker, activist, blogger and author David Shurter claimed that, as a victim of ritual child sex abuse, Scalia was one of his rapists.[158]

The use of secluded ranches had been described as a modus operandi of the Pedocracy 35 years earlier by victim whistleblower Paul Bonacci.[159]

Scalia has been named as a member of the super-secret, ultra-orthodox Roman Catholic cult of Opus Dei.[160],[161] Several Opus Dei inductees have been implicated in ritual child sex abuse, torture and murder. The juxtaposition of extreme Roman piety with such an ultimate evil is telling.

Did something go wrong at the "rent-boy[xv] ranch"? Did the debauchery do in the debilitated devil-worshipper? Perhaps one of the seemingly defenseless victims suddenly turned upon his abuser in uncontrollable, pent-up rage.

More on Opus Dei and ritual child abuse in Chapter 30.

As we try to regain awareness of Vatican secret control over power from Helsinki to Hollywood, Denmark to D.C., the Dragon of Rome is making attempts to cover her tracks again.

President Donald Trump (trained by the Jesuits at Fordham then sent to "secular" University of Pennsylvania for his sheepskin) selected "Protestant" 10th Circuit Court Judge Neil McGill Gorsuch as his replacement.

Gorsuch attends St. John's Episcopal Church in Boulder, Colorado — the same parish as the family of JonBenét Ramsey.

St. John's is pastored by a woman, "Reverend" Susan Springer. She is notably Leftist in her teachings — as is the vast majority of all Episcopal churches. In fact, the Episcopalian Church is such a close off-shoot of Roman Catholicism it is often called in jest "Catholic Lite".

Amongst the Luciferians, any reference to "John" immediately calls up Templar worship of John the Baptist as the "true messiah" instead of Jesus Christ, known as "Johannism".

A Jewish journalist at the Washington Post wrote a prominent piece promoting Gorsuch as “the First Protestant on the Court in Years[162]” (he was, of course, confirmed by the Senate).

The Washington Post is now home of Martin “Marty” Baron, the driving force behind the Boston Globe’s Spotlight exposé on Catholic sex abuse in that city. It was his first action as Editor and he left shortly thereafter (almost as if he was on a mission to resuscitate the Globe’s mummified credibility). He’s now an Executive Editor at the Post.

JonBenét

If ever there were an obvious victim of the Devil’s Simulation it would be JonBenét Ramsey.

The obsessive behavior of her parents, John Bennett and Patricia Ann “Patsy” Ramsey left all of the warning signs.

Glamorizing a small child into adult sex appeal should be immediate cause for any “parent” to be under investigation but John Bennet was a millionaire who worked for Lockheed Martin.

JonBenét Ramsey, Wikipedia

The fact that JonBenét was garroted and bludgeoned to death on Christmas Day in 1996 made it clear the perpetrators had an emotion-driven motive connected directly to the child.

An autopsy revealed JonBenét’s vagina had been damaged and wiped clean.[163]

She was even found in the basement of the family home.

A 1999 grand jury voted to indict John and “Patsy” Ramsey as both abusive parents and accessories to the brutal murder of their 6 year-old little girl but then-District Attorney Alex Hunter refused.[164]

41-year-old elementary school teacher John Mark Karr a was arrested in Bangkok, Thailand, in 2006. Karr confessed to the crime and evidence quickly ruled him out.

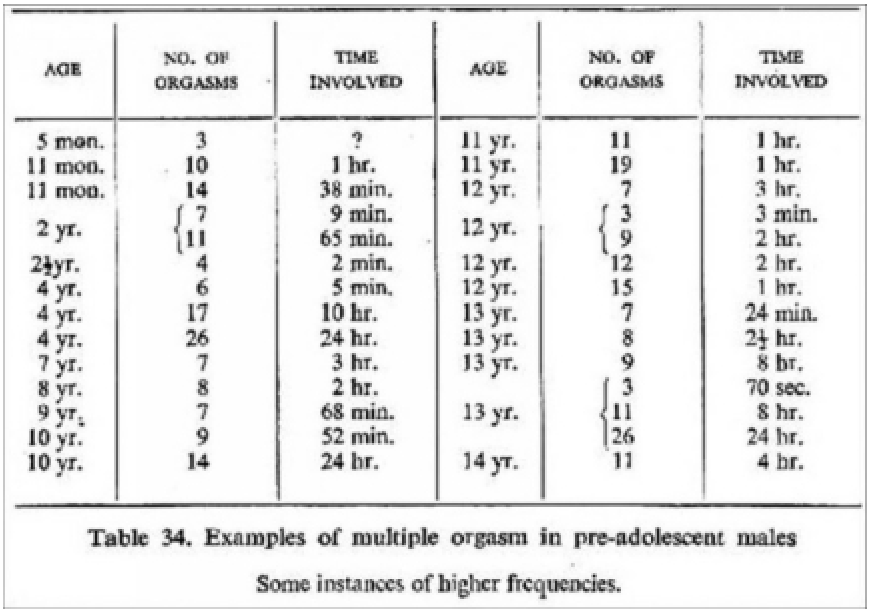
What happened to JonBenét Ramsey remains “unsolved”.

Or, perhaps a more accurate description would be “un-prosecuted”.

Criminal Behavior

What was the “motive” behind Alfred Kinsey’s “research”?

There is no other explanation for the “data” in Sexual Behavior in the Human Male’s “Table 34” than satanic child sex abuse.



AGE	NO. OF ORGASMS	TIME INVOLVED	AGE	NO. OF ORGASMS	TIME INVOLVED
5 mon.	3	?	11 yr.	11	1 hr.
11 mon.	10	1 hr.	11 yr.	19	1 hr.
11 mon.	14	38 min.	12 yr.	7	3 hr.
2 yr.	7	9 min.	12 yr.	3	3 min.
	11	65 min.		9	2 hr.
2½yr.	4	2 min.	12 yr.	12	2 hr.
4 yr.	6	5 min.	12 yr.	15	1 hr.
4 yr.	17	10 hr.	13 yr.	7	24 min.
4 yr.	26	24 hr.	13 yr.	8	2½ hr.
7 yr.	7	3 hr.	13 yr.	9	8 hr.
8 yr.	8	2 hr.	13 yr.	3	70 sec.
9 yr.	7	68 min.		11	8 hr.
10 yr.	9	52 min.		26	24 hr.
10 yr.	14	24 hr.	14 yr.	11	4 hr.

Table 34. Examples of multiple orgasm in pre-adolescent males

Some instances of higher frequencies.

Examples in Male include an “orgasm” from a two-month-old infant and 26 “orgasms” from a 4 year old boy in 24 hours.

Even though Kinsey and his criminal cabal claimed (then and now) not to have directly participated in nor encouraged crimes against children, the fact that “orgasms” were “timed with a stop watch” means perpetrators were instructing in criminal abuse of children, toddlers and infants.

Eventually, they divulged that they were also directly involved, themselves.

> Pomeroy claimed:
>
> > Kinsey tried to train me to help with interviewing the children, but I found that I wasn’t good at it. For that matter, none of the other staff members was any more successful at this delicate job, and Kinsey had to do nearly all of it alone.[56] ...
>
> Pomeroy explains how critics were lulled into a false sense of security about the sources of the child samples by Kinsey’s euphemistic

> description of the interview process: He concentrated at first on the three-, four- and five-year-old levels, working primarily in nursery schools... [58] [165]

The true agenda of the "Kinsey Institute" is personal gratification via the most perverse sex possible and to legitimize it as "science" to be used by other deviant Elites.

Kinsey was the worst of them and did directly participate in criminal acts.

> Kinsey told Dr. Frank K. Shuttleworth of the Institute of Child Welfare, University of California at Berkeley, "that students in the field had all been 'too prudish' to make an actual investigation of sperm count in early adolescent males." Pomeroy stated that Kinsey himself collected "some material" in the "first ejaculate," but "he did not yet have any actual counts."[59]
>
> The third research method employed by the Kinsey team entailed genital experiments; observing, recording, and filming not only adults, but children and infants as well. This technique primarily underpins Chapter 5 of the Male volume and Chapter 4 of the Female volume. Data about the sexual response of children could not be obtained by interview, and the precise details on how the data were obtained may never be fully revealed. It will likely require intense public pressure to force full disclosure. As noted, however, comments about the process have occasionally surfaced from Kinsey Institute team members. In Human Sexualities (1997), John Gagnon, a Kinsey Institute associate, offhandedly acknowledges the illegality of the experiments: A less neutral observer than Kinsey would have described these events as sex crimes, since they involved sexual contact between adults and children. Whether or not these observers were "scientifically trained" [as Kinsey claimed] it seems advisable to use caution in interpreting their findings.[60]
>
> Gagnon did not demand that the adults who committed the "sex crimes" be arrested and prosecuted, or that the public be fully informed about the ghastly project. ...

> During the past half-century, enormous changes in law, medicine, science, and education have been wrought by Kinsey's data.[166]

Again proving the existence of the Devil's Simulation, and that ritual child sex abuse, torture and murder are foundational and systemic, Kinsey and his criminal subordinates cultivated monsters everywhere and then trained and encouraged them.

> Kinsey and his team also collected films of children engaged in sex acts, a fact confirmed in 1981 by Kinsey's coauthor Paul Gebhard. In a letter to this author, while he was director of the Kinsey Institute, Gebhard stated: Since sexual experimentation with human infants and children is illegal, we have had to depend upon other sources of data. Some of these were parents, mostly college-educated, who observed their children and kept notes for us. A few were nursery school owners or teachers. Others were homosexual males interested in older, but still prepubertal, children. One was a man who had numerous sexual contacts with male and female infants and children and, being of a scientific bent, kept detailed records of each encounter.
>
>> Some of these sources have added to their written or verbal reports photographs and, in a few instances, cinema... The techniques involved [included] adult-child contacts — chiefly manual or oral.
>>
>> [While "Esther," appearing on the British documentary, stated:] My father did mail some questionnaires… I believe to the Kinsey Institute about the sexual abuse he was doing on me… since 1938, which makes me about four years old... I know he had a… camera that he used... There was one time when I do remember a movie camera was running and he says, oh, don't pay attention to that... You could only be a little girl to understand that it couldn't possibly be enjoyed. That was slavery*.*[36] [Emphasis in original.]
>
> That the Kinsey team permitted, and possibly filmed and/or participated in, the sexual abuse of infants and children is confirmed by its own writings and reports. Members readily admitted that,

> methodologically, they viewed all human beings as mere animals, and often boasted that they did not recognize any moral or legal restraints on their research.[167]

When Kinsey couldn’t find children, he would settle for adult homosexual trysts in any seedy venue he could find from rest stop urinals to back rooms in “tea houses”.[168]

It was all carefully scrubbed from the propaganda that was his public image.

Although not all homosexuals are pedophiles, homosexuality (especially amongst men) is a gateway to more extreme sexual perversion[xvi] and Kinsey found his lifestyle and trysts fertile ground for expanding his pedophile connections.

> Moving in homosexual circles, Kinsey would have likely met many educated sexual deviants eager to tell him about their sex lives. Pomeroy reported that one of their technically trained “observers” was a man who collected detailed data on orgasm from as many as 800 children. He was “a college graduate who had a responsible government job,”[54] while the current Kinsey director, John Bancroft, euphemistically described the same man as an “elderly scientist.”[55] Kinsey, Pomeroy, and Bancroft acknowledge that Kinsey directed at > least two serial child rapists — one a lawyer and the other described as a “college” man.[169]

Non-standard sexuality is the easy target — which is why it’s the subject of excessive emotion and hyperbole.

Even more insidious is the role of pornography. Even the least explicit forms of pornography — media that only show nudes — still engender lust that soon fixates on children.[170]

Kinsey and his “Institute” not only spun their “findings” they carefully censored anything negative to encourage readers to believe there are no harmful effects from the worst of sexual perversions.

With relish did Alfred Kinsey — the malignant homosexual deviant with hatred towards women — lay this trap for the fair sex.

> Rape, jealousy, venereal disease, pregnancy, out-of-wedlock birth, and abortion are largely non-existent in the Kinsey data. Thus, Kinsey created the possibility of a carefree, aggressive ... sexuality. Perhaps the most damaging outcome to be based on Kinsey’s fraudulent data was the myth that women could, and should, separate responsibility and commitment from sex and sex from fertility and childbirth.
>
> Rather callously Kinsey claimed to have found sexual abuse of young girls to be harmless, claiming that adult women were never traumatized by childhood sexual abuse and incest.[171]

In the thousands of crimes of Kinsey-inspired abuse of children, Sexual Behavior in the Human Female (published in 1953) remarked of only one instance where an adult male violating a little girl caused serious injury and only a “few instances” of internal bleeding which readers are assured “did not appear to do any appreciable damage”.[172]

Children were redefined as “potential sex partners”.[173]

Kinsey was even more desperate for depravity in Female than Male despite his practice of seeking prostitutes and prison inmates for “interviews”. Much of Female’s data was fabricated whole cloth and terms like “legally married” were expunged.

The innocence and vulnerability of animals was not overlooked. They, too, were victimized and recommended for exploitation by the “scientists”.

> Kinsey’s attempt to normalize bestiality has surfaced in sex education and pornography, including Kinsey coauthor Wardell Pomeroy’s bestselling sex education text, Boys and Sex*:*[16]
>
> > [Having sex with] the male animal, whether it is a dog, horse, bull, or some other species, may provide considerable erotic excitement for the boy or older adult...
> >
> > His enjoyment of the relationship is enhanced by the fact that the male animal responds to the point of orgasm...
> >
> > Psychically, animal relations may become of considerable significance to the boy who is having regular experience… [and] in no point basically different from those that are involved in erotic responses to human situations.[17]
>
> Kinsey, Pomeroy, and Martin essentially held that “sexual contacts between the human and animals of other species are at no point basically different from those that are involved in erotic responses to human situations.”[18] This gives perspective to the disordered admissions of Kinsey colleague Dr. Clarence Tripp during his interview for the August 1998 Yorkshire documentary “Kinsey Paedophiles.”
>
> Dr. Tripp, sexologist and psychologist-author of The Homosexual Matrix (1975), candidly stated, If you go out and masturbate dogs — I was very good at this when I was a boy — the dog will love you to pieces because the dog has no efficient way to masturbate. He loves the orgasm as much as anybody else but he can’t self-produce it. Now you just do this a time or two. The dogs do various... things. You try this on all the neighborhood dogs...
>
> > Some dogs will always expect or try to talk you into doing it...
> >
> > Other dogs will come to any human and say, please touch me here in a certain kind of way.[174]

A Kinsey Institute author, psychologist and “sexologist” used to masturbate dogs as a boy. One would think this information would’ve been essential to a critical look at Kinsey and the “Kinsey Institute” but the BBC disagreed. “Surprisingly” it didn’t make the cut.

> That snippet from the interview was not broadcast, but the documentation is in this author’s archive.

This also speaks to the character of “scientists” employed at the “Kinsey Institute”.

It is instructive that, even during the happy hunting of World War II (when both shepherds and sheepdogs were engaged elsewhere), the vast majority of child victims were from non-nuclear families.

> The subjects were largely from fatherless and unconventional homes with a high incidence of early sexual experience.[175]

This demographic holds true throughout the Devil’s Simulation. The most condemned child anywhere is an orphan in the care of the Catholic Church.

The second-most is a child being promoted by self-serving parents.

Another concept completely fabricated by Kinsey is that of each gender having a “sexual peak” greatly divergent from the other. This lie (either that “peaks” are divergent or that they even exist at all) has helped destroy commitment to marriage almost as much as pornography.

Sexual abuse and exploitation of a child requires a seared conscience and a soul-less will desperately enslaved to lust. These maladies infect an individual to varying degrees but when one’s monstrous proclivities surges above the rest, he is recognized and promoted in the Devil’s Simulation.

Such was Rex King.

King had been found and cultivated by Kinsey’s mentor, Robert Latou Dickinson. Dickinson was an English gynecologist infamous for a fixation on human private parts. He used “medical examination” as an excuse for excessive groping and he recorded volumes of detailed drawings of his patient’s anatomies — usually without their permission or understanding of his activities.[176]

The fact that Dickinson was a “gynecologist” in Britain, connected to King in America, who had mentored Alfred Kinsey and handed King off to Kinsey, is more proof that the Devil’s Simulation exists and that it’s crimes are systemic, spanning ages, governments and continents.

They were such good friends, Kinsey arranged for Dickinson to do a sex lecture at Indiana University.[177]

Dickinson is not the only sexual deviant to hide in the field of gynecology. It is the one discipline that should be heavily weighted in favor of female doctors but even they are not immune to the temptation of criminal betrayal of doctor/patient trust.

As further proof of the systemic nature of child abuse (a fact left unaddressed by Judith Reisman, the BBC or any other “mainstream” source), serial child rapist Rex King was a representative of the United States government. King, like Kinsey, was spared participation in World War II.

King used his mobility and government credentials to insulate him as he targeted fatherless home after fatherless home in a country at war.

Under the encouragement and tutelage of Dickinson and Kinsey, King raped hundreds of children for decades. He was never charged, arrested or even caught by anyone with the power to do so.

Harvard “sexologist” and Kinsey team member (which means he had been sodomized by Kinsey) Paul Henry Gebhard was interviewed by the BBC and chuckled over King’s predations; “sex was his main hobby in life”.[178]

Gephard excused the sexual psychopath with “he was interested in having sex with men, women, children and animals, and he just was curious to see what would happen.”

Another Kinsey “researcher” (and homosexual partner), Clarence Arthur Tripp told the BBC that King’s first sexual experience was intercourse with his grandmother. “In the 38 members of his family tree he had sex with almost all of them,” Tripp happily told the documentary crew.

“He had had intercourse with hundreds upon hundreds of males and females of every conceivable age.”

Rex King was certainly the type of well-adjusted individual “scientists” would train and set upon fatherless children across America’s southwest.

That is exactly what happened as Tripp admitted, “My memory is that it exceeded 600 [rape, assault and abuse victims] for both boys and girls who haven’t yet got to maturity.”

Tripp was sent to Kinsey from 20th Century Fox as a trained cameraman. He became the Institute’s pornographer.

Even though the Devil’s Simulation has a strangle-hold on cops, judges and government officials, it doesn’t have them all and fears the combined might of the people. As a result, when dealing with King, the Kinsey Institute gave him the code names “Mr. X,” or “Mr. Green”.

In arrogance over their power, Tripp bragged to the BBC that there was nothing wrong with how they had enabled King because he had never been arrested.

King was a good student of Dickinson and Kinsey and meticulously recorded every detail of his crimes in hand-written journals.

Kinsey wouldn’t allow the remotest risk that the journals would fall into the hands of a normal citizen or, worse, a government official who wasn’t on the pedophile payroll. In June of 1944 (the height of the war), Kinsey drove 1800 miles from Indiana to Arizona to take them by hand from his trained monster. They remain locked up at Indiana University to this day, without the slightest chance of being confiscated by a warrant from law enforcement.

Encouraged by “science”, King wrote in his diary, “experimented with baby ...” he then remarked about how the baby reacted to being sexually tortured and violated.

Kinsey continued to spur King on to new levels of heinous acts, writing to him in a letter, “I congratulate you on the research spirit which has led you to collect data over these many years.”[179]

Chapter 5 of Male contained large portions of King’s diary; but rather than admit them to be the “encouraged research” of a serial monster, Kinsey presented them as “scientific proof that children were sexual from birth.”

There was nothing “scientific” about it; Kinsey simply regurgitated the pedophile’s twisted version of his rapes of children, toddlers and even infants.

The descriptions of their reactions included remarks like “extreme tension”, “groaning”, “sobbing”, “violent jerking of the entire body”, “an abundance of tears, especially amongst younger children” — all indicative of sadistic torture of the young.

Even friendly biographer James Jones admitted, “the individual in question, I think, uh, harmed, in serious ways, ah, a large number of young people.”[180]

Judith Reisman — via her own privileged access to the unedited Yorkshire documentary — was able to recount another clip that didn’t make it off the cutting floor where Jones acquiesced “Christian outrage” to the BBC: “Do you think it is right that the Kinsey Institute continues to protect him? Which is more important, confidentiality or those children?” Jones replied, “In my mind those children,” and continued, I don’t think the Christian right is wrong on that. I think they have their right to be outraged... political ideology really doesn’t have much to do with people’s reactions to child abuse.

> Countering the Kinsey Institute’s defense that the children did not “complain” about their abuse, Jones asked, How did they know they didn’t complain? The person who was rendering that information is the same person who abused them. It seems to me that they have as much credibility as a rapist would have, saying that the victim enjoyed the rape.[[181]]

Per Kinsey’s direction, King specifically targeted the youngest of boys from infants through toddlers to “determine” for Kinsey exactly when they were capable of “orgasm”. This was regurgitated by Kinsey as “scientific” data for “Table 31”.

"Table 32" listed the details Kinsey had encouraged King to take down such as timing of these "orgasms".

What Tables 32 and 34 (so-called "multiple orgasms" of children) showed was that King had repeatedly preyed upon his victims sometimes for as long as a full day of torture for Kinsey.

At minimum, 317 of the youngest possible children were violated, perhaps as many as over 1,200.

Vincent Nowlis remarked to the BBC that infants brought to "orgasm" chronicled "to fractions [listed to hundredths] of a second" was "an absurd page in science...I didn't feel it had a place in a 'scientific' book".

Recall that Nowlis was a willing team member who only shirked from being sodomized by Kinsey.

In response, Clearance Tripp told the BBC, "...Nowlis was damaged in childhood with all this morality. And then he had this peculiar moralistic wife — I'm understating it — through all this it sounded to him like pure sin" — the raping of infants and toddlers, that is.

Like Vincent Nowalis, his wife was not a fan of participating in a sexual free-for-all "at work" nor being violated by the great Alfred Kinsey — all necessary if Nowalis wished to stay aboard the Institute.

At the time of the BBC documentary, "sexologist" Dr. John H.J. Bancroft was Director of the "Kinsey Institute". Being a Cambridge man with four names means that if he makes a statement that is ridiculous or nonsensical, it's because you lack the intelligence to understand him.

Bancroft told the BBC that he did, indeed, consider Rex King's serial child abuse to be "research" and that to betray King to law enforcement would've been "immorality of the highest order".

In Dr. John H.J. Bancroft's world, white is black and black is white.

Friendly Kinsey biographer Jonathan Gathorne-Hardy told the BBC that he saw evidence "Mr. Green" continued to rape children for another decade after first meeting Kinsey. Gathorne-Hardy would know, as an Institute-approved biographer, he was given special access to the criminal database locked deep in the University of Indiana campus.

Judith Reisman added —

> Jonathan Gathorne-Hardy, a recent Kinsey biographer (Sex the Measure of All Things; A Life of Alfred C. Kinsey, London: Chatto & Winds, 1998), reveals that Kinsey Institute Director John Bancroft secretly allowed him to read and copy Kinsey's pedophile team reports: [Kinsey] was deeply affected by five paedophile headmasters who...had... loving relationships with young adolescent boys of twelve or thirteen. ... The reason the Kinsey Institute is so careful...is that...they have... evidence of sexual behaviors that even now are illegal. ...
>
> Gathorne-Hardy perused Rex King's records. He confirmed that King was indeed the individual whom Wardell Pomeroy said raped at least 800 infants, children, kin, and strangers: Eight or nine typewritten volumes [were] typed up by Kinsey's wife... prior to 1945, which was, you know, before Kinsey admitted [he had employed King. King] went on having sex with everybody until the end... long after Kinsey got the journals. The material in that chapter almost entirely came from [King's] journals which Kinsey got in 1944/45.
>
>> I daren't put this on film. I did read [King's records] but Bancroft doesn't want me to say I read them. Bancroft says that if the people know I read them they will go to him and say, you've let one scholar have them, and I'm not going to do that. So what I had to say in my book is that I closely questioned Bancroft and Gebhard about the contents of the journals, but I didn't read them. In fact, I did read them. But I can't say I read them.[[182]]

Jonathan Gathorne-Hardy had nothing to worry about. That portion of his interview was also edited from the BBC's final "hard-hitting" exposé.

Although the "Institute" likes to maintain plausible deniability in regards to Rex King's serial child rape, Kinsey subordinate Clarence Tripp told Yorkshire he personally validated as much of King's "research" as possible.

> Interviewer: what you're saying then is that it is possible that Kinsey personally validated [King's] material [the sex with children]?
>
> Tripp: Almost always... there is no mention of his observing people. But he did. He wanted to see everything. This is a hands-on scientist... he had to see it to really believe it... He poked into, he looked at everything. He often had to have these things photographed because he simply didn't have time... [Kinsey] was in the market for everything... people who are into special things, love to document it. And it seems to rev them up if they mark it down on a calendar.[183]

This, too, was only available via the unedited copy given to Dr. Judith Reisman.

But Rex King (a representative of the United States government) wasn't the only mass child rapist to help Alfred Kinsey in his push for sexual anarchy. The "Institute" was connected to another abuser of monstrous proportion: Fritz von Ballusek.

Judith Reisman recounted —

> Thanks to the Yorkshire documentary, we now know that "Mr. X" was Rex King, and we also know the name of at least one other key Kinsey pedophile. In a classic case of truth being stranger than fiction, one of Kinsey's child sex experimenters was a World War II Nazi Storm Trooper. Yorkshire Television researchers uncovered his name, photograph, history, and court records. After the war, Dr. Fritz von Balluseck became a respected lawyer.
>
> Yorkshire investigators had followed up this author's original questions regarding Kinsey's association with Nazis and the possibility that some of the abused children were obtained from WWII Germany and/or Russia. At least one of Kinsey's sex collaborators was a documented Nazi, the infamous George Sylvester Viereck, a convicted German spy who had worked among Washington D.C. power brokers. David Brinkley in his history of the period, Washington Goes to War (Ballantine, 1988, p. 26) wrote that Viereck was "one of > the...masterminds of the propaganda cabinet that Germany set up here early in the war."[184]

An extremely important factor that neither Yorkshire, the BBC nor Judith Reisman noted was how a connection to espionage shows the hand of the Luciferian hierarchy in Rome. War between nation-states is completely unnecessary and must be carefully manipulated. "Intelligence" sets the stage (especially via double and triple agents of supposed enemy intelligence agencies working together) and illegal trafficking in drugs, arms and human beings both insures wars and benefits from them.

Examples include the Nazi / Soviet intelligence co-operative "Red Orchestra" (Die Rote Kapelle) run by Jesuit agents like Martin Bormann.[185]

Another is the death of General George S. Patton; grievously wounded by an OSS assassin and the Soviet NKVD was sent to his hospital to finish the job.[186] Patton was at risk for outing how men like Eisenhower, Bradley, Churchill and Roman Catholic traitor General Walter Bedell "Beatle" Smith (the CIA's first Director) had all been complicit in the needless prolonging of the war.

We will see more of these "missed" Intelligence/Pedocracy connections in Chapter 13.

> Yorkshire researchers flew to Berlin (as did this author), interviewing and digging through old files and press reports. There they discovered Dr. Friedrich Karl Hugo Viktor von Balluseck, who was tried in Berlin in 1957 for a child sex murder. According to Paul Gebhard who took over serving as the prestigious Director of Indiana University's Kinsey Institute, just after Kinsey's death: [Kinsey] wrote him questions in the letter and they carried on quite a correspondence...
>
> > Police [seeking a child sex murderer] went through his possessions... found his correspondence with Kinsey. ... They got Interpol. ... The FBI put pressure on Kinsey to reveal the guy's sexual diary. Kinsey said, absolutely not. [T]he poor paedophile... had his reputation destroyed... finally quit corresponding with us.

> Like Kinsey, fascist scientists in Germany[92] believed that they had a right to experiment on anyone. Dr. von Balluseck[93] was an incest offender who raped and sodomized not only his own offspring, but Jewish, Polish, and German children as well, from roughly 1927 to 1957. The German press reported Kinsey's visit to Frankfort during his world tour in 1956. Little else is available regarding the German stopover, or if Kinsey met with Balluseck, and there was no mention of Kinsey's visit to Frankfort in the approved writings about Kinsey's European travels.[187]

German judges, police and national government officials were (are) just as corrupt as their American counterparts. The frauds at the Federal Bureau of "Investigation" politely asked Kinsey and Indiana University for the evidence that showed he had collaborated with and encouraged a serial child rapist and sadistic psychopath. Both Kinsey and Indiana U. courageously stood their ground and refused the timid G-men.

Don't try this at home, however. When Federal agents are ready to come after you they will surveil you without due process and send a literal army of officers in camouflaged body armor, wielding assault weapons and riding in armored vehicles to storm your home at 3 a.m. being sure to kill your dog before you even know what hit you.

In Germany, after decades of raping and torturing children "Doctor" von Ballusek walked free from the death of the one little girl he finally went to trial for slaughtering.

By the way, all of this below was also edited out of the Yorkshire tell-all exposé.

> Dr. von Balluseck's trial for the murder of 10-year-old Loiselotte Has, who was "found… naked and throttled… on a piece of wasteland," was widely covered in Germany[xvii]. It was "completely unprecedented in the moral history of the post war era," and von Balluseck was described as "the most important pedophile in the criminal history of Berlin." Kinsey collaborator Balluseck was tried for the abuse of 50, or "more than 100," or "several hundred" > children. As noted, he had sexually violated children for "over the last three decades" (Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung, May 22, 1957).

>
> News of Kinsey's role in the case was splashed across the headlines of Germany's largest newspapers.
>
> Judge Heinrich Berger "emphasized again and again the important function played by the press in warning the public against paedophiles like Balluseck, who approach children as understanding friends and helpers in their sexual need" (Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung, May 22, 1957). Despite Alfred Kinsey's shocking role in the explosive case, the U.S. press was uniformly silent about it.
>
> According to Yorkshire Television's research department, from 1942 to 1944 Dr. von Balluseck was the Department of Justice District Kreishauptmina, the commandant of the small Polish town of Jedrzejow. It was there that he targeted the children he sexually assaulted, warning them, according to German news accounts, that "It is either the gas chamber or me." The Encyclopedia Judaica[94] reports that all Jedrejow Jews ended up in the gas chambers. All, including the children, were under the control of Dr. von Balluseck.[188]

It's an unexplained shame why Yorkshire and the BBC should put so much effort into exposing "Kinsey's Paedophiles" and then leave the best of it on the cutting room floor.

At this writing, 60 years after von Ballusek walked for the murder of Loiselette Has, the Vatican is still targeting Poland for sexual perversion. Poland provided Rome with devout servants like American National Security Advisor Zbigniew Brzezinski (the Jesuit-trained operative who created al Qaeda[189]) and his dear friend Karol Józef Wojtyła. Despite his role in helping Nazis slaughter Jews during WWII,[190] Karol Wojtyła was recently canonized Pope Saint John Paul II ... or maybe because of it.

The Vatican has made "World Youth Day" in Poland, June of 2017, the location for the unveiling of its "Youth Sex Education" program; one which has conservative Catholics quite upset.

The program was overseen by Archbishop Vincenzo Paglia. It was not the first time Paglia was the fomenter of outrage.

Harkening back to Medieval aristocracy, Paglia commissioned a homosexual Argentinean named Ricardo Cinalli to paint a homo-erotic mural in his cathedral in 2007.

> It depicts Jesus carrying nets to heaven filled with naked and semi-nude homosexuals, transsexuals, prostitutes, and drug dealers, jumbled together in erotic interactions.
>
> Cinalli told the Italian newspaper La Repubblica in March 2016 that the archbishop oversaw every detail of the work.
>
> “There was no detail that was done freely, at random,” he said. “Everything was analyzed. Everything was discussed. They never allowed me to work on my own.”
>
> In the right-hand net, what appears to be young naked children can be seen entangled with the bodies of older men and women...
>
> In one instance, one male can be seen with his hand between another male’s legs groping his reproductive organ.
>
> The image of the Savior is painted with the face of a local male hairdresser, and his private parts can be seen through his translucent garb.
>
> Included in one of the nets is Paglia, the then diocesan bishop. Wearing his skull cap, he is depicted as clutching another semi-nude man who is tenderly embracing him.
>
> Cinalli told La Repubblica that the naked people in the nets were meant to be “erotic,” although he said Paglia drew the line when Cinalli proposed to show people actually copulating. ~ LifeSite[191]

Paglia was hand-picked by Jesuit Pope Francis (Jorge Bergoglio, also from Argentina) to be President of the Pontifical Academy for Life and the Pope Saint John Paul II Institute for Studies on Marriage and Family.

He was “uniquely qualified”.

When he came aboard, Paglia summarily dismissed all the members[192] so that he and his Jesuit Pope could start from scratch, adding such family/life stalwarts as pro-abortion, pro-euthanasia Anglican professor Nigel Biggar.[193]

From his position as the Godfather of Rome's "family" doctrines, Paglia has ushered in a sex education program that mirrors his values and that of his superior — to cut out the role of parents as guardians over their children and to entice children into the sexual chaos of the Devil's Simulation.

> The sex-ed program, titled "The Meeting Point: Course of Affective Sexual Education for Young People," was criticized by Catholic life-and-family leaders for bypassing parents as the primary educators of their children and for its immoral content.
>
> The program was also criticized for failing to name and condemn immoral sexual behaviors, such as fornication, prostitution, adultery, contracepted-sex, homosexual activity, and masturbation as objectively sinful actions that destroy charity in the heart and turn one away from God.
>
> Along with using sexually explicit and suggestive images in activity workbooks, the program recommended various sexually explicit movies as springboards for discussion.[194]

Back in 1957, the connection between von Ballusek and Alfred Kinsey was momentarily mentioned by the suddenly-awakened German press (remember, Kinsey has been OK'd as a target by the Vatican).

> The German press described early attempts to "cover up" who Balluseck really was, including efforts to keep his photograph under wraps and the court description of the influential attorney as a "shop-worker." And commenting on the experiments recorded in volumes found in von Balluseck's desk, Judge Berger exclaimed: "This is no longer human! What was this all for? To tell Kinsey about?" (Morgenpost, May 16, 1957).[195]

Once the Devil's Simulation network connected Kinsey and von Ballusek, the "scientist" did all he could to encourage the sadist. Neither he nor his collaborators at Indiana University were held to account.

Nor, for that matter, was von Ballusek.

> “KINSEY…ASKED THE PAEDOPHILE SPECIFICALLY FOR MATERIAL OF HIS PERVERSE ACTIONS”
>
> > The connection with Kinsey, towards whom he’d showed off his crimes, had a disastrous effect on [von Balluseck]... [I]n his diaries he’d stuck in the letters from the sex researcher, Kinsey in which he’d been encouraged to continue his research. ... He had also started relationships… to expand his researches*. One shivers to think of the lengths he went to.* [TSP, May 17, 1957, emphasis added]
> >
> > Indeed, the German press reported that Post WW II von Balluseck sexually assaulted his own daughter, and the 11-year-old son of a vicar, and forced the boy to write down the acts for Kinsey.
> >
> > Kinsey had asked the paedophile specifically for material of his perverse actions. The presiding judge, Dr. Berger noted that it was Kinsey’s duty to get Balluseck locked up, instead of corresponding with him. [Berliner Zeitung, May 16, 1957] ...
>
> In the diaries, described as volume 1 & 4, he described with pedantic exactness, how he committed his crimes. ... Balluseck had close contact with the so called American sex researcher, Kinsey, to whom he’d repeatedly and explicitly reported his perverse crimes.
>
> > Balluseck had also described those in pedantic detail in his diaries. [National-Zeitung, May 15, 1957]
>
> So Balluseck was not only sending Kinsey his old child abuse data, recorded during his days as a Commandant in Jedrzejow; he was also seeking to “continue” and “expand” his sexual seduction of children for Kinsey’s use.
>
> The University of Indiana press office regularly forwards international articles about the school (especially those containing damaging information) to the administration. According to Paul Gebhard, the > University and its president, Herman Wells, were aware of Kinsey's collaboration with Balluseck.

>
> Kinsey refused to provide evidence that the FBI knew he had regarding Balluseck's crimes.
>
> After serving his sentence for child sex abuse (he was not convicted on the murder charge), Balluseck continued his correspondence with Gebhard...[196]

Again, it's amazing how someone can "refuse" a Federal investigation into serial child abuse but we don't recommend you attempt that should the FBI come "knocking" at 3 a.m.

Although Kinsey dare not risk overseeing his Nazi "researcher" during the war, he may very well have gotten some "hands on" afterward as part of his 1955 "world tour".

Judith Reisman admits that the central focus of the tour was Italy —

> Pomeroy devotes six pages to Kinsey's visits to France, Denmark, Norway, and Sweden, but ten pages to his trip to Italy alone.[197]

— but makes no mention of the fact that Italy is the host nation to the most powerful religion on Earth.

Italy briefly attracted another sexual sado-satanist of equal infamy; Edward Alexander "Aleister" Crowley.

> Crowley (1845-1947) called himself alternatively "the Beast" and "the World's Most Wicked Man". A pagan/satanist, he was and remains one of the most influential men of the 20th century. Immortalized by propagandists, he was sung about by Black Sabbath's lead vocalist Ozzy Osbourne in his second single "Mr. Crowley", released in 1980. In the song, the hint at child sacrifice is unmistakable.
>
> > Mr. Crowley, what went down in your head?
> > Mr. Crowley, did you talk to the dead
> > Your lifestyle to me seems so tragic
> > With the thrill of it all

> You fooled all the people with magic
> You waited on Satan's call Mr. Charming, did you think you were pure
> Mr. Alarming, in nocturnal rapport
> Uncovering things that were sacred, manifest on this earth
> Conceived in the eye of a secret
> Yeah, they scattered the afterbirth ...

Crowley took over the British chapter of "Ordo Templi Orientis" — a secret society based upon an amalgamation of the Templars and the Freemasons. ...

The O.T.O. has a hierarchy of attainment by "degrees", as the Freemasons do, but in the O.T.O. there are only 12 degrees.

The perverse tie-in to Rome is shocking and unmistakable.

> While the O.T.O.'s initiatory system is a sort of Kafkaesque bureaucratic club game, it has a religious association under its obedience: The Gnostic Catholic Church — one of the O.T.O. groups — intends "to restore Christianity to its real status as a solar-phallic religion." ~ Koenig[1471]

The VI° of the O.T.O. is the "Illustrious Knight Templar of the Order of Kadosch, Companion of the Holy Grail" and a "Grand Inquisitor Commander"[1472]. Does Aleister Crowley sound like a satanist Beast to you...or a Papal one?

The VIII° is the "Perfect Pontiff of the Illuminati"[1473] — the Pope of the Jesuit-created Freemason super-sect.

The "working" of the degrees within the O.T.O. is meant to usher in the "Aeon of Horus".

Crowley asserted that man was first civilized under the Gaia-like "Aeon of Isis" where he worshipped "Mother Nature" in harmony with the Earth.

What we understand as medieval history, Crowley calls the "Aeon of Osiris" and submission to the "Father god".

> The offspring of Osiris and Isis is Horus and he is to be coaxed into this world by a series of satanic sex rituals Crowley called "sex magick" instituted in geographic locations called "workings" that are perceived to be interdimensional portals...or the most convenient apartment.
>
> This was all catalogued in Crowley's "Thelema" religion (which he pulled entirely out of his "eye of Horus" with the help of his interdimensional friends Aiwass, Choronzon and Lam). ~ Illuminati Unmasked[198]

Although Judith Reisman makes none of these connections, she does note that Crowley's most sinister work took place in seclusion on the island of Sicily at his "Thelema Abbey". There he got mothers to have sex with their children and then murdered them as a blood sacrifice.[199]

Outrage eventually drove Crowley from his Italian base and he died soon after in 1947.

Heinous satanic sexual activity like that was a top priority for the Kinsey "scientists" to see, even 7 years later.

Kinsey was personally escorted around the "Abbey" by Crowley homosexual acolyte and pornographer, Kenneth Wilbur Anglemyer. According to Crowley "scholar" and biographer[200] Marco Pasi, Anglemyer gave Kinsey some of Crowley's journal notes[201] on satanic sexual sadism — for "science", of course.

Like Crowley, Anglemyer was an English Freemason — a member of the "Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn".[202]

As a "dream-weaver" for the Devil's simulation, Anglemyer was as equally influential in the entertainment industry. For propaganda, he renamed himself "Kenneth Anger" just as Papal Court Jew and clown prince of Satanism Howard Stanton Levey rebranded himself "Anton Szandor LaVey".

Kenneth Anglemyer, a.k.a. “Kenneth Anger” poses (right) with Doctor Alfred Kinsey (left) inside Aleister Crowley’s “Thelema Abbey” in Sicily.

Anglemyer, Levey and Crowley have been “inspirational” to high-profile personalities of all sorts from Martin Scorsese to Mick Jagger.[203]

> Ken was obsessed with Crowley’s life & magic. As a child, Ken had danced with Shirley Temple in competition after she became a child star. ...
>
> Ken Anger did his casting for his film “Lucifer Rising” by telling occult friends & acquaintances that they could live out their goddess or god power-trip fantasies by acting for him. The British government’s National Film Finance Corp. fronted 15,000£ for Lucifer Rising’s production. Famous occult musician Jimmy Page did the sound track gratis. ... ~ Springmeier[204]

The connection between Kenneth Anger and Shirley Temple will soon shock you as you read on into Chapter 6.

Networking the Devil’s Simulation

Not only was Kinsey plugged in to the existing pedophile network, he did all he could to expand it and add new member monsters.

Esther White was on the receiving end of those efforts.

She was tag-teamed for abuse by her father and grandfather starting at only 7 years of age.

At the peak of the abuse, she discovered a questionnaire from Kinsey with detailed queries about what her father was doing to her and she realized why he timed his abuse with a watch. She asked him about its meaning and he explained it and said he had a “deadline” to meet; which means Kinsey was insuring as much harm happened as quickly as possible.

White believes that the horrors she experienced were part of the subsequent Kinsey assertion in Sexual Behavior in the Human Female that children can enjoy being raped.[205]

During her interview with Yorkshire/BBC, Esther White (well into her 70s) could not recount what happened to her as a child without breaking down in tears.

> Narrator: “In his final years, Kinsey would testify before legislatures and courts that pedophilia was a less dangerous problem than public intolerance of it.”

Kinsey homosexual partner and “fellow scientist” Clarence Tripp proved that he remains a deviant sociopath to this day by saying for Yorkshire — Kinsey said some of the most brilliant imaginable about that [sic]. Ah, pedophilia is almost non-existent, um, ah, kind of crime and the thing he hated most about it is the people who use words like, like, ah “child molestation”. What is that? Nobody knows! Um [laughs] the — ah, “abuse of children”? Are they talking about bollicks [sic] them against the ear or hitting them with a stove pipe or are they talking about tickling them a little. Ah, are you talking about fondling — you gonna put fondling and death attacks in the same group? As Kinsey said, by this kind of paranoia, you do the child more damage, for life, than all the pedophiles in the world would do.

We’re not sure how one is able to time “orgasms” on an infant with “tickling” but it’s probably something we all should be wary of now.

Yorkshire then cut to Esther White —

> [choked with emotion] I think taking information from pedophiles glorifies the abuse.
>
> They [Kinsey Institute] used me and they used those children — for a lie*.*

Another Kinsey homosexual partner and “scientist” Paul Gebhard then bragged to Yorkshire that the criminal records encouraged and solicited by the “Institute” are logged under code and that the code key can be quickly destroyed if there is any threat of court order investigation.

If that is meant to be a tactical challenge to good men who might someday attempt to conduct the long-overdue law enforcement raid (storm Indiana University to secure the codes before they are destroyed and/or break the code without the key if necessary), we are certain it doesn’t pose much of a threat. The spirits of the Rangers who climbed the cliffs of Pointe Du Hoc while Kinsey and his accomplices were raping their children will help them achieve the impossible.

Chapter 5

Preyed Upon

1950: "Reverend Father" Lawrence C. Murphy begins a 25 year reign of predation and terror in Milwaukee.

Being a sexual predator requires the perpetrator bury or destroy their human capability for empathy or compassion.

It is a conscious process that includes many predetermined and premeditated steps. It is not, nor can it be, a simple "crime of passion".

As the keepers of the Devil's Simulation, Roman Catholic clergy are trained, cultivated and enabled into this monstrous, inhuman state in order to maintain and propagate it.

The result of such satanic training means that Catholic clergy are in unique positions to engender the trust of children and their families. Once achieved they mercilessly abuse them all; like a wolf-spider, luring its prey in to capture it and slowly drain the life from them.

Unaware of the Devil's Simulation, victims mistakenly think of their Roman gatekeepers as men or women "of God". Often, the predators cement the satanic inversion by abusing them during a religious act like prayer or "confession".

They often rob their prey of their bodies, their lives and even their souls; vampires in every sense.

This may seem like an extreme exaggeration or even a baseless slander, but the endless cases of atrocity say different. [italics suspended]

> Steven Geier was taken to [Roman Catholic] St. John's [School for the Deaf in Saint Francis, Wisconsin] at the age of eight, after a high fever made him deaf. He was crying as his parents left, and it was Fr.

Murphy who offered comfort then, only to abuse him later. Mr. Geier also witnessed about a dozen other boys being abused. ...

Father Murphy was a predatory paedophile whose crimes were all the more revolting for the helplessness of his victims. The pupils at St. John’s School, St. Francis city, Wisconsin, were deaf. This was a boarding school, so there was no escape at nights from the vile priest who had power over them.

... he was the only adult many of them could communicate with. They were given no sex education, so they had no way of understanding what he was doing. Some may have thought they deserved this treatment. ...

He was the mentor and spiritual guide to hundreds of vulnerable boys – and one thing they learnt from him is that there are some disgusting individuals in the adult world who gratify their sleazy appetites without a thought for others. ...

“Murphy was so powerful and it was so hard,” he said in an interview four decades later. “You couldn’t get out. It was like a prison. I felt so confused. Here I had Fr. Murphy touching me. I would be like, ‘God, what’s right?’”

“It was an awful thing,” another of his former victims, Joe Daniels said. “I felt anger and shame.” Little Arthur Budzinski would hide under his bed, crying, when it was time to go back to boarding school. His parents did not know what was wrong...

There is an old photograph of Arthur Budzinski taken in 1962, when he was 13, with 10 other deaf boys who made up the St. John’s School basketball team. Father Murphy is standing alongside them in a long clerical gown. Five of the 11 boys were sexually assaulted.

Budzinski witnessed a boy of his age, Pat Cave, being abused in the dormitory. They met again, 42 years later. Until that meeting in 2004, Pat Cave thought he was the only boy to have suffered the priest’s attentions. In fact, he was probably not even the only victim in his family. He had an older brother who also went to St. John’s, who was > frequently called into Murphy’s office at night for long periods. The brothers never discussed why. His brother died in a motorcycle accident at the age of 21.

>
> No one knows exactly how many boys suffered at Murphy’s hands in the 24 years he was running the school. It could have been as many as 200. Most said nothing about it for decades, if at all. James Smith had bottled it up for so long that when he began talking about it, at the age of 62, he started to shake and cry. He said: “I would be playing baseball, and the boys would come and say: ‘Fr. Murphy wants you to come and see him.’ I would refuse to go, and pretty soon I was dragged into his office and molested again. I never told anyone. I thought I was alone.” ...
>
> “[I was abused] During my confession with Fr. Murphy [several] times he played with my penis in the bedroom, in the bathroom, in Fr. Murphy’s office... During the summer times Fr. Murphy took some boys and me to his cottage and on the way I was a passenger and sat near Fr. Murphy driving while he touched my penis in front of other boys... For my six years, I suffered bad from Fr. Murphy.” ~ The Independent[206]

When victims and their families finally forced Murphy’s abominations to come to light, he was simply removed from St. John’s.

No criminal investigation.

No trial.

No punishment.

The predator was relocated to prey again.

The reactions by Murphy’s superiors were as criminal as the abuse. Rather than be turned over to authorities for incarceration and trial, Murphy was sent to therapy and given “restrictions” that he, himself, was responsible for maintaining.

> Julie Wolf, communications director for the Archdiocese of Milwaukee, said that Father Murphy was placed on certain restrictions upon > leaving Milwaukee that included not having any contact with children and that "he ignored the restrictions."

>
> Ms. Wolf added, "Over time, they tried to deal with him, but over time they weren't successful." ~ NY Times[207]

Coming from wealth, Murphy's family owned a beautiful lakefront cottage in Northwoods, Wisconsin. Having been pulled from St. John's, Murphy no-longer had a captured, handicapped pool of victims to choose from. The predator priest used the cottage as a honey trap to lure his new round of little boys.

> Kathy Lyn Walter, a social worker and an expert on sexual disorders who was hired by the archdiocese to interview Father Murphy in 1993 ... said he offered them what seemed like a beachfront reprieve from their lives in the dormitories, with canoe trips, picnics and barbecues. [208]

Unfortunately for these new victims, the therapy sessions and "self-policing" imposed upon Murphy by his superiors had as much effect as requiring a tiger to lose his stripes — which was exactly what the gatekeepers of the Devil's Simulation intended.

> In fact, around Boulder Junction, in high school religious classes and preparation for the sacrament of confirmation, in sleepovers at his cottage and fishing excursions, Father Murphy interacted freely with children until his death in 1998, never having been punished by the church or local criminal authorities in Milwaukee, according to documents and interviews with people in the area.
>
> Donald Marshall, who is 45 and lives in West Allis, Wis., said in an interview last week that he was molested by Father Murphy in 1977 or 1978, when he was 13 or 14, a few years after Father Murphy was sent to live in Boulder Junction.
>
> Mr. Marshall had been sent to the juvenile detention center, the Lincoln Hills School for Boys, for burglaries he said he committed. He said Father Murphy sometimes served at the school as a chaplain, and he met the priest at a dining room table one night. When he got in a > fight with some other inmates, Mr. Marshall said, he was sent to a "security cottage" and put in a cell alone, behind a solid steel door with a high window.

>
> Mr. Marshall said that Father Murphy visited him there, that they sat on the bed talking, and that the priest tried to put his hand down the boy's pants. Mr. Marshall said he resisted, and as soon as Father Murphy left the cell, the teenager told a security officer, who called the superintendent of the center. The superintendent interviewed him twice to make sure he did not change his story.[209]

Murphy's insatiable predations left a trail of broken bodies, minds and spirits.

> ... Mr. [Donald] Marshall said that years later, after problems with alcoholism and anger, and after serving eight years in prison for drunken driving, he contacted the Archdiocese of Milwaukee asking for help in the form of therapy, which he said he never received.[210]

Again, proving that he was part of a systematic, premeditated criminal enterprise, Murphy co-opted older boys into luring, grooming and training the younger boys.[211]

They are tactics well-known to both victims and "law enforcement".

Further proof that a pedophile network runs the Devil's Simulation (and not the propaganda that mere individuals arise by random chance to commit the heinous acts) is found in the selection of victims.

Who suffers at the hands of the powerful is dictated by a formula; children without guardians are the primary source pool and children with handicaps like being unable to hear or speak are preferred.

In June of 1960, Father Neil Gallanagh was arrested after he sexually assaulted a nine-year-old boy during a day-trip to the Isle of Man.

Once his British superiors realized they had a monster who preyed upon children, they used their agents in law enforcement to insure he stayed out of prison, then they moved him to more fertile hunting grounds; as chaplain at a home for handicapped children.

It was brought to light well after the rapist had had his fill, when he was retired and over 75 years old.

> The Roman Catholic Church covered up the criminal past of a paedophile priest and gave him a job in a school for deaf children where he went on to sexually assault vulnerable young boys, an Observer investigation can reveal.
>
> The church is now facing a massive compensation claim from the victims of the priest, Father Neil Gallanagh, who accuse the authorities of "willful neglect". Child abuse campaigners are calling for a public inquiry into the case, which they claim led to a "reign of sexual terror" for some boys at the school. ...
>
> The attacks took place while Gallanagh was a resident chaplain at St. John's during the Seventies. Many of the pupils at this residential school were deaf and dumb. The victims are mainly now in their forties and the assaults came to light only recently after one alleged victim spoke to his doctor and another attended a reunion party and spoke with other pupils.
>
> The Observer has obtained evidence showing that Gallanagh was given the job by the Catholic church at St. John's despite having been caught abusing children as a priest more than a decade earlier while working at Craigbane church in Derry, Northern Ireland. It has emerged that, while he was on a day-trip to the Isle of Man in June 1960, he sexually assaulted a nine-year-old boy. A report from the Isle of Man Daily Times on 27 June 1960 described how Gallanagh sat with "bowed head clasped to his hands" in the dock at Douglas Court House after he was arrested. ...
>
> Gallanagh was not jailed but fined £30 after he promised to seek medical treatment. A short report of his arrest appeared in the Belfast Telegraph*.*
>
> It appears that rather than throw Gallanagh — who was related to the then Bishop of Derry, Neil Farren — out of the church, he was moved to Leeds and allowed to continue preaching. The then Bishop of Leeds, William Wheeler, made him resident chaplain at St. John's School for > the Deaf in 1974. Gallanagh's previous conviction was not made known to the court in the 2005 case and his victims at St. John's were unaware of his history until The Observer uncovered the earlier press reports from newspaper archives. ~ The Observer[212]

Even after Gallanagh's ... "preaching" subsided, as victims were allowed to come forward, they were mitigated and he continued to be protected.

> Last year Gallanagh, 75, pleaded guilty to indecently assaulting two pupils of St. John's Roman Catholic School for the Deaf in Wetherby, West Yorkshire. The school was under the control of the diocese of Leeds, which employed Gallanagh. A further 11 charges against him of indecently assaulting five other boys aged under 16, including an 11-year-old, were left on file.[213]

The obvious truth finally dawned upon one of the men who was violated by Gallanagh as a boy.

At least for Rome, the cover of being "Christian" had the desired negative effect (with the help of her agents in the media).

> One of his victims at St. John's expressed his outrage at the latest disclosures. "I am more than livid and feel totally let down by a so-called Christian organisation. How could the church have allowed this to happen? How could they have put a paedophile into a school for deaf children who were unable to speak out? This man ruined many people's lives, including mine. At the very least the [C]hurch is guilty of willful neglect; at the worst it is something unimaginable," he said. [214]

"Unimaginable" indeed.

If he only knew the full extent of the network, that it includes the very "secular" government officials sworn to protect him from such abominations.

> ...abuse campaign group ... Phoenix Survivors ... was outraged that, even after his latest crimes, Gallanagh received only a six-month suspended sentence and a £1,500 fine. Judge Norman Jones said that

> Gallanagh's age, recent poor health and good character for the last 30 years meant jail was inappropriate.[215]

To add insult to the injuries of the victims, when forced to publicly address the pedophile predations of priest Neil Gallanagh, the Vatican refused to "laicize" the child rapist and kept him on the roles of consecrated clergy.

The "scandal" hit in 2010 during the Papacy of one-time Nazi Youth cadet[216] Joseph Ratzinger, a.k.a. "Pope Benedict XVI". During his tenure as Prefect of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith (Superior-General of the Inquisition), it was revealed that his office had a "lenient approach"[217] to dealing with pedophile clergy like Gallanagh and Oakland, California parish priest Father Stephen Kiesle.

Kiesle's "reign of terror" mirrors that of Gallanagh (and of hundreds perhaps thousands of other pedophile clergy).

> Even in his seminary days in the early 1970s, there were questions about California priest Stephen Kiesle: Colleagues said he had trouble relating to adults, lacked spirituality and didn't seem committed to anything but youth ministry.
>
> Those colleagues, who helped make the case to the Vatican in 1981 seeking to let him leave the priesthood, said they were concerned before Kiesle was ordained, and more so after revelations Kiesle had molested children in his parish.
>
> "He was not grown up. He spent more time with kids than with people his own age. You get suspicious of that. There's something wrong there," said John Cummins, former bishop in the Diocese of Oakland, now retired.
>
> Still, future Pope Benedict XVI resisted pleas from the diocese to act on the case, according to a 1985 letter in Latin obtained by The Associated Press that bore his signature as then-Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger. ~ CBS News[218]

The letter that neither CBS nor the AP didn't feel the need to share with its audience, carefully written in Latin to minimize the number of those who might be privy to it, stated that, when considering the “laicizing” of monsters like Gallanagh and Kiesle, the “good of the universal Church” needed to be considered.[219]

One can only assume that the “good of the universal Church” being considered by the most Reverend Excellency[220] Joseph Cardinal Ratzinger, Superior-General of the Inquisition, was to insure that child-raping monsters be kept in circulation as much as was in his power to accomplish.

Fortunately for “the Church” there are many agents of the Devil’s Simulation that don’t wear black cassocks — judges and cops, for instance — who can help Inquisitors like Joseph Ratzinger in his agenda to keep serial child rapists amongst their prey (your children).

> Kiesle was sentenced in 1978 to three years’ probation after making a plea of no contest to charges of lewd conduct related to tying up and molesting two young boys in a San Francisco Bay area church rectory. ~ Telegraph[221]

Understanding that handicapped children make the easiest victims, the Catholic Church has special schools to lure the prey into position.

That statement may appear to be inflammatory hyperbole yet the fact that the entire scenario repeatedly plays itself out renders it shockingly accurate.

The most recent example occurred at the Father Antonio Provolo Institute for the Deaf in Verona, Italy.

> ...a notorious school for the deaf where hundreds of children are believed to have been sexually assaulted over the years by two dozen priests and religious brothers. ~ Catholic Herald[222]

When one monster rose above the rest — Father Nicola Corradi — he was relocated to the sister Provolo Institute in Lujan de Cuyo, Argentina (the home country of Pope Francis). There he continued to rape children who were unable to interact with the outside world: prisoners in a never-ending nightmare. They weren’t even able to hear their abusers enter the room.

Like voracious animals, the priests and nuns attacked the children in bathrooms, in confessionals, in their dorm rooms, even in the chapel (perhaps, purposefully so in ritual for the Devil's Simulation). In fact, the "Virgin Mary" (Semiramis / Isis / Cybele / Columbia) stood watch over the abuse.

> The school has "a little chapel with an image of the Virgin and some chairs where the kids would get confession and receive the communion. That's where some of the acts were happening," Fabrizio Sidoti, the prosecutor who has been leading the investigation since the scandal broke, told the AP.[223]

> The children said the ... Roman Catholic priests continuously raped them, beside the image of the Virgin Mary. ~ Daily Mail[224]

Finally, after getting his fill of destroying the innocence of the vulnerable and defenseless, the decrepit beast was arrested ... at 82 years of age, wheelchair-bound and barely aware of his surroundings[225] — almost like his victims.

In "humble, elderly priest" Nicola Corradi's quarters police found evidence of an organized sex-trafficking network; pornographic magazines and videos along with $34,000 in cash.[226],[xviii]

In fact, the handicapped children were used like adult film sex workers.

> Children from other regions of Argentina who lived at the dorms were especially vulnerable and often targeted by the abusers. The tales are harrowing: One of the victims told the AP she witnessed how a girl was raped by one priest while the other one forced her to give him oral sex. ~ Fox News[227]

Proving again that the victims had nowhere to hide; one of their chief tormentors was a nun from Japan — Sister Kosaka Kumiko. Her nationality likely made it easier for her to enable the abuse and exploitation of Argentinian children.

> But to truly punish a people, you need a puppet with few connections to them.

> Herod, who would think nothing of slaughtering all the boys in Bethlehem from 2 years old to newborn, wasn't a Jew, he was an Edomite.[956]
>
> Napoleon Bonaparte wasn't French, he was from Corsica.[957]
>
> Adolf Hitler wasn't Teutonic, he was Austrian.[958]
>
> With good reason has Barack Hussein Obama failed to produce a valid birth certificate. ~ Illuminati Unmasked[228]

Sister Kumiko easily slides in to the above list.

> Kosaka Kumiko, 42, was charged with helping the priests with anal and vaginal rapes, fondling and oral sex, which were allegedly committed in the bathrooms, dormitories, garden and a basement at the school in Lujan de Cuyo, a city about 620 miles northwest of Buenos Aires.
>
> The case against Kumiko began after a former student accused her of making her wear a diaper to cover up a hemorrhage after she was allegedly raped by priest Horacio Corbacho. ...
>
> The nun, who has Argentine citizenship, has also been charged with physically abusing the students — whose torments could only be heard by those abusing them since the other children were deaf — at the Antonio Provolo Institute for children with hearing impairment in northwestern Mendoza province. ~ AP[229]

Argentina is fertile ground for Roman atrocities.

Before he was "elected" Pope, Jesuit priest Jorge Mario Bergoglio was one of the most powerful men in Argentina:

- Jesuit Provincial Superior of Argentina (1973–1979)
- Auxiliary Bishop of Buenos Aires (1992–1997)
- Titular Bishop of Auca (1992–1997)
- Archbishop of Buenos Aires (1998–2013)
- Cardinal-Priest of San Roberto Bellarmino (2001–2013)

- Ordinary of the Ordinariate for the Faithful of the Eastern Rites in Argentina (1998–2013)
- President of the Argentine Episcopal Conference (2005–2011)

Jorge Bergoglio may claim to have been unaware of the heinous crimes of his clergy but victims know different.

> The victims' families contend that the Vatican knew about [abuse at the Provolo Institute, in general, and the outrages of Nicola Corradi, in specific] since at least 2009, when he was publicly accused of abusing students at the Provolo Institute in Verona, Italy, where he then worked.
>
> They allege nothing was done then nor later in 2014, when they told Pope Francis in a letter that Corradi was living in his native Argentina. ~ Fox News[230]

There was no reason for Bergoglio to react; he had ultimate authority over Corradi's "relocation".

> Members of the Provolo association met with the Pope last year and asked for an independent commission to investigate. The Provolo group provided the AP with the letter from the Vatican dated February 5, 2016, in which the Vatican said it had forwarded the request to the Italian bishops' conference, saying it was up to them to investigate.
>
> "As of now, nothing has happened," the group said in an email. "We have to ask ourselves: the Pope, who was for many years the primate of the Argentine church, did he know nothing about clerical abuse in his country?" ~ Herald[231]

There are a great many agents of disinformation in employ by the Vatican who first bait their audience by attacking their masters only to mislead them in the end.

There are also some honest Catholics who are simply disgusted by what they've seen.

> > "And peace to the children, on this special day on which God became a child, above all those deprived of the joys of childhood > because of hunger, wars or the selfishness of adults." — Pope Francis' Christmas Urbi et Orbi [City and the World] Message 2016

Indeed, Pope Francis. The joys of childhood are deprived to the victims of clergy sexual abuse by the selfishness of adults*. Despite his global popularity, the reality is that Francis is all talk, and no action when dealing with clerical child sex abuse. Not surprisingly, as the novelist, V.S. Naipaul observed about Argentines, "it is the Argentine attitude to suppress and ignore."*

Notwithstanding his incessant chatter about mercy and human trafficking, this Argentine Pope continues to suppress and ignore the ongoing clerical child sexual abuse. The latest case of papal inertia and deafness is especially heinous since it involves the sexual abuse of hundreds of disabled deaf and mute children in Italy and Argentina by several priests, giving tragic magnification to the oft used term, voiceless victims*. This cover-up lies squarely on Bergoglio's watch.*

During the 3 1/2 years of the Francis Papacy, the self-appointed Merciful One is not so merciful when it comes to the victims of clergy sex abuse. As Archbishop of Buenos Aires, Bergoglio left a record of abysmal apathy and inaction to root out clergy sex abuse. This pattern lives on behind the Vatican walls.

Who could forget the now familiar Francis fury raging at the faithful Catholics of Osorno Chile who pleaded with the Pope not to elevate a bishop who had allegedly protected a serial child predator? Francis ignored and suppressed their concerns as "stupid." Who could forget the Pope's personal appointment to the Synod on the Family of Cardinal Danneels, the renowned Belgian prelate who protected predator clerics? Don't forget child abuse victim Peter Saunders, who served on the papal child protection commission and was forced to take a leave of absence for criticizing the Pope's decisions on clerical sex abusers.[[232]]

Wake up, Francis fawners, his mercy meme rings as hollow and empty, as hope and change*. ~ The* [Catholic] Remnant[233]

Back in Milwaukee, after decades of raping little boys, as he approached death from old age, Father Lawrence C. Murphy's American superiors finally attempted some form of impotent action and even that was thwarted by the Vatican.

> In the two years before Father Murphy died, the bishops in Milwaukee and Superior tried to have him defrocked but were dissuaded by Vatican officials who had received a letter from Father Murphy asking for leniency. The Vatican said Father Murphy had shown "apparent good conduct" in the 24 years since he had been removed from St. John's and sent to Boulder Junction. ~ The New York Times[234]

Again, it is the collaboration of secular, government authority that shocks the sensibilities most. They, too, are secret members of the Devil's Simulation, unbeknownst to the citizenry they are paid and sworn to protect.

> Victims back in Milwaukee and St. Francis say the police ignored their reports of the priest's sexual contacts. They also went to the district attorney's office in Milwaukee. E. Michael McCann, then the district attorney, said last week that his office had not pursued the allegations because they were beyond the state's statute of limitations.
>
> The victims and their advocates recall it differently, saying that one victim was then a student at the school and was being abused — which would have been well within the statute. Mr. McCann said his office was under such scrutiny in the Murphy case that it would have been impossible for them not to pursue an active case of abuse. But once Father Murphy moved to Boulder Junction, local authorities said they were not made aware of any complaints.
>
> "Our department never conducted any criminal investigations," said Chief Deputy Joe Fath of the Vilas County Sheriff's Department. "There were never any allegations of anything occurring in Vilas County at his place of work or residence."
>
> Father Murphy always lived freely. ~ The New York Times[235]

Those who enable the Devil’s Simulation — the repeated and even ritualized defiling and victimizing of the innocent, and the vulnerable — advance in power and prestige.

The outrages at the Provolo Institute harken to Murphy’s crimes and just who it was that kept him unpunished and even unaddressed until his ignoble death in 1998. [italics suspended]

> ...the Vatican halted the investigation of a Wisconsin priest accused of molesting some 200 deaf boys have eerie echoes in Italy, where 67 deaf men and women accused two dozen priests of raping and molesting children for years.
>
> Only now — a year after the Italian case became public — is the Vatican directing the diocese to interview the victims to hear their testimony about the accusations, The Associated Press learned Thursday.
>
> The two cases are the latest in a burgeoning abuse scandal on both sides of the Atlantic ... The office charged with disciplining clergy was long led by Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger, now Pope Benedict XVI, and a church prosecution in the Wisconsin case was stopped after an appeal to Ratzinger.
>
> The Vatican strongly defended Benedict on Thursday and denounced what it said was a concerted campaign to smear him and his aides for a problem that Rome insists is not unique to the Catholic Church.
>
> Benedict’s actions have been marked by “transparency, firmness and severity in shedding light on the various cases of sexual abuse committed by priests and clergymen,” the Vatican newspaper L’Osservatore Romano said in a front-page article. ...
>
> In a signed statement last year, the 67 former pupils at a school for the deaf in Verona described sexual abuse, pedophilia and corporal punishment from the 1950s to the 1980s. They named 24 priests, brothers and lay religious men at the Antonio Provolo Institute for the Deaf.

> While not all acknowledged being victims, 14 of the 67 wrote sworn statements and made videotapes, detailing abuse, some for years, at the hands of priests and brothers of the Congregation for the Company of Mary.
>
> One victim, Alessandro Vantini, told the AP last year that priests sodomized him so relentlessly he came to feel “as if I were dead.”
>
> “How could I tell my papa that a priest had sex with me?” Vantini, 59, said through a sign-language interpreter. “You couldn’t tell your parents because the priests would beat you.” ~ Associated Press[236]

At the time, Cardinal Ratzinger (who co-authored Vatican II along with Jesuit Karl Rahner) maintained a very special position.

> The bishop of Verona, Monsignor Giuseppe Zenti, initially accused the former students of lying. However, after one of the accused lay religious men admitted to sexual relations with students, the bishop ordered an internal investigation. It found some abuse occurred, albeit a fraction of what had been alleged.
>
> Advocates for the victims, however, said the diocese investigation was fatally flawed because no one interviewed the former students.
>
> Last summer, the diocese forwarded its files to the Vatican office that prosecutes sex crimes by clergy, the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith. It was headed for years by Ratzinger, who issued a 2001 directive that requires bishops to report suspected clerical abuse cases to the Vatican, but makes no mention of calling police. ~ The Boston Globe[237]

What the AP neglects to tell its readers is that the “Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith” is the kindler, gentler name for the Inquisition. [italics suspended except in the original]

> The Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith (Latin: Congregatio pro Doctrina Fidei, CDF) is the oldest among the nine congregations of the Roman Curia. It was founded to defend the church from heresy; today, it is the body responsible for promulgating and defending

> Catholic doctrine.[1] Formerly known as the Supreme Sacred Congregation of the Roman and Universal Inquisition,[a] it is informally known in many Catholic countries as the Holy Office, and between 1908 and 1965 was officially known as the Supreme Sacred Congregation of the Holy Office. ~ Wikipedia[238]

Few know and understand that the Inquisition never ended, it just changed its methodology.

Ratzinger had risen through the ranks, proving himself to be a reliable gatekeeper for the Devil’s Simulation. In fact, this is the key to promotion and the foundation of Ratzinger’s Papacy.

> Benedict also has come under pressure over a case dating back to his time as archbishop of Munich, in his native Germany, three decades ago.
>
> The Munich archdiocese has said that Ratzinger was involved in a 1980 decision to allow a priest who had been accused of abusing boys, the Rev. Peter Hullermann, to be transferred there for therapy. ~ The Boston Globe[239]

Being in command of the Archdiocese of Munich was no small honor. It has had a powerful Jesuit presence for several hundred years and was the location where Adam Weishaupt taught Canon Law at Jesuit Ingolstadt University. Weishaupt would go on to define Communism and found the Jacobinism that fueled the bloody French Revolution as well as the Illuminati secret society.

But Ratzinger’s pedophile credentials don’t end there, he comes from a family of sadistic predators.

> The priests at the Regensburg, Bavaria, boarding school for boys liked to make the students take off their clothes and bend over for either a violent whipping or forcible anal sex. Sometimes the priests made them drink red wine. Sometimes the priests masturbated in front of the children. Other times they made the children masturbate for them, perform oral sex or fondle each other.

> The complaint is not about just one or two isolated cases. At least 231 and more likely as many as 700 boys who attended the school between 1953 and 1992 were subjected to what has been described by the victims as “ritual abuse,” according to Ulrich Weber, a German lawyer commissioned by the choir who represents the alleged victims. “I have here 231 reports of physical abuse,” Weber told reporters at a press conference in Regensburg on Friday when he presented a report based on an eight-month investigation into the alleged abuse. “The abuse ranges from sexual assault and rape to food deprivation to the boys who were less cooperative.”

— The fact that the words “ritual abuse” have been mentioned by victims is extremely important. — The bulk of the abuse, which also included canings, forced gluttony and anal penetration with foreign objects, happened in the mid-1970s to boys being groomed for the world-famous Domspatzen boys choir of Regensberg’s St. Peter’s Cathedral when a certain Father Georg Ratzinger was the choir leader. Ratzinger, who will turn 92 next month, is the elder brother of Josef Ratzinger, better known as Pope Benedict XVI. He conducted the choir from 1964 to 1994. When asked if Ratzinger knew what was going on, Weber said, “After my research, I must assume so.” ~ Newsweek[240]

Investigators have put the number of complaints at over two thousand.

It is the magnitude of a war crime yet no Catholic or secular authority has even so much as addressed it.

> The prestigious choir dates back to the year 975 and grew to become one of the most famous musical training schools for boys, producing a number of successful composers and directors including Franz Wittenbrink, who came forward when the allegations of abuse first surfaced. In 2010, he told investigators that priests at the Regensburg boarding school engaged in what he described as “an elaborate system of sadistic punishments combined with sexual lust.”
>
> He said that he and several other boys were often “chosen” to be invited by the headmaster at the time to his personal apartment where they were plied with red wine and made to perform sex acts on the > headmaster and on each other. “Everyone knew about it at the time,” he said in 2010.

>
> Whether the elder Ratzinger told his younger brother about the abuse remains dubious, especially given that the younger Ratzinger served as head of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, the church’s former Inquisition office that now sees to the interpretation and enforcement of church doctrine, before being tapped as pontiff. If he had been informed, he would have been in a prime position to expose it. The recent revelations of the extent of abuse will seal Benedict’s record on the greatest scandal to rock the Catholic Church as weak, at best.[241]

When the decades-old secrets began to surface in 2010, an anemic victim’s advocacy group conducted a little-noticed protest.

Even that was attacked by police.

> ...a group of clerical abuse victims staged a press conference outside St. Peter’s Square in Rome to denounce Benedict’s handling of the case and gave reporters church and Vatican documents on the case.
>
> Afterward, Italian police detained four American abuse victims for 2 ½ hours because they didn’t have a permit for the news conference and suggested they get a lawyer in case a judge decided to press charges, the victims said.
>
> “We’ve spent more time in the police station than Father Murphy did in his life,” Peter Isely, the Milwaukee-based director of SNAP, the Survivors Network of Those Abused by Priests, said after his release. ~ Associated Press[242]

A change has since occurred.

The sudden increase in arrests (2016/2017) may be the result of secular partners in Vatican crime feeling the heat of increased focus on their abominations by angry citizens.

Or it may be something even more sinister; a Satanic game of chess.

As priest abuse victim lawyer Mitch Garabedian (played by Stanley Tucci) stated to Boston Globe reporter Mike Rezendes (played by Mark Ruffalo) in the 2015 movie Spotlight, “The Church thinks in centuries, Mr. Rezendes.”

Rome was founded in the 6th century, B.C. and had grown into an Empire by the 1st century, B.C. She maintained her power and wealth and transformed into an all-encompassing religious authority by the 6th century A.D. She has co-opted the most powerful organizations in the world from banking to organized crime to the militaries and intelligence agencies of nation-states. She specializes in the most lucrative black markets; weapons, narcotics, people. The wealth horded and hidden by the Vatican can only be guessed at but it must surely stagger the imagination.

> You might find a couple of quid tucked down the back of the sofa cushion if you’re lucky. More likely it’s just coppers and crumbs.
>
> But such is the vastness of the Vatican’s wealth that it can find hundreds of millions of euros just “tucked away” off of its central balance sheet, according to the cardinal responsible for the Holy See’s finances.
>
> “It is important to point out that the Vatican is not broke,” Cardinal George Pell, the Vatican’s prefect of the secretariat for the economy, wrote in the Catholic Herald. ~ International Business Times[243]

Pell would know. He was the top Roman Catholic cleric in Australia before his activities protecting pedophile priests earned him a substantial promotion in Rome. After a “job well done” the promotion has afforded Pell a lavish lifestyle.[244]

More on George Pell in Chapter 23.

For years, controlled media has been slowly leaking out stories that powerful computers can use specialized programs to collate patterns and effectively predict the future.[245],[246]

Such stories claim that the capability is rudimentary and blunt; only able to “predict” very large, general events like wars. It is guaranteed to be much more precise and trends such as citizen awareness of the Devil’s Simulation have almost certainly been predicted. This allows the criminals, themselves, forewarning to expertly release information and to initiate “investigations” to feign action while getting in front of the trend and steering it clear of the areas that are the most vulnerable — what you’re reading of in these pages.

That “steering” includes insuring that citizens don’t understand the full scope of Luciferian activities or who is at the top, organizing them all.

Agents of espionage in secular offices are critical to these efforts and they provide a range of subterfuge to keep the enemies of mankind protected.

- Communicating crimes to law enforcement falls short of arrests.
- Arrests end with failure to prosecute.
- Prosecutions end with failures to convict.
- Convictions end with heinously light sentences.

While thoughts of near-limitless wealth and super-computers that predict the future may make the Jesuit-run Vatican seem like an unbeatable foe filled with malice and power, it’s important to remember that all of these resources are expended for one purpose: to keep the sleeping giant of humanity unaware of Rome’s crimes.

More than anything else, she is an enemy that desperately fears an awakened populace.[xix]

Chapter 6

“Lolita”[247]

1955: Russian émigré to the United States, Vladimir Nabokov, brings pedophilia into popular culture with the publication of his novel Lolita*.*

As a result, “Lolita” became pedophile code for any immature girl that was lusted after...of any age.

The main character in the novel took the name “Humbert Humbert” in order to give him cover for stalking and raping prepubescent girls.

“Humbert Humbert” even married a widow to gain access to her 12 year old daughter.

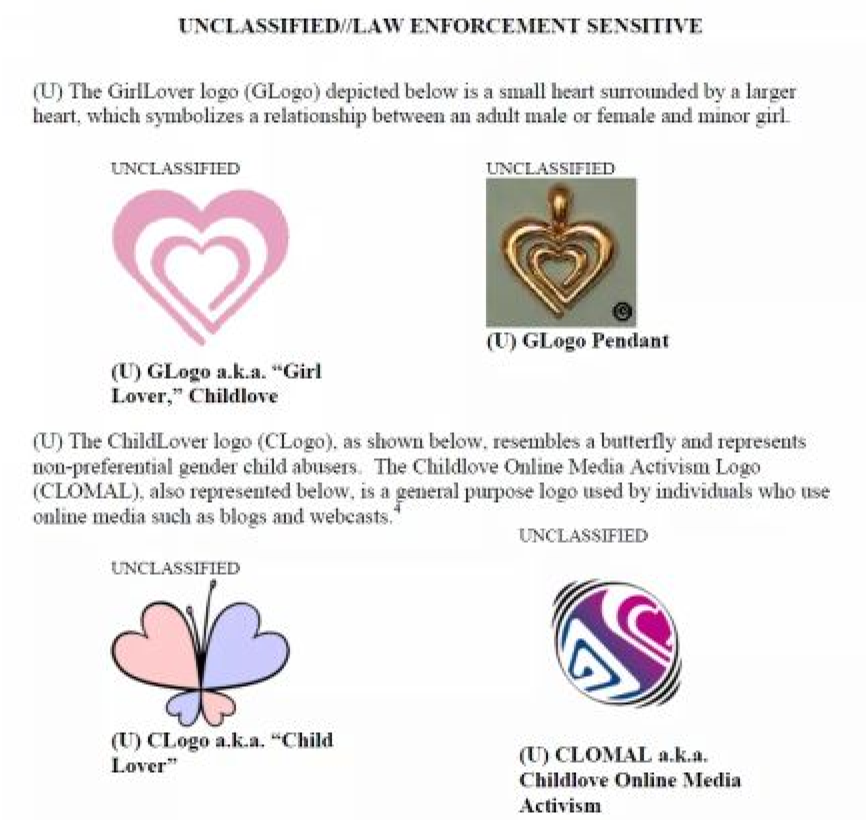
Nabokov was heavily into lepidoptery[248] which has led to butterflies also being used as code for lusting after immature girls.

Conversely, a powerful tool employed by the Devil’s Simulation — trauma-based “mind control” — has also co-opted the butterfly as a trigger symbol.

The agenda of “mind control” is to torture a victim until their psyche shatters but is not allowed to self-destruct or shut down. Given the paradox, Dissociative Identity Disorder is forced upon the victim and as soon as a new identity or personality is spawned they can be trained and molded to do whatever their tormentor programs them with.

Methods of torture go far beyond just physical distress to include sexual violation (the younger the victim, the more effective) or subjecting the victim to take part in or witness something horrific.

First devised by Inquisitors and codified in the text The Malleus Maleficarum (The Witch Hammer), in 1486, it was perfected by Rome's agents and operatives in Nazi Germany like Roman Catholic Josef Mengele[249] and then transported to the West to be further enhanced by Jesuit-controlled Western Intelligence; CIA, MI6, Mossad, etc. with residual information being shared in the East such as the KGB — all secretly working together.



UNCLASSIFIED//LAW ENFORCEMENT SENSITIVE

(U) The GirlLover logo (GLogo) depicted below is a small heart surrounded by a larger heart, which symbolizes a relationship between an adult male or female and minor girl.

UNCLASSIFIED

(U) GLogo a.k.a. "Girl Lover," Childlove

UNCLASSIFIED

(U) GLogo Pendant

(U) The ChildLover logo (CLogo), as shown below, resembles a butterfly and represents non-preferential gender child abusers. The Childlove Online Media Activism Logo (CLOMAL), also represented below, is a general purpose logo used by individuals who use online media such as blogs and webcasts.[4]

UNCLASSIFIED

(U) CLogo a.k.a. "Child Lover"

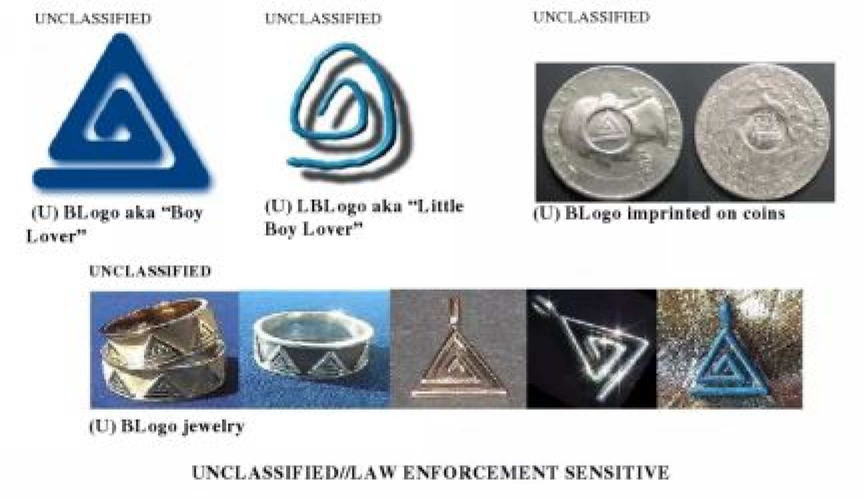
UNCLASSIFIED

(U) CLOMAL a.k.a. Childlove Online Media Activism

Roman Agents in the Central Intelligence Agency would generally group these abominations under the heading "MK ULTRA" but specifics were bound in Project: MONARCH, also known as “Monarch Programming”. [250]

In January 2007, the FBI released a “law enforcement sensitive” memorandum[251],[252],[253] that showed the use of secret symbolism as code amongst pedophiles.

As citizens became aware of what to look for, they were shocked to see the symbols everywhere.



UNCLASSIFIED

(U) BLogo aka “Boy Lover”

UNCLASSIFIED

(U) LBLogo aka “Little Boy Lover”

UNCLASSIFIED

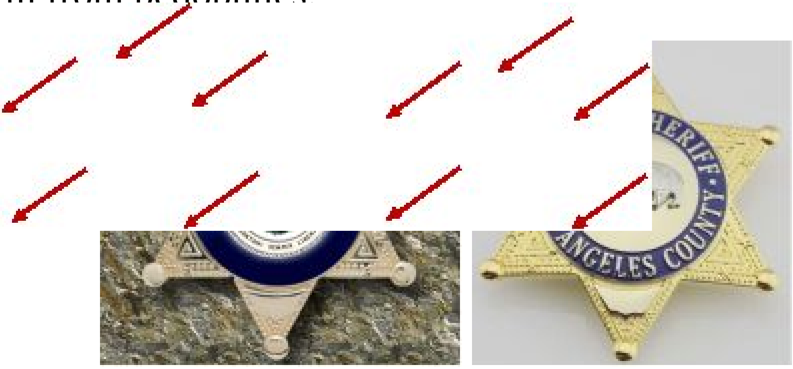
(U) BLogo imprinted on coins

UNCLASSIFIED

(U) BLogo jewelry

UNCLASSIFIED//LAW ENFORCEMENT SENSITIVE

— Even on the identification of the government officials entrusted to protect them from pedophiles.[254]



In his book, Nabokov meticulously charted the size and development of girls to pinpoint the perfect “Lolita”.

Rather than be investigated for suspected crimes with children, Lolita became the first book since Gone with the Wind to sell 100,000 copies in its first three weeks.[255] Media commemorated the “50th Anniversary” of the “masterpiece” in 2005 by remarking that, at that time, 50 million copies had been sold.[256]

Lolita was praised for having exposed the empathy deficits and cognitive disorders of pedophiles. However it also enticed millions of normal citizens into pedophilia.

In both Lolita and an earlier 1939 novella The Enchanter, Nabokov showed the stalking and “grooming” behaviors of pedophiles and portrayed their predilection for preying upon single mothers with children.

Although single “lone wolf” predators do exist they are almost non-existent as a threat to humanity. It is the system that keeps the Devil’s Simulation running that is the overwhelming threat. As a result, the most dangerous institutions are hidden in plain sight: Intelligence Agencies, law enforcement, judges, politicians and “Churches”.

This is why that same demographic — vulnerable single mothers and / or children without guardians — have been equally targeted by Roman Catholic “charities”.

In Lolita and The Enchanter, Nabokov’s predators experiment with the use of drugs to sedate victims or their guardians; the same has been done by the organizations that run systemic pedophilia.

Lolita also described the foundational role pornography and child pornography plays for pedophiles.

Consequently, a Hollywood movie adaptation was guaranteed and within only 7 years, Jewish Luciferian insider Stanley Kubrick (Spartacus, Dr. Strangelove, 2001, A Clockwork Orange, The Shining, Full Metal Jacket, Eyes Wide Shut) released one in 1962 starring James Mason as Humbert Humbert, Peter Sellers as Humbert’s pedophile competition Clare Quilty and 14 year old Sue Lyon as Lolita.

Even at 14, Lyon was too developed for Nabokov (a “technical advisor”) who wanted a midget actress to better portray the diminutive size of pre-teen Lolita.

Early in the movie, Sellers invites Mason to play a game of “Roman Ping Pong”, chillingly presaging (or perhaps laying the foundation for) controversy that would swirl around the 2016 U.S. Presidential elections.

Accusations arose that the Campaign Chairman for Hillary Rodham Clinton, the Chief of Staff for Jesuit-educated President Bill Clinton, the Counselor to Jesuit-mentored Barack Obama and former Jesuit seminarian John Podesta had been abusing children via an unlikely hub; Comet Ping Pong Pizza based in Washington D.C. and owned by James Alefantis.

It was labeled by the media as “the baseless conspiracy” of “PizzaGate” to imply that it had been contrived by billionaire Donald Trump’s campaign operatives to muddy the waters against “rival” Hillary Clinton.

The name was meant to harken back to the break-in of the Democrat Party offices at the Watergate Hotel in Washington D.C. by the Nixon campaign to uncover strategies of “rival” George McGovern in 1972.

Watergate was the reverse of “PizzaGate”; a trivial matter given coverage well out of proportion to its criminality.

Far more interesting but far less covered were the men involved such as FBI agent George Gordon Battle Liddy, a Jesuit-educated[257] Irish Roman Catholic and Everett Howard Hunt, a CIA operative. Hunt was involved in everything from the United Fruit Company-sponsored Foster brothers overthrow of Guatemalan President Jacobo Árbenz to the broad-daylight assassination of President John F. Kennedy.[258]

Although overtly an Episcopalian, Hunt converted to Roman Catholicism with his wife Dorothy[259], shortly before her death in a “pilot error” plane crash that killed all 43 passengers aboard United Airlines 553, Washington to Chicago. It is believed that Dorothy was being used as go-between for Hunt while he either blackmailed or brokered his way out of prison. She was found to have $10,000 in cash stuffed in her purse.[260]

The wages of sin pay well but are still never enough when the bill comes due.

Having no one to look after his children while he served 33 months of a 35 year prison sentence[xx], Hunt turned them over to dear friend and fellow CIA operative William F. Buckley — a devout Roman Catholic and member of the Yale Skull and Bones Society, 1950.[261]

More on “#PizzaGate” in Chapter 31.

Apparently, Lolita was too important a novel to allow for just a single film adaptation and a joint French/American venture portrayed pedophilia for pop culture again in 1997.

This time, Jeremy Irons was Humbert Humbert, Frank Langella was his pedophile peer Clare Quilty and Dominique Swain was Lolita.

Perhaps it was fortuitous that Nabokov died 20 years earlier given his dissatisfaction at the choice of 14 year old Sue Lyon for the part in the Kubrick film; Swain was an elderly 17.

Still, the film did not go without controversy and release was delayed in Australia for 2 years.

Irons continues to be a popular choice for studios and has given a noteworthy rendition of Jesuit Father Gabriel in the 1986 Roland Joffé movie The Mission.

Was Vladimir Nabokov a pedophile or someone trying to bring attention to the Devil’s Simulation?

Although he left strong evidence to imply that he, himself, was a victim of pedophilia and incest, when queried by a BBC reporter on why he wrote Lolita, Nabokov denied any moral or social purpose.[262]

Yet Nabokov declared with derision that Alice in Wonderland author, Anglican Deacon Charles Ludwig Dodgson (a.k.a. “Lewis Carroll”) was a pedophile obsessed with taking pictures of naked children; a new technology quickly brought in to child soft-porn.

Although the “secret” was well-known in the inner circles, it was finally deemed fit for public consumption 150 years later.

> The BBC is to broadcast a controversial new documentary exploring whether Lewis Carroll was a "repressed paedophile", on the 150th anniversary of his beloved children's book Alice's Adventures in Wonderland.
>
> The potentially-explosive programme, presented by Martha Kearney, will explore the nature of Carroll's relationship with children, and feelings toward the real Alice, the inspiration behind his most famous work.
>
> The show, in which he is referred to by a contributor as a "heavily repressed paedophile", will detail a newly-discovered photograph of a naked girl from a forgotten archive, said to show a "shockingly different" side to the author's friendship with children.
>
> The programme, entitled The Secret World of Lewis Carroll, is scheduled to be broadcast by the BBC next weekend, with contributions from famous faces including Philip Pullman and Will Self, as well as members of the real Alice's family.
>
> It will debate whether new evidence shows Carroll, whose real name was Charles Dodgson, took an interest in sexualising young children and teenagers, and whether he should or could be considered a "Victorian Jimmy Savile".
>
> The story of the real inspiration of Carroll's children's book is already relatively well-known, with the fictional Alice being based on young Alice Liddell, the daughter of the Dean of Christ Church and his neighbour.
>
> Alice and her sisters, Lorina and Edith, feature in Carroll's novels, with a host of surviving photographs taken by the author of Alice already published. ~ The Telegraph[263]

This was an open secret to Vladimir Nabokov in the 1950's but the British media was "shocked" by it in 2015.

> The picture, which is not comprehensively proven to have been taken by Carroll, is believed to show Alice's elder sister entirely nude, in a > full-frontal pose described by Kearney as something "no parent would ever have consented to".

>
> Found in a French museum with an inscribed attribution on the frame saying it was by Lewis Carroll and of Lorina Liddell, it shows an "uneasy" pubescent model in her teenage years.
>
> Expert analysis shows it was taken around the time Carroll was seeing the Liddells, using the same processes he is known to have used in photography. ...
>
> Prof Hugh Haughton, one of the contributors to the programme, said the photograph – if it was taken by Carroll – was a "shocking image", with the author's relationship with the Liddell girls known to have a "huge intensity" which would be "pretty strange now".
>
> He added: "It will certainly make it harder for those who believe that Carroll's interest in little girls was totally innocent; it will make that more complicated."
>
> Will Self, the author, said of Carroll: "Dodgson himself, I think, was a heavily repressed paedophile, without doubt. It's a problem, isn't it, when somebody writes a great book but they're not a great person."[264]

Actually, 'tis the other way 'round, Mr. Self: the Pedocracy found a moderately-entertaining book and gave it it's "immortal prominence" because it came from one of its own.

Perhaps unknowingly or knowingly, Alfred Kinsey nemesis Dr. Judith Reisman drew an odd parallel in regards to how Kinsey warped identifiers to cover the crimes he and other "researchers" committed — THE RED QUEEN: WORDS MEAN WHAT I SAY THEY MEAN

> "Let the jury consider their verdict," the King said for about the twentieth time that day.
>
> "No, no," said the Queen. "Sentence first-verdict afterwards."
>
> "Stuff and Nonsense," said Alice loudly. "The idea of having the sentence first."

> “Hold your tongue!” said the Queen, turning purple.[66]
>
> Like the Red Queen in Lewis Carroll’s Alice’s Adventures in Wonderland*, Kinsey’s contention that in the late 1940s and early 1950s the U.S. was steeped in promiscuous sex was heavily dependent on his use of self-serving semantics. For example, he defined a “married woman” as one who had lived with a man for “at least a year, which could include working prostitutes.”*[67] ...
>
> For Kinsey, “normal” was a non-word, as were “criminal” and “crime.” His definition of “underworld” eliminated sex crimes, unless they had a monetary motive. A child molester was simply a “partner,” since the word “rape” is excluded from his study. And in his lengthy studies of human sexuality, such terms as “love” and “childbirth” do not appear in the indices.
>
> In Chapter 5 of the Male volume, Kinsey defines as “contacts” what most Americans would likely describe as sexual assault, rape, and sodomy. He mixes the experiences of “older subjects” with those of “older boys” and “adult men,” as though the categories are interchangeable. He also combines “younger boys” with “preadolescent boys,” which camouflages the rape of children under age 13.[265]

Given Reisman’s position as chosen by Rome to defend “family values” one can only hope she knew not what she did. However, that is somewhat difficult to believe when it’s the very subject the Doctor of Communications is a highly-prized expert in.

If the secret life of Charles “Lewis Carroll” Dodgson was lost on Dr. Judith Reisman, it wasn’t lost on his fellow “paedophiles”.

In 2001, a U.K.-based “paedophile” internet club was finally taken down after long years of operation.

> Everyone had a nickname ...
>
> But it was the sinister entry fee that exposed the fact that this was no ordinary club: each new member had to supply 10,000 pornographic > images of children.

>
> This was the Wonderland Club, an international online paedophile ring which ran for four years before finally being smashed by the biggest international police operation ever undertaken. ~ The Observer[266]

Actually, we consider "smashed" a bit of an exaggeration when no one gets brought to justice.

Certainly quite a bit of tax money was spent —

> The international investigation to crack the ring was the biggest in policing history, taking in 13 countries and 180 men. Led by British officers, on 2 September 1998 police forces simultaneously kicked in the doors of 107 homes and made 104 arrests.[267]

"10,000 pornographic images of children" was the entrance fee. Imagine the effort and power one must have to accomplish just getting in to the "Wonderland Club". In today's "ISIS" terror Police State you need only say the word "bomb" on your cell phone to have platoons of camouflaged "Police" wielding automatic weapons "smashing" down upon you but, oddly, no one of any consequence was "smashed" in this massive international sting.

> The suspects included the usual collection of outsiders: unemployed loners in U.K. bedsits, a father and son in a U.S. trailer-park.[268]

"Smashed!"

> One prolific abuser, Gary Salt, invited other members to visit his Stockport home to pose with children in front of the webcam as if they were meeting a screen hero. The sheer weight of the physical evidence illustrates the enormity of Operation Cathedral — 750,000 individual images of children and 1,800 computerised videos depicted children being sexually abused.[269]

"Operation Cathedral"?

> The images were so appalling that National Crime Squad officers who had to sift through the mountain of material had compulsory therapy sessions to help them deal with what they saw.
>
> “These really are quite horrific images,” said Alex Wood, deputy chief inspector of the NCS. “These are kids being subjected to the most serious, serious, abuse.”
>
> The ring began to unravel after the arrest of Ronald Riva in Greenfield, California. Officers discovered that Riva had raped his daughter’s 10-year-old friend in front of a camera which relayed the live image onto the internet. The child, who had been invited to a slumber party by Riva’s daughter, is one of only two of the 1,236 Wonderland victims to have been traced. The other, a Portuguese boy, has disappeared and police fear he may have been murdered.
>
> Among six men who had typed messages of encouragement to Riva was Ian Baldock, a 31-year-old computer consultant from St. Leonards, East Sussex. The FBI informed the U.K. police, who soon realised the scale of the enterprise they had stumbled on. Operation Cathedral was born.[270]

One wonders how such a complex, international operation of combined law enforcement was only able to rescue two of the thousands of abused children used by the Wonderland Club...and one of the two was “lost presumed dead”!

> Wonderland, the Orchid Club, and other pornography rings are not simply exchanging images of undressed children romping on the beach. They have images that are the most horrible — two-year-olds, even six-month-old babies, being violently raped.
>
> Most of the 107 men eventually convicted for participation in the Wonderland Club were sentenced to fines. The heaviest sentence was three years in prison. Over 100 of these men are on the streets today.
>
> The Wonderland used sophisticated encryption codes originally developed by the KGB.

> The images they traded like baseball cards were of children tied up, children being raped, children having sex with animals, adults or other children. ~ Portuguese Lost Children[271]

Portugal figures prominently as a safe haven for "paedophiles". We'll see that conclusively as we get into the story of Madeleine McCann in Chapter 26.

Again there is the use of Intelligence technologies implying the involvement of government agencies and evidence that the scale is clearly a systemic one.

"Operation Cathedral" was truly an appropriate name.

The British government joined law enforcement to quickly put harsh penalties in place to send a message to international child sex slave traffickers ... but too late for the "outsiders" and trailer park trash paedophiles nabbed by "Operation Cathedral".

> "At first there was not enough police knowledge or power," said Wood.
>
> "We had to bring in computer experts who worked with U.S. for 14 months. Once we had traced actual computers we then had to establish who was using that computer at a particular time and with many of them in libraries and universities it wasn't easy."
>
> Round-the-clock surveillance on suspects had to be introduced to ensure none had access to children while the investigation was ongoing. At one point, the operation almost collapsed when one British man, Gavin Seagers, was discovered working with Sea Cadets. The police knew that if they arrested him they risked tipping off the whole network. Tracing the victims of the Wonderland Club is now a priority. New technology is being tested out by Interpol based in Lyons, France, to enable photographs sent in by social services and families to be "matched" by computer against the victims' photographs. Already 900 children have had their photographs "sanitized" and stored and police forces across the world will be able to access them.

> The British Government introduced legislation last month to increase maximum sentences for the possession of child porn from six months to five years. Those caught producing or distributing the images will now receive sentences of 10 years rather than the present maximum of three. But the new sentences will not apply to the Wonderland Club. ~ Observer[272]

Once a child is traumatized by the Devil's Simulation, they still have choices. They can resist or succumb. If they succumb, they often grow into adulthood to become fellow partakers of the abuse they once suffered. Once they prove their loyalty to the monsters who stole their innocence, they may be rewarded lavishly.

Such was pop music sensation Michael Jackson. Bizarre behavior such as surgical addictions and severe identity crises of both race and gender are clear signs of early abuse.

Jackson's secluded multi-million dollar estate (perfect for abusing children without interference) was named the "Neverland Ranch"; taken from J.M. Barrie's legendary children's fable Peter Pan.

Many children were allowed to be placed in Jackson's care. Eventually, one child's parent came forward with accusations of abuse.

Wikipedia states definitively it was a "false accusation".

> In the summer of 1993, Evan Chandler falsely accused Michael Jackson of sexually molesting his 13-year-old son, Jordan.[273]

It was a "false accusation" that won Evan Chandler and his son a massive settlement from the pop star. It's an interesting outcome given that, apparently, nothing came of the criminal investigation.

Yet, after this victory against the Pedocracy, Mr. Chandler got "depressed".

> In January 1994 Jackson reached a financial settlement for $32,000,000 with the Chandlers to resolve the matter and in September a criminal investigation was closed. On November 5, 2009, Chandler committed suicide in his apartment in Jersey City, New Jersey.[274]

It was just a few months after Jackson, himself, had “died in his sleep” at only 51 years of age.

> On June 25, 2009, Jackson stopped breathing while attempting to sleep under the care of Conrad Murray, his personal physician. Murray had reportedly given Jackson an array of medications in an attempt to help him sleep at his rented mansion in Holmby Hills, Los Angeles. Attempts at resuscitating Jackson were unsuccessful.[292][293] ~ Wikipedia[275]

At least he was in the care of a trusted physician who was pumping him full of narcotics to “help” him.

Seven years after the deaths of both Jackson and his first accuser, upon “investigating” another accusation police and media finally decided, “Well maybe there was something there after all...”

> In 2003, police raided Neverland Ranch while investigating charges of child molestation that had been brought against Michael Jackson. Jackson was acquitted in 2005 — but now, seven years after the late pop star’s death, a newly surfaced police report details what Santa Barbara County Sheriff’s Department found during their raid: a disturbing collection of pornography that included images of children’s faces superimposed on adult bodies, as well as materials police said can be used to de-sensitize young children in order to groom them for future abuse.
>
> Radar Online obtained the documents, which contain description and pictures from various books and magazines found in Jackson’s secluded California home.
>
> Many of the materials contain nude young adults and adolescents, and many were described as consistent with the type of material that can be used to lower young victims’ inhibitions. Some of the materials centered on S&M, and Radar Online also describes images of animal torture and gore.
>
> The police investigation began in 2003, when the singer faced accusations of child molestation and intoxication of a minor after

> Gavin Arvizo, then 13 years old, came forward. From all of the charges combined, Jackson could have served 20 years in prison — but he was acquitted in 2005, and died four years later from cardiac arrest. ~ Vanity Fair[276]

No name is more synonymous with "children's entertainment" than "Disney".

However, Walter Elias Disney (1901 – 1966) was an abused child reputed to be a homosexual pedophile.[277] He was also a member of the de Molay Society for Boys. Named after the "final" Grand Master of the Templars, Jacques de Molay. Other prominent members include Jesuit-trained "Baptist" William Jefferson Clinton and Irish Catholic film star Marion Michael Morrison (also a Freemason[278]). Morrison is better known by his screen name, "John Wayne".

Disney productions are renown for hiding sexually-explicit images or subliminal messages but only the Roman Catholic "American Life League" was allowed to bring the matter to public attention with a Disney boycott and newspaper-published Opinion Editorial by President and Co-Founder Judith Brown — [279]

> Why is a Pro-Life organization taking on the Walt Disney Co. over a few subtle sexual messages?
>
> A little boycott background: The Catholic Church has always taken an unwavering stand against the horror of abortion.
>
> Back in April of 1995, the Walt Disney Co. attacked God, the Catholic Church and Christianity in general with the release of a film called "Priest," through the company's subsidiary, Miramax. For this reason, those of us in the American Life League felt compelled to stand up for God and for the church that fights for life. Thus, the Disney boycott began with our demands that "Priest" be pulled and that Disney apologize to all Christians.
>
> *Many of our supporters began to call and inform us of other gripes they had with Disney. Those supporters included: * The aunt of a 4 year-old who found "S-E-X" in "The Lion King".*

>  A man who faxed us a story uncovering "Good teen-agers take off your clothes" in "Aladdin."*
>  And a grandmother who wrote to tell us of the clergyman who is shown with an obvious erection in "The Little Mermaid".*

The "clergyman with an erection" was so offensive (though not far from real life) it lead to a lawsuit.[280] However, the suit was dropped, probably due to the cunning deniability built in to the animation. In one scene, there is a single "bulge" that appears below the waist then disappears but later a scene shows two bulges that are clearly knees.

This and another example were dismissed by the media with ridicule.

> You may recall that there are two popular penis-related rumors circulating about The Little Mermaid*. On the original home-video release, the cover art features a giant, golden tower in the background that looks an awful lot like a giant, golden erect dick. (It has long been rumored that this was intentional because, you know, disgruntled, horny cartoonists.) ~ When the Religious Right Attacked "The Little Mermaid", The Daily Beast* (Newsweek)[281]

However, if the subliminal messages are presented properly, there appears to be much less to mock: they are "mind control" suggestions designed to sexualize the innocents watching enraptured.

With this understood, Disney's repeated efforts to illegaly collect personal information on children without their parents' consent or even knowledge is beyond disturbing.[282]

FAIR USE: screen shots from The Little Mermaid (1989) to illustrate a point.

The examples could fill a book of itself but perhaps one more is called for: Peter Pan.

> Peter Pan is a fictional character created by Scottish novelist and playwright J. M. Barrie. A free spirited and mischievous young boy who can fly and never grows up, Peter Pan spends his never-ending childhood having adventures on the mythical island of Neverland as the leader of the Lost Boys, interacting with fairies, pirates, mermaids, Native Americans, and occasionally ordinary children from the world outside Neverland. ~ Wikipedia Our first red flag is that “Pan” is the mischievous Greek god of sex, often depicted as a satyr with an erect phallus. It was a god happily adopted by the Romans with no changes.

The second is the endless depictions in plays and film and the third is the number of androgynous young women cast as “Peter Pan” in most of them.

If you add adaptations, the list grows logarithmically.

For instance, the 1987 movie Lost Boys is about teenage boy vampires who “never grow up”. It starred Corey Haim, Kiefer Sutherland and Corey Feldman. Haim would later die before his 40th birthday. His close friend and fellow child actor Corey Feldman stated that the official cause of “pneumonia” was a cover-up, that Haim’s conspicuous problems with drugs and alcohol were caused by trauma he received as a victim of Hollywood pedophiles.

> Corey Feldman has shared shocking details about the rampant sexual abuse he and other young actors were forced to endure during their years in Hollywood.
>
> In an interview with The Hollywood Reporter, Feldman discusses how he was repeatedly molested by adult males in the industry, saying these men would pass many young stars “back and forth to each other.”
>
> He also reveals that his closest friend, Corey Haim, was raped when he was just 11 by a producer, the start of a long cycle of sexual abuse that Feldman believes led to his friend’s problems with drugs and alcohol later in life.
>
> Haim would struggle with drugs up until his death in 2010 at the age of 38, a death that Feldman blames on the men who abused the actor.
>
> Feldman’s comments come just days after another former child star, Elijah Wood, also gave an interview talking about the pedophilia problem in Hollywood. ~ Daily Mail[283]

In an interview with ABC: Nightline,[284] Feldman would state: “The number 1 problem in Hollywood was, and is, and always will be pedophilia...that’s the biggest problem for children in this industry.” ...

> “It’s all done under the radar.” ...
>
> Host: “Nobody talks about it?”

> Feldman: "It's the big secret."
>
> Host: "It's that widespread?"
>
> Feldman: "Oh yeah. I was surrounded by them when I was 14 years old." ...
>
> "They all had their own power or connections to great power in this industry." ...
>
> "They've gotten away with it for so long that they feel they're above the law, and it has to stop."

Their manager was Chris Snyder who also managed River Phoenix. Phoenix died at 23 of a "drug overdose" on Halloween in 1993. More on that in Chapter 25.

Worst of all are the concerns surrounding Peter Pan's creator, Baronet Sir James Matthew Barrie.

The impetus for his "Lost Boys" were the children of Arthur and Sylvia Llewelyn-Davies, a middle class family with many bills to pay. Barrie began paying them and, in turn, spent an inordinate amount of time with the boys.

Barrie's idol was novelist George du Maurier who wrote the novel Trilby. In it a musician named Svengali hypnotizes a tone-deaf girl into singing greatness. Maurier was speaking from experience as he used the technique to seduce a 17 year old "nude model" of his.
[italics suspended]

> To Barrie, Trilby represented the very sort of mind-games and manipulation that appealed to his nature. He must also have suspected that du Maurier had written from experience. He wanted to connect with him, for the mesmeric magic to rub off on him too.
>
> But du Maurier was dead, from cancer, in 1896, just two years after his great literary success. So Barrie turned to the next best thing. He inveigled his way into the du Maurier family — and, in particular his daughter, Sylvia, married to Arthur Llewelyn Davies and mother of those boys...

Ever the stalker, he engineered a meeting with Sylvia and Arthur at a society dinner party, where he pronounced Sylvia “the most beautiful creature” he had ever seen. He noticed her squirreling away sweets, which she said were for her boys. Barrie was in.

Then, like a cuckoo in the nest, with generous gifts and ever-presence, he cleverly sidelined Arthur and wheedled his way into Sylvia’s affections. ...

What began with seduction of the du Maurier clan ended in abduction.

Humiliated by Sylvia’s friendship with Barrie, Arthur Llewelyn Davies died at 44, of a horribly disfiguring cancer of the face — followed shortly after by Sylvia herself, also at 44 of cancer.

Barrie, though no relation, simply assumed guardianship of the boys on the pretence that he had been about to marry their mother before her death.

What is extraordinary is that no one else in the du Maurier family made any claim on the orphans, not grandparents nor aunts and uncles. Perhaps they were indifferent; perhaps they thought Barrie a perfectly fitting father.

But to head off any objections, Barrie had Sylvia’s will to wave at them — which he had, with consummate calculation, forged in his favour. ...

Michael was ten when Sylvia died and the most handsome of all the brothers. Ten was the age Barrie considered perfection in a boy, and the two became very close, unhealthily so, according to many who witnessed their relationship.

For all his preferred image of innocence, walking by the Serpentine with a rapt child hanging on each hand, friends of the boys thought Barrie creepy. There was something “sinister about him”, one recalled. It wasn’t so much the fear of sexual abuse that concerned them but the domination he exercised over such young and impressionable minds and personalities.

> Nor did his power stop there. Barrie's malignant influence also extended into the rest of the du Maurier family. He struck up a firm friendship with Gerald, Sylvia's actor brother and the boys' uncle, insinuating himself into his household too.
>
> Four-year-old Daphne, the second of Gerald's three daughters — destined to be a writer every bit the equal of Barrie — was drawn into his make-believe world ...
>
> She adored her father with a passion that, returned by him, may have edged too close for comfort to incest. Or maybe, when she confessed to such things, she was simply making it up. With master-storytellers, you can never be quite sure.
>
> Not yet 16, she had an affair with a philandering cousin 22 years older, then, when sent away to a finishing school in France, claimed to be sleeping with the thirty-something lesbian principal. Later, there would be a marriage and children, but also lovers, two of them women.
>
> She claimed, not a little resentfully, her sexual orientation had been confused by her childhood part in Barrie's "boy-cult". He had got inside her mind, toying with her sense of self, just as he had the Llewelyn Davies boys and their mother. ~ Daily Mail[285]

Was there improper sexual contact at any time? There is evidence to that effect. Of the Llewelyn-Davies boys left to Barrie's care, Michael was his favorite.

> Barrie enjoyed taking photographs of the boys, sometimes in homemade costumes and often wearing no clothes at all. ...
>
> In June 1908, Barrie wrote this note to Michael for his eighth birthday, "I wish I could be with you and your candles. You can look on me as one of your candles, the one that burns badly — the greasy one that is bent in the middle. But still, hurray, I am Michael's candle. Dear Michael, I am very fond of you, but don't tell anybody." ~ She Knows[286]

Michael Llewelyn-Davies would grow to become a traumatically-confused homosexual who died in a questionable drowning incident.

> The Llewelyn-Davies boys ... suffered hugely because of the hold Barrie had over them. George went to war to escape his influence and was killed in the trenches in France in 1915. Jack suffered from depression.
>
> Michael drowned clasping a fellow undergraduate, another "lost boy", it seems, in a pool near Oxford in 1921 in what was described at the time as a tragic bathing accident, but may well have been a suicide pact. ...
>
> Peter also killed himself, beneath the wheels of a train. ~ Mail[287]

"Suicide pact" is a bit of a stretch when it appears Michael's "Lost Boy" friend survived.

Placing pedophiles on pedestals for their victims to adore and admire is something the Pedocracy takes perverse pleasure in. If they can place their pervert in front of families and children for adoration, the Luciferians enjoy it even more.

Baronet Sir Barrie has been immortalized again and again with the never-ending depictions of "Neverland". Books, movies, plays, documentaries, comics, TV shows and even video games have all promoted the paedophile's plots.

Not content to just immortalize his fantasies, the entertainment industry lionized Barrie, himself, in the 2004 film Finding Neverland. It was a re-write of reality that would've made Joseph Goebbels proud. It was given an Academy Award and the altruistic hero, Baronet Barrie, was played by Johnny Depp.

As a sequel to the many Peter Pan films, Walt Disney Productions hired Steven Spielberg to help write and direct Hook in 1991.

Robin Williams portrayed Peter Banning/Peter Pan. In 2014, Williams was found dead of apparent suicide at 63.

> Williams had "a recent increase in paranoia" and was sleeping in a stepson's bedroom because of insomnia and anxiety associated with Parkinson's, according to the coroner's report. ...

> Williams was found in a seated position on the floor of the bedroom with a belt secured around his neck and the other end of the belt wedged between a closet door and door frame.
>
> ... according to Williams' wife, is that he may have learned of the suicide technique from a movie role in which a character Williams portrayed died from autoerotic asphyxiation. ~ CNN[288]

The movie was ironically titled World's Greatest Dad (2009). In it, Williams happens upon the body of his teenage son who died while attempting autoerotic asphyxiation; the practice of achieving an ultimate sexual high by restricting the flow of oxygen while masturbating.

Hook also starred Bob Hoskins, perhaps best known as the alcoholic private detective Eddie Valiant in the 1988 "adult" Disney live action / animated film Who Framed Roger Rabbit?

In the film, as Hoskins exits a public restroom after relieving himself, he walks past graffiti on the wall that is only visible for a second: [289]

> For a good time, call Allyson Wonderland.

"Baby Burlesks"

Alexander Nabokov mocked Hollywood as a secret hotbed of pedophilia, calling out the supposedly satirical "Baby Burlesks" [sic] — short films of toddler Shirley Temple by Jack Hays and Charles Lamont in 1932/33.

Extreme, perverse sexual innuendo abounds in these "satires" where Temple frequently played a child prostitute.

In Glad Rags to Riches (1933), a male toddler suitor bites an oversized pickle which squirts Temple in the face.

In War Babies (1932), a boy in diapers waits for milk from a bottle above him to squirt down. When it spills and covers his face, he begins to cry. Temple shows up with a rubber glove to put to a keg of "Sweet Milk" whilst a man makes noises off camera that are a cross between a "moo" and a moan.

In other productions, Temple plays a child in an orphanage or a runaway — prime prey for pedophiles.

In Poor Little Rich Girl (1936), Temple caresses and serenades her on-screen father (actor Michael Whalen), singing “Marry me and let me be your wife...”

In Captain January (1936), co-star Buddy Epson thrusts her head towards his groin during a dance scene.

In Curly Top (1935), a millionaire benefactor sings about his enchanting young ward that he places in his “Wonderland”; the movie was banned in Denmark for its obvious pedophilic innuendo.

Satanic Serendipity?

In 1918, Vladimir Lenin forced Russia to adopt the Gregorian calendar created by Jesuit Christopher Clavius. This moved Nobakov’s birthday from April 10th to April 22nd but he chose to celebrate it on April 23rd because it was the birthday of both Shirley Temple and “William Shakespeare”.

Shakespeare is believed by experts and Luciferians alike to actually have been gnostic Freemason Sir Francis Bacon[290]; the man who edited the 1611 Authorized Version of the Bible for King James I of England.[291]

In a cryptic post-script to Lolita, Nabokov claimed he originally wanted to name the subject of desire after Joan d’Arc who was burned alive by the Roman Catholic college of Sorbonne for wearing men’s clothing and armor.[292] Was this an attempt to project his own victimized experiences as a boy?

Nobakov’s effete aristocrat uncle, Vasily Ivanovich Rukavishnikov was a member of the Czarist foreign service and maintained a posh property in Rome. He may also have been the pedophile who sexually abused Nobakov.

“Uncle Ruka” shared so many similarities with “Humbert Humbert” as to be beyond coincidence; particularly the age differences between Humbert and Lolita vice Ruka and Nabokov.

According to Nabokov scholar Joanne Morgan, the controversial author had extreme disgust for Sigmund Freud and his “Oedipus Complex” which Nabokov saw as pedophile subterfuge and validation.

In yet another quirk of satanic serendipity, “Freud” and “pedophile” would be placed in a sentence decades afterward.

Sir Clement Raphael Freud (1924 – 2009) was the grandson of Sigmund Freud.

> ...he moved to the United Kingdom from Germany as a child and later worked as a prominent chef and food writer before becoming known to a wider audience as a television and radio personality. He was elected as a Liberal Member of Parliament in 1973, retaining his seat until 1987, when he received a knighthood. In 2016, seven years after he died, three women made public allegations of child sexual abuse and rape by Freud, which led to police investigations.[4] ~ Wikipedia[293]

The convenience of the “police investigation” occurring after the death of the powerful, prominent pedophile who was also a media personality and Member of Parliament was a circumstance repeated so often as to almost have no exceptions.

Being wealthy and powerful, Freud kept a resort villa in picturesque Praia da Luz, Portugal.

By coincidence, it was that same villa where 4 year old Madeleine McCann went missing in 2007 while her “working class” parents Gerald and Kate were on holiday.

The “coincidence” goes even further as e-mails were exchanged between the Parliamentarian pedophile and the McCanns.

> A woman who says she was a victim of Freud claims she told police about his links to the family, but nothing was done. ...
>
> “Nobody else would have thought Freud capable of abuse and rape but he did it to me.”
>
> “I’m angry police were dismissive of my information.”

> “My son wrote to the police with my account and concerns over Freud in connection to the McCanns, but he never got any response.”
>
> “I have a six year old granddaughter, a young girl like Madeline. If you have a something you feel needs to be looked at you have to tell someone. That’s what I did.”
>
> “That’s why I contacted the police, when I read Kate McCann’s account, I wanted the detectives to know what I knew about Clement Freud.” ~ The Mirror[294]

It would seem that the ensuing “police investigation” will not be a comprehensive one.

More on Madeleine in Chapter 26.

Stockholm Syndrome

If Vladimir Nabokov wanted to expose pedophilia as a victim of it, why not be more overt, more obvious?

Being victimized by a pedophile causes extreme trauma to a child. They are confused, pleased to be the object of apparent desire but horrified at the physical violation and often injured by it.

Without understanding, rehabilitation or a source of solace outside of themselves (usually found in a spiritual faith) their experiences poison the mind. If their abuser is a member of the clergy, they are robbed even of this.

Unable to deal with what happened to them, many attempt to erase the crimes with alcohol or narcotics. When this ultimately fails them, they take their own lives.

A small number go in another direction. Projecting themselves into the place of their tormentor (“Stockholm Syndrome”), they become pedophiles, themselves.

This terrible occurrence is actually cultivated by the keepers of the Devil’s Simulation and encouraged to happen to the child as quickly as possible so that they can become agents of the Pedocracy and used to lure in new victims.

Like some terrible virus, pedophilia metastasizes within each victim turning them into the next generation of vampires who are then enlisted into the ranks of the secret cabal of Luciferian Elite.

Chapter 7

No Laughing Matter

1963: First allegations of predatory pedophilia made against English DJ, television and radio personality Sir James Wilson Vincent "Jimmy" Savile (1926 – 2011), OBE, KCSG.

No action taken.

Savile leading the Lochaber Highland Games in 2006. Wikimedia Commons

The summary on Savile from Wikipedia states:

> Savile was conscripted to work in the coal mines as a Bevin Boy during the Second World War, reportedly sustaining spinal injuries, aged 14.[9] He began a career playing records in, and later managing, dance halls, and was said to have been the first disc jockey to use twin turntables to keep music in constant play. His media career started as a disc jockey at Radio Luxembourg in 1958 and on Tyne Tees Television in 1960, and he developed a reputation for eccentricity and flamboyance. At the BBC, he presented the first edition of Top of the Pops in 1964 and broadcast on Radio 1 from 1968. From 1975 until 1994, he presented Jim'll Fix It*, a popular television programme in which he arranged for the wishes of viewers, mainly children, to come true. During his lifetime, he was noted for fund-raising and supporting charities and hospitals, in particular Stoke Mandeville Hospital in Aylesbury, Leeds General Infirmary and Broadmoor Hospital in Berkshire. In 2009 he was* > described by The Guardian as a “prodigious philanthropist”[10] and was honoured for his charity work.[11] He was awarded the OBE in 1971 and was knighted in 1990. ~ Wikipedia[295]

To commit to the Devil’s Simulation is to be protected for your lifetime.

After that, you’re on your own.

For those willing to defile the innocent in order to have access to power, a pattern emerges; connections in government and law enforcement insure free and unfettered access to the world’s children with little fear of reprisal.

Such was the case for Sir Jimmy Savile, OBE, KCSG.

> The earliest known complaint about Savile dates from 1963 and it is one of eight complaints that were never registered at the time they were made. This one occurred just as his television career was really beginning to take off. A male victim told his local police officer in Cheshire that Savile had raped him. He made the complaint the day after the assault. The officer told the victim to “forget about it” and that they should “move on”.
>
> The officer did not record a report of what the victim had said — and so there was no investigation into the DJ.
>
> There was a similar second incident — this time after the DJ had begun presenting Top of the Pops. A man told the Metropolitan Police that his girlfriend had been assaulted during a recording of the programme. An officer told him that he “could be arrested for making such allegations”. No report appears to have been logged.
>
> The HMIC says that, to its knowledge, complainants went to three other forces in England and Wales — Merseyside, the then Royal Ulster Constabulary and West Yorkshire — but failed to get police to take them seriously. The Police Service of Northern Ireland, the RUC’s successor, says that it checked all records and could not find any report about Savile. ~ BBC[296]

A year later, an officer with the Metropolitan Police Service of London, Headquartered at Scotland Yard, took a report that Savile had committed crimes at the Duncroft School for emotionally-troubled girls in Surrey.

Again, no action was taken.

The true story of what happened at Duncroft is beyond belief. Savile was directed there by pedophile powers and turned loose upon the girls interned in the government facility to rape and abuse at will. The young teenagers — sent to the facility because they needed compassion, help and a safe haven — were easy prey. They had only one barrier between them and Savile, the Duncroft staff who all turned a blind eye. Savile abused, violated and raped the girls in their rooms, in the intensive care infirmary, even in the principal's office. He actually stayed the night on several occasions.

It is not known if Savile had meals catered to each crime scene, but it's certainly plausible.

Perhaps his ultimate show of arrogance was to write in the Duncroft visitor's log — called — and fell in love with it all!!!

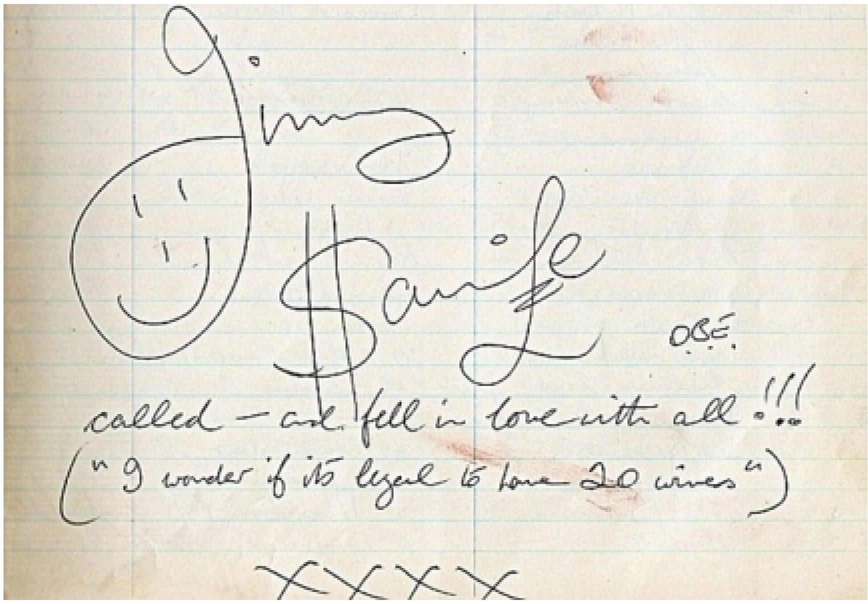
("I wonder if it's legal to love 20 wives")

If they're 12 years old and unwilling, one would think not.

It was signed as Savile signed everything; with a smiley face in the "J" a $ for the "S" and £ for the "l".

But for Savile, it was about much more than money.

Not only did he rape the teenage patients under government care with impunity, after his death (when it was safe to circulate victims' complaints) remaining staff continued to live free of any interference by law enforcement or the justice system, including Headmistress Margaret Jones.



Jimmy Savile OBE.

called – and fell in love with all!!!

("I wonder if its legal to have 20 wives")

XXXX

> A woman who was abused at Duncroft aged 14, said she was furious that there are to be no charges. She said: 'It is shameful. Teachers knew what that monster was doing.'
>
> One former pupil, one of three girls photographed with the star in 1972, has said: 'Jimmy treated Duncroft like a paedophile sweet shop.' ~ Daily Mail[297]

Also after Savile's death, the taxpayer-funded British Broadcasting Corporation conducted an independent media investigation into the accusations of child sex abuse. It cost £200,000 but the BBC decided to do nothing with the information gleaned. When prompted to at least release the findings, the committee led by former Sky News head Nick Pollard refused.[298]

Outrage over these and many, many other unrestrained criminal activities forced Metro Police to initiate a special task force (after Savile's death, of course) which they called Operation: YEWTREE.

Even in this, the cops mocked the citizenry.

The yew tree was (is) highly revered by Celt and Saxon pagans as representative of sex magick; "fertility", "regeneration" and "immortality".[299] Often trees within "sacred" groves were pruned, shaved or hacked to increase a phallic resemblance.

> It was, therefore, probably the oak tree that was the most revered of all tree species – particularly when it was being parasitised by the sacred mistletoe (Viscum album), as in such instances it would be seen as one of their deities' chosen trees (Altman, 2000). The oak would thus be found abundantly within sacred groves frequented by the druids (used to worship deities such as Baal, who was the god of fire), where ceremonies religious in nature (including – at times very gruesome – human sacrifice), communal gatherings (for the purpose of learning and socialising), and legal discussions would be held (Altman, 2000; Cusack, 2011; de Cleene & Lejeune, 1999; Hooke, 2010; Macculloch, 1911). In fact, this is a common theme amongst all forms of Paganism, as trees usually display their sacredness through ritualistic practice. Other tree species, such as yew (Taxus baccata) were also to be found within the groves, and in many instances these groves of species including oak and yew would also be located near to a river or other water source (Cusack, 2011). Worship, in particular, would not be held indoors, but instead amongst these sacred groves (Monaghan, 2014), where no temple walls would have been built around such sacred locations that were often deep within the woodlands and away from settlements (Hageneder, 2000).
>
> Curiously, the word druid may even translate to "oak men", as may the druids' word for sanctuary originate from the Latin word nemus*, which translates to mean "grove" (Haberman, 2013). In turn, this explains the name of the goddess of the sacred groves of the Celts: Nemetona ("goddess of the sacred grove") (Forest, 2014). In Sanskrit, druid literally translates to "tree knowledge", where "dru" means tree and "wid" means knowledge (Hageneder, 2000). Of course, within these Celtic groves, other deities were worshipped, including Taranis (Cusack, 2011), who – much like other European thunder and storm gods (including Jupiter, Perkūnas, Perun, Thor, and Zeus – some are discussed later) – was represented by the oak tree (Forest, 2014; Gardiner, 2007). ~ Arboriculture*[300]

The connection between druidism and the language of the Roman Empire is not coincidental.

Many will be shocked to learn that the tree grove sex and blood rituals condemned by the Bible are still carried out to this day.

There are a multitude of examples but one of interest can be found in Judges 6. The Israelites had been subdued and tyrannized by the Midianites in response to their own wickedness. They cried out to YHWH for delivery and an angel was sent to Gideon, a young man from the tribe of Manasseh. To show his loyalty in response of the call, Gideon sacrificed to YHWH in Levitical fashion and the Angel of the Lord showed the sacrifice approved by consuming it with fire.

That night, Gideon was told by the Lord to use a strong young bull and tear down the altar of Baal built by his own father as well as the Asherah pole next to it (KJV; “grove”).

Asherah was (is) the Canaanite mother goddess of fertility; Semiramis / Isis / Columbia / “Mary”. She was the consort of the Sumerian god Anu and the Ugaritic god El (though not to be confused with the Hebrew / Semitic “El”, YHWH).

When the Canaanites realized what Gideon had done, they sought to rebuild the altar of Baal and slaughter the young man on it to renew their commitment.

In response, Gideon’s father Joash repented of his past involvement and joined his son to defy them.

> When the men of the city got up early in the morning, the altar of Baal was torn down, the Asherah pole beside it was cut down, and the second bull had been offered on the new altar that had been built.
>
> They said to each other, “Who has done this?”
>
> When they had inquired and asked, they responded, “Gideon son of Joash has done this.”
>
> Then the men of the city said to Joash, “Bring out your son so that he may die, for he tore down the altar of Baal and cut down the Asherah pole beside it.”

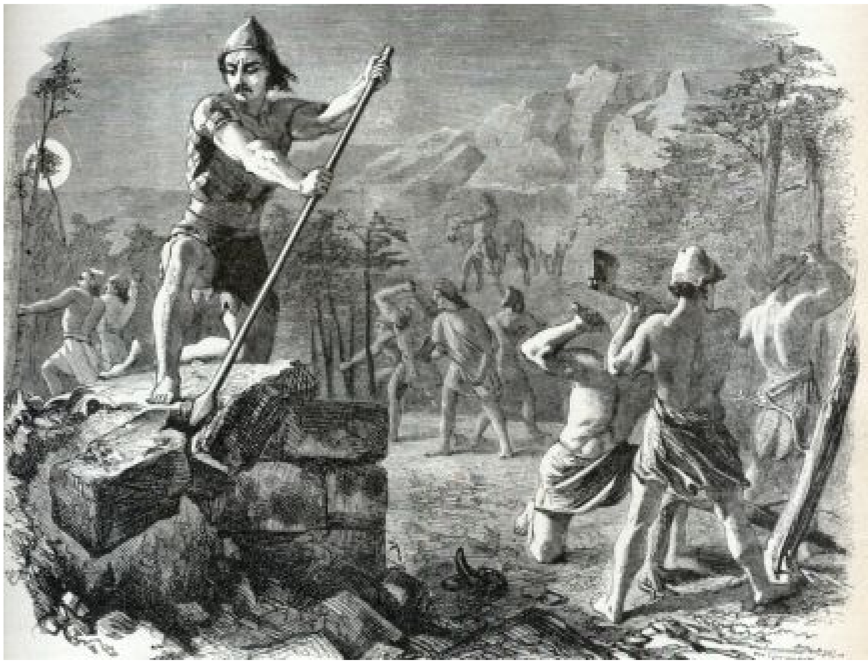
> Joash then said to all who stood against him, “Would you plead for Baal? Would you save him? Whoever fights for him will be killed by morning. If Baal is a god, let him fight for himself, for someone has torn down his altar.” Therefore on that day he called him Jerub-Baal*, saying, “Let Baal fight him, for he tore down the altar of Baal.”* ~ Judges 6:28-32 (Modern English)



Gideon inspires the Israelites to tear down the groves and altars of the Devil’s Simulation.

The event was a catalyst for war. The Midianites were joined by Amalekites and other Canaanite tribes but Gideon’s tribe of Manasseh followed in Joash’s footprints, repented of their Baal worship and rallied to him. They were joined by warriors from the tribes of Asher, Zebulun, and Naphtali and overwhelmingly crushed the Baal worshippers, throwing off the Midianite yoke of oppression.

None of this, however, was in the minds of the Metro Police; only that they would let their fellow Baal worshippers rest assured that the servants of Asherah would protect them from Operation: YEWTREE.

The secret Baal worshippers at Metro Police announced that they had found 666 suspects had abused children within institutions.[301]

Are you laughing yet?

To date, YEWTREE arrests include Elvis impersonator Gary Glitter, Rolf Harris (a painter) and Geoffrey Wheeler, an Open University contractor who sometimes worked for the BBC.

Scotland Yard always gets its man...as long as they're no-one of consequence.

Meanwhile, Sir Savile's pedophile friends and connections ran through the highest levels of British government.

As a result of the "30-Year [secrecy] Rule" expiring on the Thatcher administration, some "intimate" e-mails between Sir Savile and Prime Minister Margaret Hilda Roberts, Baroness Thatcher, have come to light — but only a few. The rest remain sealed despite the expiration of the 30-Year Rule.

It seems Savile was the Iron Lady's favorite party guy; she spent 11 consecutive New Year's Eves with the serial pedophile. They frequently lunched at the culturally-iconic Chequers Pub together. Thatcher personally oversaw Savile's Knighthood.

A hand-written note sent on February, 1980, from Sir Savile to Prime Minister Thatcher states effusively —

> My girl patients pretended to be madly jealous and wanted to know what you wore and what you ate.[302]

He used the same signature as when he signed the Duncroft register, before proceeding to rape and terrorize emotionally troubled pre-teens.

Given that the closest Savile ever came to the medical profession was to use it for access to the most vulnerable children in Britain's socialized medical care, it seems clear (along with the refusal to release the bulk of Savile / Thatcher correspondence) that at minimum Thatcher was aware of Savile's monstrous proclivities.

However, what we know of the Devil's Simulation makes it a foregone conclusion that Baroness Thatcher was a full participant. She could not have made it to become one of the longest tenured Prime Ministers in British history, otherwise.

The Duncroft Approved School in Surrey was not the only government medical facility Savile had free and unfettered access to.

He also raided and raped the young patients at Stoke Mandeville Hospital in Buckinghamshire.

Given the extent to which Savile was able to enter these facilities, commit heinous crimes on children, then leave without thought nor care of interference, it's clear that he had the full co-operation of England's socialized National Healthcare Service.

What is also obvious is that powerful pedophiles in British government were steering the monster specifically to these locations; having already cleared them for his activities.

Victim reports from Stoke Mandeville show that Savile wasn't just a serial child rapist: he was an active member of the Devil's Simulation.
[italics suspended except in the original]

> Jimmy Savile beat and raped a 12-year-old girl during a secret satanic ritual in a hospital.
>
> The perverted star wore a hooded robe and mask as he abused the terrified victim in a candle-lit basement.
>
> He also chanted "Hail Satan" in Latin as other paedophile devil worshippers joined in and assaulted the girl at Stoke Mandeville Hospital in Buckinghamshire. The attack, which happened in 1975, shines a sinister new light on the former DJ's 54-year reign of terror.
>
> Savile, who died aged 84 in October 2011, is now Britain's worst sex offender after police revealed he preyed on at least 450 victims aged eight to 47.
>
> The girl kept her torment hidden for nearly 20 years before finally opening up to therapist Valerie Sinason.

Dr. Sinason told the Sunday Express she first spoke to the victim in 1992. “She had been a patient at Stoke Mandeville in 1975 when Savile was a regular visitor.”

“She recalled being led into a room that was filled with candles on the lowest level of the hospital, somewhere that was not regularly used by staff. Several adults were there, including Jimmy Savile who, like the others, was wearing a robe and a mask.”

“She recognised him because of his distinctive voice and the fact that his blond hair was protruding from the side of the mask. He was not the leader but he was seen as important because of his fame.”

“She was molested, raped and beaten and heard words that sounded like ‘Ave Satanas’, a Latinised version of ‘Hail Satan’, being chanted. There was no mention of any other child being there and she cannot remember how long the attack lasted but she was left extremely frightened and shaken.”

Savile was a volunteer porter and fundraiser at the hospital between 1965 and 1988 and had his own quarters there.

Five years after the hospital attack, he abused a second victim during another black mass ceremony held at a house on a wealthy London street.

The woman was 21 at the time and was made to attend an orgy, which later took on a darker twist.

Dr. Sinason, director of the Clinic for Dissociative Studies in London, said: “A second victim approached me in 1993. She said she had been ‘lent out’ as a supposedly consenting prostituted woman at a party in a London house in 1980.”

“The first part of the evening started off with an orgy but half-way through some of the participants left.”

“Along with other young women, the victim was shepherded to wait in another room before being brought back to find Savile in a master of ceremonies kind of role with a group wearing robes and masks. She > too heard Latin chanting and instantly recognised satanist regalia. Although the girl was a young adult, who was above the age of consent, she had suffered a history of sexual abuse and was extremely vulnerable."

>
> Both victims contacted Dr. Sinason, who is president of the Institute of Psychotherapy and Disability, while she was involved in a Department of Health-funded study into sexual abuse committed during rituals and religious ceremonies. She said: "Both these witnesses did speak to police at the time but were vulnerable witnesses and on encountering any surprise or shock did not dare to give all the details."
>
> The police took no action. ...
>
> "Neither girl knew one another, they lived in different parts of the country and contacted me a year apart yet their experiences are very similar." ...
>
> Dr. Sinason has passed details of the abuse to officers from the Savile inquiry, Operation Yewtree. ~ Express[303]

That meant that the "details" have been dutifully disposed of by the oath-breaking cops at London Metro.

Is it that simple?

Was Jimmy Savile just a "satanist"?

So far, it's clear that the Roman Catholic Church took over from the Roman Empire as the caretakers of the Devil's Simulation. Were there more clues than just Savile speaking Latin and approximating a "Mass" while he raped prepubescent girls?

The truth seemed as elusive as a Scotland Yard investigation but the first clue arrived upon Savile's death in 2011.

After his gold coffin was paraded around Leeds, "Sir Jimmy" was given a full complement of Royal Marines to carry it into the funeral ... held at St. Anne's Roman Catholic Cathedral there in Leeds.

Two years later, it quietly emerged that Britain’s top Roman Catholic cleric, Cardinal Keith O’Brien, was a dear friend.

It was an association that ran decades and included Savile’s mother.[304] Was Jimmy Savile selected for his role long before he was ever famous?

The association of Savile and Cardinal O’Brien includes pedophile predation by the priests, as well.

> The pair first met in the 70s, when O’Brien was a priest in Kilsyth, North Lanarkshire – and worked with a friend of Savile’s mum.
>
> Another priest at Kilsyth at the time has been suspended following claims of abuse against two young victims. ~ The Mirror[305]

That same year, O’Brien was forced to step down when no fewer than 4 priests came forward claiming he had touched or propositioned them for homosexual gratification, often during their shared evening prayers.[306]

Before the full extent of Savile’s secret outrages were known, the International Business Times leaked the truth from Catholic sources.

> Jimmy Savile was a practicing Catholic but this was omitted from most of his obituaries.
>
> Jimmy Savile was a devout Catholic who attended Mass regularly, it has emerged.
>
> In the wake of Savile’s death last year, a Catholic newspaper even questioned a “conspiracy of silence” surrounding the TV presenter’s religion at the time of his death.
>
> The Catholic Herald noted that few newspapers mentioned that he was a practising Catholic, who attended mass on a regular basis, when writing their obituaries of the DJ.
>
> The Herald asked: “Why not mention that an important part of his life was attending daily Mass? There’s a deep dedication in the life of a man who gives away 90 per cent of everything he earns and so tirelessly does all the other things he did.

> “You’d think that an obituarist would want to ask a simple question: where did all that come from? It’s almost as though they couldn’t bear to accept that the answer was his Catholicism: even that Catholicism itself could ever be the source of actual human goodness.”[307]

The piece from the Herald has since been taken down[308] and re-written.[309]

The original headline from columnist William Oddie was —

> Jimmy Savile’s Obituaries Mentioned His Charity Work But Why The Conspiracy Of Silence About His Faith?

The answer to Mr. Oddie’s question is: because media and government are as beholden to Rome today as they were in the Middle Ages and Rome controls the abominations that open access to the Devil’s Simulation.

Chapter 8

Spotlighting

20 April 1967: Father John Joseph Geoghan is transferred from Blessed Sacrament Parish in Saugus, Massachusetts to St. Paul's parish in Hingham, Massachusetts without explanation to parishioners from his superiors. Within a year, he is caught by a Hingham father molesting his young son. The man complained to Church authorities. Geoghan was sent to Seton Institute, Baltimore for "counseling" and then transferred to St. Mary's parish in Melrose, Massachusetts where he molested all four boys belonging to single mother Joanne Mueller.

After 40 years of raping and abusing children, the complaints over Geoghan finally produced action: Pope Saint John Paul II defrocked the priest in 1998. He had had his run, he was now cleared as a sacrificial scapegoat.

Three years later, in 2001, the Spotlight "deep investigation" team of the Boston Globe conducted a series of reports that detailed Geoghan's decades of outrages.

The Globe was dominated by Jesuit-trained Catholics like Spotlight team lead Walter "Robbie" Robinson. Was it courage that instigated the reports? — A desire to purge the Archdiocese of its pedophile priests?

In 2015, Spotlight would get the spotlight of Hollywood to further prove that media controlled by Knights of Malta was actually trustworthy — especially when given to Jews to steward.

Martin "Marty" Baron was a Jewish circuit-riding editor, bouncing from paper to paper, working miracles for their flagging reputations.

In July of 2001, Baron succeeded Notre Dame-educated Matthew Storin as Executive Editor of the Globe. In his very first staff meeting, Baron recommended the Spotlight team hone in on Father John J. Geoghan.

Was this upstart outsider Jew playing Superman and forcing the Jesuit-trained Catholics of the Globe to do their jobs? He certainly had the resume for it.

> Baron was born in Tampa, Florida, to Jewish emigrants from Israel. He attended Berkeley Preparatory School and worked on the school's student paper. He matriculated at Lehigh University where he was editor of The Brown and White student newspaper. He earned both a Bachelor of Arts in Journalism and MBA with honors in four years, graduating in 1976.[1] He had received special permission to take graduate classes as an undergraduate.[2] Baron is a fluent Spanish speaker.[3]
>
> The year he graduated from college Baron began working for The Miami Herald*; he moved to* The Los Angeles Times in 1979, and to The New York Times in 1996.[4] He returned to the Herald as executive editor in 2000 and led coverage of numerous key stories, including Elián González's return to Cuba and the 2000 election. ~ Wikipedia[310]

Sadly, the true story is as corrupt and cynical as all the others you've read so far. Elián González was an immigrant Cuban child ripped from his family at gunpoint by the Jesuit-trained Bill Clinton Administration and deported. As his lead on the story showed, Marty Baron was the perfect Jewish front-man for Rome to use to help her puppets in propaganda promote the idea that they were true journalists.

Boston and surrounding dioceses had suffered for being so openly controlled by Rome. Serial predators like Father Paul Shanley and Father James Porter had raped and abused hundreds of children and they were carefully enabled by constant transfers to new pastures once parishioner ire was raised in an old one.

By 2003, the Jesuit-trained Roman Catholic Attorney General of Boston, Thomas Francis Reilly,[xxi] was forced to admit that thousands of children had been abused by Catholic clergy in his district over the previous 60 years.

> At least 789 children and probably more than 1,000 have been sexually abused by 250 priests and other church workers in the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Boston since 1940, according to a 16-month investigation by the Massachusetts attorney general that was made public today. ~ The New York Times[311]

One can assume the real numbers stagger the senses, especially when expanding the parameters of the locations and dates.

Father James Porter started molesting children even before his ordination — about the same time Alfred Kinsey was in full swing with his agenda out of Indiana University.

Like all before or since, Porter raped children with impunity and when he was done, he was released from his vows and allowed to settled down. Even “user-edited” Wikipedia’s summary is honest and horrific in its proof of the systemic corruption that is the Devil’s Simulation —

> Porter started both training for the priesthood and molesting children at a young age; he abused his earliest known victim in 1953, the summer before he entered seminary.[2] He was ordained in 1959 and became a priest of the diocese of Fall River, Massachusetts.
>
> Porter was assigned to St. Mary’s parochial grammar school in North Attleboro, Massachusetts in April 1960 and put in charge of the altar boys. Porter gained a reputation there as a child molester, but no action was taken against him by the Catholic Church until 1963, by which time at least four parents had complained to his superiors about his inappropriate behavior. Rather than contact the police, however, Church officials moved Porter to a parish in Fall River, where further complaints about his behavior surfaced.[1] In the early 1960s, more than 60 North Attleboro children were sexually victimized by James Porter, and nearly 100 in southeastern Massachusetts.[3]
>
> In 1964, Porter was arrested for molesting a 13-year-old boy and sent to a mental institution for 13 months [outrageously light sentence]. Once released, he was quickly reassigned to another parish, the first of many such reassignments over the years. He was shuffled into two > more parishes before more accusations piled up and he was hospitalized again in 1967, this time to a hospital run by fellow priests who practiced holistic psychotherapy upon its patients, many of whom were clergy members suffering from psychological problems. Porter's "problem" was not unique among the hospital's patients; two of them were later imprisoned for abusing, between them, hundreds of children.

— Punishment for raping kids: receive "therapy" from other priests on why taking the innocence of children is not acceptable. —

> Porter was released after a few months, once again declared cured, and given probationary assignments in parishes in Texas, New Mexico and Minnesota, all of which included access to children. Complaints surfaced by the dozen against Porter, but none of them resulted in disciplinary action beyond his being moved from post to post.[1]
>
> In 1973, Porter wrote a letter to Pope Paul VI requesting to be released from the priesthood, in which he admitted molesting children across five states. The Pope granted his request and, in 1974, Porter gave up his collar.[4] He married, and eventually settled in Minnesota. He and his wife had four children.

Like a Mafia hit-man, Porter destroyed countless lives than simply "opted out". He was allowed to do so by Rome and her dutiful public servants through a multiplicity of States where he had raped children.

Paul Shanely was a Jesuit-styled "community organizer"; "hippie street preacher" by day, child rapist by night.

At the culmination of his 40 years of terror (which included the rape and abuse of toddlers), the elderly Shanely was finally jailed in 2005. After serving the minimum sentence, he was released. Even at 86 years old, victims were infuriated that he should be returned to society.[xxii]

> Attorney Mitchell Garabedian, who represented some of those men in lawsuits against the Archdiocese of Boston, said his clients are upset that Shanley is getting out of prison.

> "Unfortunately, there is no mechanism in place which will prevent Paul Shanley from sexually abusing once again," Garabedian[xxiii] said. "When it comes to a sexual abuser abusing an innocent child, the abuser can be 35 or 95 – there's no age limit." ~ The Press Herald[312]

Shanley was billed by both Catholic leadership and media like the Associated Press and Fox News as having a "special ministry for teens":

> For over 20 years, the Rev. Paul Shanley established a reputation as a "street priest," setting up a ministry for runaways, drug addicts, drifters and teen-agers struggling with sexuality.
>
> But Shanley apparently had another side.[313]

One can't be sure what the "other side" of targeting "teen-agers struggling with sexuality" is but it wasn't something Shanley did of his own accord: he was ordered to it.

> Newly released documents show he had an extended history of sexual-misconduct allegations. He publicly defended sex between men and boys and was even at the sexuality conference that saw the founding of the North American Man Boy Love Association.
>
> Among the documents turned over by the Roman Catholic archdiocese of Boston in relation to a lawsuit recently filed against it was the Feb. 12, 1979, issue of a publication called GaysWeek that includes an article titled "Men & Boys." ...
>
> The GaysWeek article described a meeting of 150 people in Boston on the topic of man-boy love. It said many speakers representing various religions endorsed such relationships — including Shanley, who was there as a representative of then-Cardinal of Boston Humberto Medeiros' program for outreach to sexual minorities. ...
>
> The North American Man Boy Love Association apparently was formed at the end of the conference by 32 men and two teen-agers. There was no indication in the article that Shanley was among them. [314]

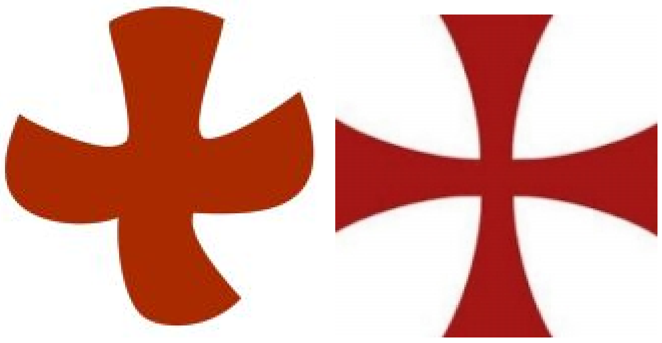
Yet, we are to believe that Father Paul Shanley went from being under orders to lead “Cardinal of Boston Humberto Medeiros’ program for outreach to sexual minorities” to helping found NAMBLA on his own accord.

Shanley’s NAMBLA co-founder was Thomas Reeves, a college professor who lived and worked in Boston. Like Shanely, Jesuit Father Richard McSorely and many other Catholic clergy, Reeves was a far-Left “community organizer” specializing in issues like homosexuality, AIDS, race or the Vietnam draft.

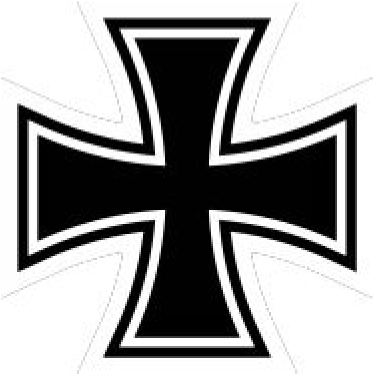
Reeves, however, was an ordained Methodist minister. He was born in Nashville, Tennessee and pastored a church in Blue Springs, Alabama. However, he felt pulled to the Catholic haven of Boston to settle.

Reeves wasn’t a strict Methodist, in fact, he was a member of Taizé; a French ecumenist movement that encouraged Protestants to merge with their “mother” Catholic Church.[315]

Any resemblance between the Croix de Taizé and the gnostic Maltese Cross used by Catholic Knights to denote their allegiance is purely coincidental.



Croix de Taizé Templar Maltese Cross



The same “coincidence” can be found in the Teutonic “Iron Cross”; a military decoration founded by Friedrich Wilhelm III of Prussia in March 1813 and proudly awarded to many a Nazi during WWII for their service to ... “Germany”.

In 2012, Thomas Reeves died of heart failure in another Catholic haven city he liked to spend time in: Baltimore. Well-wishers were requested to donate to the St. Joseph’s orphanage in Port-au-Prince, Haiti. NAMBLA would proudly proclaim of him —

> From 1976 to 2001, Reeves taught at Boston’s historically black Roxbury Community College, where he became a full professor of social sciences and director of the school’s Caribbean Focus program. Tom had a particular interest in the plight of Haiti, writing and speaking frequently about the country and joining a number of delegations and humanitarian missions, for which he was honored by the Haitian government. At Tom’s invitation, the then recently-overthrown Haitian president Jean-Bertrand Aristide spoke at the college and received an honorary degree in April 1992.[316]

Jean-Bertrand Aristide was, himself, a Jesuit priest[317] who usurped power in 1990. Eight months later he was overthrown by a military coup.

Haitians had had a belly-full of Jesuit seditions (what the order does best). Despite having thorough control of “mainstream” media, a few examples surface through the years.

For instance, in 1964 the Company was threatened with expulsion after two Jesuits were arrested with documents deemed vital to the national security of Haiti.[318] Although vicious Roman Catholic dictator François “Papa Doc” Duvalier did expel the Jesuits later that year, he would sign a Concordat two years afterward which granted him the privilege of Investiture — the ability to choose Bishops and Cardinals apparently loyal to him.[319] It was a power that caused wars several times through England’s history (for more read Secret History). In return, Rome maintained ultimate control over Haiti and continued to allow Duvalier to use his Tonton Macoute secret police to murder and terrorize Haitians.

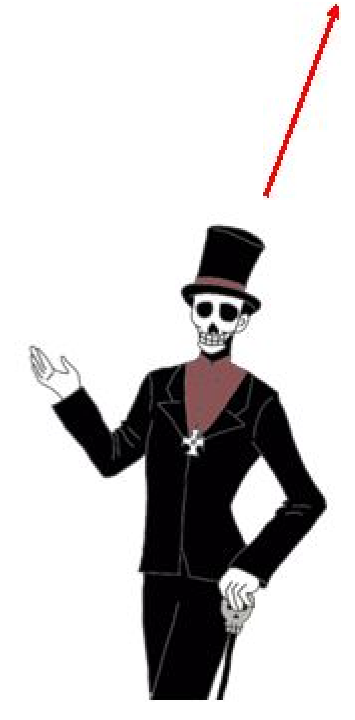
Duvalier applied theater to control through fear and often dressed as “Baron Samedi”, the Haitian spirit of lust and the dead. In an autocratic tyranny, tracking victims is impossible but the total number of dead at the hands of François Duvalier may go as high as 60,000.

Tonton Macoute is a Voodoo / Creole tradition translated “Uncle Knapsack”: a tuxedo-dressed demon who kidnaps children.

When François “Papa Doc” Duvalier died in 1971, he left his son Jean-Claude “Baby Doc” Duvalier in his place. However, “Baby Doc” was not nearly as focused as his murderous father. He turned to what he knew to be the source of power — Rome — and gave up his father’s Investiture in favor of open Vatican approval of his regime.



Apparently even Baron Samedi is also a Knight of Malta.

Recognizing his weakness, a visit by Pope Saint John Paul II was arranged in 1983 but Duvalier was shocked when the Vicar of Christ made a speech in Creole pronouncing “Things must change here.”[320]

One year later, the Jesuits returned from exile full force courtesy of a new treaty signed between “Baby Doc” Duvalier and Rome (known as a “Concordat”).

> Baby Doc had been out-manoeuvred. The Pope, intent upon positioning the Church for the future, was happy to betray his host. Giving Papa Doc control of the Haitian Church had served its purpose > and now it was time to reign in his weak son and have him sign the new concordat in the window of opportunity before he was forced out. While deliberately hastening Baby Doc's departure, the Vatican seized the chance to drive a hard bargain with his collapsing government. The concordat amendment of 1984 rescinds even the President's nominal right of nominating bishops and archbishops [Investiture].[25]

>
> In addition to a favourable concordat, the Vatican's belated opposition to the regime offered further opportunities. It allowed the Church to distance itself from the dictator it had once supported. (The Vatican had used the same strategy in the previous decade during the declining days of Franco's Spain.) This move gave the Church credit for helping to usher out an unpopular dictator and at the same time distracted Haitians from the Vatican's record of regularly supporting the nation's strongmen and élites.
>
> In 1986 protests against Baby Doc led the U.S. to arrange for Duvalier and his family to be exiled to France and a new constitution was proclaimed the next year. ~ Concordat Watch[321]

By betraying the dictators Rome had once supported she could now claim credit for the Duvalier ouster. In 1986, the New York Times proudly trumpeted —

> A group of Haitian priests and nuns are pressing for the resignation of the Archbishop of Port-au-Prince because of what they say was his collaboration with the Duvalier Government. ...
>
> Militant sectors of the Roman Catholic Church that played a key role in the ouster of President Jean-Claude Duvalier on Feb. 7 appear to be behind the campaign against the Archbishop, Francois-Wolff Ligonde.[322]

The Archbishop of Port-au-Prince (Haiti's capital) holds the same power that the Archbishop of Canterbury holds in England. To believe any Prelate in such a critical position would forego loyalty to Rome over loyalty to their host nation is either to be completely ignorant of Catholic hierarchy or purposefully deceptive.[xxiv]

In 1994, Jesuit Father Aristide rode on the backs of American soldiers sent by Jesuit-trained President Bill Clinton in his triumphant return to power.

The Jesuits certainly don't lack in cheek. The legislation they installed after the false flag of 9/11 that pushed America into an Orwellian Police State was labeled by Catholic agents in Congress as "the Patriot Act". Bill Clinton's "errand of mercy" to reinstall Father Aristide at the point of American bayonets was called "Operation Uphold Democracy".

Standing with the American forces in Haiti to reinstall their Jesuit Priest President was a young Army Major named Michael Thomas Flynn, Sr.[323] A devout Roman Catholic, Flynn would go on to make General and head the Defense Intelligence Agency. He would later spend a brief time as Donald Trump's National Security Advisor before being asked to step down by another devout Catholic (later re-branded an "Evangelical"[324]), Trump's Vice President, Michael Pence.[325] Flynn and his son, Flynn Jr. were at the heart of a media firestorm[326] over the so-called "PizzaGate" scandal. It implicated Democrat power-broker and former Jesuit seminarian John Podesta in child sex slave trafficking which centered around Comet Ping Pong Pizza in Washington D.C. More on "PizzaGate" in Chapter 31.

Perhaps it's no surprise that Catholic St. Joseph's orphanage, so well thought-of by NAMBLA and "Methodist minister" co-founder Thomas Reeves, is also plagued by reports that the children interned there are constantly victimized and forced into the sex slave trade. More on that in Chapter 28.

Boston Catholic Outreach to "Sexual Minorities"

Aside from that single Associated Press mention, nothing more can be learned of Cardinal Medeiros' "program". The Boston Globe would go on to say of Shanley that he rescued "legions of homosexual runaways" and "their parents ... considered Shanley a hero and his work a ... blessing."[327] The same piece bragged that Shanely was driving state-to-state "on a rambling speaking tour." Was Paul Shanley the Roman Catholic Tony Robbins, or were his superiors insuring that he had access to children even outside Massachusetts?

In fact, serial boy-rapist Paul Shanley was an extraordinarily powerful man, from mentoring homosexual legislators on their way to Congress to assisting Alfred Kinsey in pulling America towards sexual anarchy —

> Representative Barney Frank, then a state legislator active in gay-rights issues, attended legislative meetings with him. One of only a handful of priests in the country assigned to work full time with homosexuals, Shanley charmed not only the media and city leaders, but clerical and youth workers throughout New England. They studied Shanley's taped essays on "Counseling Parents of Gays" and "Changing Norms of Sexuality" as if they were scripture.[328]

The Church had big plans for Barnett "Barney" Frank. As a homosexual Jew he was another excellent front man. He would go on to disgrace Congress for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts for over 30 years. During that time, he was instrumental in loosing restrictions on predatory banks via the repeal of the Glass-Steagall Act[329] as well as the catastrophe that was the "Housing Bubble".

> ...his fingerprints are all over this fiasco. Time and time again, Frank insisted that Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac were in good shape. Five years ago, for example, when the Bush administration proposed much tighter regulation of the two companies, Frank was adamant that "these two entities, Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac, are not facing any kind of financial crisis." When the White House warned of "systemic risk for our financial system" unless the mortgage giants were curbed, Frank complained that the administration was more concerned about financial safety than about housing.
>
> Now that the bubble has burst and the "systemic risk" is apparent to all, Frank blithely declares: "The private sector got us into this mess." Well, give the congressman points for gall. Wall Street and private lenders have plenty to answer for, but it was Washington and the political class that derailed this train. ~ Boston Globe[330]

Are we to believe that Humberto Medeiros assigned Paul Shanley these critical positions unbeknownst of his sexual depredations? Shanley even had the approval of Medeiros' successor, Cardinal Richard Cushing. The Boston Globe admitted Shanley’s crimes were well-known in his powerful circles.

> For some devout Catholics, the notion of such a ministry seemed at odds with church teachings. ...
>
> That Shanley, now 71 [in 2002], was accused of molesting some of the boys who turned to him for help is now well known. Harder to divine is what church leaders knew or suspected of his behavior. And even more disconcerting, particularly for some of his alleged victims, is the fact that so many prominent Bostonians admired and supported Shanley’s work and yet were seemingly unaware of his flagrant sexual activities. Shanley’s penchant for young boys was no secret, at least not in some quarters of the city, and the word among street veterans was to steer clear of him. ...
>
> So daunting was Shanley’s celebrity that some of those who followed his career and had suspicions about him didn’t know where to go with their concerns. Boston, after all, was among the most Catholic of cities. Nor was the gay community, struggling to emerge from a shroud of secrecy and condemnation, particularly eager to have one of its most vocal champions linked to sexual abuse.
>
> — But it is thoroughly consistent with where > promoting homosexuality eventually leads! —
>
> One exception was Elaine Noble, the first openly gay state representative in the country, who knew Shanley well in the 1970s. She said she was suspicious of his activities and complained to a host of city leaders, including the police and mayor’s office. That nothing came of her reports she attributes in part to Shanley’s popularity and potent connections. ...
>
> Noble says she took her concerns about Shanley to the Boston police; to Katharine Kane, then a deputy mayor; and to several priests who are now dead. Kane, now retired, said she “never heard of Shanley until now.” And when leaders in the gay community heard what Noble had done, she said, “I got holy hell. People in my own community just > didn’t want to believe it. The truth is that people were afraid of Shanley. ... No one could shut down Paul Shanley.”[331]

Shanley had limitless access to children into adulthood either in or out of “the Church” to include his duty as the Chaplain of “public” Boston State University. Thanks to deviants like Alfred Kinsey and other Luciferians, it became culturally-accepted to believe the ludicrous idea that children can perceive themselves to be homosexual. These hapless victims were then funneled to predator “advocates” like Father Paul Shanley.

> By the early 1970s, Shanley had become so linked to the issue of gay youth that “he was the go-to guy if your child was homosexual,” said Roderick MacLeish Jr., who represents almost half of the 26 alleged Shanley victims who have taken legal action. “Paul Shanley would be the referral from the hot lines, from the newspaper, from the street.” ...
>
> Carmen Durso, the attorney who represents several of Shanley’s alleged victims, says Shanley’s choices were no accident. Shanley, he said, “went out and created a pool of kids he could go after. He advertised for them. He went after the kids at the bus stops, the runaways, the kids who nobody cared about and who had no one to talk to. Shanley was very instinctive about his victims, like finding the weakest member of the herd.”[332]

Shanley’s crimes may even have been worse than the hundreds of other priests who abused the trust of families in them because he specifically appealed to young boys who questioned their very identities.

> Shanley’s alleged victims had a lot in common, according to several of their lawyers. They were lonely. Depressed. Terrified of their sexuality. Some came from single-parent homes and had few friends. A few had never had sex before.[333]

While he raped them, he lived like a prince on a “priest’s salary”.

> Lightly supervised by the church [in Boston that Catholic Church is universal enough to be written lower-case], freed of tedious parish duties, Shanley was a one-man ministry. He walked the city’s streets at all hours ... trailed at times by those who knew he held the key to a > meal and bed. His routine varied often, particularly as his public speaking and traveling schedule picked up... He toured the youth hangouts, Boston Common, and bus stations. He held Masses for Dignity, an association of gay Catholics. And ... he rented an elegant Beacon Street apartment in the Back Bay that, one of his accusers said, was a regular gathering spot for teenage boys, "and right in the middle of them Shanley would sit enthroned, sort of holding court."[334]

The Globe admitted that, during this time, neither it nor any other media outlet appeared to be doing their job very well.

> No one was more taken with the fiery, witty priest than the media.[335]

Where was Marty Baron when you needed him?

While he lived like a king, Shanley not only took advantage of confused boys by raping them, he proffered them to his powerful friends.

> But if the public and press were largely blind to Shanley's ways, the boys he allegedly made his victims were definitely not. They are men, now, their childhoods long behind them. But their encounters with Shanley have stained their lives like scarlet ink. Many have suffered from prolonged addictions and recurring depression. Some have been unable to form lasting relationships and have tried to take their own lives.
>
> One of them, now a 47-year-old builder and father of three who asked that his name not be used, says he met Shanley when he was 13 and had run from his South Shore home to the Boston "scene." He recalls Shanley telling him that he was a psychologist who specialized in teen issues. And when the priest offered the boy a place to stay, he says he agreed, and Shanley took him to his third-floor bedroom at Warwick House. He says Shanley had the maid take his dirty clothes and offered him a robe. When it came time for bed, he recalled, "[Shanley] said, 'You can sleep with me.' I was thinking this is not a good idea. And then all of a sudden he is naked and touching me, and I am petrified ... I was completely freaked out."

> Another boy, now age 43, was introduced to Shanley in 1974 at age 15 and told that the priest could help him with his many family problems. At Shanley's suggestion, he says, the two played strip poker and then stood naked before a mirror in his Beacon Street apartment. For about a month, he says, he continued to visit Shanley, who told him he was "an expert in sexuality," for weekly "sessions" during which they had sex. One day Shanley asked the boy if he would like to have sex with other men. "I said, 'I don't know,"' said the man, who lives in Boston and filed a civil lawsuit against Shanley in April. "He said, 'Well, I think you should, because part of being a man is having a lot of sexual experiences."'
>
> Throughout the 1970s, Shanley allegedly took young men to a number of his residences, including the elegant Back Bay townhouse with its black French doors, a Vermont retreat called "Rivendell" ...[336]

Why would a powerful pedophile priest name his expensive townhouse after the fantasy elf enclave from the Lord of the Rings trilogy? It was more than just a penchant for orcs and wizards.

> John Ronald Reuel Tolkien ... was an English writer born in South Africa in 1892. ...
>
> Although his family was composed mostly of Protestants, Tolkien's mother Mabel converted to Catholicism following a trip to Birmingham, England, after the death of Tolkien's father.
>
> This decision caused Mabel's Protestant and Baptist family to withdraw her financial support.
>
> Such struggles contributed to her death four years later, but not before she had enrolled John and his brother Hilary Arthur Reuel Tolkien into St. Philip's Grammar School, associated with the Birmingham Oratory. There, they were acquitted to Father Francis Xavier Morgan, a Roman Catholic priest, who eventually took custody of Ronald and Hilary. Morgan was named after Francis Xavier, one of the founders of the Jesuits along with Ignatius Loyola and Peter Faber. The brothers considered the Oratory as their home, serving as Morgan's altar boys every morning.

> These events set Tolkien to be a devout Roman Catholic. ~ J.R.R. Tolkien & C.S. Lewis: Jesuit Imagineering, JohnnyCirucci.com[337]

But Shanley didn't just rape boys in his expensive apartments and townhouses, he showed his powerful public connections by also taking them to a secluded cabin which was part of the Ponkapoag Outdoor Center, run by the YMCA.

Through it all, Father Paul Shanley was carefully protected and enabled by his superiors spanning three successive Cardinals.

> Shanley was allowed to continue in the priesthood for years. When he moved to California to join the San Bernardino Diocese in 1990, he served for three years without restriction on his contact with children.
>
> ... alleged abuse victim Gregory ... Ford ... said he repeatedly was raped by Shanley in the 1980s, also alleges that Boston Cardinal Bernard Law, who succeeded Medeiros, allowed the priest to remain as pastor at St. John the Evangelist Parish until 1989, despite knowledge of his behavior. ...
>
> The earliest document related to Shanley's alleged sex abuse dates to 1967: A priest at LaSalette Shrine in Attleboro, Mass., wrote a letter of concern to the archdiocese, relating allegations that Shanley had taken boys to a cabin and molested them.
>
> When Shanley moved to California in 1990 after a medical leave from Boston, the Rev. Robert J. Banks wrote to San Bernardino officials to say, "I can assure you that Father Shanley has no problem that would be concern to your diocese."
>
> In 1995, Shanley moved to New York to become assistant director of Leo House, which housed transients, clergy, people visiting the sick, students and travelers. He later was poised to become director of the organization, but was not given the job. ~ Fox News / AP[338]

As Father Paul Shanley tagged out of serial child raping in Boston (and elsewhere), Father John Joseph Geoghan tagged in.

Once Geoghan was cleared by Rome as a sacrificial goat, the Boston Globe Spotlight Team could write about him.

They even received the help of a female Superior Court Judge — Constance Sweeney (also Roman Catholic) — who ordered records sealed years earlier to be released to the Globe.

Now the Boston paper could do the job it was supposed to and report (at least on Geoghan) that he was a monster who focused on the very young, especially if they were poor.

During his reign of terror, Geoghan had the full support of his superiors like Bernard Cardinal Law.[xxv]

> Almost always, his victims were grammar school boys. One was just 4 years old.
>
> Then came last July's disclosure that Cardinal Bernard F. Law knew about Geoghan's problems in 1984, Law's first year in Boston, yet approved his transfer to St. Julia's parish in Weston. Wilson D. Rogers Jr., the cardinal's[xxvi] attorney, defended the move last summer, saying the archdiocese had medical assurances that each Geoghan reassignment was "appropriate and safe."
>
> But one of Law's bishops thought that the 1984 assignment of Geoghan to St. Julia's was so risky, he wrote the cardinal a letter in protest. And for good reason, the Spotlight Team found: The archdiocese already had substantial evidence of Geoghan's predatory sexual habits. That included his assertion in 1980 that his repeated abuse of seven boys in one extended family was not a "serious" problem, according to an archdiocesan record.
>
> The St. Julia's assignment proved disastrous.[xxvii] Geoghan was put in charge of three youth groups, including altar boys. In 1989, he was forced to go on sick leave after more complaints of sexual abuse, and spent months in two institutions that treat sexually abusive priests. Even so, the archdiocese returned him to St. Julia's, where Geoghan continued to abuse children for another three years.[339]

It was a pattern that lasted decades —

> Before Geoghan ever got to Weston in 1984, he had already been treated several times and hospitalized at least once for molesting boys. And he had been removed from at least two parishes for sexual abuse. In 1980, for instance, he was ordered out of St. Andrew's in Jamaica Plain after casually admitting he had molested the seven boys.
>
> In 1981, after a year's sick leave, Geoghan was dispatched to St. Brendan's in Dorchester, with little chance he would be placed under scrutiny...
>
> In September 1984, complaints that Geoghan had abused children at the Dorchester parish prompted Law to remove him. Two months later, the cardinal gave Geoghan a fresh start at St. Julia's.
>
> Law allowed Geoghan to stay in Weston for more than eight years before removing him from parish duty in 1993. But even that decision to recast Geoghan as a functionary at a home for retired priests did not prevent him from seeking out and molesting children, according to the multiple civil suits and criminal charges filed against the 66-year-old Geoghan.[340]

Like a jackal stalking a herd, waiting for the sick or the young to stray into vulnerability, Geoghan fixated on easy prey.

> From the Jamaica Plain case alone, the archdiocese's top officials were aware of Geoghan's attraction to young boys, and how he picked his victims: The affable Geoghan usually befriended Catholic mothers struggling to raise large families, often alone. His offers to help, often by taking the children for ice cream or praying with them at bedtime, were accepted without suspicion.
>
> That is how 12-year-old Patrick McSorley, who lived in a Hyde Park housing project, allegedly became a Geoghan victim in 1986 — two years after Geoghan's assignment to Weston.
>
> According to McSorley, Geoghan, who knew the family from St. Andrew's, learned of his father's suicide and dropped by to offer > condolences to his mother, who is schizophrenic. The priest offered to buy Patrick ice cream.

>
> “I felt a little funny about it,” McSorley recalled in an interview. “I was 12 years old and he was an old man.”
>
> Riding home after getting ice cream, McSorley says, Geoghan consoled him. But then he patted his upper leg and slid his hand up toward his crotch. ...
>
> For years, McSorley has battled alcoholism and depression. And now, as the plaintiff in one of the lawsuits against Geoghan, McSorley is bitter. “To find out later that the Catholic Church knew he was a child molester — every day it bothers me more and more,” McSorley says. [341]

It was the price Bostonians paid for having their city so overtly and completely owned by Rome and one they paid with their children.

> No American diocese has faced a scandal of similar dimensions since 1992. That year, in the Fall River Diocese, more than 100 of former priest James Porter’s victims surfaced publicly with evidence that Porter’s superiors — including, in the 1960s, then Monsignor Medeiros — shifted him from one parish to another as parents learned of his compulsive abuse.
>
> Since 1997, the archdiocese has settled about 50 lawsuits against Geoghan, for more than $10 million — but with no confidential documents ever made public.[342]

Sadly, nothing has changed since this story was published in 2002. Secular institutions remain firmly in Rome’s grip.

> ... Massachusetts law assured secrecy — and still does. For all the years that Geoghan was molesting children, clergymen were exempt from laws requiring most other caregivers to report incidents of sex abuse to police for possible prosecution. It was only after last summer’s revelations that the archdiocese dropped its long-standing > opposition to legislation adding clergy to the list of "mandated reporters." But the legislation died in committee.[343]

Like so many other predator pedophile priests, Geoghan came to the Catholic Church ready to rape little boys ... almost as if he was recruited for it.

> There is no dispute that Geoghan abused children while he was at Blessed Sacrament in Saugus after his 1962 ordination. The archdiocese has recently settled claims on accusations that he did, and the church records obtained by the Globe note that Geoghan in 1995 admitted molesting four boys from the same family then.[344]
>
> In an April 1995 session with [Massachusetts General Hospital psychiatrist Dr. Edward] Messner, Geoghan said that even as a newly ordained priest he would "experience arousal when there was physical closeness" with children.[345]

Another priest attempted to tell both superiors and secular authorities about Geoghan but was cowed into silence despite contradicting his own sworn affidavit.

He, too, remained free from prosecution.

> A former priest, Anthony Benzevich, has said he alerted church higher-ups that Geoghan frequently took young boys to his rectory bedroom. In news reports after accusations against Geoghan surfaced publicly, Benzevich was also quoted as saying church officials threatened to reassign him as a missionary in South America for telling them about Geoghan. Benzevich told his story to Mitchell Garabedian, who represents nearly all of the plaintiffs in the civil suits against Geoghan and church officials, according to an affidavit Garabedian filed.
>
> But court records reviewed by the Globe show that when Benzevich appeared in Garabedian's office for a pre-trial deposition in October 2000, he was represented by Wilson Rogers 3d — the son of Law's principal attorney. Then, under oath, Benzevich changed his story. He said he was not certain that Geoghan had had boys in his room. And > he said he could not recall notifying superiors about Geoghan’s behavior with children.

>
> In a recent interview with the Globe, Benzevich said he does indeed remember Geoghan taking boys to his room. He said Geoghan often sought to wrestle with young boys — and liked to dress them in priest’s attire. But he repeated his sworn assertion that he does not recall notifying his superiors.
>
> Before his deposition, Benzevich said, Wilson Rogers 3d approached him, told him the church was trying to protect him from being named as a defendant, and offered to represent him. His earlier statements to reporters, Benzevich said, had been misconstrued.[346]

Most shocking were the Catholic parents who discovered the monster abusing their children and meekly complained to “Church” superiors.

It was a story that repeated again and again.

> The pending lawsuits include accusations that Geoghan again abused young boys from several families in his next parish, St. Paul’s in Hingham, between 1967 and 1974. One of his alleged victims, Anthony Muzzi Jr., said in an interview last week that in addition to his own abuse, his uncle caught Geoghan abusing his son. The uncle ordered Geoghan to leave his house, and complained to the priest’s superiors at St. Paul’s. ...
>
> During his assignment in Hingham, Geoghan found victims far afield, befriending Joanne Mueller, a single mother of four boys who lived in Melrose. There too, according to depositions, the priest became a regular visitor, a spiritual counselor to Mueller and a helpmate to her boys, who were between 5 and 12.
>
> One night, she testified, her second youngest son came to her, insisting that she keep Geoghan away from him. “I don’t want him doing that to my wee-wee, touching my wee-wee ...” Mueller recalled the boy saying.
>
> Mueller, according to her deposition, summoned her three other sons and learned that Geoghan, while purporting to be taking them out for > ice cream, helping them with their baths, and reading them bedtime stories, had been raping them orally and anally. Also, Mueller said, Geoghan was insisting they tell no one. "We couldn't tell you because Father said it was a confessional," she said one of her sons told her.

>
> Mueller testified that she immediately took the boys to see Rev. Paul E. Miceli, a parish priest at St. Mary's in Melrose who knew both Geoghan and her family.[347]

The behavior by parents to trust officials in the Catholic Church rather than law enforcement was and is criminal collusion; aiding and abetting the sexual abuse of their own children.

The Globe attempted to soften this behavior by calling it "unwitting facilitation" but it was, at best, mental instability equivalent to a cult mentality and at worst, criminal.

> If Mueller had unwittingly facilitated Geoghan's access to the children in her home in Melrose, the same role was played by Maryetta Dussourd at the priest's next stop: St. Andrew's, in the Forest Hills section of Jamaica Plain, where he served from 1974 to 1980.
>
> Dussourd was rearing her own four children — three boys and a girl — as well as her niece's four boys. In her hardscrabble neighborhood, she said in an interview, she hoped there was a priest the children could look up to. Then she met Geoghan, who oversaw altar boys and Boy Scouts at the parish.

— Seven boys under the care of one woman; Geoghan must've thought he hit the Devil's jackpot. Also, we again see secular agencies giving predatory priests access to children outside their domains and, again, the Boys Scouts are involved. —

> Geoghan, she recalled bitterly, was eager to help. Before long, he was visiting her apartment almost every evening — for nearly two years. He routinely took the seven boys out for ice cream and put them to sleep at night.
>
> But all that time, Geoghan regularly molested the seven boys in their bedrooms, Dussourd said. In some cases, he performed oral sex on > them, according to court documents. Other times, he fondled their genitals or forced them to fondle his — occasionally as he prayed.

— There can be no other conclusion but that the Roman Catholic priest (thoroughly enabled by his superiors, fully aware of his lust to violate children) was praying to Satan as he did so. —

> A 1994 Archdiocesan memorandum, labeled "personal and confidential," said Geoghan would stay in the Dussourd home "even when he was on retreat because he missed the children so much. He 'would touch them while they were sleeping and waken them by playing with their penises.'"
>
> Dussourd discovered what was happening after the children finally told her sister, Margaret Gallant. Horrified, Dussourd complained to the Rev. John E. Thomas, the pastor of St. Thomas Aquinas, a nearby parish, according to court documents and accounts by Dussourd and a church official who asked that he not be identified.[348]

Guardians who aid the violation of children in their care should be at least institutionalized, if not receive a criminal penalty. It would be no different from a day care worker who allowed a serial child rapist to enter their facility like a wolf breaking into a sheep pen.

We'll expose that in Chapter 19.

The shuffling of Geoghan from parish to parish was validated by corrupt medical personnel who certified him "safe".

> ... court documents that include Geoghan's psychiatric records contain starkly contradictory assessments of his danger to children from different therapists. He received at least four clean bills of health between 1980 and 1990, a period when the Archdiocese of Boston assigned him three times to parishes despite his record of abuse; but prompted declarations that he was an incurable pedophile after he became a public embarrassment to the archdiocese in the mid-1990s. ~ Boston Globe[349]

To further insure monsters like Geoghan were able to successfully violate children in families completely unaware of his nature, Cardinal Law and his underlings used mechanisms like “sick leave” to allow furor from his previous crimes to die down before sending him to the next virgin pastures.

> Geoghan spent the following year on sick leave, under treatment for his compulsion, but living with family in West Roxbury. In February 1981, he was sent to his fifth parish, St. Brendan’s.
>
> Almost immediately, Geoghan was working with First Communicants, befriending young children and their parents, even taking some boys to his family’s summer home in Scituate, where — parents say they later discovered — he sexually abused the youths. ...
>
> Despite his record, Geoghan was assigned to St. Julia’s. And in his first two years, he was in charge of altar boys, religious education for public school youngsters and a youth group, according to the church’s annual directories. ~ Boston Globe[350]

For Bostonians, the net result of decades of abuse by predator pedophile priest after predator pedophile priest — all carefully enabled by superiors and kept untouched by corrupt cops, prosecutors and judges — was generational family victims from overlapping reigns of serial rapists.

> The civil and criminal allegations Geoghan faces in Middlesex and Suffolk counties suggest that he allegedly abused at least 30 more boys after Law sent him to Weston in 1984 — both before and after the half year’s sick leave in 1989.
>
> After Geoghan’s 1989 return to St. Julia’s, it was another 38 months before Law took him out of the parish. Three years later, Geoghan was still seeking out victims, allegedly including an altar boy donning vestments for a christening ceremony, according to the criminal charges.
>
> The shuttling of Geoghan from one parish to another created a devastating coincidence for one family. One boy he allegedly molested is the son of a man who had been among the many sexually abused by Porter during the 1960s in the Fall River Diocese, according to Roderick MacLeish Jr., the attorney who represented the man and 100 other Porter victims.[351]

After forty years of raping children, Geoghan was targeted for sacrifice to serve “the greater good” of the Church and her minions.

The fact that he was defrocked in 1998 before either his first criminal court appearance or focus on his misdeeds by the Boston Globe (all in 2002) is definitive. Geoghan had been selected for the psychological operation that Boston’s secular institutions were really doing their jobs.

Interestingly, the sacrifice of Geoghan didn’t end there. As if “tying up loose ends”, Geoghan was placed in a cell with Joseph L. Druce (born Darrin Ernest Smiledge).

Druce had been sent to prison for murdering a man who attempted to sexually violate him after the man picked Druce up hitchhiking.[xxviii] Within a year of Geoghan’s conviction, Druce had strangled and stomped him to death.

> The press raised questions about prison officials’ judgment in placing these two men in the same unit for protective custody. In addition, they had been warned by an inmate that Druce had something planned against Geoghan.[11] ~ Wikipedia[352]

Did Geoghan somehow betray his masters? Was he a liability that needed to be dealt with? — Or was he just another ritual sacrifice?

Prison surveillance video of the murder was “mysteriously” released and uploaded to YouTube.[xxix]

> A video, which shows correction officers trying to open Geoghan's prison door, which Druce had wedged shut when he attacked the former priest, was released on YouTube in June 2007.[12][13] Officials claim not to know how the video, recorded by the prison surveillance systems, was made public.[353]

To add insult to the injuries of the victims (and as proof that nothing has changed) Geoghan’s single conviction of “fondling a boy’s buttocks in a pool” was erased by the Massachusetts State Appeals Court. Corrupt secular officials still bow to Rome.

> The Appeals Court issued its ruling after Geoghan's lawyer filed a death certificate this month and asked the court to dismiss his conviction. Prosecutors in Middlesex County, where Geoghan was convicted, did not oppose the motion.
>
> The three justices who ruled on the case — James McHugh, David A. Mills, and Mark V. Green — said little about Geoghan in their short opinion that was entered Sept. 17. They noted that they were following the direction of the Supreme Judicial Court and that vacating the conviction is "customary practice of the courts in this Commonwealth under such circumstances."
>
> — Did you know "vacating" criminal convictions just because the criminal died was "customary practice"? —
>
> Geoghan was convicted in January 2002 of indecent assault and battery for fondling the buttocks of a 10-year-boy in a public swimming pool. He was sentenced to serve six years of a nine- to 10-year prison sentence.
>
> Although Geoghan had been accused of molesting nearly 150 children, the Middlesex case was the lone case that went to trial. ...
>
> For alleged victims of Geoghan, his 2002 conviction was a symbol that the legal system was finally holding him accountable for his actions. ~ Boston Globe[354]

If Geoghan's single conviction for "fondling a boy's buttocks in a pool" (verses decades of raping over one hundred and fifty children) was a "symbol" that cops, prosecutors and judges actually did their jobs then the overturning of that single conviction was the crushing reality that they do not: Rome controls them all, and not just in Boston.

But Geoghan was simply the weapon. The malignant authority who repeatedly aimed him at the unsuspecting families of Massachusetts was Bernard Cardinal Law.

A year after Geoghan's death in 2003, Law skipped town. He was granted a posh "retirement" in Rome after a job well done. Upon his arrival in Rome, he was given the honor of presiding as "Archpriest of the Basilica of St.

Mary Major” and invited to serve upon a number of important boards including the Pontifical Council for the Family.

He certainly seemed qualified.

> ... Law [has been] a frequent presence at all major Vatican ceremonial and diplomatic events, a lifestyle that galled many abuse victims who have long insisted that the Vatican crack down on bishops who transfer abusive priests rather than report them to police. ~ Associated Press[355]

Law has been thought so highly of in Rome that he was appointed to help select other Catholic leaders who would follow in his footsteps.

> Law remains a member of a half a dozen important Vatican congregations, including the office that helps the pope select bishops. [356]

A little over a decade past Geoghan’s sacrifice, the propaganda that secular institutions are really doing their job got a further boost from Hollywood. In 2015, a major motion picture spotlighted the heroic work of Marty Baron and his intrepid “deep research” Spotlight team titled Spotlight.

The movie boasted major talents in casting; Mark Ruffalo as Michael Rezendes, Michael Keaton as Walter “Robby” Robinson, Rachel McAdams as Sacha Pfeiffer, Liev Schreiber as Marty Baron, John Slattery as Ben Bradlee, Jr., Brian d´Arcy James as Matt Carroll and Stanley Tucci as attorney Mitchell Garabedian.

Like the Spotlight team, the film was made by Jesuit-trained Roman Catholics such as writer / director Tom McCarthy (Catholic) and producer Blye Pagon Faust (Jesuit-educated at Santa Clara).

One year later Spotlight won the 2016 Academy Award for “Best Picture”.

In the film, the audience is warned by Stanley Tucci, as attorney Mitchell Garabedian, that the Catholic Church “thinks in terms of centuries.” An organization with that mentality isn’t above carefully planning the sacrifice of a pawn to validate bishops and knights.

After his work saving the reputation of the Boston Globe as a “watchdog of the people”, Marty Baron was given Executive Editor at the Washington Post; a paper which later granted accused pedophile John Podesta his own column.[357]

As both Hollywood and media congratulated the Globe for spotlighting a pedophile priest (dead for 12 years by then), Marty Baron crowed from the Post in February of 2016, I’m In “Spotlight”, But It’s Not Really About Me. It’s About The Power Of Journalism.

In the column Baron gave himself, he effused that the movie’s portrayal of the way “journalism” does its job was “stunningly accurate!”

> It was not until the premiere at the Toronto International Film Festival on Sept. 14, 2015, at the immense Princess of Wales Theatre that I saw “Spotlight” on a big screen, along with 2,000 others.
>
> The movie had a powerful effect. The Los Angeles Times noted that five days into the Toronto festival, “Spotlight” stood “as the only movie to generate applause during the film and afterward, when the credits roll.” The audience applauded, too, as Tom called the actors to the stage. And then he called the journalists to the stage, one by one. And something happened that’s rare for journalists: We received a protracted standing ovation.[358]

Mission accomplished. Now everyone go back to sleep.

Chapter 9

Helter Skelter

MANSON, Charles Milles
CII 966 856

9 August 1969: Charles Manson's followers Charles Watson, Susan Atkins, Linda Kasabian, and Patricia Krenwinkel enter the home of Terry Melcher and kill everyone they find. They slaughtered actress Sharon Tate, who was living there at the time, Jay Sebring, Abigail Folger, Wojciech Frykowski, and Steven Parent. They were caught, tried, found guilty and given the death sentence but the sentences were automatically commuted to life in prison when California abolished capital punishment in 1972.

One of the most notorious boogeymen and cult leaders of all time has been Charles Milles Maddox, better known to the American public as "Charles Manson".

Was Manson just a wayward psychotic or was he a smart weapon of chaos carefully crafted by the Devil's Simulation and his Roman caretakers?

He received the perfect start as the bastard son of a 16 year old teenager, Kathleen Maddox, on 12 November 1934. He apparently wasn't wanted as the original entry for him from the General Hospital in Cincinnati, Ohio was "No Name Maddox".[359]

The callousness didn’t end there.

> According to Manson’s family, Kathleen traded Charles for a pitcher of beer shortly after he was born.
>
> When he was still an infant, Kathleen took her son to a restaurant and had him resting on her lap when she sparked up a conversation with the waitress. The waitress was eager to become a mother herself, and thinking that baby Manson was cute, she joked that she’d buy him from Kathleen.
>
> “A pitcher of beer and he’s yours,” was Kathleen’s reply. The waitress probably thought she was joking, but she brought Kathleen an extra pitcher anyway. What she didn’t expect was that as soon as Kathleen finished her beer, she sneaked out of the restaurant — and left Charles behind.
>
> Manson only made his way back home because his uncle found out what had happened. He tracked down the waitress a few days later and got the boy back to his mother.
>
> When Charles Manson was five years old, his mother was sent to jail. She and a friend had met a stranger named Frank Martin, who took them out for drinks. Kathleen decided that Martin had “too much money for one man” and called her brother, Luther, to help him rob him.
>
> She talked Martin into driving her, her friend, and Luther to a hotel. When they made it out of town, Luther made Martin stop and get out of his car. Luther then held a ketchup bottle filled with salt to Martin’s back and claimed he had a gun. Martin saw through the lie, but Luther just beat him in the head with bottle and took his money anyway.
>
> The group escaped with $27 and were arrested shortly after. Kathleen was sentenced to five years in jail, and Charles Manson was sent to live with his aunt. ~ Chaostrophic.com[360]

Maddox was paroled and returned to retrieve her son. She then sought to enter him into a foster home but none were available.

It was here that the State intervened and insured the vulnerable boy was placed into the Devil's Simulation. A "secular" Indiana court put Manson in the Gibault School for Boys in Terre Haute: a Roman Catholic orphanage.

> Conceived in 1909 by the Indiana Knights of Columbus, and named for Fr. Pierre Gibault, the Gibault School for Boys was dedicated on October 9, 1921, in Terre Haute, IN. The first director of the school was Rev. Michael Gorman.
>
> Quickly exceeding its original capacity of 25 boys, two new halls were added: Chartrand Hall was completed in 1922, and Aldering Hall in 1926. The staff was expanded in 1934, and administration of the school turned over to the Brothers of Holy Cross from Notre Dame, IN. The first Holy Cross era director was Rupert Poudrier, and under his administration, the school was expanded to allow boys from every midwestern state.
>
> Charles Manson attended this school at one time. William Heirens also attended the school. ~ Wikipedia[361]

Not one, but two notorious criminals were birthed at this Catholic institution.

> William George Heirens (1928 – 2012) was a convicted American serial killer... Heirens was called the Lipstick Killer after a notorious message scrawled in lipstick at a crime scene. At the time of his death, Heirens was reputedly Chicago's longest-serving prisoner, having spent 65 years in prison.[2] ...
>
> — That's "justice" in Catholic-controlled Illinois. —
>
> At 13 years of age, Heirens was arrested for carrying a loaded gun. A subsequent search of the Heirens's home discovered a number of stolen weapons hidden in an unused storage shed on the roof of a nearby building along with furs, suits, cameras, radios and jewelry he had stolen. Heirens admitted to 11 burglaries and was sent to the Gibault School for wayward boys for several months.[5]

> Not long after his release, Heirens was again arrested for burglary. This time, he was sentenced to three years at the St. Bede Academy, operated by Benedictine Monks. During his time at the school, Heirens stood out as an exceptional student... ~ Wikipedia[362]

Americans have no idea that their “secular” government turns wayward orphans over to Roman Catholic institutions where they are abused and warped into weapons to be used against them.[xxx]

The Knights of Columbus are far more powerful than their public relations present them.

> The Knights themselves, it may be truthfully said, are not in the organization entirely for the sake of their own health, or even for the glory of the Church, inasmuch as there are many ambitious men among their leaders, and some that have little or no use for the Church. However, they work in collusion with the Hierarchy, and are heart and soul in politics.
>
> This fact is well known to political machines and non-Catholic politicians, whose candidates must receive the approval of Rome and the Knights before they dare nominate them for either dog pound or presidency.
>
> Knights of Columbus have assured me that their organization, with the Church of Rome, controls the Municipal, State and Federal Government, and also influences the business interests throughout the country. They have also assured me within the past few years that it is almost impossible for a man to secure a position or promotion in any business house or corporation, if a Knight of Columbus be a competitor. ~ Crowley[363]

Notable Knights include Alfred E. Smith.

> In 1928, the two men on the ballot for president were the Democrat Governor of New York, Alfred E. Smith and the Republican Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover. The issue of Smith’s Catholic religion came up in an exchange between himself and lawyer Charles Marshall via editorials printed in Atlantic Monthly magazine.

> Marshall warned that when torn between the best interests of America and the best interests of the Church, devout Catholics were always at risk of choosing Rome over the Land of the Free. ...
>
> Smith lost the election but was soon immortalized in an annual dinner hosted by the Church that requires the two American finalists for the presidency to appear before one of the most powerful Papal emissaries in the world — the Cardinal of the Archdiocese of New York — and make him laugh.
>
> Today's dinners are presided over by the aristocratic descendent of the NY Governor, Alfred E. Smith IV.
>
> The dinners continue even in off election years where luminaries from all walks show homage to Rome, from the director of the FBI, to the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to the Secretary of State. ~ Illuminati Unmasked[364]

Another notable Knight is John Ellis "Jeb" Bush (Senior), the former Governor of Florida.

Luciferian Elites like the Bush crime family are chosen to rule over us which is how the Connecticut Bushs become Governors in Texas and Florida or father and son Bushs become Presidents.

Americans excited over "elections" is a cruel joke.

"Jeb" Bush may seem an unusual convert from his "Episcopal" family but he's a very comfortable fit for Rome, especially given that maternal grandfather George Herbert Walker (namesake to multiple Bushs) was also Roman Catholic. He was educated by the Jesuits at Stonyhurst boarding school in "Anglican" Lancashire, England.

In fact, "Jeb" is quite the Catholic king-maker, having gone to Mass at St. Patrick's in NYC courtesy of his friend Timothy Cardinal Dolan. He was also part of the American delegation to Rome at the installing of Joseph Cardinal Ratzinger upon his ascendency to become Pope Benedict XVI in 2005. He then was given a personal audience.

His political policies seem mixed for a supposed “Conservative” Catholic but not for an agent of the Leftist Roman insurgency.

Like everyone else in American politics (Catholic or otherwise), “Jeb” pushes treasonously-open borders to continue the flood of Catholic aliens from the south but when it comes to “life”, Bush seems inept.

> Many of his priorities during his two terms as governor of Florida aligned with those of the Catholic Church — including his extraordinary, and unsuccessful, effort to force a hospital to keep Terri Schiavo on life support, as well as less well-known, and also unsuccessful, efforts to appoint a guardian for the fetus of a developmentally disabled rape victim and to prevent a 13-year-old girl from having an abortion. ~ NY Times[365]

Not sure how one’s unsuccessful attempts at keeping your own government from starving and dehydrating a mentally aware[366] handicapped woman can also be “extraordinary” but who are we to argue with the wordsmithing of the Old Gray Lady?

The Times did note, however, in that very same paragraph that “Jeb” was able to deliver on something far more important to Pro-Lifers; in 1999 he signed into availability a “Choose Life” license plate for Florida’s illegal alien drivers.[367]

Young Charlie

Not surprisingly, young Charlie Manson didn’t care for the care of the brutal priests and Knights at Gibault.

> ...a strict school where punishment for even the tiniest infraction included beatings by either a wooden paddle or a leather strap. ~ The Weekly View[368]

After 10 months he escaped and returned to his mother but she rejected him.[369]

Manson then committed a string of robberies for the money to live on but was eventually caught.

He was placed at the Plainfield Juvenile Correctional Facility, also known as the Indiana Boys School (IBS). Under “government protection” he was tortured and molested.

It was during his “training” that he came to the attention of a Catholic priest at the “secular” Indiana facility.

> During this time, he was frequently detained at the Indiana Boys’ School in nearby Plainfield. It’s been speculated that it was at the Indiana School for Boys that 5 foot tall Charles Manson was beaten and raped repeatedly for over three years. During one of these detentions, young Manson was “discovered” by a local priest, Rev. George Powers. “This particular boy seemed very lonesome, just craving attention and affection,” recalled Father Powers, now an instructor at the New York Theological Seminary. “He looked like an innocent altar boy, and he was so ashamed of his mother.”
>
> Father Powers arranged for Manson to be sent to the famous Father Flanagan’s Boys Town near Omaha, Nebraska. The Indianapolis News ran a front page story on March 7, 1949 headlined “Dream Comes True for Lad; He’s Going to Boys Town.” It characterized 14-year-old Manson as a “dead end kid” who was getting a second chance by being sent to the “last chance” haven for wayward boys. “He won everybody over,” the priest said. “The juvenile court judge was completely taken with his personality. He had ability beyond his years to present himself; he was a beautiful kid for his age.” ~ The Weekly View[370]

Few Americans understand the power held by Roman Catholic priests who walk seamlessly in and out of America’s “secular” institutions.

Finding a good-looking boy who had been raped and brutalized at the Indiana Boys School, Father Powers exerted his influence upon “secular government” and had him moved to Boys Town for further ... “training”.

> “Manson arrived at Boys Town in 1949 after begging Indianapolis priests and authorities for a chance to succeed in life,” said McDowell. “He had just turned 14 years old and was a kid who > experienced a childhood no one should endure." ~ Omaha Lifestyles Magazine[371]

"Begging priests and authorities"? Remember, this is not Medieval France, Spain or Italy. This is "secular" America, 1949, sixty-six years before Jesuit Pope Francis was invited by two Jesuit-trained House Speakers (Nancy Pelosi, "Democrat" and John Boehner, "Republican") to address a joint session of Congress in September of 2015.

Manson's internment at Boys Town has been termed a "mystery"[372] with "scarce details".[373]

To help matters, author Lawson McDowell spent extensive time interviewing Manson in prison to present the facts to the public...liberally mixed with fabrications in his 2013 book Before He Became a Monster: A Story of Charles Manson's Time at Father Flanagan's Boys Town.

> McDowell's book tells the story of how Manson came to stay at Boys Town and what happened during his time there, blending real and imagined events. The episode is shrouded in uncertainty, and Manson himself gave cryptic answers to some of McDowell's questions.
>
> What is certain is that Manson's admittance to Boys Town was meant to turn his life around. ~ Omaha World-Herald[374]

When queried, McDowell responded that one needed to read his truth mixed with lies "tell-all book" to get...the "truth".

> So, what went wrong at Boys Town? McDowell wouldn't say. In fact, his response was, "No spoilers today." ~ Omaha Lifestyles[375]

“Secular, America”: Jesuit Father Edmund Walsh, namesake of the Georgetown School of Foreign Service, which boasts endless numbers of the world’s elite alumni from judges to generals, accompanies General Douglas MacArthur after helping guide him in his reconstruction of post-war Japan (Tokyo, 1948). The Jesuits had a keen interest in seeing the “heretic Japanese” dealt with. Considering the priests enemy agents, insurgents and assassins (all true), Tokugawa Shoguns Hideyoshi and Ieyasu began restricting and finally expelling them from 1587 to 1614. Three centuries later, the Jesuits would exact their terrible revenge through their handmaids in the United States military culminating in a devastating pair of attacks on Hiroshima and Nagasaki (the port they were finally ejected from in the 17th century); all carefully co-ordinated in Japan by future Jesuit Superior General Pedro Arupe.[376] By “coincidence”, both of the Boeing B-29 “Superfortress” bombers involved in the assault (“Enola Gay” and “Bockscar”) were made special at the Martin plant at Offutt Air Force base in Omaha.[377][xxxi] Wikimedia Commons What is for certain is that both Boys Town and the Omaha World-Herald would be implicated in child sex slavery of satanic proportions just a decade later. More on that in Chapter 21.

Whatever happened at Boys Town, it was enough to drive Manson to escape just a few days after his internment.

Despite the fact that McDowell was on the team —

So, how did the folks at Boys Town respond to McDowell’s questions?

> "…When they saw I was not out to harm them or their great institution, most were very cooperative," he said. "On balance, I was very impressed with Boys Town." ~ Omaha Lifestyles[378]

— he still wasn't allow to see Manson's files. Only there a few days, yet Manson's Boys Town dossier was forbidden to a trusted author?

Does it contain meticulous records of Manson's development through multiple Catholic and government institutions?

If the goal was to bring Charles Manson into the Devil's Simulation by subjecting him to the mental virus of sexual abuse it worked flawlessly.

> In what would be his last act of violence before the Hollywood murder spree that would make him infamous, while behind bars, Manson sodomized a young boy while holding a knife to his throat. ~ The Weekly View[379]

His "training" complete, things moved fast. The coming tragedy was set into play by willing members of government who allowed the dangerous convict to relocate to America's center stage.

> On his release day, March 21, 1967, Manson received permission to move to San Francisco, where, with the help of a prison acquaintance, he moved into an apartment in Berkeley. In prison, bank robber Alvin Karpis had taught him to play the steel guitar. Now, living mostly by panhandling, he soon got to know Mary Brunner, a 23-year-old graduate of the University of Wisconsin – Madison. Brunner was working as a library assistant at University of California, Berkeley, and Manson moved in with her. According to a second-hand account, he overcame her resistance to his bringing other women in to live with them. Before long, they were sharing Brunner's residence with 18 other women. ~ Wikipedia[380]

His prosecutor and biographer (an odd combination unless one has been steered by the Machine to be a gatekeeper), Vincent Bugliosi, seemed in his research to miss completely Manson's overwhelming connections to Catholicism. Instead, Bugliosi claimed Manson was influenced by obscure sources like Scientology and the Process Church.

> Manson established himself as a guru in San Francisco's Haight-Ashbury, which during 1967's "Summer of Love" was emerging as the signature hippie locale. Vincent Bugliosi said in his book Helter Skelter that Manson appeared to have borrowed philosophically from the Process Church, whose members believed Satan would become reconciled to Christ, and they would come together at the end of the world to judge humanity. Expounding a philosophy that included some of the Scientology he had studied in prison,[1]:163–164 he soon had the first of his groups of followers, which have been called the Manson Family, most of them female.[1]:137–146 ~ (user-edited) Wikipedia[381]

Satan being redeemed is a central Luciferian fantasy, and an ancient myth.

The "Process Church of the Final Judgement" was founded in London in the early 1960s by former Scientologists, Mary and Robert DeGrimston.

Scientology was founded by author Lafayette Ronald Hubbard who received his Luciferian training with "rocket engineer" John Whiteside "Jack" Parsons in occultist and MI5 operative Aleister Crowley's Californian branch of the Ordo Templi Orientis ("O.T.O.").[xxxii]

Hubbard "assisted" Parsons with perverse sexual rituals designed to usher in the "Æon of Horus" via the conception of the "magick [sic] child". This was Crowley's "Babalon [sic] Working". Afterward, Hubbard absconded with Parsons' life savings, a little over $20,000. He also took Parsons' teenage girlfriend Sara Northrup who was the sister of his first wife Helen.

"Charlie's Girls"

One of "Charlie's Girls" (along with Lynette Fromme and Mary Brunner) was Patricia Dianne Krenwinkel.[xxxiii]

Krenwinkel quickly became the matron of the "Manson Family", providing care to the several illegitimate children birthed in the group and giving Manson his most emphatic support.

Krenwinkel has deep Catholic roots.

> For a time she taught Catechism (Roman Catholic religious instruction) and considered becoming a nun. She decided to attend the

> Jesuit college, Spring Hill, in Mobile, Alabama. ~ Wikipedia[382]

It was Krenwinkel who, along with fellow “Family” member Ella Bailey, managed to get themselves into the Los Angeles home of Beach Boys founding member and drummer, Dennis Wilson. They brought along Manson and the rest of the “Family” in short order.

> Wilson paid for studio time to record songs written and performed by Manson. Wilson introduced Manson to entertainment business acquaintances. These included Gregg Jakobson, Terry Melcher and Rudi Altobelli (the last of whom owned a house he would soon rent to actress Sharon Tate and her husband, director Roman Polanski). [1]:250–253 Jakobson, who was impressed by “the whole Charlie Manson package” of artist/lifestylist/philosopher, also paid to record Manson material. ~ Wikipedia[383],[xxxiv]

Patricia Krenwinkel (not Charles Manson) personally participated in the events of August 9th, 1969.

For the Manson trial and subsequent historical record, Vincent Bugliosi would have us believe that it was simply a twisted Manson whim that sent the “Family” to the property of Terry Melcher and murder everyone they found.

They brutally killed Jay Sebring, Abigail Folger, Wojciech Frykowski and Steven Parent.

But perhaps the most well-known victim was actress Sharon Tate, the wife of Director Rajmund Roman Thierry Polański.

Polanski is a Polish Jew who, like so many other Jews in prominent positions (especially Hollywood), has Roman roots.

Polanski’s mother was raised Roman Catholic in Russia, and the “Jewish / agnostic” Director was, himself, thoroughly trained in Romanism.

> After being introduced to Catholicism primarily by a Catholic family that he lived with while hiding from the Nazis, Roman Polanski became a religious Catholic when he was about 10 years old. He > staunchly identified himself as Catholic until he was fifteen years old.

> ~ Adherents.com[384]

It’s also interesting to note that Polanski didn’t pick another Jew for his affections: Sharon Tate was also Roman Catholic.[385] Despite her “liberated” Hollywood lifestyle it was her Catholicism that urged her to press Polanski to legitimize their new family in marriage.

Ironically, this pressure lead to her murder.

Tate was on the eve of giving birth to their first child and simultaneously working on the French / Italian movie Twelve Plus One. It was the night before her return trip to Rome.

Apparently lost to prosecutor Bugliosi was the fact that both Sharon Tate and her child were unwanted by Roman Polanski.

> Just as Sharon made a conscious decision to pursue her career again, the unexpected happened: she became pregnant. She had made no secret of the fact that she wanted a baby, but Roman, reluctant even to commit to marriage, was hardly in the mood to consider starting a family. He had previously told Sharon. according to one source, that he would never have a child. ...
>
> Sharon had been using an IUD, installed in France a year earlier. Her doctor was mystified as to how the pregnancy occured.[6] Although she knew of the pregnancy by the middle of February, Sharon did not tell Roman. Their marriage, just a year old, was already in deep trouble, an unsettling mixture of happiness and strained arguments. Uncertain about her own future, she still clung to the belief that fatherhood might change Roman’s philandering ways. Yet she was also aware of his opposition to a baby. Throughout the three years of their relationship. Sharon had always acquiesced to Roman’s wishes, and he had never shown himself to be particularly sensitive to her own desires. Sharon was also aware of her own weaknesses. In the past, Roman had easily managed to influence her in matters professional and personal. She had always wanted a strong, committed marriage, and it is a measure of his power over her that Sharon had begun to parrot Roman’s views > about an open relationship, even though she herself was opposed to such an arrangement. Now she apparently feared he might coerce her into having an abortion, and friends later insisted that she deliberately kept the news from her husband until such an option was too late.[7] ~ King[386]

Polanski may even have convinced himself of the need to murder his unwanted wife and miracle child, having directed Rosemary's Baby just the previous year; a movie about a satanic cult conducting sex rituals to give rise to the Antichrist.

Within a decade, Polanski would be tried for drugging, raping and sodomizing 13-year-old[387] Samantha Gailey at the home of actor Jack Nicholson.

Polanski was well taken care of in court.

> As a result of the plea bargain, Polanski pleaded guilty to the charge of "Unlawful Sexual Intercourse with a minor,"[115][116] and was ordered to undergo 90 days of psychiatric evaluation at California Institution for Men at Chino.[117] Upon release from prison after 42 days, Polanski agreed to the plea bargain, his penalty to be time served along with probation. ~ Wikipedia[388]

However, something quite unexpected happened — Judge Laurence J. Rittenband had determined to ignore the plea bargain and apply a sentence which may have included up to 50 years of imprisonment.

Fortunately for Polanski, the sources that protected him were fully aware of Judge Rittenband's every move and forewarned him.

> Polanski decided not to appear at his sentencing. He told his friend, director Dino De Laurentis [actually spelled "De Laurentiis"], "I've made up my mind. I'm getting out of here."[119] On the day before sentencing in 1978, Polanski left the country.[122] As a French citizen, he has been protected from extradition and has lived mostly in France since then.[123] ~ Wikipedia[389]

De Laurentiis (who died in 2010 at aged 91) was not only a Roman Catholic but also a Roman — born and bred. Among his surviving family is granddaughter Giada De Laurentiis (wealthy Master Chef at the Food Channel) and second wife Martha (born Martha Schumacher), 35 years his junior. At 70 and 72 he sired two daughters by her.

In fact, De Laurentiis lived and died like a Pope.

> It will be a long time before Hollywood sees another Roman Catholic funeral the likes of which Dino De Laurentiis received Monday.
>
> The legendary Italian producer, whose career encompassed everything from Fellini classics to Serpico to King Kong [1976] to Blue Velvet*, was laid to rest after the ceremony at the Cathedral of Our Lady of the Angels in downtown Los Angeles. The Oscar winner died Thursday at age 91.*
>
> The was a long list of Hollywood names filling the pews, including Bob Daly, Rob Friedman, Jeff Berg, Chris McGurk, Hawk Koch, Lou Pitt, Rick Nicita and Paula Wagner, Tom Pollock, Alan Ladd Jr., Sam Raimi, Maria Shriver and Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger. ~ Hollywood Reporter[390]

Was Charles Manson the patsy to a Hollywood / Roman Catholic cult sacrifice?

Even his “fact-mixed-with-fiction” biographer Lawson McDowell implied as much.

> So, does McDowell believe there is a question about Manson’s guilt?
>
> “Perhaps, but to me, a bigger question is the fairness of the trial. We live in a nation where the rule of law is so important that we set people free if there is any reasonable doubt of guilt. Yet, in Manson’s case, we had a suspect who was denied his own witnesses, denied the right to cross-examine, and faced a single eyewitness against him, a girl who had been part of the actual murder party… America needed a demon to explain these unthinkable murders. Manson was the answer.”

> As for the conversations themselves, McDowell said that the two had to work at being congenial. McDowell had to suppress his own biases against Manson, while Manson had to overcome his distrust for outsiders and the fear of people trying to hurt him.
>
> "There are plenty of killers in prison who would bask in the notoriety of killing a celebrity like Manson," he said.
>
> As for Manson, he still maintains his innocence; has since the start according to McDowell.
>
> "Most people think he was convicted of murder, but that's not correct," he said. "Committing murder was never the question. He was convicted of conspiracy to commit murder."
>
> "Before He Became a Monster" was released earlier this month. McDowell said that readers will find it entertaining and upbeat with little gore while suggesting what might have gone terribly wrong at Boys Town.
>
> "For me," said McDowell, "the book was a mind-opening project that left me wondering: Has America's demon been telling the truth all along?" ~ Omaha Lifestyles[391]

Los Angeles County District Attorney Vincent Bugliosi was placed on the map by his prosecution of Manson. He would ride his fame to become a "New York Times bestselling author".

In 2007, Bugliosi looked to further bury another patsy, Lee Harvey Oswald, with his book Reclaiming History: The Assassination of President John F. Kennedy. According to Bugliosi, Oswald did it.

The year after, Bugliosi would indict George W. Bush for the terrible crimes of the "Global War on Terror" with his book The Prosecution of George W. Bush for Murder.

Jesuit-trained CIA operatives are the true culprits of the heinous crimes of 9/11[392] and its aftermath. For instance, the inversely-named "Patriot Act" (written and ready in 2001) was crafted by Georgetown Law Professor and Roman Catholic Viet D. Dinh.[393]

Author Atticus Lish quoted Roman Catholic “Feminist” Camile Paglia in his praise for Prosecution, calling Bugliosi “a classic example of a Jesuit, a monk packing a pistol.”[394]

Rome has secretly ridden America’s military to untold crimes and atrocities and then used agents like Bugliosi to cover her tracks.

Bugliosi’s religious background has remained a mystery until his last book. Following in the footsteps of another Jesuit-trained “atheist”, François-Marie “Voltaire” Arouet, Bugliosi wrote Divinity of Doubt: The God Question in 2011, just 4 years before his death in 2015.

> I grew up a Catholic, attending Assumption Hall, a Catholic school with nuns of the Benedictine order as teachers, through the eighth grade. And of course it was inculcated into one that God was all-good, all-powerful, and all-knowing. The conundrum which most of us have heard, that either God can prevent evil but chooses not to, which means he is not all-good, or he wishes to prevent evil but cannot, which means he is not all-powerful, was not something I, as a believer, concerned myself with in those early years. But something similar was troubling to me.
>
> The head of the Blessed Sacrament Church, which was associated with the school I attended, was a gray-haired eminence named Monsignor Limmer. The monsignor appeared ancient to us kids, and with his deep, baritone voice and dour expression, someone not only to look up to but fear. Though he lived in the back of the church, we sensed that he really came from some other place, some place where ordinary humans did not go. The good monsignor would visit our classroom for ten minutes or so once every week or two, and we listened in awed silence to his wisdom about God and Christ. One day when I was in the third or fourth grade, he was explaining that God was all-good, all-powerful, and all-knowing, and I asked him why (I had a yen for the why question even back then), if God was all-good, he would put people on this earth who he knew were going to end up in hell, burning throughout eternity. The monsignor proceeded to tell me it was a good question, but he had the answer. God gives all of us free will, the monsignor assured us, and when we come to the fork in the road where > one path will lead us to heaven arid one to hell, we have a choice, and God is not responsible for what choice we make. Yes, I said, but if God is also all-knowing, he knows what path we're going to take before we take it. So, I said, I still didn't understand how God would put people on this earth who he already knew were going to end up in hell. The monsignor coughed nervously, noted it was the end of the hour, and said we'd talk about it some other time, a time that never came. No one in Christianity, to my knowledge, can answer that question.

>
> I even have trouble with the whole concept of prayer, in which literally billions of people throughout history have begged God for mercy. But since God is supposed to be all-good and merciful, why would we have to beg him to be what he supposedly already is? Most of those who believe in God also believe in the devil, who they feel is responsible for all the evil in the world. I'm going to sound laughable here, and it's nothing I'm recommending, since I don't believe in the devil, but logically speaking, shouldn't people be praying to the devil? One doesn't have to beg a good being to be good, one only has to ask a bad being to be good. No? Since the devil is the bad guy, isn't he the one we should begging for mercy? Yet the Jesus prayer, and informal personal ones, says: "Lord Jesus Christ, have mercy on me."[395]

Unfortunately Mr. Bugliosi went on to receive his answer from the Source before we could tell him his question was non-sequitur. The fact that God has foreknowledge of the damnation of souls has nothing to do with His goodness. Creating human beings with guaranteed outcomes abrogates free will.

His second "conundrum" is even more Jesuitical than the first. Exactly what is he talking about? Generalized claims of "people begging for mercy" tell us nothing of substance. Each individual is answered according to their needs and their relationship with YHWH through Jesus Christ. No relationship with Jesus Christ, no answer. Simple.

We're not sure how Mr. Bugliosi fared after that but we're sure he was "begging" for himself with just as little response.

Helter Skelter

Even post his imprisonment, Charles Manson continues to be handled by Jesuit agents (who also conveniently make a buck off him) like his prison counselor Edward George. In 1999, George wrote Taming the Beast: Charles Manson's Life Behind Bars.

If Manson is a Roman patsy, it has been ordained by Roman agents that he never sees the light of day (or truth).

> [Taming the Beast is] The latest entry in the canon of a true madman. George, a retired corrections officer who met Manson in 1975 at San Quentin, says up front that his Jesuit training led him to believe that the beast could indeed be tamed. His years of knowing Manson whom he frequently describes as devilish or demonic, ... as both George's narrative and the parole board hearing transcripts cited here make clear, Manson is as monstrously sick as ever.
> ~ Kirkus[396]

Manson's apparent racism seems to be part of a far-deeper agenda; one that meshes quite well with the Luciferian / gnostic / Jesuit / Freemason tactic of "divide and conquer" by enflaming racial hatred. He even gave it a name; "Helter Skelter", taken from the Beatles song released just one year before the "Family" crime spree in 1969. It was published by the group on what is known as "The White Album" because it has no graphics or identification but is simply all white.

It was a stark contrast to the cover art of the album the year prior; Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band. Besides the band members in brightly colored uniforms are some 57 other historical notables in wax or cardboard cut-outs including Aleister Crowley and Lewis Carroll.

Only one personality appears more than once; in fact three times.

— Child actress Shirley Temple.[397]

Chapter 10

Maskell: The Real Murdering Monster, Not Manson

3 January 1970: The body of Roman Catholic nun Catherine Ann Cesnik is found in a garbage dump in Lansdowne, Maryland.[xxxv]

It is no coincidence that America's Capitol (named after one of the seven hills of Rome) is found in the vicinity of the Vatican's key colony of Maryland — along with the major headquarters of coercive force in the United States from the Pentagon to the Nation Security Agency.

> In 1534, Ignatius Loyola started his Jesuit order[1161], later to be officially sanctioned by the "Holy See" in 1540.
>
> In 1634, Sir Cecilius Calvert, Lord Baltimore, commissioned the Catholic colony of Maryland in America for Rome and managed it from England.[1162] ... ~ Illuminati Unmasked[398]

> If manipulation was easy in England, it was even easier outside her borders where the Jesuits were safe to operate unhindered by English law.
>
> One of the first colonies in America was granted to a newly-converted Roman Catholic named George Calvert, Lord Baltimore, by "Anglican" King Charles I. Calvert would pick a name for his acquisition that would have an immediate response from fellow Catholics: Mary-land. The capital would become "Baltimore".
>
> George Calvert passed on and left his work for Rome to his son, Cecilius, who wasted no time putting together two ships filled with > Catholics and Jesuits; the Ark and the Dove. They were joined in America by the Carroll family, John, Daniel and Charles.

>
> They quickly got to work, insinuating their way into all of America's key institutions and events.
>
> Daniel Carroll was one of only 5 men to sign both the Articles of Confederation and the Constitution.
>
> At the time of the Revolution, the "Capitol" was firmly planted in Mary-land.
>
> The term "Capitol" is derived from the Temple of Jupiter on Capitoline — one of the seven hills of Rome.
>
> > "Here is the mind which has wisdom: The seven heads are seven mountains on which the woman sits." ~ Revelation 17:9
>
> ~ Secret History[399]

The newspapers, law enforcement, prosecutors and judges appeared to be all over the coincidentally-convenient murder of Roman Polanski's unwanted wife and child by a threat created in Roman Catholic institutions like Boys Town — Charles Manson. Meanwhile, a self-made predator was ruling unhindered on the other side of the country in the capital of Roman Catholic Maryland.

Father Anthony Joseph Maskell was the chaplain at Archbishop Francis Keough High School in Baltimore.

He was also a serial child rapist and complicit in at least one murder.

He preyed mostly upon teenage girls while at Keough but he was an indiscriminate animal who also sodomized boys, like one victim who admitted he was assaulted by Maskell while at a seminary summer camp in the 1950's.[400]

Fitting the profile of a predator, Father A. Joseph Maskell exploited his position of trust and respect to target the most vulnerable.

> Keough was a traditional Catholic school, where students were required to wear knee-length plaid skirts and shirts buttoned all the way up to their necks. But it was hardly immune to the 1960s counterculture. Former Keough students said that in Maskell's office and in the nearby rectory, where he lived, the priest offered the girls a relaxed, open-minded environment where they could talk freely about sex and drugs, drink alcohol, smoke cigarettes on his red velour sofa and ask for help dealing with their traditional Catholic parents. At the peak of the sexual revolution, Maskell was well positioned to exploit the experimental and rebellious atmosphere of the late 1960s and early 1970s. In a confusing time, he offered an intoxicating cocktail of spiritual guidance, hypnosis, booze, pills and himself.
>
> Maskell was a charismatic young man in his late 20s when he started at Keough as chaplain in 1967, two years after it opened. Broad-shouldered, with light blue eyes, the Irish-descended priest also served as the school's psychological counselor. He later earned an advanced degree in psychology from the prestigious Johns Hopkins University.
>
> Former Keough students said Maskell used his charm, psychology training and moral authority to first disarm the young girls, then to manipulate them into sexual relationships. He targeted struggling or badly behaved students — [Gemma] Hoskins and [Abbie] Schaub, who got straight As, said he never bothered them — asking the girls if they were having problems at home, or if they had been sexually active with their boyfriends or used drugs. Sometimes the priest used repetitive phrases — "I only want what's best for you, just what's best for you," one woman recalled him saying — to coax them into talking.

> [Teresa] Lancaster, a soft-spoken mother of four with wispy blonde hair, said that when she was a junior in 1970, she went to Maskell's office to talk to him about some problems at home. Her parents had found a marijuana joint in her bag, she said, and they didn't approve of the long-haired boy she was dating. It was the middle of the school day, and Maskell invited her into his office and shut the door behind her. He then proceeded to strip her clothes off and forced her to sit on his lap, naked. He told her he was touching her in a "godly manner."
> ...
>
> Sometimes he would play Irish music while he was with her, "almost like it was a sick date," Lancaster said. ~ Huffington Post[401]

As a loyal member of the Devil's Simulation, "Father" Maskell proceeded to rob his victims of both their innocence and their souls by associating their trauma with their Faith.

50 years later, the Roman Catholic-dominated internet movie streaming service "Netflix" premiered a documentary on what happened at Archbishop Keogh.

Motive is difficult to discern. Often Catholic-controlled media will sacrifice a pawn (especially one that's been dead for decades) in order to gain the perception that they are doing their jobs as journalists, reporters, editors, etc.

Director Ryan White is personally involved; he's Roman Catholic and comes from a large Catholic family.[402] In fact, he says that his aunt was a classmate of Maskell's chief victim, Jane Doe (Jean Wehner).[403] In an interview with E! Live from the Red Carpet, White made a believable case that he simply wants justice[404] (good luck).

Although Maskell (if he's critically referenced by news media at all) is usually painted as a "lone wolf" predator, he was extremely powerful and plugged in to city, state and national governments including the organizations that carry guns — police and military. He was Chaplain for the Baltimore City Police, Baltimore County Police, Maryland State Police and the Air National Guard.

His brother Thomas “Tommy” Maskell was a Baltimore city police officer.

Victim Jean Wehner remembered that Maskell had specifically invited his cop brother to abuse her, which he did.[405]

Maskell provided his controlled sex slave children to many of them.

There was even an instance where an officer balked at raping the young girl but Maskell cajoled him into it and he did.[406]

One series of rapes occurred on the pagan/demonic festival of Samhain (“Halloween”), clearly showing that the crimes were committed for Lucifer, and not just lust.

> After pointing out that “I was afraid of the man [Father Maskell] because he had a gun,” Ms. Lancaster described how the priest was also serving as the chaplain to the Baltimore Police Department, and how he would sometimes take her on “police runs” with policemen and then encourage them to sexually assault her in his presence.
>
> “On one occasion, Halloween night of 1970, I was sexually assaulted by two policemen in uniforms, while Maskell looked on,” she said. “He also took me to a gynecologist in Towson [Dr. Christian Richter]. While Maskell raped me, the gynecologist felt my breasts.” ~ Inside Baltimore[407]

There was a complete blending of “secular” institutions with Catholic authority, power and abuse. While presiding over St. Clement Parish before becoming Archbishop Keogh’s Chaplain, Maskell supervised the local Boy Scout Troop — fertile ground for his proclivities.

Maskell used the church where he pastored as a hub to bring other Luciferian brethren in to ritually rape the children.

> Several of the women who spoke to The Huffington Post about Maskell’s abuse described the priest setting up what amounted to a full-on brothel.
>
> Wehner said that during her senior year, Maskell began driving her to St. Clement Church, where he preached, after school, and that a string of men abused her in his office there. She does not know who the men > were, but they referred to each other by generic names — Brother Ed, Brother Ted and Brother Bob. She said some of the men gave Maskell money in exchange for the abuse. “He was prostituting us,” Wehner said.[408]

Anthony Joseph Maskell was a priest among priests; his mother raised him from childhood for his destiny. She had him practice with wafers simulating the Catholic Eucharist. While other boys played ball, young Anthony Joseph was in the yard saying Mass.[409]

Maskell was in the perfect position to provide his brethren in the Baltimore Police Department with victims as well as keep himself screened from anyone who would dare buck the system and attempt to stop them.

> Maskell in particular was a difficult target. At the time, he served as the chaplain for the Baltimore County police, the Maryland State Police and the Maryland National Guard. Maskell kept a police scanner and loaded handgun in his car, drank beer with the officers at a local dive bar, and often went on “ride-alongs” with his police friends at night to respond to petty crimes or catch teenagers making out in their cars.
>
> Bob Fisher, the owner of an automotive repair shop in southwest Baltimore where Maskell took his car on his days off, remembers the priest boasting about his police privileges to anyone who would listen. “He’d say, ‘I’d hear something on the scanner, and we’d jump in the car and take off, and we’d catch these people!’” said Fisher, 74. “Really wild stories.” ~ Huffington Post[410]

Maskell enlisted the aid of a fellow Luciferian who was also a doctor, to make sure none of his victims got pregnant.

> The women recall that Maskell had a gynecologist friend, Dr. Richter, who would examine them to make sure they weren’t pregnant. Lancaster claims Maskell took her to see Richter for a pregnancy test and then raped her on the table while Richter performed a breast exam.

> Fisher, the auto repair shop owner, said Maskell boasted about taking high school girls to the gynecologist when he dropped his car off at the shop in the afternoons. "He would say, 'Me and the doctor, we take them back and we give them exams and check them,'" said Fisher. "There's no question he was always involved with the exams — that he made clear."[411]

The priest had a truly diseased mind and subjected his victims to any perversion he could think of. He even raped some of them on the school chapel altar in order to show his loyalty to Lucifer.

> Maskell's trips to the gynecologist reflected a fixation with the practice. Lancaster said he liked to perform pelvic exams on the altar of the school chapel and administer vaginal douches, enemas and anal suppositories in the bathroom of his office and in the rectory. Multiple other girls also said they were on the receiving end of the mock gynecological exams and enemas. It was a way to establish further authority over the girls — the creation of a doctor-patient relationship — while acting out whatever fetish inspired the abuse.[412]

The children lived in fear, never knowing when they would again be called to Maskell's office.

Young Donna VonDenBosch told one of the nuns that Maskell was raping her but the woman dismissed her accusation.[413]

Only Sister Cathy Cesnik, a popular young nun who taught English and drama, seemed to have any compassion for the girls.

> The only person who tried to help the girls was Sister Cathy Cesnik. Wehner said that in 1969, at the end of her sophomore year, Cesnik stole a moment alone with her in her classroom. "Are the priests hurting you?" the nun asked gently. Wehner nodded her head, too afraid to open her mouth. Cesnik told Wehner to go home and enjoy the summer. She said she would handle the situation.
>
> Kathy Hobeck, 63, said she asked Cesnik to protect her from Maskell's abuse when she attended Keough in 1968. "She would make excuses for me when he would ask me to come down [to his office]," Hobeck > said. “She’d say, ‘She’s in a study, she can’t get away,’ or she’d make up a story.”[414]

Cathy Cesnik and her roommate Sister Russell Phillips were commissioned by Mother Superior Maurice Kelly[xxxvi] to be part of a special clandestine program where they were sent in civilian attire to teach in public schools incognito. Again, this shows the all-encompassing power of the Catholic Church over “secular” governments everywhere, especially in the United States.[xxxvii]

As a Roman Catholic nun, Cesnik was not quick to intervene in what a priest was doing (service to “the Church” was always top priority) but she had more conscience and integrity than anyone else at Keogh.

She began asking probing questions of Maskell’s victims, but power and the culture of control at Keogh, and even throughout the city of Baltimore and beyond, kept all who knew quiet.

Her integrity would eventually cost Catherine Cesnik dearly.

> Around 7:30 p.m. on November 7, 1969, Cesnik told her roommate, Helen Russell Phillips, that she was going to swing by the bank and then shop for an engagement gift for her cousin. According to media reports from the time, she cashed a $255 paycheck at a bank in Catonsville, Maryland, then drove to the Edmondson Village Shopping Center, where she bought buns at Muhly’s Bakery. When she hadn’t > returned home by 11 p.m., Phillips called two priest friends, who drove to her apartment and called the police. Later that night, Cesnik's brand-new green Ford Maverick was found unlocked and illegally parked a block from her apartment, even though she had a designated parking spot behind the building. There was no sign of the nun anywhere.[415]

An honest-but-cowed Italian Roman Catholic officer was promptly put on the case which was quickly handed off and has remained "unsolved" ever since.

> The man assigned to investigate Cesnik's disappearance was Nick Giangrasso, a 28-year-old homicide detective who had worked in the Baltimore City Police Department for five years. Giangrasso led the investigation for the three months Cesnik was missing, then had to turn the case over to Baltimore County detectives when her body was found outside the city limits. But Giangrasso, now 72, spent enough time on the case to feel like something suspicious was going on between the police department and the church.
>
> "The Catholic Church had a lot of input into the police department," he said. "A lot of power."[416]

In November of 1969, Maskell then took his favorite victim, 16-year-old Jean Wehner, to a garbage dump outside the city It was then that she saw the body crumpled on the ground.

> The week prior, ... Cesnik ... had vanished ... Students, parents and the local media buzzed about the 26-year-old's disappearance. People from all over Baltimore County helped the police comb local parks and wooded areas for any sign of her.
>
> Wehner immediately recognized the lifeless body as her teacher. "I knew it was her," she recalled recently. "She wasn't that far gone that you couldn't tell it was her."
>
> Cesnik was still clad in her aqua-colored coat, and maggots were crawling on her face. Wehner tried to brush them off with her bare hands. "Help me get these off of her!" she cried, turning to Maskell in > a panic. Instead, she says, the priest leaned down behind her and whispered in her ear: "You see what happens when you say bad things about people?" ...

>
> Two months later, the police announced that a pair of hunters passing through a dump outside of Baltimore had stumbled upon the body of the missing nun. Cesnik had choke marks on her neck and a round hole about the size of a quarter in the back of her skull. An autopsy confirmed she had been killed by a blow from a blunt object, probably a brick or a ball-peen hammer. But ... the police never solved it.[417]

There were some initial interviews conducted. Gerard Koob was the first. At the time, Koob was a Jesuit priest and Sister Cisnik's lover. Today, he's a married Methodist minister living in New Jersey.

> Harry Bannon, another retired Baltimore City homicide investigator, told the Baltimore City Paper in 2004 that he thought Koob knew more about the murder than he was admitting, but that the church forced him to back off the priest. "The church lawyers stepped in and they talked to the higher-ups at the police department. And we were told, 'Either charge Koob with a crime or let him go. Stop harassing him,'" said Bannon, who died in 2009. "After that, we had to break away from him. And that was a shame, because I'm sure Koob knew more than he was telling."[418]

The shocking power of the Catholic Church in controlling critical secular authorities like politicians, cops and judges is the most well-kept secret even in today's "information age". Catholic clergy can literally get away with murder.

> On March 27, 1992, Sister Abhaya awoke at 4:00 AM to begin her studies at the St. Pius X convent in Kottayam, India. Before starting for the day, the 19-year-old Knanaya Catholic nun went to the kitchen to get a glass of water. The next person to come to the kitchen found the refrigerator door open. There was a bottle of spilled water, there was a slipper under the fridge, and Sister Abhaya was missing. After a short search, her body was found in the convent's well.

> At first, her death was ruled a suicide, despite there being a number of cuts and abrasions on her body. The case remained closed until almost 16 years later. The nuns at the convent had sent a petition to India's police agency, the Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI), asking them to reopen the case, which they did in 2007.
>
> During their investigation, the CBI interviewed three individuals who lived at the convent — Father Jose Puthurukkayil, Father Thomas M. Kottur, and Sister Sephy. The CBI gave all three a Narco Analysis, which is a truth serum test. Under the influence of the serum, the three confessed to the murder. Apparently, Sister Abhaya caught the three of them in a compromising sexual position. Sephy panicked and struck Sister Abhaya three times with the blunt side of an ax. The three of them then dumped the body in the well.
>
> Puthurukkayil, Kottur, and Sephy were arrested but were released on bail. They have yet to go to trial because of how the evidence was handled. ~ Viral Top 10s[419]

Actually, the evidence was mis-handled.

During the original investigation, the Superintendent of Police (the chief law enforcement officer) helped the investigation by destroying evidence. Subsequent oversight seemed unable to trace or track down any records.

> The CBI on Monday told the Kerala High Court that the agency was unable to trace the additional records and old files from the Kottayam sub-divisional magistrate's office in a case relating to the destruction of evidence in the Sister Abhaya murder case.
>
> It said it had completed the investigation into the case and would submit the final report before the CBI special court before June 30.
>
> The High Court had asked the CBI to continue with the investigation into the Abhaya murder case after social activist Jomon Puthenpurackal had moved it saying former superintendent of police K.T. Michael, who investigated the case first, was instrumental in destroying the pieces of material evidence, including personal clothing > recovered from Sr. Abhaya's body, a plastic bottle, a pair of lady's slippers and a white veil.

>
> They were produced before the SDM's court, Kottayam, but were destroyed hastily on the basis of a note prepared by the clerk of SDM court on July 7, 2003, without handing them over to the CBI, the petition had stated.
>
> The CBI said it examined 48 persons during the investigation and scrutinised documents, including registers of distribution and unclaimed articles of 1992-93 period, files relating to the unnatural death of Sister Abhaya maintained at the SDM office and inquest reports.
>
> The destruction of material evidence was of great significance as the case had no eyewitnesses. ~ Deccan Chronicle[420]

There can be a tendency for laity — Catholics and non-Catholics alike — to look upon nuns as having more compassion or empathy than priests based on their gender and human predispositions to seeing females as more loving than males.[xxxviii]

But Nun Are Brave

Unfortunately, nuns have proven equal partakers in the Devil's Simulation. Although "sisters" may not aggressively violate children in the same numbers as priests, they give active aid to the predators (and not the prey; innocent, vulnerable children).

We need not even leave "predominantly Hindu" India for such an example.

In February of 2017, arrest warrants were sworn out for six nuns and a doctor for concealing the rape of an underage girl by a priest.

The assault impregnated the victim and the cabal illegally secreted the girl to a Catholic orphanage in Kannur where she would give birth. She was then forced to leave her baby in the "care" of the orphanage.

> "They deliberately hid the incident from officials," Prajish Thottathil, a senior police officer, told AFP, adding some of the accused likely also knew about the alleged assault.
>
> Three of the accused work at a private hospital while the rest were associated with the orphanage where the baby was left.
>
> The accused priest Robin Vadakkumchery was arrested last week after the victim gave birth in February, prompting an investigation.
>
> Under Indian law doctors and hospitals must report all teenage pregnancies and deliveries to authorities.
>
> The victim told investigators the accused priest raped her at a church-run school last year. ~ AFP[421]

Nuns deal with their vow of celibacy[xxxix] in the same way as priests do. Many of them find an outlet for their normal human drives that is, at best, unhealthy and, at worst, guarantees great evil.

Religious adherence in India is said[422] to be 79.8% Hindu, 14.2% Muslim, 2.3% "Christian" and 1.7% Sikh yet it was the preferred location for an American pedophile priest to escape to once his crimes came to light.

Father Joseph Jeyapaul had been raping teenage girls in his Greenbush, Minnesota parish. He raped them in the parish office, in the confessional and where-ever he chose.

After a year of his abuse, Megan Peterson (a 14 year-old “altar-server”[xl]) found the courage to speak to a school counselor who then informed police.

Jeyapaul was somehow alerted to the proceedings (by a Catholic cop or fellow pedophile perhaps) and fled to India.

Amazingly, he was arrested by Interpol and extradited back to the United States.

Peterson and another girl came forward with charges. Peterson’s were dropped and the priest plead guilty to the other. He was given a single year prison sentence which was immediately waived in lieu of “time served” while waiting for his trial. He returned to India where the Vatican promptly reinstated him to full priestly duties.[423]

Black Sabbath

In Ohio, Catholic clergy were given full rein to do anything they wished from raping children to conducting satanic rituals. Such rituals included abortions, torturing animals and murdering an entire range of victims from infants to adults.

In 1980, on the day before Easter (known as “Black Saturday” to Roman Catholics[424]), Sister Margaret Ann Pahl was found dead in the chapel where she worked at the Toledo Mercy Hospital in Toledo, Ohio.

> She had been strangled, draped with an altar cloth and stabbed 31 times, including nine wounds in the shape of an upside-down cross. There was a smear of blood across her forehead, as if she had been anointed in [pagan / Roman Catholic] last rites. ~ NY Times[425]

Apparently, the Jewish reporter and editor at the Times didn’t want to get too specific[xli] but details of just how despicable the crime was are available.

> She had been confronted by her killer as she prepared for that day’s services. Pahl was choked to death’s door, jabbed mercilessly with a letter opener, and then [the elderly woman was] sexually violated. She was found with an altar cloth shrouding her torso.
>
> It was a ritual murder with hallmarks of pathological rage.
>
> Among 31 stab wounds, nine punctures over her heart formed the outline of an inverted Crucifix, a demonic symbol. She had been stripped below the waist and defiled with a cross.
>
> The homicide was unthinkable. Who would do such a thing to an elderly nun? ~ New York Daily News[426]

The immediate and only suspect was her co-worker at the hospital, Father Gerald Robinson.

But he got a “pass” from police.

> One of the first police officers at the scene of the 1980 killing of Sister Margaret Ann Pahl in Toledo, Ohio, told CBS News Tuesday that he > believed the slaying was not investigated as vigorously as it should have been.

>
> The Rev. Gerald Robinson, a Roman Catholic priest who worked at the same hospital as the 71-year-old nun, was charged this weekend with the bizarre, ritualistic slaying. He is being held on $200,000 bond.
>
> In an interview on The Early Show*, retired Toledo police officer Dave Davison said Robinson's was the only name ever mentioned as a suspect when the crime was first investigated in 1980.*
>
> "Everybody I talked to — and I talked to dozens — said either Father Robinson or that they didn't know his name, they said it was a priest," Davison told co-anchor Harry Smith. "I mean, there was no other name mentioned."
>
> Davison, a patrolman at the time ... happened to be among the first at the scene because he was having breakfast in the hospital cafeteria when the nun's body was found in the chapel. ...
>
> The investigation that followed "seemed to go nowhere," the retired officer said. "I mean, you talk to the guys, ask what progress. And basically they would toss you off. So it didn't go anywhere." ~ CBS News[427]

It was perfectly clear what happened and who did it, but nothing was done by sworn public servants.

> Police detective Steve Forrester and Tom Ross, an investigator with the Lucas County prosecutor's office, told The Blade newspaper that the nun's killing was part of a "ceremony" in the chapel. They would not elaborate.
>
> In December, authorities re-examined old evidence and concluded that the murder weapon, which they did not identify, was "in the control of the suspect."[428]

Actually, what neither CBS nor Toledo Police were admitting is that the "unidentified" murder weapon was Gerald Robinson's letter opener, still in his "control".

> Although it was not made public in 1980, detectives had found the letter opener used to stab the nun in Robinson's office. ~ New York Daily News[429]

The case remained "cold" for 20 years and Gerald Robinson continued on in his activities unmolested.

He even presided over the funeral of his victim, Sister Pahl.[430]

As officer Davison explained —

> "You have to remember on our department, the people in the upper command levels that had control on this are good Catholics."[431]

What that means is that Roman Catholicism is an insurgency. Where-ever Roman Catholics hold positions of authority, they are at risk of corruption and criminal activity because they are beholden to a foreign, malignant power.

Consequently, they are frequently placed in those key positions for just such utility.

As Joe Mahr, an investigative reporter for the Toledo Blade, told NPR's Madeleine Brand, Catholic clergy have been allowed to commit crimes at will in Toledo, thanks to a completely corrupt and controlled government at all levels.

> ...we've got about 10 priests that we're looking at, and they all range from priests who were overtly not arrested or they knew there were allegations to priests that got special treatment in other ways, even recently where there were children's services, which has child case workers where they wouldn't investigate a priest for nearly a year when they thought he might have access to children. So it kind of runs the gamut of favoritism. ...
>
> ...one of the best examples of the overt policy was the first case in 1958. There was a priest named Fred Garand (ph), and he was at a South Toledo church, and the captain of the detective bureau found out or suspected, I should say, that Father Garand was molesting at least one child in the neighborhood...there was no police report filed, no > investigation. Even the chief of detectives didn't or couldn't do anything.

>
> Brand: And this was simply because the chief of police was a prominent Catholic in the community?
>
> Mr. Mahr: That's what we believe. That's what officers have told us, yes.
>
> Brand: But how does that explain the continuation of the policy after he was no longer police chief?
>
> Mr. Mahr: What officers told us is it became ingrained in the culture of the department. This is a department that also had a lot of Catholics on it, like a lot of police forces in the country. This is a Catholic town. There were some officers who were hired as private investigators for the diocese, so they were technically off the clock at the police department and they would look at these cases, and they may confirm a priest is a pedophile, but they wouldn't report it to the police department. They would report it quietly to the diocese, and the diocese would handle it in whatever way they saw fit.[432]

Perhaps understanding this, a victim of sex abuse during satanic ceremonies presided over by priests like Gerald Robinson came forward — not to police or prosecutors — but to the Toledo Diocese Review Board.

> A Toledo woman came forward claiming she'd been sexually abused as a child by Catholic priests during Satanic rituals. ...
>
> The woman ... testified before the Diocesan Review Board on June 11 and wrote a detailed statement alleging years of abuse by priests during her childhood.
>
> The woman, now in her 40s, described satanic ceremonies in which priests placed her in a coffin filled with cockroaches, forced her to ingest what she believed to be a human eyeball and penetrated her with a snake "to consecrate these orifices to Satan."
>
> She also alleged that the clerics killed an infant and a 3-year-old child, performed an abortion on her and mutilated dogs during the rituals, > according to a copy of her statement. ~ CBS[433]

Apparently, the Board gave police and prosecutors the “go-ahead” to investigate — not the ritual rape, torture and murder of children and animals by a cabal of satan-worshipping Catholic priests[xlii] — but of the 20-year-old murder of one of their own, Sister Margaret Ann Pahl.

> On April 23, 2004, the case returned to front pages when Robinson was charged with the murder, based upon evidence available 24 years earlier. ~ Daily News[434]

26 years after he ritually slaughtered Sister Pahl in the Toledo Mercy Hospital Chapel, Father Gerald Robinson was convicted and sent to prison where he died on the 4th of July in 2014.

Had he stayed alive, in a few short months he would’ve been eligible for parole.

Serial Lawlessness

Back in Mary-land, during the 1970 investigation into the murder of Sister Catherine Ann Cesnik, police and media admitted to a string of young girl murders all being related but they, too, went “unsolved”.

> ...20-year-old Joyce Helen Malecki, who disappeared days after the nun did and whose body was found at Fort Meade; 16-year-old Pamela Lynn Conyers, whose body was found in Anne Arundel County in 1970; and 16-year-old Grace Elizabeth “Gay” Montanye, whose body was found in 1971 in South Baltimore. ~ Baltimore Sun[435]

Their bodies and their blood fed into the Devil’s Simulation.

Decades went by.

Maskell and his clients remained thoroughly protected by the Luciferian cartel, until angry, frustrated victims started to take matters into their own hands.

Receiving no justice from law enforcement, they filed a $40 million dollar civil suit against Maskell and the Archdiocese of Baltimore.

It was dismissed.[436]

Victims like Jean Wehner came forward to tell their stories and give details only those who had been there would know.

They, too, were dismissed.

> Investigators were initially skeptical of her claim that Cesnik had maggots on her face, because maggots are usually not present in cold November temperatures. But an autopsy showed there were in fact maggots in Cesnik’s throat — a detail that had not been made public. ~ Huffington Post[437]

Feeling the heat — not from officers sworn to protect them — but from citizens with torches and pitch-forks, Maskell ran.

> ... [Maskell] checked himself into a residential treatment facility, claiming he needed help coping with the stress and anxiety the case > had caused him. Weeks later, he quietly checked himself out and fled to Ireland, where he continued to work as a priest.[438]

The only time Roman Catholic leadership appeared to intervene was to tell the monster to police himself.

> Maskell was living in Wexford, Ireland. Archdiocesan officials sent letters to Maskell saying he was not to perform any priestly duties and asking him to return to Baltimore, Caine said. ~ Sun[439]

Unfortunately for the citizenry, they lacked the reach of those they paid and swore in for such work and the prominent individuals lived full lives free of prosecution.

> Law enforcement dropped the investigation ... [and] Maskell ... died [in 2001] without ever being charged with a crime. [Father E. Neil] Magnus had died years earlier, in 1988. Richter died in 2006.[440]

47 years after Sister Catherine Anne Cisnek's body was found, it was now safe for law enforcement and media to selectively address the ground-level of these abominations.

The Keepers documentary subsequently aired on Netflix; a source not unfamiliar to programs where Catholic Italy figures prominently. The series Medici: Masters of Florence began in October 2016 and stars Dustin Hoffman as Giovanni di Bicci de' Medici, the father of modern banking. [xliii]

In fact, one blogger listed[441] what he called a "plethora" of Catholic movies back in 2010 — * A Hand of Peace * A Man for All Seasons
* After the Truth * Don Matteo
* Father of Mercy: The True Story of Venerable Don Gnocchi
* Faustina * God in China
* Into Great Silence * John XXIII
* Karol: The Pope, The Man * Love is a Choice
* Maria Goretti [girl ritually stabbed, subsequently beatified]
* Our Father's Plan * Pope Benedict XVI
* Padre Pio Between Heaven and Earth
* Paul VI: The Pope in the Tempest

* Road of Hope * Saint Anthony
* Saint Francis * Saint Rita
* Saints and Soldiers * St. Teresa of Avila
* St. Giuseppe Moscati: Doctor to the Poor
* The 13th Day * The Jeweler's Shop
* The Miracle of Marcelino * The Reluctant Saint
* The Spiritual Exercises of St. Ignatius
* Théresè Ludicrously and impotently, Baltimore Police have exhumed Father Anthony Joseph Maskell's body to see if it matches Lansdowne crime scene evidence ... from 1970.

> Maskell's body was exhumed Feb. 28 [2017] at Holy Family Cemetery in Randallstown and returned to the grave the same day, county police spokeswoman Elise Armacost said. ...
>
> Baltimore archdiocese pays settlements to a dozen people alleging abuse by late priest
>
> One of the women who came forward in the 1990s with allegations of abuse by the priest has implicated him in the nun's death. ...
>
> Investigators "have never established that [Cesnik] was killed because of information that she had about abuse in the Catholic Church," said Armacost, though she acknowledged that's a theory, among others, that police have pursued.
>
> She said there is little physical evidence remaining in the decades-old case, but detectives "felt very strongly that in the interest of leaving no stone unturned, it was necessary to exhume Maskell's body and compare his DNA to the evidence that is remaining." ~ The Baltimore Sun[442]

Although the exhumation of the near-50-year-old crime suspect has occurred but weeks before the release of the documentary, Spokeswoman Armacost said Baltimore PD was not influenced by the late media spotlight.

The victim profiles were all the same: each girl or boy had been previously raped or abused, sometimes by family. Others came from a broken or dysfunctional background.

Lillian Knipp (née Hughes), Keogh class of 71, was a promising student taking classes in dictation and stenography. Maskell brought her in to carefully chronical the details of sexual perversion of all kinds; incest, bestiality, group sex and ritual abuse sex. The subjects of her “records” included public figures. Maskell provided her with privileges such as getting out of class which made her feel special. She never thought to report the criminal activities she chronicled for him.

The behavior of Maskell was remarkably Kinsey-esque and it provided the pedophile priest with extra material for blackmail.

Maskell received a certification in Psychology from Johns Hopkins (a “secular” facility with very strong Roman ties), and he weaponized his knowledge.

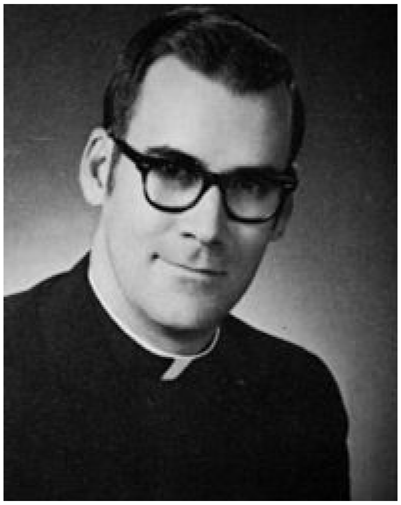
Maskell also exploited narcotics and hypnosis in manipulating his victims. Was he trained to do so? From where?

Jean Wehner states openly that she was a victim of Dissociative Personality Disorder[443] — the same trauma-based mechanism used by the CIA and other Intelligence Agencies to “mind control” victims.

Jean Marie Wehner (née Hargadon) was a freshman at Keogh struggling with a dark secret — she had been abused by her uncle when she was younger.

Jean needed compassion and consolation.

She wrestled repeatedly with whether or not to take it to confession.



When she finally did, it was with Keogh’s Religious Services Director, Father Neil Magnus.

After hearing her unburden herself with how she had been abused, Magnus asked to see her face-to-face where he told her “I don’t know if God can forgive this.”

He began calling her into his office and sexually assaulting her, telling her this was part of the “forgiveness” process. Magnus told her that she wasn’t a victim, she had brought it all upon herself.

After several “sessions”, Keogh’s Chaplain, Father Anthony Joseph Maskell began showing up.

Wehner was afraid of him instantly.

She knew he would have no qualms about hurting her.

They began to abuse her together and “praying” in Latin over her while doing it. Sometimes at the point of their climax they would tell her to “receive the Holy Spirit.”

Wehner related to the Netflix crew that “Magnus would call his [semen] the ‘Eucharist’ and use it on me as ‘symbols’ of what was ‘sacred’.”[444]

One “session” was so brutal Wehner emerged from Maskell’s office (strategically located in the corner of the school where there was little traffic) in a daze. She wandered the halls without purpose and ran into Sister Cathy who allowed her to sit in a classroom and compose herself.[xliv]

50 years after the events, Jean Wehner still cried in the recounting for Netflix.[445] Yet she would go on from high school to become a “Eucharistic Minister” in her local Catholic church. Perhaps as a result of her dissociative personality disorder, Wehner remained a devout Catholic into adulthood.

Wehner then paused and stated “My life would’ve been very different had I not gone in that confessional.”

The Religious Services Director and the Chaplain worked together, screening and grooming unsuspecting victims they thought were the easiest prey.

> When Maskell spotted a girl who seemed troubled or was engaged in bad behavior, he would start calling her out of class over the loudspeaker for “therapy” in his office.
>
> “I would be in class, and it could be any time. I’d hear my name over the loudspeaker, ‘Report to my office now,’ and I would have to report to Maskell,” said Donna VonDenBosch, 58. “I remember being in class, just crying, ‘Don’t make me go, don’t make me go!’ And the teacher pulled me out in the hall and said, ‘We all know he’s a weirdo, but you have to go.’”
>
> Wehner said she went to see [Father Neil] Magnus, the school’s religious services director, for confession when she was 14 years old, because she had been feeling guilty about sexual abuse she experienced as a young child. The priest turned to her in the confessional, quizzed her on the details of the abuse, and began masturbating as she talked, she said.
>
> After that, Maskell and Magnus would call her into their offices for joint counseling sessions, which they said was for the purpose of helping her find God’s forgiveness for what she did as a child. She says they would masturbate in front of her, take nude photos of her and force her to perform sex acts as part of her “spiritual healing” process. ...

> Soon, Maskell began calling Wehner out of class and into his office without Magnus, she said. He would show her pornography, tell her that he was trying to help God forgive her for the abuse she suffered as a child, and rape her. "He kept saying it didn't seem like I was open to the Holy Spirit and God's grace," Wehner said. "I was just doing what I was being told, thinking I must be such a horrible person that God can't forgive me." ~ Huffington Post[446]

A friend invited Wehner to attend a Keogh reunion and it deeply troubled her but she couldn't explain why. In prayer and contemplation the memories flooded back. Another friend, "Sarah", brought Wehner to see Father Art Valenzano and Father Rick Woy who were subsequently joined by Monsignor (later Bishop) William Francis Malooly, all Archdiocese officials. The Archdiocese at that time was headed by Archbishop William Keeler.

At no point was law enforcement considered by any of the parties.

When she told the delegation of her abuse by Maskell, Valenzano and Woy said, "We believe you but we have to get proof."

At a second meeting, Wehner was surprised to be introduced to Archdiocese counsel Kathy Hoskins who advised her to get a lawyer. In subsequent meetings, Hoskins was joined by a second Archdiocese lawyer.

Wehner had prepared to recount some memories of her abuse to the "council". She told the Netflix crew which memory she recalled but then paused and broke into uncontrollable sobbing.[447]

The "council" then demanded Wehner corroborate her accusations before they moved on Church mechanisms against Maskell. These included "self-policing", "therapy" or restrictions against interacting with children — again, self-enforced — to take effect now 20 years after the complaint was first experienced.[448]

In fact, that is exactly what happened. After the first accusations by Jean Wehner (a.k.a. "Jane Doe") were presented — not to police — but to the Archdiocese of Baltimore, Maskell was sent to the "Institute of Living" in Hartford, Connecticut for "therapy".

The “Institute of Living” was managed by respected Jewish Psychologist Leslie M. Lothstein, II, who took predator priests like Maskell and insisted that they could be treated and “cured”.

> Dr. L. M. Lothstein of the Institute of Living in Hartford, Connecticut — a premier psychiatric hospital to which many problem priests were sent — in a paper delivered before the National Diocesan Attorneys’ Association on April 30, 1990, said, “The fact is that many priests who are labeled as child molesters are treatable and can return to ministry.”[180]
>
> Lothstein, who boasted that the Institute of Living had “established a model program that addresses the psychological, theological, vocational, and legal issues surrounding return to ministry”,[181] concluded that “to date, approximately 60% of priests treated at three treatment centers have been successfully returned to active ministry.”[182] While conceding that “in a few cases the decisions were wrong,”[183] he reemphasized that “most sexually addicted priests can be returned to a successful active ministry after treatment.”[184]
>
> In “Ways Cited to Treat Priests Who Abuse” by James L. Franklin, the Boston Globe reported on July 19, 1992, that “officials of three of the four leading centers that treat priest sex offenders — Southdown near Toronto, St. Luke Institute in Maryland and the Institute of Living in Hartford — said in interviews last week that improved treatment yields great success with as little as a two percent recidivism rate. They and other specialists said many offenders can be returned to active ministry so long as the clergy and their supervisors accept lifelong restrictions and follow-care.”
>
> During the O’Connor administration, the archdiocese had to contend with its share of predator-priest cases. One of these hit the front page of the New York Post in December 1989; it concerned the founder of Covenant House, Father Bruce Ritter.
>
> Father Ritter, a Franciscan priest, founded Covenant House in the Times Square area in 1972 as an institution to help teenage runaways. What started as a nickel-and-dime operation had grown by 1988 to an > $87 million one funded mostly by private donations and managed by a board of directors made up of New York's captains of industry and finance. Its shelter sponsored highly praised programs that included helping youths infected with the AIDS virus and drug addicts and providing long-term housing and education for motivated teenagers. In his 1984 State of the Union Address, President Reagan hailed the efforts of Covenant House in aiding troubled youths.

— Such "growth" and national coverage betrays the Devil's Simulation. — In December 1989, Ritter was accused of giving gifts to a former male prostitute in return for sexual favors. Ritter denied the allegations, and Cardinal O'Connor, who had spoken with him, said he had complete confidence in the priest.

— We can assume that the anemic and innocuous "accusation" was the least offensive in a litany of outrages. This is borne out by how John O'Connor dismissed what was clearly a symptom of sexual perversion in desperate need of being addressed. — Shortly thereafter, other accusers surfaced. The Manhattan district attorney began an investigation, and Covenant House's board of directors ordered its own probe, which was led by former New York Police Commissioner Robert McGuire.[xlv]

> As more and more salacious details made front-page news, including stories in the New York Times*, which had previously praised Ritter's work, the board turned to Cardinal O'Connor for help in March 1990. Calling the situation at Covenant House "a mess", O'Connor appointed two of his priests to serve as temporary administrators in place of Ritter, who had resigned in late February, and he agreed that the archdiocese would pay their salaries during this interim period. "It is no longer a question of guilt or innocence, but of public perception", he said.*[185]

— Once again, we are told that Catholic authorities will do the job we expect of our "secular" cops, judges, prosecutors and law-makers. — On August 3, 1990, the Covenant House board released its report, which gave detailed evidence "that Father Ritter used his position to facilitate sexual relationships > between himself and young men who came under Covenant House's care". The report substantiated the allegations of four young men who claimed Ritter had had sex with them, and it revealed other evidence "indicating a pattern of sexual misconduct on Ritter's part.

>
> Ritter resigned from the Franciscan Order and moved to India to work with the poor; he eventually returned to the States and lived quietly in Upstate New York until his death in 1999. Covenant House was restructured and continues successfully to aid troubled youth. ~ Sons of Saint Patrick[449]

Again, the serial predator was not punished by the secular authorities sworn to protect the citizenry and was even allowed to continue in his field as a "self-less priest helping the poor."

Psychologist Leslie Lothstein told Netflix, upon receiving his first pedophile priest he called the priest's superior and said, "We're not here to protect this priest from the embarrassment of his arrest."

Lothstein continued, "This happened over and over and over again. By about '94 or '95 we confronted this issue. We basically said 'We're not going to accept any more patients from the Catholic Church unless you send us the whole file and every file you have on the patient and tell us the real reason for why they're coming. We never got a single referral again."[450]

Lothstein made that prepared statement to the documentary crew 20 years after the fact. The Vatican-preferred Jewish Psychologist never contacted law enforcement. In some rare instances, professionals privy to the commitment of a crime, even in the "confidence" of medical or religious endeavors, are still required to do so by law.

But not in Connecticut.

In 1975, Sister Marylite Friia, the new Principle of Archbishop Keogh "warned off" Maskell so he was promoted to the Catholic Archdiocese Division of Schools where he remained from 1975 through 1980.

Archbishop Keogh High School was administrated by the Sisters of Notre Dame.

In 1980 Maskell was sent to the Parish of the Annunciation [of Mary].

He stayed there for two years and then was shuttled to Holy Cross Parish of Baltimore where he remained from 1982 through 1992.

For his “therapy”, Maskell spent 6 months at the “Institute of the Living” then returned having been “cured” and was assigned to the Parish of St. Augustine in Elkridge in 1993.

The Baltimore Archdiocese legal round-table that Jean Wehner spoke with was quite angry when she presented the names of other clergy and officials who had abused her. They insured her that they could not go anywhere with those allegations — they wanted the names of other victims. One can only imagine the risk those victims would be subject to once their names were given up. Wehner refused.

After that meeting, Wehner’s own lawyer, Steve Tully, berated her for giving up the names of abusers. Furious with the betrayal, Wehner’s husband, Mike, released Tully from representing them.

Wehner then called Father Rick Woy and asked if they could pray together on how to proceed. Woy responded that he didn’t think that was a good idea and that Wehner should instead immediately replace her legal counsel.

The Wehners then hired lawyer Beverly Wallace to represent them.

The Wehner family actively solicited Archbishop Keogh alumni for victims and they noted to Netflix, “the response was overwhelming.”

The devout Roman Catholic parents of Teresa Lancaster, Keogh ‘72, helped target their own daughter for ritual rape and abuse. After finding drug paraphernalia in her purse, they took her to Father Maskell for counselling. Seeing her as an “unruly” teen, Maskell moved in. “My father was a very, very strict Catholic,” Lancaster recounted. He was convinced that Father Maskell was saving me.”

Instead, he was raping her.

Dr. Christian Richter was a corrupt gynecologist. He enabled the children to be entrapped (“groomed”) with “prescribed” douches and suppositories that Maskell would then administer.

Maskell used another compatriot in the medical industry to prescribe Thorzine for schizophrenia to Teresa Lancaster; part of the narcotic application in abuse.

Former Baltimore Sun Journalist Bob Erlandson told Netflix that Richter admitted he allowed Maskell to be present during “examinations”. He quoted Richter as saying “That was his only opportunity to see a woman in that position.”

Erlandson continued, “There was apparently a lot of that kind of stuff going on,” meaning corruption of both secular and Catholic authorities.[451]

Maskell had Baltimore police “liberated” Teresa Lancaster and a friend from parental care on Halloween 1970. They were taken to a secluded wood and Lancaster was raped by two of Baltimore’s finest.

Police officers, clergy, local business owners, politicians — all were part of the network.

Journalist Bob Erlandson noted that, when “Jane Doe” (Jean Wehner) implicated Maskell in the death of Cathy Cesnik, neither the Archdiocese nor the Baltimore police reacted positively — even 25 years after the event.

Erlandson then showed the documentary crew his sword commemorating the Jacobite Rebellion. The man most responsible for that rebellion was Jesuit Professor Johann Adam Weishaupt. Although propagandists like Jesuit Abbé (Father) Augustin Barruel (1741 – 1820) attempted to paint the Jacobins as Freemasons who attacked “the Church”, many historians have since asked cui bono? — Who benefited?

Freemasonic apologist Rene Fulop-Miller states —

> Whenever gross abuses have been found within the lodges, Masonic historians have immediately given vent to the suspicion that the wily Jesuits have once again smuggled their emissaries into the association, and corrupted it in this cunning manner.
>
> Suspicions of this kind are associated with the first beginnings of the lodges in England. The remarkable circumstance that the earliest lists of members contained the names of several Jacobites is explained by > the assumption that the Jesuits had sought to misuse Freemasonry for the restoration of the Catholic Stuarts.[452]

Muslim apologist Omar Zaid asks —

> Did not the Jesuits benefit when their Jacobins murdered King Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette, as Louis's Bourbon grandfather, Louis XV, had expelled the Society from France in 1764 and Marie's Habsburg mother, Maria Theresa, had expelled the Order from Austria in 1774? Was this not revenge?[453]

Although the Jacobins failed in England, their failure looked suspicious to men like Tupper Saussy who noted that their destruction can be blamed on the complete lack of Roman support to overthrow the Protestant Crown.

> The year 1745 is distinguished by the so-called Jacobite Rebellion, another wondrous Sun-tzuan ruse in which apparent defeat for the Society of Jesus masked a hidden victory.
>
> The Jacobite Rebellion aimed to restore Roman Catholic rule over England by deposing George II and placing James II's grandson Charles Stuart, better known as Bonnie Prince Charlie, on the throne. However, when Charlie marched on London with a band of Scottish devotees, no Catholic politician of any prominence would desert George II. The Rebellion was forced to abort. Charlie escaped to France and the and the Scots were massacred. Clearly, this was a Catholic disaster. Or was it? Such extensive Catholic support for a Protestant king assured England that the monarchy would be forever Protestant. A Catholic England was now an impossible dream. The Jesuits could give up. Englishmen could now relax with them in their midst, just as Jesuits could now go about their business without causing official alarm. The Jacobite Rebellion made England at last... safe for the black papacy. The Jesuits secured a new cover by blowing their cover – "blown cover as cover" in the parlance of CIA. The Sun-Tzuan General wins whatever the circumstances.[454]

Is Rome capable of betraying her own soldiers and sacrificing battles to win wars that span centuries? It is a tactic recommended in the "Chinese" manual Art of War. Saussy also notes with suspicion that Art of War was “translated” by Jesuit Father Jean Joseph Marie Amiot and there is no such historical figure as “Sun Tzu”. The “sun” is far more important to the gnostic Jesuits than the Chinese.

It is noteworthy that even our whistleblower journalist in Baltimore is a Jacobin enthusiast.

Because Baltimore police, prosecutors and judges refused to protect the public as they had been sworn to, regular citizens were forced to replace them with themselves.

Civilian investigator Gemma Hoskins told Netflix, “We heard a story that one day in 1990 at Holy Cross there was a bizarre episode. Father Maskell suddenly told cemetery caretaker William Storey to get a front-loader and dig a 10 x 20 foot hole in the back abandoned part of the cemetery. Maskell brought in a pickup truck filled with boxes wrapped in plastic. They put the boxes into the ground. Maskell told Storey to fill it in and put grass over it. Storey looked at the documents. Maskell fired him a few months later. In August of 1994, when Jane Doe came forward, Mr. Storey went to a Baltimore Detective.”

An officer wishing to remain anonymous told Hoskins that Baltimore PD knew from Storey about the document cache. They had eagerly recovered it but they weren’t going to submit it for prosecution. The officer told Gemma Hoskins and the other investigators that they needed to be careful for their physical safety. “This goes bigger and deeper than you can imagine,” he warned. He also assured them that he would not be taking action either, lest he or his family be harmed.[455]

Jean Wehner’s attorney, Beverly Wallace noted that at the time that the stories began to break, (1983-2004) Maryland Chief Sex Offenders Prosecutor (a black woman) Sharon A. H. May refused to even consider any indictments. Such indictments would’ve forced an investigation due the overwhelming evidence the attorneys had gathered in lieu of police work. [456]

With certification of being “healed”, Maskell remained free and at large.

Exposés like the Boston Globe Spotlight investigation into Father John Geoghan and Cardinal Bernard Law sex abuse in Boston and The Keepers documentary in Baltimore paint the pictures that "media works" and that abuses were confined to the cities. However, it is clear that rape, torture and murder of innocents is systemic.

It is the Devil's Simulation and it is guarded, owned and run by the Roman Catholic Church.

Baltimore journalist Tom Nugent spoke with the anonymous Police officer who admitted that he had personally interviewed over 100 girls regarding Maskell and sex abuse. "We had a credible, 'Red Ball' case. A 'Red Ball case' is any case that's going to cause national or media attention." As a result, everything they did was, by necessity, done in conjunction with the State Attorney's office.[457]

The anonymous officer took all of his evidence directly to Sharon May.

Gemma Hoskins asked the officer, "I'm curious, that if you had over 100 women with allegations that Maskell had abused them, why didn't you charge him at this time in 1994?"

The officer replied, "I'm telling you, Sharon May ran interference for the Church any time we got a priest case."

Loyola University, Maryland, School of Counseling Professor Lee J. Richmond (a woman) told Netflix, "I met Joe Maskell at [Johns] Hopkins around 1982.[xlvi] At the time I was in charge of counseling. I was a professor, there. They had a program which trained school and community counselors. I would come to see my student [pedophile priest A. Joseph Maskell] as a colleague and as a friend."

Richmond continued, "He liked guns. He told me that he had a collection." ... "I thought, that was his thing." ... "I was supposed to visit him at a certain time once and he said he was busy digging in a cemetery." ... "He said he had to bury some psychological papers there. It sounded strange but I did not question it."

Journalist Bob Erlandson had worked for the Baltimore Sun but when investigating Maskell, found himself working alone. Erlandson told Netflix, “We got a call from Storey that the cops were digging up the records.”

The anonymous Baltimore Police Officer volunteered, “I saw pictures myself” of naked teenage girls along with their “profiles”. “Typical pedophile behavior. They can not separate with his [sic] collection. Even though he knows he can’t get to it he knows it’s there. ... We could’ve arrested him right then and there. But what I’m saying is, every damn time we had a case involving a priest Sharon May ran interference for the Church. She was the Division Chief of the Sex Offender Unit and she ran interference.”

One of the ways she did that was to deny or delay warrants, knowing that most actionable accusations disappear or go cold within 48 hours.

May remained on as a Maryland government official, transferring to the Office of Community Services and eventually to a lucrative private law practice. “I had just bought a shiny red convertible,” she told Netflix. “I drove to the cemetery with the top down. I was pumped but to my recollection there were nothing that pointed the finger and said, ‘Oh, Maskell molested these kids.’”[458]

Perhaps it was the glare of the sun shining upon her “shiny red convertible” that kept the Prosecutor from seeing what the Police Officer saw.[xlvii]

Allegations of criminal misconduct committed by Baltimore government officials remain unaddressed.

May further told Netflix, “I remember one incident where we had a subpoena to get Maskell’s records ... we talked to a secretary who let us know that Maskell had taken all the stuff and things were gone.” May, an officer of the state, was content to leave it at that.[459]

“He was apparently hospitalized” [in CT] “and given the nature of the facility that wasn’t someplace where we would have access to him.”

Again, we recommend that ordinary citizens not uses these tactics to avoid pursuit by any member of governmental law enforcement. However, Catholic ordination seems to work quite well.

May was very clear to Netflix, “I was and am not Catholic.”

During the legal roundtable, attorneys Michael Lehane represented Maskell (a personal friend), Thomas “Tommy” Harris represented the School Sisters of Notre Dame and Kevin Murphy represented the Archdiocese. Victims now included Teresa Lancaster (“Jane Roe”) along with Jean Wehner (“Jane Doe”).

The battery of lawyers destroyed the two women with probing, humiliating questions.

Wehner’s attorney Beverly Wallace told Netflix, “We wanted to depose Maskell but he disappeared.”

Loyola Professor Lee Richmond knew where he was. He was hiding in the dementia ward of Stella Maris Nursing Facility in Baltimore.[460] Richmond was invited to visit her “friend Joe” and console him in a nearby rectory. “I asked him, ‘Joe how could you do these things? Do you think it’s moral to keep your silence?’ He told me it was because he was protecting the Church.”

In 1994, Maskell was secreted to Ireland.

Aquinas[xlviii] Walter Richard Sipe, a former Benedictine monk, is now a “secular” expert on priest abuse. Sipe — also a Johns Hopkins alum — claims that 6% of Catholic priests illegally “act out” on sexual urges.

Aquinas Sipe still sports the full beard of his days as a priest, although now he prefers to be called “Richard”. Sipe gave his expertise to both the Boston Globe and Netflix but requests for help with this book went unanswered.

In an effort to destroy the allegations of sex abuse victims like Teresa Lancaster and Jean Wehner, the Vatican brought in another Johns Hopkins man: Hopkins Director of Psychiatry, Dr. Paul McHugh.

McHugh used weapons like “false memory phenomenon”, “false memory syndrome” and “recovered memory syndrome” which he called “artifacts[xlix]” and “artificial productions”. Netflix quoted McHugh as saying “we don’t equivocate on this matter.”

It is an interesting statement given that psychiatry is anything but a hard science of strict cause-and-effect rules. If anything can be proven it is that the trauma of sex abuse inflicted upon a child or teenager can take decades to come to the surface of a psyche.

“Secular” Hopkins Director of Psychiatry Paul McHugh is also on the Catholic Bishops National Review Board and gives his advice on a host of Church issues.

McHugh’s efforts to use his resumé to destroy abuse victims on behalf of the Catholic Church puts him in league with Roman Catholics like Josef Mengele.[461]

McHugh mocked repressed memory as being on par with “unicorns”. Yet it is a medical fact that often results from human beings attempting to deal with insufferable trauma.[462]

Institutional denial and skepticism over repressed memory, Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder and Dissociative Identity Disorder, are extremely suspicious as these are the results of the Devil’s Simulation.

Baltimore Police Captain James L. Scanell used McHugh’s reasoning when he slandered the victims as “treasure hunters”. “Prove it to me,” he told Netflix, “and not with ‘recalled memory’.”

It was on Captain Scanell’s watch that Catherine Cesnik was murdered. Perhaps more than any other, he is responsible for Sister Cathy’s brutal rape (which culminated in having her head bashed in) going “unsolved”.

James Scanell seemed completely oblivious to his responsibility to investigate criminal accusations, or perhaps it was only because of who was accused.

When pressed by Sister Cathy’s civilian investigators (doing his job for him), Scanell admitted that Father Anthony Joseph Maskell wasn’t even questioned. Perhaps not by coincidence, Scannell was the first officer dispatched to investigate Cathy Cesnik’s body.

Scannell described the suspect as “a friend and a fellow officer” [emphasis added with incredulity].

Scannell also admitted letting the priest familiarize himself with firearms on the Police range, courtesy of the taxpayers. Did the victims he threatened with guns know he was trained by the Baltimore Police?

Scannell told Netflix that he and Maskell had a “friend” on Dundalk pier and they frequently all fished together. The Captain seemed unaware of any conflict of interest. “He was like any other officer on the force, to me.”

Baltimore Archbishop William Keeler was up for Cardinal when the Maskell/Cesnik story broke. Wehner attorney Beverley Wallace said she thought the scandal would keep Keeler from the Cardinalcy.

Bishop Keeler flew from purple to red with the greatest of ease.

Jane Doe v. Joseph Maskell went to trial just as Pope Saint John Paul II visited Baltimore.

Judge Hilary Caplan refused to waive the 3 year statute of limitations and Jane Wehner lost. It is a statute that continues to be questioned. Only 3-5% of abuse victims ever speak openly about what happened to them. If they do, it’s usually many years after the crimes first occurred.[463]

Sister Cathy’s Forensic Pathologist was Werner Spitz — a man whose career defines the word “cover-up”.

Spitz was the selected coroner for the U.S. government “House Assassination Committee” for both the John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King, Jr. examinations.

Spitz advised the family of Mary Jo Kopechne who supposedly drowned after spending an evening with Edward “Teddy” Kennedy (she was actually murdered[l]).

Spitz was involved in a civil case against OJ Simpson and he was the medical “expert” in the investigation over the death of JonBenét Ramsey.

He was also called upon as “subject matter expert” in the trials of “Night Stalker” Richard Ramirez, Casey Anthony (chief suspect in the disappearance of her two year old daughter Caylee), the Memphis 3 and the Norfolk 4.[464]

Murder(s)

Joyce Helen Malecki was a Maskell parishioner; she was in the pews when Father Maskell gave Mass. He received her confessions.

Four days after Sister Cathy disappeared, Joyce Malecki's body was found on Fort Meade in Baltimore. She had been stabbed and strangled (authorities refused to disclose if she was sexually assaulted).

Because she was found on “Federal land”, the investigation was turned over to the FBI. There it ended.

Joyce Malecki was 20 years old.

In 2014, believing the murders to be related, citizen investigator Gemma Hoskins filed a FOIA request with the FBI. She found that there were some four thousand documents related to the Malecki murder.

Three years later, she told Netflix that the Federal government has yet to honor the stipulations of the Freedom of Information Act.

*****

At the height of public interest in the murder of Sister Cathy Cesnik and the accusations of abuse at Archbishop Keogh High School, the Catholic Church released 50 names of priests accused of sexual assault, including that of Father Anthony Joseph Maskell.

Only one of those priests was criminally convicted...he pled guilty.

Chapter 11

“A Gross Breach Of Trust...”

1978: Tony Walsh is ordained a Roman Catholic priest and begins his “ministry” in the west Dublin parish of Ballyfermot, Ireland — a location already stalked by pedophiles like radio personality Eamon Cooke and priests William Carney and Francis McCarthy. Before even graduating seminary, Walsh was accused of sexually abusing an 8 year old boy.

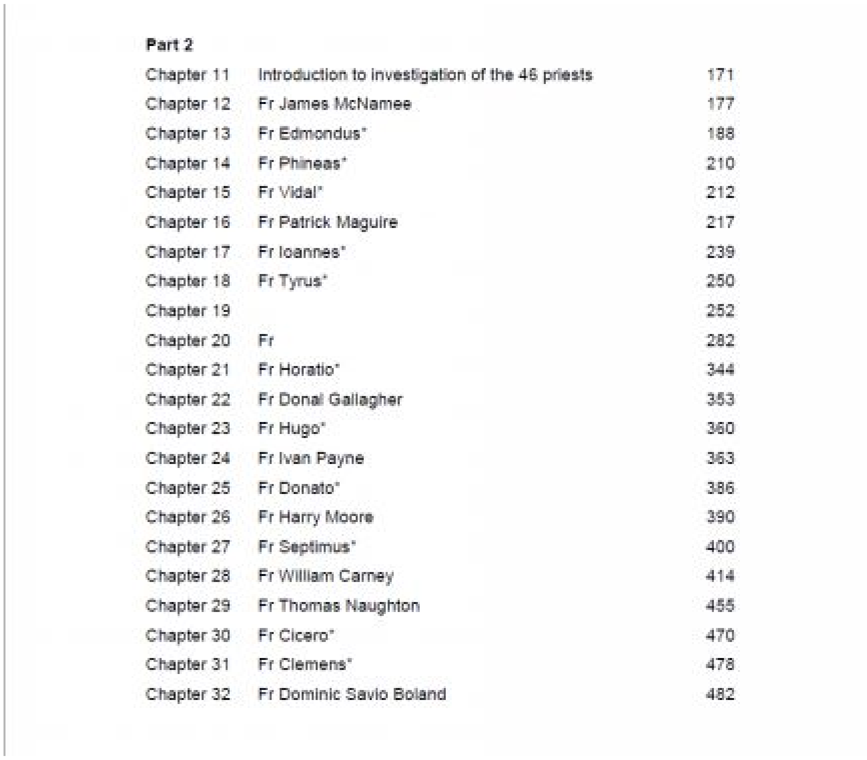
The serial criminal predations of the powerful pedophiles in Dublin were so egregious that citizen outrage forced the formation of a government “commission”.

It was chaired by a woman, Yvonne Murphy — a Circuit Court judge from 1998 to 2010.

Barely more forthright than historical examples like the Warren Commission or the 9/11 Commission, the Murphy Commission’s agenda was essentially the same: acknowledge some facts that have been duly hidden by compatriots in the media while continuing to screen for the source of the crimes at the top.

Like the previous examples, few would bother to read the Murphy Commission Report (published in 2009).

Even so, the exploits of Father Tony Murphy, “the singing priest”, were so extreme that, at first his identity was protected under the pseudonym “Fr. Jovito”. However, the section (Chapter 19) was ultimately redacted entirely, along with the next (Chapter 20) dealing with the criminal predations of Father Patrick Joseph McCabe (rather clumsily, to boot).[li]



Part 2

Chapter 11	Introduction to investigation of the 46 priests	171
Chapter 12	Fr James McNamee	177
Chapter 13	Fr Edmondus*	188
Chapter 14	Fr Phineas*	210
Chapter 15	Fr Vidal*	212
Chapter 16	Fr Patrick Maguire	217
Chapter 17	Fr Ioannes*	239
Chapter 18	Fr Tyrus*	250
Chapter 19		252
Chapter 20	Fr	282
Chapter 21	Fr Horatio*	344
Chapter 22	Fr Donal Gallagher	353
Chapter 23	Fr Hugo*	360
Chapter 24	Fr Ivan Payne	363
Chapter 25	Fr Donato*	386
Chapter 26	Fr Harry Moore	390
Chapter 27	Fr Septimus*	400
Chapter 28	Fr William Carney	414
Chapter 29	Fr Thomas Naughton	455
Chapter 30	Fr Cicero*	470
Chapter 31	Fr Clemens*	478
Chapter 32	Fr Dominic Savio Boland	482

The material was eventually released but if few read the original Murphy Report, even fewer read the missing chapters 5 years afterward.

The most shocking aspect of Murphy Chapter 19 is the extent to which Church leadership, secular authorities and even the Catholic parents of the victims enabled Walsh’s heinous acts.

As a result, we will examine them in detail but rest assured, the same chain of events has occurred every time a predator came to light.

> 19.1 In 1995 Archbishop [Desmond] Connell [Archbishop of Dublin and Primate of Ireland] wrote that Fr. Walsh “is a confirmed paedophile. He was ordained in 1978, but even before his ordination – as it subsequently appeared – he was engaged in paedophiliac activities with minors”.
>
> 19.2 Fr. Walsh is probably the most notorious child sexual abuser to have come to the attention of the Commission. The Commission is aware of more than 40 named people who have complained of child sexual abuse by him. He has admitted to abusing many others...

Apparently recruited into his position of pedophile predator priest, Walsh was immediately plugged in.

> 19.3 Fr. Walsh was born in 1954. He was ordained in 1978. The earliest allegations against him predate his ordination. He himself has admitted that he abused before he was ordained but most of the complaints about his activities prior to 1978 did not surface until many years later. It is known that during his time as a seminarian he had a key to the house of another well known [sic] abuser, Fr. Noel Reynolds (see Chapter 35), and it is alleged that some of the abuse took place in that house. While he was in Clonliffe College, he organised visits by groups of altar boys to Clonliffe and it is alleged that he abused some of them on the seminary premises.

A cabal of pedophile priests preyed upon the children of Ballyfermot like a pack of hyenas in the midst of a flock of lambs.

They were organized and systematic.

> During his final years at Clonliffe College, Fr. Bill Carney and his friend Fr. Francis McCarthy visited children's homes around Dublin, offering to help the boys and girls with their school work and taking them out on day trips that later became overnight trips and holidays.
>
> They started an altar boy circle at Clonliffe College. When Carney and McCarthy were ordained in 1974, Tony Walsh, who was still a seminarian, took charge of the altar boys, leading the trips to Clonliffe College.
>
> Carney was posted to Ballyfermot Vocational School, and his friend McCarthy to Dunlavin in Co Wicklow. Carney used to visit McCarthy at weekends in Dunlavin, according to the Murphy Report. Victims later told the Murphy team that they were abused by both McCarthy and Carney. ~ Sunday Independent[465]

What further enabled Walsh and continues to help the pedophile priesthood is the criminal collusion of indoctrinated Roman Catholic parents. Astoundingly, their loyalty to the Roman Beast feeding on their own children outweighed any instincts or compassion they felt for their offspring.

> First complaint, 1978
>
> 19.5 Fr. Walsh's first appointment was to Ballyfermot parish in July 1978. Two days after his appointment a complaint was received at Archbishop's House that he had sexually abused an eight-year-old boy. The abuse was alleged to have taken place within the previous month at the house of the aforementioned Fr. Noel Reynolds. The parents of the boy concerned informed a priest about the alleged abuse. He in turn spoke to Archbishop Ryan's secretary. A note on the file to the Archbishop in July 1978 refers to a "homosexual incident involving a young lad … and a newly ordained Dublin diocesan priest". The Archbishop asked a vicar general, Monsignor Glennon, to investigate the matter.
>
> 19.6 It was noted by the priest to whom the complaint was made that "the parents are most responsible people and there is no danger of publicity". The Archdiocese made no response to the boy's parents nor, indeed, to the priest to whom the complaint was made.

This kept everything "in-house" and allowed Walsh's superiors to keep him active.

When Walsh was finally examined by a court of law, first in 1995, and again in 2010, details of his enabling by Catholic parents shocked juries.

> The court heard that when one boy told his parents about the abuse, they viciously beat him. "How can you say that about a man of God, a man of the cloth?" they asked him before sending him back down to Walsh who again molested him. ~ Irish Times[466]

The process was (still is) both highly codified and yet as ancient as the Roman Empire.

> 19.7 Fr. Walsh was interviewed by Monsignor Glennon. In his note of this meeting, Monsignor Glennon described the alleged abuse as involving: "osculae, amplexus and tactus immodesti". This translates as kisses, embraces and shameless touching.

> 19.8 Fr. Walsh categorically denied any abuse and stated that the boy concerned had been merely sitting on his knee. The vicar general noted that "Fr. [Walsh] impressed me as telling the truth." Nothing further was done.

Walsh went immediately back to work and, again, the next victim's parent brought her concerns back to the very Machine responsible for the predation, rather than to the secular authorities to conduct a criminal investigation.

> Next complaint, 1979
>
> 19.9 The next complaint was made by the mother of a 14-year-old boy who alleged that he was abused by Fr. Walsh in Ballyfermot in 1978 and 1979. The boy and his parents lived on the north side of Dublin. The abuse ended when he told his mother. She promptly went to her parish priest who told her that he would contact Archbishop's House about the matter. After some time had elapsed and no further word had been received, the boy's mother contacted the parish priest of Ballyfermot, Canon Val Rogers, seeking some action. The only action taken was that Fr. Michael Cleary, who was also based in Ballyfermot at the time, was sent to the boy's house some time [sic] in early 1980 in order to educate him on issues of male sexuality. The mother told the [253]Commission that Fr. Cleary did apologise. There are no records available of any communication between the boy's family and the Archdiocese around this time. In 1985, Canon Rogers told Monsignor [Alexander] Stenson that matters were "hushed up" at the time of the mother's complaint.

Certainly, when a trusted cleric exploits his position to prey upon an innocent child, an "apology" usually serves the cause of justice to all concerned.

Sadly, secular authorities were little help when they were involved.

Playing the game, Walsh's superior (Monsignor Alexander Stenson) sent the serial predator for "counseling".

> Treatment
>
> 19.19 Monsignor Stenson recommended that Fr. Walsh approach a psychiatrist with a view to addressing "his problem". Fr. Walsh attended the psychiatrist on two occasions. In June 1985, the psychiatrist told Monsignor Stenson that Fr. Walsh was amenable to treatment and that there were three treatment alternatives: medication, electric shock therapy and what was referred to as the "re-orientation method to channel the drive appropriately". Fr. Walsh had elected for the third option as the "lesser of the evils". The psychiatrist was "'cautiously optimistic' that this could be successful given the fact that Fr. [Walsh] had not the normal sexual outlets available to him in virtue of his priesthood".

Actually, the reverse is the stark truth.

Like alcoholics, a pedophile can never be fully "healed" but unlike alcoholics they are a danger to children around them rather to themselves.

> Most of us cannot think of a greater sin than hurting a child and when the offense is a sex crime, well, we often feel even greater anger, if that's possible, against the perpetrator. It is terrifying to learn, then, that treatment programs do not rehabilitate sexual offenders before they are released from prison. So says Dr. David K. Ho, consultant forensic psychiatrist, clinical research lead, South Essex Partnership University NHS Foundation Trust, in his new opinion piece appearing in the British Medical Journal.
>
> "People should know that the treatments offenders receive in prisons and secure hospitals lack evidence of efficacy," Ho states.
>
> Are we ready to heed his warning? While Ho, whose credentials suggest he certainly knows his subject matter, speaks convincingly... ~ Medical Daily[467]

Even more surprising is Dr. Ho's admonition that lust to defile children sexually is related to other "non-traditional" sexual desires.

> Typically, we think of sex crimes as including rape, child sex abuse, sexual assault, female genital mutilation, incest, and the, in most > people's minds, lesser crimes of exhibitionism and prostitution. Yet, sexual offending, says Ho, "consists of a heterogeneous group of acts, which may not include but are likely to include at least some elements of paraphilia," defined as mental disorders of sexual preference, such as pedophilia, voyeurism, fetishism, exhibitionism, frotteurism (rubbing up against a non-consenting person), sadomasochism, sexual sadism, sexual masochism, and disorders not otherwise specified.[468]

Although no authority would dare question the correlation between homosexuality and pedophilia the evidence is there (and we will examine it shortly).

The system remained tidy and self-contained thanks to Catholic parents who brought their chicks back to the foxes.

> Further complaint, October 1985
>
> 19.20 In October 1985, a parent complained to Fr. [Donal] O'Doherty, the parish priest in Ballyfermot, that Fr. Walsh had indecently assaulted a young girl. Fr. O'Doherty reported this to Bishop O'Mahony who, in turn, told Monsignor Stenson. The psychiatrist was informed. Fr. Walsh denied this allegation.
>
> 19.21 No further inquiries were made. There is no evidence that any new treatment was considered. ...

In many municipalities it is now illegal for any medical professional to deal with a known pedophile and not report the matter to law enforcement ... not that such a report would bring results.

The unsuspecting Murphy investigator seemed flabbergasted that Walsh could then be promoted with congratulations from Dublin Archbishop Dermot J. Ryan.

> 19.21 ... Fr. Walsh was removed from Ballyfermot and appointed to Westland Row. The Archbishop's letter appointing him states: "I take this opportunity to thank you for your dedicated work in Ballyfermot". While this is the standard formula in such appointments, it is, nevertheless, astonishing that it could be used in the light of Fr. Walsh's history in Ballyfermot. Since he left Ballyfermot in 1985, > numerous complainants have come forward alleging abuse by Fr. Walsh while he was there.

The Murphy investigator continues to appear unaware that Walsh's promotion was a determined effort by his superiors to keep him active and amongst a flock that had little idea he was a wolf in a priest's collar.

> 19.24 At this stage, the Archdiocese was aware of four specific complaints and a number of concerns.[lii] Fr. Walsh had admitted to the abuse of three children. It is difficult to understand how the seriousness of his situation was not fully appreciated. It is also difficult to conclude that the move was for any purpose other than to avoid further scandal in Ballyfermot. Fr. Walsh was removed from a parish in which the parish priest was aware of his activities[257] and was endeavouring to restrain him to a parish in which, it would appear, the parish priest had no awareness of his proclivities.

The continued collaboration by Roman Catholic parents with the very Leviathan that preyed upon their children insured Walsh's free reign — even when he left a trail of traumatized children in his wake.

> 19.25 Meanwhile, the mother of the 1979 complainant was in touch with Monsignor Stenson because of her son's continuing difficulties. She was being assisted by a priest who was a member of a religious order. This priest was clearly angry at the way the matter was being handled and he upbraided the Archbishop for unsatisfactory responses to the mother's letters and said: "I think that [the mother] may be forgiven if she regards this letter as an attempt to sweep the matter under a carpet". He went on to say: "Scandal has been given and serious harm done to a young boy by a priest of the Archdiocese. If it is neither feasible nor desirable that this unfortunate priest himself personally try to undo the damage he has done, is it not your duty as his Superior to do so…".
>
> 19.26 Monsignor Stenson met the mother who wanted help for her son and wanted to ensure that Fr. Walsh did not carry on his singing activities around her area. Monsignor Stenson noted: "I was > impressed by this woman who is obviously a concerned person and who is distressed by what has happened to her son [...].

The fact that these parents were finally able to locate a sympathetic priestly ear does not abrogate them from responsibility to being accomplices in the abuse of their own children.

The fact that nothing came from the "angry" priest's letters further validates that said parents are criminally negligible.

An entertainment cover was created for the pedophile priests, like enemy agents in a foreign nation (which is exactly what they were).

> Over the years, Fr. Michael Cleary seemed to watch out for Walsh. Cleary was then a charismatic, celebrity priest who was the "warm up" act for Pope John Paul's historic mass on his visit to Ireland in 1979.
>
> Like Cleary, Walsh was a singer too. He was in a group of singing priests who toured an act called the 'Holy Show' in which he did Elvis impersonations.
>
> Fr. Cleary had secrets of his own — long relationship with his housekeeper with whom he fathered two sons. ~ Independent[469]

Walsh left copious amounts of evidence that he was an arch criminal and sexual deviant who even went as far as sedating his victims with intravenous narcotics.

> 1987

> 19.28 In January 1987, the housekeeper to the administrator in Westland Row alleged that she found items of her clothing in Fr. Walsh's room. This included underwear which, she alleged, had been "used". She had to burn the clothing. She also found condoms and syringes in his room. She further mentioned that a number of boys had slept overnight in his bed and a boy from Balllyfermot had been visiting. Monsignor Stenson noted that he had "no doubt about her truthfulness".

The mind boggles at the unending stream of Catholic parents willing to allow their children to be violated by trusted clergy.

> 19.32 Monsignor Stenson met the parents who had made the most recent complaint. He noted: "[The father] said that he would not like [J][liii] to suffer because of one misdemeanour. They pray for him and hope he can get help. I was greatly impressed by this couple. They were extremely kind and concerned. I did not indicate that there was a history of this behaviour".

A decade after the first reports of his criminal activities came to the attention of his superiors, they finally acted...sending him to therapy.

But by now, even his therapist was showing deep concern.

> 19.34 In May 1988, ten years after the first complaint was made to the Archdiocese, the Archbishop and the auxiliary bishops decided to send Fr. Walsh to Stroud [a mental health facility in Gloucestershire, England] for treatment. He was removed from his position in Westland Row in June 1988.
>
> Stroud, 1988
>
> 19.35 Monsignor Stenson provided Stroud with a brief history of the incidents he had investigated together with a copy of Fr. Walsh's statement.[260] Shortly after Fr. Walsh's arrival in Stroud, his therapist there reported to Monsignor Stenson that Fr. Walsh appeared to be more realistic about his situation than other similar men. A month later, Monsignor Stenson noted the following comments made by a psychologist from Stroud: "[J][liv] is 'extremely compulsive – there > have been an awful lot of children involved he is a very disturbed man he is always going to be dangerous. He could not be let near schools, children, Confession without a grille etc…'".

Note that the therapist made the report — not to law enforcement — but to Church officials.

> 19.36 In its final report in November 1988, Stroud said that ... under no circumstances should he [Walsh] have any apostolate involving children.

This was a secular British medical facility turning a clear threat to children back to his religious hierarchy. That hierarchy did exactly what they have before and since — put the monster back into circulation.

Not only did Walsh's behavior show him to be a malignant serial predator, he was also clearly a satanist who looked to cause physical, emotional and spiritual harm from his position as a trusted religious representative.

On one occasion he sodomized a young boy with a crucifix.[470]

After his "therapy" at Stroud, he resumed his activities.

> 19.43 In the meantime, Fr. Walsh started to resume his old behaviour. Parents complained to Monsignor Stenson that, at a fete ["festival"] at All Hallows [College] in August 1989, Fr. Walsh brought their son to his car, sat him on his lap and "kissed him..."

Almost as astounding as the parents who enabled the pedophile to prey upon their children, are the number of secular medical professionals who never thought to report to anyone other than a Roman Catholic authority. That was despite their findings that Walsh was an extremely dangerous individual in a key position of trust that gave him access to countless unsuspecting families.

> 19.48 Further medical reports were received, in December 1989 and January 1990, from the psychiatrist who had treated him in 1985 and from the psychotherapist he had been attending since early 1989. The psychiatrist's report was described by Monsignor Stenson as "anything > but encouraging". The psychiatrist considered that Fr. Walsh had made no real progress over the four years 1985 – 1989.

Although there was talk of "laicization" (defrocking Walsh), no moves were made to restrict him in any way.

In fact, he was allowed to return to where his crimes first began to again prey upon the children of that same parish!

When a concerned parent realized what had happened, she did what she thought she was supposed to...and complained to the Archdiocese.

> 19.57 In March 1991, a scout leader and a parent contacted the Archdiocese to report that Fr. Walsh was back in Dublin.[lv] Fr. Walsh had been seen with a boy in his car and was calling frequently to this boy's house.

Still, the appearance of action had to be kept up.

> 19.59 At a bishops' meeting in March 1991 it was decided to institute a penal process against Fr. Walsh. The bishops also discussed informing the Gardai but did not do so.

The Garda Síochána ("Guardians of the Peace") or Gardaí are the national police of Ireland; the Irish equivalent of the FBI.

In both cases the institutions are far more complicit in committing crimes rather than solving them.

In relation to Father Tony Walsh, the Gardaí were his "secular" law enforcement enablers.

In August of 1991, the first brave parent in 20 years of Walsh's reign of terror got in touch with law enforcement.

Sadly, she received the same response if she would've called the Archdiocese like the rest.

> 19.64 In August 1991, Fr. Walsh had a review meeting with Monsignor Stenson[lvi] where he expressed his dissatisfaction with Mellifont [an Abbey where he received more "counseling"]. He refused to go to the therapeutic centre in the UK stating that he was happy with his current therapist.

> Concerns reported to Gardai
>
> 19.65 Shortly after this meeting, Fr. Walsh approached a young boy in Drumcondra and, having established his name and address, asked him to get into the car. The boy immediately went home and told his mother. The following day he called to the boy's house. The mother called the Gardai.
>
> 19.66 The garda investigation started in the absence of any specific allegation of child sexual abuse.[lvii] The Gardai contacted Mellifont. A priest in Mellifont told the Gardai that Fr. Walsh was in Mellifont because there were numerous allegations of paedophilia against him and referred them to the Archdiocese. In his report on the matter in 2002, the garda investigating the case stated that, as no crime had been committed, he himself reported the matter (he does not say to whom and there is no record of a report on the garda files) and then circulated Fr. Walsh's car number and a description of Fr. Walsh as being likely to engage in paedophilia. No attempt was made at that stage to investigate the statement that Fr. Walsh had been sent to Mellifont because of numerous allegations of paedophilia.

The Gardaí response was lackadaisical and incompetent. Rather than conduct an independent investigation, Gardaí asked the foxes if they've been in the hen-house.

> 19.67 The Archdiocese took the fact that Fr. Walsh had now come to the attention of the Gardai far more seriously than the Gardai did. Monsignor Stenson noted: "Apparently [a garda] from Whitehall Garda Station had been looking for a Fr. [Walsh] with an address at Mellifont. [Walsh] had approached a child and the mother had complained to the Police. … I rang [the garda] and explained who I was and what I had heard. I asked if he could provide details. He did but wondered if [Walsh] had a record. I evaded that but told him to proceed with whatever steps he thought he should take."

As the monster was coddled with counseling, he continued to prey upon children unhindered by cops or clergy.

> 19.69 In September 1991, the Archbishop ordered Fr. Walsh to live in St. John of God psychiatric hospital until such time as he was to be transferred to the therapeutic centre in the U.K. On the night before he was due to enter St John of God's, he attempted to persuade a young boy aged 11, whom he had baptised, into his car. The boy refused. He then followed the boy to his house and attempted to persuade his sister that the boy should go out with him. The family called the Gardai. In an interview with his psychologist the following day Fr. Walsh described the boy as "incredibly good looking".

In fact, the Gardaí were even nice enough to tell Walsh's superiors the coast was clear. A pesky officer trying to do their job was handled proper.

> 19.70 A few days later, the garda investigating the concerns expressed in August 1991 rang Monsignor Stenson inquiring about Fr. Walsh's whereabouts. It seems that gardai from another station had been in touch with him concerning a young boy who had recently been approached by Fr. Walsh outside a shopping centre. Monsignor Stenson told the garda that Fr. Walsh was in St. John of God's[lviii] and that he had no access to his car. It then emerged that this Garda was aware of an incident involving Fr. Walsh and the most recent complainant which occurred a year earlier. At the time, the garda reported the incident to the boy's headmaster but did not do anything else. Monsignor Stenson's note of these contacts with the garda ends: "[the garda] assured me that there was 'no question of prosecution'...".

Embarrassed, the Murphy Report noted this "lapse" in duty.

> 19.73 ...for all practical purposes, any garda investigation into Fr. Walsh's activities ceased at this point even though by now, while there were no specific complaints of child sexual abuse known to the Gardai, they were aware of three incidents of suspicious behaviour. Of course, Monsignor Stenson's failure to tell the Gardai of the other known allegations against Fr. Walsh meant that they were, as yet, unaware of the bigger problem.[lix]

Walsh continued to bounce from clinic to clinic rather than from prison to prison. While at an unspecified clinic in the United Kingdom he admitted to defiling over 100 boys.[471]

The true and final numbers will never be known.

Said “U.K. clinic” appears to be unspecified by the Murphy Report to cover their criminal enabling of Walsh!

> 1992
>
> 19.75 Fr. Walsh returned to the U.K. clinic in January 1992 to begin his intensive course. A remarkable tale then emerged. Apparently the clinic allowed Fr. Walsh to roam the streets of the nearby large city unsupervised. He dressed in clerical attire and introduced himself to local clergy and said mass in local churches. He befriended a family with young children telling them that he was training as a counsellor at the clinic and that if they saw him with other people in the street they should not approach him as you could not be too careful around sex offenders. Fr. Walsh visited their house and paid a lot of attention to their 11-year-old son including sitting him on his lap. He agreed to baby-sit for their children. By chance, the father of the children[270] called to the clinic where the true story emerged. Fr. Walsh was immediately removed from the clinic and returned to Ireland.

Certainly Walsh must’ve been sorely disappointed that the child’s father wasn’t a more dutiful Catholic.

Despite Monsignor Stenson alerting the Gardaí to this latest incident, corrective action was left to the foxes and it was as anemic as all previous “actions”.

> 19.76 Monsignor Stenson reported Fr. Walsh’s return to the garda sergeant and commented: “In view of Fr. [Walsh’s] behaviour in the past you might give this information whatever attention you think it may require”.
>
> 19.77 In March 1992, the bishops again decided that he was to be instructed not to say mass, not to wear clerical dress and not to exercise any functions of priesthood. He was to engage in a form of > occupational therapy and it was decided to inform a number of parish priests of the position. He was also told that he could not use his car. He was given work in the archdiocesan library.

Truly, the entire lot should be in prison awaiting sentencing; both cops and clergy.

As his reign of terror began to burden “the Church”, moves were slowly made to defrock him — but nothing more.

His own psychologist was astounded.

> 19.87 Fr. Walsh’s psychologist was not impressed with the decision to dismiss him from the priesthood. He expressed his dissatisfaction to Fr. Aidan McGrath (who was Fr. Walsh’s advocate or procurator during the penal process) in September 1993: “As you know, I favour judgements in the courts which both impose a punishment, but which allow genuine change to lead to escape from that punishment. Good deeds can earn both remission and forgiveness. [Walsh] faces no such prospect, and I wonder why this kind of sentence was excluded”.

Perhaps if the psychologist had hounded law enforcement, personally, he would’ve been more than simply “astounded”.

After decades of raping children, as Irish superiors finally began ineffective action against Walsh, Rome intervened to insure even this was circumvented!

> 19.89 In October 1993, Fr. Walsh appealed to Rome against the decision to dismiss him. ... In June 1994, the appellate judges in Rome allowed [Walsh] [273]to remain in the clerical state...

As the years rolled on, Walsh continued to approach children unhindered.

No venue was sacred.

Perhaps, more accurately, no venue was “off limits” as Walsh clearly associated Roman Catholicism with worship of Lucifer which he proved by his incessant and heinous behavior.

During court proceedings in 2010 it was revealed that Walsh frequently used the confessional to rape boys. Even presiding magistrate Frank O’Donnell (a Catholic) was disturbed.

> “It is difficult to imagine more reprehensible circumstances than a priest in confession setting about the sexual abuse of a young boy,” the judge said. “This is a gross breach of trust, and that’s putting it mildly.” ~ Irish Times[472]

In fact, as a Luciferian, Walsh found perverse pleasure in exploiting what his victims would consider “holy” such as grooming boys during the funeral of a family member (which he did repeatedly).

Although the Garda was now involved, Ireland’s Finest continued to sit on the sidelines.

> 19.90 Meanwhile, a complaint of sexual assault was made to the Gardai. In May 1994, a young boy complained to the Gardai in Ballyfermot that he had been sexually assaulted by Fr. Walsh in the toilet of a pub following the funeral of the boy’s grandfather. The family alleged that a similar incident had happened a year earlier but they did not report it at the time. The Gardai contacted Monsignor Stenson. Fr. Walsh attended the garda station and declined to answer any questions. The Gardai told Monsignor Stenson of their intention to arrest Fr. Walsh. They also told him that they were in the process of “linking of various skeletons” and that press were “sniffing out a story”. Fr. Walsh denied the allegation.

Notice that the good Catholic family could’ve reported a “similar incident” previously, but didn’t.

The media got involved. Agents of the Devil’s Simulation there also made sure that Walsh was still protected.

When one of Walsh’s victims became suicidal, his mother contacted ... well, you know who.

> 19.91 In late 1994 there were newspaper reports about this latest incident; these did not name either Fr. Walsh or the boy. In December 1994, a mother of boys who had been abused by Fr. Walsh rang > Monsignor Stenson to say that her son was suicidal and that Fr. Walsh had been babysitting in recent weeks.

This new “media attention” — despite being as anemic as the Garda response — was still attacked by the clergy.

> 19.93 In spite of the mounting evidence and in the light of the recent media coverage, Monsignor [Gerard] Sheehy advised Archbishop Connell: “I think it important that every one of us should at this stage avoid any excessive reaction – no matter what the civil law may say. Least of all should we pay any real attention to the money-making posturing of the media”.

Perhaps it’s not surprising that Sheehy would so aggressively defend a monster like Father Tony Walsh; Sheehy was ordained at the same Holy Cross seminary in Clonliffe.[473]

Finally, in February of 1995, Walsh was charged with a single assault, convicted and sentenced to a year in prison. [Murphy 19.95]

Astoundingly, he continued to walk free and the “problem” of where to station him arose for “the Church”. [Murphy 19.98]

Now that he was a convicted pedophile, the Archdiocese decided it was a good time to give up some of the extensive records of his activities. [Murphy 19.96]

Walsh was charged with new offenses in July of 1995 but the proceedings were suspended so that the Garda could “collate all the cases.”

He continued to roam free, even as a convicted pedophile.

The Garda made no moves that weren’t first co-ordinated with the Church.

> 19.100 In July 1995, Fr. Walsh was charged with further sexual offences in the District Court. The case was adjourned to allow the Gardai pursue further investigations. In November 1995, the Gardai told Monsignor Stenson that all garda stations had been asked to collate all cases they had concerning Fr. Walsh.

Walsh further thwarted justice by exploiting free legal aid which gave him eight more years of opportunity to rape children.[474]

Over a year later, the convicted pedophile was finally defrocked, though still roaming free and living at the Mount Melleray Abbey. [Murphy 19.104]

Sad to see Walsh put out, Pope Saint John Paul II and the Curia awarded the serial child rapist £10,500 in “severance pay”. [19.105]

As the convictions rolled in, the courts played a judicial game of propaganda; instead of requiring Walsh to serve terms for his offenses consecutively, they were lumped together concurrently. This allowed the government to appear to be hammering the priest with multiple convictions but, in actuality, he would only be required to serve the time for a single one. [19.109]

One reason Walsh’s “therapists” never turned him over to authorities is because they were paid by his superiors to keep things quiet.

This conflict of interest continued through the pedophile priest’s trials, much to the anger of his victims. [19.111]

During the proceedings it surfaced that victims were displeased with relying upon clergy for justice and restitution, although one can’t help but wonder why.

> 19.113 ...one complainant told the Commission that he was unhappy with how he was treated and said that “the Church have failed me and still fail me today”.

As Walsh’s concurrent prison time passed quickly, he came up for release.

It was September of 2001. [19.116][lx]

Upon his release, Walsh ignored his laicization and continued on as a Roman Catholic priest! The response of Rome was to “threaten” him with “excommunication” (which never occurred). [19-119]

As a result of the actions of Ireland’s law enforcement, judges, the Director of Public Prosecutions and Catholic clergy from Dublin to Rome, Tony

Walsh continued to rape children as a defrocked priest even after his sickeningly short, concurrent prison term(s).

> 19.122 Between 2002 and 2006, over 20 further individuals alleged that they were abused by Walsh.

In 2010, Walsh was again brought into court and, again, Ireland's "Justice System" served up injustice.

It should be noted that the sickening leniency Walsh received was the "harshest" of any pedophile priest.

> Five of the 13 counts, for buggery, attracted sentences of 10, 12, 14, 16 and 16 years each. The remaining counts, for indecent assault, brought sentences ranging from four to nine years. As Walsh is to serve his sentences concurrently, 16 years is the maximum time he will spend in jail. It is the most severe sentence ever imposed on a clerical child sex abuser in the State. (Four years were suspended, as a psychologist's report said it was unlikely Walsh would offend again.) With good behaviour Walsh could be out of jail in 2019.
>
> Fr. Brendan Smyth, probably Ireland's most notorious clerical paedophile, was jailed for 12 years at the Circuit Criminal Court in July 1997. He died a month into his sentence. Another notorious abuser, the Donegal priest Fr. Eugene Greene, was released in 2008 after serving nine years of a 12-year sentence. ~ Irish Times[475]

What little "justice" was delivered by the agents of the Devil's Simulation was the result of citizens like one of his victims who hounded authorities for seventeen years seeking for Walsh to be reined in.[476]

The same scenario played out across decades of abuse but the details of just a few incidents show what satanic sociopaths Tony Walsh, all such pedophiles and all who aid them, are. He repeatedly mixed "sacred" religious paraphernalia in with his crimes (part of the Luciferian ritual?) and was completely unfazed by the pain he caused his child victims.

> In David's case Walsh did not plead guilty and forced a trial. The jury last month found him guilty, unanimously and after just 94 minutes, on the 13 counts. The speed of the conviction was down to David himself, > who, as Justice O'Donnell said on Monday, had been "an absolute stalwart" in his evidence to the court.

>
> David's victim-impact statement, prepared by the psychiatrist Prof Ivor Browne, includes the details of three shocking incidents. One took place in "a small tunnel" at the Phoenix Park, "towards the Furry Glen", where there was "a small cream mattress". David was raped there by Walsh. The boy "felt severe pain and cried a lot".
>
> Afterwards Walsh wiped him with "a purple sash (stole) he had with him". When Walsh picked up his jacket "a small receptacle for holding Holy Communion wafers fell out of his pocket". He brought David back to the presbytery, "put on Elvis records ... and gave him a glass of Coke". He then showed David "a Bible with pictures of hell and said if he told anyone he would burn in hell and never go to heaven and then he let him go home". ~ Irish Times[477]

Shockingly, as David attempted to get help from his family, he was assaulted again!

> These were not isolated incidents. As Prof [Ivor] Browne [of the Rape Crisis Centre and the Institute of Psychosocial Medicine in Sandycove, Dublin] said in the victim-impact report, they were described in detail "because they were particularly heinous". But, he continued, "it should be stressed that over the five years, between the ages of seven and 12, that this abuse continued, David was raped anally and buggered by the priest on average a couple of times a week." When David told his uncle what Walsh had been doing to him, his uncle also raped him "on a couple of occasions".[478]

Were these just unbelievably bad circumstances or evidence of a network of child rapists?

Although the link in this instance is tenuous, if one considers the possibility that interdimensional agencies ("demons") were contributing, it becomes more likely.

Other victims like David continued to step forward and force government officials to act. As a result, Tony Walsh is back in prison and not due for release until 2023.

Even this can not be considered “justice”.

Unfortunately for Ireland’s citizenry, the Catholic Church saw to the abolishment of the death penalty in 1964.

The criminal behavior from Ireland’s religious and “secular” authorities by enabling monsters to prey upon the citizenry they are sworn to protect is why Chapter 19 of the Murphy report was redacted.

John Charles McQuaid: Ruler of Catholic Ireland

One man not examined by the Murphy Commission was Archbishop John McQuaid; arguably the most powerful man in Ireland during his tenure.

> The HSE [Health Service Executive, the governmental authority for Ireland’s Catholic-sponsored socialized medicine] has refused to explain why an allegation that one of the most powerful figures in the Catholic Church had abused a minor was not passed to a commission investigating abuse in the Dublin Archdiocese.
>
> Gardai last night said they were still investigating two complaints made against former Archbishop of Dublin John Charles McQuaid.
>
> Yesterday it emerged that one of the complaints — made in 2003 — was never reported to the Murphy Commission.
>
> Dr. McQuaid was archbishop between 1940 and 1972 and was criticised by the commission for his failure to protect children from abusive priests. He died in 1973.
>
> Yesterday it emerged that the 2003 complaint was not forwarded to the Murphy inquiry until May 2009, just as it was winding down.
>
> Details of that complaint — and a second made directly to the Dublin Archdiocese — were contained in the supplementary report to the Dublin Archdiocese Investigation by the Murphy Commission.
>
> The HSE refused to comment on why the allegation had never been investigated. ~ The Irish Independent[479]

In fact, despite the procedure of the Devil’s Simulation to only promote those who partake in the defiling of children, Roman Catholic Bishops and Cardinals remain untouched by media or law enforcement.

Yet the likelyhood that they are criminals is absolutely assured, if only how they enable the heinous acts of their subordinates.

But in McQuaid’s case, there is even more.

> Allegations that Dr. McQuaid had abused children first emerged in 1999 in a biography of the cleric by Irish Independent journalist John Cooney.[480]

The usual procedure in addressing priest predations of waiting until the perpetrator was a retired octogenarian was padded for Doctor McQuaid. The Archbishop’s crimes lay unreported until Cooney’s book John Charles McQuaid: Ruler of Catholic Ireland, was published — almost 40 years after McQuaid’s death.

Even then, only a smattering of complaints were allowed to be addressed.

> Two specific complaints and a separate unspecified “concern” against an unidentified cleric were reported to the Murphy Commission, a state-sponsored investigation into the handling of clerical sexual abuse of children in the Dublin archdiocese.
>
> The commission published its main report in 2009, but it said that “due to human error” the latest allegations emerged only in a supplementary report published in July. This does not name Archbishop McQuaid, but the [Irish Times disclosed] that the allegations of abuse contained within it refer to the archbishop. One allegation is regarding abuse of a 12-year-old boy in 1961. ~ NY Times[481]

Cooney noted that McQuaid reigned supreme in Ireland and that his “Protestant opposition” was little of either.

Upon word of his death, top Protestant leaders immediately took up the Catholic (pagan) practice of praying for the dead pedophile’s soul.

They also dropped their agendas to force the Irish government to give Protestant Christianity equal footing in public affairs.

> The unexpected death ... of Archbishop John Charles McQuaid deflected a group of Protestant churchmen from taking the historic step of sanctioning radical measures to eradicate sectarian bigotry in the North and to promote an inclusive pluralist society in the Republic. ...
>
> A few minutes later Alan Buchanan, the Church of Ireland Archbishop of Dublin, rushed back into the room and announced in his strong Monaghan accent, "Archbishop McQuaid is dead. Archbishop McQuaid is dead." Instantly, the Church of Ireland Primate of Armagh, George Otto Simms, the Presbyterian, Jack Weir and the former Methodist President, Eric Gallagher, stood in silent prayer with Buchanan for the soul of John Charles. It was a spontaneous act of spiritual homage from the Protestant leaders to the undisputed champion of Catholic supremacy.
>
> Observing this remarkable event as The Irish Times religious affairs correspondent, I was puzzled by such a show of reverence. Even in death, McQuaid cast a heavy shadow. On Buchanan's suggestion, the Protestant church leaders sent a telegram of sympathy to Archbishop Dermot Ryan, who 15 months earlier had succeeded McQuaid. More importantly, they postponed a decision to invite Catholic observers to the Irish Council of Churches. It was as if the ghost of John Charles chuckled at this proof of Protestant indecision. ~ Irish Times[482]

For a brief period of time, Rome's death-grip on Ireland's women and children was challenged by Noël Browne, a Doctor of medicine and Minister in the Dáil Éireann (the lower house of Ireland's Legislature).

Because Browne rose against Catholic power, mention of his name and his short-lived efforts to remove Vatican tyranny in hospitals are always addressed with adjectives like "highly controversial". His legislation was slammed as the "Mother and Child Scheme" which "brought down" entire administrations!

Because he was "highly controversial", Browne was frequently kicked out of any political party he tried to affiliate with.

Despite being “highly controversial” he was immediately elected to Teachta Dála (equivalent of an American Congressman, usually abbreviated “TD”) upon arriving in a new party.

> Noël Christopher Browne (20 December 1915 – 21 May 1997) was an Irish politician and doctor.[1] He holds the distinction of being one of only seven TDs to be appointed Minister at the start of their first term in the Dáil. His controversial Mother and Child Scheme in effect brought down the First Inter-Party Government of John A. Costello in 1951.
>
> Browne was a well-known but at times highly controversial public representative, and managed to be a TD for five different political parties (two of which he co-founded). These were Clann na Poblachta (resigned), Fianna Fáil (expelled), National Progressive Democrats (co-founder), Labour Party (resigned) and the Socialist Labour Party (co-founder). ~ Wikipedia[483]

> The Mother and Child Scheme was a healthcare programme in Ireland that would later become remembered as a major political crisis involving primarily the Irish Government and Roman Catholic Church in the early 1950s.
>
> The scheme was referred to as the Mother and Child Service in legislation. A brochure, “What the new service means to every family”, was prepared. It explained the new service but was not issued to the public. The scheme was engulfed in crisis before this could happen. ~ Wikipedia[484]

Not realizing the true nature of the Catholic Church — that it is anything but “Christian” — the few who rise against it wrongly believe that secularism is the preferred tactic when fighting such a Dragon.

However, it is an anticipated tactic and one that Rome’s enemies are carefully maneuvered in to. Once immersed in the quagmire of no moral authority above “government”, she steps into the vacuum and fully flexes her muscles through her agents both overt and covert.

The Vatican's influence in Ireland, particularly when wielded by Archbishop John Charles McQuaid was all-encompassing.

> None of his successors, Dermot Ryan, Kevin McNamara and Desmond Connell, has exercised the enormous spiritual power, let alone the almost unbounded temporal power, which he commanded.
>
> It was not until the publication in 1987 of the de Valera papers relating to the drafting of [Ireland's] 1937 Constitution that the extent of McQuaid's power began to be fully appreciated.
>
> These papers showed how McQuaid, as president of Blackrock College, collaborated closely with de Valera[lxi] in drafting the fundamental law of the State.
>
> Even more importantly, the opening of the McQuaid archive a decade later, in 1997, revealed a homespun spy system which had won the admiration of the head of the FBI, the legendary J. Edgar Hoover.
>
> A control freak, McQuaid mobilised government Departments, Dublin Corporation, and the medical, legal and teaching professions to defend [the Roman Catholic Church from all enemies[lxii]].
>
> In the McQuaid story lies the awesome power exercised by the Catholic Church in Ireland in the mid-twentieth century. ~ Cooney[485]

According to his biographer, John Cooney, it was Archbishop McQuaid's mismanagement of Dublin diocese finances — which were on the brink of bankruptcy in the 1970's — that fostered his two heart attacks.

The biographer added this fascinating incident which occurred after the highest Roman Catholic prelate in Ireland was undergoing care at St. Columcille's Hospital in the Dublin suburb of Loughlinstown from his second heart attack:

> Knowing that his end was approaching, he rose up from his pillow and asked a Roscommon nurse if he had any chance of reaching heaven. [486]

Following the Catholic (and very pagan) practice of literally worshipping upon the dead, McQuaid's body was given the highest honors.

> McQuaid was buried under the High Altar in Dublin's Pro-Cathedral... [487]

It is a very un-Christian practice that goes back thousands of years.

> Setting aside a special time and place in which to focus upon one's relationship with God — "going to church" — is a purely pagan contrivance.
>
> All cathedrals and most churches are built upon sacred burial sites (dead bodies) because pagans believed that such sites facilitated interdimensional communication through rituals like the "mass".
>
> > From the earliest times the barrow was regarded as sacred ground, and near it the pagan temple was erected. When we look at our country churches, surrounded by rows of grass-covered mounds, we see a type of the olden practice very little altered, indeed, for the Christian Church was often built on the actual foundations of the pagan temple ... ~ Puckle[59]
>
> Vatican City is a sacred "city of the dead" built upon an ancient Etruscan grave site. ~ Secret History[488]

Given John McQuaid's tyrannical power in Ireland it is even more disturbing to learn that his crimes went beyond merely covering for sexual deviant predatory priests.

> The astronomer Frederick O'Connor hand-built a telescope so the Archbishop could view the stars and indulge a scholarly interest in astronomy.
>
> But according to John Cooney's new book, John Charles McQuaid Ruler of Catholic Ireland, the Archbishop used his eye in the sky for more prurient pursuits.
>
> The book alleges he used the powerful lens to spy on courting couples making out on Killiney beach.

> They allege that the Machiavellian churchman who effectively ruled the church not only in Dublin, but in Ireland, for 32 years and impacted on the affairs of State in a most profound way, was also a Peeping Tom in a cassock. ...
>
> These allegations of voyeurism were used to substantiate far more sinister allegations contained in Cooney's book and carried last week in the Sunday Times, which claimed the Archbishop was a homosexual who preyed on children. However, another allegation that the Archbishop also used the telescope to spy on schoolgirls at a nearby convent was physically possible and when we visited the turret this week we could see children playing in the school grounds. ~ The Irish Independent[489]

An important source for Cooney in regards to accusations that McQuaid was a sexual deviant and a pedophile came from none other than Dr. Noël Browne.

> That central allegation of paedophilia, inappropriate behaviour towards children and an unhealthy and unsavoury interest in sex is based in part on a manuscript by the late Noel Browne.[490]

The source was an unpublished autobiography that included an interview with a school inspector who had direct knowledge of McQuaid's leanings.

> John Cooney was given a copy of the controversial [work] by Dr. Browne's widow when he approached her following her husband's death.
>
> John Cooney's book will state that Browne was convinced that the story related by the school inspector pointed towards the Archbishop being a paranoid schizophrenic as well as an abuser.[491]

These are impeccable sources (mocked by the media) which show that the Bishops, Cardinals and Popes who enable pedophile priests are doing so because they are child predators, themselves.

That's how they got "elected".

Chapter 12

The Milwaukee Cannibal[lxiii]

1978: Jeffrey Lionel Dahmer (1960 – 1994) committed his first murder in the summer of 1978 at the age of 18, just three weeks after his graduation. At the time, he was living alone in the family home. Owing to his recent divorce from Dahmer's mother, Dahmer's father temporarily lived in a nearby motel and his mother had relocated to Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin[38] with his younger brother. On June 18,[39] Dahmer picked up an 18-year-old hitchhiker named Steven Mark Hicks.[40][41] Dahmer lured the youth to his house on the pretext of the two young men drinking alcohol together. Hicks, who had been hitchhiking to a rock concert in Lockwood Corners, agreed to accompany Dahmer to his house. According to Dahmer, after several hours' drinking and listening to music, Hicks "wanted to leave and [I] didn't want him to."[42] In response, Dahmer bludgeoned him with a 10 lb. dumbbell. Dahmer later stated he struck Hicks twice from behind[43] with the dumbbell as Hicks sat upon a chair. When Hicks fell unconscious, Dahmer strangled him to death with the bar of the dumbbell, then stripped the clothes from Hicks' body before masturbating as he stood above the corpse.[43] The following day,[44] Dahmer dissected Hicks' body in his crawl space; he later buried the remains in a shallow grave in his backyard[45] before, several weeks later, unearthing the remains and paring the flesh from the bones.[46] He dissolved the flesh in acid before flushing the solution down the toilet; he crushed the bones with a sledgehammer and scattered them in the woodland behind the family home.[47]

Six weeks after the murder of Hicks, Dahmer's father and his fiancée returned to his home where they discovered Jeffrey living alone at the house. ~ Wikipedia[492]

In alternative media there is a popular series of interviews that floats around the internet with a woman who says her name is Kay Griggs (née Pollard), the former wife of Marine Corps Colonel George Griggs who worked in the Pentagon's Special Operations.

The interviews are a fascinating mix of truth and subterfuge. "Mrs. Griggs" claims to be a devout Protestant Christian, well-studied in the "Reformation[lxiv]" yet she states that she liked her then-current Pope, Saint John Paul II, and believed Opus Dei to be "an Italian business group". She claimed that the main forces behind the world's evils were "the mob" and the Jews — which is exactly what the Vatican likes to hear.

Many of her obscure assertions turned out to be true such as her proof that then-Commandant of the Marine Corps, General Alfred M. Gray Jr, remained single all his life. She claimed it was indicative of his homosexuality and sexual perversion. "Mrs. Griggs" says that is why Gray was chosen for his job.

"Mrs. Griggs" claims that sexual deviancy is the primary requirement for promotion in the United States military and the "Tailhook" scandal of 1991 was part of that culture. During the annual meeting of the "Tailhook Association" (a "fraternal order" of naval aviators) in Las Vegas, a large number of women were assaulted and "groped" — many of them were military personnel.

It was supposedly a "stain" on the record of then-Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Frank Benton Kelso II (1933 – 2013). Kelso was also there.

The “response” to the scandal was a call from Congress to reduce Kelso in rank upon his retirement — twelve years after the fact.

It was led by United States Senator from Mary-land, Barbara Ann Mikulski.[493]

Mikulski is another sickeningly-tenured Leftist Catholic insurgent, doing the subversive work of Rome in Congress for forty years (at this writing), and still counting.

Mikulski was educated by the inversely-named “Sisters of Mercy” (who figure so prominently in child abuse and trafficking) at Mount Saint Agnes, a Roman Catholic college for women.

“Mrs. Griggs” stated that she was good friends with the wife of Admiral Frank Kelso, “Landess”. That was, indeed, the name of Kelso’s wife until her death in 2012.

In 2013, Kelso married Georgia Robinson. Two weeks later he was dead due “complications” from a “fall”.[494]

Another assertion “Mrs. Griggs” made was that government patsies, assets and operatives are psychologically screened for flaws and sexual perversions to ease their use, manipulation and control. She gave as examples, Oklahoma City bombing patsy Timothy McVeigh, JFK assassination patsy Lee Harvey Oswald (a bisexual), and serial killer Jeffrey Dahmer.

Although “Mrs. Griggs” never fully explained who the “profilers” were, she was again correct in her statement that all three of her examples served in the United States military.

In the case of Jeffrey Dahmer, we can conclusively explain here who those “profilers” were.

Dahmer was born and raised in Wisconsin; a state with a deceptively-strong Jesuit presence. The State of Wisconsin is its own Jesuit Province. It’s largest city, Milwaukee, is less than 90 minutes from the Jesuit citadel of Chicago, Illinois.

Milwaukee is home to Jesuit Marquette University. Despite media propaganda over the "drop" in Catholic attendance and recruitment, 2017 saw a landmark for the Jesuits.

> If you had asked Wisconsin native Brad Held if he'd be celibate for the majority of his life, he would have laughed. [Given the way priests obey their vow of celibacy he's probably still laughing.]
>
> But that all changed during his junior year at Marquette University when he decided a career in political science wasn't for him. And on June 3, he was ordained ... in the largest class of Jesuits in the Midwest since 1995. ~ Milwaukee Journal Sentinel[495]

Wikipedia, normally quiet on Roman breadcrumbs, noted this about Dahmer's early life and family —

> Jeffrey Dahmer was born at the Evangelical Deaconess Hospital in Milwaukee, Wisconsin[6] on May 21, 1960, the first of two sons born to Joyce Annette (née Flint) and Lionel Herbert Dahmer. Dahmer's mother worked as a teletype machine instructor,[7] whereas his father was a student at Marquette University, working towards a degree in chemistry.[496]

The chemistry the Jesuits taught Lionel Dahmer would serve his son very well in disposing of his future victims.

In 1979, under pressure from his Jesuit-trained father, Dahmer enlisted in the Army and received medical training that would further weaponize him. As a homicidal homosexual, the Army was the perfect place for Dahmer to be developed.

> Preston Davis, a fellow soldier who worked in a medic unit with Dahmer, believes that he was drugged by Dahmer inside an armored personnel vehicle and raped.
>
> Once Davis left Germany, he was replaced with 17-year-old Billy Joe Capshaw, who claims that he was raped by Dahmer as well [Capshaw was the perfect victim to stick with Dahmer — as young and vulnerable as possible]. After the first assault, Capshaw leaped from > the third-floor window to escape. According to Capshaw, Dahmer raped him 8 to 10 times within a period of 17 months. In Capshaw's words, Dahmer would tie him to the bunk with motor-pool rope, stripping all his clothing and beat him before raping him.

>
> Soon after, Capshaw reported the abuse to his commander and was taken to the dispensary for a rape test to determine if he was telling the truth. The doctors did nothing and Capshaw was sent back to the room and spent another 17 months with Dahmer, suffering more rape and torture. ~ TheCrimeMag.com[497]

Dahmer was stationed in Germany and he may not have confined his activities to his fellow soldiers.

> Later, speculation arose about numerous young German men reported missing at the time that Dahmer had been stationed there. ~ U.S. History.com[498]

Dahmer was sent back to the American citizenry after serving only two years of his 4-year enlistment. However, he wasn't discharged for mental dysfunction or sexual assault, it was for "alcoholism".

Dahmer took up with his grandmother back in Wisconsin where he experimented on animals with chemicals and applied "techniques" to a male mannequin. He was getting ready for his calling. As he did so, the "justice system" happily obliged.

> In 1982, Dahmer moved in with his grandmother in West Allis, where he lived for six years. During this time, his behavior grew increasingly strange. His grandmother once found a fully dressed male mannequin in his closet; Dahmer had stolen it from a store. On another occasion, she found a .357 Magnum under his bed. Terrible smells came from the basement; Dahmer told his father that he had brought home a dead squirrel and dissolved it with chemicals. He was arrested twice for indecent exposure, in 1982 and 1986; in his second offense, he masturbated in front of two boys.
>
> In summer 1988, Dahmer's grandmother asked him to move out because of his late nights, his strange behavior, and the foul smells > from the basement. He then found an apartment on Milwaukee’s West side, closer to his job at the Ambrosia Chocolate Factory.

>
> On September 26, 1988, one day after moving into his apartment, he was arrested for drugging and sexually fondling a 13-year-old boy in Milwaukee. He was sentenced to five years’ probation and one year in a work release camp. He was required to register as a sex offender. Dahmer was paroled from the work release camp two months early, and he soon moved into a new apartment. Shortly thereafter, he began a string of murders that ended with his arrest in 1991. ~ Murderpedia[499]

While still with his grandmother in West Allis, Dahmer committed another murder.

> In November 1987, Dahmer — at the time residing with his grandmother in West Allis — encountered a 25-year-old from Ontonagon, Michigan named Steven Tuomi at a bar and persuaded him to return to the Ambassador Hotel, where Dahmer had rented a room for the evening. According to Dahmer, he had no intention of murdering Tuomi, but simply intended to drug and rape him as he lay unconscious. The following morning, however, he awoke to find Tuomi lying beneath him on the bed, his chest “crushed in” and “black and blue” with bruises. Blood was also seeping from the corner of his mouth, and Dahmer’s fists and one forearm were extensively bruised. Dahmer stated he had absolutely no memory of having killed Tuomi,[79][82] and later informed investigators that he simply “could not believe this had happened.” To dispose of Tuomi’s body, he purchased a large suitcase in which he transported the body to his grandmother’s residence. There, one week later,[83] he severed the head, arms, and legs from the torso,[82] then filleted the bones from the body before cutting the flesh into pieces small enough to handle. He then placed the flesh inside plastic garbage bags.[83] He wrapped the bones inside a sheet and pounded them into splinters with a sledgehammer. The entire dismemberment process took Dahmer approximately two hours to complete, and all of Tuomi’s remains — excluding the severed head[84] — were disposed of in the trash.[85]

> For a total of two weeks following Tuomi's murder, Dahmer retained the victim's head wrapped in a blanket. After two weeks, Dahmer boiled the head in a mixture of Soilex (an alkali-based industrial detergent) and bleach in an effort to retain the skull, which he then used as stimulus for masturbation. Eventually, the skull was rendered too brittle by this bleaching process, and was also pulverized and disposed of.[84] ~ Wikipedia[500]

"Vice" happily remarked that Dahmer's accommodations were provided by another wealthy individual trained by the Jesuits.

> I Drank Old Fashioneds Where Jeffrey Dahmer Killed His First Victim in Milwaukee
>
> In the fall of 1987, serial killer Jeffrey Dahmer murdered a man in his room at the Ambassador Hotel, a local landmark where you can still get a mean cocktail. ...
>
> Strangely enough, even as the Ambassador has sought to distance its name from that of the notorious cannibal, small connections between the two still seem to emerge. Barry Leach, my server at the hotel's lobby bar — Envoy Lounge — tells me about the two taverns he owned previous to his stint here, starting in 1980: Barry's Water Street Pump and Just Arts Saloon. Both were located in Walker's Point, a now-bustling area of town that Dahmer frequented.
>
> "We were the first popular straight bar in the neighborhood," he tells me about Just Arts, alluding to Walker's Point's history as the gay district in town. ...

— In a city and sub-district owned by the Jesuits, Dahmer excelled because of sanctioned sexual perversion. —

> "Most of what we know about the hotel's early days has come from word-of-mouth," says Amy Schneider, the Ambassador's assistant general manager. "We wouldn't know as much as we do if people hadn't stopped by with stories and photos."
>
> Those memories of the Ambassador's glory days, however, have only fueled its owners' commitment to the neighborhood that surrounds it.

> “Our owner is a Marquette grad,” Schneider adds, referring to Milwaukee’s Jesuit university just a few blocks east of the hotel. “And he fell in love with the neighborhood as a student. His entire livelihood is wrapped up in its success — in several apartment buildings and other properties in the area.”
>
> That makes the Ambassador more of a growing pillar in Milwaukee’s rebound than a creepy venue for costumed drinking this Halloween. Come for the cocktails, stay for dinner, watch for the glamorous undead on October 31, and come back knowing your choice is fueling the rebirth of the city’s heyday.[501]

What does it take to put a happy spin on blood-curdling murder, dismemberment and cannibalism? — The same thing it takes for the Ambassador Hotel to get free advertising: a Roman Catholic connection.

The aptly-named “Vice” magazine (now a media conglomerate) was co-founded by Canadian Gavin Miles McInnes: a devout Roman Catholic and Knight of Columbus.[502]

Although McInnes and his admirers paint him as a “former atheist” and new convert to Catholicism, his “public” Bachelor of Arts from Concordia can also be traced to the Jesuits.

> Concordia University (commonly referred to as Concordia) is a public comprehensive university located in Montreal, Quebec, Canada.[6] Founded in 1974 following the merger of Loyola College and Sir George Williams University, Concordia is one of the three universities in Quebec where English is the primary language of instruction. As of the 2014–2015 academic year, there were 46,378 students enrolled at Concordia, making the university among the largest in Canada by enrolment.[7][8] The university has two campuses, set approximately 7 kilometres (4 miles) apart: Sir George Williams Campus is the main campus in Downtown Montreal, in an area known as Quartier Concordia, and Loyola Campus in the residential district of Notre-Dame-de-Grâce.[9] ~ Wikipedia[503]

Merging with Concordia provided the Jesuits with yet another public school name to cover their tracks.

January 2009 cover of Vice magazine.
Wikipedia

> After the Tuomi murder, Dahmer continued to kill sporadically: two more murders in 1988, and another in early 1989, usually picking up his victims in gay bars and having sex with them before killing them. He kept the skull of one of his victims, Anthony Sears, until he was caught.
>
> In May 1990, he moved out of his grandmother's house for the last time and into an apartment that later became infamous: Apartment 213, 924 North 25th Street, Milwaukee. Dahmer picked up the pace of his killing: four more murders before the end of 1990, two more in February and April 1991, and another in May 1991. ~ Murderpedia[504]

Dahmer continued to be enabled by the "authorities" Americans trust to protect them. Particularly disturbing was the teenage boy who almost got away from the monster but was kicked back to him ... by police.

> In the early morning hours of May 27, 1991, 14-year-old Konerak Sinthasomphone (the younger brother of the boy whom Dahmer had molested in 1988) was discovered on the street, wandering naked, heavily under the influence of drugs and bleeding from his rectum. Two young women from the neighborhood found the dazed boy and called 911. Dahmer chased his victim down and tried to take him away, but the women stopped him. Dahmer told John Balcerzak and Joseph Gabrish, police officers dispatched to the scene, that Sinthasomphone was his 19-year-old boyfriend, and that they had an argument while drinking. Against the protests of the two women who had called 911, who recognized him from the neighborhood and insisted that he was a child and couldn't speak English, the officers turned him over to

> Dahmer. They later reported smelling a strange scent while inside Dahmer’s apartment, but did not investigate it. The smell was the body of Tony Hughes, Dahmer’s previous victim, decomposing in the bedroom. The officers did not make any attempt to verify Sinthasomphone’s age or identity, nor locate someone who could communicate with him, and failed to run a background check that would have revealed Dahmer being a convicted child molester still under probation. Later that night, Dahmer killed and dismembered Sinthasomphone, keeping his skull as a souvenir.[505]

Thanks to the help received by authorities, Dahmer could step up his pace while taking the time to torture his victims.

> By summer 1991, Dahmer was murdering approximately one person each week. He killed Matt Turner on June 30, Jeremiah Weinberger on July 5, Oliver Lacy on July 12, and finally Joseph Brandehoft on July 19. Dahmer got the idea that he could turn his victims into “zombies” — completely submissive, eternally youthful sexual partners – and attempted to do so by drilling holes into their skulls and injecting hydrochloric acid or boiling water into the frontal lobe area of their brains with a large syringe, usually while the victim was still alive. Other residents of the Oxford Apartments complex noticed terrible smells coming from Apartment 213, as well as the thumps of falling objects and the occasional buzzing of a power saw.[506]

At last, Jeffrey Dahmer’s reign of terror was put to an end.

> On July 22, 1991, Dahmer lured another man, Tracy Edwards, into his home. According to the would-be victim, Dahmer struggled with Edwards in order to handcuff him, but ultimately failed to cuff his wrists together. Wielding a large butcher knife, Dahmer forced Edwards into the bedroom, where Edwards saw pictures of mangled bodies on the wall and noticed the terrible smell coming from a large blue barrel; the barrel was filled with potent acid which dissolved human bodies to sludge for disposal via the apartment toilet. Edwards punched Dahmer in the face, kicked him in the stomach, ran for the door and escaped. Running through the streets with handcuffs still > hanging from one hand, Edwards waved for help to a police car driven by Robert Rauth and Rolf Mueller of the Milwaukee police department. Edwards led police back to Dahmer's apartment, where Dahmer at first acted friendly to the officers. However, Edwards remembered that the knife Dahmer had threatened him with was in the bedroom. When one of the officers checked the bedroom, he saw the photographs of mangled bodies and called for his partner to arrest Dahmer. As one officer subdued Dahmer, the other opened the refrigerator and found a human head. Further searching of the apartment revealed three more severed heads, multiple photographs of murdered victims and human remains, severed hands and penises, and photographs of dismembered victims and human remains in his refrigerator. ...

>
> Dahmer was indicted on 17 murder charges, later reduced to 15. Dahmer was not charged in the attempted murder of Edwards. His trial began on January 30, 1992. With evidence overwhelmingly against him, Dahmer pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity. The trial lasted two weeks.[507]

When Jeffrey Dahmer was escorted into court, on either side of him was the Company of Loyola.

Prosecuting Dahmer was a Jesuit priest.

Yes, you read that right. One of the most notorious and heinous serial killers in "secular" America was prosecuted by a Jesuit priest.

Frederick Tupper Saussy wrote one of the best exposés on Roman subversion of America; Rulers of Evil. He was hunted down and brought in to court on tax-related charges.

> On freshman orientation day at the University of the South in Sewanee, Tennessee, I took a seat across the table from my faculty advisor. He was a professor of botany named Edmund Berkeley. Dr. Berkeley studied the tab on my manila file folder as though it were some rare species of leaf. Suddenly his eyes leapt into my face. Giddy eighteen-year-old that I was, I gulped and tried to smile.
>
> '"Saussy,"' he mused calmly. "Good Huguenot name."

The word stumped me. “Huguenot?”

“‘Saussy’ is a French name,” he lectured. “Sewanee is a Protestant university. Your people must have been Huguenots.”

I silently forgave my father for never having told me our name was French and that our ancestors might have been something called “Huguenots.”

“What exactly are Huguenots?” I inquired.

“French Protestants,” declared my advisor. “Massacred by soldiers ordered by Catherine d’Medici in cahoots with the Jesuits. The survivors were exiled. Some established in England, others in Prussia. Some came to America, as your people obviously did.” ...

I never had occasion to think about my conversation with Edmund Berkeley until some thirty years later, in August of 1984, during a brief but telling encounter with an assistant United States attorney by the name of John MacCoon. We were standing a few paces apart in the marble hallway outside a federal courtroom in Chattanooga, waiting for the morning session to be called.

I was on the docket, scheduled to be arraigned on charges of willful failure to file income tax returns for the years 1977, 1978, and 1979.

I had no doubt that the charges would be dropped. The statute I had supposedly run afoul of applied to persons “required” to file returns. Yet I possessed a letter signed by the IRS District Director stating that a diligent search of IRS files had failed to disclose any tax liability in my name for those years. People who have no tax liability are not required to file returns. Why was I there?

The booming voice of a lawyer friend broke my concentration.

“Tupper,” he said, guiding me over to John MacCoon, “have you met your prosecutor?”

He introduced us in a jovial fashion and then rushed off to a huddle of other litigants.

> MacCoon and I shook hands. “John,” I asked, feeling the need to make small talk, “are you from Chattanooga?”
>
> “No,” he replied, “I came from Washington.”
>
> Something inside told me to press. “So you’re originally from Washington?”
>
> “No, originally I’m from New Orleans.”
>
> “I have lots of cousins in New Orleans,” I beamed. He seemed to get a little edgy.
>
> “Well, the name Saussy is not unknown there,” he said.
>
> “One of my favorite cousins lives in New Orleans,” I said, and named my cousin.
>
> “He’s your cousin? Why, he and I were ordained together.”
>
> “Ordained?” I asked. “My cousin is a Jesuit priest. Are you a Jesuit?”
>
> “Yes,” said my prosecutor, now visibly agitated. “You know, I might have to recuse myself...”
>
> “I’ve got a better idea, drop the charges.”
>
> “Oh no, I couldn’t do that.”
>
> The dialogue ended suddenly with the hoarse drawl of a bailiff announcing that court was now in session.
>
> So John MacCoon was a Jesuit! The media, spoon-fed by his offices, had already branded me a “tax protestor.” What was going on? Were the Jesuits chasing Protestants again?[508]

A similar Jesuit “feast” was held repeatedly over the trial, imprisonment and release of Kent “Dr. Dino” Hovind. A Certified Public Accountant, educated by the Jesuits in both High School and College, named Peter J. Reilly covered the Hovind story with repeated columns for Forbes magazine.[lxv]

Not only was Saussy targeted and prosecuted by a Jesuit priest, it was one specifically assigned to that task from the nation's "capital" — Washington, D.C.

Saussy says nothing about how he got into tax trouble with the United States Government but he may have been entrapped by an "Intelligence" tactic of flushing possible enemies. Tax laws are purposefully so complex they require an expert to weed through. Citizens dissatisfied with their government are constantly urged by subversive agents to refuse to pay their taxes. When they expose themselves the full force of the "Federal" government crashes upon them. In special cases like Tupper Saussy's, a Jesuit leads the prosecution.

It is then citizens find out too late they've been fooled into thinking they can fight an unwinnable battle.

Few indictments are more powerful regarding the covert control of the United States of America by Rome than how Jesuit priests prosecute crimes against the government.

Defending the homicidal homosexual cannibal was Milwaukee lawyer Gerald Boyle. Boyle would continue to make a name for himself after the high-profile case with such clients as professional football player Mark Chmura of the Green Bay Packers. Boyle got Chmura acquitted of charges of molesting a teenager at a post-prom party.

Boyle added corrupt cops to his list of wealthy Elite clientele and cannibalistic serial killers.

> He defended John Maloney, a Green Bay arson detective convicted of killing his wife and setting fire to her body. ...
>
> In more recent years, Boyle represented a fired Milwaukee police officer in the Frank Jude beating case, the former head of the Milwaukee police union charged with forgery, a psychotherapist charged with having a sexual relationship with a patient, and a Kenosha lawyer charged with money laundering. ~ The Milwaukee Journal Sentinel[509]

Frequent complaints were made against Boyle and his daughter Bridget Boyle (also a lawyer) for “mishandling” client funds or negligent incompetence.

> The OLR [Wisconsin Office of Lawyer Regulation] sought a six-month suspension of Boyle’s law license, but the referee who heard the case, Hannah Dugan, recommended the 60-day suspension, which Boyle appealed.[510]

Rather than accept the 2-month suspension for his criminal activities (which is probably how long Boyle takes vacations) he arrogantly clogged the Wisconsin justice system with appeals which were dutifully passed up to the Wisconsin Supreme Court.

How does a Milwaukee lawyer rate such deference? — He’s a Jesuit-trained Roman Catholic.

In fact, when Marquette athletes forced two freshman girls to be their sex slaves on Halloween night in 2010, the Jesuits sought their alumnus, Gerry Boyle, to cover them in the “administrative meeting” that addressed the “mishap”.[511]

No charges were filed.

Unfortunately for Jeffrey Dahmer, Gerry Boyle wasn’t quite on his game for the trial.

— Not that his life was at stake. When States controlled by the radical Left were abolishing the death penalty in the 1960’s, the Jesuits of Wisconsin were ahead of them by over a century.

> Dahmer was indicted on 17 murder charges, later reduced to 15. Dahmer was not charged in the attempted murder of [Tracy] Edwards. His trial began on January 30, 1992. With evidence overwhelmingly against him, Dahmer pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity. The trial lasted two weeks.
>
> The court found Dahmer sane and guilty on 15 counts of murder and sentenced him to 15 life terms, totaling 957 years in prison, which was > the maximum penalty available as Wisconsin abolished capital punishment in 1853. ~ Murderpedia[512]

In twisted doctrine that can truly be labeled “Jesuitical”, the Catholic Church teaches that execution is not acceptable as a form of punishment (despite Biblical evidence in both the Old and New Testaments to the contrary). This is ludicrously labeled “Pro-Life”; the equating of cannibalistic serial killers with unborn babies.

Even Dahmer’s Jesuit priest prosecutor was in agreement. His “jurisprudence” was used to bolster a “protest” by Nebraska police and prosecutors against that state’s death penalty in 2016. The Nebraska Legislature had outlawed capital punishment in 2015, incensing Nebraskans. They reversed the decision by referendum the next year[513] causing the officials sworn to protect them to “protest” on behalf of the would-be criminals seeking their victimization.

> ... a group of law enforcement professionals, current and former police, prosecutors, correctional officers, and judges, ... released a series of statements condemning Nebraska’s death penalty. ...
>
> Fr. Greg O’Meara, Creighton University law professor who prosecuted Jeffrey Dahmer, explains, “Most people commit murders in a fit of passion, they do so quickly without thinking about it, and they don’t think they’re going to get caught. And since they don’t think they’re going to get caught, they won’t worry about the penalty.” ~ Death Penalty News[514]

Omaha, Nebraska was the epicenter for a child sex trafficking scandal in the 80’s and 90’s in which many police, prosecutors and judges were participating offenders so perhaps that was on their mind in 2016. More on that in Chapter 21.

Fr. Greg O’Meara, who was named Rector of Creighton University’s Jesuit Community, is considered an ultimate authority in Wisconsin or Nebraska when it comes to American law.

> Fr. O’Meara was ordained in 2002 and has taught at Marquette University Law School in Milwaukee since that time. He was granted > tenure and named associate professor of law in 2010. He has been awarded the James D. Ghiardi Faculty Award for Teaching Excellence on three different occasions. His research centers on the philosophical foundations of legal interpretation.

>
> Fr. O'Meara's legal experience also includes serving as an assistant district attorney in Milwaukee County and teaching at the University of Wisconsin Law School. While serving as rector, he will also teach in the Creighton University School of Law. ~ Jesuits.org[515]

While in prison, Dahmer reportedly accepted Jesus Christ as his Born Again Savior and was subsequently baptized by local preacher Roy Ratcliff.

He didn't have time to serve out his 15 life sentences. Shortly after he gave his heart to the Lord, fellow inmate Christopher Scarver took his life. Dahmer died on November 28th, 1994, the Monday after Thanksgiving weekend.

Jeffrey Dahmer tortured, raped and murdered 17 men and boys by "official" count which means the ultimate number was much larger. From start to finish, he was carefully handled by the "Society of Jesus" like some parasitic smart weapon of pain and chaos aimed right at the American people.

At this writing, a movie is scheduled to be released roughly the same time as this book, commemorating the "sad, funny" story-before-the-story of the man who drilled into the frontal lobes of his victims (thanks to that Army medical training) to "zombify" them for eternal sexual abuse.

> My Friend Dahmer ... Written and directed by Marc Meyers, the movie is based on Derf Backderf's nonfiction graphic novel of the same name, in which the author recalls his high school friendship with "Jeff" Dahmer, who would go on to murder 17 men between 1978 and 1991.
>
> "It's the story before the story we're all familiar with," says director Meyers, who shot some of the film in the actual house where Dahmer grew up. "The book is this haunting, sad, funny, true look at Jeffrey Dahmer's high school years, growing up in the suburbs of Akron,

> Ohio, in the mid-to-late ’70s — and that’s exactly what this film has become. I went through an exhaustive search to find an actor who I believed could play the role of Jeff Dahmer as a high school kid. I must have met with over 80 actors for the two main teen roles. I just locked into Ross when I met him. I felt that he both had the versatility as an actor and the look. I thought it was exciting that he was just ending his run as the lead of a Disney show and was the lead of their Teen Beach Movie franchise — but he looks like Jeff! And then, even more so, when you put some glasses on him.” ~ MySpace[516]

Of course only a Disney teenager could do justice to “Derf Backderf’s” funny recollections of Jeffrey Dahmer.

Chapter 13

Paedophiles Prove War is Pointless

November 1978: London Metropolitan Police raid the paedophile safe house of diplomat and intelligence operative Sir Peter Telford Hayman KCMG CVO MBE.[lxvi] The Daily Mail reported that Police found "a huge trove of revolting paedophilia and other extreme pornography." In best Kinsey "research" fashion they also found "Among it was a library of 45 substantial diaries in which Sir Peter had recorded in detail his sexual experiences ... including sex with minors."[517] He was released from Police custody with a "warning".

War between nation states is as unnecessary as it is devastating to the common citizen.

> Chapter 4
> War: What Is It Good For?
>
> Modern warfare between nation states is an enterprise wholly manufactured by the Luciferian Elite for three general purposes: I. To make obscene amounts of money.
> II. To slaughter the commoners and cull the "useless eaters[283]".
> III. To punish the enemies of Rome.
>
> Enemies have been created and crises have been contrived in order to motivate populations to give up rights and make drastic sacrifices for the Elite that they would not normally make.
>
> Good Americans thank a soldier with no legs for endless deployments in the "War on Terror" to "protect our freedoms" as they hold their hands up in surrender to be humiliated by a naked body scanner at the airport.
>
> — And it's all by design. ~ Illuminati Unmasked[518]

Because of this, there is an unusual and “unexpected” connection the Pedocracy of the Devil’s Simulation has to “Intelligence”.

This explains the protected existence of foreign diplomat and Intelligence operative Sir Peter Telford Hayman, KCMG, CVO, MBE (1914 – 1992).

> Sir Peter Hayman’s life was one decorated with worthy acronyms and exclusive memberships.
>
> By the time of his retirement from “the Diplomatic”, the Stowe and Oxford-educated former Rifle Brigade officer had been a Home and Foreign Office mandarin, working closely with the intelligence services at the height of the Cold War: it has even been suggested he was a senior figure in MI6.
>
> His final posting was as High Commissioner to Canada.
>
> As a result of these labours he was made a Knight Commander of the Order of St Michael and St George (KCMG), Commander of the Royal Victorian Order (CVO) and an MBE.
>
> Off duty he also belonged to the MCC [Marylebone Cricket Club — owner of “Lord’s Ground” Cricket venue at St John’s Wood, London and the “guardian of the Laws of the game”] and the Army and Navy private members’ club (The Rag). Like Sir Peter, both were pillars of London’s old-school-tie Establishment.
>
> Yet unlike the MCC, there was no distinguishing neckwear at Sir Peter’s rather more discreet third “club”, to which he seems to have devoted most physical energy and expense as a pensioner newly returned from post-colonial duties in Ottawa.
>
> His membership number was “330” and this organisation of similarly minded if not gilded individuals was called the Paedophile Information Exchange. ~ The Daily Mail[519]

The “Paedophile Information Exchange” is the English version of the “North American Man/Boy Love Association”: openly promoting the Pedocracy in public. Both are a testimony to the power of the Devil’s Simulation but “P.I.E.” supposedly disbanded after 10 years, from 1974 to 1984.

Peter Hayman’s P.I.E. membership number, “330”, implies a Freemasonic connection which intuitively fits his position. Hayman was living a life of lies, both as a participant in the Devil’s Simulation pedophile network and as a “spy”. For the Jesuit-controlled Luciferian Elite, the true purpose of espionage was to insure that supposed “enemy nations” always stayed in antagonism and of equal threat to each other (at least as far as public perception). In this system, Freemasons are the faux-Protestant footsoldiers of lie-perpetuation.

Ironically, because “Sir Peter” was living a life of lies and assumed identities, the authorities didn’t know it was him when they conducted their raid...otherwise they wouldn’t have.

> PIE supported and encouraged illegal sexual relationships between adults and children. In other words, child abuse.
>
> Sir Peter lived with his wife of 40 years in a lovely home in South Oxfordshire where, in a parallel existence, he was deputy chairman of the Conservative Association. He acted as a churchwarden’s assistant, and opened the local fete.
>
> Everyone there thought he was marvellous. Who was to know otherwise?
>
> That was because his official PIE literature and graphic correspondence with fellow paedophiles was by squalid necessity sent to a flat at 95 Linden Gardens, Notting Hill Gate, London, some 50 miles away.
>
> The ex-diplomat had rented it for that purpose — as well as extra-marital sexual liaisons — under the name of Peter Henderson. The fact that the flat was almost across the road from the Soviet embassy was simply an irony. ...

— No, it showed Peter Hayman’s important position in a game completely manipulated by the Luciferian Elite. — Then Sir Peter made a mistake. He left a packet of paedophile material in an envelope on a London bus. It was > addressed to Mr. Henderson at Linden Gardens in Notting Hill. A fellow passenger was curious. The package came into the possession of the police.

>
> Soon afterwards, in November 1978, they raided the Linden Gardens flat.
>
> What they found was a huge trove of revolting paedophilia and other extreme pornography. Among it was a library of 45 substantial diaries in which Sir Peter had recorded in detail his sexual experiences ... including sex with minors.[520]

Further details proved “Sir Peter” was networked both for the abuse of children and the perpetuation of the Cold War.

> There was also substantial correspondence with other PIE members — 111 pages in one instance — in which they shared their otherwise secret desires and other graphic paedophile material.
>
> Police later found that two of the dozen or so paedophiles in Sir Peter’s epistolary circle had been writing to each other about ... extreme sexual torture and murder of children.
>
> Even the hardened cops of the Obscene Publications Squad were “revolted” by the Linden Gardens haul.
>
> When interviewed, Sir Peter — a man who had been deputy commandant of the British zone in Berlin and was later tasked to tear a strip off the Soviet ambassador to London after Moscow crushed the Prague Spring of 1968 — broke down and wept.

Sir Peter Hayman, KCMG, CVO, MBE, and Lady Hayman,

(Rosemary Eardley-Blomefield) Again, “by coincidence” Peter Hayman worked in Berlin, in close proximity with the Soviets during the Prague Spring. Czech citizens desperate for freedom were slaughtered by Soviet tanks and artillery. The survivors were raped, brutalized and further enslaved and the British response was to have Paedophile Peter Hayman “tear a strip” off the Soviet ambassador?

The reality is actually far worse.

The war crimes committed by the Soviet Union in 1968 were carefully planned by the CIA and MI6; all being co-ordinated by the Jesuits in Intelligence and the Luciferian Elite in Rome to keep the Cold War hot.

A shocking game of betrayal was played repeatedly on oppressed Patriots around the world. Again and again, Western Intelligence begged good citizens to revolt against their brutal Communist oppressors; vowing to immediately step in with aid and support. Each time Patriots were tricked into acting, the rug was pulled from under them. They received none of the promised support and too late did they realize all their actions did was expose them to their captors. Each time, they were met with a crushing Communist response while the West turned a blind eye, both governments and media, alike.

- Hungary: 1956

- Bay of Pigs, Cuba: 1961
- Prague, Czechoslovakia: 1968

To make absolutely sure Soviet armor had as much time as was needed to slaughter as many Hungarian Patriots as possible, Eisenhower had his Ambassador to the United Nations, Adlai Ewing Stevenson II, delay any possible U.N. intervention.[472]

The exact same scenario replayed itself 12 years later in Czechoslovakia. After goading Czech Patriots into action for the 1968 "Prague Spring", all of Western Intelligence not only went silent, it went dark.

> ... 27 divisions of Soviet Russians, Poles, Hungarians and Bulgarians — around 300,000 men, armed with 2,000 heavy cannons — marched into the small state of Czechoslovakia to end the experiment of "socialism with a human face." It was the largest military operation since the World War II...
>
> For months, the eyes of the world had been on Prague, where a group of officials around Communist Party chief Alexander Dubcek had challenged the Soviets with new civil rights for Czechoslovakia, new press freedoms and plans for privatization. Leonid Brezhnev, General Secretary of the USSR's Communist Party, ordered a number of threatening military maneuvers in and around Czechoslovakia starting in May.
>
> But when the maneuvers grew serious, the American, British and German governments seemed to look the other way, judging by documents from the NATO archive in Brussels as well as intelligence files seen by Spiegel*. "Not a single evaluation" managed to predict the Soviet invasion of Prague, according to the NATO Military Committee, the alliance's highest military authority.*
> ~ Der Spiegel[473]

Western media pushed the laughable idea that — despite Western leaders being given daily (probably hourly) briefs on Czechoslovakia — > a WWII-sized Soviet invasion force was simply "lost" to the combined efforts of Allied intelligence operations.

>
> Seven years earlier, in 1961, a similar treason was conducted on the Patriots of Cuba. These Cuban exiles, however, had direct interaction with the CIA in their training, organization, equipping and transportation.
>
> They received everything except what they needed most; a flight of 6 A-26 Invaders as air support. National Security Advisor McGeorge Bundy (Skull and Bones 1940) personally saw to this betrayal as has been noted by Air Force Colonel and Joint Chiefs of Staff Chief of Special Operations for President Kennedy, Leroy Fletcher Prouty.[474]
>
> Bundy would go on to blame John F. Kennedy for sabotaging the Bay of Pigs leading up to his assassination by the Jesuit-run CIA[475] as well as see to it that CIA fingerprints were covered up.[476] ~ Secret History[521]

Geoffrey Arthur Prime is another prime example of how this game is played. Prime was the "paedophile" at GCHQ (Government Communications Headquarters) who fed the Soviets secrets for 20 years through the 1960's and 70's.

> On 10 November 1982 Prime pleaded guilty to seven espionage counts, and three counts of sex offences against children. His sex offences included indecently assaulting three girls aged 11 to 14.[20][21] He was sentenced by Lord Lane, the Lord Chief Justice, to a total of 38 years, 35 for offences under section 1 of the Official Secrets Act 1911[22] and three for his sex offences.[21] ...
>
> The British media was prevented from reporting on the Prime affair until after his trial, a trial that was conducted in secret session.[3] ...
>
> Prime was released from HM Prison Rochester in March 2001, after serving half of his sentence... ~ Wikipedia[522]

Prime was also a member of "P.I.E." He was released in 2014 after serving half of his sentence for causing billions in damage to world citizens via his work to prolong the Cold War, including an outrageously light 3-year sentence for raping little girls as young as 11. Prime was put right back into circulation — on government benefits, no less.

> Now freed from prison and living on benefits near a children's centre, Geoffrey Prime was the traitor whose work for the KGB came to light in 1982 as police investigated his terrifying and prolonged sexual assaults on girls as young as 11. ~ Mail[523]

His counterpart at the FBI was Special Agent Robert Philip Hanssen: devout Roman Catholic and member of Opus Dei.

Hanssen helped keep the Soviet threat vibrant against the debilitating disease of Jesuit-spawned Communism with secrets he gave them for over two decades.

Although Rome carefully places "Papal Court Jews" in positions of high visibility but low influence (like the control of Hollywood), the real power in government, the military and intelligence, go to those loyal to her. From the Cold War to the "Global War on Terror", her Catholic agents insure that their lies lead to tragedy for citizens everywhere.

In 2014, the Catholic news consortium "Open Tabernacle" warned that Opus Dei influence had taken over the Vatican.

Such spin may help keep conservative Catholics (or, judging by the "vast Right-wing conspiracy" slant of the piece, Liberal ones) on the farm but the truth is that they are simply loyal soldiers for Rome.

> "It's widely known that Supreme Court Justices Antonin Scalia, Samuel Alito, and Clarence Thomas belong to Opus Dei – and that Chief Justice John Roberts may also be a member," stated Matthew Fox, a former priest, progressive theologian and author of more than 23 books.
>
> "They're in the CIA, the FBI," said Fox. "Daniel Ellsberg recently told me that some of the ranking commanders of our military are also Opus Dei," Fox stated in another interview. Veteran investigative reporter Seymour Hersh made a similar observation. "Hersh stated that Gen. Stanley McChrystal, Vice Admiral William McRaven and others in the Joint Special Operations Command (the group > responsible for the assassination of Osama Bin Laden) were members of the Knights of Malta and Opus Dei. ...

— They were members of the Vatican insurgent team that ran the Psychological Operation of the "killing" of Osama bin Laden. — Hersh added that members of these societies have developed a secret set of insignias that represent 'the whole notion that this is a culture war between religions.'"

> The New York Times noted in 2012 that an Opus Dei boy's prep school "has become the popular school for a small clique of Washingtonians": Rick Santorum; lobbyist and former U.S. Senator (R-FL), Mel Martinez; Sect. of Defense Chuck Hagel; the infamous FBI spy and Opus Dei member Robert Hanssen's boss, former FBI director Louis J. Freeh; NOM founder Maggie Gallagher and National Review editor Kate O'Beirne.
>
> Fox said that both Santorum and Newt Gingrich are members but that doesn't guarantee Opus Dei/Catholic Church backing. These organizations will support whichever Republican candidate has the best chance of winning regardless of his religious affiliation. That's why the endorsement by five former U.S. ambassadors to the Vatican of Mitt Romney in early January 2012 before the primaries signaled that "big money" had already chosen the GOP presidential nominee.

— Fascinating that Rome should endorse a Mormon, unless one is aware of the Freemasonic roots of Mormonism and the Jesuit control of Freemasonry. Even less so, to understand that the "election" was in the bag either way, given Barack Obama's child abuse, CIA past and training by Jesuit Greg Galluzzo in Chicago.[524] — Robert P. George, a Princeton University professor closely associated with Opus Dei, changed the landscape of U.S. politics. Neocon politico Deal Hudson stated that "If there really is a vast, right-wing conspiracy, its leaders probably meet in George's basement." [George was r]eferred to by the New York Times as "the country's most influential conservative Christian [Catholic![lxvii]] thinker..."[525]

It is important to note that Princeton is a renowned public University but, clearly, Rome has a secret influence. It is only one of many such examples.

The combined efforts of the CIA and FBI were completely defeated by this “lone” traitor until a brave young Jesuit-trained Roman Catholic G-man, Eric O’Neill, finally put a stop to Hanssen’s treason — after a 22 year run.

More on Opus Dei, child sex slave trafficking and treason, in Chapter 30.

As with all the other participants in the Devil’s Simulation, having sold his soul through the abuse of children, Sir Peter was granted an Earthly life of power and reputation ... emphasis on “Earthly”.

> Much to the anger and disbelief of the Obscene Publications Squad he was let off with a caution. The grounds for this decision certainly seem extraordinary to contemporary eyes. The Director of Public Prosecutions deemed that as the paedophile material sent through the post by Sir Peter and his friends had not been “unsolicited” nor traded for profit, no offence had taken place worthy of prosecution.
>
> The result? Save among a few officers at Scotland Yard, Sir Peter’s reputation remained intact ... until his death in 1992...
>
> The Hayman affair came back into the spotlight this week, with David Cameron ordering an investigation into an alleged cover-up of a VIP paedophile ring which included leading figures in Westminster and Whitehall. [with only a handful of investigators into a massive conspiracy]

— The “Cameron investigation” results can be illustrated by the fact that no one even knew the banking family Elitist[526] ordered it in the first place. — The matter was raised by campaigning MP Simon Danczuk, and centres on a dossier of child sex allegations involving senior Establishment figures, which was handed to the then Home Secretary Leon Brittan by fellow Tory MP Geoffrey Dickens in November 1983.

> [Then Home Secretary] Lord [Leon] Brittan says that he passed the documents on to Whitehall officials. But no action was taken and the > Home Office has admitted that the Dickens dossier was subsequently destroyed. ~ Daily Mail[527]

Critics claim that the law finally caught up with Sir Peter in 1984 but he was “convicted” of “gross indecency” in a public lavatory, not raping little boys as young as 11.[528] British media carefully avoid what the “conviction” equated to but the nebulous statute leaves the sentencing up to the court and Sir Peter Telford Hayman KCMG, CVO, MBE, escaped punishment for his crimes.

Members of the Devil’s Simulation can never include anyone who sincerely holds Right-wing values and ethics. The Left with its tenets of hedonism and the subversion of the individual in favor of authority is where the Pedocracy thrives.

Yet citizens (especially “Bible-belt country folk”) demand they be represented. Almost always, the Pedocracy is able to insert frauds who talk a good game and deliver nothing of substance. Every so often, a sincere “Conservative[lxviii]” is able to elbow himself in to cause a ripple or two before they are shut down or nullified.

Such a man was Geoffrey Dickens.

Geoffrey Kenneth Dickens was a successful boxer (40 wins of 60 fights) turned Conservative British Minister of Parliament for Huddersfield West starting in 1979. His seat, however, was abolished in 1983.

Miraculously, Dickens was able to get elected to represent Littleborough and Saddleworth and was able to hold that district until his death in 1995 at the relatively young age of 64.

Dickens was lampooned by the British media as a “colorful” country bumpkin but having been raised in foster care gave him a heart for children not apparently shared by editors or fellow MPs.

The founder of the Paedophile Information Exchange was Thomas Victor O’Carroll. O’Carroll interestingly holds dual citizenship in both Britain and Ireland. This surely came in handy for his activities, perhaps especially for the Catholic Church.

O’Carroll had several visits to court but, not surprisingly, spent little time in jail. During one of his trials, the exploits of Sir Peter Hayman were divulged. The ensuing inaction by the English Justice system had at least one MP up in arms.

> ..while Hayman was alluded to in court, his identity was still protected. It seemed the “cover-up” had succeeded. Dickens was outraged and took a radical step.
>
> He used parliamentary privilege, which affords legal protection from libel, to name Hayman in questions to the then Attorney General, Sir Michael Havers.
>
> He further demanded that Hayman should be prosecuted and asked: “How did such a potential blackmail risk come to hold highly sensitive posts at the MoD and NATO?” ~ The Daily Mail[529]

Perhaps Sir Peter Telford Hayman, KCMG, CVO, MBE, was a pampered, protected, pedophile because he wasn’t just a lowly “intelligence operative” in the British Secret Service (as characterized by papers like the Telegraph[530]); he was the head of MI6.[531]

The information Dickens had linked child sex slavery to the Intelligence community and ultimately to the infamous Elm Guest House (which will be discussed in-depth, in Chapter 15).

> In 1984, he campaigned for the outlawing of Sir Peter’s Paedophile Information Exchange (PIE) organisation. He also handed a dossier containing allegations of abuse of children in local authority care to the then Home Secretary, Leon Brittan.
>
> After a 30-minute meeting with Sir Leon, Dickens said he had been “encouraged” but later expressed concern that the Cabinet Minister had not banned the PIE.
>
> Last month Metropolitan Police began Operation Fernbridge into allegations that residents of a children’s home in Richmond, west London, were taken to the nearby Elm Guest House in Barnes, where they were abused. Pornography involving adults having sex with > children was allegedly shot at the property and then circulated commercially.

>
> Sir Peter was among the visitors to the property. Others, according to a list seized by Scotland Yard last month, were the late Liberal MP Cyril Smith, the former Russian spy Sir Anthony Blunt, a Sinn Fein politician, a Labour MP, and several Conservative politicians.
>
> After neighbours complained about the arrival of children, the police raided the guesthouse in 1982 but the operation was mysteriously cut short. A 2003 investigation also failed.
>
> During a debate on child abuse in the House of Commons on 29 November 1985, Dickens warned that paedophiles were "evil and dangerous," adding child pornography generated "vast sums."
>
> He went on: "The noose around my neck grew tighter after I named a former high-flying British diplomat on the Floor of the House."
>
> "Honourable Members will understand that where big money is involved and as important names came into my possession so the threats began."
>
> "First, I received threatening telephone calls followed by two burglaries at my London home. Then, more seriously, my name appeared on a multi-killer's hit list." ~ The Independent[532]

Lord Sir Leon Brittan "lost" the dossier Dickens gave him.

> Sources close to the police who have recently investigated associated allegations say that it seems to have subsequently "disappeared". The Home Office confirmed that it had not been "retained". ~ The Daily Mail[533]

Few indictments better prove the theory that all war is manufactured by the Keepers of the Devil's Simulation than Peter Hayman's foreign service record. Twenty years safely after his death, the Daily Mail admitted only a portion[534] but it was enough to connect the dots.

During World War II Hayman attained the rank of Major in an un-named Rifle Brigade but we're told neither of his record nor any subsequent combat action or recognition thereof.

The Mail jumps from 1945 to 1950 where Hayman is suddenly promoted many times to Assistant Secretary of the Ministry of Defense.

He then helped to found the North Atlantic Treaty Organization — the collection of Allied nations tasked with “protecting” the West against Communism.

From 1955 to 1958, Hayman was tested in Eastern Europe as the MI6 Station Chief for what was then Belgrade, today, “Yugoslavia”.

Having proven himself, he was “promoted” to a location that brought him into the inner-circle as MI6 Station Chief for Malta for a year starting in 1958.

Without understanding the role of the Knights of Malta as insurgents for Rome, and Rome as the Keeper of the Devil’s Simulation (which includes the promulgation of needless war), this seems like an embarrassing slap — a man of Hayman’s status relegated to a tiny island?

From there, Hayman was sent to sow the seeds of the future Global War on Terror as the MI6 Station Chief in Baghdad (1959 - 1961).

As we’ve already shown, those planning these offenses against mankind think in decades and centuries.

From there, Hayman was transferred to the sword arm of Rome and the central location of her war-planning: Washington, District of Columbia. From 1961 to 1964, he was Director General of the British Information Services in Washington D.C.

Finally he was sent to the front of the Cold War in Berlin. From 1964 to 1966, Hayman was the totalitarian-sounding Deputy Commandant of the Military Government in West Berlin, where he oversaw the continued punishment of Martin Luther’s homeland.

The Mail then magically skips again to 1973 where Hayman is admitted “retired” yet secretly Deputy Director of MI6. Exactly when he rises to the top of British Intelligence is left for Mail readers to guess.

> Peter Hayman named as VIP who Sexually Abused Boys at Dolphin Square Apartment Complex near Parliament[535]

The 2014 story was picked up by the Event Chronicle and the headline from the smaller paper was more faithful to the important truth of Hayman’s career — Ex-MI6 Chief Peter Hayman named as VIP who Sexually Abused Boys at Dolphin Square Apartment Complex near Parliament[536]

Chapter 14

Federal Bureau of Obfuscation

1979: Edward Hope "Teddy" Smith and Alfred "Q" Evans, both 14, go missing within four days of each other. Both were found dead on July 28th in a wooded area across from Niskey Lake in Atlanta, Georgia. Teddy Smith had been shot in the back, executed, with a .22 caliber weapon (the choice of either street thugs or trained assassins). Q Evans was listed by the coroner as having been asphyxiated by "probable" strangulation.[537],[lxix]

Across a two-year period from 1979 through 1981, almost 30 people, most of them children, were murdered in Atlanta, Georgia.

On June 21st, 1981, 23 year old Atlanta native Wayne Bertram Williams was arrested and subsequently tried and convicted for the murders of 27-year-old Nathaniel Cater and 29-year-old Jimmy Ray Payne. He was given life in prison. After the conviction, Atlanta Police released a statement that Williams was responsible for 23 of the 29 linked "Atlanta Child Murders" but Williams has never been brought to trial for any of them. To this day, he maintains his innocence. Unlike any of the previous pedophile predators examined in these pages, Williams is still serving his sentence at Telfair State Prison in Helena.

> In May 2004, about six months after becoming the DeKalb County [Georgia] Police Chief in November 2004, [Louis] Graham reopened the investigations into the deaths of the five DeKalb County victims: [10] Aaron Wyche, 10; Curtis Walker, 13; Yusuf Bell, 15; William Barrett, 17; and Patrick Baltazar, 11. Graham, one of the original investigators in these cases, said he never believed Wayne Williams, the man convicted of two of the killings and blamed for 22 others, was guilty of any of them. ...

> The criminal profiler [FBI Agent] John E. Douglas said that, while he believes that Williams committed many of the murders, he does not think that he committed them all. Douglas added that he believes that law enforcement authorities have some idea of who the other killers are, cryptically adding, "It isn't a single offender and the truth isn't pleasant."[11]
>
> On June 21, 2006, the DeKalb County Police dropped its reinvestigation of the Atlanta child murders. After resigning, Graham was replaced by the acting chief, Nick Marinelli, who said, "We dredged up what we had, and nothing has panned out, so until something does or additional evidence comes our way, or there's forensic feedback from existing evidence, we will continue to pursue the [other] cold cases that are [with]in our reach."[5] ~ Wikipedia[538]

Although the Atlanta victims were poor blacks, the fact that there were so many in such a short period of time garnered national scrutiny. As a result, the FBI helpfully presented "profiler" John Edward Douglas to solidify the Atlanta Police Department's untried accusation that Wayne Williams was the serial killer in question — no one need look any further into the crimes.

> FBI Agent John E. Douglas, who had previously conducted a widely reported interview with People magazine about profiling the killer as a young black man, has admitted that when the news of Williams' arrest was officially released (his status as a suspect had previously been leaked to the media anyway), he stated that if it was Williams then he was "looking pretty good for a good percentage of the killings". This was widely reported across media outlets as the FBI effectively declaring Williams guilty...[8] ~ Wikipedia[539]

However, Douglas admitted to the Baltimore Sun that the investigation into the guilt of Wayne Williams was shoddy at best.

> Evidence was being lost, murder sites were being tampered with, conflicting coroners reports were being filed.[540]

Even so, he was the man most responsible for Williams' conviction.

> ...he attended the subsequent legal proceedings and helped the prosecution trap Williams into showing anger, which was key in showing the jury that Williams was the murderer.[5] ~ Wikipedia[541]

Although the FBI had no jurisdiction, Federal "law enforcement" took a heavy-handed interest in hammering Wayne Williams as the fall-guy for the Atlanta murders, helpfully providing appropriately-named "Lab man"[542] Hal Deadman.

> The prosecution's presentation of fiber statistics, particularly in the testimony of FBI special agent Deadman and in the summing up, has been criticized for being based on speculative assumptions and misleading phrasing of probabilities, to an extent that in some jurisdictions might have resulted in a mistrial.[10] ~ Wikipedia[543]

Not satisfied that Williams was in enough of a bind, the Governor of Georgia, George Dekle Busbee, Sr., joined hands with then Vice President George Herbert Walker Bush to move things along.

> With the governor threatening to replace the prosecutor if he didn't move things along faster, and the FBI and even Vice President George Bush exerting their powerful influences to move things along, the defense was in trouble. The defense's attempt to investigate many of the leads and loose ends in the prosecution's case in hopes of finding the real killer had to be abandoned in the face of the need now to defend Williams against an avalanche of unrelated charges. ~ Spin[544]

According to one woman, Bush may have had a personal stake in covering up the Devil's Simulation.

> Cathleen Ann O'Brien is a Michigan woman who has published a book that made the shocking accusation that she was sold into sex slavery by her father and tortured to become a sex robot for America's most powerful people in the 80's and 90's. ...
>
> > O'Brien claims that some of her abusers were George H.W. Bush, Ronald Reagan, Gerald Ford, Jimmy Carter, Dick Cheney, and Hillary Clinton. She says that she was rescued in 1988 by a man > named Mark Phillips who claims to be a former CIA operative. ...

> ~ Mark Dice[1348]

Phillips has also admitted to being inducted into the Knights of Malta.[545] O'Brien was only "rescued" from being used as a sex rag, she is still completely "handled" by the Romans who run the Devil's Simulation and she never speaks without Phillips controlling her nearby.

> One of the first perpetrators O'Brien identified was Michigan Republican Congressman Guy Vander Jagt. O'Brien implied a strong Catholic influence from Vander Jagt yet he is supposedly a Presbyterian.
>
> But Vander Jagt began a law degree at Georgetown and stopped, transferring to the University of Michigan for his actual diploma[1349]. This would give him full secular education credentials. ...
>
> O'Brien then states that a priest abused her in the confessional[1351] and, later, both Vander Jagt and Gerald Ford raped her as well.[1352]
>
> According to O'Brien, Vander Jagt's strongest connection to what happened to her was through the local Catholic Church. The co-operative was openly satanic. ~ Illuminati Unmasked[546]

O'Brien said that she was allowed to become pregnant to bring a daughter into the slave ring and that Bush took particular pleasure in sexually abusing the toddler.[547]

The rail-roading of Wayne Williams (who was likely guilty of crimes perhaps as severe as murder but clearly not the Atlanta serial-killer) by the Georgia and United States governments incensed local blacks. Given that stoking the flames of racial divide is a foundational tactic of the Luciferian Elite, it may very well have been counted on. If Atlanta blacks didn't see Williams as innocent, they certainly felt that a vicious murderer was still on the loose — one that preferred children.

Worse, evidence was accumulating which pointed to satanic ritual sex abuse and sacrifice.

On March 3rd, 1981, 15 year old Joseph “Jo-Jo” Bell called the Cap’n Peg restaurant where he worked and told Assistant Manager Jerry Lee — “They’re about to kill me. I’m about dead, they are about to kill me. Jerry, they’re about to kill me.” ~ Spin[548] — then the phone went dead.

Bell was found murdered by strangulation in the South River 3 days later. The cause of death of 14 year old Lubie Geter was also listed as “strangulation” but his privates were cut out and his feet cut off indicating ritualized torture and sacrifice.

Neither Jo-Jo’s call nor his mention of “they” were referenced in official investigations.

The government watchdog “Truth About Business And Congressional Crimes Organization” (T.A.B.A.C.C.O.) summarized the climate.

> In April 1981, FBI spokesmen declared that several of the crimes were “substantially solved,” outraging blacks with suggestions that some of the dead had been slain by their own parents. While that storm was raging, Roy Innis, leader of the Congress of Racial Equality, went public with the story of a female witness who described the murders as the actions of a cult involved with drugs, pornography, and Satanism. Innis led searchers to an apparent ritual site, complete with large inverted crosses, and his witness passed two polygraph examinations, but by that time police had focused their attention on another suspect, narrowing their scrutiny to the exclusion of all other possibilities.[549]

Not only was the Federal government involved in the Atlanta murders, so was Hollywood.

> In 1981, actor Robert De Niro, when accepting the Best Actor Oscar for his role in the film Raging Bull, wore a green ribbon as a sign of solidarity with the children of Atlanta. He is believed to be the first celebrity to have worn a ribbon at a major event as an awareness-raising effort. ~ Wikipedia[550]

De Niro, perhaps one of the best-known actors of all time, is an admitted Roman Catholic.[551]

More than that, he is reputed to be a Knight of Malta.[552]

Lending credence to this was the 2005 report from the Malta Independent that famed Director Guy Ritchie was slated to shoot the planned film Knights of Malta starring De Niro along with Sir Anthony Hopkins but, apparently, the project never got the “green light”.[553]

In Chapter 25, we will examine overwhelming evidence that Hollywood is a foundational member of the Devil’s Simulation. As “Madonna’s” ex-husband, Ritchie would know.

The controversy over the Atlanta murders received little media coverage. One exception was Spin Magazine.

Spin was founded by wealthy publishing magnate Robert Charles Joseph Edward Sabatini “Bob” Guccione, also a Roman Catholic.

At one point in his life, Guccione considered joining the priesthood.[554] Instead, he founded the pornographic magazine Penthouse to compliment Hugh Hefner’s Playboy.

Perhaps, not surprisingly, Spin would avoid the suspicion of a pornographically-charged satanic cult being behind the Atlanta murders and go on to blame the KKK, instead.[555]

Twelve years later, Special Agent Douglas would again be sent by the FBI to intervene in a State prosecution. Three hundred miles west of Atlanta, in West Memphis, Arkansas, three young men were being arraigned on charges that they had sexually abused, tortured and ritually slaughtered three boys. Again, evidence pointed toward Satanic Ritual Abuse but, thankfully, the Federal government arrived on the scene to promote otherwise.

Chapter 15

House of Horrors

January 1982: British Customs seize video tapes of young boys being sexually abused, tortured and murdered from businessman Russell Howard Tricker as he returns from Amsterdam, capital city of the Kingdom of the Netherlands.

June 1982: London Metro Vice raid the Elm Guest House in Rocks Lane, near Barnes Common in south-west London pursuant to allegations of child sex abuse. No prosecutions followed.

The success of the Devil's Simulation in infiltrating key positions in government in order to thwart justice should not be mistaken for the notion that the Pedocracy is "all-powerful". Steps are constantly taken to minimize risk like moving criminal activities where they are less-likely to be addressed.

In Amsterdam the legal perversion and sexual chaos is legendary.[556] In 2007, Europe's Sodom proudly unveiled a bronze statue honoring prostitution: the only one of its kind.[557]

Such an atmosphere is perfect for taking sexual anarchy (dominated by men) to its ultimate conclusion.

> We have uncovered an international paedophile ring whose roots spring from Amsterdam, where, in the late 1980s, a group of British paedophiles set up a colony, exploiting the freedom of the city's gay community as cover to make a business of their fantasies. ~ The Guardian[558]

As was typical of the minions in the mainstream media: 20 years after the incident first occurred, the Guardian allowed journalist Nick Davies to address it.

> A year after Bristol detectives finally started to unravel the ring of paedophiles who had been abusing children there for up to 20 years, they found an informant with an alarming story. The man, whom we will call Terry, had a long history of sexually abusing boys. He did not come from Bristol but, by chance, he had come across some of the paedophiles the detectives were investigating — in Amsterdam, where he said they had become involved with a group of exiled British child abusers who had succeeded in commercialising their sexual obsession.
>
> The exiled paedophiles were trafficking boys from other countries; running legitimate gay brothels and selling under-aged boys "under the counter"; they had branched out into the production of child pornography. And they had killed some of them. One boy had simply been shot through the head, Terry said: he had been causing trouble and had been executed in front of several paedophiles. Another, he believed, had been thrown into one of the canals. But the one about whom he spoke the most was a boy who had been tortured and killed in the most painful fashion in the course of producing a pornographic video.
>
> Terry said he had seen most of the video himself and had vomited before he could reach the end.[559]

Media continues to report the poor, over-burdened cops as hard about their work. Repeatedly, pedophile protecting police are painted as having no evidence to follow —

> The few detectives who specialise in the investigation of child abuse invariably say the same thing about "snuff" movies: they have often heard of them, sometimes pursued them but never found one. The videos remain one of the great unsolved mysteries of the burgeoning underworld of international sexual exploitation.[560]

The only "mystery" is how any of these frauds sleep at night.

They almost had their quarry but then they were stymied by their Dutch counterparts!

> For a short while, the Bristol detectives thought they might be able to make progress in tracking down the truth; but when two of them flew to Amsterdam in the autumn of 1998 to pass on their information to Dutch officers, they hit a wall...
>
> Dutch police said it was not enough: without the full name of a victim, they would not begin an investigation. Having fought their way through the swamp of inertia which surrounds British policing and prosecution of child abuse, the Bristol detectives had now hit the deeper swamp of virtual paralysis that afflicts its international policing.[561]

Though the subterfuge of excuses is steaming with excrement, the conclusion is quite accurate —

> The result is that there is now a flourishing underground trade in boys who are being exported from the economic chaos of eastern Europe, as well as from the streets of London, to be put to work in the sex industry of western Europe. And no effective police operation to deal with it.
>
> Predatory paedophiles cross whatever borders they like in order to pursue their obsessions...[562]

British “paedophiles” like Alan Williams, having been treated by their justice system with a velvet glove, moved to where the hunting was even more protected.

> Williams, the “Welsh Witch”, ... already had a vicious history of abusing boys in south Wales. Williams arrived in Amsterdam in 1988, aged 21, and soon set himself up as the manager of a gay brothel called Boys Club 21 at 21 Spuistraat, near the central station. Across the road at number 44, another British paedophile, a chubby Londoner named Warwick Spinks, then aged 25, was running a similar club called the Gay Palace. Both clubs had a legal business, running a bar and offering the services of adult male prostitutes.
>
> But Williams and Spinks had much crueller interests. Williams had fled to the Netherlands after being convicted in Britain of indecent assaults on boys. In Amsterdam, he boasted of the day in south Wales when he > had seen a 10-year-old boy on his bike, grabbed him, raped him, and, when he cried, strangled him. From Boys Clubs 21, he organised the importing of boys from Cardiff and London, inflicting intense violence on any who defied him.

>
> Spinks had been running a mail order pornography business from Brighton, before he moved to Amsterdam, where he pioneered the trafficking of boys as young as 10 — first, from the streets of London, and, after the collapse of the Soviet Union, from the poverty of eastern Europe. Having brought them to Amsterdam, he used these "chickens" himself, sold them into the brothels or through escort agencies and put them in front of the camera. Some resisted, some ran away, but most were made to comply through the removal of their passports and doses of drugs and violence.
>
> By 1990, these two clubs on Spuistraat, together with Boys for Men, De Boys, the Blue Boy and the Why Not, had become the busiest watering holes in the international paedophile jungle.[563]

That was where Russell Tricker showed his utility.

> Russell Tricker, now 58 [in 2000], a former private school teacher who was convicted of child sex offences in the UK, used his job as a coach driver to ferry suitable boys from London ...[564]

Lest anyone think these were "random" crimes of lust, they were not. They were all part of the Devil's Simulation; the cult of demonic Attis worship.

> ...the most startling allegations came from a gay man, "Frank", who had gone to Amsterdam in July 1990 and found himself caught up in this paedophile underworld. In 1993, he spoke to ... Scotland Yard.
>
> Frank told police that Warwick Spinks had invited him to come on a trip to the Canaries, where he had suggested Frank should help him sell videos and showed him a sample. Frank said he watched in growing horror as the video played out a murder — a boy who seemed to be no older than 12 was beaten and attacked with needles, before being castrated and cut open with a knife.[565]

Not surprisingly, nothing came of Frank’s report to Scotland Yard.

In Eastern Europe, impoverished by the ravages of Communism, boys were sold for pittance.

> [Homosexual club owner Warwick] Spinks described how he picked up boys in Dresden, in Bratislava in the Czech Republic, and in Poland, where, he claimed, they cost only 10p [10 pence — $1.62, U.S.]. The undercover officer asked Spinks if he could get him a sado-masochistic video featuring boys as young as 10, and Spinks replied that he knew people in Amsterdam who could: “I know, well I knew, some people who were involved in making snuff movies and how they did it was, they only sold them in limited editions, made 10 copies or something, 10 very rich customers in America, who paid $5,000 each or something like that”. ...
>
> A couple of years ago, I sat in the Blue Boy club on Spuistraat [in Amsterdam], amid the dry ice and the boys in thongs, and flicked through the catalogue on the bar, offering “truly the best boys in town”, and watched a Japanese businessman make his purchase. In search of their origins, I went to Berlin, to the Bahnhof Am Zoo, where the trains arrive from all over eastern Europe, bringing the destitute in search of a dream. A specialist social worker there, Wolfgang Werner, told me there were some 700 east European boys, aged from 11 to 17, who had ended up in the sex industry in Berlin. But, to his knowledge, many hundreds of others had been taken off on a kind of underground railroad which fanned out to Zurich and Hamburg and Frankfurt, and, most of all, to Rotterdam and Amsterdam.
>
> Werner told me, for example, about the Romanian boys who had been sold by their parents to a wandering Polish criminal, who had paid cash for some and a bottle of vodka for another, before putting them on to the streets of Berlin.[566]

Boys were being kidnapped in Britain, too. It was relatively easy once they were placed into a Catholic or public orphanage.

> Two alleged victims of a sophisticated paedophile ring at the centre of a police investigation claim they were taken on trips to Amsterdam > where they were sexually abused in brothels in the 1980s.

>
> One male victim had been taken from the Grafton Close care home in Richmond, south-west London, it is claimed, and, as well as being trafficked in Amsterdam, was rented out to customers at the Elm Guest House, a bed and breakfast nearby. Another man has claimed he was taken to Amsterdam on a different trip. ~ The Independent[567]

Just as in Amsterdam, Germany and elsewhere, the purpose for the Elm Guest House was to provide "services" to homosexual men they couldn't get due to "prejudice".

> It was only yards from Barnes Common, which was, and still is, a well-known gay cruising ground. ~ Mail[568]

The guest house manager and founder was Carole Kasir. As The Independent reported, Kasir died under "suspicious circumstances."[569]

> To some, German-born Kasir's liberal-minded attitudes prompted her, in the mid-1970s, to offer a meeting place for gay men embarrassed by their sexual orientation just a decade after it was made legal. To others it was the starting place that ultimately led her to accumulate substantial sums of money by letting rooms where child porn videos were shot and exploitative men could abuse underage boys brought in from a local care homes.
>
> Kasir – who ran the guest house with her husband Haroon Kasir, died on 17 June 1990, aged 47, eight years after a specialist police team raided the guest house, which has since been turned into flats.
>
> At the inquest into her death, the court heard Kasir, a diabetic, was found by a friend about 11am with "numerous injections and phials of insulin" next to her body, but that did little to stem a series of ... allegations. The inquest was shown suicide notes allegedly written by Kasir to her lover, but three witnesses – two child protection workers and a private detective – queried the provenance of the notes, telling the court Kasir feared for her life because of what she knew. She had been receiving threatening phone calls, was being harassed by police and told them she was being followed by an unmarked car, they said.

> After adjourning the case several times, the coroner ruled she had "taken her own life" and that she died from hypoglycaemia caused by an insulin overdose. Friends claimed there were questions that were not adequately answered, such as why Kasir was injected several times in the bottom [buttocks], when she always took her injections in the arm [as do the vast majority of diabetics]. One witness at the inquest said he was shown photos of illustrious public figures in compromising poses, an allegation recently backed up by another witness.
>
> Those friendly with Kasir said that, in the months before her death, she spoke about lifting the lid on the guest house, including listing those who visited, in a book.[570]

An un-named children's advocate interviewed by the Mail was adamant that the circumstances around Kasir's death showed corruption and cover-up.

> Shortly after her death, a child protection campaigner from the National Association Of Young People In Care (NAYPIC) called for a criminal investigation into events at Elm Guest House.
>
> The campaigner claimed that he had been told by Mrs. Kasir that boys had been brought in from a children's home for sex. She had told him she had photographs or video of many establishment figures at her hotel, including a bishop.

— Interesting that the Mail doesn't tell you what denomination the "bishop" represented. —

> One photograph allegedly showed a former cabinet minister in a sauna with a naked boy.
>
> The same campaigner told us this week that he could not speak at length because the police wanted to interview him.

— Not very helpful to the public but we're sure arrests resulted from the information gleaned by London's finest! —

> However, he claimed he knew of 11 boys from Grafton Close Children's Home who had been abused at the Elm Guest House.

> He added: "Carole Kasir had logbooks, names, times, dates, even pictures of people who went in and out of Elm Guest House. Her house was raided in the Eighties."
>
> "The police say it was done by a local force, but I know it was done by Special Branch. That evidence — of who visited Elm Guest House — no longer exists."
>
> "I'll leave people to draw their own conclusions, but Carole Kasir was held without charge for three days, and you don't do that on a run-of-the-mill vice raid. There was more to it than that."
>
> He added: "There were boys found in the home, but they were only ever interviewed as witnesses to the brothel, never as victims of abuse." ...
>
> The same allegations were pursued for several years by Mary Moss, a former colleague of the campaigner at NAYPIC (which is now defunct).[571]

Again, we're not surprised to read that a child care watchdog "is now defunct".

> In October last year, the Labour MP Tom Watson alleged in the Commons that there was evidence of child abuse in senior Tory circles. ~ The Independent[572]

The idea that either the Conservative / Tories on the fraudulent Right or Labour on the Left "owned" child abuse is, of course, a dodge.

The media under-reports phony Right-wing abuses slightly less than Leftist crimes. They occasionally dare to parade such stories as proof that anyone with Right-minded values is a hypocrite. But the danger of exposing the Devil's Simulation with such a ploy usually keeps grand-standing to a minimum.

> The Elm Guest House in Rocks Lane, Barnes, said to have been frequented in the Seventies and Eighties by prominent peoples including ["]former["] Tory politicians, is at the centre of the investigation.

> An Independent on Sunday investigation last week revealed the disgraced former MP Cyril Smith was a frequent visitor to the property...[573]

Unfortunately (and as usual), the accusations about Rochdale’s Minister of Parliament Cyril Smith didn’t really surface until his death in 2010.

> Cyril Smith, MBE[1] (28 June 1928 – 3 September 2010) was a British Liberal Member of Parliament (MP) for Rochdale. After his death, numerous allegations of child sexual abuse by Smith emerged ... leading the police to believe that Smith was a serial sex offender.[2] ~ Wikipedia[574]

“MBE” means the rotund “paedophile” was awarded the “Most Excellent Order of the British Empire” in 1966 when he was still the lowly Mayor of Rochdale.[575]

In the case of “Big Cyril”, police seemed afraid to act because of corruption and political influence. In Big Cyril’s Rochdale, they were afraid to address Muslim immigrants trafficking young girls lest they be accused of racism.

> Fears that they would be branded racist meant that police and social services left an Asian paedophile ring free to rape up to 50 white girls, it was claimed today.
>
> The sex grooming gang plied teenagers with alcohol before abusing them and could have been stopped two years before their sickening crimes were finally uncovered in Rochdale, Greater Manchester.
>
> Nine were all jailed for their role in the sexual abuse today, with at least two due to be deported after serving their prison term.
>
> Former Labour MP for Keighley Ann Cryer said that the authorities ignored complaints about them because they were “petrified of being called racist”.
>
> These innocent girls were ultimately “betrayed” and left to live lives of “untold misery,” because of political correctness, she said.[576]

IHS
FOR GOD AND THE EMPIRE

The Most Excellent Order of the "British" Empire: a Maltese Cross and gnostic sunburst similar to that found on the Jesuit monogram.

The massive influx of immigrants and refugees is part of the Luciferian strategy of tensions, otherwise known as "clash of civilizations". Therefore the story is more quickly reported (rather than 20 years after the key criminal's death) but only as an ethnic problem.

Playing the game to the hilt, the Mail repeatedly characterized the accused as "Asian" which is technically correct but colloquially-misleading. This also stirs British anger, implying a "cover-up".

> All the men are from Pakistan, with one from Afghanistan and two will now be deported.[577]

Justice has been served!

But to men like Peter Bornshin, there will be no justice. After growing up as a perverse play-thing for Britain's most powerful, Peter Hatton-Bornshin took his own life in 2013 on his 28th birthday.

Peter's story ended the way many of the victims of child sex slave trafficking do, yet are so seldom recorded or even acknowledged. Those who do manage to recover physically from their abuse live with permanent mental and emotional scars.

Peter's path to pain is the most heavily traveled: left to the care of an orphanage rather than loving parents, he was quickly targeted.

> Peter was only a baby when his father died in an accident. He was orphaned at 13 when his mother threw herself in front of a train. His stepfather then handed Peter and his older brother to social services.
>
> And that is how Peter ended up at the Grafton Close Children's Home, which was run by Richmond borough council in South-West London. Truly, he was a lost soul. ~ Daily Mail[578]

From Grafton Close, boys were fed to the Elm Guest House.

> During a police raid on a property in central London last month, detectives seized a list of names of high-profile alleged visitors to the Elm Guest House in Barnes, South-West London — a gay-friendly establishment, and one where under-age rent boys and children from the Grafton Close home were reportedly brought to have sex with adult men.
>
> The list includes a number of senior MPs, a high-ranking policeman, a leading tycoon, figures from the National Front and Sinn Fein, an official of the Royal Household, an MI5 officer, two pop stars and the traitorous Soviet spy Anthony Blunt.[579]

"Sinn Fein, MI5 and a Soviet Spy..." From Irish unrest and terrorism to British national intelligence (who actually spies on Britons, not their "enemies") to helping the Soviet Union continue to be a threat through the Cold War. Each agenda is important to the Luciferian Elite and connected via abuse of children to the Devil's Simulation.

Sir Anthony Frederick Blunt (1907 – 1983), KCVO (Knight Commander of the Victorian Order) was a traitor and a spy.

He began passing information to the Soviet Union in World War II as an operative of MI5 and continued working for the Communists decades afterward. In 1956, Queen Elizabeth II (no relation to Protestant Elizabeth I in any way what-so-ever) awarded Blunt his “Knight Commander” but he was “under suspicion” before then[580] so this was clearly a reward for treason. In 1963, Blunt finally “confessed” in a “deal” to give up Soviet secrets which kept him in good standing, free from prosecution for being an enemy of the British people. He went to his grave a “Knight Commander of the Victorian Order” — and a “paedophile” who raped little boys at the Elm Guest House. Perhaps the emblem of his “Knighthood” explains why: multiple Maltese Crosses turned into a gnostic sunburst.

Another catch by Dover Customs was “children’s home consultant” Peter Righton. As usual, it was more “catch and release” than “catch”.

> In September 1992, Righton pleaded guilty to three charges of importing or possessing obscene material — paedophile gay porn — after customs officers at Dover intercepted two packages addressed to him.
>
> ... Righton, then aged 66, was no ordinary child sex offender. He had been a very senior and respected figure in the field of residential child care, and a former consultant to the charity the National Children’s Bureau, whose patrons included the then Health Minister, Virginia Bottomley.
>
> After his conviction, it emerged that Righton was a founder member of the Paedophile Information Exchange — a contact group for men interested in sex with children. He is now believed to be dead.[lxx] ~ Mail[581]

In 1982, Elm was raided and the Kasirs were arrested for “running a disorderly house” but —

> At the Old Bailey [Central Criminal Court of England and Wales] the following year they were convicted, fined and given suspended sentences.
>
> All other charges in relation to the raid had been dropped by then.[582]

“All other charges” apparently included the inconsequential issue of forcing young boys to be raped by the rich and shameless.

The Telegraph would add —

> Carole and Harry Kasir, the owners of the Elm Guest House were fined £1,000 each and given suspended nine-month sentences at the Old Bailey for “running a disorderly house”. They were found not guilty of living off immoral earnings and having obscene films.
>
> Five years later Carole told child protection officers that children from the council-run Grafton Close Children’s Home had been supplied to the brothel. She provided names of people who had frequented the guesthouse.
>
> The Liberal MP Cyril Smith, now dead, has been widely alleged to have abused children from Grafton Close at The Elm.
>
> At an inquest into her death in 1990, members of The National Association of Young People in Care said that Kasir had lived in fear of her life since the hotel was exposed. Christopher Fay said: “The reasons for her death are all tied up in this child pornography ring at the hotel.”
>
> “She was hounded and harassed by police and security services. She knew all the top people who had been involved in the ring at the hotel.”[583]

Police refusal to act against accusations of criminal child abuse at Grafton and Elm wasn’t for lack of probable cause.

In 1981, young Vishal Mehrotra was kidnapped off the streets of London. His father, Vishambar Mehrotra, received an anonymous phone call from a male prostitute (which he recorded) telling him that his son had been taken to the Elm Guest House for abuse.

> He told The Telegraph*: “I was contacted by a young man who seemed to be in his 20s. He told me he believed Vishal may have been taken by paedophiles in the Elm Guest House near Barnes Common.”*

> “He said there were very highly placed people there. He talked about judges and politicians who were abusing little boys.” Mr. Mehrotra, a solicitor who was a JP at Wimbledon magistrates’ court until retiring in 2006, claims the man said he had already informed police about activities at the guesthouse, but had received no response.
>
> He added: “I recorded the whole 15-minute conversation and took it to police. But instead of investigating it, they just pooh-poohed it and I never heard anything about the tape again. The whole thing went cold.”
>
> “At that time I trusted the police. But when nothing happened, I became confused and concerned.”
>
> “Now it is clear to me that there has been a huge cover up. There is no doubt in my mind.”
>
> In February 1982, part of Vishal’s skeleton[lxxi] was found in woodland in West Sussex. There was no trace of his legs, pelvis or lower spine, nor of his outer clothes, his sleeveless vest or his Superman underpants.[584]

The Mehrotras were proud Britons in the 1980s —

> Mr. Mehrotra’s son Vishal was abducted as he walked home to Putney after watching the Prince of Wales and Diana Spencer ride to their wedding in a carriage on July 29 1981.[585]

Today, not so much.

> In June 1982, four months after Vishal’s remains were found, police raided the Elm Guest House.
>
> Dozens of men were questioned, reportedly including at least 30 who were prominent in public life and business. It was widely reported at the time that the raids were linked to Vishal’s disappearance. The Times reported that the investigation had included the disappearance of another boy, Martin Allen, 15, missing since Guy Fawkes Night, 1979, whose body has never been discovered. The son of the chauffeur > to the Australian High Commissioner, he was last seen waving goodbye to a school friend at King's Cross Underground station.

>
> Police at the time dismissed the reports as "nonsense".[586]

Perhaps Martin Allen's disappearance on Guy Fawkes Night was no coincidence.

> Are the Jesuits powerful enough to both create and control their own opposition?

Hacker "Htoo Wunna Ko Ko"
Wikimedia Commons

> The most ubiquitous symbol of resistance to the New World Order is the Guy Fawkes mask. From the hacker collective known as "Anonymous" to "Occupy Wall Street", anyone who wishes to strike a blow for freedom while in public demonstration is wearing one.
>
> The masks were popularized by the 2005 movie "V for Vendetta."[lxxii] ...
>
> "V for Vendetta" portrays an odd love/hate dynamic with Christian and Crusader imagery. The setting was a dark fantasy future but the person of Guy Fawkes comes from a real English past. ...
>
> The Gunpowder Plot of 1605 was an effort by a Jesuit cabal of Catholics[1222], led by Fawkes to assassinate James I of England[1223]. Jesuit priests Henry Garnet and John Gerard were implicated during the subsequent investigation.[1224]
>
> It was just one of many targeting Protestant England. ~ Illuminati Unmasked[587]

Since then, every November 5th in England has been celebrated by burning the Pope in effigy. Did Papal paedophiles take their deadly revenge in 1979 on poor young Martin Allen?

In lieu of arrests and justice have been a slew of "reports" and "operations". Surprisingly, U.K. citizens continue to buy the story that their justice system is fast at work and will “nick” the “paedos” in the end!

But for the victims, the pattern of ancient pagan cult worship remains the same: very often, the poor boys who are sodomized and abused end up dead. Whether by a sacrificial castration sickle or being hit by a car, the result is the same: murder for the Devil’s Simulation.

> Scotland Yard launched Operation Fairbank two years ago to look into suggestions that high profile political figures had been involved.
>
> Officers have set up a new strand of the inquiry, Operation Midland, after being passed information about the three alleged murders.
>
> The allegations emerged when a man in his 40s came forward claiming to have been one of around 15 boys who were abused by a powerful paedophile network 30 years ago.[lxxiii]
>
> Some of the abuse allegedly took place at flats in the Dolphin Square development in Pimlico, where a number of politicians have had London homes.
>
> According to the man, a 12-year-old boy was strangled by a Conservative MP at a town house in front of other victims.
>
> On another occasion, a boy of around 10 was deliberately run down and killed by a car being driven by one of his abusers, the man claimed. ~ Telegraph[588]

It wasn’t just spies and politicians who were “serviced” at the Elm Guest House; many in the entertainment industry frequented the locale to seduce and rape boys, sometimes promising them a moment in the spotlight. One victim would later be seen on the television serial Doctor Who.[589]

All Roads Still Lead To Rome

Forty years ago, the manager of the Grafton Close children’s home in Hanworth — the facility that fed young boys to powerful homosexuals and deviants frequenting the Elm Guest House — was John Stingemore.

Stingemore went to his grave without ever being prosecuted for raping and pimping the boys in his care — but it was a close call.

> Mr. Stingemore was due to be on trial as well but was found dead at his home in St. Leonards-on-Sea on January 14 [2015]. ~ Your Local Guardian[590],[lxxiv]

However, Stingemore's "friend", Roman Catholic Priest Tony McSweeney was forced to address complaints that he had frequented Grafton Close to abuse the boys there.

> Opening the trial, prosecutor Sarah Plaschkes QC said: "From the time before he became a priest, he has had a sexual interest in teenage boys."
>
> "Over the decades on various occasions, he has taken indecent images of teenage boys."
>
> "In 1998 his cleaner found a video in his home. Finally when he was arrested in 2013, indecent images were found on his laptop."
>
> "Between 1979 and 1981, the prosecution say, he sexually abused teenage boys."
>
> "At that time, he was a close friend of a man called John Stingemore. He was the officer in charge of Grafton Close, a residential home for vulnerable children."
>
> "That gave this defendant the opportunity to sexually abuse teenage boys who were in care."[591]

Another public venue Father McSweeney was privileged to abuse children in was the Boy Scouts. Did he have a "friend" there, too?

> Ms. Plaschkes told the court in the 1970s and 1980s, Mr. McSweeney was involved in the Scout movement.
>
> In the late 1970s at a scout retreat, Mr. McSweeney met a boy who was 15 at the time, and the teenager later helped at a week-long retreat. [592]

The prosecutor, "Ms. Plaschkes", didn't see any evidence of a "paedophile" network outside Stingemore and McSweeney.

> “The prosecution say it was a joint enterprise between the two men.”[593]

Apparently, the “historical” ties between Grafton Close and the Elm Guest House went unnoticed to the stalwart woman of the “Queen’s Counsel”. With Stingemore’s timely or, rather “untimely” death, that left Father McSweeney to “face justice” alone.

He’ll probably continue to do well with public institutions, if the way police reacted to his house cleaner reporting him in possession of child pornography is any measure.

> The cleaner, Julia Woodyatt, later played one of the videos and saw it was of two young boys engaged in a sex act so reported it to the police [back in 1998].[594]

For Elm Guest House guests who didn’t have the power the Catholic Church wields with the British government, other tactics would be needed to shield them from scrutiny. Given that diplomats and spies were amongst the frequenters, one of those tactics was the Official Secrets Act.

The Official Secrets Act first became law in the United Kingdom in 1911 and was subsequently updated in 1920, 1939 and fifty years later in 1989. That final “update” was to remove the “public interest defence”. It was a protection for whistleblowers that allowed “sensitive” information to be disclosed if the crime outweighed the advantage received by England’s “enemies” in the public interest.

Small news venues like the Local Guardian, Sunday People or the now-defunct (not surprisingly) government watchdog Exaro attempted to do the job mainstream media refused to, particularly in regard to child trafficking in general and the Elm Guest House in specific.

Occasionally, it gets re-reported by slightly bigger papers such as the Mirror.

> A former Tory cabinet minister was pictured in a video allegedly featuring child sex abuse, it has been claimed.

> The tape is believed to be among a batch of films seized by customs officials and handed over to MI5, reports the Sunday People*.*
>
> No details about it have ever been made public.
>
> But the customs officer who seized the haul is said to have identified the ex-minister in the footage. ...
>
> A probe by the Sunday People and investigative website Exaro has uncovered evidence that the cassette was confiscated at Dover in 1982.
>
> A seizure notice shows a customs officer took custody of three 8mm films, three video cassettes and an order form.
>
> The notice said the items were "seized as liable to forfeiture upon the grounds that the said goods are indecent or obscene articles".
>
> Friends of the customs officer, now retired, have confirmed he told them this week that he recognised the minister in the film but would not say anything else after his former bosses reminded him he had signed the Official Secrets Act.
>
> This week the officer was too frightened even to open his front door, and said he was unwilling and unable to comment.
>
> He said: "I am bound by all these regulations until I die." ...
>
> The video was seized at Dover's Eastern Car Terminal along with other child pornography.
>
> It was being brought into Britain from Amsterdam by Russell Tricker, a British-born businessman based in the Dutch capital. He was held for two hours and officials confiscated the tape.
>
> The customs officer then passed the case over to senior managers at Customs and Excise – since reorganised as part of HM Revenue and Customs.
>
> They took no further action against Mr. Tricker, and are understood to have passed the tape to MI5.[595]

After that, the story disappeared.

Whenever possible, however, Britain’s most popular papers like the Daily Mail[lxxv] or the Telegraph quickly seize upon every opportunity...to discredit whistleblowers such as Social Worker Christopher Fay who named names of the rich and shameless as they abused boys at the Elm Guest house.[596],[597]

Perhaps that’s because one of those names was the current Vice-President of the European Commission, Leon Brittan. Or, as he’s more properly known, “The Right Honourable Lord Brittan of Spennithorne, PC, QC, DL.”

If Tory MP Geoffrey Dickens knew in November of 1983 that his then-Home Secretary was busy buggering boys at the Elm Guest House, he might not have expected to get any results from the paedophile dossier he turned over to him.

London

London is the capital city of Great Britain.

It’s also considered the banking capitol of the world.

Like the Vatican and Washington, D.C., London maintains a special status in the Realm.

Although this is often “debunked”, the fact is that London is an incorporated principality. The City of London is referred to by Elites as simply “The City”.

> The City is not a part of England, just as Washington is not a part of the USA. The City is [one of, if not the] wealthiest ... on earth and is presided over by a Lord Mayor who is appointed annually. When the Queen wishes to conduct business within the City, she is met by the Lord Mayor at Temple (Templar) Bar where she requests permission to enter this private, sovereign state. She then proceeds into the City walking several paces behind the Mayor. Her entourage may not be clothed in anything other than service uniforms.
>
> In the nineteenth century, 90% of the world’s trade was carried by British ships controlled by the Crown. The other 10% of ships had to pay commissions to the Crown simply for the privilege of using the world’s oceans.
>
> The Crown reaped billions in profits while operating under the protection of the British armed forces. This was not British commerce or British wealth, but the Crown’s commerce and the Crown’s wealth. ...
>
> The aforementioned Temple Bar is the juristic arm of the Crown and holds an exclusive monopoly on global legal fraud through their Bar Association franchises. The Temple Bar is comprised of four Inns of Court. They are; the Middle Temple, Inner Temple, Lincoln’s Inn and Gray’s Inn. The entry point to these closed secret societies is only to be found when one is called to their Bar.

> The Bar attorneys in the United States owe their allegiance and pledge their oaths to the Crown. All Bar Associations throughout the world are signatories and franchises to the International Bar Association located at the Inns of Court of the Crown Temple. ~ Owen[598]

Western lawyers (many of whom are politicians and / or judges) bow, along with the Sovereign of England, to the authority that rules in London: the Templars. The Templars, in turn, bow to Rome.

Modern usury banking wasn't created by Jews nor is it overseen by them. Like everything else, they're just the selected middle-men.

> The Templars established forts, lodges and temples at strategic locations where travelers could turn in their valuables and get an encoded writ as receipt that only Templars could decipher. The writ could then be cashed in at any other Templar fort or lodge.
>
> This was an innovation offered by no one else and the Templars charged a fee based upon the amount guarded; usury. ...
>
> "Bank" is derived from the Italian banco, the counter where the new money merchants* [like the powerful de Medici family] conducted their business. ~Secret History[599]

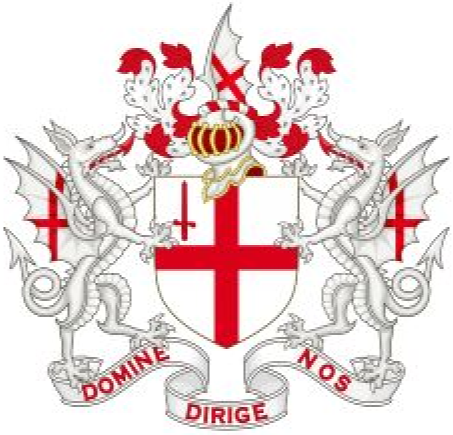
Proof that the Templars control London and London controls the Crown can be found in the incorporated City Coat of Arms and the actual Crown, itself; both copiously adorned with the symbolism of Rome.



More proof of how the English don’t control England can be found only 6 miles from the Elm Guest House; yet another den of depravity.

Shirley Oaks / Lambeth

In heart of London is the Borough of Lambeth. Lambeth was home to the Shirley Oaks orphanage for “mentally handicapped children”.

It was the perfect location for serial predators to raid and they did so with such vicious cruelty that it shocked even hardened investigators.

Living survivors say their memories of abuse go back to the 1950’s but corruption kept the scandal under wraps until just last year (2016).

Eventually, victims found a louder voice in numbers and they banded together to form the “Shirley Oaks Survivors Association” (SOSA). It was their unified complaints that forced an official response. Unwilling to wait for the Metropolitan London Police investigation (“Operation Middleton”), Raymond Stevenson of SOSA provided the combined Metro / Lambeth Council investigation with a 130-page preliminary report.

In it, he called the abuse at Shirley Oaks “industrial scale”. Stevenson was able to verify seven hundred children raped, tortured and some murdered by the criminal Elite who were carefully protected by Scotland Yard; that’s because some of the pedophiles were cops.

In fact, some children were brought to a special government-operated dungeon where they were tortured Inquisition-style.

> Senior council officials apparently violently raped and abused women and children in a London council basement during the 1990s, an explosive new report has revealed.

> Until now allegations of a paedophile ring operating at Lambeth Council have never been made public.
>
> According to a report, obtained exclusively by Sky News, council figures used the basement of Lambeth's housing headquarters to carry out the horrific abuse on women, children and even animals "without fear of interruption by other staff".
>
> Among the allegations includes a female member of staff who described being raped "of horrendous proportions" — suffering serious injuries still one month afterwards. The broadcaster also reported she was raped alongside children and animals by senior members of the council.
>
> Three male employees, including one in a senior position, were suspended from their jobs in the housing department in light of the findings following an internal investigation. But they were removed on grounds of breaching the authority's "equal opportunities policy". No criminal investigation was launched at the time despite the claims in the report.
>
> But now the Metropolitan Police are investigating the abuse allegations and the 1993 murder case of Lambeth Council's housing manager Bulic Forsythe under Operation Trinity — linking it to the Westminster paedophile ring that involves high profile politicians and MPs during the 1970s and 1980s. ~ International Business Times[600]

Forsythe made the mistake of telling people he had seen terrible things and he was drumming up the courage to make it right.

> A council official was murdered days after he vowed to expose "horrible" people linked to a VIP paedophile ring, a witness has claimed.
>
> Detectives are investigating claims Bulic Forsythe was silenced by a children's home vice ring said to have included a future minister in Tony Blair's government.
>
> A friend of Bulic, traced by the Mirror, said the social services manager at Lambeth council in south London confided in him shortly > before he was murdered 22 years ago last month.

>
> The witness claimed: "I will never forget one evening in the pub when he told me and my wife: "There are some people in Lambeth Council who are doing really horrible, disgusting things and I am going to expose them. I won't let them get away with it."
>
> "I was nervous when he was telling me all of this. I could feel by the anxious, determined emotion in his voice just how serious the situation was."
>
> "I will never forget the look on his face when he was telling me this. He was seriously disgusted and disturbed by what he knew and was determined to see that justice was served. Several days later, he was murdered."
>
> The witness, a former para-legal, said he contacted the police with the information at the time. He claimed: "It was a very short conversation with no interest expressed by the police and no one ever called me back." ~ The Mirror[601]

That February in 1993 he was brutally beaten to death and his flat was set ablaze.

In an interview with the press, Lambeth Council Administration Manager Mike Waller would say—

> Bulic worked for Lambeth Soc. Services at our Headquarters in Clapham for over 4 years. Although he was considered by some people to be rather over-zealous, in fact his bark was much worse than his bite.[602]

A more accurate portrayal would've been, "Over-zealous Bulic will never be given the chance to bark."

One of the high-profile accused "paedophiles" was British Labour Party Member of Parliament (MP) Paul Yaw Boateng. That's Baron Boateng to be precise.

> ...inquiry counsel Ben Emmerson QC, said it would be examining whether the abuse within the Lambeth homes was carried out by an > organised network of paedophiles. Emmerson said the investigation would attempt to piece together all the reports, evidence and allegations over more than four decades.

>
> He said allegations that the former government minister Paul Boateng had connections to the paedophile Michael Carroll, who ran the Angell Road home, would be examined. ~ The Guardian[603]

Boateng was England's first black Cabinet Minister for the administration of Prime Minister Tony Blair.

> ... modern war is always accompanied by copious amounts of propaganda, subterfuge and outright lies. A few may raise ire over such a process (such as the Telegraph's George Pitcher) but controlled media is never allowed to examine such issues too closely.
>
> In 2009, Pitcher lambasted former Prime Minister Tony Blair for his participation in the Iraq War, especially given that Blair converted to Roman Catholicism immediately upon leaving office.[64] ...
>
> In 2004, Tony Blair signed the Constitution to the European Union at a revealing location —
>
> > Tony Blair joined other EU leaders today in putting his signature to the new European Constitution — as Jack Straw disclosed that the promised referendum on the treaty would not be held until 2006.
> >
> > The ceremony took place in the ornate surroundings of the Palazzo dei Conservatori in the heart of ancient Rome where the original treaty establishing the Common Market was signed 47 years ago.
> >
> > It marked the start of a two-year ratification process in which the treaty has to be accepted into law by the national parliaments of all the member states. ~ The Independent[367]
>
> What correspondent Gavin Cordon of The Independent failed to tell you (or The Independent failed to show) was that Blair signed the > constitution under Alessandro Algardi's massive 1645 A.D. bronze statue of Pope Innocent X. ~ Secret History[604]

What did it take for Paul Boateng to become Baron Boateng, the first black Cabinet Minister under closet Roman Catholic Tony Blair? — He is a "Labour" Leftist and a "paedophile".

Of course, The Guardian would be quick to add that accusations against Boateng have not been substantiated.

But that wouldn't stop his son, Benjamin Boateng, from drugging and raping 23-year-old Clare Walker at a party.[605]

We certainly can't condemn someone just by association. Just because Tony Blair was a frequent guest of Jeffrey Epstein[606] doesn't mean he liked to rape children.

However, the daughter of Bulic Forsythe wasn't quite as privileged as Benjamin Boateng. In fact, because her father tried to be a man of conscience, she never knew him.

> Kiddist Forsythe – born three months after her dad's murder – believed he may have been targeted because of what he knew and she is urging the police to fully reopen the murder investigation.[607]

> Forsythe's daughter Kiddist told the [Sky News] broadcaster: "Some of the stuff that's in here, [the report[lxxvi]], I honestly can't believe happened. I was very shocked."[608]

A decade and a half after all the "paedophiles" have had their fill, cops, judges, journalists and editors are finally on the job.

> A long-running police inquiry — Operation Middleton — which looked at all the borough's children's homes over a 20-year period, concluded there were at least 35 men and women who had abused children. In its final report, investigators said 16 suspected abusers died before the inquiry began — and another 19 could not be identified.
>
> This figure does not include the men who have been arrested and charged. One killed himself on the eve of his trial. Add those to the total and there were up to 50 paedophiles abusing children in Lambeth's homes.
>
> The recently set-up Shirley Oaks Survivors Group believes that is a severe underestimate. The group already has more than 600 members. Many of the survivors do not trust the police and are undecided about whether they will ever feel confident enough to come forward. ~ BBC Newsnight[609]

Showing how serious they are, the British government brought in a woman from New Zealand to take charge; Judge Justice Dame Lowell Goddard, QC.

The monster who doled out the innocent children to powerful un-named "paedophiles" ran up to five orphanages for the Lambeth Council. He was specially picked for his job and arrived ready to rape kids.

> Nobody doubts that paedophiles were operating seemingly at will in Lambeth — the question that remains is whether successive inquiries unravelled the full extent of the abuse, and to what degree this behaviour was coordinated by a large group of abusive men.
>
> How did Lambeth find itself so compromised?

> In the days when police checks were not as rigorous as they are today, councils were occasionally unlucky enough to employ predatory paedophiles. Lambeth was unlucky time and again, over 20 years, in several children's homes. Was that just negligence? Or was something else at play?
>
> One man — Michael John Carroll — will be central to the investigation.
>
> Goddard says she will examine "the involvement of Michael Carroll in the sexual abuse of children in the care of the council; his recruitment and continued employment by the council; and the circumstances surrounding his application to foster a child and the council's subsequent account to the Clough Inquiry".
>
> Carroll is better known by his second name, John. He was employed by Lambeth in 1978, became manager of the Angell Road home in 1981, and continued to run the home in Brixton until he was sacked for fiddling his expenses in late 1991.
>
> To begin with, Carroll was considered an exemplary manager who ran a model home. But he had a reputation as a bully to other staff — and as a disciplinarian with the children in his care, who were as young as three.
>
> Lambeth knew Carroll was a problem long before he was eventually dismissed. In 1986, it discovered something that should have excluded him from working with children. Carroll already had a conviction for child abuse — which he hadn't disclosed when he had applied for a job in Lambeth. But the conviction, and his failure to disclose it, did not lead to his dismissal.[610]

"Unlucky", indeed.

Not to question the fine journalism at the BBC, but all of the spin seems to have caused a misunderstanding. Michael John Carroll wasn't convicted of "disciplinary child abuse". He was convicted of sexually assaulting a child all the way back in 1966.[611]

He was a particularly diseased and heinous child predator. Children came into the care of his government orphanages, desperate for love and that is what he exploited to rape them or offer them to his depraved high-profile clientele.

Despite the fear and distrust of corrupt cops, another witness did come forward.

> The retired social services boss told detectives how the politician suspected of child abuse would spend evenings with the convicted paedophile who ran the home.
>
> The witness said the man would arrive alone and then join Michael Carroll in an annex where the beast is known to have attacked a string of youngsters.
>
> She said Carroll and the public figure would take young boys to the top-floor flat in Angell Road children's home in Brixton, South London.
>
> She said: "John would sometimes come down and select one of the boys to go up to the flat. He would say, 'Uncle John wants to talk to you' and the child would go up holding his hand."
>
> Official documents reveal one of Carroll's alleged victims told detectives 16 years ago that a group of paedophiles attacked children in the flat.
>
> Carroll was the only person convicted of abuse linked to the home, despite a number of children claiming they were attacked by other men there.
>
> The witness accused Scotland Yard of covering up the alleged abuse after she originally gave evidence to then-detective inspector Clive Driscoll in 1998.
>
> She said the Metropolitan Police failed to follow up on her evidence after they removed Mr. Driscoll from the investigation.
>
> Detectives from the Met's Child Abuse Investigation Command have now taken statements from her, after she was tracked down during a 16-month Mirror investigation.

> She said she saw the politician at the children’s home about four times in a three-month period while she was a trainee there in the early 1980s.
>
> She said: “It was always in the evenings, between about half six and eight. He would see John and then disappear upstairs with John to his private flat. He would always arrive by himself.”
>
> She said none of the staff would speak up when Carroll returned to select a boy.
>
> She said: “The first time I saw it I asked a staff member what was going on and she told me John was doing ‘direct work’.” This meant working one-to-one with children addressing issues including sexual abuse. Convicted paedophile Carroll claimed to be an expert on counselling abused children.
>
> The witness said: “There were a group of John’s favourite boys who would go up to the flat. All were aged between about six and 10 and very vulnerable. They all had the same look – like they craved love and affection.”
>
> She said the politician was one of several men who visited the home including a police officer and social workers from other parts of Lambeth. The Mirror knows the identity of three of the others. All their names have been passed to the police. ~ Mirror[612]

The Mirror has the names of the high-profile “paedophiles” but they’re not giving them up; legal protections, don’t you know!

> An alleged female victim of Carroll told detectives in 1998 that a paedophile ring abused boys in the Angell Road annex, known to staff and children as “John’s room”.
>
> The girl told detectives she was violently sexually assaulted by Carroll, referred to as MJC in an official document seen by the Mirror*. ...*
>
> The witness said she saw the minister on two further occasions, once with a social worker and the police officer. She told managers she > suspected abuse. She said: "I was told John was a law unto himself and was protected by someone higher up."[613]

The name "Carroll" in general and "John Carroll" in specific should immediately make Americans wary.

The Carroll family was the power behind the American Revolution for the Papacy.

> The Carrolls were thoroughly invested in the American Revolution. Cousin Charles Carroll signed the Declaration of Independence and Daniel was one of only two Catholics to sign the Constitution and one of only 5 men to have signed both Constitution and the Articles of Confederation.[1619]
>
> Daniel Carroll's brother John was a Jesuit and the first Arch Bishop of Baltimore[1620]. John Carroll founded a private school for boys, and named it "Georgetown".[1621] ~ Illuminati Unmasked[614]

Westminster was no stranger to grisly crimes against women and children in 1974. Two hundred years prior, a visiting American diplomat was doing his share in Clapham.

> Workmen have dug up the remains of ten bodies hidden beneath the former London home of Benjamin Franklin, the founding father of American independence.
>
> The remains of four adults and six children were discovered during the £1.9 million restoration of Franklin's home at 36 Craven Street, close to Trafalgar Square. Researchers believe that there could be more bodies buried beneath the basement kitchens.
>
> Initial estimates are that the bones are about 200 years old and were buried at the time Franklin was living in the house, which was his home from 1757 to 1762, and from 1764 to 1775. Most of the bones show signs of having been dissected, sawn or cut. One skull has been drilled with several holes. Paul Knapman, the Westminster Coroner, said yesterday: "I cannot totally discount the possibility of a crime. There is still a possibility that I may have to hold an inquest."

> The principal suspect in the mystery is William Hewson, like Franklin a Fellow of the Royal Society, and the husband of Polly Stevenson, the daughter of Franklin's landlady, Mary Stevenson. ~ The Sunday Times[615]

"Bawdy Ben Franklin" was a well-known "lady's man" which is whitewash code for "Member of the Devil's Simulation in Good Standing."

Not only was Franklin a Master Grand Mason,[616] but he also enjoyed the night life in London with the Hellfire Club.

The Hellfire Club was founded by Sir Francis Dashwood. It has been spun as a mockery of religion. Dashwood had personal experience by visiting several seminaries and convents throughout Europe.

> The Hellfire Club was the popular name for an exclusive English club that met irregularly from 1746 to around 1763, run by Sir Francis Dashwood. During the time of the club's operation, they were commonly thought to hold notorious, orgiastic and Satanic meetings at Medmenham Abbey, beside the Thames and later at West Wycombe Caves.
>
> The term was not invented by the 1750 club; they first met to celebrate an earlier club founded in 1720 by Charles Edward. Other clubs using the name were set up throughout the 18th century.
>
> The club was founded by Sir Francis Dashwood after he returned from his Grand Tour of Europe. According to the 1779 book Nocturnal Revels, on the Grand Tour he had visited various religious seminaries...
>
> At the first gathering in May 1746, they met at the George and Vulture public house in Lombard Street, London, the meeting place of the 1720s group. The initial membership was limited to twelve but it soon increased. Of the original twelve, seven have been almost certainly identified: Dashwood, Robert Vansittart, William Hogarth, Thomas Potter, Francis Duffield, Edward Thompson, and Paul Whitehead. Though not a member, Benjamin Franklin occasionally attended the > club's meetings. The later membership is potentially immense, including John Wilkes and John Montagu, 4th Earl of Sandwich.

>
> They did not call themselves the Hellfire Club, but used a number of mockingly religious titles, initially the Brotherhood of St. Francis of Wycombe. Other titles used included the Order of Knights of West Wycombe and later the Monks of Medmenham. The members called each other brothers and referred to Dashwood as abbot; female guests were nuns. Unlike the more determined Satanists of the 1720s the club motto was Fay ce que vouldras (Do what thou wilt) from François Rabelais, later used by Aleister Crowley. Although indulging in pseudo-Satanic rites the "monks" were keener devotaries of Bacchus and Venus. ~ Wikipedia[617]

In light of all the other material in these pages, we know that Dashwood and Franklin weren't mocking "religion"; they were partaking in it.

The net cast by Metro Police was thrown after all the sharks were long gone but the Devil's Simulation did allow a few lingering piranhas to get caught.

The background behind one of them confirms for us who really benefited from the children given away at the "public" London orphanages.

> Philip Temple, 66, admitted seven charges committed in the 1970s when he appeared at Woolwich Crown Court.
>
> He pleaded to 20 similar charges and two of perjury at Croydon Crown Court in April.
>
> In all, he admitted abusing 12 boys and one girl while working in south London care homes and a north London church.
>
> He also admitted lying on oath in the 1990s when he was cleared of child sex abuse charges following accusations by a teenage boy from his church.
>
> >  In the 1970s, Temple worked as a social worker at three south London children's home. He abused children in each of the homes but gained successive promotions.*
> >  Eventually made a "housefather" of Rowan House in the* > Shirley Oaks complex near Croydon.

>  Suspended in 1977 after allegations of sexual offending were made.*
>  Became a monk in the Roman Catholic Church in 1981.*
>  Ordained a priest in 1987 based at Christ the King Monastery in Cockfosters, north London.*
>  Faced trials in 1998 and 1999 after a teenage boy from the church accused him of sexual abuse.*
>  The first trial ended without a verdict and the second with an acquittal.*
>  Following the trial in 1999, the diocese* [“]wanted[”] to have Temple removed. His order set up an internal commission of inquiry.
>  In 2002 the diocese was reassured by the order Temple was not in the UK and would not be returning.* ~ BBC[618]

Allow us to read between the lines for the BBC, whose bold headline reads Ex-Catholic Priest Admits Seven Charges Of Child Sex Abuse yet nowhere in the piece do we read of Brother Philip Temple being laicized.

> * Philip Temple was a vicious “paedophile” who raped and abused children as a social worker.
> * He was repeatedly promoted and given more and more access to vulnerable young children.
> * As a vicious “paedophile” he made his way to the Lambeth orphanages and was granted access.
> * At the height of his career of crime against the innocent, he became a Catholic priest. It was a calculated decision to grant him more access to children. Both the aptly-named Temple and “the Church” were happy with the arrangement.
> * He continued to rape and abuse children for years more.
> * Like his “paedophile” priest peers, he was moved all across Europe to insure his anonymity and increase the reach of his predation.
> * After a full career of 4 decades, he was finally reigned in.

As Kiddist Forsythe, the daughter of the brutally-murdered whistle-blowing Housing Manager Bulic Forsythe, described upon reading Raymond Stevenson’s SOSA report; London’s Elite bringing women, children and animals to torture, rape and murder into a specially-configured dungeon in a government building shocks the senses.

With almost no-one being prosecuted or punished for the unbelievable crimes and the victims doing the Metro’s job for them, the Lambeth Council had the Lord Mayor of London write the biggest check of its kind.

> Lambeth council is to pay tens of millions of pounds in compensation to children abused in its care homes, after a report by survivors of the Shirley Oaks home in the borough detailed systematic abuse by 60 paedophiles against thousands of young people.
>
> The payouts, which are understood to total around £40m, are likely to far exceed the average payments of around £13,000 awarded in court to abuse victims. Lambeth’s decision to accept liability and set up what it said was a “far reaching redress system” is being seen as a radical blueprint for other institutions to follow when sexual and physical abuse on such a systematic scale is uncovered.
>
> The report by the Shirley Oaks Survivors Association (SOSA), which interviewed 400 former residents of the children’s home, identifies 27 suspected paedophiles by name, and gives details of 60 who have had multiple allegations of abuse made against them. ~ The Guardian[619]

Apparently, the irony of British citizens paying hush money through the nose to placate the survivors of the malignant Pedocracy aimed against them was lost on The Guardian.

Perhaps, given who edits British media, we shouldn’t be surprised.

*****

In Grafton Close / Elm Guest House victim Peter Hatton-Bornshin’s suicide note were found the words “I will get those bastards.”[620]

Perhaps some who have read his story here will see it done.

Chapter 16

Who Took Johnny?[lxxvii]

5 September 1982: 12 year old John David "Johnny" Gosch disappears while on his paper route in Des Moines, Iowa.

In recounting the disappearance, John Gosch, Senior, stated that he always accompanied his son every Sunday morning for his paper route, but that morning he didn't. Supposedly, Johnny took his wagon filled with papers and the family dachshund to go it alone.

By 6 a.m., neighbors began calling the Gosch residence to complain that they hadn't received their paper. John Senior drove the route and found Johnny's wagon and the family dog still tied to it, but no sign of the boy.

John Senior, along with his wife (Johnny's mother) Noreen, called the Des Moines Police but they were disturbingly unresponsive. They took 45 minutes to arrive (Headquarters was 10 minutes away) and distressed the Goschs by suggesting that Johnny had run away from home. Johnny was well-adjusted and happy. He had just bought himself a dirtbike with his paper route money. The Goschs quickly dismissed the assertion that he had run away.

John Gosch Sr. had met Noreen through a mutual friend he knew from his days in the Marine Corps. Noreen had recently lost her first husband to cancer and the two were married a short time later.

Neighbor John Rossi stated that they had seen Johnny being talked to by a man who had emerged from a parked blue two-toned Ford Fairmont with Nebraska plates.

That individual left after supposedly asking Johnny for directions.

He continued on his route until another neighbor, young Michael Smith, heard a car door and observed a silver and black Fairmont shoot out of the neighborhood by running a Stop sign. Johnny Gosch's wagon was there, but not Johnny. Smith's father, Frank (a family friend) was also adamant: Johnny did not run away. Witness and neighbor John Rossi was disturbed, "Why the police didn't take more interest, I don't know."[621]

Former President of the Help Find Johnny Gosch Foundation, John Sampson, noted how Iowa State law aided any possible kidnappers by mandating that authorities wait 72 hours before considering action in a missing person incident. Leads from a kidnapping usually fade after only 24 hours.

According to the United States Justice Department Criminal Resource Manual, the FBI doesn't have jurisdiction over local missing persons.[622]

However, in the case of a child of "tender years" (12 or younger) the FBI will initiate an investigation.[623] But, according to Noreen, the FBI response was to label the vocal Goschs as "loons".

Former Executive Producer of America's Most Wanted, Paul Sparrow stated, "People would be shocked by what the real situation was ... The FBI would track your stolen car across state lines, but not your stolen child."

The host of America's Most Wanted, John Walsh, had also lost a child to possible kidnappers. Sparrow noted that when they had attempted to get FBI help searching for Walsh's son, "they waved us off".

Reporter Eileen Wixted for WHO-TV in Des Moines candidly admitted that the story went from a missing child to a conflict with law enforcement; "You're not doing enough." Wixted continued, "People would say that Noreen was over the top, at times."

Such would be the reaction either of a frantically-distraught mother, shocked to find that the government agencies she trusted to "serve and protect" were ignoring the disappearance of her son, or an arch criminal desperate to cover her tracks after being involved in a heinous crime.[lxxviii]

As we've seen, rarely have children been kidnapped or sold into slavery without the aid of a family member.

John Gosch's military background could easily conceal connections to systemic child trafficking. Gosch, Senior, was Noreen's second husband and apparently Johnny's father. Children victims from multiple marriages are often sacrificed because they were from a previous spouse.

However, if the Goschs were suspects, they had little to fear from "law enforcement". If they were heartbroken parents, they had little to hope for.

Des Moines Police Chief Orval Cooney stated, "it's a frustrating investigation." "I'm optimistic that we will find the boy alive."

Yet the Des Moines Register quoted Cooney in regards to Johnny's mother claiming they weren't doing enough, "I really don't give a damn what Noreen Gosch has to say. I really don't give a damn what she thinks...I'm kind of sick of her."

In 1983, Cooney resigned over scandal from public intoxication, "fixing tickets" of friends and interfering with an investigation into the criminal activities of his son. An 18-officer complaint about his wrongdoing was filed and mentioned by the Des Moines Tribune.

No prosecution followed.

“The Police Chief had a lot of problems,” John Senior chuckled.[lxxix]

Two years later, on August 14th, 1984, 13 year old Eugene Martin disappeared from his Des Moines paper route under identical circumstances. However, West Des Moines Police Captain Bob Rushing claimed, “We tried in-depth to make a connection but the boys were dissimilar in everything except their gender.”

Two years after that, 14 year old Marc Allen disappeared after going out for pizza. Again, law enforcement found no connection.

In 1991, a Nebraska man named Paul Bonacci gave testimony to his attorney, John DeCamp, stating that he was used as an accessory in the kidnapping of Johnny Gosch in nearby Des Moines, Iowa. Bonacci would go on to be the center of a whirlwind of controversy regarding systemic child sex slave trafficking in Omaha (see Chapter 21).

WHO TV interviewed Bonacci in a Nebraska state penitentiary where he was serving time for the inappropriate touching of an under-age family member (behavior indicative of having suffered similar abuse). Producers showed the unedited footage to West Des Moines Police with the implication that Bonacci was worth questioning (Omaha is 2 hours from Des Moines).

However, West Des Moines Police Capt. Bob Rushing claimed there was not enough reason to warrant the effort.

In an interview with America’s Most Wanted, Bonacci claimed that Johnny had tried to run away from his kidnappers, was recaptured and “branded”. Phone calls came in to Most Wanted from other supposed victims sharing a brand scar identical to what Paul Bonacci had described.

The use of a “brand” to physically mark runaway sex slaves implies a trafficking network of staggering proportion.

Bonacci took Most Wanted to a trafficking “safe house” which he described in detail beforehand. Their visit verified his claims. Tunnels were found under the house along with a basement prison with initials carved into wood beams of apparent victims.

The previous owner of the property was a prison guard who had subsequently “disappeared”.

This information was garnered by America’s Most Wanted, not law enforcement.

When the production crew of Who Took Johnny? interviewed FBI Child Abduction Unit Agent Ron Hosko, he claimed he was unfamiliar with the high-profile Gosch case. A female voice off camera immediately stopped any follow-up with, “We agreed that there would be no questions about Johnny Gosch.”

In 1993, Noreen and John Gosch, Senior, divorced.

In 1997, Noreen claimed that she had a surprise visit from a man stating he was her son. She has said that she knew it was him because she recognized his eyes.

The man told her boys who could escape wouldn’t because they were forced to participate in and commit crimes so they feared jail. “They did things to us,” he told her. “They control us,” he said.

Gosch kept the visit to herself until, two years later. She was called to testify in the civil trial between Paul Bonacci and his accused slave handler, Lawrence King. There she divulged her secret under oath.

The circumstances surrounding this supposed visit, however, raise more questions than they answer.

Purported victim of Satanic Ritual Abuse David Shurter expressed on his blog the suspicion that Noreen Gosch fabricated the visit because a live Johnny Gosch leaves no one liable to the law (given today’s statute of limitations protections they receive). A murdered, Johnny, however, still allows the remote chance of adjudication.

> The tales of Johnny Gosch have done quite a bit to distract people from what was going on in Omaha, but other than Paul [Bonacci], [John] DeCamp, and Noreen Gosch — who has had contact with Johnny? No one that I know of — people think he is alive because these three say he is — and ONLY these three. Why would they continue this facade you ask? Because there is no statute of limitations on murder — and if it is discovered that Johnny Gosch is in fact deceased — these three are going to have A LOT of questions to answer. That is why I believe this whole fall out with Nick Bryant and Noreen Gosch — even though it happened 18 months ago — is relevant. He wanted to flush out Johnny — and of course the Gosch camp can't allow that — as I believe there is no Johnny to flush out. [624]

Bolstering Shurter's suspicions are the lengths Noreen Gosch went to in order to cover even criticisms as vague as "but your adult Johnny looks nothing like your childhood Johnny".

> He is known as the "chameleon". Why? Because he can so completely change his appearance.[625]

If Noreen Gosch is complicit in the abduction, abuse and murder of her own son (sadly, many victim parents are), it gives motive for this seemingly needless melodrama.

In 1999, the Omaha World-Herald published John Senior's skepticism over his ex-wife's assertion.

> The father of a Des Moines newspaper carrier who disappeared more than 16 years ago said he is skeptical of his ex-wife's statement that their son showed up at her apartment in 1997. ...
>
> She testified in a case involving the imprisoned Lawrence E. King Jr., former head of the failed Franklin Community Federal Credit Union of Omaha.
>
> John Gosch said that if their son had returned to the Des Moines area, he probably would have gone to the couple's home, where John Gosch > was living and where Johnny Gosch grew up, instead of his mother's apartment. ...

>
> Noreen Gosch met Monday with police officers for about an hour and told them about the brief reunion she says she had with her son.
>
> "In the past she told us something similar to this and then chose to recant it," West Des Moines Police Capt. Bob Rushing said earlier.[626]

To make matters even more complex, both the West Des Moines Police and key officials at the World-Herald have also been implicated in child sex slave trafficking!

Noreen Gosch[lxxx] also claimed she received photographs in the mail sent anonymously in 2006 of a boy bound and gagged. She believes them to be her son. She shared them with the West Des Moines Police Department and the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children. Both agencies claimed nothing could be done because the boy in the photographs was not Noreen's son, Johnny Gosch.

The pictures were also shown to Detective Nelson Zalva of the Hillsborough County Sheriff's Office. He said he recognized them and that they were in relation to a case in 1979 that had since been solved; the boy[lxxxi] was found and no charges were filed. When the Who Took Johnny? production crew showed one of the photographs to Detective Zalva, he stated he didn't recognize it.

Another picture received by Noreen Gosch gives a clue as to the "system" behind systemic child sex slave trafficking.

In the picture is a victim, trussed up on a bed (perhaps it is Johnny Gosch, perhaps an unknown child). Behind him is a laundry bag.

Camp Caribou is located in Ontario, Canada and is run by the Legionnaires for Christ. It is one of some 50 such camps all across Canada and the United States for both young boys and young girls.

The Legionnaires for Christ are part of Regnum Christi[lxxxii]; an international organization of Catholic Laity similar in scope and mission to other Catholic societies such as Opus Dei, Knights of Malta, Knights of Columbus, etc. The Legionnaires are mostly composed of clergy.

The Legionnaires for Christ was founded by a Mexican priest named Marcial Maciel Degollado in 1941. Maciel maintained leadership of the movement for nearly 65 years. Regnum Christi was founded in 1959 to allow laity to follow Maciel’s movement.

Marcial Maciel was a “made” monster. He was brought in to the Devil’s Simulation by abuse and continued it in power.

> The youngest of five boys in a family of nine children, Maciel was born in 1920 into the provincial aristocracy of Cotija de la Paz in south-central Mexico, today a crossroads in the drug wars. The surname derived from his father’s Creole French-Spanish ancestry. His father, a rancher with a sugar mill, ridiculed the boy for being a sissy, subjected him to whippings by older brothers, and sent him to work with field hands to shape up as a man. Many years later, he told one of his seminary victims, Juan Vaca, how mule drivers sexually abused him. ~ Newsweek[627]

As we shall soon see, Maciel’s ties to the Central Intelligence Agency will make us question as to the “accidental” happenstance of his coming from the heart of Mexico’s drug enterprise.

An opining Catholic journalist[lxxxiii] would note of the peculiar name:

> The literal meaning of his mother’s surname – which in Spanish fashion is inserted after his father’s surname Maciel is fascinating. The literal meaning of “degollado” is “a man whose throat has been ripped out”. ~ The Guardian[628]

The young victim of sexual molestation attended a Mexican seminary but was forced to leave for reasons not covered by any source. Where else can a Mexican boy with a heart to serve Rome go to become a priest? — To Jesuits in “New” Mexico; the United States of America!

The story goes that Maciel was also rejected by the Jesuits but it was due to the influence of his family that he was finally ordained.

> That was after he had left two seminaries — in Vera Cruz, Mexico, in 1938 and a Jesuit-run seminary in Montezuma, New Mexico, in 1940 — for what the official history calls “misunderstandings” about his desire to start a religious order. ~ Hartford Courant[629]

The “official history” would go on to claim that Maciel’s ordination was executed by his uncle. Such an accomplishment is unprecedented in Catholicism. Is the “official history” a re-write which attempts to distance the Jesuits from their pupil? The facts are that Marcial Maciel Degollado was an ordained priest and the last seminary he attended was run by Jesuits. Was this notorious criminal also a Jesuit priest?

As an unknown Mexican padre freshly granted his position by a family member, it’s difficult to see how Maciel was weaponized. But as a specially-trained Jesuit, it’s not a leap to see his progression.

It is a link that runs from the Legionnaires through the Jesuits to Opus Dei into Spain; the host nation of them all.

> Maciel won government support for seminary scholarships in Madrid, after the Spanish Civil War cemented ties between Francisco Franco’s > dictatorship and the Catholic hierarchy. Wealthy industrialists and patricians from the Spanish-speaking world poured money into Maciel's fledgling order. ~ Newsweek[630]

What Newsweek is neglecting to mention is that Francisco Franco was a devout Roman Catholic. A close advisor of his was Josemaría Escrivá de Balaguer, the founder of Opus Dei.

Escrivá created the secretive group on the 2nd of October 1928, there in Madrid.

Spain is also the birthplace of the Jesuit order. Its founder Íñigo López de Loyola (Ignatius Loyola) and his close friend Francisco de Jasso y Azpilicueta (Francis Xavier) were Spaniards.

As a result, there are many powerful families there who happily give blood and treasure to further the agendas of Rome.

> ... rich and powerful [allies] ... notably the Oriol family ... served to established Maciel Degollado in high society in Spain, helped him to collect money from the rich and had aided him to become acquainted with the dictator Francisco Franco. ~ Guardian[631]

Maciel immediately began opening schools and seminaries across Europe, Central and South America and looking for pre-pubescent boys to fill them. Again, the "official history" claims Maciel was able to raise vast sums of money without outside influence to ingratiate himself with an unwitting Vatican.

> Maciel raised money for lodgings and lessons in Mexico City for the small group of followers he had attracted. In 1946 he arrived in Rome and gave $10,000 to Cardinal Clemente Micara, the vicar of Rome, "a huge sum in a city reeling from the war," a priest with seasoned knowledge of Legion finances told me. Maciel, 26, tall and lean with searchlight eyes, spoke no Italian. But the portly Micara, a former Vatican diplomat, spoke Spanish; he provided an endorsement letter for Maciel's fundraising and an audience with Pope Pius XII.[632]

Maciel tapped in to the Roman-controlled Cold War Hegelian dialectic and painted himself as a passionate opponent of Communism (a movement started by his own Jesuit order).

But what was most on his mind was the abuse of children.

> In the late 1940s, Maciel began sexually plundering teenage seminarians in the religious order he founded, the Legion of Christ. He also shuttled between Mexico, Venezuela, and Spain, courting benefactors like a senator with silk between the fingers, portraying his Legionaries as a force of resurgent orthodoxy, himself a fearless foe of communism.[633]

"In the late 1940s..." implies that this wasn't an immediate agenda yet the same Newsweek piece tells us Maciel was "family-ordained" in the "mid 1940s" —

> On his mother's side, four uncles were bishops. Maciel as a teenager entered a seminary in Mexico, but was dismissed for reasons yet to surface; he joined a seminary run by Jesuits in New Mexico and was again expelled for "misunderstandings," according to his official biography. Had it not been for the quartet of uncles, he never would have been a priest. But pull is pull. Bishop Francisco Arias arranged private lessons and ordained his nephew in 1944. A cameraman filmed Maciel in the moment, the footage used in later years for Legion marketing efforts.[634]

The obvious conclusion is that the most important part of Legionnaire facilities was to provide young boys for abuse. They would later be conditioned to serve, not just as Catholic clergy, but as powerful secular officials in governments everywhere. For instance, one of Maciel's victims was Arturo Jurado Guzman. Rather than being ordained, Jurado would go on to teach at the U.S. Defense Department School of Linguistics in Monterey, California.

Again, the "official history" was that Maciel's ability to fundraise and provide young priests with Jesuit-like devotion to the Catholic cause was why his crimes were overlooked. Yet he repeatedly told his victims that he had “Papal dispensation” to abuse them.

> After decades of silence, nine men have come forward to accuse the head of an international Roman Catholic order of sexually abusing them when they were boys and young men training to be priests.
>
> The men, in interviews in the United States and Mexico, said the Rev. Marcial Maciel Degollado, the founder of the Legionaries of Christ, molested them in Spain and Italy during the 1940s, ‘50s and ‘60s.
>
> Several said Maciel told them he had permission from Pope Pius XII to seek them out sexually for relief of physical pain. ~ Hartford Courant[635]

This boast was actually made repeatedly and of different Popes!

> One victim reported that Fr. Maciel boasted that he had a special written dispensation from Pope John Paul II to allow him to be masturbated because of the pains he suffered as a result of his “delicate” health. ~ VatiLeaks[636]

The list of Popes runs as follows —

- Pius XII: Eugenio Maria Giuseppe Giovanni Pacelli — implicated as a “founding father” of both Communism in the East and Fascism in the West. He is frequently mislabeled “Hitler’s Pope” for Vatican deniability. Actually, ‘tis the other way ‘round.
- John XXIII: Angelo Giuseppe Roncalli. In March of 1962, Jacqueline Kennedy had a private audience with Roncalli. A little over one year later, her husband had his brains blown out as he sat beside her. Truly, a “deal with the devil” can be implied as Kennedy’s philandering was a well-known humiliation to his wife. She probably didn’t intend her “favor” to go that far.
- John Paul I: Albino Luciani. There arguably wasn’t time for Maciel to receive his “Papal dispensation” from John Paul I to rape children as his Papacy lasted only 32 days. Allegations have been that the CIA caused Luciani's "heart attack" because he was a Communist yet his successor (though painted as the anti-Communist who helped Reagan and Thatcher bring down the Soviet Union) was just as sympathetic to Communist causes. What is most likely is that Luciani was a Communist ideologue unwilling to use Communism as a tool of manipulation.

- John Paul II: Karol Józef Wojtyła — reputed by radio host and author Milton William "Bill" Cooper to have been directly involved in the Holocaust. Cooper was killed by Arizona Sheriff's Deputies shortly after 9/11.
- Benedict XVI: Joseph Aloisius Ratzinger — former member of the Nazi Youth who were frequently abused to become abusers; former Archbishop of Munich (the Jesuit-dominated region of Germany that birthed Illuminati founder Johann Adam Weishaupt — Bavaria); co-author of Vatican II along with his Jesuit friend, Karl Rahner and former Prefect of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith — also known as the Inquisition.

Whether Maciel had letters of Papal dispensation to abuse boys from each can only be speculated at.

However, Maciel continued to curry the favor of every Pope he served under. Pope Saint John Paul II was particularly fond of him.

> During the term of his papacy Pope John Paul II took Fr. Maciel with him on three overseas journeys to Mexico, the first in January 1979, 1990 and 1993. Those trips were public signs of the extraordinary bond between the two men, yet the Pope either actively or passively ignored open allegations that Fr. Maciel was an active paedophile who also fathered children with at least two women and whose monetary schemes included bribery and financial misconduct in the highest levels of the Vatican. Fr. Maciel collaborated extensively with John Paul II who praised, endorsed and glorified him, promoting him to different Vatican offices and making him an integral part of the Holy See's inner circle of associates. Public accusations against Fr. Maciel again surfaced in the mid-1990s, yet John Paul II protected him from investigation and criminal charges right up to his death in 2005. ~ VatiLeaks[637]

As a product of the narco-polity we call "Mexico", Maciel was addicted to illicit drugs — morphine in particular. He was "investigated" for this by the Vatican from 1956 through 1958. During that time, despite a supposed suspension from heading the Legionnaires, he continued to run the organization. The result of the "investigation" was a clean bill of health by several Vatican-employed doctors.

> Maciel's medical history has been a source of curiosity to the men who say he sexually abused them. Each one said Maciel was addicted to painkilling drugs despite his being cleared of that accusation in the Vatican investigation.
>
> In Rome, [Arturo] Jurado [the DoD language teacher mentioned above] said, he was dispatched to Salvator Mundi hospital on a dozen occasions to obtain morphine. Under orders from Maciel, Jurado said, "I gave him injections many times in the forearm." ~ Hartford Courant[638]

Doubtless, the narcotics were part of Maciel's regimen in coping with his abuse of children.

> The former Legionaries said that Maciel seemed to dissociate himself from the sexual acts, separating the bedroom encounters from his priestly activities.
>
> To some he never acknowledged that anything unusual had happened. Barba, the literary scholar, said that after a sexual encounter with Maciel, the priest calmly dressed and walked with the youth to bless an outdoor lunch under blue skies.
>
> "Fundamentally, Maciel's case is one of a divided personality," said Miguel Diaz, in his initial statements.[639]

Either through his Jesuit training or as an incognito Jesuit priest, Maciel built his own "Company" very much like Loyola's. Legionnaires were instructed to consider him a "living Saint" and to address the pedophile priest with God-like respect as "Nuestro Padre": "Our Father".

Like the Jesuits, Legionnaires took a "Fourth Vow".

> The Legionaries pledged total fidelity to the pope and took the traditional three vows that members of other religious orders do — of poverty, chastity and obedience. They took a fourth one as well: They swore never to speak ill of the Legion, Maciel or their superiors — and to inform on anyone who did. ...

> As described by the men, it was a culture in which one's every moment was to be accounted for, not just in seminary but throughout their lives as priests — a system of total control. Incoming and outgoing mail was monitored and they had no access to telephones. The oath to inform on anyone speaking ill of Nuestro Padre or his Legion meant they were expected to spy on one another, they said.
>
> Contact with their families was severely curtailed. Juan Vaca said that for "12 years I was kept in Europe away from my parents and family. I was not allowed to see them or keep close contact with them."
>
> The former Legionaries said punishment was harsh.[640]

Maciel lived like a king. More accurately, he lived like a secret agent; siring children out of wedlock in multiple locations.

> In 1980 Maciel sired a son, Raul, by Blanca Gutierrez Lara, whom he met in Acapulco. He was 60; she was 22, with a 3-year-old boy from a previous relationship. Maciel used the name Raul Rivas on the birth certificates of Raul Gutierrez and a second son he had by Blanca. He gave her a house in Cuernavaca with financial support, visiting periodically, telling them that he was a CIA agent and oil-company detective. Meanwhile, he held great prominence in Rome. Cardinals relished the grand dinners with a mariachi band at the Legion college. He traveled relentlessly, each time taking $10,000 in cash with no questions asked from his subalterns.
>
> In 1986 he had a daughter by another woman from Acapulco. ...
>
> In the late 1980s he brought Raul together in Rome with Normita, his daughter by Norma Hilda Baños. Wearing his Roman collar, he arranged for Raul to attend a private Mass with John Paul in the Apostolic Palace. ~ Newsweek[641]

Newsweek spins Maciel as a master manipulator who told outrageous lies to his family and deceived his good friend, Pope Saint John Paul II.

However, reading the facts aside from spin it is clear that he not only wielded power but those around him knew exactly who he was and what he did.

Of all the “outrageous lies” (implied by Newsweek) to tell his family, why that he was an operative of the CIA? — Almost certainly because it wasn’t an “outrageous lie”. An actual connection to the CIA is likely given his power in the Catholic Church, his connection to drugs in Mexico and his role as a facilitator of child victims.

By “coincidence”, the devout Roman Catholic Director of the CIA was also a big Maciel donor.

> Even as Maciel siphoned Legion funds[lxxxiv] to support his secret life and shadow families, President Ronald Reagan’s CIA director, William Casey, and his wife made a seven-figure donation for construction of a Legion building in Cheshire, Connecticut, and were memorialized by a plaque.[642]

Casey was as “unaware” of who Marcial Maciel was as was Pope Saint John Paul II; not at all. How the Director of the CIA, a supposed public servant, had “seven figures” available for a donation to a Catholic Church society marred by child sex abuse is another matter entirely.

Indeed, Legionnaires and their laity liaisons — Regnum Christi — are so powerful they are known derisively as “the Millionaires of Christ”.[643]

Although exploiting handicapped children in an orphanage for abuse sets the mark for pedophile priest depravity, Maciel attempted to outdo it by siring a son out of wedlock then raping him.

> His son Raul watched the news on TV in Cuernavaca; several years had passed since he had been heard from, though Raul in subsequent interviews said he never forgot how the man he knew as dad sexually abused him through adolescence, a charge now pending in a civil lawsuit against the Legion in Connecticut.[644]

Maciel maintained a protected status through to his 80’s and the death of Pope Saint John Paul II. By that time, his successor Pope Benedict XVI was required to feign an investigation and subsequent “punishment”. His victims certainly weren’t going to get satisfaction from their respective police, prosecutors and / or judges.

> Not until 2004, when Maciel was 84 and John Paul was dying, did Ratzinger dispatch trusted canon lawyer Charles Scicluna to investigate the allegations. ...
>
> The Legion had a $650 million annual budget and $1 billion in assets by May 2006, when Ratzinger, as Benedict, banished Maciel to "a life of prayer and penitence." The Vatican communiqué did not stipulate what he had done. But Maciel had "more than 20 and less than 100" victims, according to an unnamed Vatican official quoted by John Allen in the National Catholic Reporter*.*
>
> Maciel retired to Jacksonville, Florida, and a house with a pool in a gated community the Legion bought to comply with Rome's penitential order. He died January 30, 2008, surrounded by several priests, his daughter Normita, and her mother, Norma Hilda Baños. Several days later he was buried at a family crypt in his hometown, Cotija de la Paz. ~ Newsweek[645]

There was speculation that Maciel's close relationship with Pope John Paul II would taint or hinder his consideration for Sainthood, but the reverse seems to have been the case: few have been beatified faster.

> In the last week of October, 2011, an Associated Press story under the headline, "Legion of Christ investigation: The cover-up continues", the Italian cardinal appointed by Pope Benedict XVI to clean up the order, Velasio De Paolis, said this about the possibility of another enquiry into other alleged cover-ups within the Legion; "I don't see what good would be served … rather, we would run the risk of finding ourselves in an intrigue with no end … because these are things that are too private for me to go investigating". The implication of his statement is that there is more to be revealed about the secrets of the Legionaries of Christ, and they may well involve Pope John Paul II.
>
> Fr. Maciel was a member of the Vatican's old boy's club and part of an exclusive and charmed inner circle. He had the Holy See's protection, tolerance, and shelter for his criminal actions, right up to, and including the current pope, Benedict XVI. In 2006, and as "punishment" for his perverse life, Benedict XVI ordered the > disgraced Fr. Maciel to live a life of prayer and penance, and at the same time admitted that John Paul II had approved a "false prophet" in promoting Fr. Maciel, who in his dying days, had an exorcist in attendance at his bedside.

>
> The three recipients of the once-secret documents were surprised at the speed with which John Paul II was beatified, considering the pontiff was not only fully aware of Fr. Maciel's criminal conduct, but abetted his crimes. For those unfamiliar with the story, there were numerous calls from Catholics groups and even some cardinals to halt the beatification process until a full review of his record as pope was assessed. However, in Vatican City on Sunday May 1st, 2011, Benedict XVI bestowed the status of "blessed" on his predecessor after the Vatican had determined that John Paul II had performed the necessary miracle for his elevation. In a ghoulish performance, his coffin was disinterred from its resting place of six years and placed on a platform beneath the main altar of St. Peter's for pilgrims to pass in rituals, and express emotions that accompany the passing of a loved one. Amidst widespread opposition, he was beatified only six years after his death, and non-Catholics saw the ceremony as an obscene display of the worship of the dead similar to ancient Pagan tradition. ~ VatiLeaks[646]

A "Legionnaire" is a member of a Roman Legion; a soldier for Rome.

The Legionnaires have been strongly supported by parishes like St. Catherine of Sienna[647]; a locus for Opus Dei Catholics like Antonin Scalia, FBI Director Louis Freeh and 20-year FBI double agent for the Soviet Union, Robert Philip Hanssen.[648]

— Just a coincidence, of course.

Another big donor to the work of Marcial Maciel has been the founder of Blackwater, converted Roman Catholic Erik Prince.[649] More on that in Chapter 27.

Where's Johnny?

In 2005, a political “scandal” brought the story of Johnny Gosch briefly and obliquely to mainstream level; perhaps by design of the Pedocracy.

A “Conservative journalist” with White House credentials was “outed” by Leftist media as being a fraud.

> Last week, Republican activist Bobby Eberle, the man behind the now infamous conservative Web site Talon News, insisted that before hiring “Jeff Gannon” as his White House correspondent, he never looked into Gannon’s background. If true, Eberle probably wishes he had. And the same could be said for the White House officials who bent the rules to make way for Gannon in the press briefing room. There’s new evidence that the Talon reporter, who lobbed softball questions at Bush during press conferences on behalf of a dubious news operation, recently worked as a male escort.
>
> Gannon, whose real name is James Guckert, made headlines last week when he resigned from Talon after days of intensive scrutiny from bloggers. Online critics first raised questions about Guckert’s questionable journalistic methods and his lack of experience (he often cut and pasted White House press releases into his “news” stories), as well as Talon’s lack of independence from Eberle’s purely partisan GOPUSA Web site. Then questions arose about why the Talon reporter was given access to the White House press room after being turned down for Capitol Hill press credentials. The final straw for Guckert came when bloggers revealed associations that Guckert and his Delaware-based company had with a handful of gay-themed male escort services. ...

— Delaware is the home state of United States Senator and Vice President Joseph Biden; also a devout Leftist Roman Catholic. —

> On Monday, John Aravosis posted on his liberal site AmericaBlog.org detailed evidence indicating that not only was Guckert personally involved with the Web sites, but he was also offering his escort services for $200 an hour, or $1,200 a weekend.
>
> Aravosis received on-the-record confirmation, complete with five invoices paid by Delaware’s Bedrock Corp., from the person Guckert > hired to build the gay Web site USMCPT.com, which features X-rated photos. The Web designer also forwarded to Aravosis dozens of unused photos that Guckert sent him when the site was being built. “Each photo looks remarkably like Jeff Gannon,” Aravosis writes.

>
> AmericaBlog also details scores of other gay escort sites featuring photos and personal profiles of Guckert, such as MaleCorps.com, WorkingBoys.net, and MeetLocalMen.com. Guckert’s first site remained live until May 8, 2003, one month after he began covering the White House for Talon. According to Aravosis’ research, Guckert’s escort profile on WorkingBoys.net was still active as of Monday. Aravosis says he contacted Guckert for comment for the story but received none. On Sunday night, Guckert had a two-hour phone conversation with Michelangelo Signorile, who hosts a talk show on Sirius satellite radio. Although much of the conversation was private, according to Signorile, he asked Guckert specifically, and on the record, about his gay escort past. “I’m just not going to address it,” Guckert said. ~ Salon[650]

The Left always has fun with exposing the sexually-perverted underbelly of the pseudo-Right but it quickly leads to the inner workings of the Devil’s Simulation so it never receives the coverage one would expect.

The same is true for a similar scandal in the 1980’s but it, too, was quickly buried as the Reagan / Bush “call boy” story which lead to the “Franklin” Cover-up (more in Chapter 21).

However, “alternative media” did follow up on the Gannon / Guckert / gay escort story.

> In late January a conservative journalist in Washington D.C. was found to have gained access to the White House press pool despite using a fake name, and despite the fact that he once worked as a high-priced homosexual escort.
>
> Jeff Gannon was a White House correspondent for Talon News who regularly attended White House press briefings and at least four press conferences with President George W. Bush. On Jan. 26, 2005, Gannon asked a question of the president that was so friendly and > factually inaccurate that some of his colleagues began looking into his background.

>
> Talon News, it was learned, is a barely disguised tool of the Republican Party, and Gannon's credentials as a journalist consist solely of a training course at the Leadership Broadcast School of Journalism. After two days of training that cost $50, Gannon was officially a graduate of a journalism school and on his way to the White House press pool.
>
> It was soon discovered that Gannon's real name is Jeff Guckert and that he has also gone by the nickname "Bulldog" when listing himself on the Internet as a homosexual escort and personal trainer charging $200 per hour for his "discreet" services.
>
> Gannon was removed from the White House and resigned from Talon News on Feb. 8 "Gannongate" quickly became the presidential scandal of the hour, though the story faded from public view as politicians and the media eagerly turned their attention to such pressing matters as steroids in baseball and the Terri Schiavo[lxxxv] situation.

— "Christian Conservative" politicians hiring out the services of sodomites is nothing much of a story, anyway. —

> But before long, Internet bloggers had picked up the story and began to think back to the administration of President Bush's father, which was rocked by a scandal that allegedly involved a high-level official giving private, late-night tours of the White House to teenage, male prostitutes. The New York Times and the Washington Post both wrote about the story and the eventual death of Washington lobbyist Craig Spence, who reportedly arranged the visits. Spence, it has been suggested, was preparing to admit publicly that he was using the teenage boys to blackmail high-powered politicians in the beltway. He committed suicide before he had the opportunity to do so. ...
>
> Private investigator Sherman H. Skolnick posted a story about the Gannon debacle on www.rense.com, a site known for its conspiracy theories, and publicly stated on Feb. 19 that Gannon is Johnny Gosch.

> Andy Stephenson, a blogger from Seattle familiar with the details of the Johnny Gosch case and the child sex rings in Nebraska detailed in the Book, "The Franklin Cover-Up," began, with a group of other writers and investigators, to ponder the claim. They looked at markings on Gannon's body and compared them to those reported on Johnny Gosch. They considered the lack of personal information about Gannon's early years. They considered that Johnny was alleged to have been used as a gay prostitute for blackmail purposes. They considered that the high-powered people alleged to have kidnapped and brainwashed children as part of the government's Monarch Project and MK-Ultra program, including Johnny, did so to use them in a variety of ways to advance their own agendas. And they contacted Noreen Gosch and discussed the idea with her — the first she'd heard of the theory — and they, too, came to the conclusion that Jeff Gannon is none other than Johnny Gosch.
>
> The Internet has been abuzz with the theory ever since. And, in a way, it makes perfect sense. You've got a kid abducted and brainwashed into doing the bidding of government officials as part of top-secret mind-control programs, so now that he's older why not put him into the White House to soften press briefings to make the president look better? The suggestion from many is that Gannon is a Monarch Program child-turned-adult operative. ~ Pointblank Des Moines[651]

Alternative media then received "spokesmen" for the issue: gatekeepers who carefully steered the conversation clear of Roman implications. These included men like Nebraska State Senator John DeCamp (a Roman Catholic seminarian and former aid to CIA Director William Colby, the “warrior monk” — also a devout Roman Catholic). Also making the rounds was Theodore L. “Ted” Gunderson, former FBI Special Agent in charge of the high-profile Los Angeles office. Gunderson helped destroy the creditability of child sex-slave trafficking with his appearance alongside “Satanist” Michael Aquino (who attained Lieutenant Colonel in the United States Army, ludicrously waxed “horned” eyebrows and all) for the comic relief that was daytime television and the Geraldo Rivera show. Geraldo is a Puerto Rican Roman Catholic.

Another is retired Jewish NYPD Detective James “Jim” Rothstein.

Each played their part in blaming nebulous and nefarious “Satanists” with clownish pawns like Colonel Aquino portraying one.

Rothstein “investigated” the disappearance of Johnny Gosch and provided a “confidential report” for Noreen which she posted on her web site “The Johnny Gosch Foundation”.[652]

As a dutiful “Papal Court Jew”, Rothstein covered for his masters by claiming that the CIA’s James Jesus Angleton “compromised” the Vatican and allowed pedophiles to “get a foothold” there.

If ever there was a man who embodied the fraud of needless war and proved its genesis was in Rome, it was James Jesus Angleton.

Angleton held the vital position of Chief of Counterintelligence for the critical Cold War decades of 1954 to 1974. From there, he kept those in the CIA who were serious about their work cowering in fear from the seeming paranoia of his persecutions while devastating moles like MI6's Harold Adrian Russell "Kim" Philby — a friend of Angleton's — sent reams of sensitive information to the Soviets.

> Angleton, in his relentless pursuit of Soviet agents, questioned the loyalty of many of the agency's best analysts of Soviet affairs, and ruined the careers of more than a few. The CIA only recently completed the painful business of restoring the reputation of those Angleton besmirched.
>
> During Angleton's tenure as chief of counterintelligence from 1954-74, the CIA's ability to decipher the politics and military strategy of the Soviet Union was often crippled by his byzantine investigations.
>
> Oddly, Angleton insisted that he never suspected Kim Philby, the British intelligence officer who provided Moscow with a stream of British and American secrets while a friend and close associate of Angleton. ~ New York Times[653]

In a similar "PsyOp" (Psychological Operation), the Leftist magazine Mother Jones also claimed the CIA manipulated the hapless Vatican but, in the process, admitted the shocking revelations that Angleton was a Knight of Malta, was in position to be screened for his treasonous future by working in Rome during World War II and had ran the supposedly "non-existent" Vatican and Israel Desks for "the Company".[lxxxvi]

> The SMOM had given a different prestigious award in 1946 to another high-level CIA operative, James Jesus Angleton. "It had to do with counterintelligence," Angleton told Mother Jones*, when asked why he was chosen for such a distinction. During World War II, Angleton was head of the Rome station of the OSS. Later, on his return to Washington, he ran what was tantamount to the "Vatican desk" for the CIA. According to Angleton, the agency does not have a Vatican desk. Nor does it have an Israel desk, for that matter, yet Angleton also covered that area. The extreme sensitivity associated with Israel and the Vatican required that work relating to them be buried among Angleton's counterintelligence staff, which was well-suited for such assignments.*[654]

Angleton's work on the unacknowledged "Israel Desk" shows the Zionist quagmire is cunningly woven by Rome through Western Intelligence.

"Jesus" Angleton is also reputed by at least one Vatican insider to have directly fed information to the KGB resulting in the death of agents working in Russia.[655]

In his "Confidential Report", Detective Rothstein admitted that the CIA was involved in commercial-grade pedophilia.

> A notorious homosexual pedophile and procurer ... Ben Rose was arrested after an investigation by the New York Police Department at his residence on St. Mark's Place in New York City during the summer of 1972. At the time of the arrest, he had in his possession three young boy ages 14-15 years, who had been transported by him from Baltimore to New York City for the specific purpose of sexual exploitation.

— Baltimore is a city as openly-controlled by the Catholic Church as Boston. It was founded in honor of Cecil Calvert, 2nd Baron Baltimore whose Roman Catholic father, George Calvert secured the colony of Maryland for the Vatican. —

> Upon his arrest, he agreed to cooperate with the New York City Police Department and an investigation was begun under the code name GAFF.[lxxxvii] This investigation uncovered the commercial part of pedophilia and child abuse.
>
> The commercial group includes child pornography, prostitution, pimping, extortion, and human intelligence. Child pornography, prostitution, and pimping are well organized and promoted throughout the pedophile community. Because of Ben Rose's cooperation with investigators, many of the rumors and information under investigation were verified. He informed the New York City Detectives that in November of 1971, three boys, ages 14-15 years, were sexually abused and then murdered in his apartment on East 64th Street in New York City by three men he identified as Dr. (name deleted) (a surgeon), (name deleted) (OPEC), and (name deleted) (CIA). The bodies were > then transported to Connecticut by car and then buried on a farm. Under the GAFF investigation these murders were to be assigned to other investigators in the New York City Police Department, but then disappeared in the hierarchy of the Department.

>
> A second investigation conducted in the mid 1970's, by the Police Department during which thirteen homicides, plus the murder of these 14-15 year old boys at Ben Rose's apartment, were investigated under the code name OPERATION TOGETHER. This investigation was under the command of Deputy Inspector John Colin. At a critical point in the investigation, it was stopped. Inspector Colin was demoted and forced into retirement.
>
> The third investigation was done by the New York State Select Committee on Crime. This Committee served subpoenas on both (name deleted) and (name deleted). When (name deleted) was served with the subpoena and questioned by the detectives, he informed them that because he worked for the CIA, the subpoena would be quashed, invoking National Security. He was correct, because before the detectives returned to their offices, the subpoena was withdrawn. One wonders what part of the National Security Act allows the murder of children.

How is it that America's international intelligence agency should be her most heinous enemy, kidnapping her children off the street to torture, rape, abuse and sell them? — Because the CIA doesn't work for the American people, it works for Rome and serves the Devil's Simulation.

Rothstein also admitted that Cardinal Francis Joseph Spellman (1889 – 1967) was an arch pedophile who remained free during his lifetime to rape children at will, thanks to protection from Roman Catholics in New York State government and law enforcement.

> ...from the days of Cardinal Spellman (nicknamed "NELLIE", a known pedophile) in New York City to the present, no scandals have been made public. There is no way that these hidden scandals will be made public as long as (name deleted) or someone like him is the District Attorney in New York City. Any District Attorney or Prosecutor who > routinely covers up these crimes against children by politically connected pedophiles, assures these crimes against children will remain hidden from the public.

This bears out our contention that Cardinals and Bishops who protect pedophile priests are, themselves, child predators who remain protected and anonymous in their crimes. Neither "mainstream" media, "alternative" media, nor any government institution is allowed to bring them down or even out their status.

New York has always been owned by either Roman Catholics or "Papal Court Jews" and she has suffered for it. On the heels of the Sandy Hook false flag in Connecticut, far-Left Catholic Governor of New York, Andrew Cuomo (son of Leftist Catholic Governor of New York Mario Cuomo), over-nighted a bill which destroyed what was left of New York gun rights. In violation of the New York State Constitution, Cuomo forced his inversely-named SAFE Act through the legislature in a closed door session without any committee hearings. In hours it was passed and Cuomo immediately signed it in a bold show of lawless Leftist Catholic tyranny. Cuomo was required by the Constitution of New York to allow law-makers and citizens three days to examine proposed legislation and he simply ignored the requirement. To date, no citizen, lawyer or advocacy group (such as the highly-publicized "National Rifle Association") has attempted to bring this outrage into court where only the most corrupt and debased judge would dare to uphold it.

Detective Rothstein also acknowledged that the Pedocracy takes care of its own.

> In most investigations into pedophilia and child abuse, the investigators, federal and local, will initially do an honest and in-depth investigation, but when a certain level of progress is attained, the investigations are stopped or compromised. Again one asks the question, "Why is this?" To this date there is no high profile case that has ever been investigated to the fullest extent and then prosecuted in the court of the United States. Why? Three examples of this can be found in the following cases: a) The Finders – Florida and Washington > D.C.; b) Franklin Cover-up – Nebraska; c) St. Johns Abbey – Minnesota.

>
> In segments of the family, homosexual, commercial, serial killer, and the occult, the pedophile and child abuser feel that they are above the law. They believe that because of their contacts, position in society, or the secrecy of their actions, if caught, they can use these connections to cover-up their criminal activities. In most cases this is true and known throughout the pedophile subculture.

High-profile pedophiles even use this protection as validation and vindication.

In 2017, four men accused Seattle Mayor Ed Murray of sexually abusing them when they were boys. One of the men was in Murray’s care as a foster child. Murray is an overt “married” homosexual and remains tightly tied to the Catholic Church.[656] He arrogantly used lack of criminal prosecution as the reason why he refused to step down as Mayor in light of the accusations.[657] How an overt homosexual is able to care for foster children is, itself, a heinous crime of the Pedocracy.[lxxxviii]

For a high-profile big-city Mayor, Ed Murray’s past is apparently “hands off” to the “secular” media. However, if one digs deep enough, one finds that, like California’s once-and-future Governor Jerry “Moonbeam” Brown, Ed Murray was trained in a Jesuit seminary.[658],[659],[lxxxix] Depressed Independent investigative reporter Tim Schmitt of the now-defunct news outlet Pointblank Des Moines linked the apparent suicide of famed journalist Hunter Stockton Thompson to the "outing" of White House press reporter "Jeff Gannon", a.k.a. "James Guckert" and supposedly a.k.a. John Gosch, Jr.

> Shortly after the theory was presented, Gannon posted an article titled "Hiding in Plain Sight," and has posted a column entitled "Fear and Loathing in the Press Room," which some suggest is a reference to the recently deceased Hunter S. Thompson, who also was accused of involvement in pedophile, child slavery rings in the 1980s ...
>
> Others suggest that his name itself is a clue to his real identity. Both Jeff Gannon and James Guckert share the same initials as Johnny Gosch. Furthermore, shortly after Johnny's disappearance, Noreen made a personal plea to the editor of The Des Moines Register, Johnny's employer. The editor printed her letter in the paper and mocked it by allowing the police department to dissect it. The editor's name was James Gannon. ...
>
> The Gannon/Gosch connection was first made public early in the morning on Feb. 20. Later that same day, Hunter S. Thompson was found dead in his home, the victim of an apparent self-inflicted gunshot.
>
> Few people would ever have thought to connect Thompson and Gosch, but those familiar with the tales of child abuse and pedophilia documented in "The Franklin Cover-Up," a book first released in 1994 by former Neb. State Sen. John DeCamp, understand the association.
>
> In his book, DeCamp relates many interviews and discussions with Paul Bonacci, the young man who claims to have been involved with the kidnapping of Johnny Gosch. Bonacci told horrific tales of being forced into sex with adults and other children. In one case he recalls being flown into Nevada with another young boy whom he did not know. They took on another passenger there and headed to a secluded > location where Bonacci says he was forced to have sex with the younger boy. The young boy, Bonacci claims in this book, was also forced to have sex with adult males, who then killed the boy with a gunshot to the head. Bonacci says he was then forced to have sex with the corpse.

>
> The passenger they took on in Nevada filmed the entire thing, and Bonacci recalled that his name was Hunter Thompson.[660]

Thompson was an anti-American muck-raker who was an important part of Jesuit "counter-culture". He disguised his yellow journalism with a new name: "gonzo journalism". However, raw, emotion-filled diatribe is the same it has always been before or since: propaganda.

As a result of being an active agent for the Devil's Simulation, Thompson was lionized by fellow deviants in Hollywood.

> The work he remains best known for, Fear and Loathing in Las Vegas: A Savage Journey to the Heart of the American Dream (1971), constitutes a rumination on the failure of the 1960s counterculture movement. It was first serialized in Rolling Stone*, a magazine with which Thompson would be long associated, and was released as a film starring Johnny Depp and Benicio del Toro and directed by Terry Gilliam in 1998. ...*
>
> In accordance with his wishes, his ashes were fired out of a cannon in a ceremony funded by his friend Johnny Depp and attended by friends including then-Senator John Kerry[xc] and Jack Nicholson. ~ Wikipedia[661]

Schmitt also connected the CIA to Johnny Gosch.

> George Paul Bishop (often known just as Paul Bishop) claimed he was a "CIA asset" and arrived in Des Moines in July of 1984 to offer his assistance to the Goschs. Before he left, he provided, through his investigation, a detailed map of the kidnapping scene. Bishop, according to Noreen's book, often called the Gosch home from the Washington D.C. office of Sen. Charles Grassley, with whom Noreen had worked on Johnny's case.

> “Many times Paul Bishop would call me from Sen. Grassley’s office and, when finished speaking with me, he would hand the phone to one of Grassley’s aides who I was familiar with,” Noreen recalled in her book, published in 2000. “That convinced me Paul was an accepted visitor on the Hill in Washington.”
>
> Based on this, Noreen believed that Bishop was responsible for securing her invitation to testify before Sen. Arlan Specter’s Hearing on Organized Crime and its Relationship to Kidnapping at the U.S. Capitol. Bishop, in fact, picked Noreen up from her D.C. hotel and accompanied her to the hearings.
>
> Bishop became close to Noreen, even referring to her as “Mom,” but suddenly, in 1985, he disappeared from the scene. The phone number he’d left was no longer valid and no one knew how to contact him. No one had seen or heard from him in almost 20 years, until he was suddenly arrested on Feb. 4 of this year in Virginia, after police allegedly found an explicit video of a 16-year-old boy in his home.
>
> Detectives searched Bishop’s home and found the tape after receiving a complaint that he was allowing teenage boys to drink and use drugs on the premises.
>
> Noreen wonders now if Bishop was on the wrong side of Johnny’s case all along. Was he involved in the kidnapping and merely running a smokescreen at the time to prevent discovery? Was his recent arrest an effort to keep him quiet about the larger story? A threat? ...
>
> Either way, Bishop seemed to know a lot about Johnny’s disappearance in 1982, and his sudden reappearance on the scene coinciding with the outing of Jeff Gannon [and] the death of Thompson ... is too much of a coincidence for some to accept.[662]

From its founding through today, the CIA has been so overtly Catholic that the Catholic Herald sheepishly admitted to its nickname “the Catholic Intelligence Agency”, or alternatively “Catholics In Action”.[663]

Many of its Directors have been devout Catholics (most of them, Jesuit trained or mentored) and Knights for the Vatican; OSS founder William Donovan, the CIA's first Director Walter Bedell Smith, John McCone, William Colby, William Casey, Michael Hayden, Leon Panetta and John Brennan. Many more can be found in key positions and those who aren't overt Catholics are still tied to the Church. They have engineered America's most grievous treasons. Examples include Allen Dulles and the murder of sitting Jesuit-trained Roman Catholic President John F. Kennedy or George Tenet and 9/11. Dulles was the brother of John Foster Dulles, Kennedy's Secretary of State who later committed suicide under odd circumstances. John's son, Allen's nephew, Avery Dulles, subsequently became one of the most powerful Jesuit Cardinals in the United States. This is in spite of the claim that the Dulles family was the same religion that married the Catholic homosexual pedophile Mayor of Seattle Ed Murray; Episcopalian.

"Orthodox" George Tenet was trained by the Jesuits at Georgetown. Even if the ludicrous official story of 9/11 was true, Tenet should have been dragged from office in disgrace and prosecuted for criminal negligence that caused the death of over 3,000 Americans and billions of dollars of damage resulting in a modern Police State.[xci] Instead, President George W. Bush (Yale Skull and Bones '68), son of President George H. W. Bush (Yale Skull and Bones '48) gave him the highest civilian honor, the Medal of Freedom.

Perhaps what got John F. Kennedy slaughtered while sitting next to his wife in Dallas more than anything else was his threat to break the CIA into a thousand pieces and scatter it to the wind.[664]

Such a job was not his to accomplish. It will belong to others more determined and righteous, perhaps enraged at the full scope of the Catholic Intelligence Agency’s crimes against the American people in specific and humanity as a whole.

Kennedy’s serial adulteries may have played a critical role in his murder. Just one year before he was killed, his wife Jackie had a private audience with John XXIII. Did she ask for intervention but not know she had made a deal with the devil she would come to horribly regret?

Legendary CIA operative Everett Howard Hunt confessed that the tactical organizer of Kennedy’s assassination was CIA Policy Chief Cord Meyer[665] — a friend and associate of James Jesus Angleton. Meyer had been humiliated when one of Kennedy’s many sexual conquests was his wife, Mary Pinchot Meyer.

She was later murdered on the campus of Georgetown by what witnesses thought was a Professor at the Jesuit college; a “Vatican assassin”.

Chapter 17

In The Heart Of The Beast

22 June 1983: 15 year old Emanuela Orlandi is kidnapped off the streets of Rome. She is never heard from nor seen again.

Not only is the Orlandi family devoutly Roman Catholic, they were citizens of the sovereign city-state that is the Vatican.

To say such an honor was exceptional would be an understatement. There are never more than 500 Vatican citizens at one time.[666]

Her father, Ercole, was a lay employee who helped organize Vatican functions.

Despite this, or maybe because of it, Emanuela was specifically targeted for her fate.

> The teenager, the fourth of five children in a devoutly Catholic family, was enticed to meet her abductors with the offer of some work distributing leaflets at a fashion show for Avon cosmetics.
>
> In reality, the Avon job did not exist. No one has ever been convicted of her disappearance and no body has ever been found. ~ Mail[667]

11 days after her disappearance, Karol Józef "Pope Saint John Paul II" Wojtyła made a public appeal for Emanuela's "speedy return".

From the kidnapping in 1983 until 2015, the Vatican has refused to co-operate with authorities; no interviews or investigations were allowed.

> In 1997 the enquiries were halted – they were useless as the Vatican refused to cooperate with the Italian investigators.[668]

As a sovereign city-state, it was a stance that was unassailable by any Italian official who dared try.

Since they were Vatican citizens, the Orlandis had access to Papal Mass. In 2013, after their new Jesuit Pope Francis, Jorge Mario Bergoglio gave such a Mass, he shook the hand of Emanuela's mother, Maria, and told her, "Emanuela is in Heaven." Proving this wasn't "just something nice to say", when queried further, Francis doubled-down.

> Her brother Pietro, surprised, told the Pope: "Until there is proof to the contrary, I live in hope that she's alive. And I hope you will help me find the truth."
>
> But the Pope repeated: "She's in heaven."
>
> Since then, Pietro says, he has repeatedly tried to get an explanation from the Vatican but has not received a reply. "I want to understand if she is dead or alive. He says she's dead now? How does he know?" he said.
>
> The truth "must come from the Vatican," he said. "She was a Vatican citizen. But they have never collaborated with investigators. They have always obstructed the investigation. They have behaved in a way that is not Christian."
>
> A month after Emanuela went missing, he was told of a memo from the Italian Prime Minister's office to the Vatican recommending that they "do not — with the Orlandi's case — open a Pandora's Box that would be difficult to close".
>
> He said now: "It must be a secret that weighs heavily on the church. I think that the case has been closed after 32 years because they still don't want to open the Pandora's Box."

> Pietro claims a monsignor told him that John Paul II had made Emanuela's disappearance an official pontifical secret, "an order that no one in the Vatican would dare break".[669]

Then, in 2015, the matter of Vatican refusal to co-operate was made mute by a helpful Italian judiciary.

> But now judges in Italy have controversially closed the decades-old case in what will seemingly remain one of the country's greatest unsolved mysteries.
>
> Despite fierce opposition from the Orlandi family, investigators said there was not enough evidence to go to trial.[670]

Outlandish accusations from 1983 through today have been thrown out from "secular" media in smokescreen fashion. Everyone from the mafia to Turkish assassins have been blamed.

Bolstering the "Turkish assassins" theory has been the Vatican, itself, claiming said assassins have called with threats, acknowledging they took the young girl. This remains unproven as Vatican officials refuse to turn over recordings of those conversations supposedly in the city-state's possession.

The story then received a bump from an unlikely source.

> Italian newspapers received letters from a group calling itself the Turkish Anti-Christian Liberation Front demanding Agca's release.
>
> But investigators later found that the real source of these letters was the Stasi the East German Intelligence Service.[671]

The Stasi has not been known for its "kindler, gentler" helpful side. It is a connection which proves how the Cold War was as much a Roman fabrication as the previous war, World War II. Both had identical priorities. The top of that priority list was to punish the home of Martin Luther — Germany in general and East Germany in specific.

Another surprising source lent credence to the "Turkish assassins" theory; Emanuela's father, Ercole. Was he somehow complicit?

Whatever Orlandi knew about the disappearance of his daughter he took with him to an early grave in 2004.

John Paul II's supposed would-be assassin in 1981, Mehmet Ali Agca (a Turk), had been held in a Vatican prison for almost 20 years and then released. Claims that his imprisonment was the cause for Emanuela's kidnapping were proven fraudulent.

Agca, himself, stated that he had inside information regarding her disappearance and put extreme effort into being heard.

> Last December [2014] he drove across the Balkans to Rome and demanded to be interviewed by investigators on the Orlandi case.
>
> To Pietro's disappointment [Emanuela's brother] he was swiftly deported and his testimony was not taken.[672]

It certainly seemed that Italian authorities were in as little a hurry as the Vatican to uncover the truth about Emanuela's disappearance.

But another man with inside information was able to make a statement.

In 2012, 85 year-old Father Gabriel Amorth, appointed by John Paul II as the Vatican's chief exorcist, made some astounding assertions.

> Father Amorth, in an interview with La Stampa newspaper, said: "This was a crime with a sexual motive."
>
> "It has already previously been stated by (deceased) monsignor Simeone Duca, an archivist at the Vatican, who was asked to recruit girls for parties with the help of the Vatican gendarmes."
>
> "I believe Emanuela ended up in this circle. I have never believed in the international theory (overseas kidnappers). I have motives to believe that this was just a case of sexual exploitation."
>
> "It led to the murder and then the hiding of her body. Also involved are diplomatic staff from a foreign embassy to the Holy See." ~ Mail[673]

Since its re-birth, Rome has never done its own dirty work and, in the case of the kidnapping of Emanuela, Father Amorth said the Vatican Police put the literal "black bag" over her head.

> “Parties were organised, with a Vatican gendarme acting as the ‘recruiter’ of the girls.” ~ Telegraph[674]

Amorth was then mocked by media like the Daily Mail for decrying the Satanic influences behind cultural trends such as Yoga and the Harry Potter craze of books and movies. If Father Amorth ever peruses the Mail online, we’re sure the pornographic pop-culture sidebar would earn it a similar condemnation. Amorth’s claims strike a chord with “fundamentalist” Protestant Christians and add to the priest’s credibility.

The organized crime explanation was as convoluted and outrageous as the Turkish assassins story but with threads of truth to make it believable (truth mixed with lies).

> Then in 2005...
>
> A former member of the right-wing crime syndicate Banda della Magliana, which terrorised Rome in the 1970s and 80s, claimed that the gang had kidnapped Emanuela.
>
> The group was laundering its profits of their robbery, kidnap and extortion through the Banco Ambrosiano, a bank closely tied to the Vatican’s own bank, Antonio Mancini claimed.
>
> But the Banco Ambrosiano collapsed in 1982 and its head Roberto Calvi was found hanging from London’s Blackfriars Bridge.
>
> The gang leader, Enrico “Renatino” de Pedis wanted to retrieve the money and used Emanuela to blackmail the Vatican, he claimed.
>
> The claim was corroborated by de Pedis’ former lover, Sabrina Minardi, who told prosecutors that she had seen Emanuela’s dead body thrown into a cement mixer in November 1983.
>
> Emanuela was initially taken to a house on the seaside, then an apartment with a vast underground cavity, on the Gianicolo hill near the Vatican, she said. She was then entrusted to a priest.
>
> High level Vatican insiders, including the head of its bank, Archbishop Paul Marcinkus were involved in the plot, she claimed.

> Minardi abused cocaine for years and parts of her account are clearly wrong.[675]

In 1990, a rival gang is said to have gunned down de Pedis in Rome. He was a facilitator in the trafficking of drugs and sex slaves. As a result, he was given special treatment by the Vatican and honored with the ancient, pagan ritual of being interned in a place of worship.

Every Cathedral or Basilica has the bones of the dead beneath the feet of the worshippers; the more famous the Cathedral, the more famous the dead body / bodies.

> After a tip off, it emerged that the crime boss had been given a secret grave in the Basilica of Sant Apolinare, attached to the very building where Emanuela had her music lessons.
>
> In 2012 investigators opened his diamond-encrusted tomb, and amid the stench of death found additional human remains, including the skull of a young girl.
>
> The macabre mystery could finally be solved, it seemed. But DNA tests showed that the remains did not belong to Emanuela.
>
> The prosecutor said that "high up people in the Vatican knew what happened and should be questioned".
>
> But following the statement the new chief prosecutor took over the case. Giancarlo Capaldo was demoted to deputy. ~ Mail[676]

Besides the fact that it was the building next to where Emaunela was headed for her flute lesson the day she disappeared, the Basilica of Sant'Apolinare has an important derivation.

> The warmest lead in the case came as long ago as 2005, when an anonymous caller to the television programme Who Has Seen? alleged that Emanuela had been seized at the behest of Cardinal Ugo Poletti, Vicar-General of Rome, in 1983. The motive was, it was hinted, sexual – but ... Cardinal Poletti died in 1997 ... . However, it was he who, in 1990, agreed to the burial of de Pedis in the Basilica of

> Sant'Apollinaire, an Opus Dei church usually reserved for the burial of senior clerics. ~ Telegraph[677]

It would not be the last time the ultra-pious sect "Opus Dei" would be implicated in child sex slave trafficking.

Chapter 18

Milk Carton Kids

10 February 1984: 10 year old Kevin Andrew Collins is abducted coming home from school. He was never seen again. [xcii]

By 1984, the Pedocracy’s voracious appetite for children was finally drawing attention to its existence. It needed to calm rising fears with the appearance of action. Police officers, prosecutors and judges certainly weren’t going to slow down the Devil’s Simulation. They would need cover, as well.

The propaganda was promoted that they were unable to do their jobs; that they needed civilian “eyes and ears”. Thus was born the “milk carton kids”. It was a push that was as short-lived as it was fruitless. Not a single child placed on a milk carton was found via citizen awareness giving a tip to law enforcement (those that actually did their jobs). As it quickly died off, the spin was launched that the program created “public awareness” and, here, it was lauded as a great success. In fact, the shocking numbers of missing children created the “public awareness”.

In 2013, ABC admitted — According to the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, roughly 800,000 children are reported missing each year in the United States — that's roughly 2,000 per day.[678]

This number is only a fraction of the true figures because children abused in orphanages, foster homes or detention centers are kept "off the books".

— And that's just for the United States of America.

Imagine how many more children are taken, abused, tortured and murdered in countries with less information-sharing capabilities.

But to make the milk carton propaganda work, a "poster child" was needed.

That was 10 year-old Kevin Andrew Collins of San Francisco.

Why Kevin? Because the Collins family were devout Roman Catholics and the school Kevin was kidnapped coming home from was Jesuit St. Agnes.

David and Ann Collins were good Catholics who strictly obeyed Rome's twisted and perverse restrictions against birth control[xciii]: Kevin had 8 other brothers and sisters.

The school and Cathedral of the Jesuits of St. Agnes are located on "Masonic Street" in San Francisco. There the Jesuits control thoroughly and openly as they do in Chicago, Baltimore or Boston. Public-sounding "San Francisco University" is actually a Jesuit school and one of its past Presidents, Father Stephen J. Privett, S.J. was the personal mentor of radical Leftist and former House Speaker, Nancy Pelosi. Pelosi's far-Left views on abortion and homosexuality don't bother the Jesuits at all. In fact, that's where they come from.

At this writing, Pelosi has been a United States Representative for over forty years (remember, this requires her to be re-elected every two years).

In 2015, secretly Roman Catholic LifeSiteNews opined — Pelosi brought her grandchildren to see her receive an award from the Gay and Lesbian Victory Fund, to show the young, impressionable children that "marriage equality[xciv] is important."

> In an interview with Thomas Roberts on MSNBC, Pelosi said she took the children to the Gay and Lesbian Victory Fund gala because "it's really important to see what the practice of our faith is."

> Pelosi, who described herself as a faithful Christian and "mainstream Catholic," said her pre-adolescent grandchildren needed to see and be present at a gay and lesbian celebration in order "to give them the image that we have for all people," meaning the image the Catholic Church has for all.[679]

Sadly, Pelosi is perfectly accurate in her assessment.

Was the author (Fr. Mark Hodges) really that shocked? More likely, he was simply stirring the impotent Right as part of the Hegelian dialectic.

The Catholic far-Left has long held a position of honor within the Church. Pelosi, herself, (along with another far-Left 40-year + agent of Roman insurgency, former United States Senator, former United States Vice President Joseph Biden, Jr.) personally attended Jorge Mario Bergoglio's inaugural Mass as Rome's first Jesuit Pope.[680]

St. Agnes has been an epicenter of Jesuit insurgency since its founding in the 19th century.

> San Francisco's Haight Ashbury neighborhood wears its 1960s countercultural history as a badge of honor. Double-decker tour buses grind up and down Haight Street throughout the day, pointing out local landmarks: the former home of the members of the Grateful Dead, the Haight Ashbury Free Clinic, the plethora of tie-dye clothing stores and smoke shops and the corner of Haight and Ashbury itself, now home to a Ben and Jerry's ice cream store. ...
>
> St. Agnes Catholic Church was established in 1893. ... Its current pastor, Ray Allender, S.J., is a San Francisco native who grew up in the neighborhood. Like the city that surrounds it, St. Agnes prides itself on its inclusiveness; its website describes the parish as "Inclusive, Welcoming and Jesuit." ... The parish is home to a large number of graduates of Jesuit colleges and has been active in welcoming L.G.B.T. Catholics, who, Father Allender says, are leaders in the church community.
>
> Mass at St. Agnes on a Sunday morning is packed. ~ America Magazine (a Jesuit publication)[681],[xcv]

Despite spin claiming they “joined in” the “counter-culture”, the truth is the Jesuits spawned the “counter-culture”.

> Cultural icons like Aldus Huxley and Timothy Leary encouraged Americans to “turn on, tune in, drop out” with LSD.
>
> — That’s Holy Cross Jesuit-educated Catholic Irishman Timothy Francis Leary.[1497] ~ Illuminati Unmasked[682]

It was later learned that Leary was receiving a United States taxpayer stipend courtesy of the Central Intelligence Agency for his efforts to turn America’s children into uneducated, dope-addicted wrecks.[683]

Recall the Herald’s admonition that a common insider nickname for the CIA is “Catholics In Action”.

Thanks to Rome’s control of all American institutions, the Jesuits can proudly flaunt their lawlessness agenda of chaos and spin it as “compassion”.

> It is the city’s remaining Latino population that is the focus of St. Agnes’s work right now. On Jan. 19, the day before the presidential inauguration, St. Agnes became the United States’ first Jesuit parish to declare itself a sanctuary church. According to Natalie Terry, director of St. Agnes’s Ignatian Spiritual Life Center, the decision came after a period of discernment. Sister Laetitia Bordes, a St. Agnes parishioner ... says that people need a greater understanding of the roots of immigration in order to overcome the stereotyping of undocumented people as “illegals.”[684]

Today in America, Jesuit parishes can openly declare their refusal to obey the law because secret Catholic agents have been doing so for generations and keeping America’s borders open to millions of Catholic aliens is a top priority.

Unfortunately for the Collins family, they were right in the middle of it. It surely consoled them little to have Kevin be given the infamy of national recognition as America’s first “milk carton child”.

Newsweek, a subsidiary of Knight of Malta Henry Luce's Time, aided the push to make the young Jesuit-trained Catholic child the "poster boy" for the Eaters of Children and put Kevin's face on the March 19th, 1984 cover.

The efforts to find Kevin ended there.

30 years later (in 2013), the San Francisco Police Department added insult to injury by claiming they finally had a "person of interest" in Kevin's disappearance; a protected pedophile named Daniel Therrien who had died 5 years previously.

> He was a man of many names and police say that's why they had such a tough time investigating him. He had at least five different aliases. "On April 16, 1981, Jackson was arrested under the name Wayne Jackson, in the Fisherman's Wharf area in San Francisco, for kidnapping and lewd acts on a child," said Lt. Tim Plyer said. ...
>
> "For the individual with five names who we now know had a history of molesting young boys," said Kevin's brother, Stephen Collins. "It seems like he should have been a stronger suspect back then."
>
> ABC7 News learned Wednesday that at the time, police knew about the Fisherman's Wharf arrest which is why they questioned Therrien and searched his home. ...
>
> "They said he was a person of interest in '84," said Kevin's aunt, Jackie Deasy. "Why didn't they connect that with the arrest made in 1981? Alias or no alias, they'd have fingerprints." ~ ABC7[685]

The offensive Keystone Cop routine had only one real effect: to rip scabs off old wounds for those who loved Kevin. Given the fact that these were (are) the same people who routinely rape, torture and murder the innocent and the vulnerable (like Kevin) it may very well have been their sick intent.

The San Francisco Police Department is not known for its professionalism but it is known for its "inclusivity".

In 2007, SFPD proudly made "history" by having its female Police Chief, Heather Fong, joined by a transgender woman, Theresa Sparks, as the new Police Commissioner.

Theresa Sparks lives as an elegant older woman, following a sex change operation. She is the first transgender president of a police commission.

“So there’s never, ever been a president of any commission in San Francisco who’s transgender,” Sparks said. “So that’s really significant, particularly since it’s the Police Commission.”

The pay is nominal, with commissioners receiving just $42.00 per meeting. Luckily, Sparks has a day job.

“I’m the president of Good Vibrations, which is a women-focused adult erotic store,” she said. ~ KCBS 740AM[686]

Chapter 19

“Satanic Panic”

July 1984: A three year-old girl is brought to the emergency room with a lacerated vagina. When asked what happened, she said that workers at her West Point military day care center hurt her.

No arrests were made.

Soon, complaints from other parents about their children followed. There were both physical and psychological injuries that they had received under Army care. Yet, by October, there still was no effort by the military or local law enforcement to set things right.

> No one has been arrested in the two- month-old inquiry into charges that at least 2 and as many as 11 children at the West Point Child Development Center may have been abused. ~ New York Times[687]

Once again, parents were forced to look at civil redress for the unbelievably heinous crimes committed against their children — children of men in the service of their country.

> A Newburgh lawyer, William E. Crain, said yesterday that seven families had contacted him with allegations that their children had been abused at the center. Besides these seven children, he said, child and adult witnesses had provided him with accounts that at least four other children had been abused there.
>
> Six of these 11 children were alleged to have been sexually abused, three were subjected to “excessive corporal punishment” and two were said to have been burned, bruised or otherwise physically abused, Mr. Crain said.
>
> Mr. Crain said the children range in age from 13 months to 3 1/2 years, and that much of the evidence of abuse is physical. He said > some of the allegations were based on interviews with children, two of whom made statements that were videotaped by a hidden camera.

>
> Last week, Mr. Crain asked a Federal Court in Manhattan to let him take sworn statements from suspects and supervisors at the center and an F.B.I. agent in the case. He said families of the abused children had turned to him after their complaints had been rebuffed by the center and by Army and F.B.I. officials, who told them the two suspended aides had passed lie detector tests.[688]

Except, in the case of military day care outrages, it was a double injustice: the monsters who committed the crimes against the children of service members weren't prosecuted and the taxpayers footed the bill for the "hush money".

> Seven years have passed since she was sexually abused at West Point's child-care center. Yet today, the 10-year-old girl can't go to the bathroom without her mother waiting by the door.
>
> The girl – who was 3 when West Point child-care workers were accused of sexually abusing her and 10 other children in 1984 – also asks her mother about whether she will be able to bear children when she grows up.
>
> "This happened seven years ago, and it's not any better," the girl's mother said. "She's constantly asking, 'What if we're out in the store, Mommy, and we see these people? Are they going to hurt me?' ... But this is constantly on her mind because she knows these people are not in jail for what they did."
>
> In the U.S. District Court files in Manhattan, the West Point sexual abuse case is resolved. The government failed in 1985 to indict any suspects in its criminal investigation. But last month, it settled a civil suit brought by the parents of the 11 victims. Nine of the victims will receive $2.7 million, with awards ranging from $25,000 to $625,000. ~ Times Herald Record[689]

However, it wasn't enough to buy back the innocence of the abused children.

> “These people stole our children,” the mother said. “(She’s) nothing like she used to be. She’s a very angry little girl. She doesn’t trust anyone. She’s nothing like she was before this happened.”
>
> “It’s never going to be over for them, or for us.” ...
>
> The Army’s reaction to the parents’ plight so enraged former Army Dr. Walter R. Grote that the ex-captain refused a promotion to major in 1985 because of the treatment of his child’s sexual abuse case at West Point. He was one of the first parents to file the lawsuit, but later dropped out of seeking money from the case.
>
> “Unfortunately, money can’t ... undo the trauma incurred by scores of children at West Point ... because people with responsibility didn’t exercise that responsibility,” said Grote, now in private practice in New Jersey. “What the hell is a settlement? ... They could have caught these people doing it at the time that they were doing it.” ...
>
> The mother of the 10-year-old said the settlement will pay her daughter’s college bills. But the mother said she would have preferred the government kept its money and punished the abusers.
>
> Without the prosecution, West Point has retained its polished national image, she said. Even last month, the government admitted none of the allegations in making the settlement, a reminder of what parents say was West Point’s callous denial.[690]

The purpose of these crimes was to defile the innocent for Satan in any way possible and that included both physical and psychological torture. When what happened to the children wasn’t enough, animals were brought in and harmed in front of the toddlers.[691]

The parents had a clue that they missed completely; by “coincidence” the building number of the West Point daycare facility was “666”.

> The incidents unfolded against a backdrop of satanic acts, animal sacrifices and cult-like behavior among the abusers, whose activities extended beyond the U.S. Military Academy borders to Orange County and a military base in San Francisco, parents charged.

> The specter of satanism would later spur U.S. Military Academy officials to change the West Point child-care center's building number from 666 to 673.[692]

Were these children being specifically targeted because they belonged to service personnel? The rash of shocking, similar accusations across the country proved such was the case.

The Presidio in California has long been important to Rome as far back as its colonial Spanish Catholic founding.

> Mikhail Gorbachev oversaw the destruction of the USSR which critically weakened Russia. Gorbachev ran to a surprising source for safe haven: George H.W. Bush. Bush turned over the military base at the Presidio in California to the former Communist and it became a base of operations for Gorbachev's continued subversive efforts under the guise of "environmentalism".
>
> It is a place of special significance to Rome. ...
>
> The Presidio has been the reward of other Congressional Catholic Communist faithful like Pennsylvania Democrat Congressman John Murtha (ensconced in power until carried out in a pine box[972]) and former House Speaker Nancy Pelosi. ...
>
> Satan's Army
>
> A man who figures prominently in [purported CIA mind control sex slave victim] Cathy O'Brien's mind control narrative is Michael Aquino.
>
> There is no Wikipedia entry for "Michael A. Aquino".[1447] ...
>
> "Truther" blogs around the internet will alternatively label him as "Lieutenant Colonel" Aquino or "General" Aquino of the United States Army Reserve and sometimes as a "Green Beret". This is probably an exaggeration based upon Aquino's work in Special Operations and not the Special Forces*.*
>
> Aquino received a commission in the United States Army [Reserve] and did time in "Psychological Operations" during the Vietnam war as an administrator.

In 1980, while at the Catholic/Army fortress retreat of the Presidio, Aquino wrote a short paper for his boss titled From PSYOP to MindWar: The Psychology of Victory*.*

His superior was then Colonel Paul E. Vallely, darling of today's Conservative Christian movement and frequent contributor to FoxNews. ...

Aquino would show up 6 years later in 1988 as one of the accused in a scandal centered on a Presidio daycare center where as many as 60 toddlers claimed to have been molested in sado / satanic sex rituals.

Although this was spun as "hysteria" based upon the over-active imagination of the children, the NY Times reported that at least 4 of the little girls (who hadn't even been through puberty) were diagnosed with the sexually-transmitted disease chlamydia.[1450]

This was on the heels of another Army scandal where parents had been shocked to learn that their children from 3 years old down to three months old had been sexually assaulted on the other side of the country in a West Point daycare facility. Even more upsetting to the parents; officers, administrators and commanders at West Point were all claiming they bore no responsibility for the outrage[1451]. United States Attorney Rudolph Giuliani was the man entrusted by the Elite to make it go away. ~ Illuminati Unmasked[693]

*****

The Mayor of Sin City The future cross-dressing Mayor of New York City[xcvi] was richly rewarded for his loyalty to the Devil's Simulation.

> Despite 950 interviews by 60 FBI agents assigned to the investigation, an investigation led by former U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani produced no federal grand jury indictments. The investigation did find "significant indications that children may have been abused" at the center.
>
> Until now, no official reports or investigations have verified the sexual abuse.
>
> The Times Herald-Record, however, has learned that a still-secret, independent report – prepared by one of the nation's top experts on child sexual abuse – confirms the children's accusations of abuse. The report also played a vital role in ending the seven-year legal ordeal and in enabling the case to be settled without the children undergoing potentially hostile questioning on the witness stand, said U.S. District Judge Whitman Knapp, who heard the civil case.[694]

It wasn't the first nor the last time Rudy Giuliani put large effort into covering for child predators.

> Giuliani employs his childhood friend Monsignor Alan Placa as a consultant at Giuliani Partners despite a 2003 Suffolk County, N.Y., grand jury report that accuses Placa of sexually abusing children, as well as helping cover up the sexual abuse of children by other priests. Placa, who was part of a three-person team that handled allegations of abuse by clergy for the Diocese of Rockville Centre, is referred to as Priest F in the grand jury report. The report summarizes the testimony of multiple alleged victims of Priest F, and then notes, "Ironically, Priest F would later become instrumental in the development of Diocesan policy in response to allegations of sexual abuse of children by priests." ~ Salon[695]

Not that Placa really needed his friend's support; as with all other child rapists in clerical robes, the Vatican continued to keep him on the roles.

> Five years after he was suspended from his duties because of the abuse allegations, Placa is currently listed as "priest in residence" at St. Aloysius Church in Great Neck, N.Y., where close friend Brendan Riordan serves as pastor, and officially lives at the rectory there with Riordan. In addition, Placa co-owns a penthouse apartment in Manhattan with Riordan, the latest in a half-dozen properties the two men have owned in common at various times since the late 1980s.
>
> Placa has worked for Giuliani Partners since 2002. As of June 2007, he remains on the payroll. "He is currently employed here," Giuliani spokeswoman Sunny Mindel confirmed to Salon, adding that Giuliani "believes Alan has been unjustly accused." Mindel declined to discuss what role Placa plays with the consulting firm, or how much he is paid. Says Richard Tollner, who testified before the grand jury that Placa had molested him, "[Giuliani] has to speak up for himself and explain himself. If he doesn't, people shouldn't vote for him." Adds Anne Barrett Doyle, co-director of BishopAccountability.org, which tracks suspected priest abuse, "I think Rudy Giuliani has to account for his friendship with a credibly accused child molester." ...[696]

In fact, Giuliani is so close to the pedophile priest, one wonders if there are any limits to the relationship — He was the best man at Giuliani's first marriage in 1968 to his second cousin, Regina Peruggi, then helped Giuliani get an annulment in 1982 — over Regina's protests — so he could marry his second wife, Donna Hanover. Placa officiated at the wedding of Hanover and Giuliani in 1984. In September 2002, while suspended by the diocese over the sexual abuse allegations and no longer permitted to perform priestly duties, Placa received special permission to officiate at the funeral of the former mayor's mother, Helen. He also officiated at the funeral of Giuliani's father and baptized both of Giuliani's children.

> During Giuliani's political rise from U.S. attorney to mayor, when reporters wanted quotes from old friends they would often turn to Placa. A 1985 New York Times story noted that Placa stayed over at Giuliani's apartment as often as once a week, where the two men would "talk poetry, theology and politics deep into the night." The > monsignor also knew Giuliani well enough to describe his relationship with his father...[697]

But Placa isn't just a pedophile priest, he's a pedophile priest pleader: Placa weaponized his law degree and the Vatican put him to use protecting other pedophile priests. This came in handy for the Archdiocese of Boston.

> In addition to being a priest, Placa had received a law degree, and he first came to work for the diocese as its legal consultant. He was legal counsel to Bishop John McGann, and, starting in 1992, also a member of a three-person diocesan team charged with fielding allegations of sexual abuse by priests.
>
> When a molestation scandal erupted in the Catholic Archdiocese of Boston in early 2002, it spilled over into Long Island. The newly installed bishop, William Murphy, had been the No. 2 official in Boston from 1993 to 2001. He had helped arrange early retirement for the most notorious of the abusive priests, Father John Geoghan. After Geoghan was sentenced to prison for molestation in February 2002, the archdiocese revealed that it had settled 100 civil suits on Geoghan's behalf...[698]

Again, not that his help was truly needed as the "secular" American justice system made sure no pedophile priest was punished using dodges like "statutes of limitations". Even more outrageous was the tactic of examining "Church procedures" as a ruse of secular oversight in the doings of the Catholic hierarchy. Americans would be shocked to see their "public" institutions indistinguishably working with those of the Vatican — no different than the intermingling of "Church and State" in Ireland, Spain or any "overt" Catholic country.[xcvii]

> In Nassau County, the district attorney concluded that the statute of limitations had expired on all reported incidents and stopped investigating. Suffolk County convened a special grand jury to investigate specific allegations of abuse and how the diocese had dealt with them. The jury heard from 97 witnesses over nine months, and uncovered "deception and intimidation" by those diocesan officials who were supposed to be fielding sexual abuse complaints from > parishioners. “The evidence before the grand jury,” stated the report, “clearly demonstrates that diocesan officials agreed to engage in conduct that resulted in the prevention, hindrance and delay in the discovery of criminal conduct by priests.”

>
> None of the diocesan officials or accused priests are cited in the grand jury’s final report by name; the report instead identifies 23 priests by letter, and identifies diocesan officials by the duties they performed. Ultimately, the grand jury determined that “priests working in the Diocese of Rockville Centre committed criminal acts ... These criminal acts included, but were not limited to, Rape, Sodomy, Sexual Abuse, Endangering the Welfare of a Child and Use of a Child in a Sexual Performance.” Because the alleged criminal acts had occurred more than five years ago, however, the statute of limitations meant no charges could be filed against any of the accused.[699]

It was extremely ironic to those unfamiliar with the Pedocracy that a supposed defender of children would actually be one of their abusers.

> Suffolk County District Attorney Thomas Spota would not confirm to the Long Island newspaper Newsday at the time of the report’s release in February 2003 that Priest F was Alan Placa. Spota would say, however, that “this is a person who was directly involved in the so-called policy of the church to protect children, when in fact he was one of the abusers.” Multiple media outlets have named Placa as Priest F. Placa implicitly acknowledged as much to the New York Times in a Feb. 20, 2003, story, titled “L.I. Monsignor Scorns Jury, Insisting He Is No ‘Monster’,” in which he denied the specific allegations in the report. One of the victims whose testimony is cited in the report has also confirmed to Salon that Placa is Priest F.[700]

Sadly, the only way a predator priest is stopped is when the child does it themselves.

> The Suffolk County grand jury report, released eight months after Placa’s suspension, includes evidence from three alleged victims. It states that in Priest F’s first assignment, “he appears to have made feeble attempts at abusing a boy who was an alter [sic] server. ... He > pulled up a chair next to the boy and put his right hand on his thigh. Slowly his hand began to creep up towards the boy's genital area. Alarmed, the boy covered his crotch."

>
> "After his first assignment," the report continues, "Priest F was transferred within the Diocese to ... a school. Priest F was cautious, but relentless in his pursuit of victims. He fondled boys over their clothes, usually in his office. Always, his actions were hidden by a poster, newspaper or a book. ... Everyone in the school knew to stay away from Priest F."
>
> The report describes two alleged victims complaining to the school's rector about Priest F, and their "suspicions, later confirmed to be correct," that the priest was abusing a fourth boy. Eventually, one of the alleged victims told Priest F, in an encounter witnessed by another boy, "Don't ever fucking touch me again or I'll kill you."
>
> In an interview with Salon*, former St. Pius X student Richard Tollner, now 48, confirms that he is one of the alleged victims who testified before the grand jury — the one who allegedly told Priest F "Don't ever fucking touch me again." He also confirms that Placa is Priest F. Tollner claims Placa molested him and at least two others, but when he told school authorities at the time, he says nothing happened. "No one contacted my family or me," Tollner, now 48, recalls. "I told another priest while I was on a retreat and he said he would explore it and he never did." So far none of the alleged victims besides Tollner has come forward publicly. Placa has denied Tollner's allegations and has referred to the former St. Pius X student as "troubled."*[701]

As previously occurred in Catholic households, victimized children were even ostracized by their own devout Roman Catholic parents.

> When one of the victims attempted to report the alleged abuse, "the response I had gotten from my family, from my parents specifically was, that's impossible ... Priests just don't do these things. You must be mistaken."[702]

Although Rome is usually satisfied with keeping her pedophile priests out of prison, Monsignor Allan Placa received special treatment. He was given a clean bill of health on December 7th, 2009.[xcviii]

> The Diocese of Rockville Centre announced on Friday that the Catholic Church had found Monsignor Alan Placa not guilty of molesting teenage boys, an allegation that first surfaced in a local grand jury investigation in 2002. The grand jury report concluded that Placa could not be prosecuted criminally because the statute of limitations had expired.
>
> Victims' rights groups harshly criticized the Catholic Church's decision and the process of trying the accused priest. ~ ABC News[703]

The only outrages that can compete with the Pedocracy are false flags; mass tragedies manufactured by traitors in our own governments for the Hegelian purposes of enslavement and war profiteering.

Here, too, Rudolph Giuliani was the Vatican's gatekeeper of choice in New York City on one of the worst false flags in human history: 9/11.

> When Georgetown alum George Tenet (then Director of the CIA) would oversee the most treasonous mass-killing in America on September 11th, 2001, Giuliani was the man in NYC to see it done on his end. ~ Illuminati Unmasked[704]

Hysterical

> Day-Care Sex-Abuse Hysteria: Wikipedia Day-care sex-abuse hysteria was a moral panic that occurred primarily in the 1980s and early 1990s featuring charges against day-care providers of several forms of child abuse, including Satanic ritual abuse.[1][2] A prominent case in Kern County, California first brought the issue of day-care sexual abuse to the forefront of the public awareness, and the issue figured prominently in news coverage for almost a decade. The Kern County case was followed by cases elsewhere in the United States as well as Canada, New Zealand, Brazil, and various European countries.[705]

“Hysteria” ... “charges” ... repeatedly the corruption of cops and judges is used as proof that heinous crimes never took place; yet the breadth of the “accusations” across states and even countries again proves the systemic nature of the Devil’s Simulation.

Perhaps the most staggering aspect of the military daycare “hysteria” was that infants and toddlers were the prey of choice, as UPI disclosed about the West Point crimes in October of 1984 — The youngest victim was 10 months old, he said, and the oldest was 3 years old.

> No one has been arrested since the charges surfaced in late July. The identities of the teachers, who are civilian employees paid by the U.S. government, have been kept secret.[706]

An “expert” from the University of Pennsylvania was brought in to assuage the families of victims.

> The expert, Dr. Ann Wolbert Burgess, a professor of psychiatric nursing at the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia and the author of the book, “Child Pornography and Sex Rings,” entered the case in 1989.
>
> She interviewed all the children. She said yesterday that her goal in the case had been to reduce harm to the children because testimony in open court could have triggered symptoms of abuse, prompted by a “resurfacing” of the original incident.

> Knapp said that because Burgess worked for neither the government nor the plaintiffs, but reported directly to the court, her findings carried additional credibility. Neither Burgess nor others would speak about her specific findings. ~ Times Herald Record[707]

The child abuse “expert” being employed at “public” University of Pennsylvania is no accident. An insider Vatican source has claimed that the Jesuits control the University of Pennsylvania incognito.[708] This becomes extremely helpful when giving a prominent puppet his “secular” education; for instance, Donald John Trump spent 2 years with the Jesuits at Fordham but then transferred to the University of Pennsylvania. His daughter Ivanka has followed exactly in his footsteps, first being trained by the Jesuits at Georgetown, then moving on to U. of Penn.

One can’t be sure how far back Jesuit control of the “secular” institution goes but the list of alumni is both interesting and telling.[709]

> * Francis Hopkinson, designed the first official American Flag.[xcix]
> * George Clymer, Founding Father; early advocate for complete independence from Britain.
> * James Wilson, Founding Father; one of the six original justices appointed by George Washington to the Supreme Court of the United States.
> * Benjamin Rush, Founding Father of the United States; Surgeon General of the Continental Army.
> * 9th President of the United States William Henry Harrison.
> * Gunslinger John Henry “Doc” Holliday (College of Dental Surgery)
> * Martha Hughes-Cannon, first female United States Senator.
> * William Wrigley, Jr., founder of the Wm. Wrigley Jr. Company.
> * American poet and critic Ezra Pound, a major figure in the early modernist movement.
> * Kwame Nkrumah, first President of Ghana, and previously first Prime Minister of Ghana.
> * 45th President of the United States Donald Trump.
> * Warren Buffett
> * Warren Commission member and subsequent United States Senator from the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Arlen Specter.

* Infamous Jewish Communist theologian Noam Chomsky, BA in 1949, MA in 1951, PhD in 1955.
* Hotel and casino mogul Steve Wynn.
* Ed Rendell, 45th Governor of Pennsylvania; 96th Mayor of Philadelphia.
* Governor of Utah, Ambassador to Singapore and China, Mormon (Freemason) Jon Meade Huntsman Jr.
* Elon Musk, founder and CEO of PayPal, Tesla Motors and SpaceX.
* Patrick Ellis: President, The Catholic University of America, (1992–98); President, La Salle University, (1977–92)
* Arnold Eisen: Chancellor, Jewish Theological Seminary
* Vernon F. Gallagher: 8th President of Duquesne University, (1950–59) [private Roman Catholic school]

— along with many others.

Amongst the U. Penn. alumni is wealthy investment banker Peter Lynch.[710] Lynch also attended Roman Catholic Boston College. His Jesuit-educated wife, Carolyn Hoff-Lynch, was a generous benefactor and Trustee at U. Penn. until her death of leukemia. She was highly-lauded by both Jesuits and “youth organizations” — For her leadership and generosity, Ms. [sic] Lynch received numerous honors, including honorary degrees from Emmanuel College and Boston College, the Alexis de Tocqueville Award for Leadership from the United Way, the Ad Majorem Dei Gloriam Award from the Society of Jesus New England Province, the Pedro Arrupe Medal for Excellence in Ministry from the Weston Jesuit School of Theology, the Boys and Girls Club of Boston Partners of Youth Award, the Massachusetts Horticultural Society President’s Choice Award, the Saint Julie Billiart Award of the Sisters of Notre Dame and the Papal Honor of Saint Gregory the Great.[711]

Because of their great wealth, during Carolyn Lynch’s lifetime and afterward, large portions of Lynch money (good Boston Roman Catholics that the U. Penn. notables were) was directed to “the Church”.

> About the Lynch Foundation
>
> Mission — The Lynch Foundation primarily supports four areas of giving: education, cultural and historic preservation, health care and wellness, and the religious and educational efforts of the Roman Catholic Church. The Lynch Foundation's relationship with its grantees is a partnership, with the foundation providing the resources and support needed to help its grantees succeed in the Greater Boston community.*[712]

There are many more examples of "secular" schools that are as intimately tied to the Catholic Church as the Irish, Spanish, Australian, British or American governments.

The corruption over the child abuse at West Point had both parents and activists beside themselves with anger and frustration.

As they tried to put together the pieces that used to be the psyches of their innocent toddlers-turned-shattered-pre-teens, government officials sworn to protect them and see justice done — like Federal Prosecutor Rudolph Giuliani — turned their backs.

> After a federal grand jury failed to return indictments, community members joined the parents in calling for another investigation in 1985.
>
> Joan Benedict walked with parents at a protest in Highland Falls in hopes of inspiring another probe. And she was a member of an Orange County anti-pornography group that sponsored a forum to allow the victims' parents to speak out in 1986. ...
>
> Ms. Benedict, a Town of Cornwall resident, started her own crusade[c] to spark the Justice Department to reopen the abuse case. She ended her efforts in 1988 when she was convinced of a federal cover-up after receiving a letter from the U.S. Department of Justice.
>
> Mary C. Spearing, a special attorney with the Justice Department's National Obscenity Enforcement Unit, wrote that the case was closed.

“Unfortunately, no new evidence, revelation or hint of wrongdoing or negligence surfaced during our review,” she wrote. ...

The monetary settlement, however, did not resolve the parents’ bitterness over what they still maintain was a botched FBI investigation. In fact, court papers filed by parents showed federal investigators not only refused to believe the children, but, in some cases, also criticized some parents for not keeping their children under control in their homes.

“When the agents came to the house, they did not appear to have a tape recorder and they were not taking notes during the interview,” one parent said in a sworn statement, according to 1984 court papers. “He became annoyed and frustrated and said, ‘It looks like she’s just trying to get attention.’” ...

Prosecutor Giuliani did not return calls [to the Times Herald Record] last week. In 1987, Giuliani said his detailed investigation showed only one or two children were abused. The federal investigation cleared the center staff members accused by the children.

The mother of the 10-year-old girl still tries to cope with the abuse’s aftermath.

“As far as I’m concerned, the government gave them a license to go out and abuse other children,” the mother said. “I have to explain to my daughter these people are still out there.”

“And she still has nightmares. She’s afraid they’re going to come through the window at night to get her.”[713]

Chapter 20

“Just A Cog”

February 1986: Marc Dutroux and his second wife Michelle Martin are arrested for abducting and raping five young girls. The two are turned around through the penal system, given government aid, and set back out upon the unsuspecting Belgian people.

Belgium is a tiny country bordered by France, the Netherlands, Germany, Luxembourg, and the North Sea. The Travel Channel aptly describes it as roughly the size of the State of Maryland[714] and it has remained thoroughly Roman since the empire conquered that part of Europe in 100 B.C.

As a result, the diminutive Catholic country wields power far beyond its geography. It was a key territory during the overt reign of the Holy Roman Empire and is the locus from which the Vatican engenders its return.

Belgium in dark green. Wikipedia

> Belgium is one of the six founding countries of the European Union and hosts the official seats of the European Commission, Council of > the European Union, and European Council, as well as a seat of the European Parliament in the country's capital, Brussels. Belgium is also a founding member of the Eurozone, NATO, OECD and WTO, and a part of the trilateral Benelux Union. Brussels, hosts several of the EU's official seats as well as the headquarters of many major international organizations such as NATO.[nb 1] Belgium is also a part of the Schengen Area. Belgium is a developed country, with an advanced high-income economy and is categorized as "very high" in the Human Development Index. ~ Wikipedia[715]

Belgium maintained a massive colony in Africa (over 905,000 square miles) from 1908 to 1960 known as the Belgian Congo. Belgium gave up overt control of her colony in 1960 which immediately resulted in chaos and civil war. Power was finally coalesced under corrupt tyrant Joseph-Désiré Mobutu. Mobutu was educated by the Roman Catholic "Christian Brothers" in Coquilhatville.

Marc Dutroux was born on November 6th, 1956, in Ixelles, Belgium. His parents, both teachers, had been forced to return from the Congo because of the upheaval. They separated when Dutroux was 4 and he was raised by his mother. As with so many single-parent families, the result was disastrous. Dutroux began a life of crime as a juvenile and quickly built international connections from stealing cars. These would help him when he escalated to trafficking children.

Dutroux was pulled into the sex trade as a result of his tumultuous upbringing.

> ... Dutroux [left the care of] his mother ... at age 16, work[ed] briefly as a prostitute serving men. ~ Murderpedia[716]

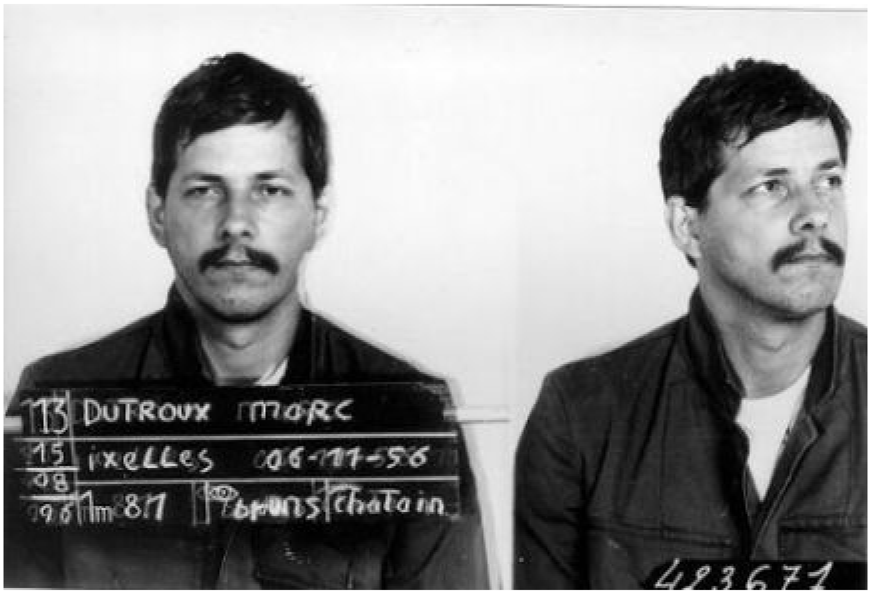
As a teenage boy "serving men" his psyche was sufficiently warped to birth a monster.

Neither media nor law enforcement give details of this part of Dutroux's life. Teenage boys don't simply decide to "service men" and accomplish as much on their own. Doubtless the sex underworld brought him in and "showed him the ropes". How much of it was forced upon him remains unknown.

Dutroux married at 19, fathered two children then divorced his wife in favor of Michelle Martin — a woman he had already begun an adulterous affair with.

It was Martin who helped Dutroux become a serial rapist.

They began a spree of kidnapping and raping young girls. It continued until the two were arrested in 1986.



Three years later, in 1989, Dutroux was finally sentenced to thirteen and a half years in prison. Martin was sentenced to five years. While in prison in the Catholic Socialist country, Dutroux and Martin were able to marry.

The serial rapist had only served three years in prison when Justice Minister Melchior Wathelet had him released — but not under the guise of "good behavior". While behind bars, Dutroux had amassed over 30 serious infractions.[717] His own mother wrote the warden to alert authorities about who they had in custody.

> She complained that Mr. Dutroux was using supervised visits to his grandmother's house to write up an inventory of the elderly woman's possessions, leaving her anxious and distressed.

> "I have known for a long time and with good cause my eldest's temperament," she wrote.
>
> "What I do not know, and what all the people who know him fear, it's what he has in mind for the future."
>
> According to the French newspaper Liberation, the letters went unanswered. ~ BBC[718]

How was a serial rapist of children getting "supervised" vacations from prison in the first place?

Shortly after, Belgian authorities gave up any pretense of keeping Dutroux incarcerated and released him completely.

The official who did so — Melchior H. M. J. F. C. Wathelet — is both a Socialist Politician and a Judge. He teaches Roman Catholics about "justice" and dispenses it within the "European Union".

> He has degrees in law and in economics (University of Liège) and is a Master of Laws (Harvard University). He is also a professor at the Catholic University of Louvain and the Université de Liège. From 1995 to 2003 he was a Judge at the European Court of Justice. Since October 2012 Wathelet serves as advocate-general at the Court of Justice. ~ Wikipedia[719]

Somehow, Wathelet has escaped any fallout for unleashing Dutroux upon the Belgian people after he was trained in prison. It was there that Dutroux was instructed on how to build a false room to help hide and shuffle victims.[720]

Upon his release, a board of government-appointed psychiatrists proscribed him sleeping pills. No reference can be found as to the medicinal reason.

He was also placed on government benefits which helped him maintain seven different residences that he used like CIA black sites to transport victims from locations where they would be sought after.

On June 24th, 1995, Julie Lejeune and Mélissa Russo were kidnapped from the municipality of Grâce-Hollogne. Both were only 8 years old. Dutroux was blamed for the kidnapping because the little girls ended up in the cellar of his main residence in Charleroi, an hour away.

The girls were abused for use in child pornography which instantly bolsters the accusation that Dutroux was just a cog in a much larger pedophile network.

> An accomplice, Michel Lelievre — a drug addict and petty thief — told police soon after his arrest that the girls had been kidnapped to order, for someone else. ~ The Observer[721]

Brussels businessman and pub-owner Jean-Michel Nihoul was later named as Dutroux’s facilitator. Nihoul was the buffer between the blunt instrument that did the acts and the Elites who enjoyed the children he procured for them.

Nihoul was connected to Dutroux by the testimony of Regina Louf, a woman who said her own parents put her into the child sex slave network.

> She told investigators how from the age of 12 she’d been “given” by her parents to a family friend, Tony Van den Bogaert, who’d had a key to their house. He would collect her from school and take her away for weekends to sex parties where she was “given” to other men and secretly filmed having sex with them. “It was highly organised,” she says. “Big business. Blackmail. There was a lot of money involved.”
>
> In 1996 she related her experiences to a police team under carefully filmed and supervised conditions. She described certain regular clients including judges, one of the country’s most powerful politicians (now dead) and a prominent banker. She gave the police the names by which she knew these men, detailed the houses, apartments and districts where she’d been taken with other children to entertain the guests.
>
> This “entertainment” was not just sex, she told the police. It involved sadism, torture and even murder, and again she described the places, the victims and the ways they were killed. One of the regular organisers of these parties, she claimed, was the man she knew as “Mich”, Jean Michel Nihoul, “a very cruel man. He abused children > in a very sadistic way", she said. Also there, she said, was the young Dutroux.

>
> "Dutroux was a boy who brought drugs, cocaine to these parties — he brought some girls, watched girls. At these events Nihoul was a sort of party beast while Dutroux was more on the side."[722]

This would've been about the time Dutroux was a "male prostitute" — a traumatized teenager turned into a robotic monster and child procurer for gutless monsters above him who didn't have the stomach to risk themselves in kidnapping.

But what they did have the stomach for is beyond blood-curdling.

Journalists Marie-Jeanne Van Heeswyck, Annemie Bulté and Douglas De Coninck managed to gain access to government records regarding the Dutroux investigation. They used that material to write the 1999 book The X-Dossiers, which was quickly made unavailable.

Regina Louf had been interviewed by Belgium's paramilitary police force, the Gendarmerie, and given the code name "X1" along with over 20 other purported victims.

Regina's accusations are deeply disturbing but no less so than those of Cathy O'Brien or Sue Ford (who wrote under the pen-name "Bryce Taylor"). Both have written books describing what they claimed were their terrible experiences as CIA mind-controlled sex slaves.

> [Profile] "X1": Born in 1969. Abused and neglected by her parents. When 2 years old, sent to her grandmother in Knokke, who owned a hotel-villa that was used as a brothel for high-level pedophiles and sadists. Pedophile videos were also shot here. Introduced to her pimp, Tony Vandenbogaert, at age 4 who began to take her to other locations for sexual abuse and torture. Sent back to her parents in Gent in June 1979 for a variety of reasons. Extremely neglected by her parents for several months until her old pimp showed up again. For years she was taken to abuse — and torture parties. Managed to hook up with a boy she fell in love with, married, and immediately moved out in 1988, which appears to have saved her from ending up in a snuff movie.

> Never managed to break away completely from the network. Sometimes when her husband left the house for a few days to work as a truck driver, her pimp and some of his associates would show up and take her with them to locations where children were abused. On these occasions she was raped herself or had to participate in abuse against others. X1 was diagnosed with MPD/DID.[ci] ~ van der Reijden[723]

One independent source still giving the grizzly details of the Pedocracy in Belgium is Dutch researcher Joël van der Reijden. Doubtless, he and his "Institute for the Study of Globalization and Covert Politics" are allowed to exist because they are obscure and don't threaten the secret control of the Vatican. Terms like "Illuminati", "Globalist" and "Deep State" are used by van der Reijden to obscure such details.

In regard to the naming of powerful Elites involved, van der Reijden uses historical examples to prove the validity of the accusations.

> "Blood countess" Elizabeth Bathory and Gilles de Rais, two historical nobles who together murdered about 1,400 children. De Rais was primarily interested in satisfying his pedophile and homosexual needs, but also loved to watch his victims die slow agonizing deaths. Along with a number of servants, Bathory viciously tortured to death an estimated 650 servant girls. Many victims were beaten to death or literally cut up alive over a period of hours or even weeks. She also practiced cannibalism and sometimes forced girls to strip their own flesh and eat it. Both Bathory and de Rais were interested in the occult. The only reason we know about their crimes is because they eventually angered powerful interests: the church and rival families. If they would have kept to ordinary peasant children, most likely they would never have been put on trial and we never would have had a clue as to what these two did.
>
> There seem to have been plenty of other nobles who took their frustrations out on servants. Darya Nikolayevna Saltykova (1730-1801), a noblewoman in Russia, admitted to torturing and murdering over 130 of her servants at the time of her arrest at age 32, some of them 11 or 12 years old.

> Throughout history, most kings enjoyed rape, murder and extensive torture, so why should we be surprised? What our modern day elites might be doing is almost a case of honoring the principals of 10,000 years of despotic rule.[724]

The period of history where Countess Elizabeth Báthory of Hungary conducted her atrocities is key: the late 1500's, early 1600's — as the Protest against Rome was going full force.

Even Wikipedia admits that the "Blood Countess" wasn't forced to trial by "the church" unless you take the lower-case "c" literally.

> Between 1602 and 1604, after rumours of Báthory's atrocities had spread through the kingdom, Lutheran minister István Magyari made complaints against her, both publicly and at the court in Vienna.[20] The Hungarian authorities took some time to respond to Magyari's complaints. Finally, in 1610, King Matthias II assigned György Thurzó, the Palatine of Hungary, to investigate. Thurzó ordered two notaries to collect evidence in March 1610.[21] In 1610 and 1611, the notaries collected testimony from more than 300 witnesses. The trial records include the testimony of the four defendants, as well as thirteen witnesses. Priests, noblemen and commoners were questioned. Witnesses included the castellan and other personnel of Sárvár castle.
> ...
>
> Thurzó went to Čachtice Castle after Christmas on 30 December 1610 and caught Báthory in the act. Thurzó arrested Báthory and four of her servants, who were accused of being her accomplices: Dorotya Semtész, Ilona Jó, Katarína Benická, and János Újváry ("Ibis" or Fickó). Thurzó's men reportedly found one girl dead and one dying and reported that another woman was found wounded while others were locked up.[6] The countess was put under house arrest.[725]

As with the other monster Elites we've examined, she was spared true justice.

> Thurzó debated further proceedings with Elizabeth's son Paul and two of her sons-in-law. A trial and execution would have caused a public > scandal and disgraced a noble and influential family (which at the time ruled Transylvania), and Elizabeth's considerable property would have been seized by the crown. Thurzó, along with Paul and her two sons-in-law, originally planned for Elizabeth to be spirited away to a nunnery, but as accounts of her murder of the daughters of lesser nobility spread, it was agreed that Elizabeth Báthory should be kept under strict house arrest and that further punishment should be avoided.[28]

>
> King Matthias urged Thurzó to bring Elizabeth to trial and suggested she be sentenced to death, but Thurzó successfully convinced the king that such an act would adversely affect the nobility. Thurzó's motivation for such an intervention is debated by scholars. It was decided that Matthias would not have to repay his large debt to Elizabeth.[29][726]

Instead, the wrath of the public was aimed at her accomplices in Inquisition fashion.

> Three of the defendants, Semtész, Jó, and Ficko, were condemned to death and their sentences carried out immediately. Before being burned at the stake, Semtész and Jó had their fingers ripped off their hands with hot pincers. Ficko, who was deemed less culpable, was beheaded, and his body burned. Benická was sentenced to life imprisonment, since testimony indicated that she was dominated and bullied by the other women.
>
> Following the trial, a red gallows was erected near the castle to show the public that justice had been done.[727]

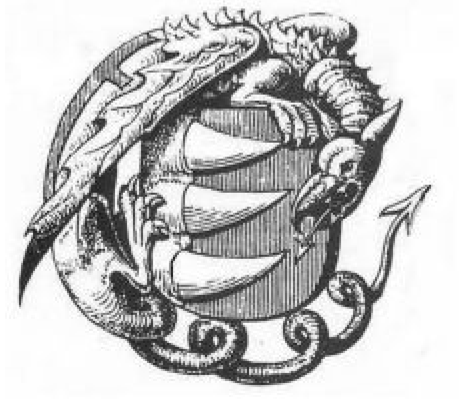
Was it? A gallows was erected yet no bodies hung from it!

The woman behind it all lived on and the initial intent for her destination — a Catholic convent — proved whom she served and why she was protected until a Lutheran minister found the courage to speak up. Realizing that smuggling the monster to a nunnery was too much to swallow for the angry populace, she was placed in solitary confinement where she died years later.

The Blood Countess was not the last child predator who would escape justice by running to a convent.

According to accusations of victims like “X2” and “X3”, the Belgian aristocracy was no less vicious (and no-less Catholic).



Coat of arms of Countess Elizabeth Báthory de Ecsed of Hungary(1560-1614)

> The Belgian royal family has been implicated on several occasions. X2 spoke about a girl she had known who had been murdered, and how this girl told her about the domain of Princess Liliane de Rety (“a madwoman”) where children were buried.[197] Liliane was the second wife of King Leopold III (d. 1983) and lived until her death in 2002 at Chateau d’Argenteuil. In 2004, the Delwart family, shareholders of Solvay, bought the domain.[198]
>
> From personal experience, X2 mentioned having seen Prince Laurent, the brother of Belgium’s present crown prince. Laurent apparently was more interested in masturbating at child abuse orgies than taking part in the actual abuse.[199][728]

We’ve had many opportunities to list the gory details of what exactly goes on in the Devil’s Simulation. At least one possible testimony is necessary to show the depth of evil ... and to steel the anger of the rising resistance.

WARNING: GRAPHIC

> X3 implicated Prince Charles (1903-1983), the second son of King Albert I; King Baudouin (1930-1993), the eldest son of King Leopold III; and either King Albert I or II. Unfortunately, X3 spoke about experiences from the 1950s and early 1960s, which meant that none of the other X-Dossier witnesses could confirm aspects of her story. Two of her primary abusers, Paul Vanden Boeynants and Charly De Pauw, had already appeared in the Pinon file of the early 1980s; the same is true for King Albert II.[200] Additionally, part of the details of the abuse described by X3, although recognizable, can be a bit hard swallow (the scale and setting), all making her testimony hard to use without more backup from other witnesses. In X3's support, however, she was a well-respected person in the support community for abused women and children, and her interviewers refused to write down most of what she said. A few excerpts from a summary written about X3's testimonies:

> "The car stopped on a parterre before the house. [It] was surrounded by a park. Two supervisors were present: Ralf and Walter. The children were taken to a tower made of natural stone and with a wooden door... an underground [corridor] left from the turret toward the cellars... without light... going downward. In the cellars there were cells where the children were locked up, awaiting their turn. There also were some cells for the dogs (dobermans). The passageway gave way to a room of spectacle. In the tower: dead children's bodies in various stages of decomposition (sometimes dismembered and/or missing body parts) and carcasses of dogs. Spectators: always the same but difficult to identify — about fifty. She recognized the regent Charles, King Baudouin and King Albert, and two others that she calls Charly [De Pauw] and Polo [Paul Vanden Boeynants]. She thinks to have recognized Willy Claes [later NATO secretary general] and doctor Vanden Eynde. The dogs listen to Ralf and Walter. The addicted dogs are excited. Spectacles — orgies, putting to death children and dogs. The spectacle room has a strong odor of excrements of dogs. Dogs can roam free in the garden... Gilles (12 years old??) was castrated by Polo. The other children have to drink the blood... Girls are slashed with razor blades. The lips of the vagina of X3 have partially been cut and were given to eat to the dogs... A girl's [large] vulva was cut into slices and fed to the dogs..."

> “Childbirth by a teenager through a caesarean section. Baby pulled out of the stomach and given to the dogs by Polo. She saw the dismembered mother again in the exposition of the dead... She has to eat the human flesh cut from the bodies. She has to eat pieces of children (fingers) served in gelatin. Good taste — slightly sugary. It provoked an enormous sensation of hunger and thirst. Drinking blood relieved the sensation of thirst... She speaks of another murder that she committed on a girl of 3-5 years under the threat that it would be her brother who would be killed. She opened up the girl from the vagina to the breastbone with a knife. She gave the internal organs to the dog. Someone cut off the head. The child was devoured by the dogs... Murder of a young teenage woman who was opened up by Vanden Eynde... The baby shouted in the mother’s stomach. She resewed the stomach with the baby inside...”

> “Luxurious house with a surrounding wall and gate... non illuminated twisting path. There were some stables. Parterre with flowers. Hall of entry — cream-colored and blue tiles — red carpeting. Walls made of marble with a teenage picture of [later king] Baudouin on it. She spent a whole night with Baudouin — fellatio and sodomy. Presence of maid... In this house there were many servants... She remembers one evening when she had been smeared with cream before being brought to the table on a tray. She had been licked off and raped... At the end of another evening a child... had been castrated. The other children that were present buried the boy in a flowerbed. She remembers a child who had been decapitated, then cut and fried before being eaten. She remembers children who hung on hooks in the kitchen. A certain Solange [a female name] has been enucleated [what exactly?] with a spoon by her and an old lady.”[201][729]

These could be dismissed as the ravings of a perverse mind seeking attention but what “attention” have these purported victims received?

“X1” (Regina Louf) gives an explanation for these atrocities with a logic far beyond her humble background.

> Underage girls were often exchanged to seal certain illegal deals. The pimps would take pictures during these events. ...
>
> > [X1] Because once you've had sex with a child, you are branded... unless all parties keep their mouths shut. ...
> >
> > Contracts between the business milieu and the political world, contracts between businessmen amongst each other, fraud with subsidies or licenses, setting up fake firms, criminal contracts like arms trade... everything was possible. And it always ended with sex and children... Pictures were taken, in jest, to keep both parties to their contracts... The men were brought to ideas by child pornography movies that were played at parties... The pimps also had another tactic. They invited a person who could be useful to them. They went to dine with him, and took him — after he had been liquored up — to a "party". Men from the top layer of society are used to visiting or getting offered prostitutes. They usually knew that something like this would follow, and the prostitutes they would see upon entering would be slightly older girls, between 16 [sexually mature in Belgium] and 18 years old. More booze and cocaine would be supplied, for ambience. And only then the "prey" would be taken to a room where a younger girl was waiting, like me, then. I had the assignment to get him into bed with me and if I didn't succeed in that sanctions would follow. The bed scene was secretly filmed and served for blackmail purposes. Most men probably realized only afterwards in what kind of hornet's nest they now found themselves, but by then it was far too late... [730]

This also explains the use of unconvicted "businessman" Michel Nihoul as an intermediary.

> Christine Van Hees was 15 or 16 years old when she fell in love with Michel Nihoul. He bought her a number of presents and was very nice to her. After a while Nihoul convinced her, through his psychological games ("you are not a child anymore"; "I gave you so much"; "I'm a grown man and I have certain needs"), to have sex with Regina and later with him.

After a while "Chrissie" found out about the real Nihoul, not the least through a ritual abuse ceremony in which the stomach of a white bunny was slashed open. During the abuse at this event a snuff movie was played in which a two year old girl was raped, tortured and murdered.

Christine was murdered in February 1983, soon after the murder on Regina's child.

Mieke was murdered in November 1984 in the villa of her grandmother by the same people that killed Christine.[731]

Taken

The next two victims arrived into the hands of Dutroux in what could’ve been a scene from the 2008 movie Taken, starring Liam Neeson.

Neeson is a favorite for an industry that appears to be controlled by Jews. For the native-born Irishman, Catholicism was more a way of life than a religion. Yet, the well-known actor has an unlikely role model.

> Raised Catholic in the town of Ballymena, Northern Ireland, Neeson, 52, spent many of his adolescent Friday nights standing at the back of a small meeting hall near the town’s train station, listening to the hell-fire-and-brimstone sermons of radical Protestant politician Rev. Ian Paisley. Though Paisley was notoriously anti-Catholic[cii], Neeson, already mulling a life in the theatre, thrilled to the spectacle.
>
> “He was just an extraordinary preacher. I just loved his style of oratory,” Neeson recalls. ...
>
> “I didn’t believe any of the stuff Paisley was spouting forth about, I just admired his presence, his knowledge of the Bible, the way he intimidated anybody in the room,” he says. ...
>
> But here’s what’s especially noteworthy. In spite of Paisley’s poisonous sermons, “I admire the man, you know?” Neeson says, as if amused by the notion. “He’s a Ballymena man, I’m a Ballymena man, you know? I find myself, in some weird way, sticking up for him, despite myself. Even though he can spew unbelievable venom and hate, I kind of admire him.” He pauses to consider this. “Maybe it’s tribal.”
>
> Perhaps he just didn’t feel targeted by the Reverend’s anti-Catholic rhetoric. For though Neeson spent six years as an altar boy, he never had much use for faith. ...
>
> “I loved being an altar boy, loved being in a church. Sometimes it was just the priest and myself, basically. Like at 6:30 mass, winter mornings, there would be three old-age pensioners, and that was it. But the preparation of lighting candles, laying out the priest’s vestments and stuff: That whole ritual was pretty profound.” ~ The Globe and Mail[732]

The “Jews” of Hollywood were well-familiar with Neeson’s fond memories of being an altar boy and he was chosen to play Jesuit priest Father John Fielding in the 1986 movie The Mission. In that movie, reputed Knight of Malta Robert De Niro played Captain Rodrigo Mendoza — an obvious facsimile of the Order’s founder, Ignatius de Loyola.

Of course Jesuits were happily on hand to guide both the movie and the actors. Why not? “Jesuit Theater” gave birth to the false and almost always poisonous enterprise of “entertainment”.

> As for Neeson, he only took acting seriously when he discovered its spiritual roots. Almost 20 years ago, he was on location in the jungles of Colombia while filming The Mission*, the Robert De Niro-Jeremy Irons drama about 18th-century Spanish Jesuits. During some down time in filming, Neeson struck up a fast friendship with Father Daniel Berrigan, a famous anti-war Catholic priest and poet making his feature-film acting debut. “I was having a wee bit of trouble with accepting professional acting,” he recalls. “I still felt that being in these movies was, like, kind of a joke, a chance to have a good time.”*
>
> He confessed his doubts to Father Berrigan, who told him that Saint Ignatius of Loyola, the founder of the Jesuit movement, had directly influenced Konstantin Stanislavsky, the father of modern acting.[ciii] It seems that Saint Ignatius had devised a set of spiritual exercises that included an exhortation for students to envision themselves within certain biblical scenes — say, as a shepherd witnessing the birth of Jesus. That inspired Stanislavsky’s famous acting exercises, detailed in his book An Actor Prepares*, in which actors use their imaginations to place themselves within a character’s so-called “given circumstances.”*
>
> “It was like something went off in my head, these two worlds absolutely coming together, and I had an immediate sort of peace with what I was doing,” Neeson says quietly (he says most things quietly). “For me to discover this in Colombia, with this great Jesuit teacher, man, poet, to hear this little piece of info that I never knew before — it really affected me, and I started really just taking my craft really, > really seriously. It just changed something inside me. Rooted me in some way, you know?"[733]

Neeson was chosen to play the lead in the 2004 film "Kinsey" about the "sexologist" of the same name. Despite the ire of Rome, it was an uncritical whitewash of the criminal personality who did more for sexual chaos in his day than any other. Perhaps that is why the film was quietly boosted by Catholic and Jesuit colleges.

> ... Fordham University in New York allowed Hollywood filmmakers and actor Liam Neeson on campus to shoot part of a movie that whitewashes the discredited Kinsey ...
>
> In May, Fordham even gave Neeson an honorary doctorate of fine arts. For the Jesuits of Fordham to help Hollywood glorify Kinsey, a moral monster and scientific fraud, is nothing less than to repudiate 2,000 years of Catholic moral teaching, not to mention good science.
>
> It's no wonder that on October 17-19, 2003, Fordham's Law School hosted "Lavender Law," a national meeting of the National Lesbian and Gay Law association and the National Lesbian and Gay Law Foundation, to discuss sodomy laws, homosexual "marriage," homosexual "rights" in academia, etc. Scheduled speakers included Fordham Law School assistant dean Tom Schoenherr and Fordham law professor Sonia Katyal. ~ Human Events[734]

In the movie Taken, Neeson's ex-wife talks the military security expert into allowing his teenage daughter to vacation across Europe — interestingly enough, following the Irish Catholic band "U2" on their tour.

Such was the case for 19 year-old Eefje Lambrecks and 17 year-old An Marchal. On August 23rd, 1995, they traveled to Blankenberge to see "magician" Roland van den Berg, a Dutch citizen who gave himself the stage name "Rasti Rostelli". At the show, Eefjie and An were chosen from the audience to be hypnotized.

Later that night they were subdued.

> They were drugged with sleeping pills and taken to Dutroux's home to be kept, chained to a bed and naked, in a room above the cellar.
>
> It is not known for how long they were kept in such conditions. Eefje was repeatedly raped and, in evidence that moved jurors to tears, buried under the earth in Dutroux's garden while still alive. ~ Telegraph[735]

What the Telegraph is neglecting to tell you is that these were the same powerful prescription sleeping drugs given to Dutroux upon release from prison by a government medical board. There is no record of Marc Dutroux suffering from an illness requiring such a prescription. The only conclusion one can draw is that he was purposefully released early and given the tools to help him in his trade. When a patsy was needed, he was finally allowed to be arrested and charged only with the victims that could be traced to him.

How many more did Marc Dutroux procure for Europe's pedophile Elite?

> Suspected child murderer Marc Dutroux was not working alone but was part of a network, the public prosecutor at his trial in Arlon told the jury on Tuesday.
>
> Reading out a 56-page statement summing up the events leading up to Dutroux's 1996 arrest, Royal Procurer Michel Bourlet said Dutroux was not an "isolated predator". ~ Expatica News[736]

Of the six girls traced to Dutroux, four were found dead. He adamantly states none of them were killed by his hand.

> The accused child-murderer Marc Dutroux yesterday denied any role in the gruesome death of four young girls, claiming that he was just a low-level cog in a powerful sex-slave ring and mostly acting under orders. ~ Telegraph[737]

He would go on to claim that the girls he kept he was protecting from the Pedocracy. The media mocked this idea and, on the surface, may not seem out-of-bounds to do so[civ] ... unless the testimonies of 20 X-Dossier victims were taken seriously.

“X1” Regina Louf claimed that she had been impregnated by her abusers and that police officers were part of what they did to her afterward.

WARNING: GRAPHIC

1998, Regina Louf, Zwijgen is Voor Daders — De Getuigenis van X1 [Silence is for Perpetrators — The Testimony of X1], p. 133-134:

> “Grandmother was in the kitchen... I told her I was losing water. She said nothing, but looked at my legs and wiped her hands in her skirt. She felt with ice cold fingers in my panties and sent me to the bedroom... I crawled onto the bed, went to lie in the fetal position and sung silently to keep in control of my fears. About an hour later the first contractions started... I didn’t even know how the baby would emerge out of my body, or through where. I felt so incredibly vulnerable and longed desperately to an adult. Then the men came. A baron, pépère, two brothers, a police officer. They watched, forced me on the bed and when a contraction started, pépère forced himself inside me. I was in a complete panic... I squeezed hard in the arms of the baron. He hit me in the face, once, twice, thrice.”

In PV 118.869 Regina gave the names:

> “When the contractions started her grandmother made a phone call. The Lippens brothers, Vanden Boeynants and the assistant commissioner of Knokke arrived. [Baron] De Bonvoisin and Vander Elst arrived thereafter... Vander Elst puts a knife on her throat while Bonvoisin rapes her... She must masturbate while Vander Elst makes a number of photos. Lippens rapes her with a razor blade. When the child exited de Bonvoisin beat her. Directly after X1 gave birth she was raped and sodomized. Her daughter disappeared six weeks later. She only saw her [daughter] at the factory again (PV 118.872).”[738]

Dutroux’s claim of “protecting” the girls he kidnapped and raped now can be seen in the twisted logic of a traumatized patsy.

He would also claim police officers were directly involved.

> Speaking at his trial in the Belgian city of Arlon, Dutroux said that he had abducted 17 year old An Marchal and Eefje Lambreckx, 19, near > to the port of Ostende. He said he was helped by sidekick, Michel Lelievere and two men who he later found out were police officers.

>
> He did not name the alleged police officers but said that one of them, along with Leievre, had raped one of the girls. ~ Expatica News[739]

In late 1995, Dutroux was arrested for car theft. He spent only four months in jail.

During that time, the search for missing girls, particularly the two 8 year-olds (Julie Lejeune and Mélissa Russo) was finally directed at one of the Dutroux residences where the cries and screams of girls were said to be heard.

> No-one has ever followed the Dutroux investigation more closely than Gino and Carine Russo, the parents of Melissa. ...
>
> ... while Dutroux admits incarcerating their daughter in his home, he denies her kidnap, rape or murder. Dutroux even claims he tried in vain to save the girls and that Melissa died in his arms.
>
> The Russos have lived this nightmare ever since Melissa disappeared with her friend Julie in June 1995. Although Dutroux was a known paedophile, police didn't search his house for five months, and when they did they failed to find the girls, despite the sound of children in the cellar.
>
> When a parliamentary commission examined the series of failures in the Dutroux investigation the police officer responsible, René Michaux, claimed it was a genuine mistake, that the entrance to the dungeon was well hidden and that the children's voices seemed to come from outside. He found a speculum on the floor which he lifted, handled and returned to Dutroux's wife without forensic analysis.
>
> They found films which went undeveloped and videos which they didn't watch. Had they done so, they would have seen Dutroux building the dungeon. Instead Dutroux continued to abduct girls. ~ The Observer[740]

Julie Lejeune and Mélissa Russo were eventually starved to death. Forensic evidence indicated that they had been continually raped through the period that Dutroux was in prison but authorities refuse to give any indication that they acknowledge more than Marc Dutroux and his then-wife Michele Martin as having been involved in their tragedy.

Police Officer René Michaux was an accomplice.

There were no negative repercussions for his actions.

The idea that he and fellow officers would be privy to clear evidence of kidnapping in the home of a convicted pedophile that went unheeded — such as video of both the construction of the hidden room and sex abuse of victims — is beyond mere “incompetence”. It is willful criminal abetting of the child sex slave trade. The L-shaped “hidden” cell where Dutroux kept the girls was added in to his Charleroi residence basement. Any trained investigator would’ve immediately noticed the layout in the basement didn’t match the over-all shape of the house.

Two months after his release, in May of 1996, 12-year-old Sabine Dardenne was kidnapped, ostensibly by Dutroux and drug addict accomplice Michel Lelièvre.

In August of 1996, 14-year-old Laetitia Delhez was kidnapped.

Both girls were placed in the “hidden cell” in Charleroi.

Fortunately for the girls, Laetitia Delhez was kidnapped in Neufchateau district. It, apparently, was presided over by a Magistrate intent on doing his job named Jean-Marc Connerotte.

Connerotte received information from an alert young man that helped him trace a white van possibly used by Dutroux in transporting victims. He quickly had Marc Dutroux and his wife Michele Martin arrested, followed a short time after by “business man” Michel Nihoul.

Once arrested, it was Marc Dutroux who lead the Gendarmerie to Sabine and Laetitia.

During his investigation, Connerotte actively sought testimony from victims (something none of his peers seemed interested in). A key witness that he found credible — despite the stories she told — was “X1” Regina Louf.

Two months later, Jean-Marc Connerotte was sacked because he had attended a party for Sabine and Laetitia: “conflict of interest”.

It is interesting that Connerotte’s parents named him after Gospel writer John Mark.

For many Belgians it was the last straw. Protests erupted nation-wide amongst a populace disgusted with clear corruption in the institutions they believed were entrusted to protect them.

They were met by Police water cannons and pepper spray.[741]

The “factory” Louf said was a locus for abuse of children has roots in the European military / industrial complex.

> PV 116.253, November 30, 1996: “X1 recognizes two places where sacrifices of children have taken place during videotaped parties. ASCO factory. Axory Parcels firm. Sterrebeekstraat in Zaventem.” ...
>
> The factory in PV 118.872, December 18, 1996, is ASCO, the (former) arms company of the Boas family, who are close associates of Paul Vanden Boeynants. A lot of filming was done at this location.[742]

History, About Us, ASCO

Although ASCO now claims to be “a world leader in the design and manufacture of high lift devices, complex mechanical assemblies and major functional components for the aerospace industry,” it was, indeed, created by the Boas family to complete military contracts.

Companies like Bell, Raytheon, Grumman and Lockheed-Martin have been named by victims such as Cathy O’Brien as being deeply involved in the torture and use of sex slaves.

This comports perfectly with our assertion that war is a needless endeavor inflicted upon an unwitting populace by Elite within the Devil’s Simulation. Where threats do not exist, they are manufactured and enabled. Contractors like ASCO reap the rewards, often via a thoroughly corrupt bidding process.

But the military / industrial complex is not the top of the Pedocracy pyramid. “X1” Regina Louf was sent to Catholic school where the nuns in administration were fully aware of what was being inflicted upon her.

> In June 1979, Regina was allowed back to her parents in Gent. The reason was that Regina had told a friend, who usually walked home with her until they reached the grandmother’s villa, about the abuse. The parents of this girl then invited Regina to a birthday party where she retold her story. The result was that the girl’s parents, knowing Regina could never know all these details without having experienced them, informed the principal, a nun, of her school. Regina went to the > directress and showed the bruises in her neck. The nun told Regina that she was "a fantasizer" and called up her grandmother. According to Regina, during the phone call the nun looked at her with a mischievous twinkle in her eyes, and ended the conversation by saying "I feel sorry for you, such a granddaughter... that must not be easy."[743]

In 2010, the former Cardinal Archbishop of Brussels — Godfried Danneels — was debriefed by authorities regarding the child-trafficking and abuse supposedly conducted by "lone pedophile" Marc Dutroux. In the Cardinal's possession were computer discs with graphic photographs of victims.[744]

The resulting spin was that the Cardinal was made privy to confidential Police files, but for what purpose?

At best, it was an example of the power of the Catholic Church, perhaps using an influential member of clergy to insure nothing that was to have been blamed on Marc Dutroux made its way back to the steps of St. Peter's Basilica.

At worst, it proved that the ultimate guardian to the Devil's Simulation is and has always been the Roman Catholic Church.

In 2012, Marc Dutroux's ex-wife Michele Martin (unreported as a Catholic) was released from her 2004 prison sentence into the custody of a nunnery.

> Michelle Martin, the ex-wife and accomplice of the notorious Belgian paedophile killer Marc Dutroux has been granted a conditional release from prison to serve the rest of her sentence in a convent.
>
> She is expected to enter the sisters of Clare convent within days to serve the rest of her sentence "in prayer"... ~ The Telegraph[745]

*****

Given the power of the Devil's Simulation, a re-examination of Marc Dutroux is in order. What has been called "The Dutroux Affair" or "The Dutroux Scandal" is as mislabeled as "The Franklin Cover-up".

The true monsters were — are — the police, judges, politicians, generals and, most of all, clergy, all feigning horror and disgust.

> The AFP news agency said he told the court how Sabine Dardenne, then 12, and Laetitia Delhez, then 14, had believed Mr. Dutroux's story that he was protecting them from a gang of men who wanted to murder them.
>
> When the alleged murderer escorted police to the purpose-built dungeon in his house on 15 August 1996, the girls "didn't want to come out" and tried to hide, thinking their rescuers were members of the supposed gang, Mr. Connerotte said.
>
> "They thanked Dutroux. It was absolutely terrible. They kissed him. That shows how much he had conditioned them." ~ BBC[746]

Did it?

Chapter 21

The Boys Town Cover-Up

14 November 1988: The Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Internal Revenue Service and the United States National Credit Union Administration raid the Franklin Federal Credit Union in Omaha, Nebraska. All records are impounded and the General Manager — Lawrence E. King — is arrested for embezzlement.

A Federal Credit Union is a government-subsidized bank with a target clientele, usually minorities or government employees.

On the surface, such a bank appears to be giving “the disadvantaged” a “helping hand” but the true purpose is to endear large populations to socialized governmental control.

In 1979, Lawrence King was made Chief Executive Officer of the Franklin Federal Credit Union, ostensibly to rescue it. At the time, he was a Democrat, but by the inauguration of the Reagan / Bush administration, King had switched parties.

As a Republican black businessman, he was highly prized and sang the national anthem at the 1984 and 1988 Republican national conventions.

King was also a child sex slave trafficker and vicious sadist who had likely been earmarked for his role from the beginning.

The scandal would later be called “the Franklin Cover-up” based off the 1992 book of the same name. In ultimate “learning against learning” fashion, the title is, itself, a cover-up designed to distract from the epicenter of the scandal. That was the Roman Catholic orphanage known as “Boys Town”. The focus was deflected to be placed on scape goat Lawrence King and the Franklin Federal Credit Union.

Boys Town was founded in 1917 by Monsignor Edward Joseph Flanagan (1886 – 1948). Just as “scientist” Alfred Kinsey sent his pedophile “researchers” to prey upon America’s children while her men were being needlessly slaughtered in World War II, Father Flanagan started collecting orphans during the heat of America’s involvement in World War I.

Boys Town proves the power the Catholic Church has in “Protestant” America. It is an incorporated municipality, a Catholic diocese and a school district.

For a humble, “non-profit” religious endeavor of “charity”, Boys Town handled enormous sums of money. The “sinisterly un-aired” documentary on this subject, Yorkshire Television’s 1994 Conspiracy of Silence stated that Boys Town had cash reserves of $500 million but also raised up to $35 million annually. The “tell-all” documentary then explained these staggering 1993 numbers as the work of diligent priests and nuns sending “begging letters” and pushing “promotional videos”.

If there were “promotional videos” they weren’t anything American families would consider appropriate.

The New York Times admitted with copious amounts of spin and subterfuge — [Monsignor Robert Hupp] assumed leadership in 1973 in the wake of a crisis after a Pulitzer Prize-winning report in The Omaha Sun that said

Boys Town was amassing much more money than it was spending to take care of boys.

> In 12 years as executive director, Monsignor Hupp responded by spending money on a new hospital, a new high school, far-flung research into the problems of youths and a new system of suburban-style houses presided over by married couples.
>
> The houses replaced traditional dormitories dating back to the days when Boys Town was thought of as an orphanage.
>
> He also put a positive spin on Boys Town's aggressive campaigns to raise money, usually one or two dollars at a time from people who did not have much to give, arguing that solvency was no sin.[747]

"Begging letters" and "promotional videos" little explain these vast sums but trafficking in child sex slaves does.

Perhaps Rome just has good public relations.

After only 20 years of existence, Boys Town would receive the ultimate free advertising; a project from "Jewish-controlled" Hollywood.

In 1938, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer gave the Catholic orphanage its own big-budget film starring Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney.

> Once the largest, most glamorous, and most revered film studio, MGM was founded in 1924 when the entertainment entrepreneur Marcus Loew gained control of Metro Pictures, Goldwyn Pictures, and Louis B. Mayer Pictures. ~ Wikipedia[748]

The movie Boys Town was nominated for 5 Oscars and Tracy won for "Best Actor". MGM Chief of Production Dore Schary (also a Jew) won for "Best Original Story".

"User-edited" Wikipedia attempts to explain why Hollywood Jews would put so much effort into spinning a happy yarn about how well the Catholic Church takes care of young boys — Although the story is largely fictional, it is based upon a real man and a real place. ...

> Legendary MGM Studio head Louis B. Mayer, who was a Belorussian-Canadian-American Jew known for his respect for the Catholic Church, later called this his favorite film of his tenure at MGM.[749]

If there is one entity above any other which has made the lives of Jews filled with misery, it is the Roman Catholic Church. In nations where the Church rules openly like Portugal and Spain, Jews were hounded and forced to convert to Catholicism. When it was perceived that they weren't practicing their new religion with enough zeal and sincerity, many were tortured and killed. Many more had their possessions confiscated and were forced to leave. They were even given a special name — marranos. If Jews were tolerated in Catholic society, it was with the stigma of special accoutrements such as a badge or armband.

Long before Krystalnacht ever took place, Popes like Lotario dei Conti di Segni — "Innocent III" — were requiring Jews to identify themselves with badges or armbands.[750],[cv] This is, in fact, where "German" Nazis got the idea.

How does one explain the dichotomy between the historic abuse and persecution the Catholic Church has given Jews and this inexplicable loyalty?

It is proof of the Roman tactic of scapegoating Jews. To the delight of their Inquisitors, Catholic power-brokers are able to manipulate their proxies into willing subservience by dangling positons of power and prominence over them.

Author, Author

The author of The Franklin Cover-up was Nebraska State Senator John DeCamp.

During the Vietnam War, DeCamp was the aide-de-camp to the CIA Station Chief in Saigon, William Egan Colby. What got DeCamp his job was the same qualification that got Colby his — they were both devout Roman Catholics.

DeCamp and Colby worked the American end of the purposeful debacle known as “Vietnam” to include lawless war crimes committed during the “Phoenix Project”[751] such as mass murder as well as trafficking in women, children and opium.

The Princeton and Columbia-educated Colby was so devout, in fact, he was known as “the Warrior Priest”.[752],[cvi]

DeCamp is equally in the Catholic camp; having spent his formative years as a young teenager at a monastery in Minnesota.[753] Whether he, too, was abused is currently unknown although he does claim to have spent time at Boys Town, as well.[754]

DeCamp was retained as legal counsel for the Director of Boys Town, Monsignor Robert Hupp, during the very years in question.[755] On the rare occasions where DeCamp is cleared to be interviewed by Roman puppets in “alternative media”, this conflict of interest is left unaddressed.

DeCamp was personally commissioned for his work as an agent of disinformation and “cover-up” by the Prefect of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith (what was formerly the Inquisition), Cardinal Joseph Aloisius Ratzinger. DeCamp would see his friend again, after he became “Pope Benedict XVI”.[756]

Although Conspiracy of Silence paints Monsignor Robert Hupp as an unwitting victim of Lawrence King, the reverse is true. Hupp was fully aware of what was going on at Boys Town when he became its director in 1973. This included abuse of boys so severe one sadistic priest ended up murdering his victim.[757]

In an act of supreme perversion, President Gerald Ford (a former member of the Warren Commission) appointed Hupp a U.S. Government representative to the United Nations for the welfare of children.[758] The man who helped cover-up the broad-daylight slaughter of sitting President John F. Kennedy by the Vatican-controlled CIA would later appoint another accomplice to become Director of "Catholics In Action": George Herbert Walker Bush.

After victims were given to Lawrence King from Boys Town (girls were added to the orphanage in 1979) they were transported all over the country to be used and abused.

Reputed victims and whistleblowers like Paul Bonacci claimed they were taken from the redwoods of Bohemian Grove in California to the basement of the White House in Washington, D.C.

Under Sus-Spence

If mainstream media covered the issue, it was with the spin that the boys taken from jails, foster homes and orphanages like Boys Town were actually adult homosexual prostitutes. However, even the labels of "call boy" or "rent boy" implies they are under-age which is what the sexual deviants — most of them homosexuals — desire.

> A homosexual prostitution ring is under investigation by federal and District authorities and includes among its clients key officials of the Reagan and Bush administrations, military officers, congressional aides and U.S. and foreign businessmen with close social ties to Washington's political elite, documents obtained by The Washington Times reveal.
>
> One of the ring's high profile clients was so well-connected, in fact, that he could arrange a middle-of-the-night tour of the While House for his friends on Sunday, July 3, of last year. Among the six persons on the extraordinary 1 a.m. tour were two male prostitutes. ~ The Washington Times[759]

The list of those who patronized the "homosexual prostitutes" is impressive — Among the client names contained in the vouchers — and identified by prostitutes and escort operators — are government officials, ... U.S. military officers, businessmen, lawyers, bankers, congressional aides, and other professionals. ...

> One of the ring's big-spending clients is Craig J. Spence, Washington socialite and international trade consultant, according to documents and interviews with operators and prostitutes who say they engaged in sexual activities with Mr. Spence.
>
> Mr. Spence spent upwards of $20,000 a month for male prostitutes who provided sex to him and his friends, said to include military personnel who also acted as his "body-guards." It was Mr. Spence who arranged the nocturnal tour of the Reagan White House. Repeated attempts to reach Mr. Spence by telephone, fax machine and personal visits to his home, were unsuccessful.[760]

Perhaps Spence couldn't be reached because he was already in the process of "getting depressed". The former ABC correspondent-turned Asian lobbyist made the mistake of trying to play the CIA's game without the CIA.

> Craig J. Spence, an enigmatic figure who threw glittery parties for key officials of the Reagan and Bush administrations, media stars and top military officers, bugged the gatherings to compromise guests, provided cocaine, blackmailed some associates and spent up to > $20,000 a month on male prostitutes, according to friends, acquaintances and records.

>
> The 48-year-old D.C. power broker has been linked to a homosexual prostitution ring currently under investigation by the U.S. Attorney's Office. Its clients included several top government and business officials from Washington and abroad. ...
>
> Mr. Spence's influence appeared unlimited, aptly demonstrated by his ability to arrange midnight tours of the White House, according to three persons who said they took part in those tours.
>
> "It was a show-the-flag time for Craig Spence," said one person who went on a July 3, 1988, tour that included two male prostitutes. "He just wanted everyone to know just how damned powerful he was," said the person. "And when we were strolling through the White House at 1 o'clock in the morning, we were believers."[761]

Those who attended Mr. Spence's "parties" were all of America's big names — many of them quite Catholic.

> After arriving in Washington in the late 1970s, Mr. Spence was hosting parties during the early Reagan years attended by, among others, journalists Eric Sevareid, Ted Koppel and ["Neocon[cvii]" Jew] William Safire; former CIA Director William Casey [Roman Catholic]; the late John Mitchell, attorney general in the Nixon administration; conservative activist Phyllis Schlafly [Roman Catholic Dame of Malta]; Ambassador James Lilley [Yale Skull and Bones CIA operative]; and Gen. Alfred M. Gray [extreme sexual deviant[762],[763]], the commandant of the Marine Corps.[764]

The location from which the Jesuits exert much of their control on Washington is Georgetown University and Craig Spence had a "friend" there, as well — but of course when the "friend" noticed Spence behaving oddly he broke off the "friendship" immediately!

> Georgetown University law professor Richard Gordon said he was a close friend of Mr. Spence's until his "behavior began deteriorating quite markedly."

> Mr. Gordon recalled being at a gathering at Mr. Spence's home and having a conversation with veteran NBC and CBS correspondent Liz Trotta.[765]

Apparently Spence made his Jesuit/CIA connections while helping spin Vietnam for ABC.

> Mr. Spence, a former ABC-TV correspondent who covered the war in Vietnam, was one of the biggest spending clients of the homosexual prostitution network, according to credit-card vouchers obtained by The Times.[766]

The control the Devil's Simulation has over editors and "journalists" is just as important as what it exerts over cops and judges. Yorkshire Television's Conspiracy of Silence claimed that the biggest name to come from the "Franklin" (Boys Town) scandal in media was Omaha World-Herald celebrity columnist Peter Citron.

Yet, the most reliable of the Franklin / Boys Town victim whistleblowers — Alisha Owen — named World-Herald Publisher Harold Andersen as a friend of Lawrence King and frequent raper of children.

Andersen wielded influence well beyond Omaha.

> He was publisher and chief executive of the newspaper from 1966 until 1989. He also served high-profile roles for groups representing newspapers around the country and the world, including the American Newspaper Publishers Association and the World Press Freedom Committee. He also served on The Associated Press Board of Directors from 1980 to 1986. ~ The Journal Star[767]

When repeated claims of abuse reached the Nebraska State Foster Care Review Board, a massive report was filed and turned in to law enforcement. Board Chair Carol Stitt[cviii] would tell Yorkshire Television the report was fully one foot high in documents.

Nothing was done.

The Nebraska Legislature stepped in and conducted its own investigation, retaining Private Investigator Gary Caradori. Caradori took personal statements from Paul Bonacci, Alisha Owen and another purported victim, Troy Boner.

Owen also named wealthy department-store heir Alan Baer and Omaha's Chief of Police, Robert C. Wadman as voracious child predators.[768] She would go on to claim in Nebraska State Court that Wadman had impregnated her during one of the many sex abuse sessions she was subjected to.

Like Lawrence King, Wadman was brought in from outside Omaha. He had skyrocketed from obscurity as the Utah Deputy Commissioner of Public Safety. When things got too hot for Wadman, he moved on to become the Chief of Police of Aurora, Illinois, a suburb of the Catholic stronghold of Chicago.

In July of 1990, Gary Caradori phoned his wife and told her that he had "big names" to turn in to the Nebraska State Senate. He piloted a Cessna airplane to Chicago, ostensibly so that he and his son could watch the Baseball All-Star game. Actually, Caradori was collecting evidence. During his return flight, early on the morning of July 11th, Carardori's plane exploded. His 8 year old son Andrew James ("A.J.") died with him. Both were found amongst the debris which, unfortunately for them, just happened to fall into the new jurisdiction of Chief Robert Wadman.[769]

Alisha Owen fared little better. By that time, the FBI had finally arrived in Omaha and immediately began applying pressure — not to any pedophiles, but to Alisha's fellow whistleblower Troy Boner. The FBI flipped Boner and got him to reverse statements he had made to government officials and Private Investigator Gary Caradori. Boner became a key witness in court, testifying that the accusations of child sex slave trafficking in Omaha were a "hoax" dreamed up by Owen for financial gain.

Still from Private Investigator Gary Caradori's recorded debrief of Omaha child sex trafficking victim Alisha Owen.

Lawrence King was arraigned for embezzling $38 million dollars from the Franklin Federal Credit Union. The FFCU had a very large number of accounts with the municipality of Boys Town — known as "the richest square mile in the world". Essentially, King was stealing from the Catholic Church and that was what brought the swift full force of the "secular" United States government down upon him.

Charges of child abuse and sex trafficking went unaddressed. He was given the minimum sentence of 15 years.

Alisha Owen's testimony was used against her. She was tried and convicted of five counts of perjury and given the maximum 5 year sentence on each for a cumulative 25 years in prison.

After her conviction, Owen received help in filing her appeal from a Nebraska lawyer — a former State Senator named John DeCamp.

Not surprisingly, her appeal was unsuccessful.[770]

Good Morning Vietnam!

Being a media propagandist during the Vietnam war[cix] helped Craig Spence tap into the drug trade which shifted from the Orient in the 1970’s to South America in the 1980’s.

> Mr. Spence was generous with cocaine at his parties, according to several people who said they witnessed drug use at the exclusive Kalorama house. ...
>
> Several friends said Mr. Spence bragged that U.S. military personnel, for whom he had built a gymnasium in El Salvador, had smuggled cocaine back to him when they returned to the United States.
>
> “I heard he was selling drugs, or smuggling drugs into the country from El Salvador,” said a friend who worked closely with Mr. Spence. “He went down there two or three times or maybe more. He was trying to interest a Japanese firm with buying a fishery in El Salvador.” ~ Washington Times[771]

Fortunately for Mr. Spence, the government agencies citizens have entrusted to interdict drug trafficking are as effective as the ones supposedly interdicting human trafficking.

> U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration officials said this week they had no evidence of any such operation.[772]

As “former” Roman Catholic Lieutenant Colonel Oliver North, USMC, would tell Yale Skull and Bones Roman Catholic John Forbes Kerry for his Senate “investigation” of “Iran/Contra”, “I don’t recall...”

Although Spence was painted as erratic and making wild, unsubstantiated boasts, he clearly wielded power.

> Mr. Spence made good contacts in Japan and among Chinese expatriates, often bragging of his close association with former Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone and appearing in public with a Chinese businessman who once served as an unofficial representative of Communist China in Washington, sources said.[773]

The Washington Times quoted an unnamed “businessman” as having heard Spence claim he was a “secret agent”. This was spun as just another wild boast, much like what Father Marcial Maciel told his son Raul, right before he raped him.

> He described Mr. Spence as “strange,” saying that he often boasted that he was working for the CIA and on one occasion said he was going to disappear for a while “because he had an important CIA assignment.”
>
> According to the businessman, Mr. Spence told him that the CIA might “double-cross him,” however, and kill him instead “and then to make it look like a suicide.”
>
> The businessman also said he attended a birthday bash for Roy Cohn at Mr. Spence’s house. He said Mr. Casey was at the party. “One time he stormed into another party with a big, white hat and an entourage of security guards,” the businessman said. “It was all rather bizarre.”[774]

Finally in 1989, it was decided to rein Mr. Spence in.

> Craig J. Spence, a Washington lobbyist who is a subject of a Federal investigation of male prostitution in Washington, is facing cocaine and gun possession charges in New York, the Manhattan District Attorney’s office said yesterday.
>
> Mr. Spence, 48 years old, was arrested July 31 at the Barbizon Hotel at 140 East 63d Street in Manhattan. ~ NY Times[775]

Three months later, to the day, Craig J. Spence was dead.

> Craig Spence, a lobbyist linked to a homosexual escort service under Federal investigation, was found dead in a hotel room here, the police said today.
>
> Mr. Spence, 49 years old, was found in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel on Friday after firefighters used a saw to cut open his door, which was barricaded with a bed. Leonard Atkins, the Suffolk County Medical Examiner, said that an autopsy had been completed but that it might be weeks before a cause of death was announced. ~ NY Times/AP[776]

Apparently his claims of a suicide double-cross weren’t so “bizarre” after all.

Chapter 22

Muddy Waters In Arkansas

5 May 1993: West Memphis, Arkansas boys Steve Branch, Michael Moore, and Christopher Byers — all three are 8 years old — are reported missing. At 1:45 pm the next day, their bodies were found in a drainage canal in Robin Hood Hills. They were naked and hog-tied. The genitals of Christopher Byers had been mutilated.

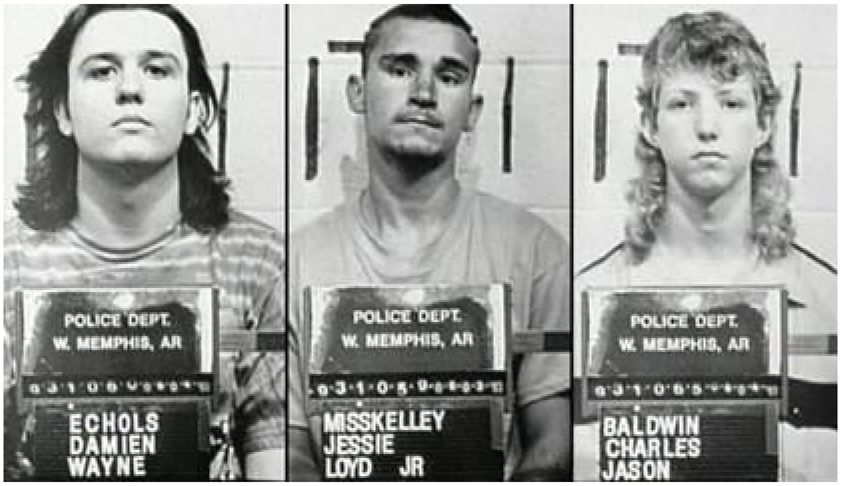
Suspicions were immediately cast upon three disaffected teenagers; Charles Jason Baldwin (16, at that time), Jessie Lloyd Misskelley Jr. (17) and Michael Wayne “Damien” Echols (18,).



POLICE DEPT.
W. MEMPHIS, AR
ECHOLS
DAMIEN
WAYNE
POLICE DEPT.
W. MEMPHIS, AR
MISSKELLEY
JESSIE
LOYD JR
POLICE DEPT.
W. MEMPHIS, AR
BALDWIN
CHARLES JASON

Baldwin was a loner in school, Misskelley and Echols were drop-outs.

All three had reputations for vandalism and bizarre behavior typical of youth seeking attention.

Of the three, Misskelley seemed the least intellectually capable. In fact, some questioned his ability to function as a consenting adult. It was he who ended up giving police a confession that the boys had been raped and mutilated by the teenagers as part of a satanic ritual.

Evidence of sexual molestation (beyond the mutilation of young Christopher Byers) remained mostly unaddressed, despite all three having a “dilated anus”. This was later dismissed as typical post mortem.

The genitals of Steven Branch showed signs of forced stimulation and the anus of James Moore had dirt and debris.[777],[778],[779]

The medical examiners claimed very specifically on each boy’s rectum: “no evidence of injury”. Yet “injury” does not preclude sexual abuse. In fact, the conditions of each boy — naked with wrists tied to ankles, left to left, right to right — made the question of abuse nearly a foregone conclusion.

In 1993, DNA profiling had been in use for almost a decade, yet it was not brought into play to help identify who molested the boys.

Although there were multiple contusions and abrasions on all three boys, there was little blood where the bodies were found. Likely what was done to them took place in another location.

FBI “profiler” John Douglas was consulted and Douglas concluded that the motive wasn’t perverse ritual such as “Satanism” but personal animus.[780] What three 8 year-old boys did to cause someone to hate them so, the Federal “profiler” didn’t say.

Also of note; all three victims were from the same Cub Scout Troop. Was the perpetrator also involved and did they use this connection to target the boys?

Apparently, neither law enforcement nor media felt these were pertinent questions.

What was sadly consistent with both the victims and suspects was that all were part of poor, broken families. The victims were little-supervised and the suspects were little-loved.

Because Jessie Misskelley gave evidence against Charles Baldwin and Michael “Damien” Echols, he received a separate trial.

> On February 5, 1994, Misskelley was convicted by a jury of one count of first-degree murder and two counts of second-degree murder.[31]

> The court sentenced him to life plus 40 years in prison.[32] His conviction was appealed, but the Arkansas Supreme Court affirmed the conviction.[33] ~ Wikipedia[781]

Echols was treated as the ring-leader and seemed happy to incriminate himself during interrogation. He had knowledge of Steve Branch and (James) Michael Moore being drowned as well as the mutilation of Christopher Byers. Defense argued that police or media exposed Echols to those facts and he was manipulated into divulging them as evidence of "guilt".

Both Baldwin and Echols were found guilty of murder in the first degree, three counts. Christopher Baldwin was sentenced to life in prison, Michael "Damien" Echols was sentenced to death.

Two years after the trial, HBO sent "documentarians" Joe Berlinger and Bruce Sinofsky to West Memphis. The two were fresh off their victory of having Delbert Ward acquitted of the death of his brother William in Syracuse, New York with their documentary Brother's Keeper.

One wonders at the capability of lawyers and police officers when such is necessary yet, sadly, still plausible.

However, their corresponding documentary in Arkansas — Paradise Lost: The Child Murders at Robin Hood Hills — answered few questions. By admission of the "documentarians", this was on purpose.

> "We embrace ambiguity, not because we want to confuse people but because, unless you're an eyewitness to an event, there's no one answer to a situation," Berlinger says.
>
> Disturbing facts about the defendants — such as Echols' blasé attitude toward his defense and his professing to like being known as a "bogeyman" — coexist with stories of lazy police work that suggest other possible suspects may have gone unnoticed. ~ Chicago Tribune[782]

What was noteworthy was that the film crew was given a "memento" from (John) Mark Byers, the adoptive father of Christopher Byers: a folding knife. When the crew realized the knife had blood on it, they sent it to the West Memphis Police.

All three boys had received lacerations and Christopher was mutilated with a knife.

The blood tested human — O+. Both Byers and, by coincidence, his adopted son had O+ blood.

Mark Byers and his wife Melissa (Christopher’s biological mother) had been in trouble with the law. In 1994, they were arrested for stealing $20,000 of antiques from a neighbor’s house and trying to sell them at a pawn shop. When Byers happened upon a fight between two boys, he forced them to finish with his knife while he held them at gunpoint. One boy required hospitalization.

During their interviews by HBO, the Byers were the most vocal in their hatred for the three suspects.

While the court appearance for their burglary was still pending in 1996, Melissa Byers died “mysteriously”. Paramedics were dispatched to their home in Cherokee, Arkansas to find her naked, on her bed with her arms at her sides, unresponsive.

When she was pronounced dead at the hospital, Sharp County Sheriff Sonny Powell called Arkansas State Police Investigator Stan Witt to report it as suspicious.

> ...her urine was abnormal. It tested positive for marijuana and for hydromorphone, the synthetic narcotic more commonly known as Dilaudid. Melissa Byers did not have a prescription for Dilaudid. On the street, it sells as much as $50 per tablet. The drug is a potent opiate. It can slow breathing, heart rate, and brain activity. What was strange was that, while the drug showed up in Melissa Byers’ urine, suggesting recent use, it was not found in her blood, which would be expected of a lethal agent. Moreover, that anomaly in the body was matched by an anomaly in the report.
>
> Through what Jim Clark, the director of the crime lab, recently described as a “typographical error,” no mention of the finding of > Dilaudid appeared in the autopsy report's conclusions. Instead, on the report's final page, the word "hydromorphone," or Dilaudid, appeared as "hydrocodone," which is another drug entirely. Nor was the Dilaudid mentioned on the page listing the medical examiner's findings.

>
> Asked if the discovery of an illegal drug in the body of a possible homicide victim was not a finding worth listing, Clark affirmed that, "There may be room for some further investigation as to how she obtained the drug." As for the needle marks in the body's arms, feet, and groin, Clark said, "In the pathologist's opinion, all those wounds were probably done at the hospital."
>
> When Witt received the report, it offered no indication that Byers' death might be connected to illegal drug activity. Instead, he had the crime lab's vague conclusion that, "because of the lack of definitive anatomic or toxicological findings, the cause and manner of death are left undetermined." ~ The Arkansas Times[783]

Even more curious was the prosecution of Byers' problems with the law.

> On Aug. 28, 1995, he entered into a plea agreement negotiated by his attorney and Stewart Lambert, a deputy prosecutor for the Third Judicial District. According to the negotiated plea, Byers was to pay $20,000 to the woman whose house was burglarized, make restitution to the father of the boy who was injured in the fight, and pay a $250 fine.
>
> An additional part of the agreement was that Byers would leave the Third Judicial District, which is made up of Sharp, Lawrence, Randolph, and Jackson counties and not come back to them, or to Fulton County either.
>
> Lambert, the prosecutor, said he entered the plea agreement with Byers because a key witness in the burglary case was a minor whose mother was reluctant to have him testify, making a successful prosecution difficult. As for ordering Byers out of the district, Lambert said, such an arrangement can be legal if done with the agreement of the party > being banished. Byers accepted those terms, but has not made the required payments.[784]

“Make restitution and get out of town”?

Byers has been presented as a “low-income, backwoods ‘bumpkin’”. Where did he get the $20,250?

If there were strange powers at work in Arkansas they seemed to belong more to Mark Byers than “Damien” Echols.

Byers had by far the most motive and the crime fit him best as perpetrator. His adopted son received the worst treatment, just as the innocent “rival” of another man’s seed would have.

To this day, Mark Byers remains even to be questioned as a suspect.

As a result of the HBO documentary Paradise Lost, the “West Memphis Three” gained national prominence and became the cause célèbre of the entertainment industry — a clique of people not known for their judgment, morals or ethics.

Michael Wayne Echols bore the brunt of police investigation as the leader of the three suspects. He was the best witness for the prosecution against himself. He reveled in darkness, satanism and witchcraft and cultivated the persona of a “boogeyman”. His nonplussed behavior through proceedings that would ultimately send him to Death Row added to the perception that he was guilty.

> Damien’s dress and behavior, his interest in the occult and Wicca, and his love for heavy metal represented to many in the community iconic symbols of the devil. These beliefs are hardly relegated to West Memphis. Recent polls from Gallup and Harris have found six in ten adult Americans believe in the existence of the devil and four in ten believe in demonic possession. Damien played to these fears. He would later described himself as a candidate for the local boogeyman. ...
>
> Even his name became a matter of controversy, with some believing Damien chose his name after the antichrist character in the Omen films. ~ Hill[785]

Conversely, Echols enjoyed the most support from notables in “entertainment”. The personalities included Eddie Vedder of “Pearl Jam” — a name which has been suspected of having sexual overtones but has been assured as an homáge to professional basketball player Daron Oshay “Mookie” Blaylock. Apparently, Mookie meant a lot to the band.

Also in support of the would-be Wiccan was Natalie Maines of “the Dixie Chicks”, artists Patti Smith, Henry Rollins and Tom Waits as well as John Michael “Ozzy” Osbourne, formerly of the aptly-named band “Black Sabbath”. It was Osbourne who, in 1980, released his own homáge to the self-described “Beast” Aleister Crowley with a song of the same name: “Mr. Crowley”.

Hollywood would not be left behind and famed New Zealand film Director / Producer Peter Jackson felt the plight of “Damien” and his friends was something that couldn’t let him sleep at night.

Jackson is best known for the 6 movie effort he has put in for John Ronald Reuel Tolkien’s Roman Catholic fantasies; The Lord of the Rings. In 2012, Jackson released another film, West of Memphis, adding to the new legend of Damien Echols.

The pressure worked.

DNA evidence was re-found — not to help conclude who abused and murdered the three 8 year old boys — but to help exonerate the “West Memphis Three”.

In 2010, the Arkansas Supreme Court ordered a hearing to review the “new” evidence.

Prosecutors, however, didn’t want to let it get that far and negotiated an “Alford plea” with the three. An “Alford plea” asserts the innocence of the accused while simultaneously acknowledging that the evidence in the possession of the prosecution would likely convict them.

Yes, you read that right.

It’s known as a “legal loophole” for a Prosecution that isn’t interested in its responsibilities.

In 2011, all three were given their freedom.

When Echols was released from prison, he was met by one of his greatest fans, actor Johnny Depp.

With his new freedom, “Damien” took his wife to live in a location he felt best suited who he was; Salem, Massachusetts.

> Echols now lives in a historic 18th century home with his wife, Lorri Davis, 49, whom he met and married while on death row. Davis first reached out to Echols after she saw a documentary about the case. They married in a Buddhist ceremony in a prison visiting room in 1999. It was the first time the two had ever touched. ~ USA Today[786]

Clearly, there was something that attracted the Elite to “Damien” Echols. Were it not for him, there would have been no attention lavished on West Memphis, Arkansas and suspects Jessie Misskelley and Jason Baldwin would’ve languished in prison.

What was it?

> Born Michael Wayne Hutchison on December 11, 1974, he changed his name to Damien Wayne Echols in his early teens after being adopted by his stepfather Jack Echols, a strict Catholic. He stated at trial he chose the name Damien because he had for a brief period explored Catholicism, and he was fascinated by the saint, Father Damien, who had worked with lepers, eventually becoming infected with the disease. This was confirmed by his father and by his [parole officer] Jerry Driver. Driver, a member of the parish, said he spoke with Damien’s priest, although Driver intimated that Damien’s only interest in the Catholic church was to infiltrate it in order to steal the eucharist for satanic ceremonies. ~ Hill[787]

Even “Damien’s” parole officer was a devout Roman Catholic; so much so that he sought to distance the convicted Death Row inmate from the “Mother Church”.

The idea that Michael Wayne Echols chose the nickname “Damien” from an obscure Catholic “Saint” is as ridiculous as it is telling.

Yet, even the attempts by Echols to fabricate a dark mystique has thoroughly Roman roots.

The 1976 horror movie by Jew Richard Donald Schwartzberg ("Richard Donner") The Omen was yet another big-budget Hollywood film that gave cover for the Vatican. It reinforced the Jesuit Biblical heresy and subterfuge that "Antichrist" is a single individual who suddenly appears verses the Protestant (and Biblical) doctrine that Antichrist is the Office of the Papacy.

> ...it is manifest that the Roman pontiffs, with their adherents, defend [and practice] godless doctrines and godless services. And the marks [all the vices] of Antichrist plainly agree with the kingdom of the Pope and his adherents. For Paul, in describing Antichrist to the Thessalonians, calls him II Thess. 2:3 — an adversary of Christ, who opposes and exalts himself above all that is called God or that is worshiped, so that he as God sits in the Temple of God. He speaks therefore of one ruling in the Church, not of heathen kings, and he calls this one the adversary of Christ, because he will devise doctrine conflicting with the Gospel, and will assume to himself divine authority. ~ Concordia, Philip Melanchthon[788]

Three years before, in 1973, The Exorcist showed the world how difficult it was for Catholic priests to "tame" little "demon-possessed" girls. It was created by Jesuit school valedictorian[789] William Peter Blatty. The success raised Blatty to an "instant millionaire". For such a devoted Catholic,[790] Blatty's Lebanese / Greek background made him an interesting mix. He called his time under the Jesuits at Georgetown "the best years of my life".[791] Blatty made Father William J. O'Malley, S.J., a technical advisor for the film.[792] In return, the McQuaid High, Fordham Prep teacher got the role of Jesuit Father Joseph Dyer to play.

Warner Brothers and Blatty offered Direction of the film to Stanley Kubrick but it eventually went to William Friedkin of French Connection fame. Both were / are Jews.

— Because it's "the Jews" who run Hollywood, right?

Although much has been made of “Damien” Echols being a “Buddhist” or a Wiccan, while he was still in prison, benefitting from massive media attention (unlike his comrades), Catholicism was on his mind.

> CNN: Larry King Live
>
> KING: We are back with Damien Echols. By the way, we understand you are supported by many people. Among them, Natalie Maines of the Dixie Chicks and Eddie Vedder of Pearl Jam, is that right?
>
> ECHOLS: That is correct.
>
> KING: Have they been to see you?
>
> ECHOLS: Eddie has. He has been to see me a couple of times. We talk on the phone, write, things of that nature. He keeps a — he has been — Eddie has went above and beyond the call of duty to me and my wife both. You know, he has been probably the greatest friend a person could have through all of this.
>
> KING: Do you have strong spiritual beliefs?
>
> ECHOLS: I think I do. But it is pretty hard to articulate exactly what that is.
>
> KING: What keeps you going all day?
>
> ECHOLS: My wife. My wife and I guess you could also say those spiritual beliefs.
>
> KING: You are a Catholic?
>
> ECHOLS: I’m a member of the Catholic Church, yes.[793]

As far as Echols being on Death Row, “Eddie” blames his plight on “religious fundamentalist Christianity” — as well as animal cruelty and restrictions on abortion.

> These days, the singer pours his anger into political campaigning. He insists that unlike the Dixie Chicks, Pearl Jam didn’t lose fans after criticising the Bush administration, though they “didn’t win any either”. He’s still furious about the last presidency. “Those fucking > bastards, they put us in this situation and screw up the whole fucking planet and goodwill with every other nation, and they are not going to be held criminally responsible."

>
> Above him in the HQ there's a portrait of Obama. Vedder concedes that things are changing, but there's so much that hasn't: "People on death row, the treatment of animals, women's right to choose. So much in America is based on religious fundamentalist Christianity. Grow up! This is the modern world!"
>
> He sounds more like an angry kid than a middle-aged man. He sounds as contrary as one, too. ~ The Guardian[794]

It is a schizophrenic application of compassion, to say the least, but one all-too-common for "mentally-challenged" entertainment Elites.

Interesting that both "Pearl Jam" and "The Dixie Chicks" stand with Damien Echols yet against George W. Bush, despite the Bush family Nazi, CIA, secret Roman Catholic lineage (or, rather, because of it).

As Eddie Vedder, Natalie Maines, Peter Jackson and Johnny Depp all surrounded their hero, "Damien" Echols, the contorted bodies of three little boys got lost in the media hype. Also lost and forgotten was the fact that no one had been punished for the horrible things done to them.

Just as intended, all that has come out of West Memphis, Arkansas since then have been muddy waters.

Chapter 23

Primæ Noctis

27 May 1993: Father Gerald Ridsdale, accompanied by Bishop George Pell, appears in Melbourne Magistrates Court for molesting 8 boys — Ridsdale is given a 3 month sentence.

Because pedophilia is a crime that shames its victims, accurate statistics are impossible to keep.

Because the Devil’s Simulation has emplaced its members in key positions within media, law enforcement, politics and the judiciary (not to mention military and intelligence), when numbers are finally discussed, they are always far short of reality.

Therefore, when al Jazeera reports that Australia’s “Royal Commission into Institutional Responses to Child Sexual Abuse” has chronicled —

> ... 4,444 alleged incidents of sexual abuse by Catholic priests between 1980 and 2015.
>
> The inquiry also heard that 1,265 priests and religious brothers and nuns had been accused during a 60-year period ending 2010.[795]

— we can assume those numbers are even worse than they appear ... far worse.

The “Commission” also heard the patented claim that only 6-to-7% of clergy abuse children.

The number of victims, alone, makes this assertion ludicrous.

If one factors in the number of clergy who are privy to the crimes yet refuse to report them to authorities, that number gets inverted: 93-to-94% of Roman Catholic clergy are aware of, or involved in criminal activity. Those who don’t directly participate collude with the perpetrators and shield them from future victims and authorities.

The very fact that a “Commission” or “Committee” or “Board” of politicians has been called to deal with a problem that isn’t its purview (unless the lengthy process of legislation is involved) shows that the system is corrupt.

If a country is suffering from a wave of heinous crime instituted by a foreign entity, the bodies most effective for dealing with them are the judiciary, law enforcement at all levels and even the military.

Those same foreign agents have, until now, misused the military to do the job of law enforcement and acclimated the citizenry to a Police State. But imagine the military being used to address pedophilia committed by the Catholic Church — a sovereign political body — against the people of any nation suffering from it.

Now apply the twisted rules those same foreign agents have used to fabricate needless wars towards one that is needed. An invasion of Italy — with or without that government’s permission — culminating in seizure of all Vatican personnel and property.

Thanks to the many crimes of Vatican agents in the West, it is not without precedent!

In consequence of uncalled-for militarization of all major nations and Western ones, in particular, the forces needed are already prepositioned.

Of those Western nations, Australia, in particular, seems well-controlled by the Vatican and her Jesuit special forces.

The 28th and, at this writing, current Prime Minister is Anthony John "Tony" Abbott; a Jesuit-trained Roman Catholic. His alma mater, St. Ignatius College, was reported in 2015 as having the Rector of the school — Stanislaus Hogan — arrested because police found an unbelievable one thousand, five hundred images on his computer of children being sexually abused.[796]

> The Prime Minister and Agriculture Minister Barnaby Joyce attended Riverview, Education Minister Christopher Pyne attended St. Ignatius and Joe Hockey [Australian Ambassador to the United States] is an Old Aloysian. ...
>
> During Hogan's 50 years as a priest, he served in all four Australian Jesuit schools, including Riverview and St. Aloysius in Sydney, and Xavier College in Melbourne. the Prime Minister and Agriculture Minister Barnaby Joyce attended Riverview, Education Minister Christopher Pyne attended St. Ignatius and Joe Hockey is an Old Aloysian.
>
> South Australian District Court judge Peter Brebner yesterday said some of the images Hogan had downloaded were among the worst types of child pornography, including photos of semi-naked or naked boys aged between 12 and 16 tied to a bed or being subjected to bondage, and of children engaged in fellatio and penetrative abuse. ...
>
> The court heard Hogan had been collecting the books and magazines since the 1970s... ~ The Australian[797]

What wasn't addressed by the media or law enforcement were the venues from which the well-placed, senior Jesuit was able to amass such a shocking amount of illegal materials.

The chief executive office of any nation is usually held by a puppet who has little will or agenda of their own. If they do, and that agenda does not comport with the Devil's Simulation, they receive the "Kennedy treatment".

As a result, looking for Roman “breadcrumbs” in high-profile positions isn’t as important as finding them in key offices that receive little media attention.

Even so, a quick look at who have been Australia’s Prime Ministers is telling. Here are just the last few years’ worth —

- “Tony” Abbott: Jesuit-trained Roman Catholic.
- Julia Gillard: Australia’s first woman Prime Minister, turned her back on her Baptist upbringing to become an “atheist”.[798]
- Kevin Rudd: Marist College, Ashgrove
- John Howard: far-Left “Rhodes Scholar”
- Paul Keating: LaSalle, Bankstown
- Malcolm Fraser: Magdalen College, Oxford[cx]

The list is extensive and repetitive; far-Left, Jesuit-trained Catholics or both. All faithfully serve the Devil’s Simulation.

Of course not every Roman Catholic is willing to commit treason, or worse, in order to maintain allegiance with the Vatican but nearly all in prominent positions were emplaced there because they are.

Ridsdale & Pell

The story of Gerald Francis[cxi] Ridsdale is the same as pedophile priests before and since.

The victims’ advocacy group, Broken Rites Australia, appears more intent on exposing Ridsdale and Pell than “mainstream” media.[cxii]

> ... the Catholic Church harboured ... child-abuse criminal — Father Gerald Francis Ridsdale — for 30 years in western Victoria while his superiors and fellow-priests remained ... . In 1982, when Father Ridsdale had been abusing children for 20 years, a clergy committee (of which Father George Pell was a member) noted that Ridsdale was being transferred away from Victoria. Eventually, some of Ridsdale’s victims began to report his crimes to the Victoria Police, instead of > merely to the offending organisation (the church). So, in 1993, Victorian detectives charged Ridsdale in court. He was accompanied to court by his support person, George Pell, who had become an assistant bishop in Melbourne. However, no bishop accompanied the victims. Encouraged by Broken Rites, more victims later spoke to the detectives. In his four court cases between 1993 and 2014, Ridsdale has been jailed for a minimum of 24 years for assaulting 54 of his victims. In 2017, after eleven more of his victims spoke to the detectives, Ridsdale is facing court again, on a fifth batch of charges, including rape, buggery and indecent assault.[799]

Gerald Ridsdale and George Pell, as well as their families, have always been close since their up-bringing in the "very Catholic" city of Ballarat, Victoria. Ridsdale began priestly duties in 1961 while Pell continued to study abroad, returning to join him a decade later. They even shared a Ballarat house for a year in 1973.

Like so many other predator priests, Ridsdale began to abuse and assault children even before his ordination — as if it was his calling.

> According to church documents, Ridsdale offended against children during his seminary training in the late 1950s and again immediately after he was ordained in 1961. Bishop James O'Collins's office learned in 1961 that Ridsdale was abusing a boy in Ballarat. Nevertheless, the church (under Bishop Mulkearns) continued using Ridsdale as a priest, putting more children at risk. The diocese shifted the Ridsdale problem from parish to parish but it never warned parishioners that their children were in danger. ...
>
> Ridsdale has admitted that, even while working in his very his first parish, he was already abusing children. The earliest of his charged offences was for an incident in late 1961, a few months after his ordination. This victim ("Gilbert") was from Camperdown, in Victoria's south-west. The court was told that Gilbert's father was hospitalised and Ridsdale was "minding" the boy. ...
>
> In some parishes, Ridsdale lasted only months or weeks. Early in his posting at the Inglewood parish (in north-central Victoria) in 1975, he > fled from this town overnight after some victims reported his crimes to the police, and he had to ask the bishop for a new posting. Ridsdale's sudden disappearance from Inglewood was obvious to his fellow priests in western Victoria.

>
> In the 1980s and early 1990s, Ridsdale was evacuated from the Ballarat diocese — to spend "time-out" in Melbourne, Sydney and the United States, to get him away from his further troubles in western Victoria. This "time-off", especially his overseas trip, was common knowledge among his Victorian colleagues. Priests were always interested to learn that another priest was getting an interstate or overseas trip.
>
> Ridsdale also committed crimes in New South Wales and the United States. He has not yet been brought to justice in those jurisdictions.
>
> His interstate and overseas stints were interspersed with more postings in the Ballarat diocese, all of which ended in more crimes.
>
> Ridsdale was still protected by the church's code of silence. One family says that when they complained to a senior cleric (Monsignor Leo Fiscalini) about Ridsdale committing buggery on their son, the monsignor urged the family to remain silent "for the church's sake". [800]

Simultaneously, George Pell was going places.

> Meanwhile, Father George Pell's career boomed. He moved to Melbourne, where he was the rector of Victoria's Corpus Christi seminary (in 1985-87) before becoming one of Melbourne's four auxiliary bishops (in 1987). As a Melbourne auxiliary bishop, Pell was no longer associated with the Ballarat diocese but was responsible for overseeing Melbourne's southern suburbs.[801]

After 30 years of abusing children, Ridsdale's crimes were finally allowed to catch up to him.

The full details and numbers will never be known.

> By Ridsdale’s fourth sentencing, in April 2014, his convictions involved a total of 54 children (mostly boys, plus several girls), aged between six and 16, who were sexually assaulted between 1961 and 1987. These are not Ridsdale’s only victims — they are merely those who eventually took advantage of the opportunity to talk with detectives from the Victoria Police and whose cases were included in Ridsdale’s pleas of guilty.
>
> Although the first of these convictions was for a crime committed in 1961, this does not mean that Ridsdale waited until 1961 before becoming a danger to children. The significance of “1961” is that this is about the time he was ordained as a Catholic priest, and this status gave him easy access to (and authority over) children. It remains to be seen what he was doing with children before he was ordained.
>
> Only a few of Ridsdale’s victims have contacted the police. Other Ridsdale victims (mostly boys, but also a few girls) have contacted Broken Rites or psychiatrists or solicitors or (unwisely) the Catholic Church without contacting the police.
>
> Countless more victims still remain silent. The total number of Ridsdale victims may amount to hundreds.
>
> Many Ridsdale victims still remain silent because they do not want to upset their “loyal Catholic” parents.
>
> Others feel embarrassed about contacting the detectives. Some of the victims in Ridsdale’s later court appearances said that this embarrassment was why they had waited so long.[802]

Also, like his predator priest peers, Ridsdale conflated “sacred” with profane and seemed to find a religious aspect to his crimes; as if he was serving a spiritual entity in robing the innocence of children.

> Gerald Ridsdale’s victims were sexually abused inside the church, in the presbytery (the parish house), in the priest’s car, in victims’ homes, at the home of Ridsdale’s parents in the city of Ballarat, during outings, and on holidays with the priest. He molested one boy and his sister a few hours after their father’s funeral.

> Some of the offences occurred during the sacrament of Confession — while Ridsdale would be asking questions about a child's "sins". After Confession (and after the molestation), Ridsdale would perform the rite of Absolution — an official declaration that the child was forgiven for the child's "sins".
>
> Many offences occurred before and after the celebration of Mass, First Holy Communions, Confirmation ceremonies, weddings and funerals. Many of the victims were altar boys.
>
> One altar boy was even sexually abused at the altar, when the church was empty and locked after Mass.[803]

The pain of victims was also as it had been in other locations; needlessly exacerbated by the dedication of friends and family to the Catholic Church.

> Many victims found it difficult to tell their Catholic parents that a Catholic priest was a child-molester. Some parents defended Ridsdale and the church, thus alienating their own children. Some victims remained silent, knowing that their "devout" family would not believe them. All this disrupted the relationship between victims and their parents.[804]

Ridsdale's predations — like the crimes of his peers — were far more than physical; they left psychological scars that sometimes never healed.

> For many Ridsdale victims, this was their first "sexual" experience. And this first experience was with a Catholic priest! This had adverse effects on the sexual development of victims, some of whom ended up with sexual problems.[805]

Like his peers, no victim was off-limits.

> One victim in the late 1970s was "Shane", an altar boy, who lived at in Ridsdale's earlier parish of Apollo Bay. Ridsdale had sexually abused him frequently while at Apollo Bay. Soon after Ridsdale was appointed to Edenhope, the priest heard that Shane's father died in an accident. Ridsdale returned to the Apollo Bay district to conduct the father's funeral and then offered to take Shane (aged 12) and his sister

> “Jill” (aged 11) to the Edenhope presbytery. The children’s mother gratefully accepted the offer. Back at Edenhope, on the night of the funeral, Ridsdale indecently mauled the girl and later the boy — while they were still grieving their father’s death. Jill told police in 1994 that, about 1990, she informed a female counsellor at the Catholic Family Welfare Bureau in Geelong about these assaults but the counsellor did not suggest reporting the priest to the police. Jill said she was surprised and angry about this omission.[806]

Like other pedophile priests, Gerald Ridsdale seemed satanically-possessed to violate the most innocent of children who showed no outward signs of sexual maturity. Some of his victims were as young as 4 years old.[cxiii]

Ridsdale’s nephew, David, would be such a child whose pain and confusion would destroy his sexual identity.

As more victims began to point their anger at the refusal of Australian agencies to carry out their responsibilities to protect and defend the citizenry against any malignant foreign insurgency (for such is Roman Catholicism), the national government acted: it instituted a “commission”.

In 2015, David Ridsdale gave an emotional testimony to the “Royal Commission into Institutional Responses to Child Sexual Abuse”.[807]

David wisely began at the beginning of his troubles —

> I grew up one of nine children in a large Catholic family in Ballarat. Both my parents are from large families and there are around 50 grandchildren on my father’s side of the family.
>
> The religion of my parents was an all invasive force in our lives with every aspect centred on the Catholic community. My mother was secretary of St. Alipius Parish School and was involved in the school for over 50 years. My parents remain committed members of St. Alipius Parish. My grandparents lived opposite the Redan Church and my grandmother was like a mother to all the priests who resided there. ...
>
> My uncle (my father’s oldest brother) Gerald Ridsdale, was a Catholic priest in the Diocese of Ballarat. Gerald was treated like a shining > light on my father's side of the family, particularly by my dad's mum. I believe he represented the pinnacle of her Catholic achievement.

>
> As a priest, Gerald held an almost supernatural level of power in our family and exerted a great deal of control over the family. He was treated as being better than his siblings and took full advantage of his exalted status. Gerald was charismatic and many were in awe of him.
>
> When Gerald came home to visit my grandmother, she would be very frantic. For example, hours before he was due to arrive, all of my father's 6 other siblings had to get their cars off the driveway and everything had to be prepared for Gerald to drive smoothly in.

For David, the abuse didn't end with his uncle. There was inappropriate behavior from the clergy at his school, as well.

> In 1974, I went to St. Alipius Boys Primary School for grade 3. My grade 3 teacher was Brother Gerald Leo Fitzgerald. Every Friday at the end of school, Brother Fitzgerald lined up our class, and we all had to kiss him goodbye, or potentially be strapped. Some kids got "special" kisses, meaning he used his tongue. This happened to me a couple of times and I would see him linger with other boys.

Although David may have escaped invasive sexual abuse, those he had concerns over did assault other children.

> While working in Ballarat East, Ridsdale also acted as chaplain at the four-classroom St. Alipius parish school, where he found like-minded company. Brother Robert Best who taught grade 6, Brother Edward Dowlan who taught grade 5, and Brother Gerald Leo Fitzgerald (now dead) who taught Grade 3, were all child-abusers. So was a later teacher there, Christian Brother Stephen Francis Farrell. All, except Fitzgerald, were later convicted of sex crimes. During Dowlan's County Court trial in 1996, the prosecution alleged that three St. Alipius boys were each sexually abused by Dowlan, Best and Ridsdale.
>
> One former St. Alipius altar boy said in his police statement, that after he was indecently assaulted by Ridsdale, the priest gave him a piece of Holy Communion bread (as used in Mass) as a reward. Another former > altar boy said that Ridsdale indecently assaulted the boy while the boy confessed his sins to the priest during the "sacrament of Confession".

> ~ Broken Rites[808]

There were other similar incidents of impropriety for David Ridsdale but he buried them, especially because they weren't as severe as what his own uncle had been doing to him.

When David's mother became pregnant again with another sibling (like a good Catholic woman), Father Gerald Ridsdale began taking David for weekends to "help out". He was only 11 years old when the abuse began.

Gerald Ridsdale's assaults were brazen, especially in the company of other clergy. Their acquiescence incensed David.

Father Ridsdale again exploited his trust by taking temporary custody of a boy whose parents were divorcing. He did as he pleased amongst the devout Catholics.

> I remember that while we were at my grandparents' home Gerald stood the boy on the table and was giving him Eskimo kisses and kissing him inappropriately in front of the members of the family who were present. I cannot recall exactly who was there, but it was more than just my immediate family. I remember being disturbed that nobody said anything to Gerald at the time. I remember as my parents were driving home from my grandparents' house, someone commented that Gerald's behaviour with the boy was weird. Nothing else was said.

Everything that Father Gerald Ridsdale did to his own nephew was predatory and premeditated.[cxiv]

> Gerald sexually abused me on a regular basis until 1982, when I was 15. ...
>
> Gerald wasn't secretive about his love for boys or in having boys around and touching us. He would use his power and prestige as a priest to convince children and adults to trust him.
>
> When Gerald started paying more attention to our family he began buying gifts for my parents. One gift I remember he bought us was a > colour TV. It was the first colour TV we owned. Much later my dad said, "I always wondered why he was so nice to us." I think one of my parents' biggest issues looking back was realising that Gerald groomed them to get to me.

This was Gerald Ridsdale's carefully-considered modus operandi.

> Early on, it became obvious that Gerry Ridsdale was obsessed with boys. He maintained an "open house", making his presbytery a drop-in centre for boys. He acquired a pool table and he was an early possessor of colour television, a microwave oven, an electric typewriter, a video-cassette player and computer games — all these became a magnet for boys.
>
> He would often invite a boy to stay overnight. Many "staunch Catholic" parents permitted (and even encouraged) this, believing that a priest is a good role model. But the boy would find that he was forced to share a double bed with Ridsdale.
>
> Sometimes Ridsdale took his victims far away from their families — on trips to other parts of Victoria, such as the presbytery at picturesque Apollo Bay. Even after leaving a parish, he would sometimes re-visit a family, perhaps a year later, to take their son on an outing, during which he would abuse the boy.
>
> He also took boys to White Cliffs in far-western New South Wales, where he had a mining right in an opal region.
>
> A significant proportion of Ridsdale's victims came from large families or families where the father was ill or dead or working away from home or doing shift work. A busy mother would gratefully accept Ridsdale's offer to "help" by taking one of her sons on a trip or to stay at his presbytery.
>
> At his various parishes, Ridsdale acted as a visiting "chaplain" at local schools, thereby gaining access to more boys. ~ Broken Rites[809]

Although David Ridsdale was not subject to sexual abuse when he began attending St. Patrick's College (also run, as St. Alpius was, by the “Christian Brothers”), he was physically abused and he knew of instances were other students were sexually assaulted.

David disclosed the painful effects of his uncle’s abuse and how it destroyed his sexual identity.

> It was a long time before I knew I was being sexually abused. I just didn't know at the time.
>
> After Gerald abused me, I was left alone with feelings and ideas I did not understand, with no-one to talk to. The Church was a leader in the social idea that gender and sexuality was a simple binary choice. In my experience, if a male did not present heterosexual traits he was prone to ridicule and Isolation. I felt I was completely alone and unable to tell any adult what was happening, especially as I started to struggle with my sexuality.

Shockingly, David’s own family members colluded with “Father Gerald” and enabled the abuse.

> From the age of 15 I told a close family member on at least 5 occasions that I had been abused by Gerald. By the fifth time I bluntly said, “Gerald has been molesting me”. Rather than respond to my comment the close family member just said “I hope one of your sisters would return to the Church one day.” It was as if they did not hear what I had just said.

As David matured, he found the courage to speak out. What he received in return was the numbing realization that predation by Catholic clergy upon Australian children was as pervasive as a virus.

> When I was about 16 or 17, I started telling my peers about my abuse. I had been working with people of my age in youth and social programmes at the YMCA and issues of abuse had been raised which triggered memories and a new understanding of what had happened to me. I began to confide in my fellow volunteers and, almost without fail, all of them said that some form of abuse had happened to them. At that time, I had a perception that this was a normal part of society.

As David began to consider building a family of his own, he was horrified at the possibility that he would become his uncle.

Seeking consolation and counsel, he called a family friend.

> I didn’t know what to do. I was terrified of ringing the police, and I was terrified to go public with my story. I decided to ring George Pell. ...
>
> I’ve known George Pell since I was born. He was a family friend. He used to attend church services and activities when he was an assistant parish priest at St. Alipius. We continued to see him, even when he headmaster at St. Aquinas Teachers’ College and School. Pell was an avid swimmer and I would see him often at either Eureka Stockade or YMCA pool. I have called him George from since I was a kid. I never recall calling him “Father”. I chose to phone George on that day for one reason, he was the only human being in the Church who I believed was still a friend and that I could trust. ...
>
> I told George that I had been abused by Gerald. His first reaction was “Oh. Right”. There was no shock. His tone then became terse relatively quickly and I could sense anger in his voice. ...
>
> I had been clear to George that I was concerned about my grandmother and was seeking a private process that could assist me as the pain and distress was overwhelming. George then began to talk about my growing family and my need to take care of their needs. He mentioned how I would soon have to buy a car or house for my family. I remember with clarity the last three lines we spoke together.
>
> Me: Excuse me, George, what the fuck are you talking about?
>
> George: I want to know what it will take to keep you quiet.
>
> Me: Fuck you, George, and everything you stand for.

It was clear to David that George Pell was also a willing enabler of his friend’s abuse, even of Ridsdale’s own family.

> George was the first person in the Catholic Church whom I officially told about my abuse by Gerald.

> In 1994, when I was working at a private psychiatric Hospital in Brighton run by St. John of God nuns, I saw George Pell for the first time since our conversation in 1993. George came up to me and said "Oh David, how are you going?" He did not ask if I was alright, or if I needed help, or if he could do anything to help? He had had plenty of opportunity to call me and help me, but he never did.
>
> In the mid-1990s, I saw George Pell again at a Ballarat forum after Towards Healing was introduced. The forum was supposed to provide an overview of the Church's response to the historical abuse. Pell seemed surprised that the attendees did not believe that the Church had been unaware of the conduct of its clergy. I called him a liar there but I was actually the quiet one compared to some of the other individuals present. I recall one man said that he wanted to kill Pell and the other attendees had to calm him down.
>
> I now understand that this same man has committed suicide.

The reaction of George Pell and other clergy steeled David to report what he had experienced to the Police. It just so happened that they were in the process of collecting statements from other victims. They seemed eager to help David Ridsdale have his accusations added to the prosecution ... until that time arrived.

> As the case drew nearer the police asked me whether I would agree to drop the charges that Gerald would not plead guilty. The reasoning for this I was told was to avoid the need to give evidence at a trial and so Gerald could be sentenced and jailed as soon as possible and so they could release his name to gather more evidence against him. I agreed to drop half the charges against Gerald, and as a result he was charged only the more minor offences against me.
>
> Gerald was convicted and sentenced for sexually assaulting eight boys, including me, on 27 May 1993. He was sentenced to two years, three months' imprisonment. He served 3 months. ...
>
> My trust in institutions and authority was a shaken after this.

In an attempt to help other victims cope and come forward, David began giving media interviews. There was immediate backlash from Catholic laity and clergy.

This pushed him toward civil proceedings against “the Church”, especially in light of the paltry sentence his uncle received — 3 months for abusing only 8 boys.

The Catholic Church played dirty pool and David’s own lawyers helped them.

> Soon after commencing proceedings, I was told by my parents that Bishop Mulkearns who was the Bishop of Ballarat at the time, held a meeting with my parents and encouraged them to get me to drop the case. This meeting was held without my knowledge. My parent told me that Bishop Mulkearns refused to acknowledge any inappropriate conduct on the part of Gerald.
>
> The Church made me an offer of $10,000 to resolve the proceedings. My lawyers, Williams Winter & Higgs, advised me that if I did not accept the $10,000 offer I would be dragged through a court case that I would never win “not in a million years”. They went on to advise that I would end up with a $60,000-$100,000 bill which would “destroy my family’s and my life forever.” At that time, I was a terrified 25 year old with absolutely no support from anyone. I rejected this offer.
>
> The Church made me a second offer of $30,000. I begrudgingly accepted this second offer after I was made to feel scared and convinced that the Church’s legal status as a noncorporate entity meant they could not be legally challenged.

Again, David’s family attacked him as a “liar” and “gold-digger”.

> My cousin, who was also abused by Gerald told me that he has been told by family members that if he ever took any money or compensation from the Church for the molestation, then anything he ever bought with it would forever remind him of the abuse. One of my > aunts that still visits Gerald in jail claims she does so in honour of her mother.

>
> With the Church being such an integral part of my family's life, the fallout from revelations against Gerald has permeated every aspect of our family. The lack of understanding of the impact of abuse and the shame of Gerald makes it painful for them to discuss it. This inadvertently making me feel very much alone to deal with the damage it has caused me.

David was further shocked to learn of how the Catholic Church controlled “secular” institutions like law enforcement, even in his own family.

> At my grandmother’s funeral, one of my aunts said to me “I’m so glad it’s finally out. I’ve known for so long”. I replied “Sorry, what?” She said “Oh well, you know in Edenhope when it got too much and we got told about it”. She then told me that she and her husband, who was a policeman at the time, had helped move Gerald quietly out of Edenhope. I reacted harshly towards my aunt as Gerald was abusing me at that time. My older sister was standing next to me. My aunt was very surprised at my reaction and became upset.

Neither his responsibility as a law enforcement officer nor the fact that “Gerald” had raped children within the family were enough to keep David’s Police Officer uncle from aiding and abetting the pedophile priest.

He was, after all, Catholic.

In colonial America, Roman Catholics were forbidden to vote because their allegiances were questioned; would they vote in the best interest of Americans or of Rome?

Today such restrictions are held up as proof of a “Byzantine”, prejudicial past. It is clear, however, that they were completely vital.

For David Ridsdale, the abuse ran far beyond what his priest uncle did to him.

> I have been asked when did the abuse stop, but my response is that it ever has stopped.

> What Gerald did was the result of a pathetic man unable to make correct choices. The combative approach from the Church and their efforts to paint me as a liar were just as painful to my life as the abuse itself. Discovering that the Church leaders were aware of his abuse of others has shattered my trust in social institutions.
>
> The impact of my abuse has been a complete invasion of every aspect of my life. The upbringing I received in the Church ensured my naivety was so great I was unaware of what Gerald was doing to me. My fear of being different and a sinner in the eyes of the Church meant that I was sure it was me doing something wrong.
>
> My personal sexual journey was completely disrupted and poisoned by the actions of Gerald. My inability to trust anyone enough to tell them was a result of the Church dogma and supernatural regard of its leaders. When I told my father this, he agreed and said that that sadly I was probably right and that no-one would have believed me back then.

In the face of painful consequences, David Ridsdale has chosen to bravely keep hoping in and assisting “official inquiries”.

> I was asked to sign a confidentiality agreement when I did receive money from the Church.
>
> This made me feel that the Church was offering to buy my silence. I decided to tell the truth, no matter what. I have lost a great deal from going public, but I know that my actions in 1993 and beyond have helped in a small way to lead to this Royal Commission, and for that I am grateful.

Despite his connections to Gerald Ridsdale, George Pell continued to rise in the Catholic hierarchy. In 2003, Pope Saint John Paul II gave him his Cardinalcy. In 2014, Jesuit Pope Francis made him Cardinal-Prefect of the Secretariat for the Economy; the third most powerful post in the Vatican, in charge of all Rome’s finances.

When “secular” Harvard wished to train its students in “leadership”, they were sent to learn it from George Pell. What Pell told the students and media showed that he either lives in an alternate reality or has an unending reservoir of gall.

> Cardinal Pell, prefect of the Secretariat for the Economy, spoke just before giving his speech on Principled Leadership to a group of 20 people who are among Harvard University's graduating class of 2017 and who traveled to Rome for a four-day "Harvard Vatican Leadership Summit."
>
> ... the event was held at the Pontifical Lateran University and hosted students from various backgrounds at Harvard, including the business, law, divinity, medical, and dental schools.
>
> In addition to Cardinal Pell, other key figures participants have met with during the summit include Vatican Secretary of State Cardinal Pietro Parolin; Vatican Secretary for Relations with the States, Archbishop Paul Gallagher; Cardinal Peter Turkson, president of the Pontifical Council for Integral Human Development; and Cardinal Giuseppe Versaldi, prefect of the Congregation for Catholic Education.
>
> In his comments to CNA [Catholic News Agency], Cardinal Pell outlined the key principles that ought to guide business and economic decisions, saying that no matter what, "you must be aware of the common good."
>
> "Think of the whole of society..." he said. "Have some real understanding of what justice is. Have a special sensitivity for those who are less fortunate, those who are poor."[810]

Perhaps George Pell made his outrageous statements because he was keenly aware of how "justice" has been kept from the hundreds of thousands of children who have been eaten by the Dragon of Rome — many at Pells' own hand.

When Harvard's doctors, lawyers and "Protestant" preachers receive their "secular" degree few will know they were indoctrinated in Communism by the Vatican but such was the intent of putting them in the highly-respected "public" school.

The relationship between George Pell and Gerald Ridsdale has been compared to Bernard Cardinal Law and Father John J. Geoghan ... or Bernard Law and Paul Shanley ... or Bernard Law and James Porter ... etc.

The accepted process for addressing Catholic clergy who have preyed upon children for Rome's agents in media, justice and law enforcement is that low-level priests can be outed but hierarchy can not.

Hence, Bishops, Cardinals and Popes are treated as if they have remained pure through their entire careers yet they rise from the same pool that provided heinous predator priests and they have all done their best to protect and enable those predator priests.

This is made easy for the Vatican when victims choose to bring the crimes to "the Mother Church" instead of law enforcement or social services.

Such was the case with "Phil", an altar boy molested by Cardinal Pell even before his ordination.

> Australia's Catholic Church hierarchy received a complaint in 2002 that a trainee priest (George Pell) had sexually abused a twelve-year-old altar boy (named Phil) in 1961-1962 at a holiday camp for boys on Phillip Island, south-east of Melbourne. According to a church document, Phil has alleged that, on several occasions, the trainee priest George (then about 20) thrust his hand down the inside of Phil's pants and got "a good handful" of the boy's penis and testicles; and, on other occasions, George allegedly tried to guide the boy's hand into the front of George Pell's pants. By the year 2000, when Phil was aged 50, he realised (from television news footage) that the trainee priest George had risen to become an Archbishop. Phil was shocked — "he did not think it right that someone who had behaved indecently towards children should lead the church," the church document says. ...
>
> In 2002, the hierarchy paid a senior barrister, Mr. Alex Southwell QC, to examine (and report on) Phil's complaint. Archbishop George Pell (who was indeed at the altar boys' camp) denied committing any abuse. Mr. Southwell's report concluded that the former altar boy "appeared to speak honestly from an actual recollection". Mr.

> Southwell said he was not persuaded that the former altar boy was a liar as alleged by Pell. ...
>
> The complainant [who is referred to as "C" in Mr. Southwell's report] alleged that he was not the only boy at the camp who was abused by George Pell. C alleged that he witnessed a friend of his (referred to as "A") being molested by "big George". C told George to "fuck off". A and C later protested by lighting a glass fire near the camp. A died in 1985, and therefore he could not be questioned by the Southwell inquiry. ~ Broken Rites Australia[811]

If the Cardinal-Prefect of the Secretariat for the Economy was reaching down the pants of little boys before he was even ordained, what can we assume about the rest of his time since then?

As with so many other victims, "C" paid a price well after George Pell was done with him.

> Beginning in his teens, C's life was disrupted. He developed a problem with alcohol and gambling. In his early twenties he got into trouble with the law, serving time in jail for alcohol-related offences.[812]

Obviously, Gerald Ridsdale wasn't the only pedophile priest protected by George Cardinal Pell. Another priest, equally as evil and vicious, was Kevin O'Donnell.

> One of Australia's most notorious paedophile priests, Father Kevin O'Donnell, committed sexual crimes against children throughout his 50-year career in Melbourne Catholic parishes while his superiors and colleagues looked the other way. In his final years, he even received public praise from one of his superiors, Bishop (later Cardinal) George Pell ... . Eventually some of O'Donnell's victims (with help from Broken Rites) contacted the police and got O'Donnell convicted and jailed. Later, more people came forward with complaints about Father O'Donnell (including Anthony and Chrissie Foster, whose two young daughters encountered O'Donnell in his final parish). After all this exposure about Father O'Donnell, Archbishop George Pell hired a public relations firm to paint Pell as a pioneer in "helping" victims.

Therefore, Anthony and Chrissie Foster asked Pell to grant proper compensation to help their two damaged daughters, but Pell's lawyers tried to defeat the Fosters (instead of "helping" them). The story of the Fosters is told in the second half of this Broken Rites article.

O'Donnell is dead but his numerous victims — and their families — still bear the scars of his crimes.

Father Kevin O'Donnell was a child abuser from 1942 to 1992. He fitted Masses, weddings and funerals in between his sex-abuse activities.

The Catholic Church now admits that O'Donnell was a child-abuser from day one. Broken Rites has seen a typed transcript of an interview that Mr. Peter O'Callaghan QC (sex-abuse commissioner for the Melbourne archdiocese) had with an O'Donnell victim on 23 March 2003. In the transcript, Mr. O'Callaghan commented that O'Donnell was engaged in sex abuse from the time he was ordained — and (said Mr. O'Callaghan) he did it in every parish he was in.

During his career, the Melbourne church authorities were told of O'Donnell's crimes but chose to keep him in the ministry, thus inflicting him on further victims. Some of O'Donnell's fellow-priests knew that he was a danger to children but they remained silent. Certain other priests, when consulted by O'Donnell victims, just "didn't want to know about it".

Instead of sacking O'Donnell, the Melbourne archdiocese retained him in parish work until he retired gracefully from full-time ministry in 1992, aged 75, after clocking up his 50 years of sexual abuse. On his retirement, he was given a parting tribute by Archbishop Frank Little.

The archdiocese then conferred on him the distinguished title Pastor Emeritus (meaning "retired with honour") — despite his record of sexual abuse. In 1993, O'Donnell was still serving as a part-time relieving priest at several parishes.

Beginning in late 1993, Broken Rites exposed the church's cover-up of O'Donnell. In 1995, he pleaded guilty to child-sex crimes and was > jailed.

>
> But, even after he was jailed, the church authorities failed to remove him the priesthood. They continued to list "Reverend" Kevin O'Donnell (in the next edition of the annual Australian Catholic Directory) as a "supplementary priest of the Melbourne archdiocese".
> ~ Broken Rites Australia[813]

Despite the fact that Kevin O'Donnell was well-known in "the Church" for being a pedophile, he received nothing but praise from George Pell and his peers.

> Broken Rites has obtained a video tape of a confirmation ceremony at Kevin O'Donnell's Sacred Heart parish in Oakleigh in 1989. On this tape, Auxiliary Bishop George Pell (then responsible for Melbourne's southern suburbs, including O'Donnell's parish) praised the work of Father Kevin O'Donnell.*
>
> Near the end of the ceremony, Pell thanked all who helped to organise the ceremony. He then told the parishioners: "And I would like to congratulate Father Kevin [O'Donnell] and Father Michael for all the work they are doing here. It is obviously a great and strong parish with a proud Catholic tradition, and I know you will work to maintain this just as your priests do, and I look forward to many, many more years of work from Father O'Donnell in the church here." ...
>
> The O'Donnell case was transferred to the Melbourne Magistrates Court, and John Kevin O'Donnell appeared there briefly on 7 September 1994, charged with 32 incidents of indecent assault at four > parishes, involving seven boys and one girl. Broken Rites representatives were present in the courtroom. ...

>
> After the September 7 hearing, a priest in one of his former parishes asked the congregation to "pray for Father O'Donnell" but did not mention the victims.
>
> Some Melbourne priests in late 1994 discussed the possibility of issuing a joint public statement, supporting O'Donnell. However, a better-informed priest (who knew "Damian") warned his colleagues that massive evidence was mounting against O'Donnell, and this was likely to result in a conviction.[814]

The indoctrination of Roman Catholicism meant that pedophile priests continued to receive aid from even their own victims and the victims' families.

In response to being raped by O'Donnell, one young girl immersed herself even further into his religion, allowing it to rob her of her youth.

> A female victim ("Mary", from the Seymour parish) was sexually abused for three years from the age of 13 when helping O'Donnell conduct late-afternoon catechism classes for State School children in the early 1950s. To escape O'Donnell, Mary entered a nunnery at 16 and remained a nun until she was 25. The loss of these vital years had a devastating effect on Mary's later life.
>
> Mary told police: "While I was still a nun, I told a Catholic priest, from the Jesuit order, about O'Donnell but he didn't want to know about it."[815]

Even more sinister was O'Donnell's access to children in "secular" organizations like the Boy Scouts. He would violate children there and, obediently, even Boy Scout leadership took the matter back to "the Church".

> One victim, "Michael", from the Dandenong parish, said that he and his Scout leader officially reported O'Donnell's sexual abuse to the Vicar-General of the Melbourne archdiocese, Monsignor Laurence Moran, in 1958-59. ...

> Michael says that, after this, Auxiliary Bishop Arthur Fox ... interviewed him and urged him to remain silent about the sexual incidents.
>
> For 35 years, Michael presumed that he was O'Donnell's only victim. But in early 1994 he was shocked to see the media reports about O'Donnell being charged with assaulting another boy [this was Damian, the victim who had contacted Broken Rites]. Michael then contacted the police, becoming the second victim to make a police statement.
>
> Michael told the detectives in 1994 about his scoutmaster's 1959 complaint to the archdiocese. When O'Donnell was charged in 1994, O'Donnell was given details of the evidence against him, including the information about the scoutmaster. In October 1994, while church lawyers were considering how best to defend O'Donnell, the church's Melbourne vicar-general (Monsignor Gerry Cudmore) sent a priest to interview the scoutmaster. After this interview, the priest wrote to Cudmore on 31 October 1994 with some good news — the priest "assured" Cudmore that the scoutmaster does not intend to give evidence in the criminal proceedings. Thus, the church's cover-up would not be revealed in court.[816]

The next example of enablement defies description.

> "Damian" (at the Hasting parish in the 1970s) said he was unable to tell his parents about O'Donnell's abuse because his parents were loyal Catholics and he did not want to upset them. When Damian got married in the early 1980s, his mother insisted that Father Kevin O'Donnell should perform the wedding. Damian reluctantly consented but he is still angry about this.
>
> Damian said: "About 1986, I complained to two priests in other parishes that I had been molested by a priest but they didn't want to know the name of the offender. I also had some counselling in 1986 with a nun, who immediately wrote to the archdiocese about O'Donnell, but the archdiocese ignored the letter."

> Damian eventually told his mother about O'Donnell and she wrote a letter of complaint to the archdiocese but the church authorities allowed O'Donnell to continue ministering at Oakleigh until he retired at age 75 in 1992.[817]

If the good Catholic mother demanded of the sexually abused son that he give O'Donnell the right of primæ noctis[cxv] would he have agreed to that too?

As in Gerald Ridsdale's trail, the Prosecution was very helpful ... to "the Church".

> ... the prosecuting authorities decided not to wait for more victims to be interviewed but to go to court immediately with the existing batch of signed victim statements. ...
>
> The prosecution dropped all the other incidents, including some more serious charges involved oral and digital penetration. The dropped charges would have incurred a longer jail sentence. ...
>
> In the Melbourne County Court on 11 August 1995, Judge Murray Kellam sentenced John Kevin O'Donnell to a total of 39 months jail, with a minimum of 15 months behind bars before parole.[818]

This meant that O'Donnell was quickly released to get back to his mission: defiling the innocent for Rome.

> O'Donnell was released from jail in late 1996. He was still listed as a priest in the mid-1996 Official Directory of the Catholic Church in Australia (in the Supplementary List of Diocesan Priests, page 142) and he still held the title of "Pastor Emeritus" (retired with honour). ...
>
> The charges in court were confined to offences between 1946 and 1976 but the additional complaints (after the court case) included children in his final parish, Oakleigh, up until O'Donnell's retirement in 1992. ...
>
> After O'Donnell retired from full-time parish work in 1992, he continued to associate with boys. In addition, he had access to girls at the Oakleigh parish primary school...[819]

At no point in his career did Kevin O’Donnell stop abusing children and, to the end, he continued to be enabled by Roman Catholic families who seemed to offer their children to him.

> As well as being the Parish Priest, O’Donnell had also been the “chaplain” at Oakleigh’s Sacred Heart Primary School. This role gave him the right to roam around the school and its playground. He could request to have any child sent to him to help him do chores at the church or in his presbytery. He also would see a child in private for “counselling”.
>
> One such child was Emma Foster, whose years at Sacred Heart primary school co-incided with O’Donnell’s final years there. Later, during the 1990s, Emma developed into a disturbed teenager and she eventually attempted suicide several times. After the jailing of O’Donnell, Emma disclosed that O’Donnell had sexually abused her at the primary school. Emma had remained silent about this during her school years because she knew that she was prohibited from saying anything negative about the clergy. O’Donnell’s eventual disgracing removed this prohibition, leaving Emma free to make her disclosure. [820]

“Devastated” by the rape of their daughter, her devout Catholic parents took the matter to the “Mother Church”.

> Emma’s parents (Anthony and Chrissie Foster) were devastated. In the late 1990s, Anthony and Chrissie lodged a complaint with Melbourne archdiocesan sex-abuse commissioner Peter O’Callaghan QC.[821]

After finding that O’Donnell had exercised his right of primæ noctis and stolen their first daughter’s virginity, Anthony and “Chrissie” received an apology.

> After a thorough forensic examination of the case, Commissioner O’Callaghan officially ruled that Emma had indeed been sexually abused by O’Donnell. The archdiocese offered a written apology to Emma from Archbishop George Pell on behalf of the church.[822]

They were later “shocked” to learn that both the daughters they had offered to the monster were accepted and abused.

> Meanwhile, in the late 1990s, Anthony and Chrissie were alarmed to find that their second daughter, Katie, was having a disturbed adolescence, similar to Emma. Eventually it was ascertained that Katie, too, had had been sexually abused by O’Donnell when she was at the primary school.[823]

The painting by Broken Rites of the Fosters as heroes falls far short of the mark. It wouldn’t be the first time that a supposed dogged enemy of the Vatican was found to actually be loyal soldiers playing a role.

The fact is that Kevin O’Donnell was a voracious pedophile and anyone that received any information confirming him to be as such — especially his rape of one of the two daughters he had been in contact with — should’ve immediately pushed the Fosters into stringent action against him with Police. Immediately following, a thorough counseling would involve all other likely victims such as their other daughter.

None of that was done and the two girls suffered accordingly.

> By the late 1990s, Katie had started drinking to numb the pain. In 1999, she walked in front of a speeding car, and this left her with permanent intellectual and physical disabilities. Katie now needs full-time supervision, with specialised helpers — an expensive on-going procedure.
>
> For 12 years after O’Donnell’s jailing, Emma’s parents battled to keep Emma alive as she sank into a spiral of self-destructive behaviour, including drug-taking. But in early January 2008, Emma died alone on her bedroom floor clutching her teddy bear, a treasured first birthday present from her parents. She was aged 26.[824]

Anthony and “Chrissie” Foster were as guilty of what happened to their children as if they had done it themselves.

In fact, in many (perhaps most) of the incidents of child sex abuse, the parents are involved in either offering, selling or directly abusing the children.[825]

Although the Fosters were never investigated for collusion, they did profit from what happened.

> In the late 1990s, when Chrissie and Anthony Foster submitted their complaint to the Melbourne archdiocese about how Fr. Kevin O'Donnell had abused their two daughters, Archbishop George Pell's "Melbourne Response" scheme offered the Fosters a small amount of compensation...
>
> Chrissie and Anthony rejected this ... and initiated steps to tackle Pell and the Melbourne archdiocese in the civil courts for a more appropriate amount...
>
> ... Pell ... signed a more adequate ... settlement with the Fosters.[826], [cxvi]

Further proof developed regarding the complicity of the Fosters in the crimes that occurred to their daughters.

After they were lavishly paid, the Fosters went on a speaking circuit regarding their experiences.

In 2010, "Chrissie" Foster turned it all into a book — "the harrowing, true story of a mother's struggle for justice."[827]

Apparently, in that "harrowing struggle for justice" it never occurred to the Fosters to see O'Donnell or the Catholic Church be held to account legally for their crimes.

Earlier this year (May 2017), Anthony Foster died of a stroke at only 64 years of age. As perhaps the ultimate red flag upon the collusion of the Fosters with Rome, he was honored by the Australian government with a State Funeral.[828]

Once again, the grandiose actions of "secular" Aussie authorities did absolutely nothing to address the warfare going on in that island continent by a malignant foreign entity.

At no point during their “harrowing struggle” did the Fosters speak negatively about the Roman Catholic Church.

Astoundingly, the accusations against Kevin O’Donnell get worse.

“Commissions” are at least good for one thing: collecting information for serious bodies to follow up on.

Some of that material is quite useful.

After Australia’s “atheist” woman Prime Minister Julia Gillard ordered the impotent Royal Commission into Institutional Responses to Child Sexual Abuse in 2012, former Police Woman, Professor and child advocate Freda Briggs (1930 – 2016) provided a valuable paper.

What Mrs. Briggs (née Akeroyd[cxvii]) found was that the problem of pedophilia in the Catholic Church was not a matter of lone aberrant criminals but of the entire institution.

> Some priests think pedophilia does not “break celibacy” and that sins can be confessed away, one of the nation’s top child protection experts says.
>
> Emeritus Professor Freda Briggs, who has just published a seminal text on child protection, says sexual abuse by a priest is “the most damaging of all” for children and that the Catholic Church is guilty of forgiving priests instead of punishing them. ~ News.Com.Au[829]

Mrs. Briggs discovered that Roman Catholicism made it easy to be a pedophile.

> She says confession, which plays an important role in the Catholic Church but is also practised in other Christian religions, made churches attractive to pedophiles.
>
> “Churches are psychologically attractive to sex offenders because they can ask for forgiveness one day and offend again on another day,” she said.
>
> “There was one priest in Victoria who admitted when caught that he had confessed 200 times and nobody had reported him, because priests > are not allowed to report anyone who confesses in a confessional.”

>
> Priests are not subject to mandatory reporting laws so they don’t have to report child abusers who confess to them. Generally, a priest who receives such a confession is meant to convince the abuser to report themselves to authorities.
>
> Across Australia people such as doctors, nurses and teachers, who work with children, have to report child abuse but no Australian state or territory has included priests in their mandatory reporting requirements.[830]

“Confession” as a license to rape children? — We’ll call this the “Opus Dei effect.”

Ultimately behind the crimes against children was the issue of power. The reason why so many priests begin raping children before they’re even ordained is that they were already pedophiles who were attracted to and recruited into the priesthood.

> UniSA [University of South Australia] Associate Professor Dale Bagshaw, an adjunct professor in the School of Psychology, Social Work and Social Policy, says ultimately it’s power that’s the problem, and that pedophiles join the church because of its structure.
>
> “It’s power and trust, manipulation, grooming and abuse,” she said.
>
> “... a lot of pedophiles actually join the church to be in a position to abuse children … it gives them a powerful position.”[831]

Perhaps the most controversial figure to speak before the Royal Commission was a woman named Fiona Barnett.[cxviii]

She still, however, refused to give up big names.

> A woman who alleges she was a child victim of the paedophile ring named by Liberal senator Bill Heffernan [an inconsequential politician] said she had repeatedly reported the abuse to authorities but no action had been taken.

Speaking outside the Royal Commission into Institutional Responses to Child Sexual Abuse, Fiona Barnett called on the authorities to investigate the alleged ring, which she believes is still operating.

Ms. Barnett alleged the ring involved hundreds of perpetrators, including a political elite, such as a former governor-general and a former education minister, but she did not name them.

"Throughout my childhood I was a victim of Australia's VIP child sex trafficking ring," she said.

"The people involved in this elite paedophile ring included high-ranking politicians, police and judiciary."

— Notoriously absent from that list is the word "clergy". —

Ms. Barnett, 45, said she had reported her abuse to health care professionals, the NSW and Australian Federal Police and the royal commission but felt her claims were not taken seriously.

— SPIN ALERT: the fact is that a report was made but not acted on. The reason it wasn't acted on was not obvious and should not be deduced, especially in favor of negligence over willful criminal collusion. —

"The way I have been treated for reporting the crimes I witnessed and experienced has been far worse than my original abuse experiences," she said.

Ms. Barnett was critical of the scope of the royal commission, which examines the responses of institutions such as religious groups and schools to allegations of child sexual abuse.

"I want all of the claims pooled and I want them investigated," she said.

"I don't think the royal commission seems to be equipped to do that, do you? Amongst victims, we think this is just a complete whitewash." ~ The Sydney Morning Herald[832]

Like Regina Louf, Barnett being acknowledged by mainstream media (albeit barely) is ominous.

> ... Fiona Barnett alleged she had been the victim of a "VIP child sex trafficking ring".
>
> ... Barnett took aim at the authorities, including the Royal Commission into Institutional Responses to Child Sexual Abuse, which she described as "disappointing". ...
>
> ... in 1996 [Labor politician Franca Arena] named two people – retired judge David Yeldham and former state MP Frank Arkell – as potential paedophiles.
>
> At the time, a royal commission into the NSW Police Service headed by Justice James Wood was in full swing, but Arena and others believed it was not doing enough to look at people in high places. ...
>
> But before long, Yeldham was revealed to have lived a double life as a homosexual, and he took his own life on November 4, 1996.
>
> Arkell was horrifically murdered on June 26, 1998, a fortnight after another Illawarra man, David O'Hearn, was killed in equally brutal fashion in his Albion Park home.
>
> The perpetrator in both cases was a 19-year-old, Mark Valera, who claimed that both men had propositioned him sexually, and that he had been abused by his own father.
>
> Despite the apparent vindication of Arena's use of parliamentary privilege, the pressure on her continued. ~ The Newcastle Herald[833]

Barnett bridged the gap between the pedophilia and the darkest accusations against the Devil's Simulation: the abuse, torture and ritual slaughter of animals and children in full dedication to Satan.

A Jesuit "law professor" acknowledged as much to the Australian Broadcasting Corporation.

> Father Frank Brennan, a Jesuit priest and Professor of Law at the Australian Catholic University, told the ABC last night that in the past > children were “sacrificed” for the interests of the church or particular clerics ...[834]

The juxtaposition of a Jesuit who “teaches law” and acknowledges the “sacrifice” of children “for the interests of the church or particular clerics” is chilling.

Fiona Barnett claims that she was brought into the child sex abuse and trafficking trade by her Lithuanian grandmother, “Helen Holowczak”,[cxix] and her Polish step-grandfather “Peter Holowczak”.[cxx] She states that her mother was oblivious to the abuse, especially given that visits with “nana” appeared to be so pleasant.

Barnett further states that her father was conditioned by his own abuse at Dunlea Centre.

Dunlea is a “residential school” for children with “behavioral issues”. It was founded in 1940 by an Irish priest who emigrated to Australia, named Thomas Vincent Dunlea.

Prior to the strategic name change in 2010, it was known as “Boys’ Town Engadine” and it was every bit the hell for children that the propagandized orphanage in Omaha, Nebraska was.

Barnett states that her grandparents were relocated Nazis and that Slavs did much of the “dirty work” for the Party. None of her claims can be verified directly but such an assertion does have historical precedent.

Barnett says her problems started on her 6th birthday where she was traumatized with a “Hunger Games”-style hunt of other children by evil men.[cxxi] One of them bred dogs who were used in the abuse for hunting, bestiality and to consume human bodies once the victims were murdered.

This comports with statements from other purported victims, for instance the use of dogs in the statement of “X2”. CIA child sex slave Cathy O’Brien mentions a similar “Hunger Games” experience of “hide and rape”. On one occasion, her abuser was former Vice President, former Haliburton CEO Richard “Dick” Cheney.[835]

Barnett claims that the Australian government is in full co-operation with the Pedocracy, including the military. This we've seen borne out in other instances, not just in Australia but in all major nations — particularly in the West.

She states that the Australian government offered her as a child to Richard Nixon.[836]

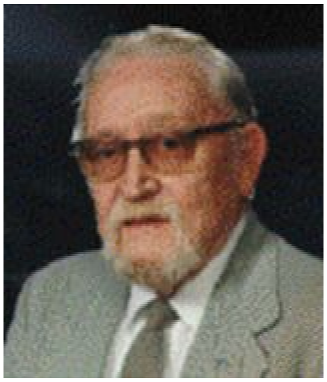
There may be a discrepancy regarding dates: a source lists Barnett as having been born in 1969.[837] The assumption in her story is that Nixon was President at the time but she does not explicitly state that. The Nixon Presidency lasted from 1969 to 1974, slightly too early for Barnett's timeline. There are several variances that could still allow this accusation to be true.

Barnett says that she was brought to the Fairbairn Royal Australian Air Force base in Australia's national capital of Canberra (the base was decommissioned in 2007). She was brought on board Nixon's aircraft and abused by him there.

Barnett claims that she was also abused at Holsworthy Army Base and the Lucas Heights nuclear power plant — both have secure, secluded facilities which were used.

She states that two key tormentors of hers were Dr. John W. Gittinger Sr. and Dr. Antony Kidman, father of actress Nicole Kidman.[838]

They are an odd combination unless you know what you're looking at: both were "clinical psychologists".



Gittinger is reknown for having formulated a way to assess personality traits called the "Personality Assessment System".

It’s not a far leap to see his “research” go further into creating or manipulating those same traits based upon external stimuli or trauma for use in “mind control”.

It’s further validated when sources like Wikipedia acknowledge Gittinger’s role in the Central Intelligence Agency.

> John Gittinger, the developer of the PAS, worked as a psychologist for the Central Intelligence Agency during the time he developed the PAS. Early publications describing the PAS appeared in academic publications and did not mention Gittinger’s employer.[11] While the PAS has been used in many contexts such as education and clinical work, it was developed by John Gittinger who worked with a number of other CIA employees. Gittinger and his PAS work were related to a wide range of projects, some of which were part of the set of projects called MKULTRA. When there were Senate hearings on the MKULTRA project, Gittinger was a witness and identified as a CIA psychologist.[12] The relationship of Gittinger, the PAS and MKULTRA is discussed by Marks in chapter 11 of his book based upon examination of thousands of documents.[13] [839]

The implication that Gittinger’s association with the Central Intelligence Agency was a “passing collaboration” is almost certainly not the case.

Equally suspicious is that Gittinger has no entry for himself and that information across the internet is extremely scarce.

The book referenced is The Search for the “Manchurian Candidate”: The CIA and Mind Control: The Secret History of the Behavioral Sciences by John D. Marks.

Marks acknowledges that “mind control research” in the CIA centered around torture and narcotics; part of the process to force Dissociative Identity Disorder on the victim.

> With one exception, the CIA’s behavioral research — whether on LSD or on electroshock — seems to have had more impact on the outside world than on Agency operations.

> That exception grew out of the work of the MKULTRA program's resident genius, psychologist John Gittinger.
>
> While on the CIA payroll, toiling to find ways to manipulate people, Gittinger created a unique system for assessing personality and predicting future behavior. He called his method — appropriately — the Personality Assessment System (PAS). Top Agency officials have been so impressed that they have given the Gittinger system a place in most agent-connected activities. To be sure, most CIA operators would not go nearly so far as a former Gittinger aide who says, "The PAS was the key to the whole clandestine business." Still, after most of the touted mind controllers had given up or been sent back home, it was Gittinger, the staff psychologist, who sold his PAS system to cynical, anti-gimmick case officers in the Agency's Clandestine Services.[840]

More disturbingly, Marks acknowledged that Gittinger made "observations" on children as they grew into adulthood.

> From observation, Gittinger concluded that babies were born with distinct personalities which then were modified by environmental factors. The Internalized — or I — baby was caught up in himself and tended to be seen as a passive child; hence, the world usually called him a "good baby." The E tot was more interested in outside stimuli and attention, and thus was more likely to cause his parents problems by making demands. Gittinger believed that the way parents and other authority figures reacted to the child helped to shape his personality. Adults often pressured or directed the I child to become more outgoing and the E one to become more self-sufficient.
>
> Gittinger found he could measure the compensations, or adjustments, the child made on another Wechsler subtest [the Wechsler intelligence scale, a standard IQ test with 11 parts], the one that rated arithmetic ability.
>
> He noticed that in later life, when the person was subject to stress, these compensations tended to disappear, and the person reverted to his original personality type. Gittinger wrote that his system "makes possible the assessment of fundamental discrepancies between the > surface personality and the underlying personality structure — discrepancies that produce tension, conflict, and anxiety."[841]

Also revealed by Marks is that Gittinger's "research" was funded and maintained by the CIA when other sources would've refused.

> Any one of these drawbacks might have stifled Gittinger in the academic world, but to the pragmatists in the CIA, they were irrelevant. Gittinger's strange ideas seemed to work. With uncanny accuracy, he could look at nothing more than a subject's Wechsler numbers, pinpoint his weaknesses, and show how to turn him into an Agency spy. Once Gittinger's boss, Sid Gottlieb, and other high CIA officials realized how Gittinger's PAS could be used to help case officers handle agents, they gave the psychologist both the time and money to improve his system under the auspices of the Human Ecology Society.[842]

Sidney Gottlieb (born Joseph Scheider) was another "Papal Court Jew" who worked for "Catholics In Action". His methods were as monstrous as those of any Nazi and they included drugging unwitting American citizens as part of his "mind control research".[843]

> Friends and enemies alike say Mr. Gottlieb was a kind of genius, striving to explore the frontiers of the human mind for his country, while searching for religious and spiritual meaning in his life. But he will always be remembered as the Government chemist who dosed Americans with psychedelics in the name of national security, the man who brought LSD to the C.I.A.
>
> In the 1950's and early 1960's, the agency gave mind-altering drugs to hundreds of unsuspecting Americans in an effort to explore the possibilities of controlling human consciousness. Many of the human guinea pigs were mental patients, prisoners, drug addicts and prostitutes — "people who could not fight back," as one agency officer put it. In one case, a mental patient in Kentucky was dosed with LSD continuously for 174 days. ~ The New York Times[844]

It is ludicrous to paint any such criminal activities against the American people in anything less than what they were: a malignant foreign insurgency.

As has been done so many times before and since, the criminal traitor was given accolades for his outrages and his tracks covered.

> The C.I.A. awarded Mr. Gottlieb the Distinguished Intelligence Medal and deliberately destroyed most of the MKUltra records in 1973.[845]

The whitewash by media like the New York Times is, in itself, criminal.

> John Gittinger, a C.I.A. psychologist who vetted Mr. Gottlieb — "one of the most brilliant men I've ever known" — and worked with him for 22 years, said the agency began the tests because it was gripped by "a great fear" in the cold war. It was afraid that the Soviet Union would corner the market on LSD and use it as a chemical weapon or that China would perfect the black art of brainwashing, Mr. Gittinger said.
>
> First-hand testimony, fragmentary Government documents and court records show that at least one participant died, others went mad, and still others suffered psychological damage after participating in the project, known as MK Ultra. ...
>
> In all, the agency conducted 149 separate mind-control experiments, and as many as 25 involved unwitting subjects. ...
>
> The experiments were useless, Mr. Gottlieb concluded in 1972, shortly before he retired. ...
>
> John Marks, author of the definitive book on the experiments, "The Search for the 'Manchurian Candidate'" (Times Books, 1979) said Mr. Gottlieb was "unquestionably a patriot, a man of great ingenuity."[846]

"Only 25 unwitting victims and it didn't work so it was quickly shut down." Are there thinking, mature adults who actually buy that?

Gottlieb, a Socialist Jew, was the perfect front-man for the CIA's Roman insurgency.

The “Papal Court Jews” at the New York Times were happy to pin his crimes only on him.

> Mr. Gottlieb joined the C.I.A. in 1951, although not before telling Mr. Gittinger, his interviewer, that he had been a socialist in his youth.
>
> Two years later, the agency established MKUltra and Mr. Gottlieb was running it.[847]

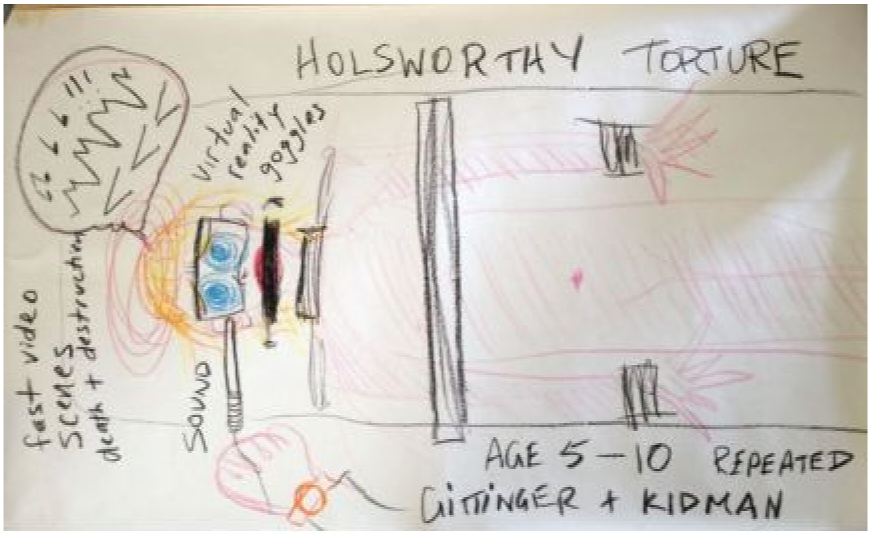
According to Fiona Barnett, “Doctor” Antony Kidman was cut from the same cloth as Gittinger and Gotlieb. She accompanied her posts on social networking with rudimentary drawings that were simple, yet effective.



HOLSWORTHY TORTURE
?? ?? !!!
virtual reality goggles fast video scenes death + destruction SOUND
AGE 5—10 REPEATED
GITTINGER + KIDMAN

At the same time as Fiona Barnett says she was being tortured in this manner, Hollywood Director Stanley Kubrick (also a Jew) was depicting them in the 1971 movie A Clockwork Orange.

Scene from Clockwork Orange (1971) [FAIR USE]

Kubrik is the same Director who brought Vladimir Nabokov's Lolita to the silver screen in 1962. His star, Malcolm McDowell played Caligula in Bob Guccione's pornographic "drama" of the same name 8 years later.

A Clockwork Orange was based upon the "satirical" novel by John Anthony Burgess Wilson, FRSL.[cxxii] "Anthony Burgess" wrote the screenplay for the 1977 Franco Zeffirelli TV mini-series Jesus of Nazareth. He was raised devout Roman Catholic and educated in the "Jesuit tradition" of the Xaverian Brothers.

Fiona Barnett claims that Nicole Kidman was kept free of abuse but was privy to it, often looking on at Barnett's torture with a smirk.

In 1999, Kidman starred as "Alice" opposite her then-husband Tom Cruise in Eyes Wide Shut; a movie depicting the control of world affairs by a secret religious order that conducts evil, perverse ritual sex rites.

It was directed by Stanley Kubrick.

Kidman's latest marriage to singer Keith Urban was presided over by the family's personal Jesuit, Father Paul Coleman.[848] Together, they have two girls, "Sunday Rose" and "Faith Margaret".

The gossip site "CeleBuzz" admits — Faith Margaret ... was born via a surrogate.[849]

Given what we know, we have to ask, “Was the ‘surrogate’ willing and are they still alive?”

Right before Fiona Barnett began to go public, Antony Kidman died mysteriously in Singapore. The 12 September 2014 headline from the Mirror read —

> Nicole Kidman's Father Killed After “Fall” In Singapore[850]

— Odd wording that isn’t explained. As of this writing, the post has no content due to an ongoing web site “migration” ever since.

His death was reported on September 12th, but did it occur on September 11th?[cxxiii]

In spite of (or perhaps because of) the accusations that Antony Kidman was an exceptionally-depraved, sadistic, child-raping monster, the Sydney Morning Herald eulogized him thus —

> Dr Antony Kidman: Nicole Kidman’s Father’s Legacy Of Nurture[851]
>
> Tony Kidman was a man of grand passions: war historian, scientist, avid follower of political life, singer, lover of performing arts and fitness enthusiast. Above all, Tony was a devoted family man. He was a visionary leader, driven to help others. Fortunately he saw many of his dreams reach fruition during his lifetime. ...
>
> — Kidman was a dutiful Leftist. —
>
> In 1966, Kidman moved to Washington DC to the National Institute of Mental Health at St. Elizabeth Psychiatric Hospital [a United States Government facility focusing on “mental health”]. During this period, Tony and [wife] Janelle, who were always politically active, took part in anti-war protests.
>
> Kidman had a strong moral compass. He believed those who struggled in society should be supported by government. He often wrote to senior politicians about injustices he witnessed at the grass roots. ...

— If Barnett is to be believed (and we think she is), this is pure "gaslighting[cxxiv]" by members of the Pedocracy. —

> He was open-minded, accepting, kind and caring.
>
> Despite his connections he was a very humble man. To his staff, he was a father figure ...

— The Herald allows that Kidman had a "heart" for "young people". —

> As the importance of early intervention in mental illness came to light, Kidman shifted the focus of the unit to young people and commenced research and clinical programs addressing mental health concerns in this population.

— For his "accomplishments", he was "Knighted" by the Australian Government. —

> In 2005 Kidman was made a Member of the Order of Australia for his contribution to clinical psychology.

The Jesuit-mentored Kidman family weren't the only "celebrities" mentioned by Fiona Barnett.

> I was trafficked to the USA, to Bohemian Grove where I was drugged & raped by the Rev. Billy Graham – Richard Nixon's pal, in a pink bubble room. I was also made to dress up like a teddy bear and play hide, seek & rape. I also witnessed the ritual murder of a person by politicians dressed up in robes. I was taken via Sydney airport, in a crate like an animal. On the way home I was drugged, raped and beaten at an exclusive, after hours, pedo gathering at Disneyworld. [852]

With more drawings, Barnett connected the dots between the military, "Intelligence" and the Catholic Church.[cxxv]

Another relocated Lithuanian Nazi abusing children as "science" was Leonas Eugenijus Petrauskas (1919 — 1994). Barnett says he was "Jesuit-trained".[853]

> A kiddie killing cult underpins the Roman Catholic Church, Engadine BoysTown, Holsworthy Army Base, Lucas Heights nuclear reactor. Here are the only photos I can present as evidence. First we have Leonas Petrauskas (aka Dr. Mark) performing an abortion on me beneath Engadine BoysTown. Next we have the statue of "Dagon" located on the ground floor of the 6-7 story underground facility at Holsworthy, located far from the main entrance gate. Then we have Dagon statue in fish form, kneeling beside a murky pool, on the ground floor of Lucas Heights nuclear reactor. Lucas Heights, like Pine Gap, are CIA facilities where the Jason Project was conducted. Both facilities were built by the same group.[854]

Corroborating Fiona Barnett's disturbing narrative, the Holsworthy Barracks are no more than 20 minutes' drive from Boys' Town Engadine, a.k.a. "the Dunlea Centre".

One of the Chaplains on post was a Roman Catholic priest named Kevin O'Donnell.[855]

Fiona Barnett's blog, "Pedophiles Down Under", lists an account by "James Shanahan",[cxxvi] a purported victim. Accompanying the account are documents that seem to corroborate Shanahan's assertion that the Catholic Church knew all about Kevin O'Donnell. O'Donnell didn't stop at just raping children, he tortured and slaughtered them, as well.

> While reading this, bear in mind that the Catholic Church has accepted this as true.
>
> It was 1961 and I had just turned 11 years old and was attending school at the Christian Brothers' College in East St. Kilda, Melbourne. I was told to leave the classroom one day and go to the brother's quarters to see Fr. Thomas O'Keefe for the purposes of sex education. O'Keefe was the school chaplain and was also the assistant parish priest at Sandringham where I was an altar boy.
>
> It was a large dim room. There were tall windows at the end and I could see trees outside bathed in bright summer light. O'Keefe sat next to me and began to fondle me. I focussed on the trees through the window and lost awareness of everything else. I had dissociated. It was something I had learned to do to cope with the violent nature of my home life. This fact was not lost on O'Keefe.
>
> Thereafter, he would regularly sexually abuse me and soon introduced me into the Satanic cult he was part of. The particular coven that O'Keefe belonged to was led by another priest, Kevin O'Donnell, best known for his extensive paedophilia. Looking back, it is clear that I was to be trained to take up a leadership role in that cult.[856]

Dissociation played a key role in the abuse of Shanahan, as it does in "mind control". The two are intermingled by necessity.

> At 11 years old, I was beyond the usual age to start the indoctrination and programming but I could already dissociate and I was very intelligent and rather outgoing and so was, no doubt, an attractive proposition to them. Dissociation is important to create alter personalities that can be trained to do certain tasks and to contain the memories and programming separate from the rest of the personality. This is easier done the younger the victim is. I could already do that so I was ready to begin the training.[857]

Again, we read of a connection between the military, "Intelligence" and the Catholic Church.

> First, I was humiliated and degraded much like happens in army boot-camp only far more obscene. Then I was terrorised using dogs and guns. I was raped on occasions using loaded guns and I was also shot at close range with blank ammunition. On the one hand I was told I was below worthless and could do nothing without the cult and on the other hand I was told I was so powerful bullets couldn't hurt me. The disorientation and terror was used to break down my understanding of the world and my place in it. This was to leave me mentally adrift ready for the next stage.
>
> Next came the electro-shock treatment. I was strapped in a heavy chair and given two batons to hold through which the shocks were administered. A bright, dazzling light was placed in front of me. I was subjected to a high pitched noise in my right ear and O'Donnell would yell nonsensical things in my left ear; things like, "God is evil, Satan is good" and "Good is evil and evil is good".
>
> Interspersed with these insane back-to-front statements were electro-shocks. I was told that I could not feel them and if I called out, I was further punished. (Some years ago I read descriptions of electro shock treatment employed by the CIA in their MK-Ultra program that was exactly the same as I experienced. There was obviously some connection with the Roman Catholic Church and the CIA).
>
> It was all designed to overcome my trust in my own senses and to accept what these priests said as reality. Controlling what people think of as reality is real power.[858]

It is instructive and important to be exposed to the depth of evil in the Devil's Simulation so we will present one final graphic description because it links an acknowledged pedophile to acts so shocking they seem to not be possible ... but they are.

WARNING: GRAPHIC

> The most direct demonstration of power over others is the stealing of their lives. There were four murders carried out by Kevin O'Donnell that I witnessed and that I was involved in various ways. ...

... The first was a young man who was clearly drugged though he was still distressed so presumably was aware of his fate. He was beheaded with an axe. After decapitating the man, O'Donnell rushed in front of the man's severed neck to catch the stream of gushing blood with his mouth. He then came over to me and, dragging me by the hair, pushed my face into the severed neck. I can still feel the hard bony vertebra contrasting with the squishy flesh of the neck against my cheek. I was being "blooded".

The man's head was put on a tray and was passed around the group for them to "Kiss John goodbye". I took it as a mocking salute to the beheading of John the Baptist.

— A central theme in Satanic Gnosticism disavows the Divinity of Jesus of Nazareth as Son of God and Messiah and substitutes John the Baptist in His Place.
This is known as Johannism.
It was the true philosophy behind why Templars denied Christ in their inner rituals. It is clearly still practiced. —

On another occasion, a teenage girl whom I knew, was drugged sufficiently well to show no awareness of her position or fate. She was naked and lying face up on an altar. O'Donnell had his hand over mine and in my hand was a knife. The knife was pressed against the young girl's throat and O'Donnell pressed down on my hand and quickly drew it backwards to slash her throat, killing her in the process. Her breasts were cut off and O'Donnell and O'Keefe proceeded to eat one each. Their faces were pictures of delight.

An infant girl was also killed and I was blamed for her death. I was told by O'Donnell to choose between a young boy, maybe 6 to 8 years old, and the infant girl as to who would die. If I didn't choose, both would be killed. I had already seen O'Donnell kill and had no doubt he would kill both if I did not choose. The boy was looking at me with terror in his eyes and so I chose the infant. Instantly, it seemed, O'Donnell cut the baby's throat. He placed his fingers into the wound and then pushed his blood soaked fingers into my mouth saying, "You killed her".

> The baby’s body was then cut up as you would joint a chicken. A leg was pushed into my face and I was told to eat it. I refused. The world was spinning around. O’Donnell, wild with rage, brandished his knife in my face and threatened to kill me if I didn’t eat but I was happy to die. I didn’t move or say anything. I had let go of any desire to live.
>
> Then, O’Keefe intervened and somehow persuaded O’Donnell to not kill me. I presume it was because others knew I was with O’Keefe and my disappearance would lead directly to him. ...

— Essential to the Devil’s Simulation is the inverse of Divine qualities; love, empathy, compassion. —

> The last murder had the most profound effect upon me. I’m sure it was designed to teach me that love kills; that love leads to death. This was Marama. She was a beautiful woman and probably in her early thirties. Her job had been to show kindness towards me and then betray me and this happened repeatedly. “Love is not to be trusted” was the lesson.
>
> As planned, I fell in love with her. It was not surprising because, in all my fourteen years, it seemed to me that no one had touched me except to hurt me. Violence had followed me through my life from my family to my school to the cult. What was unplanned by the cult was that Marama developed a love for me. Once O’Donnell knew this, Marama was of no further use to the cult and was a threat to their plans for me.
>
> Marama was naked, spread-eagled and chained down on an altar. O’Donnell was in my face yelling at me, “Do you love her?” I was silent. He repeated it many times. Of course, I did love her but I did not know which way would be best to answer as I was fearful for Marama. Finally, I said, “Yes”. O’Donnell then said, “Then, she has to die” and brought down a hatchet onto Marama’s chest.
>
> I will leave the description there.[859]

The Australian Broadcasting Corporation has added some mainstream strengthening to this disturbing narrative.

A violent and abusive priest who allegedly molested the son of cold case murder victim Maria James was never investigated as a potential suspect in her killing.

James, a 38-year-old single mother, was stabbed 68 times in the back of her second-hand bookshop in Thornbury in Melbourne's north in June 1980.

In 2013, her son Adam James revealed he was abused by a local priest, Father Anthony Bongiorno, in the month leading up to his mother's murder.

*Maria James murder:

 Stabbed 68 times in her Melbourne home.*
 Hands bound in what police described as a "frenzied attack".*
 Youngest son abused by two local priests.*
 One priest seen covered in blood on day of murder.*

But Adam has told the ABC that on one occasion he was also sexually assaulted by a second priest, Father Thomas O'Keeffe.

Both priests lived and worked at St. Mary's Parish in Thornbury, just around the corner from Maria James' bookshop.

Father Bongiorno was seen with blood on his hands, arm and face around the time of the murder.

Adam, who was 11 at the time, says he told his mother about the abuse, and believed she was going to confront Father Bongiorno.

Police eliminated Father Bongiorno as a suspect in 2015, but won't say how they ruled him out. ...

... police never looked into O'Keeffe, who died in 1984.

Ron Iddles, who has investigated the murder of Maria James for many years, believes she knew her attacker.

The James family were regular attendees at St. Mary's Presbytery — where Father O'Keeffe helped administer Adam's first communion.

Now 48, Adam — who has cerebral palsy and Tourette syndrome — believes he might have been involved in his mother's murder.

Along with his older brother Mark, he is calling on police to investigate Father O'Keeffe as a potential suspect.

While Father Bongiorno was an outspoken public figure, Father O'Keeffe kept a far lower profile.

"I was actually scared of him as a young boy," says Mark James.

"He was the cold, silent one in the background."

— Remember the assertion by University of South Australia Associate Professor Dale Bagshaw that child predators seek and are welcomed into the Catholic Church. —

Father O'Keeffe had a history of violence and sexual abuse even before he became the parish priest at St. Mary's in 1978.

While at Doveton Parish in south-east Melbourne in the 70s, he preyed on young children alongside a group of paedophile priests.

The ABC's Trace podcast has spoken to many of Father O'Keeffe's victims.

James Shanahan was abused by the priest as an 11-year-old at Christian Brothers College in East St. Kilda.

— This is the same James Shanahan who gave a full account at "Pedophiles Down Under". —

"O'Keeffe came to my classroom and took me out of it for the purpose of sex education," Mr. Shanahan said.

"We went into the brothers' residential quarters, into a very large room, and he started to fondle me."

"At that point I remember disassociating almost straight away. I remember looking out the window, so very bright sunlight, and I just focused on that and that's mentally where I went."

The abuse continued for three years.

> Mr. Shanahan detailed the nature of the abuse in a submission to the Catholic Archdiocese of Melbourne in 1999, as part of the Church's Melbourne Response.
>
> He described abuse of a violent, sexual, ritualistic, and sadistic nature.
>
> The Church-appointed Independent Commissioner, Peter O'Callaghan QC [Queen's Counsel], met with Mr. Shanahan in 2000.
>
> In his formal response, Mr. O'Callaghan wrote:
>
> > "I am satisfied that Mr. Shanahan was a victim of sexual abuse inter alia by Father Thomas O'Keefe (deceased) substantially in the circumstances described by Mr. Shanahan."
> >
> > "I confirm that the events which Mr. Shanahan describes are extraordinary, but I have no reason or justification for doubting his credibility."
>
> In 2001, James Shanahan received a letter signed by then Archbishop of Melbourne, George Pell, which read:
>
> > "I apologise to you and to those around you for the wrongs and hurt you have suffered at the hands of Father T O'Keefe."
>
> Mr. Shanahan received $33,000 in compensation from the Church for the abuse.
>
> Speaking to Trace, Mr. Shanahan — now 67 — describes O'Keeffe as a "psychopath". ...
>
> James has a memory of his wrists being bound with cord or a rope. On another occasion, James says O'Keeffe threatened him with a knife in his own home.
>
> "He raped me and threatened to run me through with this carving knife.
>
> "He was out of his mind with rage."[860]

In 2015, St. Mary's along with five other churches affiliated with Thomas O'Keefe, Kevin O'Donnell and other pedophile priests went up in flames in a series of unexplained fires.[861]

It would seem the “rage” now belongs to the victims.

It is building into a conflagration hot enough to touch Rome.

Chapter 24

Grove Ritual[cxxvii]

1 October 1993: 12 year-old Polly Hannah Klaas is kidnapped from her Petaluma, California home.

> And they built the high places of Baal, which are in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to cause their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire unto Molech; which I commanded them not, neither came it into My Mind, that they should do this abomination, to cause Judah to sin. ~ Jeremiah 32:35, (KJV, capitalization added to correct disrespect)

The "official story" of what happened to Polly Hannah Klaas is immediately suspicious.

> Twelve-year-old Polly Hannah Klaas was having a slumber party when a strange man holding a knife entered her bedroom, tied up all the girls and put pillow cases over their heads. The intruder then took a sobbing Polly off into the night.
>
> Her friends stood back-to-back trying to untie themselves. When that didn't work, one girl was able to bring her hands under her feet to free herself. The girls then awakened Polly's mother, who immediately called the police. ...
>
> A stranger had invaded a private home in Petaluma, CA and snatched an innocent child from her very own bedroom. There were witnesses to tell the story. People in her home town and throughout the world helped search for her. ~ The Polly Klaas Foundation[862]

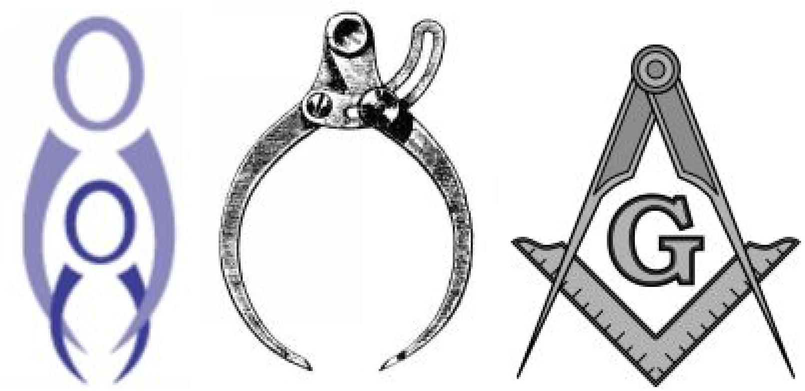
A home invasion by a stranger who specifically targets only the child who lives there during a "slumber party" filled with other girls her age?

The icon of the "Polly Klaas Foundation" is a large, "adult" compass overlaying a small "child" compass.



FAIR USE of registered image for illustration.

Polly’s kidnapping received massive media coverage, but little from law enforcement.

> Over the next two months, about 4,000 people helped search for Klaas.[3] TV shows such as 20/20 and America’s Most Wanted covered the kidnapping. An APB (all-points bulletin) with the suspect information was broadcast within 30 minutes of the kidnapping. The broadcast however, only went out over Sonoma County Sheriff’s Channel 1. ~ Wikipedia[863]

That meant that she was in a secure location, destined for sex abuse, torture and ritual slaughter.

Polly’s father, Marc Klaas, figures prominently in that media coverage from Polly’s kidnapping through today. Each time he gives a statement it is grandiose and laden with emotion.

Polly’s parents divorced when she was 2. She was staying at the home of her mother, Eve Nichol, yet Nichol has been erased from the narrative. Media even goes as far as mislabeling the woman Klaas cohabited with after the divorce, “Violet Cheer”, as Polly’s mother.

Of his marriage, Marc Klaas told the media indelicately—

> “We had a bad marriage but an extremely successful divorce...” ~ LA Times[864]

Further digging discloses that Polly was the tie that bonded Klaas to his despised ex-wife.

> Klaas's first marriage, to hotel assistant personnel director Eve Lax in 1977, was rocky almost from the start. "I was really not a happy soul," says Klaas, a concierge at the same hotel. Although the couple was thrilled with Polly's birth in 1980 — she was conceived in an attempt to save their relationship — Klaas moved out three years later. ~ People[865]

We must assume that Polly's birth "thrilling the couple" was recounted by Marc Klaas as Eve Nichol (née Lax) was never interviewed. Given the massive multiplicity of pieces printed by People on Polly, alone, there certainly seemed to be plenty of opportunity.

At no time was Marc Klaas ever questioned in the disappearance of his daughter yet he clearly should've been a prime suspect.

Richard Allen Davis

The main suspect for Polly's kidnapping was Richard Allen Davis.

Davis, like Jeffrey Dahmer, Timothy McVeigh, Lee Harvey Oswald and many other patsies, put himself on the radar of the Elite with military service.

He was also raised in a broken home, albeit one more abusive. When his mother, Evelyn, caught young Richard smoking, she held his fingers over the stove until they blistered.[866]

He soon began taking out his anger on animals, cutting stray dogs and burning cats with kerosene.

Davis soon entered the revolving door of the California penal system; kidnapping, assault with a deadly weapon, armed robbery and burglary.

REWARD
$200,000
KIDNAPPED
Polly Hannah Klaas SUSPECT
LAST SEEN OCTOBER 1, 1993 IN PETALUMA, CALIFORNIA
If you have any information – please call:
PETALUMA, POLICE: 707-778-4481
OR THE FBI AT 415-553-7400
OR THE POLLY KLAAS SEARCH CTR. 1-800-587-4357 • P.O. BOX 800 • PETALUMA, CA 9495

Although he kidnapped and attacked women on at least three occasions, his attempts at sexually assaulting them were clumsy and ineffective. It is important to note that Richard Davis was never charged with a sex crime.

On the night Poly Klaas was kidnapped, Davis drove his car into a ditch in Santa Rose, 20 miles from Petaluma. Sheriff’s deputies helped the ex-con extricate his car and, even though they found an open can of beer, and their background check disclosed his prison record, sent Davis on his way.

> ... in July 1993, he took up residence at Turning Point, a San Mateo homeless shelter. On Sept. 23 he secured permission to visit his sister Darlene’s family near Ukiah, about 100 miles north of San Francisco. Just over a week later, on Oct. 1, he made his way to Petaluma, a pleasant town of 46,000 where his mother apparently was living, and found his way to the cozy two-bedroom home where Polly Klaas lived.
>
> No one is sure just why Davis chose Polly — or, once he did, why he killed her. Davis’s attorney has said that he had come to Petaluma to find his mother to borrow money. Davis has claimed that he was under the influence of drugs and alcohol and that he picked the Klaas home at random. ~ People[867]

“Where his mother apparently was living”? Were the “journalists” at People unable to do their job ... or unwilling?

“Made his way...” San Mateo is roughly 70 miles and an hour and a half by car from Petaluma.

At first, Davis vociferously denied any involvement in the crime. His near constant state of inebriation made him unable to think or remember clearly.

> It was two months before detectives zeroed in on Davis and wrung a confession from him. By then the case had captivated the nation like no other before it. ~ San Francisco Chronicle[868]

Helping to “ring” the confession from Davis was the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Although Polly had not been taken across state lines, she fell into the murky jurisdictional boundary of being a missing child “of tender years”. This is an extremely helpful clause given the FBI’s role in facilitating child sex slave trafficking.

After his “confession”, Davis supposedly led authorities to Polly’s body in a field near Cloverdale. She was partly dressed, badly decomposed and had been beheaded.[869]

“No one is sure just why Davis chose Polly — or, once he did, why he killed her.”

Indeed. Motive and methodology made Davis an unlikely suspect. It should’ve been a potent defense. Instead, Davis’ court-appointed lawyer left him behind and quickly betrayed him to the Prosecution.

> Davis’s court-appointed attorney, Barry Collins, has conceded to jurors in San Jose that Davis killed Polly Klaas, Davis has pleaded not guilty to the murder — and to the additional charges of burglary, kidnapping, robbery and performing a lewd act on a child. ~ People[870]

Three Strikes

As we’ve seen, prisons are just as important a source of children for the Pedocracy as are orphanages and foster homes.

But they’re also a source of wealth to the Elite and the imbalance of justice serves their purpose for societal chaos. Suspects convicted of “light” crimes are given heavy sentences yet those who commit heinous acts are given light ones. Monsters are turned back into the populace and chance criminals are turned into monsters.

In 2011, Luzerne County, Pennsylvania Judge Mark Ciavarella Jr. was caught earning over $1 million in graft, redirecting juveniles that were unlucky enough to stand before him to private prisons where they were “taken care of.”[871] Ciavarella was arraigned in Scranton, home of “Scranton University” — another school with a public-sounding name but a Jesuit administration.

> Ciavarella is a lifelong resident of Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, having been raised in the East End section of the city and attending St. Mary’s [Roman Catholic] High School. After graduating from the local King’s College he attended [private Roman Catholic] Duquesne University School of Law, receiving his law degree in 1975. Ciavarella entered private legal practice, becoming a partner in the firm of Lowery, Ciavarella and Rogers. From 1976 to 1978 he was city solicitor and then from 1978 until 1995 he served as solicitor for the city zoning board. In 1995 he ran for judge in Luzerne County on the Democratic ticket and was elected to a ten-year term. He was re-elected to a second ten-year term in 2005. Ciavarella was also active in several civic and Catholic organizations. He was married to the former Cindy Baer and the couple have three children.[1] They separated on September 15, 2010, and on May 2013 she filed for divorce.[6] ~ Wikipedia[872]

To add to the chaos, Polly’s kidnapping and murder was used to rescue the stalled “Three Strikes” bill in the California Legislature. It quickly passed.

California is a state completely controlled by Roman Catholic Democrats (many of them voters, yet not registered citizens). It produced a justice system that repeatedly put violent felons back on the streets.[cxxviii]

With the advent of “Three Strikes” the pendulum was thrown to the opposite extreme, equally poisonous to the populace.

Years later, the “political strategist” who authored “Three Strikes”, Daniel Newman, has been forced to admit its misuse.

He used intriguing examples to do so.

> Horrific events — even national tragedies such as Sept. 11 and Pearl Harbor — often lead well-intentioned people to rush through poorly drafted policies with some unintended consequences ... ~ San Francisco Chronicle[873]

No Klaas

As the Chronicle noted, Polly was called "'America's Child' by everyone from President Bill Clinton to Johnny Cash".[874]

Richard Davis was labeled "the real-life bogeyman".[875]

Interestingly, it's the same phrase used to describe West Memphis Three suspect "Damien" Echols.

After the kidnapping and ritual killing of his daughter, Marc Klaas has enjoyed celebrity and wealth that allowed him to quit his job at Hertz Rental.

> Now her father, with a dedication that even he concedes borders on obsession, is on a crusade to rid the streets of the sort of habitual criminal who, police say, confessed to the kidnaping and murder.
>
> Having abandoned the workaday world he inhabited until the night Polly vanished ... [h]e has hobnobbed with Hollywood stars and met with the President in the White House. He has testified before Congress, become a fixture on morning network news, and even produced stories on missing children for a nationally syndicated TV news magazine. ...
>
> Emerging from a West Los Angeles theater after the premiere of "Little Women," a film dedicated to his slain daughter, Klaas squinted into the flashing lights of photographers snapping pictures of the movie's stars and prepared to make his way to a post-premiere party at a studio down the block.
>
> As Klaas crossed the street, a woman pressed against a barrier and extended a notebook and pen.

> “Can I have your autograph?” she asked. An embarrassed Klaas obliged. California’s best-known grieving father, he is recognized almost everywhere he goes.
>
> He uses his celebrity—indeed, depends on it—to gain access to the famous and the powerful, people in positions to help him enact his agenda. That night in Los Angeles, Klaas was accompanied by a publicist he hired to help him arrange interviews. ~ Los Angeles Times[876]

With his money and celebrity, Klaas was able to create the “Polly Klaas Foundation”. Yet his irascible and intemperate behavior forced his own board to fire him!

When Klaas finally married his “partner” Violet Cheer at a ceremony undisclosed by the media, the presiding “official”, one “Michael Groves”, was told to state— “In Polly’s name, I now pronounce you husband and wife...” ~ People[877]

Given that Polly was an unwanted child from a previous marriage, one wonders at the mental disposition of Marc Klaas’ partner, Violet Cheer (who allowed him to cohabitate with her for 10 years before finally uttering the words every woman wants to hear).

The mental disposition and even sexuality of someone like Mark Klaas is of extreme importance when questioning his involvement in the disappearance of his daughter. Information from family can be telling in this regard.

In August of 1994—

> Marc’s brother Jonathan died at 35 of complications from AIDS... ~ People[878]

An early death from AIDS is often indicative of an aberrant sexual lifestyle. People, however, didn’t see the need to elucidate further.

The religious affiliations of either of Polly’s parents have been kept well-hidden by the media but clues were allowed to slip through.

> Polly’s maternal grandfather, Eugene Reed, a Jewish immigrant from Austria, told jurors he had lived through the Holocaust and the > bombing of London during World War II, but that nothing in his life compared to the loss of his granddaughter.

>
> He and his wife survived those tragedies, he said, "only in our old age to be hit by this devastating nightmare." ~ San Francisco Chronicle[879],[cxxix]

Where Polly's memorial was in 1993 and who attended was extremely telling.

> More than 1,500 mourners said farewell to Polly Klaas on Thursday night, part in tribute to her brief life and part in pledge that her death would not be wasted.
>
> "Tonight, we continue to remember Polly, whose life and death have brought our entire community to an all-new height of caring and love for one another, a very mighty legacy for a 12-year-old girl to have given us," said the Rev. George Risden, pastor of St. Vincent de Paul Church.
>
> Many of those crowded into the Roman Catholic church had never met Polly, but her kidnapping at a slumber party on Oct. 1 gave rise to an extraordinary search by this farming town that drew the attention of the nation.
>
> President Clinton sent a message of sympathy to the parents of Polly, whose body was found on Dec. 4. Joan Baez opened the memorial by singing "Amazing Grace." Other mourners included Gov. Pete Wilson, Senators Barbara Boxer and Dianne Feinstein, the author Ram Dass and the actress Winona Ryder. ~ The New York Times[880]

Recall the estimates: 800,000 children go missing each year, 2,000 a day. Was the "tribute" truly to Polly, or to her chosen sacrifice to the Pedocracy?

Child actress Winona Ryder attended Petaluma Junior High as did Polly. Her frequent "photo ops" sometimes were filled with tears. As to whether they were tears of empathy, tears of an actress playing a role or the tears of a girl equally abused, it is difficult to tell.

Like Polly’s maternal grandfather, Ryder, Senator Dianne Feinstein and many others at the memorial were / are Jewish yet they seemed quite at home in St. Vincent de Paul Cathedral.

Bohemian

In October of 2000, alternative radio personality Alex Jones released the “documentary” Dark Secrets: Inside Bohemian Grove.

Jones purportedly crashed the remote retreat to secretly record a ceremony called “The Cremation of Care” — a supposed “mock” child sacrifice to what appeared to be the ancient pagan deity “Moloch” (in his “owl” form). The participants were dressed in druidic robes.

> Proof that Luciferians run the world system of “Mystery Babylon” can be found in their secret assemblies like the Bohemian Grove and the > Bilderberg Group.

>
> Both Bohemian Grove and the Bilderberg Group are gatherings of the most powerful people in the world that are completely free of media scrutiny — never a good sign. ...
>
> Bohemian Grove is a scenic retreat located in Monte Rio, California and has been frequented by every Republican in high office in the past 100 years and more than a few Democrats as well.[1518] ~ Illuminati Unmasked[881]

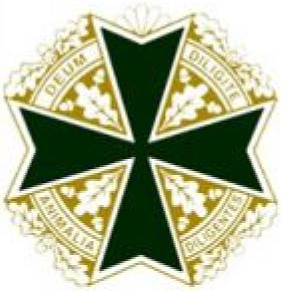
The idea that the world's Elite — led by the highest officials within the United States — would participate in such a ceremony has shocked even the most ardent members of the "Truth Community".

Worse, purported victims such as Paul Bonacci, Cathy O'Brien, David Shurter and Fiona Barnett have claimed that the Alex Jones documentary is a whitewash. According to them, children are regularly raped, tortured and ritually slaughtered at the Grove.



Shurter adamantly proclaims that it is impossible to "crash" the Grove — an assertion that is intuitively true.

Both the Bohemian Club and Bohemian Grove are controlled by the "International Order of St. Hubertus". The Order is a Roman Catholic organization of Knights founded 1695 by Count Franz Anton von Sporck of Bohemia (the modern Czech Republic).

The Bohemian Club maintains a posh, private facility in the Union Square district of San Francisco — a Roman Catholic city not known for "traditional values". Like Scranton, San Francisco is dominated by the Jesuits out of a public-sounding University of San Francisco.

As invitees enter Bohemian Grove, they are met by a statue of “Saint John of Nepomuk”. Original accounts of his death are related to political intrigue but they were later expanded upon to include an ignoble death from refusing to breach the “sanctity” of “confession”.

> Saint John of Nepomuk (c. 1345 – March 20, 1393)[2] is the saint of Bohemia (Czech Republic), who was drowned in the Vltava river at the behest of Wenceslaus, King of the Romans and King of Bohemia. Later accounts state that he was the confessor of the queen of Bohemia and refused to divulge the secrets of the confessional. On the basis of this account, John of Nepomuk is considered the first martyr of the Seal of the Confessional, a patron against calumnies and, because of the manner of his death, a protector from floods and drowning.[2] ~ Wikipedia[882]

One can easily see the perverse applications of such a figure at that location, especially given the double-meaning of the term “Bohemian” to be code for hedonism.

Putting a finger to the lips is also Luciferian code that intuitively implies “conspiracy”.

The overt Catholicism of the Grove has been as lost on mainstream and alternative media as has been the location of the Grove — 33 miles north of where Polly Klaas was abducted from her mother’s home in Petaluma.

The Grove is almost half the distance to Polly’s location verses the San Mateo halfway house Richard Davis was staying in. In fact, the Grove and Petaluma even reside in the same County of Sonoma.

How these facts went “unnoticed” by conspiracy theorists like “Alex Jones” can be answered by the same assertion of how he got his film footage...

— He was invited.

Chapter 25

River’s End

31 October 1993, “Halloween”: 22 year-old “River Phoenix” (born River Jude Bottom)dies from a simultaneous ingestion of heroin, cocaine and Valium.

How the drugs got into the system of the vegetarian health enthusiast should have been more questioned than it was.

photo by Alan Light

By now, the parameters of the Devil’s Simulation have become more familiar to us.

* A “Faustian bargain”...a “deal with the Devil”.
* Is the subject willing to use or be used by others?
* What is the subject willing to do to advance themselves?
* Sexual deviancy?
* Homosexuality? Gender confusion (either from trauma or willfully striven for) is indicative.
* Rape? Inappropriate seduction qualifies, especially when aided by narcotics, hypnosis, etc.
* Abuse of a child?
* Abuse a child so young they are completely unaware of sex and have no sexual appeal? (to normal human beings)
* Kill an animal? (particularly one that is helpless)
* Murder a human being?
* Torture something innocent and defenseless?

As we see the same names in popular culture rotating before us it is made clear: they have participated to some degree in the Devil’s Simulation — even if a reliable-source accusation isn’t readily available.

Few venues make this more illustrative than “entertainment”; particularly television and film (but also music).

River Jude Bottom didn’t skyrocket through child acting from obscurity. He was victimized by the Children of God cult; an offering from his “hippie” parents John Lee Bottom and Arlyn Phoenix (likely with his siblings — Joaquin, Rain, Summer and Liberty[cxxx]).

Although Jews are the favorite patsies of Luciferians who run the Devil’s Simulation, Biblical, Protestant Christianity is their most hated enemy. At every opportunity, they cultivate and enable agents of subterfuge.

Such an agent was David Brandt Berg (1919 – 1994). Berg was born in Oakland, California of Jewish blood and a tumultuous “Christian” upbringing.

> Virginia Brandt Berg, David Berg’s mother, is the individual whom he credited for influencing him the most. Although raised in a Christian home, Virginia became an atheist and wild society girl during her college years. However, shortly after the birth of her first child, she broke her back in an accident and spent the next five years as a bedridden invalid, often hovering near death. Eventually she recovered and spent the rest of her life with her husband, Hjalmer, in active Christian service as a pastor and evangelist. ~ Wikipedia[883]

From “wild society girl” to “pastor” with a broken back, Virginia Berg was neither conventional mother nor conventional Christian — especially in the 1920’s and 30’s.[cxxxi]

Schizophrenic Christianity would define David Berg for the rest of his life, especially when he started “The Family”.

“The Family” began as a pseudo-Christian hippie commune in 1968 (thanks to Jesuit counter-culture influence) and within two years, Berg was in Italy getting plugged in to a powerful Italian family and having a nun guide “The Family” into a Papal audience.

> One of the first Italian converts was Emanuele Canevaro, scion of a noble family from Florence, who later was referred to as “our Italian > king" in one of David Berg's visions and who put his Bassetto farm in Poggio Secco near Florence at the group's disposal. Canevaro's farm was later the home of the first Montessori school of the Children of God in Italy...

>
> On Easter Sunday April 22, 1972 Faith [Berg's daughter] and her group gathered with the crowd in St. Peter's Square to hear Pope Paul VI. ... Although at the time the Children of God had only six members in Italy, they attracted the attention of a group of Little Sisters of Jesus, a female Roman Catholic order of nuns devoted to radical poverty and already active with the hippies. One of them, Sister Magedlena, proved a long-lasting friend of the group and rendered to the Children of God a number of important services in the following years. ~ CESNUR[884]

By this time, Berg was completely deluded; calling himself "Moses David" and writing "epistles" of requirements and "revelations" which he called "Mo Letters".

Being empowered by the Papacy excited the pariah but he knew not he was simply being moved like a pawn on a chess board of chaos.

> Prospects seemed reasonably bright... He was enthusiastic enough about Italy to write one of the MO Letters, Arrivederci Roma, where he reported the vision of a river — God's will — coming down from Northern Europe to Italy... He went on to comment that the Children of God were "now beginning to invade the Catholic countries" where they would have to show themselves to be "pro-Catholic", to the point of honouring the Pope ("kiss the Pope's foot, if necessary") and attend the Catholic mass. Rome thus became a critically important city: "All roads lead to Rome, they say, but we are going to find, God Willing, that all roads lead from Rome and through Rome!". Berg mentioned Emanuele and Sister Maddalena in the letter...[885]

By "kissing the Pope's foot", Berg was given special access to "Catholic countries".

Berg was hooked like a "flirty fish".

> Although some of the suggestions to behave like good Catholics in Italy may simply sound like public relations strategies, Berg was at that time engaged in a re-evaluation of Roman Catholicism, and in another letter of September 1972 — published under the title Are the Children of God Catholics or Protestants? — he concluded that "surely we Children of God have more in common with the Catholics than with the Protestants."[3][886]

Masters of espionage (having conducted it for centuries), the Romans boosted the cult while maintaining "plausible deniability". "Sister Magedlena" guided the fledgling group (minus its scion founder) through a general audience with Giovanni Battista Enrico Antonio Maria Montini, a.k.a. Pope Paul VI.

> On October 4, 1972, Sister Magedlena accompanied Faith and six other Children of God (small children included) to Pope Paul VI's general audience. At the end of his speech the Pope passed through the crowded hall and gave to the assembled faithful, including Sister Maddalena and Faith, his hands to kiss. An excited Faith reported in a MO Letter dated October 1972 that the Pope put his hand on her head twice and said to her (in Italian) "God bless you," and the Letter carried photographs of the Pope placing his hand on the head of a little baby from the group (today a grown-up member of The Family) and blessing a group including Faith, and of Faith playing guitar with a smiling Sister Magedlena.[887]

It is not uncommon for a "general audience" to reach 400,000 (as Jesuit Pope Francis entertained in August 2015[888]), yet the tiny cult was able to be directly blessed by Paul VI twice[cxxxii] thanks to their helpful guide.

Soon "The Family" was enabled with the finances and licensing to start a coffee house and even a disco in the most important city in the world.

> A small coffee house was opened in the center of Rome where the Children of God tried to attract young people from the hippie subculture. In 1974 they added a disco in Via della Farnesina in an old warehouse (the place has now been converted to an Italian public television's storehouse), later called by different names, including the

> O.K. Club. With the disco came real success for the Italian Children of God (who in 1974 had also started distributing MO Letters in the streets). The disco became popular and was attended by hundreds of young people; the success enabled the Children of God to expand their missionary activities all over Italy and to open a second coffee house in Via Melzo in Milan. When the press campaign against the movement began in 1978[cxxxiii] there were around 300 Italian Children of God (including foreigners living in Italy), and some Italian members had started missionary activities in other countries.[889]

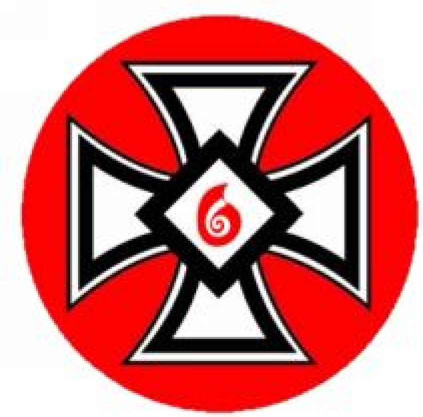
With Rome’s goal being to discredit Christianity by projecting her own crimes upon Christians, “The Family” was an investment that paid high dividends.

Despite his Jewish background (or because of it), Berg railed against blacks and Jews.

This tactic is an important part of Roman occupation — divide and conquer. It may even have been taught to Berg.



Other agents like the Ku Klux Klan seek cover with feigned hatred of Roman Catholics yet they proudly wear the Maltese crosses of dutiful Papal Knights.

The KKK was founded by Confederate General Albert Pike. Pike was a high Freemason who was “handled” by Jesuit Pierre-Jean de Smet (1801 – 1873) — one of the most powerful men in America at that time and the most powerful west of the Mississippi.

Perhaps Klansmen, more than the average agent of the Papacy know their place in the Devil’s Simulation — hence the Satanic “6” in the center of their “Iron Cross”.

David Berg controlled his adherents with harsh discipline and Satanic deviancy. Children were communal property and often passed around for sexual gratification.

> Born into an evil cult, called the Children of God, sisters Celeste, Kristina and Juliana Jones were abused from the age of three. Torn from their parents, their childhood was dominated by the warped cult leader David Berg.
>
> ...sexual grooming was an everyday part of my life.
>
> Sickeningly, the cult leader David Berg, or “Mo” as he called himself, claimed that God intended everyone to become part of a sexual experience. The result was a childhood of abuse and pain. ...
>
> Discipline was strict. Reveille was at 7.30am, and after breakfast, I’d go to our communal school. We were shown illustrated stories which were often filled with scenes of explicit sex, nudity or gruesome demons.
>
> When I was six, Berg requested the women to dance naked for him on the video which I still have today. I watched the women, then the other girls, strip and dance. Then a white veil was tied around my neck, which I was supposed to take off during the dance, and Paul gave directions from behind the camera: “Wiggle nicely and rub your bottom, honey.”
>
> I simply copied the motions I had seen the adult women perform earlier. “Good, very good! Now blow kisses,” he said. Watching it now makes me feel physically sick. Nude pictures were taken of us girls on a regular basis and sent to Berg. ...
>
> Once a week, our commune would gather for a dance night, and the adults — all those over the age of 12 — paired off for sex.

> Meanwhile, during the day, everything would stop for so-called "Cuddle Time" — a euphemism for group sex.
>
> I remember lying horrified in the clutches of my teacher, Johnny Appleseed (some of the cult members took stupid, folksy names), while other adults were having sex around us. When he finished assaulting me, he said a prayer as I lay in terror...
>
> ...we moved to a communal house rented by the sect and were ordered to change our names...

— Meaning those involved knew there was a need to make it difficult to be found by authorities. — Families were separated all the time. When I was eight, the leaders decided to keep me apart from Dad, and only let me see him once a week, while other couples helped to raise me.

— Another premeditated tactic of conditioning, as were non-sensical dictums. — Berg decided we were all to use spoons, instead of forks. We could not use black pepper, women could not wear jeans, and men replaced their briefs with boxer shorts just because he expressed his dislike for them. Fruit and vegetables had to be soaked in salt water for 20 minutes — which made them taste awful.

The most culpable criminals in the cult weren't the leaders, but the adult parents who willingly subjected their children to abuse.

> When I was 11 years old, [Family leader] Paul [Peloquin] decided that my best friend Armi and I had to have sex with two boys, Patrick and Nicki, aged 12 and nine. This was to happen once a week.
>
> Armi and I were also "scheduled" with the adult men — sex with men old enough to be my father.
>
> It was an horrific assault on my prepubescent body, but I had to bear it; I was powerless to stop it. Now, when I look back at the terrible things that were done to me, I see that my father should have done something to stop it, but he didn't.

> How could a man stand by while his 11-year-old daughter was effectively raped by another man? ~ Daily Mail[890]

Her father was willing to offer up his little girl so that his own lusts could be indulged.

The children and women were told to help recruit new members by offering their bodies to them; a process Berg disturbingly called “Flirty-Fishing”.

Apparently, it worked well.

> The former Fleetwood Mac band member Jeremy Spencer was a member of the cult. On the regular dates we had, he would play a tape of saxophone music. The routine was, by now, familiar — undress, pray, kiss and then perform lewd acts for him.[891]

The mother of Celeste Jones found the partial courage to leave and take sister Kristina and brother David leaving Celeste and Juliana to the cult’s “care”.

> At 14, I learned that my mother and 12-year-old sister Kristina — whom I had not seen for many years — had left the cult. Kristina had been sexually abused from the age of three by my mother’s second partner Joshua, and then other men from the cult.[892]

Again, the searing of conscience required to molest, violate and sexually assault a toddler is an act that puts one in league with the most evil of beings. Given that such are the likes who control access to power, that is what one is usually granted.

Perhaps it is understandable that the mother of Celeste Jones wasn’t able to boldly rebel. She had been indoctrinated since her own teenage years. Showing the power of the cult, she was recruited out of an un-named English school “The Family” was given access to for that purpose.

> Rebecca was recruited during a visit to her school by the Children of God when she was just 16, and married our father a year later in 1974.[893]

“Rebecca” was then provided some press coverage in England to voice the crimes of the “Christian cult”. Celeste was “trained” by cult leaders and sent to England from her commune in Bombay, India (a location with less visibility for committing crime).

> The leaders of the cult who had accompanied me made me draft an affidavit stating that I hadn’t been abused as a child. Lying on a desk, I found another affidavit which Kristina had written, saying she had been abused from the age of three by grown men including her stepfather.
>
> I felt physically sick and I knew instantly that she wasn’t lying because I had suffered the same abuse. But I was too scared to leave The Family — it was the only world I knew.
>
> Over the next year and a half, I appeared on a number of television programmes, including Sky News and the BBC, to deny the stories my mother and Kristina were openly talking about.[894]

At the time, Sky News was run by Knight of Malta Rupert Murdoch.

Fifty years hence, media still hangs the outrages of the Catholic “Family” on Christianity.

> Because of the cult’s Christian fundamentalist underpinnings, members were forbidden from using any form of contraception. Not surprisingly, there were plenty of children born out of the Children of God. ~ The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, 2016[895]

The CBC highlighted the experiences of former Family member Jerry Golland — a Jew who worked for Catholics.

> Golland, 69, also grew up in Montreal, raised in a secular Jewish family. A little over a year ago he retired from a teaching position with the Ottawa Catholic School Board.[896]

Golland then admitted being a willing agent of the cult for two decades, preying upon the vulnerable.

> “I was so ingrained not to be religious, I had always mocked it all my life. And then 40 or 50 people, I heard this music coming from the > park, and standing all around me [were people] saying, 'Hey, come with us, come on our bus, you can come home with us.'"

>
> He says in different times he would have run like hell, but he was at the end of his rope.
>
> "Nothing attracted me to them," Golland said. "They scraped me off the street."
>
> He would spend the next 20 years as a member of the cult, always on the lookout for vulnerable people — people just like himself — to recruit.
>
> "We'd learn to spot, you know ... those eyes, that person, there is a vulnerable person. We called them sheep. He's a real sheep as opposed to someone who was more antagonistic — he was a wolf."[897]

Another former member, Danielle Fortin, recounted her "wild" youth. In Catholic Spain, "The Family" lured her with Christian terminology that was nothing less than sinister.

> She describes being "wild" in her youth, and that included taking hard-core drugs. ...
>
> Fortin's first exposure to the Children of God came in the mid-1970s. She was hooked on heroin, unhappy with her life and looking for meaning. She recounts going to Spain on impulse during a drug-fueled binge.
>
> "And there was some people singing on the street, three or four guys singing, 'You got to be a baby to go to heaven.' And at that time my state of mind was, 'Wow! Can I be a baby and go to heaven?' And they told me yes — if I receive Jesus into my heart."[898]

Another hit piece was put forth by Salon magazine. Author Mary Mahoney told the harrowing story of rebelling against her good Roman Catholic family to join the "Christian" Children of God cult.

> I grew up in suburban Washington, D.C., the youngest of seven children in a comfortably middle-class Catholic home. We must have looked like the perfect family. My parents were leaders of the > Charismatic group at their large church. Our house was clean – almost sterile. ...

>
> I was trying to find my path in life, and I thought this might be it. Here was a group of dedicated Christian young people determined to return to the pure roots of Christianity by living communally and sharing all things. I felt loved and accepted, and was welcomed into the fold as a new “babe” in Christ. Born again. I didn’t see this as a “cult”; I saw it as a chance to live an honorable life of service to God and others. And I was so young. What did I know about how the world worked? ... I had no idea I was walking into a nightmare. ...
>
> Like St. Francis of old, I saw myself as a committed follower of Christ. I saw this as my “new family.” ...[899]

But even the terminology of the cult was Catholic, and not “Christian”.

> In 1976, I was taking care of the children of COG “Archbishops” in a secret Commune in Pennsylvania.
>
> ... free sex and no birth control were seen as the only way to please the Lord.[900]

Apparently that didn’t ring a bell with Miss Mahoney — or it did and she kept it to herself for the purpose of her Salon propaganda.

The application of extreme sexual perversion to Jesus Christ can rightly be termed “Jesuitical”.

> At 20 I lost my virginity Flirty Fishing a Middle-Eastern gentleman – all for the cause of Christ, of course.[901]

Miss Mahoney even managed to take a swipe against mistrust of vaccines.

> Our unvaccinated children came down with whooping cough, and then later measles, rubella and mumps. After months of quarantine to contain the spread, the leader moved her children away.[902]

Certainly, if governments can kidnap children off the street to torture them, turn them into sex slaves and sometimes ritually kill them for Satan, misuse of vaccines is far from an outrageous concern.

Actress Rose McGowan has appeared in such classics as “Going All the Way”, “Devil in the Flesh”, “Monkeybone” and “The Black Dahlia”. She also played an alluring witch on the Warner Brothers TV series “Charmed”.

McGowan’s American father ran a Children of God chapter in a well-known European location.

> McGowan, the second-eldest of six children (plus two half-siblings), was born in Certaldo, Italy, the daughter of Terri, a former writer and Microsoft employee, and Daniel McGowan, who worked as a commercial artist.[1] Her parents were American, and she has Irish and French ancestry.[2] Daniel McGowan ran an Italian chapter of the Children of God, to which both he and his wife held membership until 1978.[3] McGowan spent her early childhood amid the group’s communes, often traveling through Europe with her parents.[2] When interviewed by Howard Stern in 2001, she stated she had avoided the group’s calls for members to become sexually active as children, and stated that she never personally experienced abuse as a child.[1] Through her father’s art contacts in Italy, McGowan became a child model and appeared in Vogue Bambini and various other Italian magazines.
>
> Her parents returned to the United States when she was ten years old, settling in Eugene, Oregon.[2][4] ~ Wikipedia[903]

Hollywood star Rose McGowan’s mother was a Microsoft writer in Italy and her “connected artist” father ran the Children of God chapter.

McGowan claims she was never molested. Subsequently, she seems to have developed into perfect normalcy.

> McGowan had a wayward childhood, living as a teenage runaway in Portland, Oregon and associating with a group of drag queens in the city.[2][5] ~ Wikipedia[904]

> McGowan recalls that “[returning with family to America] was not an easy assimilation” into the mainstream way of life. “My brothers and > sisters, we thought everyone was boring."

>
> Many years later, she returned to the small town in Italy with her then-boyfriend, rocker Marilyn Manson. "We created quite a stir," she admits. ~ People[905]

If anyone epitomizes of "normalcy" it's Brian Hugh "Marilyn Manson" Warner.

> Manson was born in Canton, Ohio. He is the only son of Barbara Warner Wyer and Hugh Angus Warner.[37] He is of German, English and Irish descent.[38] In an August 12, 2015 interview, Warner claimed that his Appalachian family also has "Sioux" heritage.[39] In his autobiography The Long Hard Road Out of Hell*, he detailed his grandfather's alleged sexual fetishes, including bestiality and sadomasochism.*
>
> As a child, he attended his mother's Episcopal church, though his father was a Roman Catholic.[40][41] ~ Wikipedia[906]

"Manson" used his Catholic father's influence to become a "Satanist". His former girlfriend, Rose McGowan, claimed she was more fervent at it than he was.[907]

Is "Satanism" the religion Rose McGowan most identifies with or is there another?

Marilyn Manson, ComicVine

In 2008, McGowan was in England filming "Fifty Dead Men Walking"; a movie about Irish Catholic petty criminal Martin McGartland who was turned by the Royal Ulster Constabulary to be a snitch against the Irish Republican Army. After the film was released, McGowan told media that she would've been happy to have joined the IRA during the height of bloodshed in Belfast.[908]

Brian “Marilyn Manson” Warner is in tight with another Hollywood personality.

> Johnny Depp reportedly used Manson as his inspiration for his performance as Willy Wonka in the film Charlie and the Chocolate Factory*... ~ Wikipedia*[909]

Although Rose McGowan seems to have enjoyed her “non-traditional” past and the boost the Children of God gave her into stardom, another former member didn’t fare quite as well.

At 1 a.m. on Halloween in 1993, River Phoenix lay in convulsions on the sidewalk of the Sunset Strip in Los Angeles. Before the turn of the hour, doctors would pronounce him dead.

Media later claimed that his death was due to ingesting heroin, cocaine and Valium dissolved into a drink — an extremely dangerous combination.

It was spun as just another drug overdose in Hollywood. In fact, the concoction even has a name (a “speedball”) implying that the rich and famous do them all the time.

However, although Phoenix may have experimented with drugs, those who knew him were shocked that he would’ve died in such a manner.

> The sudden death of someone young, talented and apparently healthy is always shocking; in Phoenix’s case, it seemed doubly so. Given his reputation as a clean-living vegetarian and a passionately serious artist, Phoenix seemed an unlikely candidate for dying young from living fast. The disbelief of friends, fans and colleagues was expressed by Phoenix’s maternal grandmother, Margaret Dunetz, who, two days after her grandson’s death, was still unable to refer to him in the past tense. “I’m in shock,” she said. “I can’t describe what a wonderful kid he is. I can’t understand why—how—it could happen.”
>
> For now, the cause of Phoenix’s death remains officially undetermined. A spokesman for the L.A. coroner’s office said its autopsy was “inconclusive.” ~ People[910]

This didn’t stop the media from pushing the image that River Phoenix was a drug addict.

In fact, not only was he not, he may even have “had religion” — which would’ve put him high on the hit list of the Devil’s Simulation.

> While Sneakers[cxxxiv] shot in Los Angeles, River stayed at Flea’s house [Red Hot Chili Peppers basist Michael “Flea” Balzary]. The bassist was out of town on tour, but plenty of his friends still came around, giving River easy access to whatever drug he wanted, including heroin. Not that it was all party time: one disagreement led to a drug buddy chasing River through the house with a butcher’s knife.
>
> Soon after that incident, River’s former tutor Dirk Drake came to visit and was extremely concerned by the heroin situation. He told River that he was “furious about the glamour those friends attached to scag.”
>
> To which River replied, “Don’t worry, I have the fear of God.”
>
> That infuriated Drake, who suggested that River should change careers from actor to Baptist preacher. ~ Vanity Fair[911]

Where was Phoenix when he received the deadly concoction?

— In the “Viper Room”: a private lounge for Los Angeles Elite.

The owner of the Viper Room is Johnny Depp.

Chapter 26

Maddie

3 May 2007: Four year old Madeleine Beth McCann "disappears" from a holiday apartment in Praia da Luz, Portugal.

Immediately after the disappearance of Madeleine McCann was reported to the police in Portugal, her parents Gerald and Kate McCann became suspects (as they should have been).

Over time, however, the British media pushed a relentless campaign in their favor, spinning the unlikely propaganda that Madeleine was taken by a stranger.

> Madeleine was on holiday from the UK with her parents, Kate and Gerry McCann, her two-year-old twin siblings, and a group of family friends and their children. She and the twins had been left asleep at 20:30 in the ground-floor apartment, while the McCanns and friends dined in a restaurant 55 metres (180 ft) away.[5] ... Madeleine's mother discovered she was missing at 22:00. Over the following weeks ... the Portuguese police came to believe that Madeleine had died in ... the apartment, and that her parents had covered it up. The McCanns were given arguido (suspect) status in September 2007, which was lifted > when Portugal's attorney general archived the case in July 2008...[6][7]

> ~ Wikipedia[912]

Another subterfuge the media continues to push is that Madeleine is still alive; frequently promoting any candidate they could find, including one poor girl found in a well-known city.

> Madeleine McCann FOUND? English-Speaking Girl Called "Maria" Discovered in Rome, The Sunday Express[913]

"Maria" turned out to be 21 year old Embla Jauhojärvi of Stockholm, Sweden. Embla's father, Tahvo Jauhojärvi, said she had gone to Italy in May of 2016 to study language but went missing. She was later found, dazed, missing her ID and Passport and sleeping on the street.[914]

As we have seen, Madeleine McCann was the target age for ritual abuse and murder. Rarely are children taken without the collusion of a family member.

> A Portuguese judge reportedly is deciding whether to grant an emergency request by the public prosecutor in the Madeleine McCann case seeking to seize a "mystery object" described as being vital to the investigation.
>
> Evidence suggesting that Kate and Gerry McCann, the parents of the missing girl who disappeared just short of her fourth birthday, were involved in their daughter's death was passed to the judge late Tuesday night.
>
> In addition to the prosecutor's request, the judge will consider whether the couple should be charged.
>
> The judge has a number of options, including ordering the couple to return to the Algarve to be placed under house arrest, or submit to further police questioning. He also could order additional searches and wire taps. The judge has 10 days to make his ruling.
>
> The public prosecutor's request to seize an "object" vital to the inquiry could include searching areas such as a lawyer's office or a place of worship, which are protected under Portuguese laws. ~ Fox News[915]

The “place of worship” only hinted at by Knight of Malta Rupert Morduch’s “Fox News” was Nossa Senhora da Luz Cathedral in Praia da Luz. The McCanns had private access with a key given to them by Father Jose Manuel Pacheco[916] ... both Gerald and Kate McCann are devout Roman Catholics.

Within a month of Madeleine’s disappearance, Gerald and Kate McCann were in Rome, treated to a private audience with Pope Benedict XVI. It was provided for by Sir Philip Nigel Ross Green — a billionaire with a reputation for corruption.[917]

> The couple will fly to Rome this afternoon from Faro on a 12-seater Gulfstream jet owned by the businessman Sir Philip Green. ~ The Guardian[918]

Even more noteworthy, Sir Philip Green isn’t Catholic, he’s a Jew and he’s been accused of connections with MI6 for aiding the child sex slave trade.[919]

On 16 May, 2007, a witness dictated a statement to the Polícia Judiciária, the national criminal investigation agency of Portugal. She stated that she was in the company of Gerald McCann and a friend. They were talking about Madeleine and the friend, a doctor like McCann, asked “Does she do this?” and placed his finger in his mouth and circled his body in a sexually-suggestive manner.[920]

The Doctor and his wife were questioned by the Leicester Police Constabulary and gave evasive answers.

By “coincidence” the site the McCann’s chose to vacation happened to be in close proximity of a high-profile pedophile, the Knighted grandson of Sigmund Freud — Sir Clement Raphael Freud.

> The former Liberal MP, who died in 2009, owned a villa in Praia da Luz – close to where Madeleine went missing when she was three-years-old.
>
> Freud also hosted her parents Kate and Gerry McCann on two separate occasions.

> It was revealed earlier this week that Freud, who first invited the McCanns to his Portuguese villa two months after their daughter went missing, spent years sexually abusing girls as young as 10. ~ The Sunday Express[921]

As part of Operation: Grange — the London Metro investigation into Maddie McCann's disappearance — sketches were released of men wanted for questioning. It has been noted that the two men bear a marked resemblance to Democrat power players John and Tony Podesta.

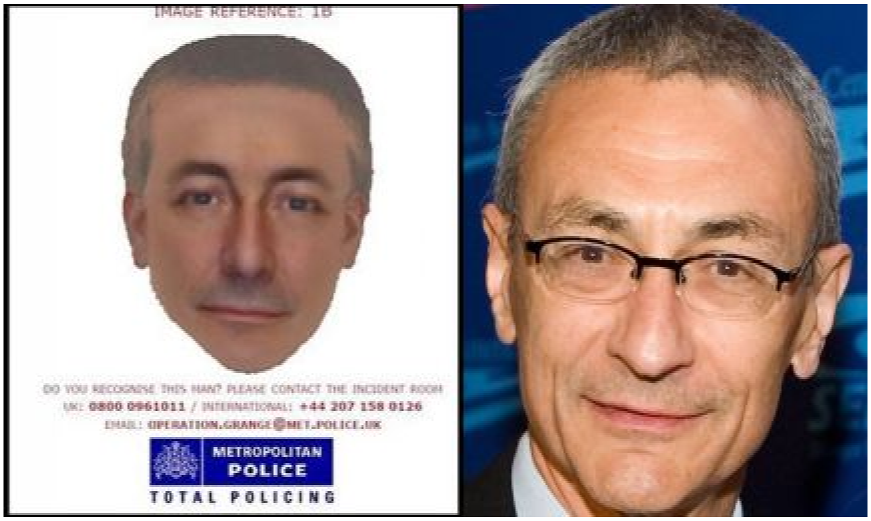

IMAGE REFERENCE: 1B
DO YOU RECOGNISE THIS MAN? PLEASE CONTACT THE INCIDENT ROOM
UK: 0800 0961011 / INTERNATIONAL: +44 207 158 0126
EMAIL: OPERATION.GRANGE@MET.POLICE.UK
METROPOLITAN POLICE
TOTAL POLICING

FAIR USE: images of public personalities for illustration.

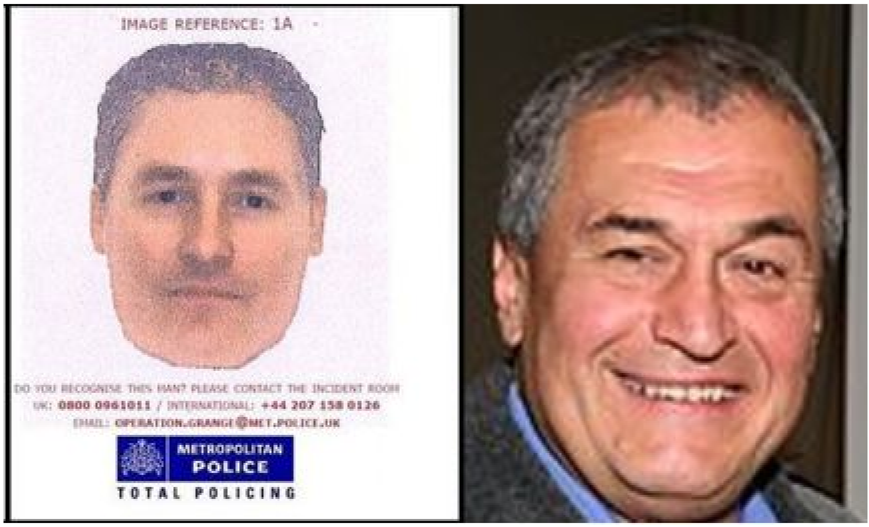

IMAGE REFERENCE: 1A
DO YOU RECOGNISE THIS MAN? PLEASE CONTACT THE INCIDENT ROOM
UK: 0800 0961011 / INTERNATIONAL: +44 207 158 0126
EMAIL: OPERATION.GRANGE@MET.POLICE.UK
METROPOLITAN POLICE
TOTAL POLICING

FAIR USE: images of public personalities for illustration.

The Podestas would surface again in the 2016 "PizzaGate" scandal. More on that in Chapter 31.

The Polícia Judiciária ("PJ") Detective who made the McCanns arguidos (suspects) was Gonçalo Amaral. Amaral retired shortly after the scandal broke and began making public statements he could not have made as a Detective about the guilt of the McCanns. The McCanns sued Amaral for liable and were denied by the Portuguese Supreme Court.[922]

Although Amaral's pointed statements even went so far as a book — The Truth of the Lie (a Portuguese best-seller) — he did not entertain accusations that the McCanns were part of a systemic child trafficking ring.

In 2008, Amaral was sighted attending a charity benefit for The Sovereign Military Hospitaller Order of Saint John of Jerusalem, also known as the Knights of Malta.[923]

Perhaps the worst indictment of all, after collecting forensic evidence, the Polícia Judiciária have made the astounding statement that Gerald McCann was not Madeleine's biological father.

Despite the "furious rebuttals" from the McCanns and the British media, it isn't as far-fetched an assertion as it seems — all three of the McCann children were "in-vitro fertilization".[924]

Was Madeleine McCann "bred" by her devout Roman Catholic parents for a grisly end — especially given the coloboma defect in the iris of her right eye?

If so, the special private audience they received at the Vatican shows, Rome was appreciative.

Chapter 27

The Black Waters of Malta

16 September 2007: ...employees of Blackwater Security Consulting (since renamed Academi), a private military company, shot at Iraqi civilians, killing 17 and injuring 20 in Nisour Square, Baghdad while escorting a U.S. embassy convoy.[1][2][3] The killings outraged Iraqis and strained relations between Iraq and the United States.[4] In 2014, four Blackwater employees were tried[5] and convicted in U.S. federal court; one of murder, and the other three of manslaughter and firearms charges.[6] ...

On August 4 2017, a three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit tossed [security contractor Nicholas] Slatten's murder conviction and ordered the other defendants to be re-sentenced.[21] A new trial was also recommended for Slatten, on the grounds that it was unjustifiable to try him with his co-defendants, and that he should have been tried separately.[21] ~ Wikipedia[925]

Having billionaire Edgar Dale Prince as a father provided certain "opportunities" for Erik Dean Prince, such as world travel and an appointment to the United States Naval Academy.

Prince chaffed, however, at the Plebe hazing and left Annapolis for Hillsdale. He then joined the Navy and became a SEAL where he served in the Middle East, Haiti and the Balkans but saw no combat.[926]

Each of these locations remain a hotbed of human trafficking, Haiti, in particular (see Chapter 28).

Prince left the SEALs after a short 4-year stint[927] and then founded one of the most infamous war profiteering organizations of all time — Blackwater — immediately after.

Clearly, he felt he had a sure thing.

Blackwater would go on to net over $1 billion in U.S. government contracts and that was despite the Nisour Square massacre of 16 September 2007. When an Iraqi car tangled with a Blackwater-guarded convoy the response was a hail of weapons fire and explosives which killed anywhere between 17 and 28 men, women and children.[928]

Later, the U.S. military examined the carnage. It was determined that there was no evidence of any insurgent activity — a wayward Iraqi civilian unwittingly touching off a powder-keg of undisciplined, trigger-happy mercenaries.[929]

Two months prior, the State Department was warned about Blackwater's lawless arrogance by an investigator who had uncovered shocking levels of corruption and negligence. He was stopped, however, by the company's lead man in Iraq — another ex-Navy SEAL named Daniel Carroll. Carroll told Diplomatic Security Special Agent Jean Richter: that he could kill me at that very moment and no one could or would do anything about it as we were in Iraq...[930]

Either Blackwater's top man in Iraq, Daniel Carroll,[cxxxv] was unbelievably reckless or he was fully assured of the ability to murder a United States government official and get away with it.

To their surprise, the Iraqi government backed Blackwater. Special Agent Richter and his small fact-finding delegation were immediately sent back to the United States.

Perhaps it wasn't all that surprising given bribes totaling $1 million dollars handed to key Iraqi officials by the Papal Knight mercenaries.[931]

The twist is that the bribes were sanctioned (sometimes recommended) by the same State Department that sent Richter and his team, showing that the "fact-finding mission" was never intended to find facts.[932]

Two months later an Iraqi mother lay burned to a crisp in their family car, clutching her infant to her — the heat from the explosions had melded their bodies together.[933]

Unfortunately for her relatives, monetary compensation for wrongdoing doesn’t quite flow from mercenaries as bribes do.[934]

War is business and business is good.

Is the characterization of Blackwater mercenaries as “kill-happy cowboys” unfair?

Outrage over the company’s actions both in America and Iraq was answered by yet another Congressional hearing: the House of Representatives Committee on Oversight and Government Reform, then chaired by California Democrat Henry Waxman. Waxman is Jewish and has been a politician since 1969.[cxxxvi]

Congressman Waxman disclosed that in the two years leading up to the Nisour Square massacre, from 2005 to 2007, Blackwater was involved in 195 shootings, 84% were initiated by the mercenaries.

What Waxman didn’t disclose was the number of innocent Iraqis who have been wounded or killed as a result. Such information is difficult if not impossible to find.

It’s not a long-shot to deduce that a shooting incident initiated by Blackwater was both unnecessary and unwarranted meaning that the resulting dead can be considered “murdered innocents”.

The “shoot first, ask questions later” methods of America’s “guns for hire” are in stark contrast to the stifling Rules of Engagement given to the United States military.

Some of the most notoriously restrictive “RoE” were set by Knight of Malta[935] “Green Beret” General Stanley McChrystal.[936]

In the best Hegelian Dialectic, while one group of Roman traitor agents in the military dictated restrictions that cost American lives, another group in the media frothed anger over it.[937],[cxxxvii]

In light of lawless corruption, the Bush / Rice State Department brought their overwhelming power to bear: they initiated a panel.

> On Oct. 5, 2007, just as the State Department and Blackwater were being rocked by scandal in the aftermath of Nisour Square, State Department officials finally responded to Mr. Richter's August warning about Blackwater. They took statements from Mr. Richter and Mr. Thomas about their accusations of a threat by Mr. Carroll, but took no further action.
>
> Condoleezza Rice, then the secretary of state, named a special panel to examine the Nisour Square episode and recommend reforms, but the panel never interviewed Mr. Richter or [State Department analyst] Mr. [Donald] Thomas [a member of Richter's team]. ~ NY Times[938]

The Nation's Jeremy Scahill (one of Blackwater's most passionate media detractors) has called Erik Prince "a reclusive right-wing evangelical Christian".[939]

Such a characterization is amazing given that even Newsweek reported on Prince leaving his Dutch Reform Calvinism behind for Roman Catholicism. In the piece, Newsweek's Evan Thomas disclosed a Prince statement that implies his involvement in Templar Freemasonry: In his occasional public utterances at security conferences, his vision emerges. He was once quoted by a defense-industry newsletter describing why his private contractors could provide better — more effective, more efficient — "relief with teeth" in a dangerous environment than international aid organizations or even the U.S. military: "Everybody carries guns, just like Jeremiah rebuilding the Temple in Israel, a sword in one hand, a trowel in the other." Prince, a weapons expert and adventure seeker since he outgrew playing with lead soldiers as a boy, has seen the promised land, and it is righteous and well-armed. [sic][940]

Interestingly, one of Protestantism's most renown opponents of the Catholic Church, Baptist firebrand Charles Haddon Spurgeon (1834 – 1892), named his magazine Sword & Trowel.[941]

Scahill is a close associate of legendary Jewish homosexual journalist and personal confidant of "whistleblower" Edward Snowden, Glenn Greenwald. It's difficult to imagine how he could make such a clumsy mistake as there is very little “Christian” about either Erik Prince or Blackwater. However, both are very much the flower of Papal Knighthood.

Perhaps it was the influence of Scahill’s “longtime friend” and mentor, Jesuit Father Daniel Berrigan[942] that helped him get things mixed up.

You do have to admire someone like Scahill, fearlessly going after a military/industrial kingpin with a net worth of $2.4 billion.[943]

Is it just coincidental that the Jesuit Oath includes the words — My son, heretofore you have been taught to act the dissembler: among Roman Catholics to be a Roman Catholic, and to be a spy even among your own brethren; to believe no man, to trust no man. Among the Reformers, to be a Reformer; among the Huguenots, to be a Huguenot; among the Calvinists, to be a Calvinist; among other Protestants, generally to be a Protestant; and obtaining their confidence, to seek even to preach from their pulpits, and to denounce with all the vehemence in your nature our Holy Religion and the Pope; and even to descend so low as to become a Jew among Jews, that you might be enabled to gather together all information for the benefit of your Order as a faithful soldier of the Pope. You have been taught to plant insidiously the seeds of jealousy and hatred between communities, provinces, states that were at peace, and to incite them to deeds of blood, involving them in war with each other, and to create revolutions and civil wars in countries that were independent and prosperous, cultivating the arts and the sciences and enjoying the blessings of peace; to take sides with the combatants and to act secretly with your brother Jesuit, who might be engaged on the other side, but openly opposed to that with which you might be connected, only that the Church might be the gainer in the end...[944]

Is Blackwater Catholic?

The fraudulent “Global War on Terror”[cxxxviii] seems to be the ultimate Hegelian corruption: fabricate a needless conflict then rob the citizenry of billions to pay for it.

At the heart of it all is Rome.

The founder and Chief Executive Officer for most of the organization’s existence is a converted Roman Catholic which means Erik Prince’s Catholicism is especially devoted.

Lewis Paul Bremer III was instrumental in making sure Blackwater got filthy rich on uncontested GWoT contracts. Bremer was a long-tenured State Department man from Henry Kissinger thru Alexander Haig to whom he was Executive Secretary and Special Assistant.

Haig, himself, was a Catholic-educated (Notre Dame) and Jesuit-trained (Saint Joseph's Prep and Georgetown) Roman Catholic. Haig's brother, Frank Rawle Haig, is a powerful Johns Hopkins-accredited Jesuit who would eventually become President of Wheeling University in West Virginia, a Jesuit institution.

During the heat of the second war in Iraq, L. Paul Bremer had the critical position of "Coalition Provisional Authority".

He, too, is a devout, converted Roman Catholic.

> Prince's connections seem to have paid off for Blackwater. Robert Young Pelton, author of "Licensed to Kill: Hired Guns in the War on Terror," has reported that one of Blackwater's earliest contracts in the national arena was a no-bid $5.4 million deal to provide security guards in Afghanistan, which came after Prince made a call to then CIA executive director Buzzy Krongard. What's more, Harper's Ken Silverstein has reported that Prince has a security pass for CIA headquarters and "meets with senior people" inside the CIA. But Prince's most important benefactor was fellow conservative Roman Catholic convert L. Paul Bremer, former head of the Coalition Provisional Authority, the American occupation government in Iraq. In August 2003, Blackwater won a $27.7 million contract to provide personal security for Bremer. In charge of the Blackwater team guarding Bremer was Frank Gallagher, who had provided personal security for former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger when Bremer was managing director of Kissinger's consulting firm, Kissinger and Associates, in the 1990s. ~ Salon[945]

Not only did L. Paul make sure his Roman Knight friend got lucrative no-bid contracts, he made sure his services were needed with policy decisions so bad they were nothing less than treason.

> The decision to dissolve the Iraqi army robbed Baghdad's post-invasion military of some of its best commanders and troops. Combined with sectarian strains that persist 12 years later, it also drove many of the suddenly out-of-work Sunni warriors into alliances with a Sunni insurgency that would eventually mutate into ISIS. Many former Iraqi military officers and troops, trained under Saddam, have spent the last 12 years in Anbar Province battling both U.S. troops and Baghdad's Shi'ite-dominated security forces, Pentagon officials say. ...
>
> So how did the Iraqi army come to dissolve? The Bush Administration tapped Paul Bremer to head the so-called Coalition Provisional Authority on May 11, 2003. Twelve days later, he issued an order wiping away the Iraqi military... The army's end quickly led to civil unrest, a growing insurgency and a U.S. occupation that would last eight years and cost the lives of 4,491 American troops. ...
>
> Bremer's decision to disband the Iraqi army has been shrouded in mystery. ~ Time[946]

It's not a mystery if one knows L. Paul was a traitor who worked for a malignant foreign entity that sought to exacerbate the chaos in Iraq caused by an entire cabal of traitors.

Joseph Schmitz

Then there's Prince's right-hand man; Joseph Edward Schmitz. He got a great start as the fox in the hen-house.

> In 2002, President Bush nominated Schmitz to oversee and police the Pentagon's military contracts as the Defense Department's inspector general. Schmitz presided over the largest increase of military-contracting spending in history: As of 2005, 77 companies were awarded 149 "prime contracts" worth $42.1 billion, with hundreds of millions going to Blackwater. Unlike previous I.G.s, Schmitz reported directly to the secretary of defense — a setup that both Democratic and Republican lawmakers objected to, given Schmitz's oversight responsibility. ...

> Schmitz has many ties to the Republican Party establishment. His father, John G. Schmitz, was a two-term Republican congressman, and his brother, Patrick Schmitz, served as George H.W. Bush's deputy counsel from 1985 to 1993. Joseph himself worked as a special assistant to Reagan-era Attorney General Edwin Meese.
>
> Schmitz resigned in 2005 under mounting pressure from both Democratic and Republican senators, who accused him of interfering with criminal investigations into inappropriately awarded contracts, turning a blind eye to conflicts of interest and other failures of oversight. According to an October 2005 article in Time magazine, Schmitz showed the White House the results of his staff's multiyear investigation into a contract in which the Air Force leased air-refueling tankers from Boeing for more than it would have cost to buy them, then agreed to redact the names of senior White House staffers involved in the decision before sending the final report to Congress. Schmitz informed his staff on Aug. 26, 2005, that he was leaving the Pentagon; in September of that year, he went to work for Blackwater. ~ Salon[947]

What Salon fails to tell you about Schmitz is that he's a devout Roman Catholic Crusader, all-in for the fraudulent "Global War on Terror", and even Wikipedia admits he's a Knight of Malta![948]

Perhaps Schmitz was selected for his key role in corruption and treason while he was under Jesuit care in prep school.

The Jesuits apparently liked what they saw enough to have him go from student at Georgetown Prep to Professor at Georgetown University (but only after a "secular" degree at Stanford).

He's also intimately involved with "Conservative" smoke and mirrors media in order to keep Right-minded Americans angry about the wrong things.

Perhaps most telling of all is Schmitz' Pentagon "investigation" into human trafficking, specifically focusing on the locations destroyed by war which were made fertile for such outrages.

It must be remembered that wars are started with this “benefit” in mind.

> Schmitz was born in Milwaukee, Wisconsin,[3] the son of John G. Schmitz, former California State Senator, member of the U.S. House of Representatives, and U.S. presidential candidate in 1972. Schmitz attended Catholic schools as a child and Georgetown Preparatory School for high school while his father served in Congress. He holds a Bachelor of Science (1978) from the United States Naval Academy in Annapolis, Maryland where he was on the wrestling team and a Juris Doctor (1986) from Stanford University. His three siblings include Mary Kay Letourneau, Jerome Schmitz and John Schmitz.[4]
>
> Upon graduation from the Naval Academy, Schmitz served in the U.S. Navy for approximately four years, including a stint as an exchange officer with the German Navy. After leaving active duty, Schmitz went to law school and was in the Naval Reserve until 2001. He clerked with James L. Buckley, Circuit Judge for the D.C. Circuit Court and was a special assistant to Attorney General Edwin Meese III during the Reagan Administration.[4] Schmitz entered the private sector in 1987, eventually joining the Patton Boggs law firm in Washington, D.C.[5] He was also an adjunct professor of law at Georgetown University in the 1990s and founded his own firm, Joseph E. Schmitz, PLLC, in 2008.[6]
>
> He is a member of the Sovereign Military Order of Malta[7] and a co-author of the book, Sharia: The Threat to America*.[8]*
>
> As Inspector General, Schmitz investigated involvement of the U.S. military in the sex trade in South Korea, Bosnia, and Kosovo.
>
> Schmitz writes a column titled “Support and Defend” for the media organization Newsmax.[9] He co-founded the law firm Schmitz & Socarras LLP[10] in 2014 and serves as Chairman of the Board of Directors for CharityEngine, a McLean, Virginia-based software company. ~ Wikipedia[949]

Several alternative media blogs[950],[951] and one well-researched alternative media news outlet[952] also label Joseph Edward Schmitz as a member of Opus Dei.

J. Cofer Black

Joseph Cofer Black was Erik Prince’s Heinrich Himmler.

They even look alike.

Joseph Cofer Black in 2002 Heinrich Luitpold Himmler in 1942

While either with the State Department or the Central Intelligence Agency, J. Cofer Black was the man who made black-bag “rendition” and torture operations possible against “Enemies of the State”.

> In 2004, Cofer Black passed from CIA to the State Department and thence became Blackwater’s vice-president. While still in the CIA, Black was in charge of the “special extraditions” organising the secret transfer of prisoners from Iraq or Afghanistan to countries less rigid against the practice of torture, such as Poland, Romania, Egypt, and so on.
>
> These planes, which travelled between Abu Ghraib, Guantanamo and Afghanistan often made stopovers in many European countries such as the UK, Italy, France, Germany and Malta many times without the countries themselves being informed what was going on.
>
> Now the Swiss procurator Dick Marty has sent documents regarding the “CIA’s flying prisons” to the European Parliament and names two Blackwater subsidiaries – Presidential Airways and Aviation Worldwide Services. ~ Independent[953]

From the CIA Director behind 9/11 (George Tenet) to the Mormon Presidential candidate (Mitt Romney), Cofer's connections run deep.

Unfortunately, when someone like him makes a comment about putting "flies" on the "eyeballs" of their victims, he's quite serious.[cxxxix]

> Black spent most of his 28-year CIA career running covert operations in the Directorate of Operations, where he worked with Rob Richer... At the time of the 9/11 attacks, he was director of the CIA's Counterterrorism Center. There he was former CIA Director George Tenet's ace in the hole when it came to convincing Bush that the CIA should lead initial U.S. combat operations in Afghanistan after 9/11. Black is, according to published accounts, a man with a flair for the dramatic, the kind of briefer President Bush likes. In one briefing, according to several reports, Black told the president, "When we're through with [terrorists in Afghanistan], they will have flies walking across their eyeballs." (Black also ordered CIA field officer Gary Schroen to bring back Osama bin Laden's head packed in dry ice so Black could show it to Bush.) Black's Afghanistan presentation earned him "special access" to the White House, the Washington Post's Dana Priest reported in December 2005.
>
> Black is also one of the more prominent faces associated with the Bush administration's interrogation and extraordinary rendition policies. In a famous moment, Black told Congress in 2002, "After 9/11, the gloves came off." And the group within the CIA responsible for extraordinary renditions — operations in which covert agents grab terror suspects and take them to secret prison facilities for interrogations that would normally be prohibited as torture — fell under Black at the CTC, Priest has reported.
>
> Black later went to the State Department, where one of his roles was to begin coordinating security for the 2004 Olympics in Greece. In 2003, the State Department gave Blackwater a contract to train the Olympic security teams.
>
> In 2004, Black left the State Department to join Blackwater, part of what Harper's Silverstein termed a "revolving door to Blackwater"

> from the CIA. In addition to his work with Blackwater and his own company, Total Intelligence Solutions, Black also recently joined the presidential campaign of former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney, where he serves the Republican hopeful as senior advisor for counterterrorism and national security. ~ Salon[954]

Like Himmler, Black's Catholic affiliation has been wiped from almost all sources save his attendance of the Canterbury School in Connecticut — a Roman Catholic all-boys college prep school.[955]

Himmler is just as nebulous a Catholic but his secret ties are much more powerful.

Mainstream sources grudgingly admit he was "raised" Catholic.

> ...the physical extermination of the Jews took place on the largely Catholic continent of Europe. We are faced with the plain, appalling fact that many of the world's greatest mass murderers were born and raised Catholic — Adolf Hitler, Heinrich Himmler, and Rudolf Höss, to mention only a few. The small number of Catholic rescuers are obscured by the mountain of evil cast over them by these perpetrators. ~ Phayer[956]

But at least one source makes the astounding claim that Himmler was an ordained Jesuit priest. [italics suspended except in original]

> After graduating as a full Jesuit Priest no later than 1925, there is no precise evidence as to exactly the activities of Himmler until his arrival on the scene in 1929 as deputy of Erhard Heiden.
>
> The Arrival of Fr. Himmler S.J. and the Nazis
>
> One of (several) absurd mythologies accepted by eminent historians and academics is the proposition that the Schutzstaffel (German for "Squadron" and the same concept as the Italian "Blackshirt Squadrons" of Catholic Mussolini) was formed in 1925 as the personal bodyguard of Hitler following his release from prison.
>
> Some audacious writers have even "revised history" to claim the Schutzstaffel (frequently cut in half to try and get two S's out of the single word for squadron) had already started to use the SS and skull and bones symbols, including calling their head the Reichführer-SS and the Roman Salute (straight arm) to their allegiance to the Vatican, Rome.

The ridiculous nature of these lies are easily exposed when the facts are considered that Hitler's main claim to fame in 1925 was as a book writer and budding political philosopher.

In fact, the first election of the reformed NDSAP [Nationalsozialistische Deutsche Arbeiterpartei, The National Socialist German Workers' Party] in May 1928 was a complete humiliation and disaster. It was during this period of recrimination and failure that Fr. Heinrich Himmler S.J. entered to be immediately appointed the deputy of Erhard Heiden, commanded of the Schutzstaffel (squadron). Within a matter of a few months, Erhard Heiden resigned and Fr. Himmler S.J. was appointed as commander of the Schutzstaffel.

It is a remarkable and rarely considered event occurred — in 1929, a 29 year old rank outsider with dubious military experience, but impeccable Catholic and Jesuit connections is suddenly appointed Reichführer-SS — the 280 most elite security personnel and bodyguards of Hitler himself.

There can be absolutely no question that Himmler was a direct Vatican appointment via the support of Jesuits as there is no way Hitler would have accepted such an appointment of such a person into a critical role unless it came from the very highest authority.

Again, it is important of emphasize that the Schutzstaffel (only one S) wore brown shirts until the Reich Concordat was signed between Cardinal Pacelli and Franz von Papen (for Germany) in 1933 bestowing exclusive spiritual powers on the Schutzstaffel of Fr. Himmler S.J. by the Vatican. The Jesuit Skull and Bones was incorporated by Fr. Himmler into the military insignia of the Schutzstaffel but not the infamous SS until after the 1933 Concordat.

The political fortunes of the NDSAP appeared to suddenly turn around thanks to the swelling ranks of disciplined recruits to the Schutzstaffel.

In September 1930, the NSDAP won 18.3% of the vote and 107 seats in the Reichstag (Parliament). By the July 1932 national elections, this vote had swelled to 37.8% and 230 of the 608 seats of Parliament. However, in the November 1932 elections, their lead had dropped to 33.1% and 196 seats in a 584 seat Parliament.

By 1933 National Elections, the Schutzstaffel under the control of Fr. Himmler S.J. numbered at least 52,000 highly trained and absolutely loyal members – a far cry from the early incompetence in Munich ten years earlier.

It was March 1933 that the world saw the word “Nazi” unleashed as a political religious force in the elections following the destruction of the Reichstag (Parliament) by Schutzstaffel agents and blamed on communists.

Red Herrings Abound

To distract as much as possible from the Jesuit connections, soft history was created in the form of allegations he married or was in a defacto relationship with an already pregnant Protestant woman seven years his senior called Margarete. A convenient window dressing rarely challenged in spite of the fact Himmler was famously known for being a devout Catholic from a devout and powerful Catholic family.

In another brilliant misdirection, some rare claims exist stating that Himmler had an “uncle” who was a Jesuit priest and that any reference to Fr. Himmler S.J. is the uncle, not Heinrich.

The Birth of the Nazi SS

There is a parallel and quite extraordinary change within the power structure of the NSDAP as the Nazis- the rise of Fr. Himmler to Reichführer (also Reichführer Nazi SS) – or Superior General of the Knights of the Holy See — SS standing for Sedes Sacrorum or “Holy See” in Latin.

Many historians deliberately mask the first beginnings of the use of the title Reichführer by dropping off the word “Nazi”, or removing “SS” to somehow claim this position was the official title of the commander of the Schutzstaffel as early as 1925. The reason for this forgery is twofold — one to mask the true date of 1933 as the historic shift in the introduction of the initials SS and secondly to mask the true arrival of Himmler in 1929 and the title Reichführer-Nazi SS in 1933.

> But what is more incredible is the fabricated history that continues to hid the absolute fact that in 1933 after the Reich Concordat was signed with the Vatican, Fr. Himmler was elevated in power, name and status above Hitler. Fr. Himmler S.J. as the Reichführer has superior title (as opposed to plain old führer for Hitler). Fr. Himmler had complete independent control over all police, paramilitary, intelligence, scientific research and weapons development and the dreaded elite units of over 50,000 just in 1933 — and Hitler had absolutely no authority over him. In fact the proof of the distaste each man had for one another is demonstrated in countless war archive movies showing in clear detail the body language of both men. ~ One-Evil[957]

Far-fetched?

Himmler hailed from Bavaria (now Munich), the same Jesuit stronghold that produced Adam Weishaupt. Weishaupt was a Jewish convert to Roman Catholicism who started his Jesuit education at 7 years of age and went on to teach Canon Law at Jesuit Ingolstadt University. He is credited with founding Jacobinism, modern statist Communism and “the Illuminati”.

In such a light, this quote makes eminent sense —

> [Quoting Adolf Hitler] Above all I have learned from the Jesuits. And so did Lenin too, as far as I recall. The world has never known anything quite so splendid as the hierarchical structure of the [Roman] Catholic Church. There were quite a few things I simply appropriated from the Jesuits for the use of the [Nazi] Party. I have learnt most of > all from the Jesuit Order... So far, there has been nothing more imposing on earth than the hierarchical organization of the [Roman] Catholic Church. A good part of that organization I have transported direct to my own [Nazi] party... The Catholic Church must be held up as an example... I will tell you a secret. I am founding an order... In Himmler I see our Ignatius de Loyola. ~ Zaid[958]

Is Erik Prince a Knight of Malta?

Given his ties to Rome it’s academic though we (so far) haven’t found anyone willing to admit Erik Prince has been knighted.

To be sure, a Knighthood is simply a mechanism of manipulation designed to appeal to the victim’s ego and give then a vested interest in compromising their morality to serve, ultimately, the devil (either through government indirectly or to Rome directly).

The evidence, however, is there to pin Prince as a KoM even without one of their own “mainstream” sources admitting it. For instance, media mogul Henry Luce — Time, Life, Fortune, Sports Illustrated, as well as newspapers, radio and television — was both a member of the secretly-Catholic secret society Skull & Bones[959] as well as a Knight of Malta along with his media mogul peer William Randolph Hearst.[960],[961]

As all-encompassing as this strangle-hold on media is, clues still slip out — sometimes from surprising sources.

For instance, on the heels of the Nouri Square massacre, the Malta Independent reported (in anger, it would seem) that Italian Minister of European Parliament Giovanni Claudio Fava presented a “working document” which disclosed that the tiny island was Blackwater’s “Operational Base”.[962]

That same article noted that Cofer Black’s torture victims were being ferried through Malta.

Prince’s Jesuit-trained Hegelian nemesis, Jeremy Scahill, let it slip out that when Blackwater was creating its own deadly little Air Force, Malta was a frequent stop-over.[963]

As was disclosed in the “Home Children” deportation scandal, Malta is also a main hub of human trafficking.

Two years after the Nouri Square massacre, the non-profit Human Rights Watch blew the whistle on a triad of corruption and crime that involved the governments of the United States, Italy and Libya. Refugees from war and unrest were kept from seeking asylum in safe havens. This insured they would remain easy prey for traffickers.

> The U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) expressed “deep concern” regarding the fate of the interdicted migrants on May 7, saying that they were returned to Libya “without proper assessment of their possible protection needs.”
>
> “Tomas,” a 24-year-old Eritrean man interviewed in Rome on May 20, gave Human Rights Watch an account of abuse, beatings, a long journey in a packed and airless truck, and ill-treatment in prison:
>
> > “The [Libyan] navy forces caught us and took us to ... a place called Jawazat. It was an immigration prison. ... We were in the same room with 160 others — all in one room. ... We were only allowed to use the toilet once a day. Many people had skin problems. There was no soap. They gave us water in a jar to drink. Many of us had stomach problems. We had to beg the guards to take sick people to the toilet. ...
> >
> > After two months, they put us with another group of Eritreans — 150 people in all. They put us in a big truck. It was packed with people. There wasn’t room for anyone to sit down. We all remained standing. ... We started at 6 a.m., and traveled all day and all the next night. ...
> >
> > When they let us out of the truck, we were in Kufra prison. We spent one week there. They fed us food only once a day. Only rice. Ramadan was over. I had already experienced two months of hunger in prison. We were now 800 prisoners crowded in different rooms. We slept on pieces of cardboard. ... It was dirty. ...”

> Tomas said Kufra is Libya's deportation site and that the guards have an agreement with smugglers, who press the migrants to pay hundreds of dollars to return them to Tripoli. He said he failed in two further attempts to flee Libya, and suffered lasting damage from beatings:
>
> > "I was beaten by wood and metal sticks by three guards. They beat me for more than 10 minutes. They called me 'nigger' as they beat me. When I fell to the ground, they kicked me. They beat me with a metal stick on my head. I have scars and pain inside my head. I still have pains in my shoulder. The metal sticks were thin, but they did not bend."[964]

Again, Malta and her Roman Knights were the focal point of these evil operations.

Those refugees who did escape were funneled into Europe to fuel anger against "immigrants". It is another page from the Luciferian playbook enabled by traitors in government to create a "clash of civilizations": immigration forced en masse by needless war.

Rather than slow, well-regulated immigration where approved migrants have time to assimilate, rapid flooding of refugees causes ghettos and clashes which are then manipulated by agents at all levels to direct hatred at the migrants rather than the manipulators in government and higher.

The U.S./Italy/Libya/Malta trafficking arrangement took a deadly turn into over-drive with the commencement of Barack Obama's illegal and unconstitutional war on the African nation in 2011.

On March 19th, 2011, a "coalition" lead by the United States containing token representatives of NATO members like France and Britain (with Italy as an un-publicized partner) invaded Libya for reasons that remained a mystery to the uninitiated.

After months of his country being devastated by the might of the West, Muammar Gaddafi (spelled a variety of ways in English including "Qadhafi") had retreated to the town of Sirte. On October 20th he was captured by Misratan militia. Gaddafi (or, more likely, an unfortunate body double[cxl]) was brutally tortured, sodomized and eventually bludgeoned to death.

The quiet, stable former Italian colony was plunged into chaos where the three staples of Luciferian prosperity were heavily moved about; arms, narcotics and enslaved human beings.

Libya's powerful Soviet-bloc weapons were taken from her safely-enclosed armories and dispersed amongst "jihadis" trained by the CIA, MI6 and the Mossad. This is a useful practice in the treason of threat-empowering. When the Western-enabled "terrorists" strike, they do so without leaving a NATO signature.

As Henry Luce's Time admitted in 2015 —

> After Gaddafi was deposed in 2011, the region [Libya's southwestern border] descended ... into lawlessness. The regime's few border guards went north to fight, allowing smuggling to boom into a $3.8 billion economy. The rival tribes began an increasingly violent struggle that in September 2014 blossomed into armed conflict on the streets of Ubari. The Tubu say they are helping fight Islamic extremism; the Touareg claim they are simply trying to protect their homes and communities.[965]

Mercilessly displaced Libyans were sent north to cause "clash of civilization" unrest in Europe.

> The situation in Ubari has drawn fighters from across the region to the city, giving smugglers greater access to the ungoverned border between Niger and Libya. This has helped fuel the unprecedented flow of migrants to Europe in 2015; this year, the International Organisation of Migration (IOM) predicts some 120,000 migrants will cross the Nigerien border seeking access to northern Africa and the Mediterranean.[966]

And like some satanic virus, the chaos is a breeding ground to fuel more devastation and empower more brutal jihadist patsies.

> The chaos in southwestern Libya hasn’t just allowed human trafficking to thrive; Western officials see a buildup in Islamist extremism in the region — mainly Jihadist groups allied to Al Qaeda driven out of Mali and Chad by French counterterror operations.[967]

Mainstream media gives government traitors cover as being “inept” — despite decades of experience,[cxli] they just had no idea the effects of their lawless decisions would have!

It allows sources like the International Business Times to then give headlines like —

Drug and Human Trafficking in “Lawless” Libya is Funding ISIS[968]

— yet the Luciferian government insurgents responsible are never held to account.

Special

Although they aren’t paid as well, many of these insurgent Knights remain in their host nation’s military.

In time, they are picked to advance and are made comfortable; rewarded for their willingness to commit treason and betray the trust of their subordinates and the citizenry.

As warfare has advanced, the agents within “Special Operations” have been found to be particularly useful. There the rigorous selection process masks their presence. While candidates are tested for physical and mental endurance, they are also being tested for use by Luciferians. Often this includes some quirk or flaw that may be exploited at a later time like homosexuality or sexual perversion. Other times good men are later compromised by mistakes or traps that are carefully laid for them.

In the end, they are made to break their oath to country and Constitution in order to serve Rome and Satan.

Those who refuse are humiliated and drummed out.

The very-controlled New York Times[cxlii] may have reported on just such a man or perhaps used his story for credibility on disclosing the Pedocracy.

Sometimes, in their over-eagerness to support one divisive agenda like the clash of civilizations, they give up too much information on another.

In Afghanistan, pederasts call their young boy sex slaves and their abuse “bacha bazi”.

In 2015 Joseph Goldstein wrote this disturbing report —

> In his last phone call home, Lance Cpl. Gregory Buckley Jr. told his father what was troubling him: From his bunk in southern Afghanistan, he could hear Afghan police officers sexually abusing boys they had brought to the base.
>
> “At night we can hear them screaming, but we’re not allowed to do anything about it,” the Marine’s father, Gregory Buckley Sr., recalled his son telling him before he was shot to death at the base in 2012. He urged his son to tell his superiors. “My son said that his officers told him to look the other way because it’s their culture.”

Rampant sexual abuse of children has long been a problem in Afghanistan, particularly among armed commanders who dominate much of the rural landscape and can bully the population. The practice is called bacha bazi*, literally “boy play,” and American soldiers and Marines have been instructed not to intervene — in some cases, not even when their Afghan allies have abused boys on military bases, according to interviews and court records.*

The policy has endured as American forces have recruited and organized Afghan militias to help hold territory against the Taliban. But soldiers and Marines have been increasingly troubled that instead of weeding out pedophiles, the American military was arming them in some cases and placing them as the commanders of villages — and doing little when they began abusing children.

“The reason we were here is because we heard the terrible things the Taliban were doing to people, how they were taking away human rights,” said Dan Quinn, a former Special Forces captain who beat up an American-backed militia commander for keeping a boy chained to his bed as a sex slave. “But we were putting people into power who would do things that were worse than the Taliban did — that was something village elders voiced to me.” ...

After the beating, the Army relieved Captain Quinn of his command and pulled him from Afghanistan. He has since left the military.

Four years later, the Army is also trying to forcibly retire Sgt. First Class Charles Martland, a Special Forces member who joined Captain Quinn in beating up the commander.

When asked about American military policy, the spokesman for the American command in Afghanistan, Col. Brian Tribus, wrote in an email: “Generally, allegations of child sexual abuse by Afghan military or police personnel would be a matter of domestic Afghan criminal law.” He added that “there would be no express requirement that U.S. military personnel in Afghanistan report it.”[969], [cxliii] This is how good men get compromised, corrupted, or beat down and thrown out: by being forced to work for Luciferian insurgents who give immoral or treasonous orders.

Predictably, Goldstein went on to explain the abuse of children in Afghanistan as “cultural” — but the information in these pages proves otherwise.

His false spin is bolstered by the only explanation possible, though still clearly irrational: that to stop the rape of children is “offensive” to the indigenous peoples and therefore, against Pentagon policy.

> But the American policy of treating child sexual abuse as a cultural issue has often alienated the villages whose children are being preyed upon. The pitfalls of the policy emerged clearly as American Special Forces soldiers began to form Afghan Local Police militias to hold villages that American forces had retaken from the Taliban in 2010 and 2011.
>
> By the summer of 2011, Captain Quinn and Sergeant Martland, both Green Berets on their second tour in northern Kunduz Province, began to receive dire complaints about the Afghan Local Police units they were training and supporting.
>
> First, they were told, one of the militia commanders raped a 14- or 15-year-old girl whom he had spotted working in the fields. Captain Quinn informed the provincial police chief, who soon levied punishment. “He got one day in jail, and then she was forced to marry him,” Mr. Quinn said.
>
> When he asked a superior officer what more he could do, he was told that he had done well to bring it up with local officials but that there was nothing else to be done. “We’re being praised for doing the right thing, and a guy just got away with raping a 14-year-old girl,” Mr. Quinn said.
>
> Village elders grew more upset at the predatory behavior of American-backed commanders. ...

> Soon another commander absconded with his men’s wages. Mr. Quinn said he later heard that the commander had spent the money on dancing boys. Another commander murdered his 12-year-old daughter in a so-called honor killing for having kissed a boy. “There were no repercussions,” Mr. Quinn recalled.
>
> In September 2011, an Afghan woman, visibly bruised, showed up at an American base with her son, who was limping. One of the Afghan police commanders in the area, Abdul Rahman, had abducted the boy and forced him to become a sex slave, chained to his bed, the woman explained. When she sought her son’s return, she herself was beaten. Her son had eventually been released, but she was afraid it would happen again, she told the Americans on the base.
>
> She explained that because “her son was such a good-looking kid, he was a status symbol” coveted by local commanders, recalled Mr. Quinn...
>
> So Captain Quinn summoned Abdul Rahman and confronted him about what he had done. The police commander acknowledged that it was true, but brushed it off. When the American officer began to lecture about “how you are held to a higher standard if you are working with U.S. forces, and people expect more of you,” the commander began to laugh.
>
> “I picked him up and threw him onto the ground,” Mr. Quinn said. Sergeant Martland joined in, he said. “I did this to make sure the message was understood that if he went back to the boy, that it was not going to be tolerated,” Mr. Quinn recalled. ...
>
> Sergeant Martland, who received a Bronze Star for valor for his actions during a Taliban ambush, wrote in a letter to the Army this year that he and Mr. Quinn “felt that morally we could no longer stand by and allow our A.L.P. to commit atrocities,” referring to the Afghan Local Police.[970]

A much more logical explanation (though far more shocking) is that top brass at the Pentagon and policy-makers in Washington, District of Columbia, are members of the Devil’s Simulation in good standing. They are all sexual deviants who give cover for each other in the rape, torture and murder of the innocent.

The story of Lance Cpl. Gregory Buckley Jr. was told by his father for a very sad reason:

> The father of Lance Corporal Buckley believes the policy of looking away from sexual abuse was a factor in his son's death, and he has filed a lawsuit to press the Marine Corps for more information about it.
>
> Lance Corporal Buckley and two other Marines were killed in 2012 by one of a large entourage of boys living at their base with an Afghan police commander named Sarwar Jan.
>
> Mr. Jan had long had a bad reputation; in 2010, two Marine officers managed to persuade the Afghan authorities to arrest him following a litany of abuses, including corruption, support for the Taliban and child abduction. But just two years later, the police commander was back with a different unit, working at Lance Corporal Buckley's post, Forward Operating Base Delhi, in Helmand Province.
>
> Lance Corporal Buckley had noticed that a large entourage of "tea boys" — domestic servants who are sometimes pressed into sexual slavery — had arrived with Mr. Jan and moved into the same barracks, one floor below the Marines. He told his father about it during his final call home.
>
> Word of Mr. Jan's new position also reached the Marine officers who had gotten him arrested in 2010. One of them, Maj. Jason Brezler, dashed out an email to Marine officers at F.O.B. Delhi, warning them about Mr. Jan and attaching a dossier about him.
>
> The warning was never heeded. About two weeks later, one of the older boys with Mr. Jan — around 17 years old — grabbed a rifle and killed Lance Corporal Buckley and the other Marines.
>
> Lance Corporal Buckley's father still agonizes about whether the killing occurred because of the sexual abuse by an American ally. "As far as the young boys are concerned, the Marines are allowing it to > happen and so they’re guilty by association,” Mr. Buckley said. “They don’t know our Marines are sick to their stomachs.”

>
> The one American service member who was punished in the investigation that followed was Major Brezler, who had sent the email warning about Mr. Jan, his lawyers said. In one of Major Brezler’s hearings, Marine Corps lawyers warned that information about the police commander’s penchant for abusing boys might be classified. The Marine Corps has initiated proceedings to discharge Major Brezler.
>
> Mr. Jan appears to have moved on, to a higher-ranking police command in the same province.[971]

Unfortunately, Mr. Buckley’s assessment seems devastatingly accurate: abuse victims see NATO and American muscle as pedophile enforcement.

They’re absolutely right.

*****

War and its devastation are powerful tools that both enable and give cover for these unspeakable crimes of graft, profiteering, arms trade, narcotics and human sex slavery.

In eras past, “Knights” carried their plunder from the battlefield.

Today, they have them flown out on C130s.

Chapter 28

Vampire of the Caribbean[cxliv]

4 February 2010: Haitian police arrest "Baptist missionary" Laura Silsby for child kidnapping with intent to traffic.

On January 12th in 2010, a devastating magnitude 7 earthquake struck Léogâne in Haiti, approximately 16 miles west of the capital, Port-au-Prince.

Over 300,000 Haitians were killed and some 3 million were effected with injuries or loss.

Amongst the dead was the most powerful Catholic cleric in Haiti, the Archbishop of Port-au-Prince, Monsignor Joseph Serge Miot.

Undeterred by the Wrath of God, Roman agents in the United States exploited the tragedy to wreak further havoc in the tiny half-island nation.

Hiding in the international relief effort was a band of 8 "Baptist missionaries" lead by "Idaho businesswoman" Laura Silsby and her "nanny", Charisa Coulter.

Silsby was billed by the media as a “humble mom from Idaho with a heart for children”, yet she had a checkered past filled with money and corruption.

It also appears that the Baptist missionaries were duped into joining the “businesswoman” as Protestant cover.

> Silsby had a history of failing to pay debts, failing to pay her employees and failing even to follow Idaho laws.
>
> Silsby has been the subject of eight civil lawsuits and 14 unpaid wage claims. The $358,000 Meridian, Idaho, house at which she founded her nonprofit New Life Children’s Refuge in November was foreclosed upon in December. A check of Silsby’s driving record revealed at least nine traffic citations since 1997, including four for failing to provide insurance or register annually.
>
> Silsby is a longtime Idaho businesswoman. In 1999, she founded an Internet business. As CEO of PersonalShopper.com, the mother of three was named eWomenNetwork’s international businesswoman of the year in 2006.
>
> Three years later, building an orphanage for Haitian and Dominican children became Silsby’s vision, and the 40-year-old brought others on board, including her 24-year-old nanny, Charisa Coulter.
>
> “The folks in the church embraced their vision, and it became a shared vision,” said Coulter’s father, Mel. “The church made it part of their missions program.” But Silsby’s failure to work with Haitian authorities before trying to take children from the country last week has many questioning the woman and the cause.
>
> Members of her church, Central Valley Baptist in Meridian, did not return calls Wednesday.
>
> An e-mail circulated Wednesday at PersonalShopper.com urged employees not to speak to the press or post any information on Web sites. “Given the aggressive nature of the press and the fabrications already being invented, we need to make sure nothing in writing is published that can be misconstrued in any way,” the e-mail says.

> Employees also were given the option to work from home to avoid reporters.
>
> Fourteen claims, including two by the same employee, were filed against Personal Shopper Inc. for nonpayment of wages between March 14, 2008, and July 21, 2009, according to the Idaho Department of Labor. ~ McClatchy[972]

Once in Haiti, Silsby collected up 33 children (a number significant to gnostics, Luciferians and Freemasons), all under 12 years old including toddlers and infants. Many of the children weren't orphans, Silsby "liberated" them from their poor Haitian families with promises of care and education.

It must again be remarked that the children would've remained safe if their parents had not been willing to abrogate their responsibilities.

Given Silsby's past, the situation in Haiti and her intent to traffic the children, financial payments to the families were also likely involved.

Silsby didn't attempt to travel by air or sea with her catch, as a legitimate philanthropist would have. She took them to the Dominican border where, failing to provide proper documentation for the children, she was arrested along with her shocked Baptist missionaries.

However, in less than a week (February 12th), charges of child trafficking were dropped.

Direct intervention by the Hillary Clinton State Department was suspected but vociferously denied by the Obama Administration.[973] Yet the supposed underground hacking effort known as "Wikileaks" released a State Department memo promoting the tiny 10-missionary effort, complete with where to send "prayer requests".[974]

Shortly after, Judge Bernard Saint-Vil released the 8 missionaries, stating that they had been "duped". Judge Saint-Vil held Silsby and her "nanny" Charisa Coulter (responsible for recruiting the other Baptists) for conspiracy and child abduction. On March 8th, 2010, Coulter was released.

The charges against Silsby were reduced to “arranging illegal travel”.[975] She was found guilty but her sentence was reconciled as “time served”.[976]

Hillary Clinton maintained “plausible deniability” by sending her “retired” ex-President husband, Bill, to broker the deal.[977]

Later it was revealed that the Clinton State Department, along with “Secretary of Homeland Security” Janet Napolitano, paved the way for the tiny “Baptist” effort before they even got there by forcing Haiti to loosen restrictions on “adoptions”.[978]

Napolitano was the Attorney General of the State of Arizona from 1999 to 2003 and then became Governor from 2003 to 2009. She was trained by the Jesuits of Santa Clara University as was former Obama Secretary of Defense and Director of the CIA, Leon Panetta. As alumni, they stand alongside former Bill Clinton Press Secretary Margaret Jane “Dee Dee” Myers, Governor of San Francisco and Lieutenant Governor of California, Gavin Newsom, Professional Basketball player Steve Nash (also an outspoken Leftist), Mayor of Los Angeles Richard Riordan, 9th Circuit Court Judge Richard Tallman, and many others.

— And that’s just one institution where the Jesuits train openly.

Each graduate is known for radical Leftist politics. The Ninth Circuit Court is so infamous for outrageous decisions destroying popularly-supported legislation it has been nick-named “the 9th Circus”.

As law enforcement officials in El Salvador watched the proceedings in Haiti, they thought they recognized Silsby’s lawyer. They made some calls and had him arrested.

They were right.

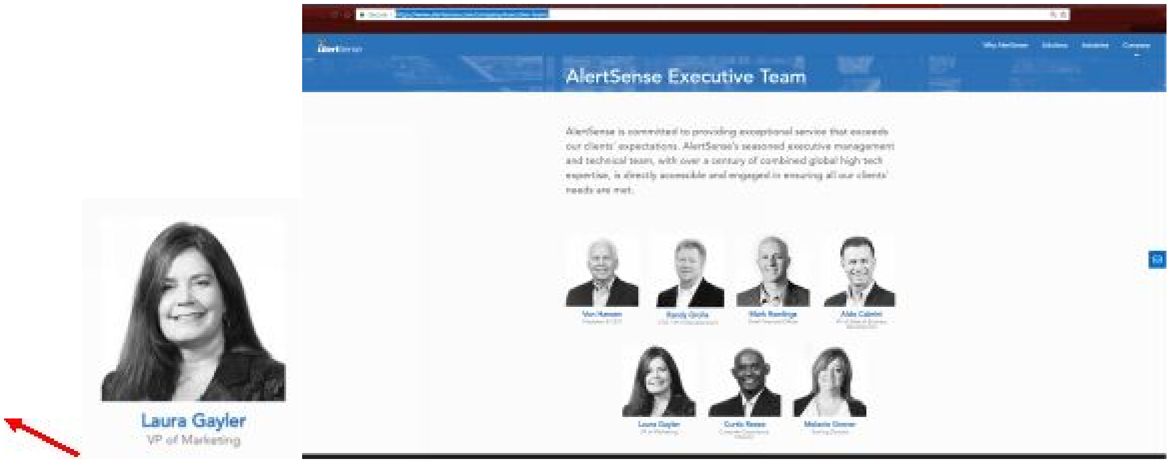
Jorge Torres-Puello was a notorious human trafficker whose wife, Ana Josefa Ramirez Orellana, was already in a Salvadoran prison for the “sexual exploitation of minors and women”.[979] When it was learned that Torres-Puello wasn’t licensed to practice law, his title was down-graded to “legal advisor”.

Jorge Torres was, himself, a Dominican “anchor baby”: his illegal alien mother had made it to the State of New York and birthed him into citizenship.

The ludicrous, treasonous process is actually much more tenuous than Americans realize. It is based upon nothing more than an insidious footnote placed in the 1982 Supreme Court case Plyler v. Doe by Roman Catholic agent of subversion, Justice William J. Brennan: “no plausible distinction with respect to Fourteenth Amendment ‘jurisdiction’ can be drawn between resident aliens whose entry into the United States was lawful, and resident aliens whose entry was unlawful.”

Brennan was another graduate of the incognito Jesuits at the “public” University of Pennsylvania.

After her freedom was granted, Laura Silsby dropped into obscurity until the “PizzaGate” child trafficking scandal erupted across “alternative media” during the 2016 Presidential campaign. It was leaked that Laura Silsby had become “Laura Silsby-Gayler” or simply “Laura Gayler”. She was sitting comfortably as the Vice President of Marketing for “Alert Sense”; a government contractor that publicizes missing children “Amber alerts”.



AlertSense Executive Team

AlertSense is committed to providing exceptional service that exceeds our clients' expectations. AlertSense's seasoned executive management and technical team, with over a century of combined global high-tech expertise, is directly accessible and engaged in ensuring all our clients' needs are met.

FAIR USE: screen shot of public corporate information (since taken down)

“Silsby-Gayler” was taken off the site shortly thereafter.

It is a cozy if outrageous arrangement: “rescue” children by kidnapping them then receive taxpayer money to tell parents their children are gone.

The Patron Saint of NAMBLA

Recall the request by well-wishers seeking to commemorate the memory of NAMBLA co-founder Thomas Reeves recommending a donation to St. Joseph’s Home for Boys in Port-au-Prince?

The orphanage was founded by “former Catholic brother” Michael Geilenfeld in 1985.

Haitians should’ve been alarmed that an open homosexual like Geilenfeld had taken such a close “interest” in orphaned little boys.

In 2015, Haitian police arrived at the orphanage to close it down in response to complaints that Geilenfeld was sexually abusing the boys in his care.

Workers at the orphanage resisted and a government agent was forced to fire a weapon into the air to accomplish their mission.[980]

What ensued has been nothing less than a battle for the soul of Haiti with Geilenfeld alternatively winning and losing civil and criminal cases along with their appeals.[981],[982]

Chapter 29

Child Predator Services

26 March 2010: Former Georgia State Senator and child advocate Nancy Schaefer is found dead in her home along with her husband, Bruce. Both were shot. Police would later tell media it was a "murder / suicide".

Because of the control the Pedocracy has, government agencies sworn to protect children are actually the very places they are trafficked through for horrible abuse.

It is an unbelievable betrayal of the public trust.

The names of the organizations vary from municipality to municipality, country to country. Most often they are called "Child Protective Services" or "CPS".

In Australia, a child advocacy group named Bravehearts conducted a forum in 2017 to force the Australian government to deal with these issues.

> ... allegations include:

>  A grandfather who alleges his grandson was ordered by the court to live with a sexually abusive mother;*
>  A mother who alleges her children were left in the custody of a father who performed sex acts in front of the children;*
>  Critical parts of Family Court transcripts were removed.*
>
> Bravehearts founder Hetty Johnston said the Family Court was a secretive and powerful institution that did not always act in the best interests of vulnerable children.
>
> "The family law system is simply the most dangerous institute in Australia for children," she said.
>
> A lawyer, who asked not to be named and is providing evidence to Bravehearts, said the court had a mindset where allegations of sexual abuse were almost automatically treated with scepticism, leaving many children at grave risk.
>
> "It is not a conspiracy – it is a culture," the lawyer said.
>
> Ms. Johnston said that the Royal Commission already had much of the bureaucracy to incorporate an examination of the Family Court. ~ The Courier-Mail[983]

As we've seen, the explanations provided to spin the facts are far off.

The fact is that allegations of abuse were given to the Court which were ignored. Stating that the Court treated the allegations with "skepticism" is spin.

The fact is that the Australian "Family Law System" is a source of heinous crimes against children in government care. The assertion that it is a "culture" of "negligence" is spin.

Some of the specific examples of abuse will leave readers deeply shaken and in sickened disbelief.

This one is from Arizona in the United States:

> After Arizona's Department of Child Safety placed a toddler with a man who ran a "pornographic pedophile ring" out of his home, it moved her to a home where the foster mother burned her with scalding water over 80 percent of her body...

The Department of Child Safety, formerly Child Protective Services, removed Jane Doe from her biological mother's home in 2013, when she was 2, and placed her with David and Barbara Frodsham, a state-licensed foster home...

The state allowed Jane to stay with the Frodshams for 18 months, despite her biological mother's complaints of "Jane Doe's repeated documented urinary tract infections," the complaint states.

"Instead of investigating Jane Doe's biological mother's concerns of abuse, [DCS] and the defendant caseworkers accused her of making false and exaggerated reports to DCS," according to the complaint.

The state did not act until David Frodsham, driving drunk, left 3-year-old Jane and another child in his parked car while he was collecting his foster parent check in a state office, while "visibly drunk and acting belligerent." Police were called and found Frodsham had a .28 blood alcohol concentration. They removed Jane from his care but did not investigate his home, the complaint states.

It continues: "Later, David Frodsham was arrested and accused of sexual misconduct with a minor, procuring minors for sex, and possessing and/or manufacturing child pornography. Law enforcement's investigation revealed a video made by David Frodsham of a 3- or 4-year-old girl being penetrated by an adult male and screaming for her mommy. David Frodsham pled guilty rather than face a trial and has been sentenced to 17 years in the Arizona Department of Corrections. David Frodsham was part of a pornography ring involving numerous children in his pornography and the procurement of sex for the ring." ...

Unfortunately, things did not improve much when the state moved Jane into the care of Justin and Samantha Osteraas, her guardian says. According to the complaint, "Defendant Samantha Osteraas submerged and held down Jane Doe, a 5-year-old, in a bath of scalding hot water. Jane Doe suffered severe burns over 80 percent of > her body. When police arrived, there was blood on the floor and piece of Jane Doe's skin were falling off her body. There were bruises to her neck and arms along with other signs of trauma."

>
> Jane had to be placed in a medically induced coma, suffering from organ failure. She lost her toes to amputation "and will undergo lifelong operations to replace 80 percent of the skin on her body and will need incredible amounts of care for the duration of her life as a result of the abuse she suffered in the Osteraases' home."
>
> Samantha Osteraas, 28, was arrested in January this year and charged with child abuse. The state then removed her three biological children from her home, according to the Arizona Daily Star*. She is awaiting trial. ... ~ Courthouse News*[984]

In Israel, Jericho and Yamit Dudovich were taken this year (2017) from their American father, David, by police and social workers under the pretense that they were malnourished. They were separated even from each other and kept in prison conditions, though Jericho suffers from grand mal epileptic seizures.[985]

In the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, a teenage girl placed in foster care was raped, murdered and dismembered:

> Before her torturous death, Grace Packer grew up in a hell of emotional, physical and sexual abuse, according to three children fostered by the adoptive mother who now stands charged, along with her boyfriend, of killing and dismembering the 14-year-old girl as part of a barbaric rape-murder fantasy.
>
> Police say Sara Packer, a former county adoptions supervisor, watched as her boyfriend, Jacob Sullivan, beat and raped Grace, who was then bound, gagged and left to die in a sweltering attic. Returning the next day and finding Grace still alive, Sullivan strangled her, court documents say. They stored her body in cat litter for months, then hacked it up and dumped it in a remote area where hunters found it in October, police said.

> In separate interviews with The Associated Press*, the now-grown former foster daughters, all of whom lived with Sara Packer several years before Grace's rape and murder, said Sara abused her adopted daughter and clearly favored Grace's biological brother, who was also adopted. ...*
>
> Sara and her husband at the time, David Packer, fostered dozens of children before David was arrested in 2010 and sent to prison for sexually assaulting Grace and a 15-year-old foster daughter at their home in Allentown, about an hour north of Philadelphia.
>
> Sara Packer lost her job as an adoptions supervisor for nearby Northampton County in April 2010, and she was barred from taking in any more foster children. But she wasn't charged with a crime related to her husband's abuse, and Grace and her brother continued to live in the home. ~ CBS Philadelphia[986],[cxlv]

As a Georgia State Senator, Nancy Schaefer attempted to be someone who didn't corrupt her public trust.

— An extreme rarity.

In 2007, she published the following release to her constituents:

> The Corrupt Business of Child Protective Services[987]
>
> My introduction into child protective service cases was due to a grandmother in an adjoining state who called me with her tragic story. Her two granddaughters had been taken from her daughter who lived in my district. Her daughter was told wrongly that if she wanted to see her children again she should sign a paper and give up her children. Frightened and young, the daughter did. I have since discovered that parents are often threatened into cooperation of permanent separation of their children.
>
> The children were taken to another county and placed in foster care. The foster parents were told wrongly that they could adopt the children. The grandmother then jumped through every hoop known to man in order to get her granddaughters. When the case finally came to court it was made evident by one of the foster parent's children that the foster parents had, at any given time, 18 foster children and that the foster mother had an inappropriate relationship with the caseworker.

In the courtroom, the juvenile judge, acted as though she was shocked and said the two girls would be removed quickly. They were not removed. Finally, after much pressure being applied to the Department of Family and Children Services of Georgia (DFCS), the children were driven to South Georgia to meet their grandmother who gladly drove to meet them.

After being with their grandmother two or three days, the judge, quite out of the blue, wrote up a new order to send the girls to their father, who previously had no interest in the case and who lived on the West Coast. The father was in "adult entertainment". His girlfriend worked as an "escort" and his brother, who also worked in the business, had a sexual charge brought against him.

Within a couple of days the father was knocking on the grandmother's door and took the girls kicking and screaming to California.

The father developed an unusual relationship with the former foster parents and soon moved back to the southeast, and the foster parents began driving to the father's residence and picking up the little girls for visits. The oldest child had told her mother and grandmother on two different occasions that the foster father molested her.

To this day after five years, this loving, caring blood relative grandmother does not even have visitation privileges with the children. The little girls are in my opinion permanently traumatized and the young mother of the girls was so traumatized with shock when the girls were first removed from her that she has not recovered. ...

Having worked with probably 300 cases statewide, I am convinced there is no responsibility and no accountability in the system.

I have come to the conclusion:

>  that poor parents often times are targeted to lose their children because they do not have the where-with-all to hire lawyers and fight the system. ...*

>  that caseworkers and social workers are oftentimes guilty of fraud. ...* >  that the separation of families is growing as a business...* >  that The Adoption and the Safe Families Act, set in motion by President Bill Clinton, offered cash "bonuses" to the states for every child they adopted out of foster care. ...* >  that some parents are even told if they want to see their children or grandchildren, they must divorce their spouse...* >  that tax dollars are being used to keep this gigantic system afloat, yet the victims, parents, grandparents, guardians and especially the children, are charged for the system's services. ...* >  that The National Center on Child Abuse and Neglect in 1998 reported that six times as many children died in foster care than in the general public and that once removed to official "safety", these children are far more likely to suffer abuse, including sexual molestation than in the general population.*
>  That according to the California Little Hoover Commission Report in 2003, 30% to 70% of the children in California group homes do not belong there and should not have been removed from their homes.*

The next year she was forced out of office.

She continued to speak publicly about government responsibility in child abuse.

Two years later, she and her husband were dead.

> It is a mystery that may never get a satisfactory answer. ...
>
> What happened? Why did he kill his wife of 52 years? What did the notes say?
>
> Here's what police say:
>
> On March 26, Bruce Schaefer, 74, a longtime Atlanta stockbroker who'd retired to his boyhood mountain haunts, shot his sleeping wife, Nancy Schaefer, 73, a former state senator and a conservative political activist. Then he turned the .38-caliber handgun on himself.

> The Schaefers were dead when their daughter found them in the bedroom of their Habersham County home. Investigators discovered a suicide note, as well as notes to each of the couple's five children.
>
> The Georgia Bureau of Investigation, which is investigating the case, is emphatic.
>
> "This is as clear-cut a case of murder-suicide as you'll see," said spokesman John Bankhead. The state agency will close out its investigation after doing a few more interviews and running some toxicology tests — standard procedure in death cases, said Bankhead.
>
> So case closed — or nearly.
>
> And yet, people talk. They talk about a twosome that was rarely apart, about a woman who achieved renown for her unapologetic stands against abortion and overzealous child protective services. They talk about her husband, who tried, but never managed, to ignore his wife's critics as effectively as she.
>
> People talk, and they wonder. ~ Atlanta Journal-Constitution[988]

Actually, there's no "wonder" in it.

Chapter 30

Pedd State

5 November 2011: Penn State Football Assistant Coach Gerald Arthur "Jerry" Sandusky is arrested and charged with seven counts of involuntary deviate sexual intercourse, eight counts of corruption of minors, eight counts of endangering the welfare of a child, seven counts of indecent assault, and other offenses.

Sandusky was born into a Polish / Irish, Catholic family. The work his father did with the charity sports "Brownson House" in Washington, Pennsylvania inclined him toward a similar future. It is not known if Arthur Sandusky was also a pedophile. Given the commonality of generational abuse amongst predators, it is a prudent question to ask.

Sandusky, along with his wife Dorothy (who claims she was never aware of any abuse) were cleared to adopt 6 children and were also foster parents, keeping a regular flow of new victims coming through their home.

It is entirely possible if not probable that they were knowingly given victims to abuse. To date, son Matthew has stepped forward to testify that he was violated by his adoptive father[989] and son Jeffrey has been arrested for child sex abuse offenses.[990]

Like other predators, Sandusky enjoyed many decades of raping children while friends, family, co-workers and even sworn officials looked the other way.

Penn State Head Coach Joe Paterno (1926 – 2012) was a devout Roman Catholic and a member of the pious, secretive Opus Dei. His franchise gave him the most wins in NCAA Division I Football and he was lovingly referred to by media and fans as "JoePa".

Paterno knew what Sandusky was from the beginning, and chose to screen for him.

> Penn State football coach Joe Paterno, told by a teenage boy in 1976 that assistant coach Jerry Sandusky molested him in a shower, responded that he didn’t want to hear about it and had “a football season to worry about,” according to court documents unsealed Tuesday.
>
> The boy, now a man identified as John Doe 150, said in 2014 that other boys in a shower heard him yell that Sandusky had just touched him sexually. He said he told several adults about it before seeking out Paterno.
>
> “Is it accurate that Coach Paterno quickly said to you, ‘I don’t want to hear about any of that kind of stuff, I have a football season to worry about’?” a lawyer for Penn State’s insurance carrier asked the man.
>
> “Specifically, yes,” the man replied.
>
> “I was shocked, disappointed, offended. I was insulted,” John Doe 150 testified. “I said, ‘Is that all you’re going to do?’”
>
> He said Paterno “just walked away.” ~ Associated Press[991]

That same year (1976), the FBI was called in — not to investigate allegations of child sex abuse and trafficking, but to protect Paterno from a “bitter father” who had written him an anonymous letter with a “veiled threat”.

The FBI maintained their job of carefully watching out for and protecting Joe Paterno for two decades. In that time, child sex abuse or trafficking was never broached.

Once the Sandusky scandal came to light, the official 868-page FBI file was released in 2012.

However, 44 pages were “redacted”.[992]

How did the college football coach (little-known in 1976) rate such deferential taxpayer-funded treatment? —He was an Opus Dei, pedophile-protecting Roman Catholic.

22 years later, accusations would reach the desk of the Centre County District Attorney, Ray Gricar. Portrayed before and since as a no-nonsense, incorruptible official, Gricar refused to prosecute.

> Ray Gricar came under fire because a 1998 report concerning Sandusky allegedly molesting two boys in a shower did not lead to charges. Under the scope of the findings of the 2011 grand jury, Sandusky admitted to taking a naked shower, touching a boy and asked for forgiveness. However, six weeks later, police closed the case.
>
> Gricar disappeared on April 15, 2005. He told his girlfriend he was going for a drive. His car was found in a Lewisburg, Pa. parking lot and his laptop missing its hard drive was located in the Susquehanna River, the Patriot News stated.
>
> Gricar was declared dead in July 2011, although his body has not been located. ~ Huntington News[993]

Apparently Gricar's Catholic upbringing and education at "Marianist" University of Dayton[994] wasn't enough to save him.[cxlvi]

Sandusky was well-connected and clearly involved in a systemic child sex trafficking ring. It was a ring with tendrils running as far as Omaha, Nebraska. At least one name that came up in the Boys Town / Franklin scandal re-emerged with Sandusky.[995]

One year after pious Opus Dei Catholic Joe Paterno left a Sandusky victim standing in disbelief and betrayal, Sandusky started The Second Mile Foundation; a charity that would allow him to screen and groom thousands of poor, vulnerable children.

> The charity's name came from the collection of moral lessons from Jesus' Sermon on the Mount, specifically from Matthew 5:41: "And whosoever shall compel thee to go one mile, go with him two."
>
> The state Attorney General's office on Saturday charged Mr. Sandusky, 67, with 40 sex charges against boys from 1994 to 2005, all of whom he met through the Second Mile Foundation he founded in 1977. Started as a small home for six troubled boys outside State College, it > has grown to a statewide organization whose mission is to help "young people to achieve their potential as individuals and community members by providing opportunities for them to develop positive life skills and self-esteem."

>
> Mr. Sandusky and his wife Dottie have six adopted children and had cared for foster children, which led them to start the nonprofit. ~ Pittsburgh Post-Gazette[996]

Was Sandusky mocking Jesus Christ with his crimes or did he live in some schizophrenic, pious/heinous Opus-Dei-style reality? Only he can answer (and he will, eventually).

It was later revealed that, not only was Sandusky raping the vulnerable and destitute boys his Second Mile foundation "rescued", he was offering them to his powerful Elite friends.[997]

One of those friends was District Judge Leslie Dutchcot. Dutchcot was a generous donator to Second Mile and, in return, she received financial assistance from a "Second Mile official".[998] What else she received has not been disclosed as of yet.

Dutchcot is a good Catholic girl who got her doctorate at Duquesne.

When Sandusky was finally arraigned, Prosecutors considered him a flight risk. They demanded no bail be allowed but, if set, should be nothing less than $500,000.

The judge ignored them and set the bail at $100,000. Jerry Sandusky was happy to walk around free while awaiting his criminal trial.

That judge was Leslie Dutchcot.

Montgomery County Representative Mike Vereb (Republican) was furious that Dutchcot had not recused herself due conflict of interest and demanded the State Supreme Court investigate her[999] but no investigation took place. Instead, Dutchcot spent three more years on the bench until walking away to a lucrative position in a private law firm outside her old Centre County jurisdiction.[1000]

At no time was Penn State University at risk of criminal or civil prosecution. Instead, like the Roman Catholic Church, school administrators were left to “police themselves”.

Who better for the “secular, public” university to choose for that than former Director of the FBI, Louis J. Freeh? By an amazing “coincidence”, Freeh is also an Opus Dei Roman Catholic.

> “It’s widely known that Supreme Court Justices Antonin Scalia, Samuel Alito, and Clarence Thomas belong to Opus Dei — and that Chief Justice John Roberts may also be a member,” stated Matthew Fox, a former priest, progressive theologian and author of more than 23 books.
>
> “They’re in the CIA, the FBI,” said Fox. “Daniel Ellsberg recently told me that some of the ranking commanders of our military are also Opus Dei,” Fox stated in another interview. Veteran investigative reporter Seymour Hersh made a similar observation. “Hersh stated that Gen. Stanley McChrystal, Vice Admiral William McRaven and others in the Joint Special Operations Command (the group responsible for the assassination of Osama Bin Laden) were members of the Knights of Malta and Opus Dei. ...
>
> The New York Times noted in 2012 that an Opus Dei boy’s prep school “has become the popular school for a small clique of Washingtonians“: Rick Santorum; lobbyist and former U.S. Senator (R-FL), Mel Martinez; Sect. of Defense Chuck Hagel; the infamous FBI spy and Opus Dei member Robert Hanssen’s boss, former FBI director Louis J. Freeh; NOM founder Maggie Gallagher and National Review editor Kate O’Beirne.
>
> Fox said that both Santorum and Newt Gingrich are members...
>
> That’s why the endorsement by five former U.S. ambassadors to the Vatican of Mitt Romany in early January 2012 before the primaries signaled that “big money” had already chosen the GOP presidential nominee.

Robert P. George, a Princeton University professor closely associated with Opus Dei, changed the landscape of U.S. politics. Neocon politico Deal Hudson stated that "If there really is a vast, right-wing conspiracy, its leaders probably meet in George's basement." Referred to by the New York Times as "the country's most influential conservative Christian thinker,"[cxlvii] it was George's study conducted in the late 1990s showing that allegiance to the Republican Party depended not so much on religious affiliation as the frequency of church attendance which Karl Rove used to direct support for George W. Bush into pulpits, church bulletins, parking lot pamphlets and mailing lists taken from parish rosters. ...

After becoming an archbishop, [George] Pell invited Opus Dei to establish themselves in Melbourne and then Sydney. Under Pell's patronage, "Opus Dei's star is on the rise, it is said, and that of others — including other more established groups within the Church — is sinking," Sydney Morning Herald*'s religious affairs columnist wrote in January 2002. This reporter saw "signs of a new elitism….a clerical culture is being encouraged in which there is a highly select 'in' crowd around Pell."*

Pell has maintained a close relationship with Australia's conservative PM, Tony Abbott, and his party for decades. Days before Pope Bergoglio appointed Pell on April 13, 2013, to his "G8" group of cardinals who would advise the pope on "governing the Church," Pell attended a "Gala Dinner" celebrating the Melbourne-based Institute of Public Affairs (IPA) an "ultraconservative think tank." Rupert Murdoch was guest of honor and Abbott the keynote speaker. (Murdoch was awarded a papal knighthood by Pope John Paul II for "promoting the interests of society, the Church and the Holy See.")

From Bergoglio's point of view, Pell has sound business experience. "[Pell's] archdiocese's assets have nearly doubled since 2004 to over $1 billion at the end of 2013... . Since Pell became archbishop in 2001 the archdiocese has paid out $6.8 million to settle 82 claims for sex abuse according to figures provided by the archdiocese's business manager — an average of $83,200 each," reported one Australian > newspaper. "The disturbing consequence of this strategy, adopted widely in the Catholic Church, is that Catholic leaders effectively accepted that human worth can be measured by economic price. They accepted that the priority of the Church lay in the market where its task was to preserve and enhance its financial resources," noted another Australian publication.

>
> Pell is permanently relocating to Rome and will probably reside in the "grand apartment" he has used in the past at the Australian Church's guest house in Rome recently refurbished at a cost of "between $30 million and $85 million." ~ Daily Kos[1001]

Although written with the paranoid Leftist spin that the "radical Right" secretly controls all, including the hapless Vatican, the Kos piece was professional. The facts disclosed show how Opus Dei is used to control "secular" universities like MIT and Harvard.

> Boston Cardinal Sean O'Malley, the only American on the G8, is a faithful supporter of Opus Dei and has sponsored the canonization of the priest who "established an Opus Dei presence among students and professors at Harvard University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology" between 1946 and 1956. Metropolitan Boston now has more than eighty colleges and universities attracting thousands of students from around the world. Like Cardinal Marx, O'Malley celebrates special Masses commemorating Opus Dei founder, Josemaria Escriva, and visits the Opus Dei (male only) center at Harvard.[1002] — And whatever Opus Dei (and Rome) controls, it destroys.

> Honduran Cardinal Oscar Rodríguez Maradiaga, coordinator of the G8, has become the pope's right-hand man, "some might say vice pope." Rodríguez Maradiaga is "the leader of Opus Dei" in Honduras which "participated actively in the 2009 coup against the constitutional [and progressive] president, Manuel Zelaya." "Active members of this clan are making intromissions in Honduran national politics." "Honduras now has the highest homicide rate in the world fueled by the drug trade and government corruption. Only 2 percent of > murders are solved.” Rodríguez Maradiaga blamed “the Jews” for the scandal arising from clerical crimes.[1003]

Given that Director Freeh’s “investigation” was “in-house” and carried no weight or substance, he was free to do it properly.

> The most powerful leaders at Penn State University showed “total and consistent disregard” for child sex abuse victims while covering up the attacks of a longtime sexual predator, according to an internal review into how the school handled a scandal involving its former assistant football coach.
>
> Investigators conducted more than 400 interviews and found that several officials had “empowered” Jerry Sandusky to continue his abuse, while Joe Paterno, the school’s legendary head football coach, could have stopped the attacks had he done more, investigators said Thursday.
>
> In a scandal that has shaken Pennsylvania residents and gripped the nation, leading to Paterno’s dismissal and the ouster of longtime president Graham Spanier, Louis Freeh, the former FBI director who led the review, said top university officials forged an agreement to conceal Sandusky’s sexual attacks more than a decade ago.
>
> “There are more red flags here than you can count,” said Freeh, emphasizing the abuse occurred just “steps away” from where Paterno worked in the university’s Lasch Building. ~ CNN[1004]

In proof of this, complicit Penn State administrators like President Graham Spanier and Athletic Director Tim Curley continued to draw pay even after they stepped down from their positions.[1005]

While it was in operation, Sandusky’s “Second Mile Foundation” received a strong helping-hand from many high-profile figures such as Roman Catholic Pittsburgh Steeler Linebacker Jack Ham, Pittsburgh Steeler Running Back Franco Harris (black father, Italian Roman Catholic mother) and Irish Roman Catholic actor Mark Wahlberg.[1006]

In 1990, Yale Skull and Bones President George Bush #41 recognized Second Mile as one of his “Points of Light”.[1007]

In 2002, United States Senator from the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and Penn State alumnus, Rick Santorum, recognized Sandusky’s foundation with a “Congressional Angels in Adoption” award[1008] ... although many of the children raped and abused there saw nothing “angelic” about it.

The former Presidential Candidate is also an Opus Dei Roman Catholic.

Both Sides of the Street

In fact, Opus Dei has a special, dedicated outreach to convert the “rich and Republican”.

> Rev. C. John McCloskey III, a priest of the traditionalist Opus Dei order...makes converts, often of the rich and Republican.
>
> He has personally prepared for conversion to Catholicism, among others, Gov. Sam Brownback of Kansas; the Supreme Court nominee Robert H. Bork; the columnists Robert D. Novak and Lawrence Kudlow; the conservative publisher Alfred S. Regnery[cxlviii] ... Bernard Nathanson[cxlix]; and Lewis E. Lehrman, an investment banker and former candidate for governor of New York.
>
> Father McCloskey, 61, is hardly the only conservative priest or minister. But few have his knack for persuading political conservatives to adopt a different religion.
>
> After military school, Columbia University and a stint at Merrill Lynch, he joined Opus Dei and became a chaplain at Princeton University. He then ran the Catholic Information Center, an outreach ministry near the White House, where he introduced many Washington insiders to Catholicism. At his silent retreats in Virginia, Capitol Hill and K Street types see one another and nod. ~ New York Times[1009]

Even the loyal Papal Court Jews at the New York Times were forced to admit the Hegelian machinations of Rome.

While the Jesuit White Pope works the Left side of the street, agents like Opus Dei “Father McCloskey” work the Right.

> Many of his converts know one another; it is a kind of club. As Pope Francis is breathing life into the Catholic left, Father McCloskey is defibrillating the Catholic right.
>
> ...after a period in Chicago...where Opus Dei sent him...Father McCloskey and I shared a late-afternoon cocktail. He talked about his college years, his time on Wall Street and his calling to become a priest. ...
>
> Then, when it was over, Father McCloskey surprised me by asking that I not quote him. Opus Dei would not let him speak on the record.[1010]

Why would a “simple religious club” fear even controlled media? Perhaps it’s the extent of their reach that Opus Dei wishes to keep secret; from publishers to commentators to politicians —

> ...I turned to some of the men and women whom Father McCloskey has counseled.
>
> Several discussed the pleasure he takes in conservatives’ company, and his quiet facility with networking. He gets referrals. To take one example, before Mr. Regnery ever met Father McCloskey, he knew about him from Mr. Kudlow and Mr. Novak, converts of Father McCloskey’s who, as conservative opinion columnists, knew pretty much everyone.
>
> And in a church whose priests are often on the left economically, Father McCloskey has a niche. He is a devout free-marketeer, a priest who defends the compatibility of pro-business policies and Catholic theology.
>
> But more than anything, when I asked what made Father McCloskey so successful at persuading people to join the church, I heard the answer, counterintuitive in its simplicity, that he befriends people, whether they ask for it or not.

> “Once Father John gets his claws into you, he never lets go,” said Mr. Kudlow, who was fighting addictions to alcohol and cocaine when he met Father McCloskey in the 1990s.[1011]

It is an apt description. Each new convert becomes an agent for Rome willing to betray all else in service to the Papacy.

> Shortly after he began counseling Mr. Kudlow, Father McCloskey suggested that he go to church. Mr. Kudlow found that he loved Mass, and in 1997, he was baptized Catholic.
>
> Mr. Brownback and Mr. Lehrman did not respond to requests for comment. Nor did the presidential candidate Rick Santorum, whose son was baptized by Father McCloskey. But Mr. Regnery, whose family firm has published William F. Buckley Jr., Ann Coulter and Dinesh D’Souza, did respond, effusively.
>
> In the 1990s, dissatisfied with the Episcopal Church, Mr. Regnery attended two weekend retreats run by Father McCloskey. They became friends, and in 2006 or 2007, he became a Catholic.[1012]

Indeed, “Mr. Regnery” has done an excellent job promoting those loyal to the Catholic cause and denying those who aren’t (such as yours, truly).

It may surprise readers to learn that frequent Fox News guest Ann Coulter fits in very well. Despite appearing to be “far Right”, Coulter has pushed for Presidential candidates like Mormon moderate Mitt Romney and closet Catholic Chris Christie (also not very “Conservative”).

Romney comes from a family of Mormon Ruling Elites — something far more common in America than our Founding generation would ever have dreamed.

Romney’s father, George Wilcken Romney, was the 43rd Governor of Michigan and the United States Secretary of Housing and Urban Development under Richard Milhous Nixon.

CIA mind-controlled sex slave, Cathy O’Brien, states in her book Trance Formation of America that she was abused at the Michigan Governor’s mansion during his tenure.[1013]

Whenever a Jesuit plant needs Conservative credentials, they rail against Communism — it’s safe and it’s completely contained.

Once the Jesuits created Communism via their Reduction settlements in Paraguay, Argentina, Brazil, and Bolivia, it was insinuated at every level of American life. The infiltration was so bad it needed cover.

That cover was provided via the outrageous antics of a corrupt Irish Catholic Senator named Joseph McCarthy.

But the idea wasn’t his, it was the brainchild of Father Edmund Walsh, SJ[1014] — the man whom the Georgetown School of Foreign Service is named after.

Georgetown SFS is a prerequisite for anyone who expects to serve in power because they will ultimately serve Rome. The list of alumni is too vast to show but it includes names like —

> * Donald Trump strategist / Breitbart CEO Steve Bannon
> * President of the European Commission and former Prime Minister of Portugal José Manuel Durão Barroso
> * U.S. Army Chief of Staff George Casey
> * President William Jefferson Clinton
> * Reagan Secretary of State Alexander Haig
> * Obama's National Security Advisor Gen. James Jones, USMC
> * Trump Secretary of Homeland Security Gen. John Kelly, USMC
> * Former President of the Philippines Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
> * Obama Chief of Staff and Deputy National Security Advisor Denis McDonough
> * CNN Commentator Kayleigh McEnany
> * Wall Street Journal columnist Daniel Henninger
> * Actor, Producer, Director Carl Reiner (a Jew)[cl]
> * NASA Chief of Staff Courtney Stadd
> * U.S. Senator from Alaska Daniel Sullivan
> * CIA Director George Tenet —And many more.

Rightly is the Jesuit school for intrigue in "Foreign Service" named after Edmund Walsh.

> If the Vatican and Jesuits are not up to their eyeballs in provoking wars and creating general chaos worldwide, then why did Georgetown Jesuit priest, Edmund A. Walsh, handpick and place mass murderer Joseph Stalin into power?
>
> If Walsh wasn't a kingpin in the New World Order, how could he have the power to use American money to fund Russian communism? How could he have had the power to handpick FDR and Eisenhower to push a phony, controlled World War II onto the American people?
>
> How could Walsh, the creator of the School of Foreign Service at Georgetown, have had the power to act as chief consultant to the Nuremburg trial judges in order to keep the Jesuits and Vatican connection to the Nazis out of the public record as well as ensuring some prominent Nazis were never convicted?

> If Walsh was only a harmless school teacher as depicted by the Jesuits, how come he was instrumental in establishing diplomatic relations for the U.S. Government in Baghdad way back in 1931? How come he personally assisted Plutarco Elías Calles in the formation of the National Revolutionary Party (PNR), ensuring the security and primacy of the Catholic Church in Mexican politics and the party—an alliance that remains unbroken to this day? Of course, all these important questions have never been answered by U.S. leaders and the Vatican. Why? Because it would show, beyond a reasonable doubt, the two entities are working together to destroy America from within and have been doing it for a very, very long time. ~ Szymanski[1015]

Joe McCarthy was trained by the Jesuits at Marquette — the same location where Jeffrey Dahmer's father was instructed in "chemistry".

Notable alumni also include 2016 Republican presidential candidate and former Wisconsin Governor Scott Walker, comedian Chris Farley (who died at the "magick" age of 33) and reporter James Foley. Foley was supposedly beheaded by "ISIS" and his "death" was heavily propagandized to breathe new life into the muslim terror boogeyman. It's probably only a coincidence that Foley was working for "USAID", a "non-governmental organization" (NGO) known by independent journalists to be a front for CIA operations.[1016]

A mass was given at Marquette for Foley[1017], though whether he attended is up for speculation.

Marquette is actually quite proud of Joseph McCarthy[1018], maybe that's why Ann Coulter is a fan, too.[1019]

Why would Coulter be such a passionate defender of Joe McCarthy? — Because her father was a devout Catholic and famed FBI Communist fighter.[1020]

It's interesting that John Vincent Coulter shared the same FBI resumé as a man on the other side of the supposed political spectrum-Connecticut Senator Thomas J. Dodd.[1021] Dodd, like Father Walsh, was also at Nuremburg. The devout Catholic Senator liked the Nazis so much, he used the 1938 Nazi Gun Control Act to fashion his 1968 Gun Control Act.[1022] It needed the help of media anti-gun propaganda after the murder of John F. Kennedy but it was passed.

The Dodd’s are yet another Catholic Ruling Elite family who have been destroying America for multiple generations on behalf of Rome.

Son Christopher Dodd took up where his father left off as a Connecticut Congressman and Senator. Dodd, along with homosexual Massachusetts Congressman Barney Frank created massive debt and disaster for Americans via government real estate hand-outs at Fannie Mae and Freddy Mac.[1023] Fannie and Freddy are part of the socialized lending initiated by Freemason Franklin Roosevelt’s 1938 “New Deal”.

Christopher Dodd went to Georgetown Prep[1024] and was instrumental in helping brother Thomas Dodd, Jr. — a professor at Georgetown — become a United States ambassador.[1025]

After proving his loyalty to the Whore of Babylon, dealing decades of damage to America as a Legislator, Dodd was given another important job: directing the Psychological Operations of the Court Jews in Hollywood. Dodd is the current Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of the Motion Picture Association of America.

Keep this in mind when the Jews are blamed for poison of “entertainment”.

Although, like Donald Trump, Ann Coulter claims she’s a Presbyterian[1026], she’s a council chair for the homosexual Republican group “GOPROUD”.[1027]

But Opus Dei doesn’t pigeon-hole itself with just the frauds on the “far Right”, it also goes after pop music icons like “Madonna” Louise Ciccone.[1028]

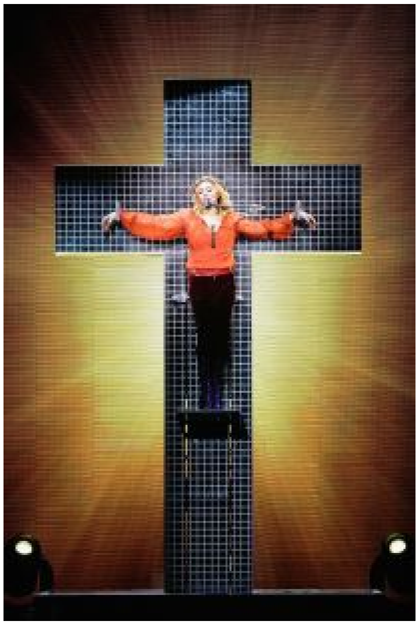
Ciccone is certainly a worthy catch, from her mocking the crucifixion of Jesus Christ on stage[1029] to her 1992 book Sex.

What possibly connects “Madonna” Ciccone and Ann Coulter? — The “stage” of the Devil’s Simulation, run by Rome.

On the one side is the confused, distracted Right; kept so by agents of disinformation like Coulter.

On the other are bold harlots like Ciccone who sell their bodies and souls for fame and seek to sexualize as many as they can (the younger the better).

The media is only too happy to contribute.



FAIR USE for illustration.

> Madonna’s Pussy Is the Temple of Learning
> Rich Juzwiak, Gawker[1030]
>
> Today, [her 1992 album] Erotica turns 20 (tomorrow [her 1992 pornographic picture-book] Sex will do the same), but only now has S&M really broken the mainstream pop culture to the level of a phenomenon (courtesy of 50 Shades of Grey). Only now are we accustomed to having a pack of female pop icons who sing about being excited by whips and chains, who snarl, “I’m a slut like you!,” who espouse the virtues of “pussy power” on talk shows. Only now are we used to the kind of content onslaught that Madonna delivered in 1992...*
>
> If Erotica wasn’t responsible for these developments, it certainly predicted them. The album was more ahead of its time than any pop record released that year. ...
>
> Sex boasts even more layers and is more engaging for it. There are straightforward jokes amidst the softcore porn, which includes depictions of water sports, bondage, pansexuality amongst both sexes and public nudity. ...
>
> All of these sentences start mini-essays: “Sex with the young can be fun if you’re in the mood”; “There’s no better way to wake up in the morning than with my [CENSORED]”; “When I was a child I used to > sit on the toilet backward and wait for the burning sensation between my legs to go away.”; “I like my pussy.”

Juzwiak and “Gawker” don’t just play at publicizing the Christ-mocking depravity that makes the Devil’s Simulation run, they work at it with all their might with pieces and headlines like this: The Second Coming, A Proud Slut and YouTube Stars: This Week’s New Music Summarizes the Whole Year[1031]

Their boldness derives from the idea that no one would dare stop them.

Those who rape, torture and murder children are even more bold.

Imagine their surprise if a popular uprising suddenly and quickly overwhelmed them.

Chapter 31

"#PizzaGate"

4 February 2011: Conservative Jewish political commentator Andrew

Breitbart "tweets" from his certified account —
How prog-guru John Podesta isn't household name as world class underage sex slave op cover-upperer defending unspeakable dregs escapes me.

Neither Breitbart nor any other member of "Conservative" media mentions it any further.

One year and one month later, Andrew Breitbart dropped dead onto the sidewalk in Brentwood, Los Angeles.

As far as Andrew Breitbart was concerned, the idea that the Democrats were hiding participation in a child sex slave operation was nothing more than political fodder; ammunition to selectively release at the most opportune time. He even joked about it four months after his "tweet" on the Fox News late-night show "Red Eye" with Catholic commentator Greg Gutfeld.

Gutfeld attended Roman Catholic Junípero Serra High School in San Mateo, California.

Serra is the "Saint" whom Jesuit Pope Francis honored when he came to America to address the United States Government in a joint session of Congress on 24 September 2015. It was the first time in American history a Pope had done so.

He was invited by former Speaker of the House of Representatives Nancy Pelosi, ("Democrat", California) and her Ohio "Republican" replacement, Congressman John Boehner. Pelosi was mentored by Jesuit Father Stephen J. Privett, President of San Francisco University and Boehner was trained by the Jesuits at Xavier.

Although Pelosi wasn't sitting across from Boehner during the Pope's speech, the Democrat President of the Senate was; Vice President Joe Biden. Biden, also a Roman Catholic, was given an honorary degree by the Jesuits at Scranton University.

The two "rivals" frequently stood in applause to honor their Jesuit Pope.

When Francis led Congress to pay homage to the controversial Saint (some have questioned his methods amongst native Americans), they didn't have far to go. A bronze statue of Father Junípero Serra is prominently displayed in National Statuary Hall on "Capitol Hill".

"Capitol Hill" is named after Capitoline (Campidoglio) Hill in Rome. It is also why all seats of government are called "Capitols". It is one of the seven hills referenced in Revelation 17; cited again: The Great Harlot and the Beast

One of the seven angels who had the seven bowls came and talked with me, saying to me, "Come, I will show you the Judgment of the Great Prostitute who sits on many waters [who controls large numbers of people], with whom the kings of the Earth committed adultery [they denied God and their humanity and sold themselves to her for power], and the inhabitants of the Earth were made drunk with the wine of her sexual immorality." [They worshipped her in her falsehood and perversion.]

Then he carried me away in the Spirit into the wilderness. I saw a woman sitting on a scarlet beast which was full of blasphemous names, having seven heads and ten horns. The woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet, and adorned with gold and precious stones and pearls, having in her hand a golden cup full of abominations and the filth of her sexual immorality. On her forehead a name was written:
MYSTERY,
BABYLON THE GREAT,
THE MOTHER OF PROSTITUTES
AND OF THE ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH.

I saw the woman, drunk with the blood of the saints and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus. [No entity has tortured and slaughtered more Christians than Rome.]

When I saw her, I marveled greatly. Then the angel said to me, "Why do you marvel? I will tell you the mystery of the woman and of the beast that carries her, which has the seven heads and the ten horns. The beast, which you saw, was, and is not [How perfectly does this describe the rise, fall and rise of Rome?!], and is to ascend out of the bottomless pit and go to destruction. Those who dwell on the Earth whose names are not written in the Book of Life from the foundation of the world will marvel when they see the beast that was, and is not, and is to come."

"Here is the mind which has wisdom: The seven heads are seven mountains on which the woman sits. They are also seven kings. Five have fallen, one is, the other has not yet come; and when he comes, he > must remain a little while. Concerning the beast who was, and is not, he is the eighth, and is of the seven, and is going to destruction."

>
> "The ten horns which you saw are ten kings who have received no kingdom yet, but they will receive authority as kings for one hour with the beast. These are of one mind and will give their power and authority to the beast. These will wage war with the Lamb, but the Lamb will overcome them, for He is Lord of lords and King of kings. Those who are with Him are called and Chosen and Faithful."
>
> Then he said to me, "The waters which you saw, where the prostitute sits, are peoples and multitudes and nations and tongues. These ten horns and the beast which you saw will hate the prostitute; they will make her desolate and naked, and devour her flesh, and burn her with fire. For God has put in their hearts to fulfill His Will, and to be of one mind, and to give their kingdom to the Beast, until the Words of God are fulfilled. The woman whom you saw is that great city, which reigns over the kings of the Earth." ~ Revelation 17, Modern English Version (some capitalization added for clarity and reverence) Andrew Breitbart's death at only 43 years of age was quickly ruled a "heart attack by natural causes".

At the time of his death, Brietbart was Executive Chairman of the Brietbart News Network which included a web site. Like all the others in its class, the site puts a pseudo-Right spin on its propaganda exploiting emotionalism over information.

After his death, his position was taken over by Stephen Kevin Bannon.

Bannon is the quintessential Roman propaganda operative.

Raised in an Irish Roman Catholic "pro-union Democrat" household,[1032] Bannon attended Benedictine College Preparatory, a private, Catholic, military high school in Richmond, Virginia.

Bannon then served as a Surface Warfare Officer aboard the Navy destroyer USS Foster. It is here that his fast track began and he was sent to become "special assistant" to the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Thomas B. Hayward at the Pentagon.[1033]

From the Pentagon, Bannon moved to Goldman Sachs as an investment banker in "Mergers and Acquisitions".[1034]

He was promoted and sent to Hollywood to help the Goldman expansion there.[1035] He left as a Vice President.

Bannon later described his time with one of the most notorious financial firms in the world as "like joining the Jesuits".[1036]

Steve Bannon, 2017 "Conservative Political Action Conference" in National Harbor, Mary-land, by Gage Skidmore

To complete his weaponizing as expert in Right-wing distraction and disinformation, he received his Master's Degree in "National Security Studies" from the Father Edmund Walsh School of Foreign Service at Jesuit Georgetown University.[1037]

Bannon then began to exploit his Hollywood experience by making muck-raking political propaganda films — none of which ever used the words, "Rome", "Jesuit" or "Vatican", of course.

Although a founding member of Breitbart News[1038], sources like Wikipedia excite paranoia over "far Right" Jewish "Zionist" control.

> Breitbart News Network (known commonly as Breitbart News*,* Breitbart or Breitbart.com*) is a far-right*[6] American news, opinion and commentary[7][8] website founded in 2007 by conservative commentator Andrew Breitbart. The site has published a number of falsehoods and conspiracy theories,[9][10][11][12] as well as intentionally misleading stories.[13]
>
> Conceived by Breitbart during a visit to Israel in mid-2007 as a website "that would be unapologetically pro-freedom and pro-Israel"[14] ... ~ Wikipedia[1039]

Oddly, “user-edited” Wikipedia doesn’t mention anti-Semitic race-baiting as a “false” or “purposefully misleading” agenda.

As good a job as Jewish figurehead Andrew Breitbart was doing in substanceless muck-raking, he still wasn’t a fully-aware member of the “team”. He was clearly at risk of giving up information he shouldn’t have so he was replaced with someone who was “read-in”.

In an interview with a sister propaganda effort, “WorldNetDaily” founded by secret Lebanese Roman Catholic Joseph Farah, Bannon told Roman Catholic reporter Jerome Corsi that questioning Andrew Breitbart’s sudden heart attack death at only 43 was “irresponsible”.

> Filmmaker Steve Bannon, appointed executive chairman of the Breitbart News Network after Breitbart’s death, has insisted to WND that the media mogul died of natural causes and to suggest anything else is irresponsible.
>
> “Breitbart had an enlarged heart,” Bannon told WND. “He had been hospitalized for the problem last year and told to lose weight that he did not lose.”
>
> Bannon, formerly a Breitbart News Network board member, told WND that for months prior to his death, Breitbart had been working overtime to finalize a refinancing of his news agency.
>
> “He died of natural causes,” Bannon said. “The family wants the matter put to rest, and WND is beginning to irritate me suspecting foul play.” ~ WorldNetDaily[1040]

By all means, if Steve Bannon claims the family of Andrew Breitbart doesn’t want his possible murder investigated then that’s the end of it!

In 2014, Steve Bannon was called to the Vatican.[1041]

Two years later he was Presidential Campaign Chief Executive for Jesuit-educated “Protestant” Donald Trump. After Trump’s election, Bannon became White House Chief Strategist.

Learning Against Learning

Right-spinning Roman muck-raking is an art form. It requires the deft touch of a bomb-maker: how much truth can be sown while still masking the Whore of Babylon as the ultimate Puppet Master?

Too little truth and no-one buys it.

Too much truth and you threaten to wake the Sleeping Giant.

As with nearly all previous elections, Rome carefully mitigated the tiny portion of unknowns in supposed “democratic elections” to two choices — both firmly in the Pope’s back pocket.

Hillary Clinton had long ago put herself in full volunteer status for the Devil’s Simulation. She dutifully stood by her Jesuit-trained husband through all of his criminal activities from running drugs for the CIA through Mena when Bill was Governor[1042] to the sexual abuse of women and children (which she fully participated in).[1043] For this, she was gifted with becoming a United States Senator in a State she never lived in — New York. It was also the State that was the home of Bill’s likely biological father, Winthrop Aldrich Rockefeller.[1044]

Winthrop fit well in the Devil’s Simulation. He was an extreme sexual deviant who left New York to be gifted as Governor of Arkansas. It was he who arranged for his illegitimate son to meet Jesuit-mentored President John F. Kennedy just months before he was brutally murdered.[1045]

Rockefeller also arranged for Bill to receive a Rhodes Scholarship and a Vietnam draft deferment.[1046]

But Hillary Rodham was no fool. She knew that her masters didn’t meddle in details as long as the outcome pleased them. At her level, it was a cage match so she loaded it in her favor by choosing United States Senator for the Commonwealth of Virginia, Tim Kaine, as her running mate.

Kaine is a devout Roman Catholic, trained by the Jesuits in high school and college. After college, he went on a mission trip with the Jesuits to South America. During the campaign, he swore that one of the top Clinton/Kaine agenda items would be to legalize the millions of illegal Roman Catholic aliens in America.[1047]

The Governor of Virginia then, and at this writing, was/is Terence Richard "Terry" McAuliffe — a Jesuit-trained Roman Catholic.

Because the two Roman-controlled puppet camps were being left to fight it out, they both played dirty; although Bannon & Company played dirtier. They decided to leak information about key Democrat pedophiles and deviants — nothing linking important players like Clinton, directly, of course.

It was disclosed that a hub of child sex slave trafficking was Comet Ping Pong Pizza in Washington D.C. owned by James Alefantis. Alefantis was listed by GQ as one of the "50 Most Powerful People in Washington".[1048]

The Podesta brothers, John and Tony, are well-known in Washington as extreme sadists and deviants. In fact, they may have been chosen to be spotlighted in "PizzaGate" because they were beginning to annoy other members of the Pedocracy.

Tony Podesta's mansion is littered with extreme and perverse "art" from scared, scantily clad toddlers to a suspended 8' bronze by Louise Bourgeois called "the Arch of Hysteria"; a headless, naked man arched in the identical way one of Jeffrey Dahmer's victims was found.[1049]

Operatives for the Bannon / Trump team were allowed to emphasize the story but only in select circles. The controversy climaxed when the son of Trump's National Security Advisor, United States Army General Michael Thomas Flynn, Sr. (Flynn, Jr.) "tweeted" criticism of the Roman Catholic Director of the FBI, James Comey. Comey had denied investigating and disclosing Podesta's electronic communications.[1050],[1051]

“Nothing to see here...move along, move along.”

In response, the former Defense Intelligence Agency Director, Flynn, Sr., was forced to step down as NSA by “Evangelical” Catholic Vice President Mike Pence.

That was despite Flynn’s qualifications as a high-ranking Catholic General in “Military Intelligence”. It is guaranteed that Flynn was a willing participant in the sophistry that is the “Global War on Terror.”

In December of 2016, fresh after the “election”, CNN’s Jake Tapper repeatedly “grilled” Vice President-elect Pence on why Mike Flynn Jr. was given a security clearance.

> I wanna ask you about an incident on the transition, today, Michael G. [sic] Flynn, the son of the future National Security Advisor, Lt. General Michael Flynn, has been pushing a bunch of conspiracy theories, including one, ah, that ended up, ah, impacting your — where you’re staying right now — your local pizza place, Comet Pizza, ah, an insane lie, spread online, it lead a North Carolina man to barge into the restaurant with two weapons, thankfully no one was hurt...[1052]

We don’t know if the “Evangelical” Catholic Vice President was actually “staying” at Comet Ping Pong Pizza — as in living there. Maybe Mr. Tapper was just over-excited. Comet was special for him, too.

Just the year before, Jake and his wife were treated to a puff piece from The Washingtonian. In it, Jennifer Tapper said the favorite place for her and Jake to take the kids, was Comet Ping Pong Pizza. She said that her favorite “date night” location for her and her husband was “Buck’s Fishing and Camping” — also owned by James Alefantis.[1053]

We hope for the sake of the Tapper children, all they did was eat pizza.

The “shooting incident” Tapper was referring to was an extremely suspicious affair. The day before the interview, on the 5th of December, 2016, former actor “Edgar Maddison Welch” burst into Comet Ping Pong Pizza with a deadly AR-15[cli] and shot a single round that miraculously took out the restaurant’s computer but did no other damage.[1054]

Perhaps he bought his ammunition from the same place Lee Harvey Oswald bought his magic seven-ricocheting bullet. If so, he was probably told where to get it by Arlen Specter; the Jewish lawyer who fabricated the ludicrous theory for the Warren Commission.

Although he was raised in Kansas, Specter was schooled by the Jesuits in secret at the University of Pennsylvania. He was rewarded for his loyalty by being “elected” a United States Senator from the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; a position he maintained for Rome for thirty years.

Edgar Maddison Welch has been credited in such movies as The Mill (2008), A Tale About Bootlegging (2005) and the violent 2009 B-horror movie, The Bleeding.[1055]

Perhaps the most astounding “coincidence” of them all was where Edgar was in 2010. While Laura Silsby-Gayler was “rescuing” Haitian children by kidnapping them, Edgar was building homes for them with an un-named “church”.[1056]

*****

Why didn’t the Democrats fight fire with fire?

Maybe they weren’t ruthless enough (though, highly unlikely).

There certainly is plenty for them to exploit.

Donald John Trump is exactly like any other Roman agent in a key position: a sexual deviant and a pedophile. In fact, Trump may even have abused (is abusing?) his own daughter, Ivanka.[1057]

Ivanka and her Jewish husband have been given “unprecedented”[1058] access to American government.

Ivanka walked in the identical footsteps of her father (or was directed to), receiving training from the Jesuits at Georgetown for two years before transferring to the “secular” University of Pennsylvania for her “public school” degree.

Her husband, Jared Kushner, is an important figurehead whom the media have used repeatedly for the idea that a Jewish conspiracy exists — it may even have been intended in their marriage. Her brother Eric (a key advisor and fund-raiser to his father) also married a Jew; Lara Yunaska.

Eric stayed at Georgetown for a full degree and is now on the Board of Directors for the McDonough School of Business at his alma matter.

As far as the “Jewish Conspiracy” goes, the Washington Post was mild, headlining how Kushner had been “tapped” by Trump to lead a “SWAT team” to “fix government with business ideas”.[1059]

The far-Left Huffington Post was more incendiary.

> White House Announces Jared Kushner Is Now Responsible For Everything[1060]

As things got too hot for Steve Bannon, he bowed out. The Huffington Post blamed the Jewish husband of the President’s daughter.

> Jared Kushner Helped Push Steve Bannon Out Of The NSC[1061]

The sad part about Rome using Jewish patsies is how many of them are willing to be used.

Trump’s pedophile pimp has been “mystery” billionaire Jeffrey Epstein.

As far back as 2002, media began asking questions about the former math teacher from Dalton, Ohio who skyrocketed through fellow Jew and Senior Bear Stearns Partner Ace Greenberg into the Wall Street stock exchange[1062] where insider trading is as easy as raping a child.

Perhaps in honor of Tiberius and Caligula, Epstein bought his own island from which to showcase women and children. It has been called euphemistically, “Orgy Island”.

The list of Epstein’s clientele reads like a “Who’s Who” of fame.[1063] The names include (but with many more besides): Bill Clinton Kevin Spacey
Chris Tucker Prince Andrew
Stephen Hawking (for entertainment?)
Bill Richardson David Copperfield
Alan Dershowitz Courtney Love
Ehud Barak Alec Baldwin
Ralph Fiennes Ted Kennedy
David Koch Tony Blair
Naomi Campbell Dustin Hoffman
Michael Bloomberg Richard Branson
Mick Jagger Michael Jackson
David Frost Jimmy Buffett.

— and, of course, Donald John Trump.

> Epstein was also a regular visitor to Donald Trump’s Mar-a-Lago, and the two were friends. According to the Daily Mail, Trump was a frequent dinner guest at Epstein’s home, which was often full of barely dressed models. In 2003, New York magazine reported that Trump also attended a dinner party at Epstein’s honoring Bill Clinton. ...
>
> “I’ve known Jeff for 15 years,” Trump said. “Terrific guy. He’s a lot of fun to be with. It is even said that he likes beautiful women as much as I do, and many of them are on the younger side. No doubt about it — Jeffrey enjoys his social life.” ~ The New York Post[1064]

If “Jeffrey enjoys his social life” is code for “we all like to rape little girls,” the girls aren’t laughing.

In fact, one of them is doggedly pursuing the President of the United States for having raped her when she was 13 at an Epstein "party".[1065]

As a puppet, William Jefferson Clinton has been retired and more detail (but not all) can be given of his predations.

> Epstein has spent the bulk of his adult life cultivating relationships with the world's most powerful men. Flight logs show that from 2001 to 2003, Bill Clinton flew on Epstein's private plane, dubbed "The Lolita Express" by the press, 26 times. After Epstein's arrest in July 2006, federal tax records show Epstein donated $25,000 to the Clinton Foundation that year.[1066]

But if Epstein's clients thought they were getting sex with children for nothing, they were mistaken.

> One powerful friend of Epstein is former President Bill Clinton, who FoxNews.com first reported took 26 trips around the world aboard Epstein's Boeing 727, dismissing his Secret Service detail for five of the trips.
>
> Virginia Roberts, who claims that at age 15 she was a "sex slave" for Epstein and his friends, and is one of the plaintiffs in the ongoing civil case against the federal government, claims the plane was outfitted with a bedroom for orgies, earning it the name "Lolita Express."
>
> "Epstein required me to describe the sexual events that I had with these men, presumably so that he could potentially blackmail them," Roberts said in an affidavit filed with the court. "Based on my knowledge of Epstein and his organization, as well as discussions with the FBI, it is my belief that federal prosecutors likely possess videotapes and photographic images of me as an underage girl having sex with Epstein and some of his powerful friends."
>
> One key piece of evidence from Epstein's case was released last week by the Florida State Attorney General's Office: a one-hour video showing the Oct. 20, 2005, search of his mansion. The video captured numerous salacious photos of young girls, some totally nude, as well > as a photo of a child around 5 years old bending over in a short dress, adorning his walls.

>
> Other Epstein items documented in the police video include a small stuffed teddy bear by his bedside, a professional dental chair and drill set in his bathroom, and Epstein in a photo standing next to a Catholic pope, but not shown are the hidden cameras found on his property. ~ Fox News[1067]

For some reason, Fox News didn’t feel it was necessary to elaborate on which “pope” Jeffrey Epstein was friends with ... perhaps more than one.

As more of Epstein’s victims came forward, prosecution was forced upon an unwilling Pedocracy.

Epstein was charged on at least 5 counts of Federal criminal acts involving minors and under-aged sex. The United States Attorney, Alexander Acosta, dropped all Federal charges. Epstein plead guilty to the Florida charge of “solicitation of a minor” and was given 13 months of “house arrest”.

> In 2007, Acosta signed a non-prosecution deal in which he agreed not to pursue federal charges against Epstein or four women who the government said procured girls for him. In exchange, Epstein agreed to plead guilty to a solicitation charge in state court, accept a 13-month sentence, register as a sex offender and pay restitution to the victims identified in the federal investigation.
>
> “This agreement will not be made part of any public record,” the deal between Epstein and Acosta says. The document was unsealed by a federal judge in a civil lawsuit in 2015.
>
> Reiter said in the 2009 deposition that federal prosecutors in Miami told him “that typically these kinds of cases with one victim would end up in a ten-year sentence.” Reiter said he was surprised not only by the decision to pull back from prosecuting the case, but also by the light sentence and liberal privileges granted to Epstein during his jail term. ~ The Washington Post[1068]

Donald Trump’s first choice for Labor Secretary was fast food chain Carl’s Jr CEO Andrew Puzder.

Under Puzder's guidance, Carl's Jr. led the field in unhealthy menu items in an industry that specializes in poison for the poor. He then packaged it in porn; television ads so controversial, it cost him several positions. Although Puzder didn't see any conflict with his Catholic religion, the other members of the Board of Trustees at Thomas Aquinas University did and forced him off.

> Under Puzder's leadership, CKE Restaurants, which owns Carl's Jr. and Hardee's restaurants, launched several racy ad campaigns featuring women in bikinis eating burgers. ...
>
> In one 2003 ad featuring Hefner, the Playboy founder responds to a question about having favorites while standing with his girlfriend and two Playboy Playmates, according to reports in the L.A. Times and in AdWeek. ~ CNN[1069]

Unfortunately, Puzder was a little too greasy even for Congress.

Instead, Trump replaced him with a shoo-in: an up-and-coming United States Attorney who once clerked for Opus Dei Roman Catholic Supreme Court Justice Samuel Alito.[1070]

That was Alexander Acosta and the Senate confirmed him with a solid 60-vote majority (with less than 100 showing up to work on 26 April 2017).

Once Donald Trump got into office, "#PizzaGate" was made to go away, kept alive only by a handful of "alternative media" personalities.

Perhaps the one who has gotten the most face-time is David Seaman; another Jew in journalism.[clii]

Seaman has claimed to be one of the first to break the "PizzaGate" story online. His YouTube About profile boasts 150,000 subscribers and an overall view count of just under 18 million — 12 million since the last quarter of 2016.[1071]

For "alternative media", Dave Seaman has quite an extensive mainstream resumé.

> I report the truth. Often socially liberal, fiscally conservative, and curious. Always human. Former contributor: Huffington Post, Business Insider. Maybe you've seen me on as a guest in the past: ABC News Digital, Coast to Coast, CNN Headline News, BBC, HuffPost LIVE, The Young Turks, or Fox News.[1072]

As investigators have found, "mainstream media" is locked down extremely tight. Can someone who hasn't been vetted as trustworthy with the Machine Agenda appear on CNN, FoxNews, the Huffington Post or the BBC?

We would add another venue David seems reticent to admit; he's also been with Alex Jones…more than once.[1073]

Although David claims that he was terminated from the Huffington Post for simply questioning Hillary's health[1074], he's still listed as an author.[1075]

Of all the reasons to be "terminated", "Hillary's health" is the most banal and least harmful to the Pedocracy if further discussions ensued. Should David have been terminated for questioning Hillary Clinton's role in raping and murdering children or her empowerment (along with her Jesuit-trained husband) by Central Intelligence Agency drug running into the continental United States, that might have raised too many eyebrows.

The tactic of garnering sympathy because he appears to have been terminated from mainstream media for daring to bring up such a critical issue to Americans as Hillary's health seems to have worked well for Seaman.

He may not go for real "alternative" topics but what Dave does like to push are investments in Bitcoin and gold. Both are frequent traps for unsuspecting truth-seekers to fall into. Assuming a Machine big enough to control the banking of the most powerful nations in existence wouldn't have an interest in "crypto-currency" is the height of foolish naiveté. The pitfalls of investing in precious metals are just as many.[1076]

Seaman is an expert in self-promotion and propaganda. In 2008, he stated in an interview with Business Beat Live, "I would protest gravity if I thought it was going to get me a buzz."[1077]

It was an interesting claim to make for someone supposedly of the "truth community".

But as far as hawking goes, David Seaman is more than just a promoter of Bitcoin, he's an investor and close confidant of the major holder behind Bitcoin's parent company "Goldmoney", Roy Sebag.[1078] When Sebag (an Israeli Jew) popped up out of nowhere to purchase Goldmoney, investors were deeply concerned. Had they been aware of the history of banking — invented by the Templars then perfected by the Bardis, Gondis, Peruzzis and Medicis of Italy, they would look more to Rome than Tel Aviv for answers.

Perhaps most troubling of all is the location of Goldmoney's corporate headquarters in Saint Helier, Jersey.[1079] It's a 15 minute drive from the Haut de la Garenne Children's Home where children were raped mercilessly by Jimmy Savile and others.

In fact, the remote location of Jersey makes it a rape hell for children all over the island; including (and especially) at the Catholic orphanage run by "compassionate" nuns.

> The serial abuser Jimmy Savile was among those accused of attacks at Haut de la Garenne and at a home on the island run by French Catholic nuns, the Sacre Coeur orphanage. Wilfred Krichefski, a Jersey senator and TV executive, now [conveniently] dead, was also named as an alleged abuser. ...
>
> One man said senior boys used a generator to administer electric shocks to younger children and threw darts at them. A girl is said to have been punished by having to spend a night in a room with the body of a dead nun. ...
>
> A former female resident said Haut de la Garenne was evil. "It was the place where all the abandoned children were put. It was the kind of place that everyone was dumped," she said.
>
> One man alleged he was raped repeatedly by Krichefski and another man – whom he knew only as "the posh bastard" – in the early 1960s

at Haut de la Garenne. He said the senator told him: “Be a good boy and do as you are told otherwise you will never go home.”

A woman described an incident in which three men in their 30s, “scruffy looking with Jersey accents”, came into the dormitory one night and raped a girl in turn, egging each other on. She said they returned on four or five occasions.

Former Haut de la Garenne residents said they were abused by Savile. One said the television star sexually assaulted him between eight and 12 times in a camper van parked in the home’s grounds.

Haut de la Garenne was by no means the only home where abuse took place, the inquiry was told. A woman who was a resident of the Jersey Home for Girls in the 1940s told how she used to be taken by a female member of staff to a man’s office, where she was sexually assaulted and raped by him.

Another resident of the girls’ home said she was punished by being taken down into the cellar, having her clothes removed and being beaten with fresh stinging nettles.

At the Sacre Coeur orphanage, one woman said, if a child wet the bed they would be put on a chair with their pants on their head. The other children would then be told to form a circle around the child and the nuns would lead a rhyme in French, ridiculing them.

A woman said she was abused by Savile at the orphanage in 1969. She said she reported it to a nun but had her mouth washed out with soap and was told never to speak to anyone about it. ...

Physical and psychological abuse ranged from having mouths washed out with carbolic soap to being beaten with stinging nettles, the inquiry heard. Some of the abuse was carried out by older children with the [direction] of staff. ...

Lenny Harper, who was deputy police chief at the time of the Haut de la Garenne searches, claimed during the inquiry that the abuse of children on Jersey was systemic. ~ The Guardian[1080]

The fact that the older children were directed to conduct the abuse was premeditated and chilling. It was not the product of whimsical perversion.

By including the older children in the abuse, victims are trained to accept it as older children are seen as “one of us”.

It also gave the nuns, priests and administrators plausible deniability; “We didn’t abuse anyone.”

Worst of all, it brings a new generation into the Devil’s Simulation.

How is this possible...?

*****

Chapter 32

CONCLUSION

NOW: An important question remains to be answered ... perhaps one of the most important.

How is it that, after being tortured, raped and abused, some children become dysfunctional perhaps to the point of suicide yet some are strengthened; sadder, wiser, mature?

How is it that, after being tortured, raped and abused, some children become whistleblowers and activists, determined to tear down the Pedocracy while others join it, seeking to rain down the terror they once felt themselves?

— Because even victims have free will.

Although they may be trapped to experience the trauma, what they do with it afterward is up to them.

What will you do with this information?

Will you bury it and put it aside because, deep down, it touches upon perversions and lusts you wish to nurture rather than deny?

— Or will you have empathy for the vulnerable and the defenseless?

They are desperate for men and woman of conscience and integrity.

Surprisingly, this is the most powerful weapon available to tear down the Devil’s Simulation. Despite its control of all government, judiciaries, police departments and armies, it cowers at the approach the Righteous.

It is time to make a whip of knotted cords and start flipping tables in the Temple.

In fact, it’s long overdue.

About the Author

Giovanni Augustino "Johnny" Cirucci is a veteran of the Army and Marine Corps. He has served overseas as part of the "Global War on Terror."

His derivation is 100% Italian, 4th generation immigrants. His family settled in the Philadelphia metropolitan area, on the New Jersey side. He was raised "Conservative" and Catholic; an upbringing that encouraged him to "give back" with service in the United States military.

Johnny's home life was difficult. His abusive father left when he was 20 and it gave him a rebellious nature that was quick to question authority.

Johnny went off to college as a non-practicing Catholic. There he began blogging and wrote columns for his University newspaper.

A conversion experience at a local Evangelical church brought him back home as a Born Again Christian.

Frustrated with the hard-Left slant of "mainstream" media, he gravitated towards "Conservative" outlets.

However, the advent of Barack Obama in general and Obama's "killing" of Osama bin Laden, in specific, showed Johnny that "Conservative" media was just another side of the same Machine coin. Those on the "Right" refused to adequately investigate Barack Obama's shady background. When they maintained the official story regarding the "death" of Osama bin Laden, it was the end of Johnny's dependence upon them. He had insider information from his military connections that confirmed bin Laden's "death" was a Psychological Operation by the United States government against American citizens.

This pushed Johnny into the realm of "alternative media" where he stayed for about 2 years.

However, Johnny eventually learned that so-called "alternative media" was just as controlled as "mainstream media". It was completely owned by Machine agents who gave the same information day after day.

The operatives in “alternative media” presented varying levels of truth at a greater rate than “mainstream media” but were always careful not to expose “the grand scheme”.

Sometimes, however, Machine agents of disinformation get caught in their own game. One such agent helped Johnny put together the pieces of the puzzle that pointed towards Rome as the top of the “New World Order” pyramid.

An ardent researcher, Johnny quickly verified some astounding facts and found that, historically, Christians considered Rome the great Whore of Babylon and the Pope as anti-Christ.

When one of his web site columns on the subject did very well, he knew he needed to turn the information into a book.

That was Illuminati Unmasked, published in 2015.

The following year, Johnny published Secret History, divulging the detailed background to Illuminati.

As a passionate Born Again Christian, Johnny has doggedly searched for and disclosed the Truth. It was this obsession that helped him uncover the Devil’s Simulation and his faith in Jesus Christ that gave him the courage and determination to share it with you.

ENDNOTES

[i] The history texts tell us that Guillotin left the Company but this is propaganda. He never renounced his service to them and their causes as did true “ex-Jesuit” Alberto Rivera. This tactic is often used as cover and was done for Father Adam Weishaupt and Father Malachi Martin.

[ii] — The process of manipulating an unsuspecting subject group to go in a direction they do not wish to by creating a problem (thesis) then also creating the solution (antithesis) thereby herding the subjects, seemingly of their own volition, to enter into a situation that is harmful to them (synthesis). It is named after German philosopher Georg Wilhelm Friedrich Hegel although Hegel never specifically listed the formula as such.

[iii] All three of the supposed “non-Catholics” given the Order in January of 1998 by John Paul II — Rupert Murdoch, Roy Disney and Bob Hope — were arch villains for the Papacy. Each has gone all in on the Devil’s Simulation, personally participating to sign their contracts.

[iv] Irishman Thomas John Barnardo of the “Plymouth Brethren” was yet another dupe and Protestant patsy for the child sex slave trade of the 1800s. There were several, such as Annie Macpherson, Maria Rye, William Booth and John Middlemore; all with “chequered” histories, themselves. The very premise that Christians believed that children without guardians should be subjected to the dangers and upheavals of being trafficked to uphold imperialism and slavery is patently absurd — again, the reaction admitted by the Australian government of the New England Puritans to the practice bears this out.

[v] At this time, the “Grand Master” of the Knights of Malta was Matthew Festing from “Protestant”, “Anglican” England. Festing “sacked” his “Foreign Minister” (remember, the “Sovereign Military order of Malta” is “sovereign”) Albrecht von Boeselager because von Boeselager was supposedly behind Knights handing out condoms in Myanmar (formerly Burma). How or why the Knights were in Myanmar handing out condoms wasn’t addressed by the media, probably because they have a lock on “news” with “Knights” like William Hearst, Henry Luce, Rupert Murdoch, Leo Kirch and many others.
Condoms are a big Catholic no-no (even when given to “heretic” Burmese) but progressive Papa Francisco sided with von Boeselager, took over leadership of the KoM and forced Festing to resign. What was really going on is anyone’s guess. For more, see — Vatican Takes Over Leadership of Knights of Malta Chivalric Order After British Grand Master Resigns in Acrimonious Battle Over Condoms, Nick Squires, Telegraph, 25 January 2017

Why Is Myanmar Ethnic-Cleansing Muslims? Johnny Cirucci, Johnny Cirucci.com, 1 May 2017

[vi] Apparently, in Ireland, when a crime is committed it must fall under a very specific label to be recognized and addressed...at least that’s the case whenever the Catholic Church is the perpetrator.

[vii] If a career woman’s maiden name is important for any reason (it actually isn’t unless one is trying to make the case for how blue her blood is) the traditional way to present it is preface it with the French “née” to avoid confusion.

The modern convention purposely seeks confusion by writing the maiden name as an un-hyphenated middle name.
This is simply another battle front in the real war on Divinely-defined gender.

[viii] This surprising statement makes my point: did you know that “Goldberg” was “more common stock” than “Gelernter”?
Did you care?
What kind of person does?

[ix] Ferrie was thoroughly Jesuit-trained both in high school (St. Ignatius High, Cleveland), and college (John Carroll University, Cleveland) but he attended the Francis de Sales Seminary of St. Mary’s which is also in Cleveland.

[x] This, too, is subterfuge. When Harvard students train to be “leaders”, they do so at the feet of the Jesuit White Pope.
Harvard Students To Visit Vatican, Meet Pope, Caroline S. Engelmayer, The Harvard Crimson, 3 March 2017

[xi] It’s important not to give Kinsey any credibility with an excuse like “Ralph Voris was always ‘gay’ so it was a mutual attraction with an age difference.” When predators latch on to prey their “grooming” and manipulation is often strong enough to destroy a victim’s identity.
Kinsey was already a master manipulator, trained in psychology with a specialty in “conditioned responses”.

[xii] Reisman doesn’t mention this but it’s a foregone conclusion that a monster like Kinsey also offered his children to “special guests”.

[xiii] Given Steward’s resemblance to Johnny Depp’s pirate “Jack Sparrow” this may provide you a different experience watching any of Disney’s myriad “Pirates of the Caribbean” movies.

[xiv] Exempli gratia: the University of San Francisco is the city’s premier college and one would assume, with that name, it was public but, in fact, it’s a Jesuit institution. The 27th President of U. of S.F., Father Stephen Arena Privett, S.J., was the personal mentor of 52nd Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, pro-homosexual agenda, pro-abortion Democrat Nancy Pelosi. In 2010, Pelosi turned control of the House over to her “opponent”, Jesuit-trained Republican John Boehner. In 2015, Boehner turned the gavel over to Wisconsin Congressman Paul Ryan; yet another Roman Catholic whose roots run all the way back to his many years as an altar boy.

[xv] Even this moniker is propaganda. “Rent-boy” implies somewhat-willing, paid adult homosexual prostitutes. The victims at these locations are neither adult, willing nor paid.

[xvi] The controversy surrounding homosexuality is made many times worse than necessary from these same Luciferian Elites seeking to cause as much division as is possible. Instead of rational conversations over how one defines normal sexual relations, provocateurs stir irrational hatred to encourage chaos and distraction.
The irony is that the majority of these agents and their masters are, themselves, homosexual and often proceed out of self-loathing.

[xvii] Remember, von Ballusek tortured hundreds of children over decades but the German media "widely covered" the rape and murder of little Loiselotte Has.
In America, Rome had a stranglehold on media with Knights like Henry Luce and William Randolph Hurst.
She managed the same in the birthplace of the Reformation with counterparts like devout Roman Catholic Leo Kirch. Born in the Jesuit stronghold of Bavaria, Kirch's "Kirch Group" made him the man who cleared any topic Germans were allowed to read. Kirch died in 2011. His funeral was held at the Jesuit cathedral of St. Michael in his home of Bavaria ("Munich") and was attended by his close friend, German Chancellor Helmut Kohl ... also a devout Roman Catholic though a "secret" one.

[xviii] Because this is clear evidence of a child sex slave trafficking network, Knight of Malta, Order of St. Gregory, Rupert Murdoch's Fox News altered the original Associated Press report to say only "magazines of naked women". [Alleged Victims of Pedophile Priests say Pope Francis was Made Aware in 2014, unattributed, Fox News, 23 December 2016]

[xix] Although we can't know the parameters of weapons like super-computers that "predict the future" there are always limitations and unforeseen pitfalls.
In the service, we called this part of the "Military Decision-Making Process" the understanding that "the enemy gets a vote".
The enemy of the Devil's Simulation is you.
How will you vote...?

[xx] George Gordon Battle Liddy was sentenced to 20 years for his role in Watergate but his sentence was commuted by President Jimmy Carter to 8 years. He served 4.

[xxi] There's only one "Francis" Catholics are thinking of when they name their children.
Reilly attended St. Francis Xavier University in Nova Scotia, Canada. Wikipedia lists the university named after the co-founder of the Jesuits as "Public Liberal Arts" with "Roman Catholic affiliation".

[xxii] NOTE: prolonged tenure in prison is not "justice". It is a vicious system of penal corruption...but that's a different book to be written.

[xxiii] Despite repeated attempts to interview anyone on the Spotlight staff then or now, attorney Mitchell Garabedian or anyone representing the poorly-named "SNAP" (Survivors Network of those Abused by Priests) none of the author's calls or e-mails were acknowledged.

[xxiv] For more on the treason and battles fought over positions like the Archbishop of Canterbury, read Secret History, Cirucci, CreateSpace (2016).

[xxv] Like aristocratic royalty, the proper way to acknowledge a Cardinalcy is to place the title after the first name as is done for "Lords"; for example "Alfred Lord Tennyson".

[xxvi] Again, in Boston, Cardinals are lower case.

[xxvii] It certainly wasn't a "disaster" in Law's eyes: the goal was to provide Geoghan with fresh, unsuspecting children to prey upon and that is exactly what happened.

[xxviii] Normally, a single murder as a “crime of passion” wouldn’t bring such a stiff penalty in far-Left Roman Catholic Massachusetts but murdering a homosexual on the make steps over the line.

[xxix] This is the same YouTube which instantaneously cripples the author’s videos upon upload under the guise of “copyright infringement”.

[xxx] Remember, this is under the guise of a “secular State” which means that in the absence of an acknowledged source of values the most powerful force remaining usurps authority. Rome knows this which is why she has used her traitor agents to manufacture the myth that a “secular State” does or can work. The solution is not “separation of ‘church’ and State,” it is a true Christian State that actively fights all other influences.

[xxxi] To add to the satanic serendipity, Cathy O’Brien stated that there was a Top Secret CIA / NASA mind control torture facility at Offutt. Transformation of America, O’Brien and Philipps, Reality Marketing (1995), p. 119 [digital]

[xxxii] Crowley did not found the OTO but he did take it over and fundamentally alter it.

[xxxiii] The brutal exploits of “Charlie’s Girls” would be further glorified by Hollywood — by implication, of course — with the television series created by Aaron Spelling (born of Polish Jewish immigrant parents in Texas) titled “Charlie’s Angels” which began in 1976. Three female police academy graduates are dissatisfied with their assignments and are recruited by “Charlie” to become private investigators where they are appreciated and empowered.

[xxxiv] All of the footnotes trace back to Vincent Bugliosi’s book. He basically wrote the entry for Wikipedia.

[xxxv] Hat/tip to my friend Rob Hase. This story was Divinely appointed as it came just when I had finished the Chapter on Manson.

[xxxvi] Coincidence? Three key nuns all with the names of men.

[xxxvii] Now look back on your “secular” schooling and wonder if your teacher wasn’t an incognito priest or nun.

[xxxviii] This has been a hook that has entrapped many, many people into some form of false “mother goddess” worship.

[xxxix] Requiring a “priest” or “priestess” to be celibate is an ancient pagan practice that guarantees funneling millions of clergy into the Devil’s Simulation.

[xl] Making little girls “altar-servers” has served the same purpose as making women soldiers; more victims for the Luciferians to feed upon.

[xli] The reporter was John Schwartz, a Jew. His Jewish Editor Jill Abramson was replaced in 2014 by Catholic-educated Creole, Dean Baquet. However, the Roman-selected Jewish hand at the Times has always been firm. Generations of Sulzbergers — Arthur Ochs Junior and Senior — have always made sure the Pope’s false reality is what you read of in “the Old Gray Lady”.

[xlii] With amazing uniformity — CBS, Associated Press, NY Times — all state “the victim’s claims were never substantiated”.
Happy birthday, America.

[xliii] Although usury banking was invented by the Templars (also in the service of the Papacy), it was the Medicis who “mastered” it ... not the Jews.

[xliv] Keogh girls related “older nuns were much more authoritarian. You couldn’t even approach them.”

[xlv] McGuire simply continued on in the exact same capacity as when he was Police Commissioner: as an oath-breaking foreign enemy agent whose loyalty ran behind the citizens of New York City straight to Rome.
This relationship was found again in how “secular” Penn State dealt with its pedophilia scandal. More on that in Chapter 30.

[xlvi] Again we see the role “secular” Johns Hopkins plays in educating Catholic scholars and rapists.

[xlvii] Did the license plate say, “CHURCH $”? —or perhaps “CROOK’D”.

[xlviii] Although Augustine (inspiration for the author’s middle name) is lauded by both Protestants and Catholics, an excellent case can be made for his sincere Born Again conversion. Saint Thomas Aquinas, on the other hand, was a Roman through-and-through and was personally responsible for the betrayal and death of William Tyndale — recognized even by his foes as a great man of God. For more on both, read my book Secret History.

[xlix] No idea what that means. Guess I need to spend $60,000 and 6 years at Johns Hopkins to find out.

[l] I received this information from a Jesuit informant who was “in the know”. The “drowning” was a cover-up.

[li] Ostensibly, the explanation for both was due to “pending legal action”.

[lii] Four overt complaints and a “number of concerns” far underestimates the true scope of Walsh’s serial predations but it does serve to show any objective authority he was not to be trusted around unsuspecting families.

[liii] This is an instance of Walsh being protected even by the Murphy Report where the initial of his pseudonym, “Fr. Jovito”, was used.

[liv] As much as a monster as Walsh was, the Murphy report continued to go to great lengths to protect his identity giving him cover twice over by only using the initial of his pseudonym.

[lv] The implication by the Murphy Report that the Archdiocese was oblivious as to Walsh’s whereabouts is patently absurd.

[lvi] After all this time, the serial monster received a “review” regarding his performance!

[lvii] It would appear that the Gardaí are, themselves, criminally incompetent! (Or, more likely, carefully infiltrated with pedophiles dedicated to the Devil’s Simulation.)

[lviii] One is always suspicious of a Catholic facility named “Saint John” as it is a gnostic / Luciferian / Templar belief that John the Baptist was the true Messiah and Yeshua of Nazareth an imposter.

[lix] Again, this is criminal negligence on behalf of the Gardaí, reinforced by the Murphy Report.

[lx] Satanic serendipity? The attacks of 9/11 also interrupted the investigation by the Boston Globe Spotlight team into the systemic pedophilia of the Boston Archdiocese.

[lxi] Ireland’s 3rd President, Éamon de Valera was born “Jorge de Valero” in New York City in 1882. Valera doesn’t seem the perfect pick for a pivotal politician to help form the Free Irish State unless your intent was to secretly subvert it.
Even Wikipedia is forced to use the word “devious” when referencing his life and political agenda.

[lxii] Cooney actually says “to defend ‘Catholic Ireland’ from the liberal wiles of The Irish Times, Trinity College, and the Communist Party” but this is a grossly negligent characterization, perhaps on purpose.
McQuaid committed unbelievable crimes against the Irish people and Rome owns both mainstream media and the Communist agenda as we’ve shown you here and in previous works.

[lxiii] This chapter was written in large part by the research assistance of Felipe Robles.

[lxiv] The use of the term “Reformation” instead of “Protestant” implies the agenda of “reforming” Catholicism and eventually returning to the “Mother Church”.

[lxv] I was just becoming prominent then and had made some public statements regarding Hovind’s eminent release in July of 2015. I was shocked when Reilly got in touch with me and a little unnerved when he began following me via social networking.

[lxvi] — The Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George, The Royal Victorian Order (signified by its Templar cross) and The Most Excellent Order of the British Empire (also with an equilateral gnostic / Templar cross). Hayman was a right proper decorated paedophile.

[lxvii] The misrepresenting of “Catholic” as Christian is a frequently-used propaganda trick although a few misguided Catholics actually believe it to be true.

[lxviii] This descriptor is purposefully misleading and implies that anyone who holds Right-minded values is incapable of change or independent thought. The reverse is true of “Liberal”. Leftists are spun as “Liberal” or “Progressive” which means they are “open-minded”.
The keepers of the Devil’s Simulation own our very language and do all they can to give themselves the advantage.

[lxix] If a teenage boy is murdered by strangulation, there is no “probable” about it. The force necessary would clearly leave ligature marks. We already have questions about the coroner’s work and signs of a cover-up.

[lxx] “Believed to be dead”? Does the Daily Mail not have employees known as “journalists” to check the whereabouts of a notorious “paedophile”?!

[lxxi] This implies little Vishal’s remains were completely decomposed but that could not occur in just a few months’ time (especially through an English winter). He was dismembered. Whether he was still alive when it happened, one shudders to think yet that is what these monsters did and still do.

[lxxii] Both Wachowski brothers, Andy and Lawrence, (who also authored the movie The Matrix) have undergone “gender reassignment”. One can only guess if they have been subjected to “mind control” attacks, chemical, technological or otherwise, that forced this upon them as “punishment”.

[lxxiii] Here again is the misleading propaganda implication that these crimes are “historical”.

[lxxiv] For some reason, major papers weren’t interested in this story.

[lxxv] Certainly, with the side-panel of putrid pop-culture porn the Mail sports each day, it’s tough to even criticize the stellar institution’s methods.

[lxxvi] Said “report, exclusively obtained by” Knight of Malta Rupert Murdoch’s “Sky News” has disappeared. The author has sent a request directly to the Shirley Oaks Survivor’s Assocation. The result was the same when he reached out to the Survivor’s Network of Those Abused by Priests: no response.

[lxxvii] Uncited assertions in this section are taken from documentary Who Took Johnny (2014), written and directed by David Beilinson and Michael Galinsky.

[lxxviii] Multiple attempts to correspond with Noreen Gosch, either e-mail or by phone, remain unacknowledged.

[lxxix] Even years after, it still seems surreal for the father of a kidnap victim to laugh about the corruption of a government official sworn to find his missing son and is possibly complicit in the crime.

[lxxx] She apparently maintains her married name despite the divorce.

[lxxxi] There were actually three.

[lxxxii] Regnum Christi is Latin for “Kingdom of Christ”. The movement is as inversely-named as the “Society of Jesus” or the “Patriot Act”.

[lxxxiii] Outside of Catholics the only other kind allowed are subservient Jews.

[lxxxiv] At no point was Maciel accused of embezzlement. The statement that he “siphoned Legion funds” is more spin designed to distract from the fact that the “humble” pedophile priest lived more luxuriously than most Heads of State.

[lxxxv] Recall that Terri Schiavo was starved and dehydrated to death under the watchful eye of Knight of Columbus John Ellis “Jeb” Bush Sr. — a devout, “Pro Life” Roman Catholic who was, at that time, the Governor of Florida.

[lxxxvi] It’s no coincidence that “the Company” is a euphemism for both the Central Intelligence Agency and the “Society of Jesus”.

[lxxxvii] Appropriate choice.

[lxxxviii] Hat-tip to my good friend Rob for this story.

[lxxxix] Hat-tip to my partner Felipe for starting the research on this.

[xc] John Forbes Kerry, Roman Catholic, Yale Skull and Bones ’66: he is the Vatican puppet responsible for the smoke and mirrors that was the Senate “investigation” of Iran/Contra. The crux of that outrage wasn’t the illegal weapons trading as much as it was CIA drug-running.

[xci] Recall that the inversely-named “Patriot Act” was ready and waiting, having been crafted by Georgetown Law Professor Viet D. Dinh.

[xcii] Hat/tip to our beloved “REPLY ALL George”.

[xciii] These restrictions not only create more Catholics but more victims for Rome’s evil agenda. Note how the very critical differentiation over post-conception “birth control” (abortion) is never made in these efforts.

[xciv] The radical Left always speaks in code because being honest shows their depravity. Defiling the Sacrament of Marriage by recognizing the coupling of homosexuals becomes “marriage equality”. We’ll see more of this double-speak shortly from Jesuit “America Magazine” (they’re so proud of their secret control). Truly such double-speak can be appropriately called “Jesuitical”.

[xcv] “America Magazine”: the Jesuits do so enjoy flaunting their control.

[xcvi] Surf internet videos for something like “Donald Trump motorboat into fake breasts of Rudy Giuliani.” Yeah...I wish I were kidding.

[xcvii] I want to make it very clear that what America needs is not “separation of” (small “c”) “church and State” but separation of Vatican and State; essentially separation of Satan and State. Values (and power) must come from a trustworthy source and there is none better than true Christianity.

It is shocking to see supposed Vatican-fighters like the Seventh Day Adventists touting the Luciferian line that promotes the myth of a “secular State” ... until one comes across the influence of Freemasonry on the Adventists from their founding through today.

[xcviii] If you think the release of this endless “sneak attack” on the 68th anniversary of Pearl Harbor (an assault known of well in advance by Luciferian Freemasons like Franklin Roosevelt and Winston Churchill) was a “coincidence”, then you don’t know Rome.

[xcix] See Frederick Tupper Saussy’s Rulers of Evil about the Roman machinations behind the American Revolution in general and even the direct Jesuit involvement with the American flag in specific (starting around page 189).

[c] Poorly put but purposeful choice, we’re sure.

[ci] “Multiple Personality Disorder” now called “Dissociative Identity Disorder”.

[cii] Ian Paisley’s antics often passed into outrageous and it is entirely possible that he, too, secretly worked for Rome.

[ciii] Saussy’s work on this is excellent [Rulers of Evil, Chapter 9]. Italian Jesuit Eusebio Kino (1645 – 1711) fathered the American trade in cattle and his example was used to fabricate the “cowboy” genre of movies that helped establish the industry. As Saussy points out, it was another false reality which encourages the viewer to believe man can live a disciplined, upright life without the guidance of Jesus Christ or the Bible. To this day, “Kino” in German means “cinema”.

[civ] Neither “journalists” nor “law enforcement” should ever mock any accusation no matter how outlandish. They maintain a public trust to dispassionately investigate. Emotional statements of derision about seemingly “crazy” stories are symptomatic of corruption and cover-up.

[cv] Jewish sources on persecution oddly mislabel it “Christian” when it is clearly the military / political entity that is the Roman Catholic Church. Are they still serving Rome while feigning to decry her crimes? Many Jesuit-trained atheists, like François-Marie “Voltaire” Arouet have done the same.

[cvi] This is not to be confused with Donald Trump’s Secretary of Defense, United States Marine Corps General James Norman Mattis. Mattis is also a devout Roman Catholic whose unmarried “dedication” to “service” has earned him the title of “Warrior Monk”.

[cvii] “NeoCon” or “NeoConservative” are fabricated buzzwords for any Machine apparatchik who pushes “new” wars against innocent, stable Muslim nations.

[cviii] Stitt went out of her way to blame Omaha child sex abuse on only one man: Lawrence King. She enjoyed a full career at her position. Not surprisingly, Stitt ignored attempts by the author to contact her.

[cix] Just as important to the Luciferian Elite was the negative as well as positive war propaganda. In fact, in relation to the unbelievable futility traitor Roman agents created for the Vietnam war, it was more so.

[cx] The face of Magdalen is “public” or “Anglican” but it was founded by Catholics, is run by Catholics and has an unmistakable Catholic tradition.

[cxi] Another Roman Catholic monster named after the co-founder of the Jesuits.

[cxii] And yet, it is a tried and true tactic of Rome to own both her allies and her supposed, apparent enemies.

[cxiii] Any sexual activity between an adult and a minor is evil but it takes a special kind of monster — devoid of all human compassion — to violate a pre-pubescent child, or a toddler or an infant.

[cxiv] In his testimony, David Ridsdale was very deliberate to differentiate his uncle from the "Ridsdale" family, hence the use of his "Christian" name, "Gerald".

[cxv] "Right of the first night": the right of any member of the Elite to take the virginity of a bride on her wedding night. Sources like Wikipedia claim it is a myth which, perhaps, makes it even more sinister and plausible.
Regardless, this is exactly what pedophile priests do anyway! They steal the innocence and virginity of children long before they are ever wed as if it's their right and Vatican authorities agree it is.

[cxvi] The excess of "..." marks are the result of purging the citation of blatant emotional defense of the Fosters — again signs that both Broken Rites and the Fosters are not what they appear to be.

[cxvii] Interesting that Briggs kept her married name in light of the stupidity that she blamed the "patriarchy" of the Catholic Church for the Vatican's crimes. Either the "children's advocate" was completely oblivious to the collusion of nuns and women in abuse or she was yet another highly-regarded agent of disinformation.

[cxviii] Fiona, like her friend David Shurter, refuses to acknowledge this author or this effort to out the monsters they supposedly fight against.
It's OK to be afraid, but it's not OK to make yourself a public figure and then give cover to the very criminals you claim you are trying to expose.
That makes you no different from them.

[cxix] "PizzaGate Wiki" states Helen Holowczak [was] possibly Jelena Milewska Holowczak.

[cxx] "Piotr Holowczak" from the same PizzaGate Wiki entry.

[cxxi] The "Hunger Games" books and movies, themselves, draw red flags. For instance, author Suzanne Collins is from Newtown, Connecticut, the location of the 2012 Sandy Hook false flag. Actress Jennifer Lawrence, star of the movie series, has been rumored to have immersed herself (either voluntarily or involuntarily) into mind-controlled sexual perversion and deviancy. Sometimes victims are granted fame as a "reward", sometimes they sell themselves for it.

[cxxii] A "Fellow" of the "Royal Society of Literature".

[cxxiii] The same is true of Irish Protestant firebrand Ian Paisley.

[cxxiv] Audacious inversion of reality used as propaganda.

[cxxv] This is not an angle that Barnett pushes strongly and we feel we know why.

[cxxvi] Perhaps part of why "James Shanahan's" narrative is still appealing to Roman manipulators (and why it's allowed to be promoted) is because he also claims that "Satanic cults" are within the Catholic Church and not the very foundation of that religion...which they are.

[cxxvii] Hat/tip to our beloved "REPLY-ALL George".

[cxxviii] Perpetual imprisonment is not "justice". Such inhumane depravity is a product of corruption previously used by tyrants through history against political or personal enemies.
In ages past, thieves were forced to make restitution even if it required slavery until the debt was met. Murderers were executed. Rape, manslaughter and other crimes had varying punishments based upon the integrity of the jurors.

[cxxix] This is the second story I found in reference to the kidnapping, abuse and ritual slaughter of Polly Klaas published on the 4th of July, 1996. The other was from the Los Angeles Times.
As I noted in the bibliography, this is not a coincidence. The Pedocracy wants America to know what it has created for her legacy of "Independence".

[cxxx] I believe the family left "the Family" before Liberty was around to be raped.

[cxxxi] Odd how "Wikipedia" lets that slip by.

[cxxxii] Hey, two "head pats" counts as two "blessings".
In seriousness, the description shows that, despite thousands in attendance, Montini knew to linger on the cultists for full effect.

[cxxxiii] Both as legitimate backlash for crimes committed by the cult and as cunning enablement; as media Knights know — controversy brings popularity.

[cxxxiv] While filming the 1992 movie, Phoenix bonded with elder co-star Dan Aykroyd. Aykroyd was raised devout Roman Catholic and even spent time in a seminary, intending to become a priest, before dropping out in favor of the entertainment industry.

[cxxxv] Mary-land plantation owner Daniel Carroll (1730 – 1796) was one of the most powerful Roman Catholics of the American Revolution. As Wikipedia notes; he served in the Confederation Congress, was a delegate to the Philadelphia Convention of 1787 which wrote the Constitution, and was a U.S. Representative in the First Congress. Daniel Carroll was one of five men to sign both the Articles of Confederation and the Constitution.
Not only do we think that the chances of the two Carrolls being related are very high, they both serve(d) Rome with equal vigor.

[cxxxvi] At this writing, Waxman has spent a sickening forty two years ensconced and entrenched as a far-Left Jewish Congressman of the United States representing California's 33rd District.
This is even more disgusting when one realizes Representatives are up for re-election every two years.

[cxxxvii] As I recall my service in Iraq and the extreme difficulty of "Stability and Support Operations" under RoE identical to what McChrystal set in Afghanistan, the emotions are hard to describe.

— But they start somewhere around “rage”.

[cxxxviii] “Fraudulent” right down to the name, itself. All carefully planned that way.

[cxxxix] The classic profile of a sadistic bully, these are the ones who urinate and defecate themselves the second they fall into the hands of their enemies.

[cxl] The practice is as old as “civilization” itself and far more common than the average citizen knows. For an insight into the usage, see the 2011 Lee Tamahori movie The Devil’s Double: the story of Saddam Hussein’s son Uday as seen through the eyes of his double.

[cxli] The fact that “public servants” spend lifetimes in office committing such treason is, itself, sickening.

[cxlii] “News media” is the second favorite place for Luciferians to prop up “Papal Court” Jews — Hollywood being the first. The NY Times has been maintained by the Sulzbergers since 1896 and, like Luciferian-collaborating tribal Jews everywhere else, they always empower other Jews in their employ. Very little Roman oversight is needed — emplace the right traitor Jew and they remain loyal to spreading Luciferian lies while simultaneously engendering anger at their own tribalism.
They are the perfect patsies.

[cxliii] It’s instructive to note that even though a Jew wrote the story, the Romans still left their fingerprints: heartfelt photographs of the participants and their families were taken by Kirsten Luce.

[cxliv] Nickname for the tyrannical monster the Catholic Church inflicted upon the Haitian people: François “Papa Doc” Duvalier. It aptly describes what Rome has done to Haiti through the French, the Spanish and her traitor puppets in the United States.

[cxlv] Note that this sickening outrage was only given local media coverage.

[cxlvi] Rome is decades beyond owning key officials at the national level.

[cxlvii] The radical Leftists at the Daily Kos, perhaps under Vatican direction, did spin this information as a “vast, Right-wing, ‘Christian’ conspiracy”.

[cxlviii] Maybe this is why they wouldn’t publish me...

[cxlix] The Leftist Jews at the Times spun Nathanson as “anti-abortion” rather than “pro-life” which I omitted. Yet he still played on the same team as they do. He started his medical career as a pro-abortion “atheist Jew” until he became a pro-life converted Opus Dei Roman Catholic.

[cl] Why would a Hollywood comic Jew need the Georgetown SFS? — So that he could be read-in on the propaganda priorities for his Papal puppet-masters.

[cli] We’re not sure how Edgar Maddison Welch got his AR-15 into a city where reading a gun magazine on the commode is probable cause for D.C.’s woman Police chief to dispatch a SWAT team. But “AR-15s” are the boogey-weapon of choice when pulling false flags.

[clii] Information on David Seaman gathered by “Joseph”.

---

[1] The Two Babylons, Alexander Hislop, open source, 1858, Chapter II, Section II, Sub-Section V, The Deification of the Child.

[2] Illuminati Unmasked, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2015), p. 590

[3] Animal and human castration in Sumer, Part II: Human castration in the Ur III period, Kazuya Maekawa, Journal of the Research Institute for Humanistic Studies, Kyoto University (1980), pp. 1–56

[4] Castrato, Wikipedia,

[5] Decline; Castrato, Wikipedia
Note the Roman propaganda which states —
The rumours of another castrato sequestered in the Vatican for the personal delectation of the Pontiff until as recently as 1959 have been proven false. The singer in question was a pupil of Moreschi's, Domenico Mancini, such a successful imitator of his teacher's voice that even Lorenzo Perosi, Direttore Perpetuo of the Sistine Choir from 1898 to 1956 and a lifelong opponent of castrati[clarification needed], thought he was a castrato.
Yeah. I'll bet “clarification needed”...a lot. No other footnotes, as well.

[6] What's So Great About Eunuchs? Meurig Bowen, The Guardian, 27 March 2006

[7] ibid

[8] ibid

[9] Pope Urged to Apologise for Vatican Castrations, Rory Carroll, The Guardian, 14 August 2001

[10] ibid

[11] ibid

[12] Dutch Roman Catholic Church ‘Castrated at Least 10 Boys’, Bruno Waterfield, Telegraph, 19 March 2012
“At Least 10...”
Really?

[13] ibid

[14] ibid

[15] Apollyon Rising 2012: The Lost Symbol Found and the Final Mystery of the Great Seal Revealed, Thomas Horn, Defender Publishing (2009), pp. 169-172

[16] McChrystal's Social Liberalism and the Integration of Gays in the Military, Marc Ambinder, The Atlantic, 24 June 2010

[17] Secret History, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2016), pp. 507-508

[18] Secret History, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2016), p. 509

[19] Illuminati Unmasked, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2015), pp. 248-250

[20] The Different Faces Of Clayton Hartwig, George C. Wilson, The Washington Post, 10 September 1989

[21] Secret History, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2016), p. 79

[22] Secret History, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2016), pp. 491-503

[23] Jesuits Behind Politics, Amazing Discoveries, 19 August 2010

[24] Romanism and the Reformation; from the Standpoint of Prophecy, Henry Grattan Guinness, A.C. Armstrong, New York (1887).
Digital pages in my version clearly won't match any hard copies but this passage is found in Chapter 2: The Daniel Foreview of Romanism, Second Part.
Paragraph breaks added for ease of reading and emphasis.

[25] The Pagan Roots of Easter, Heather McDougall, The Guardian, 3 April 2010

[26] The Gregorian Calendar vs Gods Holy Calendar, Rev James Talbott, NavigatingThroughProphecy.com, 17 October 2013

[27] The Sacred Sex and Death Rites of the Ancient Mystery Groves, article was extracted from The Sacred Sex Rites of Ishtar: Shamanic sexual healing and sex magic, by Ishtar Babilu Dingir, Ancient Origins, 9 October 2014

[28] ibid

[29] Secret History, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2016), pp. 404, 405

[30] Roman's Palace of Deparavity, Zoe Brennan, Daily Mail, 18 August 2006

[31] Secret History, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2016), pp. 154-160

[32] The Torture and Death of Saint Simon of Trent, "from the Sacred Liturgy: Auferte gentem perfidam credentium de finibus (Take the faithless tribe from the borders of the believing)", unattributed, undated
Not surprisingly...absolutely diseased, naked, Roman anti-Semitism!

[33] Secret History, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2016), pp. 106-107

[34] Events; Simon of Trent, Wikipedia

[35] Simon (Simedl, Simoncino) of Trent, Joseph Jacobs and Aaron Tänzer, the 1906 Jewish Encyclopedia (unedited)

[36] Strange bedfellows? Joseph Farah, WorldNetDaily, 12 May 2006
It tickles me greatly to use the material of one muck-racking Roman “Conservative” fraud (Joseph Farah) against another (Rupert Murdoch).

[37] Caped crusaders: What really goes on at the Knights of Malta’s secretive headquarters? Evgeny Lebedev, the Independent, 28 March 2014

[38] Pope Honors Rupert Murdoch, Roy Disney, Bob Hope, John Dart, the Los Angeles Times, 3 January 1998

[39] Eichman and Soros: A Case in Perfidy, LaRouche Political Action Committee (LPAC), Executive Intelligence Review, 15 July 2008
Lyndon LaDouche: another Papal puppet!

[40] Secret History, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2016), pp. 514-515, 516, 519, 520

[41] Call for Pope to Reveal Hidden Holocaust Children, Hillel Fendel, Arutz Sheva 7, 22 April 2009

[42] 1946 Letter From the Vatican, NY Times, 8 January 2005

[43] Jewish Children Hidden Twice Over by the Church, Rebecca Benhamou, The Times of Israel, 27 May 2013

[44] Il prete che giustifica i pedofili, La7.it, 10 June 2015
English subtitles currently available here; Pedophile Priest Confessions, Alessandro Benigni, YouTube, 6 October 2015

[45] CHURCH SHOCKER: Gay and pedophile priests sent to monastery for ‘sex cures’, unattributed, Catholic Online, 6 October 2015

[46] Illuminati Unmasked, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2015), pp. 313, 315, 320

[47] Good British Stock: Child and Youth Migration to Australia, unattributed, undated, National Archives of Australia: Government of Australia
Very professionally done, Bruce.
— Not.

[48] ibid

[49] ibid

[50] ibid

[51] Isis Unveiled: A Master-Key to the Mysteries of Ancient and Modern Science and Theology, Volume II – Theology, Helena Petrovna Blavatsky, Theosophical University Press (1877), pp. 351, 354

[52] Masonic Catholic Priest at Piazza Del Gesu Grand Lodge of Italy in Rome, Troy Space, 5 January 2009
Not surprisingly, the original post has been marked "PRIVATE" but it has been archived here.

[53] Good British Stock

[54] ibid

[55] ibid

[56] Hundreds of Child Sex Abuse Complaints Made Against Christian Brothers, Royal Commission Hears, Melissa Davey, The Guardian, 21 February 2016

[57] ibid

[58] ibid

[59] ibid

[60] Good British Stock

[61] Rome; History; Sovereign Military Order of Malta, Wikipedia

[62] Sovereign Military Order of Malta, Wikipedia

[63] Latest News: International Children's Day Conference Raises Awareness, unattributed, Order of Malta, Grand Priory of England, 1 June 2017

[64] "Together we must succeed…" Hospitaller magazine, Winter 2016, p. 4

[65] Secret History, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2016), pp. 6-7, 7-8

[66] A life unlived: 35 years of slavery in a Magdalene Laundry, unattributed, The Journal, 30 September 2012

[67] Irish Woman Who Was Adopted as a Child by Paedophile Says Nuns Condemned Her to Years of Sexual Abuse, Ruth Styles, Daily Mail, 18 September 2014

[68] ibid

[69] ibid

[70] ibid

[71] A life unlived: 35 years of slavery in a Magdalene Laundry, unattributed, The Journal, 30 September 2012

[72] Column: 'How we survived, I'll never know' – a Magdalene survivor's story, Kathleen Legg, The Journal, 6 June 2012

[73] "It Will Be With Me Until The Day I Die", Naomi Greenaway and Luisa Metcalfe, Daily Mail, 26 May 2015

[74] Column: 'How we survived, I'll never know' – a Magdalene survivor's story, Kathleen Legg, The Journal, 6 June 2012

[75] ibid

[76] "It Will Be With Me Until The Day I Die"

[77] ibid

[78] ibid

[79] ibid

[80] ibid

[81] Sisters of Charity to be given new National Maternity Hospital, Patsy McGarry, The Irish Times, 18 April 2017

[82] Senior doctor resigns over plan to hand Dublin hospital to order of nuns, Henry McDonald, The Guardian, 27 April 2017

[83] 300,000 Babies Stolen From Their Parents — And Sold For Adoption, Polly Dunbar, Daily Mail, 16 October 2011

[84] Franco and the Catholic Church, unattributed, Spain Then And Now, undated

[85] Priest Linked To Franco To Be Canonised, Stephen Bates, The Guardian, 21 December 2001

[86] The Scientific 100, John Simmons and Lynda Simmons, Kensington Publishing Corp. (2000), p. 450

[87] History of Medicine and Bioethics Lectures, October 29, Stony Brook University, 23 October 2015

[88] Kinsey: Crimes & Consequences, Judith Reisman, The Institute for Media Education (1998), p. 4
Actually, Reisman is here citing the Yorkshire/BBC4 documentary Kinsey's Paedophiles but, interestingly, Reisman had access to the unedited version as I don't recall Jones being this honest. In fact, what I saw as the end result was criminally hacked and anemic. Probably because there are quite a few “paedophiles” at Yorkshire and “BBC4”.

[89] UnSpun 031 – “Alfred Kinsey and the Peddling of Pedophilia”, UnSpun, Gnostic Media, 20 July 2016

[90] This has been wiped from the internet...but I got a screen shot! Write me and I’ll gladly share.

[91] Jesus Never Existed, Rome Never Fell, Joe Atwill Ryan Gilmore 6Sep2013, Vinny Eastwood, YouTube
Vinny Eastwood: fraud and cockroach whom I have personally called out for ... being a fraud and a cockroach!

[92] Kinsey: Crimes & Consequences, Judith Reisman, The Institute for Media Education (1998), jacket, pp. xiv, xv

[93] Comprehensive Sex Ed Based on Debunked Studies by “Psychopath” Scientist, Media Expert Says, Resty S. Odon, CBCP News for Life, 31 January 2012
Archived by Reisman, here.

[94] Exposing Kinsey Sex Atrocities Goes Global, Bob Unruh, WorldNetDaily, 14 January 2012

[95] E. Michael Jones, the Newest Anti-Semite on Iranian TV, Aryeh Tuchman, JHate, 28 May 2011

[96] Pat Buchanan: Anti-Semite, Ben Shapiro, FrontPage Mag, 1 March 2012

[97] Kinsey: Crimes & Consequences, Judith Reisman, The Institute for Media Education (1998), pp. xvii-xviii

[98] ibid, p. 5

[99] ibid, p. 5

[100] ibid, p. 5

[101] ibid, p. 5

[102] ibid, pp. 6-7

[103] ibid, p. 8

[104] ibid, p. 10

[105] ibid, p. 10

[106] ibid, pp. 11-12

[107] Personal life; Marriage and family; Alfred Kinsey, Wikipedia

[108] Kinsey, Reisman, p. 12

[109] ibid, pp. 12, 13

[110] ibid, pp. 13-14

[111] ibid, p. 83

[112] 50 Cent: "I'm in love with Helen Mirren", unacknowledged, Hollywood.com, undated
Who needs to know the details on such an epic piece?!!

[113] Kinsey, Reisman, p. 83

[114] It's Time To Ditch The Dirt, Jonathan Gathorne-Hardy, London Independent, 10 August 1998

[115] Kinsey, Reisman, p. 19

[116] The Case for Dr. Kinsey, Paul A. Robinson, May 1972, The Atlantic
Thanks scumbag, we don't need to "make the case" for that monster.
Only from the diseased Leftists at "The Atlantic".

[117] Kinsey, Reisman, p. 16

[118] ibid, p. 16

[119] ibid, p. 20

[120] ibid, p. 72

[121] ibid, p. 286

[122] ibid, p. 30

[123] ibid, pp. 9-10

[124] ibid, p. 71

[125] Secret History: Kinsey's Paedophiles, Yorkshire Television, BBC4, 1998

[126] Alfred C. Kinsey: A Public/Private Life, James Howard Jones, Diane Publishing (1997), pp. 605-614, 669-684, 755

[127] Kinsey, Reisman, p. 31

[128] ibid, p. 35

[129] ibid, p. 74, 75

[130] Secret History, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2016), pp. 567-580

[131] Sex the Measure of All Things: A Life of Alfred C. Kinsey, Jonathan Gathorne-Hardy, Indiana University Press (1998), p. 233
Indiana University — just so helpful.

[132] Lover Man: The Samuel Steward Story, Brooks Peters, Huffington Post, 19 August 2010

[133] Life and career; Samuel Steward, Wikipedia

[134] Kinsey, Reisman, pp. 75-76

[135] Life and career; Samuel Steward, Wikipedia

[136] Kinsey, Reisman, p. 81

[137] Lover Man: The Samuel Steward Story, Brooks Peters, Huffington Post, 19 August 2010

[138] Kinsey, Reisman, p. 77

[139] Alfred C. Kinsey: A Public/Private Life, James Howard Jones, Diane Publishing (1997), p. 607

[140] Kinsey, Reisman, pp. 35-36

[141] ibid, p. 65

[142] ibid, p. 36

[143] ibid, pp. 38-39

[144] ibid, p. 42

[145] ibid, p. 50

[146] Secret History: Kinsey's Paedophiles, Yorkshire Television, BBC4, 1998

[147] Kinsey, Reisman, p. 60

[148] ibid, p. 66

[149] ibid, p. 92

[150] Fr. Hesburgh Took Notre Dame Off Course, Super User, The New American, 29 May 2009
"The New American" is the publication of the John Birch Society, yet it prints anonymous Catholic outrage. No surprise as the "Birchers" were secretly controlled by Rome.

[151] Kinsey, Reisman, pp. 176-177

[152] ibid, pp. 192-193

[153] Illuminati Unmasked, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2015), p. 699

[154] Death; Personal life; Antonin Scalia, Wikipedia

[155] Education; Brian P. Monahan, Wikipedia

[156] Former Victim Claims Scalia Was a Pedophile, Makia Freeman, The Freedom Articles, undated

[157] Scalia Sleeps With the Fishes, Gordon Duff, Veterans Today, 17 February 2016

[158] A New Chapter I Just Wrote for An Upcoming Book… David Shurter, DavidShurter.com, 1 January 2017

[159] The Franklin Cover-Up: Child Abuse, Satanism, and Murder in Nebraska, John W. DeCamp, AWT, Inc. (1992), pp. 2-5

[160] Radicals on the High Court, Mike Whitney, CounterPunch Magazine, 17 January 2004

[161] Opus Dei Influence Rises to the Top in the Vatican, Betty Clermont, Daily Kos, 6 April 2014

[162] Neil Gorsuch Belongs to a Notably Liberal Church — and would be the First Protestant on the Court in Years, Julie Zauzmer, Washington Post, 1 February 2017
To be sure, Julie Zuazmer didn't write the headline. That was probably a different Papal Court Jew.

[163] Evidence Voluminous But Tricky, Karen Augé, Denver Post, 14 October 1999

[164] Ramsey grand jury accused JonBenet's parents in death, but prosecutor declined to bring charges, unattributed, Fox News, 25 October 2013

[165] Kinsey, Reisman, p. 62

[166] ibid, p. 63

[167] ibid, p. 78

[168] ibid, p. 95

[169] ibid, p. 99

[170] ibid, pp. 101-102

[171] ibid, pp. 106-107

[172] Nature, Science and Dr. Kinsey, Geoffrey Gorer, found in Sexual Behavior in American Society, Himelhoch and Fava, W.W. Norton & Co. (1955), p. 52.

[173] Kinsey, Reisman, p. 107

[174] ibid, p. 111

[175] ibid, p. 117

[176] American Eugenics: Race, Queer Anatomy, and the Science of Nationalism, Nancy Ordover, University of Minnesota Press (2003), p. 94

[177] Kinsey, Reisman, p. 24

[178] Secret History: Kinsey's Paedophiles, Yorkshire Television, BBC4, 1998

[179] ibid

[180] ibid

[181] Kinsey, Reisman, p. 136

[182] ibid, p. 136

[183] ibid, p. 137

[184] ibid, pp. 164-165

[185] Secret History, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2016), pp. 518-522

[186] Illuminati Unmasked, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2015), pp. 75-79

[187] Kinsey, Reisman, p. 165

[188] ibid, pp. 165-166

[189] Illuminati Unmasked, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2015), pp. 44-46

[190] Illuminati Unmasked, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2015), pp. 90-91

[191] Vatican Archbishop Defends Cathedral's Pornographic, Homoerotic Mural as 'Evangelizing' Tool, Pete Baklinski, LifeSiteNews, 7 June 2017

[192] Archbishop Paglia Lays Out His Vision for the Pontifical Academy for Life, Edward Pentin, National Catholic Register, 6 June 2017

[193] Pro-Abortion Theologian Picked as Pontifical Academy for Life Member, Edward Pentin, National Catholic Register, 13 June 2017

[194] Vatican Archbishop, LifeSiteNews

[195] Kinsey, Reisman, p. 166

[196] ibid, p. 167

[197] ibid, p. 281

[198] Illuminati Unmasked, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2015), pp. 512, 513, 514-515

[199] Kinsey, Reisman, p. 279
This is worth the price of Reisman's book; no one else of her caliber acknowledges that is what Crowley was doing.

[200] Aleister Crowley and the Temptation of Politics, Marco Pasi, Routledge (2014)

[201] An Alfred Kinsey-Aleister Crowley Connection? Chas Clifton, Letter from Hardscrabble Creek, 9 May 2015

[202] Two Faces of Freemasonry, John Daniel, DAY Publishing, 3rd Edition (2007), p. 41

[203] Kenneth Anger, Wikipedia,

[204] Bloodlines of Illuminati, Fritz Springmeier, Pentracks Publications (1995), p. 46

[205] Secret History: Kinsey's Paedophiles, Yorkshire Television, BBC4, 1998

[206] The priest who abused deaf boys for 24 years, Andy McSmith, The Independent, 27 March 2010

[207] Exiled Pedophile Priest May Have Continued Abuse, Susan Saulny and Laurie Goodstein, the NY Times, 2 April 2010

[208] ibid

[209] ibid

[210] ibid

[211] Mea Maxima Culpa: Silence in the House of God, Alex Gibney, HBO, 2012
Currently, a copy can be found on YouTube, here.

[212] Paedophile Priest was Given Post at School for the Deaf, Antony Barnett and Ali Beach, The Observer (reposted here by The Guardian), 5 August 2006

[213] ibid

[214] ibid

[215] ibid

[216] Illuminati Unmasked, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2015), p. 102

[217] Catholic Church Decided Not to Unfrock Priest Who Abused Deaf Boys, Jonathan Wynne-Jones, Telegraph, 10 April 2010

[218] Calif. Priest Raised Concerns Early in Career, unattributed, CBSNews / Associated Press, 12 April 2010

[219] Text of 1985 Letter from Future Pope Benedict on California Sex Abuse, “the most Reverend Excellency” Joseph Cardinal Ratzinger, Prefect for the Congregation of the Doctrine of the Faith, Telegraph, 09 Apr 2010

[220] ibid

[221] Pope Benedict Accused of Delaying Unfrocking of Sex Abuse Priest, Tom Leonard and Nick Squires, Telegraph, 09 Apr 2010

[222] Two Priests in Argentina Arrested over Alleged Abuse of at least 22 Children at School for the Deaf, unattributed, Associated Press / Catholic Herald, 6 December 2016

[223] Alleged Victims of Pedophile Priests say Pope Francis was Made Aware in 2014, unattributed, Fox News, 23 December 2016

[224] Angel from Hell, Timothyna Duncan, Daily Mail / Associated Press, 6 May 2017

[225] Two Priests in Argentina, Associated Press

[226] ibid

[227] Alleged Victims of Pedophile Priests, Fox News

[228] Illuminati Unmasked, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2015), p. 323

[229] Angel from Hell, Daily Mail

[230] Alleged Victims of Pedophile Priests, Fox News

[231] Two Priests in Argentina, Associated Press

[232] Victim critical of pope on abuse asked to leave Vatican commission, Inés San Martín, Crux, 6 February 2016

[233] No Mercy for Sex Abuse Victims, Elizabeth Yore, The Remnant, 2 January 2017

[234] Exiled Pedophile Priest May Have Continued Abuse, Susan Saulny and Laurie Goodstein, the NY Times, 2 April 2010

[235] Exiled Pedophile Priest May Have Continued Abuse, Susan Saulny and Laurie Goodstein, the NY Times, 2 April 2010

[236] Sex Abuse Scandal in US, Italy Taints Papacy, Nicole Winfield, Associated Press / The Boston Globe, 26 March 2010

[237] ibid

[238] Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, Wikipedia

[239] Sex Abuse Scandal in US, Italy Taints Papacy, Associated Press

[240] Did Pope Benedict XVI's Brother Run a Sadistic Sex Camp for Choirboys? Barbie Latza-Nadeau, The Daily Beast, 09 January 2016

[241] ibid

[242] Vatican defends decision not to defrock priest accused of molesting deaf boys in Wisconsin, unattributed, The Associated Press, posted at Syracuse.com, 25 March 2010

[243] How Rich is the Vatican? So Wealthy it Can Stumble Across Millions of Euros just "Tucked Away", Shane Croucher, International Business Times, 5 December 2014

[244] Heart condition improving then, George? Frank Coletta, Daily Mail, 10 May 2016

[245] The Computer that Predicts the Future, Charlie Brooker, the Guardian, 11 September 2011
You better believe that this story being published on "September 11th" of 2011 was not a "coincidence".

[246] Can Supercomputers Predict the Future? Tiffany Trader , HPC Wire, 12 September 2013
Let's put the "coincidence" to bed with this story published on September 12th of 2013!

[247] The majority of references from this chapter come from the 2010 documentary The Lolita Riddle, produced by "CutSnake" in collaboration with Nabokov scholar Joanne Morgan. An online version is posted at the YouTube channel McNab342 which has no other activity save to "like" the music video "Breath Me" by Fingersmith — a video with a near-explicit lesbian sex scene.

[248] Nabokov's Butterflies: The Lolita Author's First, Fluttering Love, Ella Morton, Slate.com, 18 August 2014
Almost sixty years later perverts in "mainstream media" are still fawning over this shit.

[249] Vatican Assassins, 3rd Edition, Eric Jon Phelps, Lowvehm (2007), pp. 36, 601
If you follow me, you know I have first-and experience with the Jesuit who calls himself "Eric Jon Phelps" but he's effective because he's about 85% truth / 15% bullshit.

[250] Trance Formation of America, Cathy O'Brien and Mark Phillips, Reality Marketing (1995), pp. 77, 78, 81, 84
NOTE: These are the digital pages of my copy and will not match hard copies.

[251] (U) Symbols and Logos Used by Pedophiles to Identify Sexual Preferences, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Intelligence Bulletin, Cyber Division, Innocent Images National Initiative, 31 January 2007
Currently archived here.

[252] FBI pedophile symbols, Wikileaks

[253] Revealed: The symbols that pedophiles use to signal their sordid sexual preferences on social media, Mia De Graaf, Daily Mail, 26 April 2016

[254] "To Protect and Serve…" Pedophiles, Felipe & Johnny Cirucci, JohnnyCirucci.com, 2 March 2017

[255] "Hurricane Lolita", Steve King, Barnes & Noble Review, 18 August 2011

[256] 50 Years Later, 'Lolita' Still Seduces Readers, unattributed, NPR, 15 September 2005

[257] Liddy as Teen-ager Was Intense and Tenacious, Philip Wechsler, NY Times, 27 August 1973

[258] The Last Confession of E. Howard Hunt, Erik Hedegaard, Rolling Stone, 5 April 2007

[259] My Friend, E. Howard Hunt, William F. Buckley Jr., LA Times, 4 March 2007

[260] CNN LIVE TODAY, Daryn Kagan, transcript, aired 9 December 2005

[261] Skull linked to secret Yale society to be sold, unattributed, AP / NBC News, 5 January 2010

[262] The Lolita Riddle, "CutSnake" in collaboration with Joanne Morgan, 2010

[263] BBC Investigates Whether Lewis Carroll Was "Repressed Paedophile" After Nude Photo Discovery, Hannah Furness, The Telegraph, 26 January 2015

[264] ibid

[265] Kinsey: Crimes & Consequences, Judith Reisman, The Institute for Media Education (1998), p. 65

[266] This Club Had Its Own Chairman And Treasurer. Its Business Was Child Abuse. Martin Bright and Tracy McVeigh, The Observer, 10 February 2001, archived here by The Guardian (because we don't want to lose any opportunities to blow bullshit and smoke about the authorities seeming to do their job...but not really).

[267] ibid

[268] ibid

[269] ibid

[270] ibid

[271] Old Stories: Pedophile Rings With Links To Portugal, Postado por Fernando Moura às Domingo, Portuguese Lost Children, 23 de Setembro de 2007

[272] This Club Had Its Own Chairman And Treasurer. The Observer

[273] 1993 child sexual abuse accusations against Michael Jackson, Wikipedia

[274] ibid

[275] Death and memorial; Michael Jackson, Wikipedia

[276] Newly Surfaced Police Reports Detail Michael Jackson's Disturbing Pornography Collection, Laura Bradley, Vanity Fair, 21 June 2016

[277] New Book Alleges Walt Disney Was A Gay Pedophile, Vickie Chang, OC Weekly, 9 August 2010

[278] Famous American Freemason: Tom Mix, Todd E. Creason, undated, Midnight Freemasons.org

[279] Calling on Disney to Clean Up, Judie Brown, The Free Lance-Star, 15 September 1995

[280] GILMER v. WALT DISNEY COMPANY (1996), United States District Court, W.D. Arkansas, Fayetteville, Justia.com

[281] When the Religious Right Attacked 'The Little Mermaid', Asawin Suebsaeng, The Daily Beast, 20 November 2014

[282] Lawsuit Claims Disney Apps Track, Collect Kids' Digital Information Illegally, Asher Klein, NBC 4 New York, 7 August 2017
"Advertising" is the tip of the sinister pyramid.

[283] "I Was Molested And Passed Around", Chris Spargo, Daily Mail, 26 May 2016

[284] Corey Feldman Claims Pedophilia in Hollywood, ABC News, 10 August 2011
This is a video. I typed the transcript myself. Can't remember who the snapperhead host was, don't fucking care.

[285] The Monster Of Neverland: How JM Barrie Did A "Peter Pan" And Stole Another Couple's Children, Tony Rennell, Daily Mail, 8 July 2008

[286] 7 Dark Secrets About The Real Peter Pan Include Suicide And Pedophilia, unattributed, She Knows, 08 December 2016

[287] The Monster Of Neverland: How JM Barrie Did A "Peter Pan" And Stole Another Couple's Children, Tony Rennell, Daily Mail, 8 July 2008

[288] Robin Williams' Death Ruled Suicide, Matthew Stucker, CNN, 11 November 2014

[289] Hidden Adult Messages You Probably Missed in Disney Movies, unattributed, Memes.com, 2015
Sorry, no specific date listed.

[290] Summary of Baconian Evidence for Shakespeare Authorship, lawrencegerald33@yahoo.com, Sir Bacon.org, undated but with 32 footnotes (asshole)

[291] Francis Bacon and the James 1st Bible, A. E. Loosley, Sir Bacon.org, undated

[292] Secret History, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2016), pp. 113-129

[293] Clement Freud, Wikipedia

[294] Emails Between "Paedophile" Clement Freud And Madeleine McCann's Parents To Be Probed For Child Sex Abuse Inquiry, Sam Webb, Mirror, 20 June 2016

[295] Jimmy Savile, Wikipedia

[296] The missed chances to get Jimmy Savile, Dominic Casciani, BBC, 12 March 2013
Do these sound like "missed chances" to you? Should we check for a Jesuit in the woodpile of "Dominic Casciani" of the BBC?

[297] Girls' school head won't be charged over Savile, Chris Greenwood and Richard Spillett, Daily Mail, 29 April 2015

[298] BBC inquiry into Jimmy Savile scandal 'to stay secret', Alice Philipson, Telegraph, 28 November 2012

[299] The Yew: Sacred Tree of Transformation and Rebirth, Glennie Kindred, White Dragon.org, 1997

[300] Trees and Religion – Paganism, unattributed, Arboriculture, 16 October 2016

[301] Operation Yewtree, Tom Eames, Digital Spy, 20 May 2015

[302] Censored, Savile's private letters to Mrs. Thatcher, Claire Ellicott, Daily Mail, 27 December 2012

[303] Jimmy Savile was part of satanic ring, James Fielding, Express, 13 January 2013

[304] Jimmy Savile and the Cardinal: Britain's top Catholic cleric was friend of disgraced TV host, Steve White, Mirror, 26 February 2013

[305] ibid

[306] Britain's top Catholic Cardinal steps down amid accusation of "inappropriate acts", Steve White, Mirror, 25 February 2013

[307] Jimmy Savile Sex Scandal: DJ was Devout Catholic who Attended Mass Frequently, Hannah Osborne, International Business Times, 2 July 2014

[308] Jimmy Savile's Obituaries Mentioned His Charity Work But Why The Conspiracy Of Silence About His Faith? William Oddie, Catholic Herald, 7 November 2011
Sorry, but God has a sense of humor — look at this frigging guy's last name!

[309] When Jimmy Savile died, I reproached his obituarists for their cover-up of his faith. Now I have to ask: what was he thinking of during daily Mass? William Oddie, Catholic Herald, 15 October 2012
He was thinking exactly what he was supposed to be, Bill.

[310] Biography; Martin Baron, Wikipedia

[311] 789 Children Abused by Priests Since 1940, Massachusetts Says, Fox Butterfield, The New York Times, 24 July 2003

[312] Priest In Boston Child Rape Case To Be Released From Prison This Week, Denise Lavoie, Press Herald, picked up by the Associated Press, 25 July 2017

[313] Shanley Attended NAMBLA Meeting, unattributed, Fox News, Associated Press, 02 May 2002

[314] ibid

[315] Tom Reeves, 1939 – 2012, unattributed, undated, NAMBLA

[316] ibid

[317] 'We're Back': Allies Of Ousted Aristide Rejoice As Haiti's Interim President Is Sworn In, unattributed, Reuters, 15 February, 2016, taken down by Rutters but re-posted by the South China Morning Post, here!
Fuck you very much.

[318] Haiti Threatens to Expel Jesuits After Seizing Two, unattributed, The New York Times, 10 February 1964

[319] Concordats And Voodoo: Who Controls The Haitian Church? unattributed, undated, Concordat Watch
One of the best articles I've ever seen.

[320] The Vatican: Things Must Change Here, John Kohan, Time, 21 March 1983

[321] Concordats And Voodoo: Who Controls The Haitian Church? unattributed, undated, Concordat Watch

[322] Haitian Prelate Is Under Attack, Marlise Simons, New York Times, 3 April 1986

[323] A Few Facts About Trump's Former National Security Adviser Michael Flynn, unattributed, Sputnik News, 14 February 2017

[324] The Christian Worldview of Mike Pence, Max Perry Mueller, Religion and Politics.org, 10 October 2016

[325] Pence: I Was “Disappointed” With Flynn, Jeremy Diamond, CNN, 20 February 2017

[326] Michael Flynn’s Son And Chief Of Staff Pushed Conspiracy Theories, Obscene Memes Online, Andrew Kaczynski and Nathan McDermott, CNN, 17 November 2016

[327] “If They Knew The Madness In Me” Sally Jacobs, the Boston Globe, 10 July 2002

[328] ibid

[329] Barney Lied: He DID Support the Repeal of Glass-Steagall, unattributed, Lyndon LaRouche Political Action Committee, 22 June 2010
Lyndon LaDouche: another controlled opposition clown but he got there by mixing truth with lies so we’ll take this one for a citation.

[330] Frank’s Fingerprints Are All Over The Financial Fiasco, Jeff Jacoby, Boston Globe, 28 September 2008

[331] “If They Knew The Madness In Me” Sally Jacobs, the Boston Globe, 10 July 2002

[332] ibid

[333] ibid

[334] ibid

[335] ibid

[336] ibid

[337] J.R.R. Tolkien & C.S. Lewis: Jesuit Imagineering, Felipe & Johnny, Johnny Cirucci.com, 16 December, 2016

[338] Shanley Attended NAMBLA Meeting, unattributed, Fox News, Associated Press, 02 May 2002

[339] Church Allowed Abuse By Priest For Years, Matt Carroll, Sacha Pfeiffer, Michael Rezendes and Walter V. Robinson, The Boston Globe, 6 January 2002

[340] ibid

[341] ibid

[342] ibid

[343] ibid

[344] ibid

[345] Geoghan Preferred Preying On Poorer Children, Matt Carroll, Sacha Pfeiffer, Michael Rezendes and Walter V. Robinson, The Boston Globe, 07 January 2002

[346] Church Allowed Abuse By Priest For Years, The Boston Globe

[347] ibid

[348] ibid

[349] Geoghan Preferred Preying On Poorer Children, Matt Carroll, Sacha Pfeiffer, Michael Rezendes and Walter V. Robinson, The Boston Globe, 07 January 2002

[350] Church Allowed Abuse By Priest For Years, The Boston Globe

[351] ibid

[352] Murder; John Geoghan, Wikipedia

[353] ibid

[354] Geoghan Ruling Sparks Anger, Kathleen Burge, Boston Globe, 27 September 2003

[355] Disgraced U.S. Cardinal Bernard Law Quits Rome Post, unattributed, Associated Press, The Guardian, 21 November 2011

[356] ibid

[357] John Podesta Joins The Washington Post As A Contributing Columnist, WashPostPR, The Washington Post, 23 February 2017

[358] I'm In "Spotlight", But It's Not Really About Me. It's About The Power Of Journalism. Martin Baron, The Washington Post, 24 February 2016

[359] Helter Skelter – The True Story of the Manson Murders 25th Anniversary Edition, Vincent Bugliosi and Curt Gentry, W.W. Norton & Company (1994), pp. 136–7
It sure is helpful after representing the State in a high-profile prosecution to go ahead and make a buck off the book afterwards!

[360] 10 Tragic Stories from the Childhood of Charles Manson, unattributed, Chaostrophic.com, 03 September 2016

[361] Gibault School for Boys, Wikipedia

[362] William Heirens, Wikipedia

[363] Romanism: A Menace to the Nation, Jeremiah J. Crowley, Crowley, Wheaton, Illinois (1912), p. 157

[364] Illuminati Unmasked, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2015), pp. 19, 20

[365] Jeb Bush, 20 Years After Conversion, Is Guided by His Catholic Faith, Michael Paulson, NY Times, 17 March 2015

[366] A decade after Terri Schiavo's feeding tube was disconnected, her family's pain lives on, Deborah Hastings, New York Daily News, 17 March 2015
God is keeping a full account of all this. Wanna know how I know? The dates for this story and the Times fluff piece above on "Jeb's" wonderful Catholicism just happen to be exactly the same. Payback's a bitch, "Jeb".

[367] Driver's Licenses for Undocumented Immigrants: Flagler Sheriff Says Yes, But Local Opinion Is Divided, unattributed, FlaglerLive, 26 February 2016
Go figure.
The piece of shit chief law enforcement officer wants to give drivers licenses to any undocumented threat who walks in to the DMV but "some" of the locals aren't enthused.

[368] Charles Manson – Hoosier Juvenile Delinquent, Al Hunter, The Weekly View, 2009, re-posted 22 January 2015

[369] Helter Skelter, Bugliosi Curt Gentry, pp. 136–7

[370] Charles Manson, The Weekly View

[371] "Charles Manson's 63-Year Old BoysTown Mystery", Cathy A. Wyatt, Omaha Lifestyles Magazine, 9 February 2013

[372] "Charles Manson's 63-Year Old BoysTown Mystery", Omaha Lifestyles

[373] That time Charles Manson came to Boys Town, Blake Ursch, Omaha World-Herald, 10 February 2017

[374] ibid

[375] "Charles Manson's 63-Year Old BoysTown Mystery", Omaha Lifestyles

[376] Vatican Assassins, 3rd Edition, Eric Jon Phelps, Lowvehm (2007), p. 45

[377] Martin Bomber Plant near Bellevue helped end World War II and now faces its own demise, Steve Liewer, Omaha World-Herald, 7 August 2015

[378] "Charles Manson's 63-Year Old BoysTown Mystery", Omaha Lifestyles

[379] Charles Manson – Hoosier Juvenile Delinquent, The Weekly View

[380] San Francisco followers; Formation; Manson Family, Wikipedia

[381] San Francisco followers; Manson Family, Wikipedia

[382] Early life; Patricia Krenwinkel, Wikipedia

[383] Involvement with Wilson, Melcher, et al.; Formation; Manson Family, Wikipedia

[384] The Religious Affiliation of Director Roman Polanski, unattributed, Adherents.com, 2 July 2005

[385] The Religious Affiliation of Actress Sharon Tate, unattributed, Adherents.com, undated

[386] Sharon Tate and the Manson Murders, Greg King, Open Road Media (2016)
Digital versions (apparently the only way to get this book even though it appears to be offered in paperback) are all devoid of page numbers but this is about 3 pages in from the Chapter 16: Pregnancy.
If I can get a chapter, I usually count the pages then go to Amazon for a Table of Contents but even here the assholes listed the bloody e-book contents which is about as helpful as Jeff Bezos funding trips to outer space.

[387] Reminder: Roman Polanski raped a child, Kate Harding, Salon, 28 September 2009

[388] Sexual abuse case; Legal history; Roman Polanski, Wikipedia

[389] ibid

[390] Inside Dino De Laurentiis' Funeral, Bill Higgins, Hollywood Reporter, 15 November 2010

[391] "Charles Manson's 63-Year Old BoysTown Mystery", Cathy A. Wyatt, Omaha Lifestyles Magazine, 9 February 2013

[392] Illuminati Unmasked, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2015), pp. 113-120

[393] Viet D. Dinh, profile, Georgetown Law

[394] The Pen Ten With Atticus Lish, unattributed, PEN America, 11 November 2014

[395] Divinity of Doubt: The God Question, Vincent Bugliosi, Vanguard Press (2011), pp. 5-6

[396] Kirkus Review of Taming the Beast: Charles Manson's Life Behind Bars, Amazon.com

[397] Front row; People on the cover; List of images on the cover of Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band, Wikipedia

[398] Illuminati Unmasked, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2015), p. 397

[399] Secret History, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2016), p. 495

[400] Baltimore archdiocese pays settlements to a dozen people alleging abuse by late priest, Alison Knezevich, The Baltimore Sun, 15 November 2016

[401] Buried In Baltimore: The Mysterious Murder Of A Nun Who Knew Too Much, Laura Bassett, Huffington Post, 14 May 2015

[402] 'The Keepers' Director Ryan White: It's not too late to solve Sister Cathy's murder, Stephanie Nolasco, Fox News, 6 June 2017

[403] "The Keepers" Director Reveals Deep Connection to Case, E! Live from the Red Carpet, YouTube, 19 May 2017

[404] Could "The Keepers" Be the Next "Making a Murderer"? E! Live from the Red Carpet, YouTube, 18 May 2017

[405] The Keepers: Episode 3, Directed by Ryan White, Netflix, 2017

[406] The Keepers, Directed by Ryan White, Netflix, 2017
Sorry, missed which episode, I think 2 or 3.

[407] Did the Catholic Church Get Away with Murder? Tom Nugent, Inside Baltimore, 1 October 2014
Nugent is a former Baltimore Sun reporter and "Inside Baltimore" is an independent paper...which is the only way you can read the full details of these abominations.

[408] Buried In Baltimore: The Mysterious Murder Of A Nun Who Knew Too Much, Laura Bassett, Huffington Post, 14 May 2015

[409] The Keepers: Episode 2

[410] Buried In Baltimore, Huffington Post

[411] ibid

[412] ibid

[413] Buried In Baltimore, Huffington Post

[414] ibid

[415] ibid

[416] ibid

[417] ibid

[418] ibid

[419] 10 Murderous Priests, Pastors, And Nuns, unattributed, Viral Top 10s, 10 June 2016
These puds list a bunch of obscure cases of all the other “religions” but none of them end with “the fucking cops ‘lost’ the records so no one was prosecuted” yet this bottoms out at “Number 10”.

10 Thomas Kottur, Jose Puthurukkayil, And Sister Sephy

[420] Unable to Trace Old Files on Sister Abhaya, Says CBI, unattributed, Deccan Chronicle, 16 June 2015

[421] Indian Police Hunt Nuns Accused of Aiding Rapist Priest, AFP (unattributed), Arab News, 6 March 2017

[422] Religion in India, Bing, 2011

[423] U.S. Church Sex Abuse Survivor to Sue Diocese in India for Reinstating Perv Priest, Michael O’Keeffe, New York Daily News, 18 April 2016

[424] Holy Saturday, Wikipedia
The pagan holiday of “Easter” was made never to fall during Passover by Jesuit Luciferian Christopher Clavius, the engineer of our “Gregorian” calendar.

[425] Gerald Robinson, Priest Convicted of Killing Ohio Nun, Dies at 76, John Schwartz, NY Times, 4 July 2014

This monster died on the 4th of July?
Happy Birthday, America.

[426] Justice Story: Killer Priest Murders Nun in Chapel Sacristy, Leaves Demonic Stab Pattern Over Her Heart, David J. Krajicek, New York Daily News, 23 September 2012

[427] Did Diocese Handle Nun’s Death? Mary-Jayne McKay, CBS News / AP, 27 April 2004

[428] ibid

[429] Justice Story, New York Daily News

[430] Did Diocese Handle Nun’s Death? CBS News / AP

[431] ibid

[432] Report: Toledo Cops Refused to Probe Priest Abuse, Madeleine Brand, Day to Day, NPR, 2 August 2005

[433] Did Diocese Handle Nun’s Death? CBS News / AP

[434] Justice Story, New York Daily News

[435] Priest's body exhumed from Randallstown cemetery in investigation of Baltimore nun's decades-old killing, Alison Knezevich, The Baltimore Sun, 4 May 2017

[436] Did the Catholic Church Get Away with Murder? Tom Nugent, Inside Baltimore, 1 October 2014

[437] Buried In Baltimore, , Huffington Post

[438] ibid

[439] Priest's body exhumed, The Baltimore Sun

[440] Buried In Baltimore, , Huffington Post

[441] A Plethora of Catholic Movies Available on Netflix, Patrick Madrid (blogspot.com), 10 July 2010

[442] Priest's body exhumed, The Baltimore Sun

[443] The Keepers: Episode 3

[444] The Keepers: Episode 2

[445] ibid

[446] Buried In Baltimore, , Huffington Post

[447] The Keepers: Episode 3

[448] ibid

[449] Sons of Saint Patrick: A History of the Archbishops of New York, from Dagger John to Timmytown, George J. Marlin and Brad Miner, Ignatius Press (2017), pp. 386-387

[450] The Keepers: Episode 3

[451] The Keepers: Episode 4

[452] Power and Secret of the Jesuits, Rene Fulop-Miller, Viking Press (1930), p. 436

[453] Cain's Creed, Omar Zaid, Zaid (2006) p. 316

[454] Rulers of Evil, F. Tupper Saussy, Ospray (1999), p. 137

[455] The Keepers: Episode 3

[456] The Keepers: Episode 4

[457] ibid

[458] ibid

[459] ibid

[460] The Keepers: Episode 5

[461] Vatican Assassins, 3rd Edition, Eric Jon Phelps, Lowvehm (2007), p. 656

[462] Wounds That Time Won't Heal: The Neurobiology of Child Abuse, Martin H. Teicher, M.D., Ph.D., The Dana Foundation, 01 October 2000

[463] The Keepers: Episode 4

[464] The Keepers: Episode 6

[465] Paedophile Priest Had Links to Other Infamous Child Abusers, Maeve Sheehan, Sunday Independent, 10 July 2016

[466] Ex-Priest Jailed for 16 Years, unattributed, Irish Times, 6 December 2010
If it's not up, you can find it archived here

[467] Recidivism Rates For "Rehabilitated" Sex Offenders Show Treatment Programs Fail: Doctor, Susan Scutti, Medical Daily, 28 January 2015

[468] ibid

[469] Paedophile Priest Had Links, Sunday Independent

[470] ibid

[471] Report by Commission of Investigation into Catholic Archdiocese of Dublin, Chapter 19 Fr Jovito, para 19.74
The Missing Chapter 19 on "Father Jovito" has been archived here.

[472] Ex-Priest Jailed for 16 Years, unattributed, Irish Times, 6 December 2010
If it's not up, you can find it archived here

[473] Monsignor Gerard Sheehy obituary, Monsignor Ralph Brown, Canon Law Society of Great Britain and Ireland, 30 March 2003

[474] Cruel Crimes of the Singing Priest, Patsy McGarry, The Irish Times, 11 December 2010

[475] ibid

[476] ibid

[477] Cruel Crimes of the Singing Priest, The Irish Times

[478] ibid

[479] HSE Tightlipped Over Failure to Pass on McQuaid Sex-Abuse Claim, Paul Melia, The Irish Independent, 9 December 2011

[480] ibid

[481] Irish Archbishop Who Died in '73 Is Linked to Abuse, Douglas Dalby, NY Times, 8 December 2011
By the way, where I inserted "Irish Times disclosed" the actual propaganda from the Catholics and Court Jews at the Slimes was "the newspaper was adamant".

[482] McQuaid has been Betrayed by his own Voluminous Archive, John Cooney, The Irish Times, 7 April 2003

[483] Noël Browne, Wikipedia

[484] Mother and Child Scheme, Wikipedia

[485] McQuaid has been Betrayed by his own Voluminous Archive, John Cooney, The Irish Times, 7 April 2003

[486] ibid

[487] ibid

[488] Secret History, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2016), pp. 56, 66

[489] View from McQuaid's Turret, Jerome Reilly, The Irish Independent, 6 November 1999
A sickening piece of yellow journalism in defense of a monster.

[490] ibid

[491] ibid

[492] Marc Dutroux, Wikipedia

[493] Frank B. Kelso II, Navy's Former Top Admiral, Dies at 79, Matt Schudel, The Washington Post, 25 June 2013
This contradicts the assertion from "user-edited" Lick-My-Pedia which states the yenta from Mexipornia — Barbara "Box-Me" Boxer — led the charge.

[494] Frank B. Kelso II, Navy's Former Top Admiral, Dies At 79, Matt Schudel, Washington Post, 25 June 2013

[495] Milwaukee Ties Unite Largest Midwest Jesuit Class Since 1995, McKenna Oxenden, Milwaukee Journal Sentinel, 8 July 8, 2017

[496] Early life; Early childhood; Jeffrey Dahmer, Wikipedia

[497] Revealing the Twisted Murderous Adventures of Jeffrey Dahmer While Serving in the U.S. Army, unattributed, TheCrimeMag.com, undated

[498] Jeffrey Dahmer, unattributed, U.S. History.com, undated

[499] Jeffrey Lionel DAHMER, unattributed, Murderpedia, undated

[500] Late twenties: subsequent murders; Ambassador Hotel; Jeffrey Dahmer, Wikipedia

[501] I Drank Old Fashioneds Where Jeffrey Dahmer Killed His First Victim in Milwaukee, Nick Woods, Vice "Munchies", 26 October 2015
Reminiscing about what Jeffrey Dahmer did to his victims sure gives me the "munchies", how about you folks?

[502] "Rad Dad Feature: Gavin McInnes", unattributed, Modern Day Dads, 22 July 2014

[503] Concordia University, Wikipedia

[504] Jeffrey Lionel DAHMER, unattributed, Murderpedia, undated

[505] ibid

[506] ibid

[507] ibid

[508] Rulers of Evil, F. Tupper Saussy, Ospray (1999), pp. xiii-XV

[509] Gerald Boyle Takes On Another High-Profile Case — His Own, Bruce Vielmetti, The Milwaukee Journal Sentinel, 11 October 2015

[510] ibid

[511] One Woman's Stand Against College Athletes, Ryan Haggerty, Todd Lighty and Stacy St. Clair, The Chicago Tribune, 28 October 2011

[512] Jeffrey Lionel DAHMER, unattributed, Murderpedia, undated

[513] Nebraskans Vote Overwhelmingly To Restore Death Penalty, Nullify Historic 2015 Vote by State Legislature, Paul Hammel, Omaha World-Herald, 9 November 2016

[514] Nebraska Law Enforcement Speak Out Against the Death Penalty, unattributed, Death Penalty News, 17 October 2016

[515] Jesuit Father Gregory O'Meara Named Rector of Creighton University's Jesuit Community, unattributed, Jesuits.org, undated (which is particularly stupid as the boy-buggerers were reporting their event regarding the great day O'Meara became Rectum)

[516] First Look: Disney Star Ross Lynch Is Notorious Serial Killer In My Friend Dahmer, Clark Collis, MySpace, 8 August 2017

[517] How the Establishment hid the Monster in their Midst, Richard Pendlebury, The Daily Mail, 4 July 2014
Happy Birthday, America.

[518] Illuminati Unmasked, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2015), p. 87

[519] How the Establishment hid the Monster in their Midst, Richard Pendlebury, The Daily Mail, 4 July 2014

[520] ibid

[521] Secret History, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2016), pp. 527-529

[522] Sentencing and release; Geoffrey Prime, Wikipedia

[523] Daily Mail Comment: Can't the Left Ever make a Mistake? Daily Mail Reporter, The Daily Mail, 25 February 2014

[524] The Catholic Roots of Obama's Activism, Jason Horowitz, The New York Times, 22 March 2014
Rome uses Papal Court Jews as gatekeepers and the Slimes is a prime example. Any guesses as to the background of intrepid reporter Jason Horowitz...?

[525] Opus Dei Influence Rises to the Top in the Vatican, Betty Clermont, The Open Tabernacle, 5 April 2014

[526] Family of David Cameron, Wikipedia

[527] How the Establishment hid the Monster in their Midst, Richard Pendlebury, The Daily Mail, 4 July 2014

[528] Peter Hayman named as VIP who Sexually Abused Boys at Dolphin Square Apartment Complex near Parliament, Jennifer Smith, The Daily Mail, 9 November 2014

[529] Leon Brittan's Faulty Memory and a Ticking Timebomb that could shake Westminster, Richard Pendlebury, The Daily Mail, 2 July 2014

[530] Child Abuse Files were dismissed as Fantasies of a Deluded Man, Philip Johnston, The Telegraph, 4 July 2014

[531] Peter Hayman named as VIP who Sexually Abused Boys at Dolphin Square Apartment Complex near Parliament, Jennifer Smith, The Daily Mail, 9 November 2014

[532] Tory MP warned of Powerful Paedophile Ring 30 Years Ago, unattributed, The Independent, 22 February 2013

[533] Leon Brittan's Faulty Memory and a Ticking Timebomb that could shake Westminster, Richard Pendlebury, The Daily Mail, 2 July 2014

[534] Peter Hayman named as VIP, The Daily Mail

[535] ibid

[536] Ex-MI6 Chief Peter Hayman named as VIP who Sexually Abused Boys at Dolphin Square Apartment Complex near Parliament, Editor, The Event Chronicle, 11 November 2014

[537] 2. Alfred Evans, Atlanta's Missing & Murdered

[538] Later developments; Atlanta murders of 1979–81, Wikipedia

[539] Capturing the suspect; Atlanta murders of 1979–81, Wikipedia

[540] The FBI's John Douglas spends his Days profiling Criminals, Susan Baer, The Baltimore Sun, 11 March 1991

[541] Individual cases; Profiling; Career; John E. Douglas, Wikipedia

[542] Thread Of Evidence; May Be Only Link Needed To Solve A Crime, Tom Mashberg, The Boston Herald, 14 May 1995 [archived here]
The idiot who did the Lick-My-Pedia entry simply had "agent Deadman". I thought it was a fucking joke.
I still do, but the "joke" was on Wayne Williams. Not that he isn't a murderer but he almost certainly isn't responsible for the serial-killing.

[543] Trial; Atlanta murders of 1979–81, Wikipedia

[544] Atlanta Child Murders: 'A Question of Justice', Robert Keating and Barry Michael Cooper, Spin, September 1986, [archived here]

[545] Cathy O'Brien & Mark Phillips : ACCESS DENIED For Reasons of National Security, Ed Opperman, YouTube, 30 April 2016

[546] Illuminati Unmasked, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2015), pp. 461, 462, 463, 464

[547] CHAPTER 15: NO MORE BEATING AROUND THE BUSH, Trance: Formation of America, Cathy O'Brien, Mark Phillips, Reality Marketing (2005)
I gave you the chapter as my digital copy page numbers won't match the hard copy. Notice how her Papal handler was there to "help" her write the book.

[548] Atlanta Child Murders: 'A Question of Justice', Robert Keating and Barry Michael Cooper, Spin, September 1986, [archived here]

[549] ATLANTA CHILD MURDERS – Was Wayne Williams Railroaded? Why! T.A.B.A.C.C.O. (Truth About Business And Congressional Crimes Organization) 13 July 2005

[550] Aftermath; Atlanta murders of 1979–81, Wikipedia

[551] The Religious Affiliation of Robert De Niro, Adherents.com

[552] Motion Picture Association of America Ruled by Black Pope's Knights of Malta, Eric Jon Phelps, Vatican Assassins.org, 2 February 2012

[553] ‘Knights Of Malta’ Still on Hold, unattributed, the Malta Independent, 13 February 2005

[554] Early Life; Bob Guccione, Wikipedia

[555] Atlanta Child Murders: ‘A Question of Justice’, Robert Keating and Barry Michael Cooper, Spin, September 1986, [archived here]

[556] The Hedonist: Amsterdam, Matt Farquharson, The Independent, 27 November 2010
This fucktard just loved it. How is this ever considered “journalism” — whether it’s a bullshit “tourist guide” or not?

[557] Amsterdam Statue Honors Prostitutes, unattributed, DutchAmsterdam.nl, undated
These cockroaches are just so proud.

[558] When Sex Abuse Can Lead to Murder, Nick Davies, The Guardian, 26 November 2000

[559] ibid

[560] ibid

[561] ibid

[562] ibid

[563] ibid

[564] ibid

[565] ibid

[566] ibid

[567] Abuse Victims “Trafficked Abroad”, James Hanning and Paul Cahalan, The Independent, 3 February 2013

[568] Timebomb at Elm Guest House, Stephen Wright and Richard Pendlebury, the Daily Mail, 1 February 2013

[569] Abuse Victims “Trafficked Abroad”, The Independent

[570] Timebomb at Elm Guest House, Daily Mail

[571] ibid

[572] Abuse Victims “Trafficked Abroad”, The Independent

[573] ibid

[574] Cyril Smith, Wikipedia

[575] Cyril Smith: Biography, IMDb

[576] Police fears of being branded racist "left grooming gang free to abuse teenage girls for two years," says former Labour MP, Martin Robinson, Daily Mail, 9 May 2012
I don't know what's worse: Limey inability to properly write a headline or juxtaposition and misuse of an apostrophe verses quotes.

[577] Police fears, , Daily Mail

[578] Timebomb at Elm Guest, Daily Mail

[579] ibid

[580] Suspicion and secret confession; Anthony Blunt, Wikipedia

[581] Timebomb at Elm Guest, Daily Mail

[582] ibid

[583] Father Claims Scotland Yard Covered Up Son's Murder by Westminster Paedophiles, Bill Gardner, The Telegraph, 18 November 2014

[584] ibid

[585] ibid

[586] ibid

[587] Illuminati Unmasked, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2015), pp. 409, 410

[588] Father Claims Scotland Yard Covered Up Son's Murder, The Telegraph

[589] Timebomb at Elm Guest, Daily Mail

[590] Grafton Close Care Home Abuse Trial: Catholic Priest's Cleaner "Found Indecent Video", Laura Proto, Your Local Guardian, 16 February 2015

[591] ibid

[592] ibid

[593] ibid

[594] ibid

[595] Ex-Tory Minister “Pictured in Child Sex Abuse Video” Confiscated by Customs at Dover in 1982, Keir Mudie and Mark Conrad, The Mirror, 29 March 2014

[596] Social worker who accused Leon Brittan and other VIPs as being members of an alleged paedophile ring was convicted of fraud in 2011, Sam Tonkin, the U.K. Daily Pornographic Fail, 27 September 2015

[597] “VIP Child Abuse Ring” Accuser Served Time in Prison for Fraud, Robert Mendick, Telegraph, 26 September 2015
Ole Bob “Men-dick” (can’t make this shit up) is listed as the Telegraph “Chief Reporter”! We’re sure there are no little boys in his closet.

[598] What You Didn’t Know About Taxes & The “Crown”, Mark Owen, Conspiracy Archive, 27 January 2005
Bunch of “it’s the Rothschild-Jews!” hysteria but good information ... always is when the Jews are the boogeymen.

[599] Secret History, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2016), pp. 60, 154

[600] Westminster Paedophile Scandal, Samantha Payne, International Business Times, 17 March 2015

[601] Was Council Official Murdered To Stop Him Revealing Those Linked To VIP Paedophile Ring? New Witness Speaks Out. Tom Pettifor, The Mirror, 11 March 2015

[602] The Murder Of Bulic Forsythe, RigInterGrater, YouTube, 17 June 2014
This is the original report by CBS/Warner Brothers in 1993. The Network is known as “CW”.

[603] Children In Lambeth Council’s Care “Abused On Industrial Scale”, Sandra Laville, The Guardian, 24 March 2016

[604] Secret History, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2016), pp. 75, 484-485

[605] Boateng Thought He Was Untouchable, Sarah Oliver, Daily Mail, 3 December 2011

[606] The Salacious Ammo Even Donald Trump Won't Use in a Fight Against Hillary Clinton, Ken Silverstein, Vice, 29 January 2016
Wanna guess the derivation of “Vice’s” Ken Silverstein...?

[607] Council Official Murdered To Stop Him Revealing Ring, The Mirror

[608] Westminster Paedophile Scandal, International Business Times

[609] The Council That Employed An Abuser To Look After Children, Nick Hopkins and Jake Morris, BBC Newsnight, 1 March 2016

[610] ibid

[611] Politician Suspected Of Child Abuse "Would Spend Evenings With Convicted Paedophile", Tom Pettifor, Mirror, 27 April 2014

[612] ibid

[613] ibid

[614] Illuminati Unmasked, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2015), p. 603

[615] Remains of Ten Bodies at Ben Franklin's Home, unattributed, The Sunday Times, 11 February 1998

[616] Freemason; Philadelphia; Benjamin Franklin, Wikipedia

[617] Hellfire Club, Wikipedia

[618] Ex-Catholic Priest Admits Seven Charges Of Child Sex Abuse, unattributed, BBC, 9 August 2016

[619] Lambeth Council To Pay Tens Of Millions To Child Abuse Survivors, unattributed, The Guardian, 15 December 2016

[620] Timebomb at Elm Guest House, Daily Mail

[621] Who Took Johnny, written and directed by David Beilinson and Michael Galinsky, co-directed by Suki Hawley, produced by FilmBuff Studios, 2014

[622] Kidnapping — Federal Jurisdiction 1034, Criminal Resource Manual 1001-1099, Justice.gov

[623] If a child is missing and possibly kidnapped, but no interstate transportation is known, will the FBI begin an investigation? Frequently Asked Questions, About the FBI, FBI.gov

[624] Alisha Owen and Her Involvement with John DeCamp, David Shurter, DavidShurter.com, 5 December 2012
Dave, himself, has played schizophrenic footsie with me for several months now. He is cleared to make the rounds of alternative media frauds because he knows not to bring up the Whore of Babylon. When and if he finds his spine, we'll still be here for him.

[625] The Johnny Gosch Foundation, undated, posted on the home page apparently by Noreen Gosch

[626] Father Skeptical That Johnny Gosch Visited Mother in 1997, Robert Dorr, Omaha World-Herald, 9 February 1999, archived here.

[627] Father Marcial Maciel And The Popes He Stained, Jason Berry, Newsweek, 11 March 2013
The bullshit starts in the fucking headline, "The good Popes this bad apple stained."

[628] Ridding Catholicism Of The Stench Of This Legionary Of Christ, Hugh O'Shaughnessy, The Guardian, 21 September 2011

Yes, Irish Catholic fucktard, so you can make Catholicism “pure” again, like it was...never.

[629] Head Of Worldwide Catholic Order Accused Of History Of Abuse, Gerald Renner and Jason Berry, Hartford Courant, 23 February 1997

[630] Father Marcial Maciel And The Popes He Stained, Jason Berry, Newsweek, 11 March 2013

[631] Ridding Catholicism Of The Stench Of This Legionary Of Christ, Hugh O’Shaughnessy, The Guardian, 21 September 2011

[632] Father Marcial Maciel And The Popes He Stained, Newsweek

[633] ibid

[634] ibid

[635] Head Of Worldwide Catholic Order, Hartford Courant

[636] Leaked Vatican Documents Implicate Pope John Paul II, Tony Bushby, VatiLeaks, 28 October 2011
Here’s another clown who exposes the crimes of Rome then pulls a Voltaire and claims they are the crimes of “Christianity”.

[637] ibid

[638] Head Of Worldwide Catholic Order, Hartford Courant

[639] ibid

[640] ibid

[641] Father Marcial Maciel And The Popes He Stained, Newsweek

[642] ibid

[643] Ridding Catholicism Of The Stench Of This Legionary Of Christ, Hugh O’Shaughnessy, The Guardian, 21 September 2011

[644] Father Marcial Maciel And The Popes He Stained, Newsweek

[645] ibid

[646] Leaked Vatican Documents Implicate Pope John Paul II, Tony Bushby, VatiLeaks, 28 October 2011

[647] Blackwater Nazis Aim Homeward: Kristallnacht in Virginia? Anton Chaitkin, Executive Intelligence Review, 26 October 2007

This is some of the worst PsyOp bullshit I've read in a while but if you pick through the steaming pile there are some gems to be washed off and had.

[648] Washington's Quiet Club, Evan Thomas, Newsweek, 8 March 2001

[649] Blackwater Nazis Aim Homeward, Executive Intelligence Review

[650] "Jeff Gannon's" Secret Life, Eric Boehlert, Salon, 15 February 2005

[651] Cover Story: Death of a Conspiracy, Tim Schmitt, Pointblank Des Moines Online, 17 April 2005

[652] The Johnny Gosch Foundation

[653] Mole Hunter And Mole, Both Gone, Philip Taubman, New York Times, 23 December 1995, reprinted by the Deerfield Beach, Florida Sun Sentinel, here.
The great Philip Taubman of the Times. Wanna guess what his religion is?

[654] Their Will Be Done, Martin A. Lee, Mother Jones, July/August 1983 Issue

[655] The "Black" Pope, Rick Martin, The SPECTRUM, 15 April 2000, currently archived here.

[656] Why Ed Murray Can't Quit the Catholic Church, Daniel Person, Seattle Weekly, 1 March 2017

[657] Seattle Mayor Ed Murray: I am not going to Resign, Associated Press unattributed, Washington Post, 17 July 2017

[658] Leadership Tips From Ed Murray, Lola Peters, Leadership Tomorrow, 20 February 2015
Obscure leadership seminar admits Murray "Jesuit educated" but says nothing more.

[659] The Rise and Fall of Seattle Mayor Ed Murray's Political Career, Bob Young, Seattle Times, 9 May 2017
Seattle Times says Murray had a public education in high school and college but "studied briefly at a seminary after high school".
As Chico Marx said in Animal Crackers, "You gotta use'a'da Sherlock a'Holmes method!"

[660] Cover Story: Death of a Conspiracy, Tim Schmitt, Pointblank Des Moines Online, 17 April 2005

[661] Hunter S. Thompson, Wikipedia

[662] Cover Story: Death of a Conspiracy, Pointblank Des Moines Online

[663] Why Catholics thrive in the CIA, Robert Wargas, Catholic Herald, 5 May 2016

[664] The Brothers: John Foster Dulles, Allen Dulles, and Their Secret World War, Stephen Kinzer, Macmillan (2013), p. 303

[665] Illuminati Unmasked, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2015), pp. 65-67

[666] Population, Home Page of Vatican City State, State and Government, General Information, VaticanState.va
The Vatican having its own domain is also a sign of its power.

[667] “Lured to her death by Vatican cardinal paedophile ring or kidnapped in revenge by Italy mobster?” Hannah Roberts, Daily Mail, 30 October 2015

[668] ibid

[669] ibid

[670] ibid

[671] ibid

[672] ibid

[673] Missing Girl “Buried In Murdered Mobster’s Tomb Was Kidnapped For Vatican Sex Parties’, Claims Catholic Church’s Leading Exorcist Priest, Nick Pisa, Daily Mail, 22 May 2012

[674] Emanuela Orlandi “Was Kidnapped For Sex Parties For Vatican Police”, Nick Squires, The Telegraph, 22 May 2012
That’s not what Father Amorth said, Limey Roman fucktards. He said they were kidnapped by the Vatican Police for Satanic perverts in the Vatican.

[675] “Lured to her death by Vatican cardinal paedophile ring”, Daily Mail

[676] ibid

[677] What is the Vatican’s sinister secret behind teenager Emanuela Orlandi’s 1983 disappearance? Peter Stanford, The Telegraph, 19 May 2012

[678] Missing Children in America: Unsolved Cases, ABC News Staff, ABC News, 8 May 2013

[679] Nancy Pelosi: Gay “Marriage” Is “Consistent” With Catholic Teaching, Fr. Mark Hodges, LifeSiteNews, 2 June 2015

[680] Pelosi, Biden To Visit New Pope, TobyToons (now defunct “Conservative” pundit and cartoonist), RedState.com, 19 March 2013

[681] How St. Agnes Church Became The First Jesuit Parish In America To Declare Itself A Sanctuary, Kaya Oakes, America Magazine, 3 April 2017 issue, 7 March 2017

[682] Illuminati Unmasked, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2015), pp. 532-533

[683] Illuminati Unmasked, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2015), pp. 529-542

[684] How St. Agnes Church Became The First Jesuit Parish, America Magazine

[685] Kevin Collins' Family Unsatisfied With New Case Details, Vic Lee and Leslie Brinkley, ABC7 News, 6 February 2013

[686] SF Police Commission Makes History, Margie Shafer, KCBS 740AM, 10 May 2007, originally posted here, subsequently archived here

[687] Allegations Of Child Abuse Studied At West Pt. Center, Robert D. McFadden, New York Times, 24 September 1984

[688] ibid

[689] A Legacy of Pain: Settlement Doesn't Ease Abused Children's Fears, Douglas Cunningham and Alan Snel, The Times Herald Record, 11 June 1991, archived here

[690] ibid

[691] Illuminati Unmasked, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2015), pp. 471-475

[692] A Legacy of Pain, The Times Herald Record, archived here

[693] Illuminati Unmasked, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2015), pp. 329-330, 481-482, 510

[694] A Legacy of Pain, The Times Herald Record, archived here

[695] Giuliani's Loyalty to an Accused Priest, Alex Koppelman and Joe Strupp, Salon, 22 June 2007

[696] ibid

[697] ibid

[698] ibid

[699] ibid

[700] ibid

[701] ibid

[702] ibid

[703] Sex Abuse Victims' Groups Outraged By Vatican Decision to Clear Accused Priest, Avni Patel, ABC News, 7 December 2009

[704] Illuminati Unmasked, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2015), p. 511

[705] Day-care sex-abuse hysteria, Wikipedia

[706] Two Army Families who Claim their Children were Sexually..., Ellan Cates, UPI, 24 October 1984
This isn't even a real fucking headline! Clearly an unthinkable crime of this nature wasn't important to UPI — the blurb was barely a few paragraphs long.

[707] A Legacy of Pain, The Times Herald Record, archived here

[708] Donald Trump: secret Jesuit agent for Commander-in-Chief? Original Research (self.RomeRules), submitted [2016] * by Veritas__Aequitas, Reddit
I know our pal "Veritas". He tried to convince me that Jesuit priest Eric Jon Phelps was a good guy which forced me to throw the bullshit flag and disconnect from our phone conversations. But we appreciate this insider tip!

[709] Notable people; University of Pennsylvania, Wikipedia

[710] Peter Lynch, Wikipedia
The great investment banker Peter Lynch has a Lick-My-Pedia entry but not Michael Aquino...

[711] University of Pennsylvania Almanac, Volume 62 Number 9, 13 October 2015

[712] About The Lynch Foundation, Founder's Corner

[713] A Legacy of Pain, The Times Herald Record, archived here

[714] Samantha Brown, Season 1, Episode 27, Brussels, Belgium, the Travel Channel

[715] Belgium, Wikipedia

[716] Marc DUTROUX, Murderpedia

[717] Dutroux Honed Methods In Rape And Torture Spree, Court Is Told, Ambrose Evans-Pritchard, The Telegraph, 09 March 2004

[718] Profile: Marc Dutroux, unattributed, BBC, 17 June, 2004

[719] Melchior Wathelet, Wikipedia

[720] Dutroux Honed Methods In Rape And Torture Spree, The Telegraph

[721] Belgium's Silent Heart Of Darkness, Olenka Frenkiel, The Observer, 5 May 2002, reposted here by The Guardian

[722] ibid

[723] Beyond The Dutroux Affair: The Reality Of Protected Child Abuse And Snuff Networks, Joël van der Reijden, Institute for the Study of Globalization and Covert Politics, 25 July 2007

[724] ibid

[725] Accusation; Investigation; Elizabeth Báthory, Wikipedia

[726] Arrest; Investigation; Elizabeth Báthory, Wikipedia

[727] Trial; Elizabeth Báthory, Wikipedia

[728] Beyond The Dutroux Affair, van der Reijden

[729] ibid

[730] Dutroux Case and X-Dossier Victim-Witnesses, this is apparently part of van der Reijden's report but taken down. Thankfully, it has been archived at "Whale.to" — an excellent site for such information. It is undated.

[731] ibid

[732] An Unlikely Hero for Neoconservative Times, Simon Houpt, The Globe and Mail, 13 November 2004
What hedonistic Catholic Commietard pap!

[733] ibid

[734] Catholic Campuses Promote Infamous "Sexologist", jjarrard, Human Events, 11 March 2004
"jjarrard" appears to be Dr. Dennis Jarrard, a California college professor and friend of Jewess Judith Reisman...what a shock. — And you thought "Human Events" was a secular, Conservitard media outlet.

[735] The Father Who Must Sit And Listen To How His Daughter Was Snatched, Raped Then Buried Alive, unattributed, Telegraph, 20 March 2004

[736] Dutroux Not Working Alone, Jury Told, unattributed, Expatica News, 2 March 2004

[737] I Was A Small Cog In A Sex-Slave Ring, But I Am No Murderer, Claims Dutroux, Ambrose Evans-Pritchard, Telegraph, 04 March 2004

[738] Dutroux Case and X-Dossier Victim-Witnesses, van der Reijden

[739] Dutroux Says Police Helped Him Kidnap Girls, unattributed, Expatica News, 3 March 2004

[740] Belgium's Silent Heart Of Darkness, Olenka Frenkiel, The Observer, 5 May 2002, reposted here by The Guardian

[741] Video: Police PepperSpray Protesters In Anti-Pedophile Demo In Belgium, RT, YouTube, 2 September 2012

[742] Dutroux Case and X-Dossier Victim-Witnesses, van der Reijden

[743] ibid

[744] Cardinal Danneels Questioned Today in Connection with Abuse Cover-ups, Hilary White, LifeSiteNews, 6 July 2010

[745] Fury As Ex-Wife Of Belgian Paedophile Killer Marc Dutroux Is Paroled To Convent, Bruno Waterfield, The Telegraph, 31 July 2012

[746] Victims "Saw Dutroux As Saviour", unattributed, BBC, 4 March 2004

[747] Msgr. Robert P. Hupp, 88, Reformer of Boys Town, Dies, Douglas Martin, The New York Times, 7 September 2003

[748] Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Wikipedia

[749] Boys Town (film), Wikipedia

[750] The Catholic Church, Encyclopaedia Judaica, Jewish Virtual Library

[751] This is from an interview with the now-defunct (aren't they all?) alternative media outlet "Free Range Humans") in 2007. They still maintain a YouTube channel where this interview can be seen; John DeCamp 2007 FULL, free range humans, YouTube, 16 August 2016

[752] William Colby "The Warrior Priest", unattributed, PBS, 30 April 1996

[753] John DeCamp 2007 FULL, free range humans, YouTube, 16 August 2016

[754] Conspiracy of Silence, Yorkshire Television (1994), Writer, Director, Producer unknown. It can be found at my YouTube channel (for as long as it stays up) under the title Conspiracy of Silence, Yorkshire Television (1994).

[755] The Alex Jones Show, 21 July 2004, an interview with Bill Hicks, himself, the CIA's clown prince of tinfoil. It is currently posted under the following criteria: #PizzaGate John DeCamp on "The Franklin Cover-up." July 21 2004, Ultra Deplorable, YouTube, 5 December 2016

[756] John DeCamp 2007 FULL, free range humans, YouTube, 16 August 2016

[757] FBI Killed Franklin Scandal Investigator And His Son, Wayne Madsen, Wayne Madsen Report, 23 June 2014, archived here by Jeff "The Hair", "It's the Jews!!!" Rense.
It's amazing what you can find when you pick through the ravings of a malcontent homosexual Catholic Commietard.

[758] Former Boys Town Leader Hupp, 88, Dies, unattributed, The Las Vegas Sun, 30 August 2003, archived here

[759] Homosexual Prostitution Inquiry Ensnares VIPs With Reagan, Bush, Paul M Rodriguez and George Archibald, The Washington Times, 29 June 29, 1989, for some strange reason the Times hasn't kept this on the internet but I was able to find it archived here.

[760] ibid

[761] Power Broker Served Drugs, Sex At Parties Bugged For Blackmail, Michael Hedges and Jerry Seper, The Washington Times, 30 June 1989, archived here

[762] Satanism and Perversion in the U.S. Military ~ The Kay Griggs Interviews-1998-Full, Ashwaq, YouTube, 13 June 2015
Kay gave this fascinating interview with Jeff "The Hair", "IT'S THE JEWS!!!" Rense — which is why the words "Catholic" or "Jesuit" are never mentioned. She called Opus Dei a "business group" but she sure did blame the Jews which is what the Hair wanted to hear.

[763] Al Gray, Marine: The Early Years, 1950–1967, Vol. 1, unattributed, Marine Corps Association, undated
Proof that Al Gray spent his life without ever getting married or having kids just like Trump's Secretary of Defense USMC General James "Warrior Monk" Mattis.

[764] Power Broker Served Drugs, The Washington Times, archived here

[765] ibid

[766] ibid

[767] Former Omaha World-Herald Publisher Harold Andersen Dies, The Associated Press, The Journal Star, 18 December 2015

[768] Caradori Debrief Owen, Johnny_Cirucci, Scribd, 9 August 2017

[769] Alisha Owen and Her Involvement with John DeCamp, David Shurter, DavidShurter.com, 5 December 2012

[770] State v. Owen, Justia.com

[771] Power Broker Served Drugs, The Washington Times, archived here

[772] ibid

[773] ibid

[774] ibid

[775] Lobbyist Is Arrested In New York, unattributed, NY Times, 10 August 1989

[776] Lobbyist Linked to Sex Case Is Found Dead, AP, NY Times/AP, 12 November 1989

[777] Autopsy, Branch, Steven Edward, Medical Examiner William Q. Sturner, M.D., Associate Medical Examiner Frank J. Peretti, M.D., Arkansas State Crime Laboratory, 7 May 1993

[778] ibid

[779] ibid

[780] John Douglas, Criminal Minds Wiki
I originally wanted to make a smart-ass comment like "Perhaps the boys owed money" but what happened to them is no laughing matter.

[781] Misskelley's trial; Trials; West Memphis Three, Wikipedia

[782] In Search Of Evil, Mark Caro, Chicago Tribune, 2 October 1996, page 1, page 2, page 3

[783] The Strange Demise Of Melissa Byers, Mara Leveritt, The Arkansas Times, 26 December 1997

[784] ibid

[785] Damien Wayne Echols, Martin David Hill, Jivepuppi.com, undated
This appears to be more than just a personal blog as Hill has written screenplays for Helliwood.

[786] Freed Death-Row Inmate Looks For New Beginning, Natalie DiBlasio, USA Today, 7 May 2013

[787] Damien Wayne Echols, Hill

[788] Of The Power And Primacy Of The Pope, para 39, Concordia, Jakob Andreae and Martin Chemnitz, 1537

[789] "Exorcist" Author William Peter Blatty Dead At 89, unattributed, AP, posted at TownHall, 13 January 2017

[790] "Exorcist" Author William Blatty Has Died, But His Georgetown Reform Campaign Continues, Kathy Schiffer, National Catholic Register, 14 January 2017

[791] Early life; William Peter Blatty, Wikipedia

[792] The lunch between a Jesuit and William Peter Blatty that led to a role in "The Exorcist", William J. O'Malley, America magazine, 13 January 2017

[793] Damien Echols: Death Row Interview, CNN Larry King Live, 19 December 2007

[794] Pearl Jam: "People Get That This Means Something", Dave Simpson, The Guardian, 13 August 2009

[795] "Shocking" Scale Of Catholic Church Sex Crimes Revealed, Andrew Thomas, Al Jazeera, 6 February 2017

[796]

[797] Jesuit Priest Jailed Over Child Porn, Verity Edwards, The Australian, 21 March 2015

[798] "I Don't Believe In God," Says Australia's First Female PM, unattributed, Daily Mail, 30 June 2010

[799] Background article by a Broken Rites researcher, unattributed, Broken Rites Australia, 10 March 2017

[800] ibid

[801] ibid

[802] ibid

[803] ibid

[804] ibid

[805] ibid

[806] ibid

[807] Statement to the Royal Commission by David Ridsdale, 15 May 2015, archived here by Bishop Accountability.org

[808] Background article, Broken Rites Australia

[809] ibid

[810] Cardinal To Harvard Students: You Need To Be Courageous, Elise Harris, Catholic News Agency, 16 March 2017

[811] A Church Report Contains Allegations About George Pell Abusing An Altar Boy In 1961-62, unattributed, Broken Rites Australia, undated

[812] ibid

[813] George Pell Versus Anthony And Chrissie Foster: Some Background, unattributed, Broken Rites Australia, undated

[814] ibid

[815] ibid

[816] ibid

[817] ibid

[818] ibid

[819] ibid

[820] ibid

[821] ibid

[822] ibid

[823] ibid

[824] ibid

[825] The Family Trap: How The Royal Commission Is Missing Many Abuse Cases, Background Briefing, Australian Broadcasting Corporation, 11 August 2013
This smoke & mirrors, of course, doesn't touch how parents submit their children to systemic abuse by the Pedocracy.

[826] George Pell Versus Anthony And Chrissie Foster, Broken Rites Australia

[827] Hell on the Way to Heaven, "Chrissie" Foster and Paul Kennedy, Penguin Random House (2010)
The quote is taken from the Amazon description, found here.
In the three books I've written so far, I've found out just how hard it is to get a big publisher involved unless the Pedocracy wants them involved.

[828] Anthony Foster State Funeral: Child Sex Abuse Victim Advocate Remembered For "Extraordinary Courage", unattributed, Associated Press, 6 June 2017, published by The Guardian, here.

[829] Expert: "Priests Believe Child Abuse Forgivable", Tory Shepherd, News.Com.Au, 14 November 14, 2012, 1:29PM

[830] ibid

[831] ibid

[832] Political Elite Were Part Of Paedophile Ring, Alleged Victim Fiona Barnett Claims, Rachel Browne, The Sydney Morning Herald, 23 October 2015

[833] Ian Kirkwood: Franca Arena Was Right On The Mark, Ian Kirkwood, The Newcastle Herald, 30 October 2015

[834] Expert: "Priests Believe Child Abuse Forgivable", News.Com.Au

[835] Trance Formation of America, Chapter 4: The Most Dangerous Game, Cathy O'Brien and Mark Phillips, Reality Marketing (1995)

[836] Hang on for the ride! Part 1, Fiona Barnett, Facebook, 29 November 2015
Titles of these posts are, at best, odd and, at worst, perverse, implying a positive aspect to what is clearly Satanic.
Barnett also posts pictures of her own family complete with a pretty, teenage daughter, on blogs related to her pedophile victim past. This, too, is at best inappropriate.

[837] Fiona Barnett, #PizzaGate Wiki

[838] Hang on for the ride! Part 2, Fiona Barnett, Facebook, 29 November 2015

[839] CIA connection; Personality Assessment System, Wikipedia

[840] The Search for the "Manchurian Candidate": The CIA and Mind Control: The Secret History of the Behavioral Sciences, John D. Marks, Times Books (1979), p. 144

[841] ibid

[842] ibid

[843] CIA Official Sidney Gottlieb, 80, Dies, Bart Barnes, Washington Post, 11 March 1999

[844] Sidney Gottlieb, 80, Dies; Took LSD to C.I.A., Tim Weiner, The New York Times, 10 March 1999

[845] ibid

[846] ibid

[847] ibid

[848] "I'm Just An Ordinary Man": Father Paul Coleman Spends Five Decades Helping People, Rosie King and Mosman Daily, Daily Telegraph, 21 June 2015

[849] Keith Urban's Secret To Staying Sober: Love, unattributed, CeleBuzz, 18 February 2013

[850] Nicole Kidman's Father Killed After "Fall" In Singapore, Jess Wilson, Mirror, 12 September 2014

[851] Dr. Antony Kidman: Nicole Kidman's Father's Legacy Of Nurture, Dr. Rachael Murrihy, Sunday Morning Herald, 19 September 2014
Two things, 1) do you think there is a Jesuit or three in the wood pile of "Doctor" Murrihy and 2) there's no way anyone could be close to this cockroach and neither know nor be involved in his crimes.

[852] Hang on for the ride! Part 6, Fiona Barnett, Facebook, 29 November 2015

[853] Fiona Barnett Witnessed Child Abuse And Murder Involving 3 Former Australian Prime Ministers!, The Richie Allen Show, YouTube, 28 October 2015
What a fuhkin' clown this guy is — the "atheist Irishman" who's so far up David "I am the Son of God" Icke's ass if he stopped short "Richie" would fly out of his mouth.

[854] Hang on for the ride! Part 7, Fiona Barnett, Facebook, 29 November 2015

[855] George Pell Versus Anthony And Chrissie Foster, Broken Rites Australia

[856] A Case of Ritual Abuse and its Meaning for Society, James Shanahan, Pedophiles Down Under, 15 February 2015

[857] ibid

[858] ibid

[859] ibid

[860] Trace: Maria James' Family Calls For "Psychopath" Second Priest To Be Investigated Over Murder, Rachael Brown, Australian Broadcasting Corporation, 9 July 2017

[861] Third Catholic Church Linked To Paedophile Priest Burns In Suspected Arson Attack, Nino Bucci and Marissa Calligeros, The Age, 1 April 2015

[862] Polly's Story, unattributed, The Polly Klaas Foundation, undated

[863] Background; Murder of Polly Klaas, Wikipedia

[864] Klaas Family Tells Jury of Pain Over Murder, Mary Curtius, LA Times, 04 July 1996
Don't think for a minute that the posting of a story about a kidnapped child, raped and beheaded for Satan, being printed on the 4th of July was a fucking "coincidence".

[865] No Surrender, Curtis Rist and Laird Harrison, People, 19 August 1996

[866] Odyssey of Violence, Thomas Fields-Meyer, Laird Harrison and Gabrielle Saveri, People, 13 May 1996

[867] ibid

[868] 20 Years After Polly Klaas Killing, Attitudes Change, Kevin Fagan, San Francisco Chronicle, 2 October 2013

[869] Graphic Testimony in Klaas Trial Forces Family Out of Court, unattributed, Associated Press, published by the Los Angeles Times, 07 May 1996

[870] Odyssey of Violence, People

[871] Judge Sentenced to 28 Years in Prison for "Selling" Kids to Private Prisons, Noel Brinkerhoff, David Wallechinsky, AllGov, 14 August 2011

[872] Biography; Mark Ciavarella, Wikipedia

[873] 20 Years After Polly Klaas Killing, Attitudes Change, Kevin Fagan, San Francisco Chronicle, 2 October 2013

[874] ibid

[875] ibid

[876] Lone Justice, Daniel M. Weintraub, Los Angeles Times, 14, February 1995, page 1, page 2, page 3, page 4
Four pages worth. The propaganda pedos really laid it on thick.
The subheading of this tripe written by "Mr. Weintraub" at the Slimes is just as vomitus: The abduction of Polly Klaas gripped the nation and prompted her father to wage war on anyone who would harm a child. But Marc Klaas has paid a steep price for his lonely crusade.

[877] An Angel Named Polly, Elizabeth Gleick, Maria Eftimiades, People, 28 November 1994

[878] ibid

[879] PAGE ONE — Klaas Family, Jury Share Their Tears / Prosecution Rests After Testimony in Penalty Phase, Ken Hoover, San Francisco Chronicle, 4 July 1996

[880] With Song and Poetry, a Farewell to a Kidnapped Girl Named Polly, unattributed, The New York Times, 11 December 1993

[881] Illuminati Unmasked, Johnny Cirucci, CreateSpace (2015), pp. 552-553, 555

[882] John of Nepomuk, Wikipedia

[883] Early years (1919–1969); Life; David Berg, Wikipedia

[884] The Children of God and The Family in Italy, unattributed, CESNUR: Centro Studi sulle Nuove Religioni (Center for studies on New Religions), undated

[885] ibid

[886] ibid

[887] ibid

[888] By The Numbers: Pope Francis' General Audiences, Rome Reports, YouTube, 27 August 2015

[889] The Children of God and The Family in Italy, CESNUR

[890] Enslaved By The Cult Of Sex...For 25 Years, Celeste Jones, Daily Mail, 13 July 2007

[891] ibid

[892] ibid

[893] ibid

[894] ibid

[895] Children Of God Sex Cult Survivors Come Out Of The Shadows, Simon Gardner, CBC News, Canadian Broadcasting Corporation,: 13 March 2016

[896] ibid

[897] ibid

[898] ibid

[899] My Life In The Cult, Mary Mahoney, Salon, 25 October 2015

[900] ibid

[901] ibid

[902] ibid

[903] Early life; Rose McGowan, From Wikipedia

[904] ibid

[905] Rose McGowan: How She Survived and Escaped a Cult, Blaine Zuckerman, People, 25 August 2011
My column will be "How I survived the endless parade of propaganda from Papal Court Jews."

[906] Early life and education; Personal life; Marilyn Manson, Wikipedia

[907] Rose McGowan » Quotes, FamousFix.com

[908] Fury Over Actress's IRA Comments, unattributed, BBC, 11 September 2008
Really with this publishing date?

[909] Film and television; Career; Marilyn Manson, Wikipedia

[910] River's End, Shellley Levitt, Lorenzo Benet, Lyndon Stambler, Johnny Dodd and Joanna Stone, People, 15 November 1993

[911] That Night at the Viper Room, Gavin Edwards, Vanity Fair, 17 October 2013

[912] Disappearance of Madeleine McCann, Wikipedia
The Roman pedo fucks really laid it on thick in this entry, boy.

[913] Madeleine McCann FOUND? English-Speaking Girl Called "Maria" Discovered in Rome, Laura Mowat, The Sunday Express, 22 November 2016

[914] Blonde "Homeless" Woman Found In Rome Claimed To Be Maddie McCann Is Swedish Woman With Asperger's Says Her Dad, Patrick Lion, Mirror, 22 November 2016
OK, if this girl has Asperger's, what the fuck is she doing traveling from Sweden to Italy by herself (and why the fuck would her father allow it)???

[915] Portuguese Prosecutor Asks to Seize "Mystery Object" in Madeleine McCann Probe, unattributed, Fox News, 13 September 2007

[916] Madeleine McCann: Police Search Church, Fiona Govan, Telegraph, 19 November 2007

[917] Strip Sir Spiv Of Knighthood, Steve Hawkes and Amy Morris, The Sun, 20 October 2016
Fucking pervert closet-Catholic Limey media...you should see the full fucking frontal nudity on the side of this fucking rag.

[918] Madeleine's Parents Invited to Vatican for Private Meeting with Pope, Thair Shaikh, The Guardian, 28 May 2007

[919] "The Royal Arch" Sociopaths Who Rule Britain (Part One), "Red Ox", Henry Makow.com, 6 October 2012
Henry Makow is the epitome of a cockroach Court Jew. His site is so loaded with anti-Semitic bullshit you eventually expect to hear "Seig Heil!" when you click a link. But it wouldn't stick unless there was a grain of truth.

[920] 13-Processos Volume XIII, Pages 3909-3915, Translations by Ines, McCann PJ Files

[921] Paedo Clement Freud Owned A Villa In The Same Resort As McCanns When Madeleine Vanished, Jack Fenwick, The Sunday Express, 15 June 2016

[922] *Kate and Gerry McCann Lose Maddie Libel Appeal In Supreme Court Over Goncalo Amaral's Book The Truth in the Lies, Gerard Couzens, The Sun, published by News.Com.Au, 1 February 2017

[923] Goncalo Amaral at the Order of Malta Charity Gala, anotheroneforjustice, YouTube, 21 September 2008

[924] McCanns Deny Reports That Gerry Is Not Madeleine's Father, Aislinn Simpson, Telegraph, 10 October 2007

[925] Nisour Square massacre, Wikipedia

[926] Profile: Blackwater's Erik Prince, Evan Thomas, Newsweek, 13 October 2007

[927] Erik Prince, Executive Director and Chairman, Frontier Services Group

[928] Making a Killing, Jeremy Scahill, The Nation, 27 September 2007
This is Jesuit-mentored cockroach who calls Prince an "Evangelical" so, once again, they control both sides.

[929] Before Shooting in Iraq, a Warning on Blackwater, James Risen, New York Times, 29 June 2014

[930] ibid

[931] Blackwater Attempted to Bribe Iraqi Officials, Jeremy Scahill, The Nation, 10 November 2009
How the fuck is this "attempted" when it actually happened? Scahill you little Jesuit-trained scab.

[932] The Bush Administration's Ties to Blackwater, Ben Van Heuvelen, Salon, 2 October 2007

[933] Making a Killing, Jeremy Scahill, The Nation, 27 September 2007

[934] Justice Elusive for Iraqis, Tina Susman, Los Angeles Times, 16 October 2007

[935] Who Are the Knights of Malta — and What Do They Want? Joshua E. Keating, Foreign Policy, 19 January 2011

[936] Afghan Rules Need Changes, Rowan Scarborough, Human Events, 30 June 2010
Rowan Scarborough...another controlled opposition cockroach.

[937] How Our Overly Restrictive Rules of Engagement Keep Us from Winning Wars, David French, National Review magazine, 21 December 2015

[938] Before Shooting in Iraq, New York Times

[939] Making a Killing, The Nation

[940] Profile: Blackwater's Erik Prince, Evan Thomas, Newsweek, 13 October 2007

[941] Spurgeon's Sword and Trowel, Metropolitan Tabernacle, London

[942] Jeremy Scahill Remembers His Longtime Friend, Father Daniel Berrigan: “The Man was a Moral Giant”, Amy Goodman, Democracy Now! 3 May 2016

[943] Erik Prince, Celebrity Net Worth, retrieved 13 June 2017

[944] The Jesuit Oath Exposed, European Institute of Protestant Studies, 5 April 2000

[945] The Bush Administration’s Ties to Blackwater, Ben Van Heuvelen, Salon, 2 October 2007

[946] How Disbanding the Iraqi Army Fueled ISIS, Mark Thompson, Time, 28 May 2015

[947] The Bush Administration’s Ties to Blackwater, Salon

[948] Biography; Joseph E. Schmitz, Wikipedia

[949] Biography; Joseph E. Schmitz, Wikipedia

[950] Blackwater Catholic Connections, unattributed [I believe Craig Oxley maintains this site], Spiritually Smart, undated

[951] Bush Scandals List: 262. Joseph Schmitz (partisan former DOD IG), “selise”, Hugh Makes A List (of Bush Scandals), undated

[952] Opus Dei: The Vatican-Pentagon Connection, Frank Morales, Bill Weinberg’s CounterVortex, undated
Although Frank pulls a Voltaire and lumps pseudo-“Protestant” puppets in with these Roman Knights this is an outstanding piece.

[953] Malta “is Blackwater”s Operational Base” – MEP Report, unattributed, Malta Independent, 14 October 2007
Kinda mislead you there. This is still a real journalist site but I didn’t want to disclose that it’s the Malta Independent because I’m going to spring the Malta connection on you shortly.

[954] The Bush Administration’s Ties to Blackwater, Salon

[955] Early life and education; Cofer Black, Wikipedia

[956] The Catholic Church and the Holocaust, 1930–1965, John Michael Phayer, Indiana University Press (2000), p. xiii

[957] Heinrich Himmler, unattributed, One-Evil, undated
Taken down...shocker! Archived by Johnny here.

[958] Cain’s Creed, Omar Zaid, A.S. Noordeen (2012), p. 130

[959] The 15 Most Powerful Members Of “Skull And Bones”, Thornton McEnery, Business Insider, 20 February 2011

[960] Billy Graham and Rome, Chris Pinto, Adullam Films, undated

[961] Knights of Malta, WikiSpooks

[962] Malta "is Blackwater's Operational Base" – MEP Report, unattributed, Malta Independent, 14 October 2007

[963] Echo Papa Exposed: Inside Erik Prince's Treacherous Drive to Build a Private Air Force, Jeremy Scahill and Matthew Cole, The Intercept, 11 April 2016

[964] Italy/Libya: Gaddafi Visit Celebrates Dirty Deal, unattributed, Human Rights Watch, 9 June 2009

[965] Blood and Human Trafficking in the Dustbowl of Libya, Dan Stewart, Time, 17 September 2015

[966] ibid

[967] ibid

[968] Drug and Human Trafficking in "Lawless" Libya is Funding ISIS, Erin Banco, International Business Times, 16 July 2015

[969] U.S. Soldiers Told to Ignore Sexual Abuse of Boys by Afghan Allies, Joseph Goldstein, NY Times, 20 September 2015

[970] ibid

[971] ibid

[972] Leader Of Missionaries Charged In Haiti Has Troubled History, Katy Moeller, McClatchy, 4 February 2010

[973] Haitian Judge Recommends Release of 10 U.S. Missionaries, unattributed, Associated Press, published by Fox News, 12 February 2010

[974] NEW LIFE CHILDREN'S REFUGE - HAITIAN ORPHAN RESCUE MISSION, Hillary Clinton Email Archive, WikiLeaks

[975] Haiti Judge: Silsby Deceived Fellow Missionaries, Frank Bajak, Associated Press, published by The San Diego Union-Tribune, 27 April 2010

[976] U.S. Missionary Convicted In Haiti, But Free, unattributed, USA Today, 17 May 2010

[977] Clinton Brokers Deal Over Haiti Orphan Abductions, Tony Allen-Mills, The Sunday Times, 7 February 2010

Want journalists to finally do their fucking jobs? Ya gotta pay for it.

[978] U.S. Works to Expedite Adoptions of Haitian Children, unattributed, CNN, 18 January 2010

[979] Adviser To Missionaries In Haiti Kidnap Case Is Arrested, CNN Wire Staff, CNN, 19 March 2010

[980] Haiti Officials Shut Down Orphanage Founded by U.S. Man, David McFadden, Associated Press, published by The San Diego Union-Tribune, 5 November 2015

[981] Local Board Members React to Haiti Nonprofit CEO Defamation Case, Laura Kebede, Richmond Times-Dispatch, 5 August 2015

[982] Judge Dismisses Defamation Case, $14.5 Million Verdict Against Freeport Man, Scott Dolan, Portland Press Herald, 20 June 2016

[983] Allegations Against Family Court Of Australia Say Children "Handed To Sexual Predators", Michael Madigan, The Courier-Mail, 18 January 2017

[984] Horrible Child Abuse Blamed on Arizona Agencies, Allie Weintraub, Courthouse News, 27 June 2017

[985] American Boy, 13, Trapped In Israel Asks Donald Trump To Rescue Him, Marianne Azizi, RedressOnline, 29 January 2017
This actually smells like a Jew-bashing Catholic PsyOp to me. Of note, neither the two children have complained of sexual abuse. But I didn't want anyone accusing me of being a diamond merchant (not that this one citation will stop the Nazi cockroaches).

[986] Ex-Foster Kids: Abuse Was Routine In Home Of Teen Found Dismembered, CrimeSider Staff AP, CBS/AP, 26 January 2017

[987] The Corrupt Business of Child Protective Services, Nancy Schaefer, Senator, 50th District, 16 November 2007, currently archived here

[988] What Really Took 2 Lives in Schaefer Case? Mark Davis, Atlanta Journal-Constitution, 4 April 2010, taken down but archived here

[989] Attorneys: Sandusky's Adopted Son Says He's Also A Victim, unattributed, CNN, 21 June 2012

[990] Jerry Sandusky's Son Arrested, Charged With Child Sexual Abuse, Mike Coppinger, USA Today, 13 February 2017

[991] Documents: Joe Paterno Ignored Boy's Jerry Sandusky Complaint In 1976, Associated Press, published by the Chicago Tribune, 12 July 2016

[992] Joe Paterno FBI File Makes No Mention of Jerry Sandusky, Nathan Fenno, The Washington Times, 29 August 2012

[993] D.A. Missing, Declared Dead Who Likely Would Have Pursued Sandusky Prosecution, Tony Rutherford, Huntington News, 11 November 2011

[994] People, Alumni, About, University of Dayton

[995] "The Franklin Cover-Up" author talks about how he linked Sandusky and Penn State abuse scandal years ago, Andrew W. Griffin, Red Dirt Report, 15 July 2012

[996] PSU's Jerry Sandusky "Found His Victims" At Second Mile Group Home, Timothy McNulty and Janice Crompton, Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, 6 November 2011, 12:00 AM

[997] Report: Jerry Sandusky Investigated For Allegedly Pimping Boys To Rich Donors, Jon Bershad, Mediaite, 10 November 2011

[998] Report: Jerry Sandusky's Charity Official Raised Money For District Judge Who Set His Bail, unattributed, The Patriot-News, 16 November 2011

[999] Pa. Lawmaker Wants Investigation Of District Judge In Sandusky Case Over Possible Conflict, PennLive staff and wire reports, PennLive, 15 November 2011

[1000] District Judge Leslie Dutchcot Resigns, Shawn Annarelli, Centre Daily, 09 November 2015

[1001] Opus Dei Influence Rises to the Top in the Vatican, Betty Clermont, Daily Kos, 06 April 2014

[1002] ibid

[1003] ibid

[1004] Penn State Leaders Disregarded Victims, "Empowered" Sandusky, Review Finds, Susan Candiotti, Josh Levs and David Ariosto, CNN, 12 July 2012

[1005] Former Penn State President Graham Spanier, Ex-Athletic Director Tim Curley Still Draw Pay, Charles Thompson, PennLive, 06 August 2012

[1006] Early work and praise; The Second Mile, Wikipedia

[1007] Bush Names Local Group As "Daily Point Of Light", John Hirokawa, The Penn State Daily Collegian, 12 November 1990

[1008] Santorum Sponsored Honor For Accused PSU Coach, Thomas Fitzgerald, Philly.com, 9 November 2011

[1009] An Opus Dei Priest With a Magnetic Touch, Mark Oppenheimer, The New York Times, 12 June 2015
Wanna hazard a guess as to the derivation of Mr. Oppenheimer...?

[1010] ibid

[1011] ibid

[1012] ibid

[1013] Trance Formation of America, Cathy O’Brien and Mark Phillips, Reality Marketing (1995), Chapter 2: The Rite To Remain Silent

[1014] Joe McCarthy’s Jesuit, Mark Judge, American Spectator, 21 July 2005

[1015] Kingpin Jesuit Edmund Walsh Puppetmaster for FDR, Stalin and Eisenhower, Greg-Anthony-Szymanski, Greg Anthony’s Journal, 31 December 2010
Another Papal Court clown!!!

[1016] USAID: A CIA Front ‘In Desperate Need of Adult Supervision’, unattributed, 21st Century Wire, 5 September 2014

[1017] Remembering alumnus and journalist James Foley, Marquette University, 24 August 2015

[1018] Senator Joe McCarthy: Audio Excerpts, 1950-1954, Marquette University

[1019] McCarthyism: The Rosetta Stone of Liberal Lies, Ann Coulter, Ann Coulter.com, 7 November 2007

[1020] John Vincent Coulter, Ann Coulter, Human Events, 9 January 2008

[1021] Connecticut Cold War Warrior: Senator Thomas J. Dodd, Derek R. Lipman, Trent University, 2010

[1022] “Gun Control’s” Nazi Connection, Aaron Zelman and Richard Stevens, Jews for the Preservation of Firearms Ownership, May 1993

[1023] Fannie, Freddie Fail Dodd-Frank Severe Stress Test, Kelsey Ramírez, Housing Wire.com, 7 August 2017

[1024] DODD, Christopher John, Biographical Directory of the United States Congress

[1025] Thomas Dodd, Senator’s Brother, To Get Nod As Ambassador, Miranda S. Spivack, Hartford Courant, 4 May 1993

[1026] Ms. Right: ANN COULTER, John Cloud, Time, 17 April 2005

[1027] Ann Coulter Named GOProud’s “Gay Icon”, Asawin Suebsaeng, Mother Jones, 10 August 2011

[1028] Madonna Shops A New Religion: Opus Dei? Madeleine Joelson, Daily Caller, 18 April 2011

[1029] NBC Won’t Show You Madonna On Cross, James Edstrom, Times Square Gossip, 20 October 2006

[1030] Madonna’s Pussy Is the Temple of Learning: Erotica at 20, Rich Juzwiak, Gawker, 20 October 2012

Filed to: anniversaries

[1031] The Second Coming, A Proud Slut and YouTube Stars, Rich Juzwiak, Gawker, 19 September 2012

[1032] Steve Bannon: Who is Donald Trump's chief strategist and why is he so feared? Harriet Alexander and Charlotte Krol, Telegraph, 14 November 2016

[1033] Trump's Controversial New Adviser Promoted Conservatism Even In The Navy, Mark D. Faram , The Military Times, 20 August 2016
For some reason, anyone who mentions this doesn't state Hayward's name; either because he's forgettable or there's dirt there.

[1034] Another Goldman Sachs Alum Joins Donald Trump's Campaign, Dan Primack, Fortune, 17 August 2016

[1035] How Hollywood Remembers Steve Bannon, Connie Bruck, The New Yorker, 1 May 2017

[1036] Steve Bannon Says Joining Goldman Sachs Is Like "Joining The Jesuits", Dan Wright, ShadowProof, 30 November 2016

[1037] The Trump Family's Ties To Georgetown, Noah Telerski, The Georgetown Voice, 13 March 2017

[1038] Breitbart News Names Executives Who Will Run Company in Wake of Founder's Death, Paul Bond, The Hollywood Reporter, 19 March 2012

[1039] Breitbart News, Wikipedia

[1040] Now A Witness To Breitbart's Death Vanishes, Jerome R. Corsi, WorldNetDaily, 07 May 2012

[1041] This Is How Steve Bannon Sees The Entire World, J. Lester Feder, BuzzFeed, 15 November 2016
The controlled Catholic media cockroaches put the ludicrous spin on Bannon's visit as "meeting with Bergoglio's enemies to help undermine him," — because they really do think you're that stupid.

[1042] Compromised: Clinton, Bush and the CIA, Terry Reed, S.P.I. Books (1994)
Reed is also a Vatican agent but even his info, carefully scrubbed of Roman fingerprints, is still shocking and important.

[1043] Trance Formation of America, Cathy O'Brien and Mark Phillips, Reality Marketing (1995), Chapter 14

[1044] Can We Finally Call Hillary A Roman? Johnny Cirucci, Johnny Cirucci.com, 25 July 2016
This is an extensive column with all the sources you'd need to follow this story. I'm down to the wire on the book and need the shortcut.

[1045] ibid

[1046] ibid

[1047] ibid

[1048] The 50 Most Powerful People in Washington, Reid Cherlin, Rob Fischer, Jason Zengerle and Jason Horowitz, GQ, undated

[1049] Married, With Art: Tony and Heather Podesta Are a Study in Power Collecting, Jessica Dawson, The Washington Post, 23 September 2004, page 1, page 2, page 3 (because these worms are worth a story this long)
"Power collecting"??? Could you put more fucking spin on these sick monsters?

[1050] Hmmm....I wonder why? Could it be they have something to hide? Like what? (One may ask), Michael Flynn Jr, Twitter, 10 January 2017

[1051] Comey: FBI Denied Repeated Requests To Access DNC Servers, Podesta's Device, unattributed, Fox News, 10 January 2017

[1052] Pence Pressed On Clearance For Flynn's Son, The Lead with Jake Tapper, CNN, 6 December 2016

[1053] Jennifer Tapper: Inspired by advocacy and social justice, a mom-of-two leads by example. Kate Bennett, Washingtonian, 6 February 2015
So glad that a pedophile "power couple" is interested in "social justice" ... guess as long as there isn't an justice for the children they rape.
Oddly, I think that piece was taken down. If so, you might find it archived here.

[1054] Alleged gunman tells police he wanted to rescue children at D.C. pizza shop after hearing fictional Internet accounts, Peter Hermann, Susan Svrluga and Michael E. Miller, Washington Post, 5 December 2016

[1055] Edgar Maddison Welch, Miscellaneous Crew | Actor | Writer, IMDb

[1056] Alleged "Pizzagate" Gunman"s Parents "Stunned" By News, Harry and Terri Welch, The Washington Post, 13 December 2016

[1057] Here's Yet Another Photo Of Donald Trump Being Creepy As Hell With His Daughter (IMAGES), James Warren, Gopocalypse, undated

[1058] Ivanka Trump Takes An Official Job In The White House, Christina Wilkie and Paige Lavender, Huffington Post, 29 March 2017
Really with that name? Only the fucking Huffington Post.

[1059] Trump Taps Kushner To Lead A SWAT Team To Fix Government With Business Ideas, Ashley Parker and Philip Rucker, The Washington Post, 26 March 2017

[1060] White House Announces Jared Kushner Is Now Responsible For Everything, Jason Linkins, Huffington Post, 27 March 2017

[1061] Jared Kushner Helped Push Steve Bannon Out Of The NSC, Christina Wilkie, Huffington Post, 06 April 2017

[1062] Jeffrey Epstein: International Moneyman of Mystery, Landon Thomas Jr., New York Magazine, 28 October 2002

[1063] Here Is Pedophile Billionaire Jeffrey Epstein's Little Black Book, Nick Bryant, Gawker, 23 January 15 03:45PM

[1064] The "Sex Slave" Scandal that Exposed Pedophile Billionaire Jeffrey Epstein, Maureen Callahan, The New York Post, 9 October 2016

[1065] California Woman's Rape Lawsuit Against Donald Trump Resurfaces In New York Court, Leonard Greene, New York Daily News, 20 June 2016
Ole' Lenny Greene called this law suit "bizarre"...think Lenny's a pedo?

[1066] The "Sex Slave" Scandal that Exposed Pedophile Billionaire Jeffrey Epstein, Maureen Callahan, The New York Post, 9 October 2016

[1067] Lawsuit Seeks To Expose, Unravel Plea Deal For Billionaire Sex Offender, Malia Zimmerman, Fox News, 18 July 2016

[1068] Labor Nominee Acosta Cut Deal With Billionaire Guilty In Sex Abuse Case, Marc Fisher, The Washington Post, 22 March 2017

[1069] Trump's Labor Nominee Resigned From Catholic University's Board Over Racy Ads, Andrew Kaczynski and Chris Massie, CNN Money, 10 February 2017

[1070] Background; Alexander Acosta, Wikipedia

[1071] About; David Seaman, YouTube
Proof that the Jesuit c_nt's at YouBoob fuck with "view counts"; this has dropped by ten million since I first wrote this column a year ago. How the fuck is that possible???

[1072] ibid

[1073] David Seaman: #PizzaGate-Keeper and Pedophile Double Agent, Joseph & Johnny, Johnny Cirucci.com, 28 February 2017

[1074] David Seaman Terminated for Writing about Hillary's Health, Rusty TV, YouTube, 29 August 2016

[1075] Author; David Seaman, Huffington Post

[1076] Should I Invest In Gold or Silver? Johnny Cirucci, Johnny Cirucci.com, 8 March 2015

[1077] David Seaman - Author of Dirty Little Secrets of Buzz, tvidie, YouTube, 29 October 2008

[1078] David Seaman & BitGold; Goldmoney; Fixing the fractured financial system, David Seaman, Goldmoney Community, August 2016

[1079] Goldmoney Inc. (TSX: $XAU.TO) Reports Financial Results for the Year Ended March 31, 2017, Investor Ideas.com

[1080] How "House of Horror" Investigation Brought Jersey Abuse to Light, Steven Morris, The Guardian, 3 July 2017
"Murder suspicions at Haut de la Garenne proved false alarm but led to exposure of abuse there and at other children's homes." —You Limey "paedophile" pieces of shit.

Svali Speaks Again

Healing from ritual abuse and mind control

Mizpah: Svali Speaks Again
About
Contact
Blog
Articles
Book Info

A Day in the Life of a Trainer 2

Several years ago, I wrote an article about a day in the life of a trainer in my American presentation. This article is about the day of a life in the cult host, where most of my life was spent, as a trainer overseeing facilities. I was in my cult host when doing these activities.

3:30 am: My beeper, one of four that I have (for various facilities, plus a country that I am military commander over) goes off. I am sleepy, having gone to bed just three hours before. But the work at a programming facility never ends, and the group I work for is not kind to its trainers – even the head trainer over the facility. I get up, take a quick shower, and put on my clothes and lab coat, grab a cup of coffee and start the day.

4:00 am: All of my trainers are gathered together to give a quick update on what is going on in the facility. These are bright, outstanding trainers, and their reports are quick and to the point. Any unusual changes in the children and infants are noted, and the goals for the day are quickly discussed. My beeper for another facility goes off, and I answer it. It is a crisis there; a child being trained attacked and nearly killed its trainer, and has been put in isolation; the trainers are asking what they should do. I tell them to wait until I get there later in the day, and in the meantime ask them to send the video records of the event for me to review right away.

4:30 am: the day starts with a ritual, with all the trainers participating together. The trainers range in age from mid-40's, to young training mentees of age four. Most children are taught how to program others starting at age three, and by four, will follow their programmers around, learning how to program others from them.

4:50 am: Facility rounds start with checking on the infants, to review their progress, their responses, and to address any difficulties (such as failure to thrive, unusual responses) that have come up. These genetically enhanced infants are extremely bright, and greet their trainers with coos of delight. This response has been repeatedly reinforced; any infant that turns away in anger from its trainers is brutally punished, and isolated/abandoned to extinguish this beh infants are rewarded for dissociation and their ability to smile, bond with, and attach to the people who torture them. Today is the day that this group of infants, who are all roughly the same age, will undergo training to enjoy sadomasochistic sex. The infants are roughly abused sexually, while at the same time tech stimulation of the pleasure centers of the brain is being done. The infants have already learned to open their legs for sexual activity on hand and voice command, and this is another step in their training. One infant refuses to open its legs on command, and is hung painfully upside down and whipped with a baby whip for this infraction.

5:45 am: By this time, I have reviewed the video of the issue at the other facility, seen where the trainer made an error working with the super theta (a child who has never been allowed outside the facility, has undergone horrific abuse and bonding, and has learned to channel its rage spiritually). The trainer pushed the child too hard, did not look for its cues of stress, and the child reacted predictably. I resolve to put the child with another trainer, and to discuss what went wrong with the trainers at the facility. I sigh. I wonder what caused the trainer to push so hard, and how I will deal with him at the meeting I will have privately later with him and his mentor at the facility. He is 17 years old, has been programming children for 14 years now, and should know better.

6:15 am: I have grabbed another cup of coffee and a brioche for breakfast, brought to me by one of my students. I have 24 students that I work with intensely, who are all top trainer potentials themselves. They vie with each other to see who can bring me coffee, or lab reports, or meals in order to spend extra time with me, since I am their primary trainer and the person they love most on earth. I make them take turns, since I don't like to play favorites. I feel a small trickle of dread in my stomach, and push it away. It is time to go check on the birth mothers in another level of the facility.

6:30 am: Rounds at the birth mother area are done, with all students and trainers involved in this area present. There are currently 15 birth mothers in private rooms. It is month seven of the prenatal training, and all of the birth mothers look inhuman, with heads and pubic areas shaved; their teeth all missing (pulled out during torture sessions); and missing arms and legs due to the slow removal of digits, then hands and feet, then lower limbs, and finally the cutting off of the entire limb. Because of the healing technology, the stumps have healed well, but the birth mothers have almost completely lost their humanity. They have just finished eating breakfast, a nutritious mush in a bowl, which they eat out of like dogs on the floor since they have no hands to eat with. The birth mothers alternately howl and whimper as we come and assess the fetuses; they have learned to associate the presence of lab coats and trainers with inhuman torture. The fetuses are growing well, and respond positively on the brain scans to hearing the voices of their primary trainers, who they are completely bonded to since the emotional "leaving" of their birth mothers after months of torture which was blamed on the fetus. The fetuses will undergo their celestial city programming today, with visits from actors who represent the main controllers within the city, and a visit from the occultic "messiah" who promises to give them peace, safety and joy as they obey him. Later, “hell” programming with birth mother torture in a simulated hell will be reinforced.

7 am: By now, I have had 12 calls from five facilities to solve problems and answer questions from head trainers at each, and will need to get ready for a meeting with several of the facility sub-directors to discuss a new programming sequence recently developed for two-year olds that will be implemented. The new sequence improves on the older version of the installation of elements as barriers: the new River Styx and water barrier sequences in the VRs will replace older ones, since they contain certain things the previous programs left out.

8:30 am I leave this facility, to go to one in another country. I will be meeting with the head trainers at the facility with the student who attacked a trainer, and deciding how to proceed.

12 noon: the previous issues are resolved, and I have reinforced the need to look for subtle signs and cues of stress in children who do not exhibit normal reactions due to their highly abnormal life to the trainers at Facility B (the supertheta training center). I also discuss the need for extra bonding time to prevent attacks like this. The trainers agree that the incident could have been prevented, and a new protocol is created and put into place for prevention. I am now on another flight to another facility where genetics research is being conducted. I eat a quick meal brought to me by one of the five advanced students (ranging in age from eight to 15) who accompany me. These are my top students, who I am mentoring, and they will one day become some of the top trainers in the world. I catch a quick nap, between emails and making several phone calls to resolve issues at the other four facilities that I oversee.

2 pm: My students and I make rounds with the head scientists and researchers at the genetics lab. On the way to rounds, I quiz these mentees on the main genetic markers we will be looking for in this new group of zygotes, and ask questions regarding how they would conduct the research if they were in charge. I am developing future leaders, and am truly interested in their responses, since they are often more intelligent than the current head scientists. They give the correct responses, and we review what will become G19 (Generation 19) genetic enhancements. The scientists have learned how to add exceptional coordination to enhanced muscle mass that is not obvious, since the muscles have a specific shape that appears normal, but is much stronger than ordinary. Enhanced healing abilities have also been added.

4 pm: I have reviewed lab reports and had Skype conferences with the facility sub-directors and trainers for all the facilities that I oversee. I am now flying to the cult facility school, where the children aged six to 12 go to daily classes. I am also the head over this school, and will be meeting with the teachers to review student progress. As I walk down the hall, I am greeted by numerous people, and eager children wave at me or smile as I walk by. The children are on an accelerated schedule, which includes physics at age 7, calculus, and the equivalent of a full medical degree by age 10, among other classes. Some of the classes include language skills (in all the major world languages), and mage classes in the afternoon. I go to my office at the school, and am greeted by a head teacher who brings a “difficult” student who played pranks on the instructor for me to deal with. These children have extremely high IQs (far above 200, on average), and their greatest delight in life seems to be trying to outwit their trainers and instructors. Because creativity and problem-solving are encouraged, some of this is allowed; but I must discipline children who cross the line. This student hacked into the main computer of the school, getting past all the firewalls and security measures in place, and replaced a training video with a video in which all of the trainers involved were naked. I keep my smile to myself at the effort, intelligence and computer skills this prank took, and with a stern look on my face, order the student to go naked for the afternoon in front of their peers; a true humiliation. It is not okay for students to show insubordination to teachers.

6 pm: I have dinner in my private office with a friend for a few quiet moments alone – a rarity. I then go to evening vespers in the chapel, where the children sing beautiful praises to satan with voices that sound like the Vienna Boys Choir.

8 pm: After several classes on conducting rituals, and the routine evening sacrifices, I meet with the head of the cult intelligence unit and the second in command in the Assassin Corp. The two are having an argument, and ask me to mediate. The second in the Assassin Corp feels that the intelligence that they received from one of the Asian countries was unreliable based on the reports from one of the Corp members in that country. The head of intelligence argues back that his agents are completely reliable and fast, and have gathered sufficient intelligence for the Corp mission there. After hearing both sides, I and several others decide that the intelligence unit needs to spend more time gathering intel, because we do not want to compromise an agent in the field due to inadequate information. This is also based upon past experience with the Assassin corp second, who is very bright, perceptive and has good intuition regarding such matters. My top student, who will be training intelligence and assassin personnel like these in a couple of years, is present for the meeting in order to learn, but is not allowed to add her input. I do ask for it afterwards, and she gives remarkably perceptive answers.

9:30 pm: I must go to a ceremonial dinner at a major meeting between our group and several others. I will also be gathering intelligence for our group, so I am dressed in a designer gown, full makeup and put on my most charming aspect. Even as a facility director, I often must go on missions myself, especially those that are politically sensitive or that require specialized skills. The group I am in only allows the best to teach others, and so I must use these skills now.

1 am: I finally go to bed, for a couple of hours, knowing that my day will start in a few hours. After 20 minutes, my beeper goes off; I am being paged to handle another crisis in another part of the world.

Share this:

Twitter Facebook

Loading...

Create a free website or blog at WordPress.com.

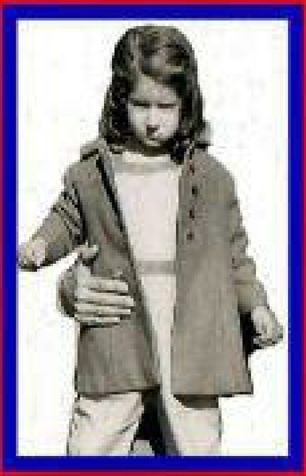
A Nation Betrayed

The Chilling True Story of Secret Cold War Experiments Performed on Our Children and Other Innocent People

By

Carol Rutz

A Nation Betrayed



The Chilling True Story of Secret Cold War Experiments Performed on Our Children and Other Innocent People

By Carol Rutz

A Nation Betrayed

A Nation Betrayed

Secret Cold War Experiments Performed on Our Children and Other Innocent People

Carol Rutz

Fidelity Publishing

Grass Lake, Michigan

Copyright © 2001 by Carol Rutz

All rights reserved. No portion of this book may be reproduced or transmitted in any form whatsoever, including electronic, mechanical, or any information storage retrieval system, except as may be expressly permitted in the 1976 Copyright Act or in writing from the publisher. Requests for permission should be addressed to:

Fidelity Publishing
P.O. Box 365
Grass Lake, MI 49240-0365

Rutz, Carol
A Nation Betrayed: Secret Cold War Experiments Performed on our Children and Other Innocent People
Library of Congress Control Number: 2001117739
Fidelity Publishing
Manufactured in the U.S.A.

Dedication

To Karen

#01182

Who died fighting

April 23, 1999

Acknowledgements

I would like to thank the many survivors who wish to remain nameless but who shared their very intimate experiences for this book. Your anonymity does not negate the existence of the horror that you endured. Katherine, I thank you for your courage in detailing the horrors you survived at the hands of Dr. Black. Only those of us who lived through the fear he instilled can really understand the bravery this took. I applaud those brave individuals who testified before the Advisory Committee on Human Radiation Experiments so that their government might be held accountable for the wrongs perpetrated against them in the name of science. I am very grateful to those people who shared books and resource information freely. It has helped make the reality of what occurred more believable. Jeff, the gift of the series of Doctors of Death books was most profoundly appreciated.

I would also like to thank my husband for the financial support he has given to keep this project going and his encouragement when I wanted to give up. His belief in the importance of bringing this tragic material before the public was what fortified me and gave me hope. I owe a debt of gratitude to my brother and sister, who gave their permission to use some of their own painful experiences so that my own experience might be better understood. I wish to express my gratitude to Dot and Arlene for their help in the difficult task of editing. I may not have followed all your suggestions, but I certainly learned to look at this body of work with a magnifying glass so that Historians might take it seriously. And finally, bless you Dr. Klein. With your help, I walked through a trail of tears and emerged on the other side a free person at last.

Table of Contents

Page 2 Preface

Part I Mind Control Experiments on Children

Page 10 Prologue
Page 11 Chapter One: The Spoils of War
Page 15 Chapter Two: A Star is Born
Page 29 Chapter Three: Home Sweet Home
Page 33 Chapter Four: Men Behind the Shadow Government
Page 37 Chapter Five: Training for the Agency
Page 66 Chapter Six: Dr. Black
Page 92 Conclusion
Page 93 MKULTRA Documents
Page 114 Part II Radiation, Biological and Chemical Experiments
Page 114 Radiation Experiments
Page 116 Human Research at the Bomb Tests
Page 118 Flashblindness Experiments
Page 120 Research On Protective Clothes
Page 121 Human Radiation Experiments
Page 128 Infants, Children and Pregnant Women
Page 131 The Iodine 131 Experiment in Alaska
Page 135 The Oregon and Washington Experiments
Page 138 The Green Run
Page 144 Other
Page 147 Biological and Chemical Experiments
Page 150 Sea Dumping of Chemical Weapons
Page 151 Human Testing
Page 152 The Incapacitant Program
Page 154 LSD Testing
Page 156 Biological Weapons and Testing
Page 159 Open Air Testing
Page 162 Army Contracts with Outside Agency's Page 167 FOIA Sample Letter – Requests
Page 192 Appeal to Lawmakers by MKULTRA Targeted Individuals
Page 192 End Notes
Page 192 Index

BOOK I

Preface

This is the story of someone you know your neighbor, your classmate, your brother or sister, your mother or father. It is the secret they have been holding within their hearts, because they were afraid the American public could not believe their government would carry out human experimentation on children, in direct defiance of the Nuremberg Code, which has been “official” United States policy since 1946.

Some of the very same Nazi doctors who worked in mental institutions before WW II, deciding whether mentally deficient children should be sterilized or killed because of their defective genes, also carried out horrendous experiments in the death camps. Their medical expertise, along with hundreds of Nazi scientists was considered so vital to the “Cold War” effort; that they would be brought into the United States and Canada to work side by side with some of the greatest but most perverse minds the 20th century would ever see.

In September 1999, the Department of Justice succeeded in denaturalizing 63 participants in Nazi acts of persecution; and in removing 52 such individuals from this country.[i] This appears to be but a small portion of those who actually were brought here by our own government. A 1999 report to the Senate and the House said, “…that between 1945 and 1955, 765 scientists, engineers, and technicians were brought to the United States under Overcast, Paperclip, and similar programs.[1] It has been estimated that at least half, and perhaps as many as 80 percent of the imported specialists were former Nazi Party members.”

Not all of those imported participated in experiments, but some did. A number of these scientists were recruited to work for the Air Force’s School of Aviation Medicine (SAM) at Brooks Air Force Base in Texas, where dozens of human radiation experiments were conducted during the Cold War. Among them were flash-blindness studies in connection with atomic weapons tests and data gathering for total-body irradiation studies conducted in Houston. The experiments for which Nazi investigators were tried included many related to aviation research. Hubertus Strughold, called “the father of space medicine,” had a long career at the SAM, including the recruitment of other Paperclip scientists in Germany.[2] On September 24, 1995 the Jewish Telegraphic Agency reported that as head of Nazi Germany’s Air Force Institute for Aviation Medicine, Strughold participated in a 1942 conference that discussed “experiments” on human beings. The experiments included subjecting Dachau concentration camp inmates to torture and death.[3]

The Edgewood Arsenal of the Army’s Chemical Corps as well as other military research sites recruited these scientists with backgrounds in aeromedicine, radiobiology, and ophthalmology.[4] Edgewood Arsenal, Maryland ended up conducting experiments on more than seven thousand American soldiers. Using Auschwitz documents as a guide, they conducted the same type of poison gas experiments that had been done in the secret I. G. Farben laboratories.[5]

Wright Patterson Airforce Base in Ohio employed several German Peenemunde scientists, brought there by Army Air Force Colonel Donald Putt.[6] Peenemunde Aerodynamics Institute built the V-2 rockets and German fighter jets using forced slave labor from the Karlshagen concentration camp. The Peenemunde team leader, Wernher von Braun, became the first director of the Marshall Space Flight Center.[7] Just two weeks after the moon landing, von Braun confessed in a letter to an Army General, that he had been a member of the SS.

“It’s true that I was a member of Hitler’s elite SS. The columnist was correct. I would appreciate it if you would keep the information to yourself, as any publicity would harm my work with NASA.”[8]

Former Peenemunde General Walter Dornberger became vice president of Bell Aircraft Co. after he ended his employment at Wright-Patterson Airforce Base where he worked on a classified rocketry program. Dornberger controlled the production schedule for building the Nordhausen rocket works at the Dora concentration camp where over 20,000 prisoners were killed through starvation, disease, or execution.[9]

A Congressional subcommittee hearing in 1994 revealed that up to 500,000 Americans were endangered by secret defense-related tests between 1940 and 1974.[10] These included covert experiments with radioactive materials, mustard gas, LSD, and biological agents. The General Accounting Office testified that between 1949 and 1969, the Army released radioactive compounds in 239 cities to study the effects.

Experiments began in the 1930’s and continued on for the next four decades.

- The government admitted wrongdoing in the 1932 Tuskegee Experiments, where poor black African American sharecroppers from Macon County, Alabama were allowed to go untreated for their syphilis so the effects could be studied.[11] When physicians and researchers involved with the United States Public Health Service offered them free medical care, they believed they had found treatment for what they had been told was “bad blood.” Instead, they were enrolled in an observational research study, without their knowledge or consent. Even though some rudimentary remedies for syphilis were available in the early years of the study, they were not offered to these men, so that the study of the natural history of the untreated disease would not be jeopardized. This study did not end until 1972, forty years after it had begun, and twenty years after penicillin had been identified as an effective treatment for syphilis. On May 16, 1997, President Clinton apologized to the survivors and families of hundreds of men used in this research project.

- Twelve human “guinea pigs” were secretly injected with radioactive Plutonium 239 and uranium in government experiments in the 1940’s. Energy Secretary Hazel O’Leary, in announcing the settlement of $4.8 million to be paid to their families, said the government was “grateful” to the victims for “the tough lessons they have taught us about trust, responsibility, and accountability between the government and the people.”

- Less known were such experiments as the feeding of radioactive cereal in the 1940s and 1950s to young male children who were institutionalized at the Fernald School in Massachusetts. The researchers had little experience with radionuclides in humans; consequently this approach to medical investigation gave them that opportunity. The parents as well as the children were simply told they were being fed a diet rich in iron.[12] According to oral testimony given before the President’s Advisory Committee on Human Radiation, they were told they belonged to the Science Club to make them feel special and then taken to the MIT Faculty Club where it was easier to control them. One researcher said, “It would be nice to do something for them because these kids have been involved, we've had to jab them [with needles], and they had to eat a meal—every little drop of it, because you wanted to be sure they got 100 percent of the radioactivity—wouldn't it be nice to do something for them?"[13]

- Atomic tests on 2584 military personnel in the Nevada desert in 1953.

- During the 1950s and 1960s Dr. Saul Krugman of New York University conducted studies of hepatitis at the Willowbrook State School, an institution for the severely mentally retarded. Krugman and his staff systematically infected newly arrived children between the ages of three and eleven with strains of the virus obtained from the feces of Willowbrook hepatitis patients. This was done to study the natural history, effects, and progression of the disease.[14] In 1972 Geraldo Rivera wrote an expose entitled Willowbrook, in which he reported that one hundred percent of the patients contacted hepatitis within six months of being in this institution.[15] Obviously, he was unaware of the intentional infection of these children. When he saw them he compared them to photographs he had seen of the Nazi death camps. When Bobby Kennedy toured this institution in September of 1965 he said, "At Willowbrook we have a situation that borders on a snake pit: ...the children live in filth..." The Journal of the American Medical Association actually went so far as to credit Krugman's "judicious use of human beings." Franz Inglefinger, who later became the editor of the New England Journal of Medicine went even further by saying, "By being allowed to participate in a carefully supervised study and by receiving the most expert attention available for a disease of basically unknown nature, the patients themselves benefited... How much better to have a patient with hepatitis accidentally or deliberately acquired under the guidance of a Krugman, than under the care of a rights-minded zealot."[16]

- Retarded children at D.C. Children's Center in Laurel in a section called the District Training School were used as human guinea pigs for both private industry and the government. Among the experiments, was the testing of NeoBazine a diet pill commonly referred to as "rainbow pills." They contained thyroxin, which caused tremors, nervousness, insomnia, and tachycardia. It was being tested for its safety and efficiency. In October 1964 the FDA found that the drug was not safe for use. In 1962 the children were again used to test a drug for skin diseases, which doctors strongly suspected caused serious side effects to the human liver. More than half the children tested suffered some liver dysfunction. Eight were admitted to D.C. General Hospital for intensive care. That same year, 17 Laurel Center children were used to study thyroid hormone metabolism in children. The children were injected with thyroxin mixed with radioactive iodine to aid doctors in tracing a body process. As you can see, there was a clear pattern of using innocent children who had no way of protecting themselves.

- Alexander Cockburn describes a 1960 Army Chemical Corps experiment where mosquitoes with yellow fever and dengue fever were dispersed in Savannah, Georgia and Avon Park, Florida.[17] According to Cockburn, "Carver Village, which was exclusively black, was the target for these experiments. Residents at the time reported fevers, bronchitis, typhoid, encephalitis, stillbirths, also mysterious deaths."

Dr. Alan W. Scheflin, Professor of law at Santa Clara University Law School, and a judicially recognized expert in mind and behavior control states in a letter dated March 9, 1995, that secret government mind control experimentation is ongoing and vastly more expansive than the government authorities are willing to admit. He also is co-author of a nonfiction book entitled The Mind Manipulators, which was published in a dozen countries. He says that he has been studying these secret programs since 1975 and it is his conclusion that there are at minimum hundreds, and most likely thousands of American citizens who were used as guinea pigs against their will in government research projects. What he does not say is that most of the children used in these experiments were sold by one of their caretakers in the name of "National Security" and subjected to untold horrors at the hands of their government. In light of so many abuses of power coming before the public in recent years, many adult survivors of these childhood experiments are stepping forward to be heard.

In October 1995 the President's Advisory Committee on Human Radiation Experiments reported that secret radiation experiments on indigent patients and mentally retarded children were not only done, but that these people were deceived about the nature of their treatments. Dr. William Silverman asserted that performing non-therapeutic experiments on children without authorization from parents was part of a broader "ethos of the time" in which "everyone was a draftee" in a national war on disease.[18]

In most cases the experiments involving radiation, chemical and biological warfare materials were carried out on an unsuspecting public. These are listed in Part II of this book. Government mind control experiments using drugs, sensory deprivation, hypnosis, and electric shock were used on adults and children to gain control of their minds. Impossible, you say. I wish it were. We live in such a sheltered little world. It's much easier to believe that violence and mind control belong to a few scattered cults.

In a decision dated April 16, 1985 Chief Justice Burger of the United States Court of Appeals delivered the opinion of the Court in the case of CIA v. SIMS, 471 U.S. 159. This case focused around the public's right under the Freedom of Information Act, to have declassified the grant proposals and contracts, and the names of the institutions and individuals who had performed research under the CIA financed research project, code-named MKULTRA.

MKULTRA was established to counter soviet and Chinese advances in brainwashing and interrogation techniques and consisted of 149 subprojects contracted out to at least 80 institutions. In 1977 Director of Intelligence Stansfield Turner described in an affidavit, that the program was initiated because the Agency was confronted with "learning the state of the art of behavioral modification at a time when the U.S. Government was concerned about inexplicable behavior of persons behind the 'iron curtain' and American prisoners of war who had been subjected to so called brainwashing."

It began with a proposal from Richard Helms, who outlined a special funding mechanism for highly sensitive Agency research and development projects that would study the use of biological and chemical materials in altering human behavior. Allen Dulles approved MKULTRA on April 13, 1953. Twenty years after the conception of the MKULTRA project, all known files pertaining to it were ordered destroyed by Richard Helms before he retired.

In 1977 through a Freedom of Information Act request by John Marks, 16,000 pages of documents were found, held as part of the Agency's financial history. Further attempts at declassification resulted in the decision rendered by Chief Justice Burger that the “intelligence sources” who were guaranteed confidentiality at the time of these CIA funded research projects would continue to remain protected and classified.

To those of us who have survived these experiments, this decision means that our stories will continue to lie in the government vaults of classified materials. Most of the important details were conveniently destroyed under orders of Richard Helms to conceal their wrongdoing.[19] Think what would have happened if the records of the Holocaust had met the same fate. The disappearance of six million people could have remained a question mark in history.

As a survivor of CIA programs Bluebird/Artichoke and MKULTRA, I began my intense search to document some of the mind control experiments that I was made part of, starting at the tender age of four.[20] Through a series of FOIA requests to various departments of the government, I have amassed an incredible amount of material that validates my personal experiences. The CIA bought my services from my grandfather in 1952. Over the next twelve years, I was tested, trained, and used in various ways. Electroshock, drugs, hypnosis, sensory deprivation, and other types of trauma were used to make me compliant and split my personality.[ii] The “Manchurian Candidate”, where a programmed alter or personality is created to respond to a post-hypnotic trigger then perform an act and not remember it later, was just one of the operational uses of the mind control scenario by the CIA. A reliable truth serum would be another. In Bluebird, Dr. Colin Ross documents the deliberate creation of Multiple Personality by psychiatrists working under government contracts. Your hard earned tax dollars supported this, as well as experiments on extrasensory perception and remote viewing, all of which I was tested and trained for.

CIA personnel were not opposed to working with Nazi doctors who had proven to be proficient in breaking the mind and rebuilding it. To perform these experiments they also used the expertise and knowledge of doctors at private hospitals with whom they made contractual agreements. In some cases military bases were used to hide these covert activities.

On December 17, 1999 I turned 52 years old. On that day I received three CD ROM’s from the CIA in response to my FOIA request. Forty-eight years after I was first experimented on, I found solid proof of my memories proof that was in the government vaults of the nearly 18,000 pages of declassified documents from the Bluebird/Artichoke and MKULTRA programs. One of the documents specifically stated that experimental studies of the postulated abilities of a few specially gifted subjects would be conducted.[21] The document states, “That in working with individual subjects, special attention will be given to disassociative states[iii] which tend to accompany spontaneous ESP experiences. Such states can be induced and controlled to some extent with hypnosis and drugs... The data used in the study will be obtained from special groups such as psychotics, children and mediums...”

The document continues, “Learning studies will be instituted in which the subject will be rewarded or punished for his overall performance and reinforced in various ways by being told whether he was right, by being told what the target was, with electric shock etc.” The proposal then goes on to say, “In other cases drugs and psychological tricks will be used to modify his attitudes. The experimenters will be particularly interested in disassociative states, from the abaissement de niveau mental,[iv] to multiple personality in so-called mediums; and an attempt will be made to induce a number of states of this kind, using hypnosis." The government had finally handed me the validation I had been searching for. To say my heart stopped that day is almost true.

My goal in writing this book is to expose the misuse of power that took place in this country during the Cold War. Thousands of innocent children who have now grown into adults are silently suffering from the effects of the experiments that were done to them by their own government. Many have been diagnosed incorrectly and institutionalized. Some died because they knew too much. Others, like myself, were able to obtain competent medical help, and are struggling to heal from the physical and mental ravages upon our beings.

In recounting some of the incidents that happened to me as part of these experiments, I ask that you remember that I have attempted to be as accurate as possible. Some of these events were remembered during flashbacks and abreactions. During an abreaction, a person feels just like they are reliving the event; accompanied by all the sensory stimulation and original emotional responses. Abreaction is common in soldiers who are having posttraumatic stress syndrome, where they actually feel they are back on the battlefield.

The brain is somewhat like a phonograph record it records the original happening. With Dissociative Identity Disorder, amnesia is created for the traumatic incident to save the young child's sanity. When the amnesiac barriers are removed, it is like putting the needle back on the track of the record where the original memory is stored.

In my case, post-hypnotic suggestions were used after programming sessions, which also created an amnesiac barrier. When the wall to these memories was broken down and the events relived, I would document them in bits and pieces by journaling, drawing and painting. Some of the things I remembered seemed bizarre, and I oftentimes questioned my own sanity. Only after all the pieces of one memory would come together, would I finally get a true picture of exactly what had been done. This is also when I truly began to heal.

For skeptics, no proof will be enough. For others, like myself, unraveling the bizarre nature of my memories has allowed me to regain control of my life. My greatest gift of healing has been to no longer operate out of fear, but from a rational, logical based reality. Choices to live, love and create that were taken from me through the fragmentation of my mind can now be explored.

Some people have asked, "Why now do you choose to speak out?" I prefer to let an Auschwitz-Birkenau survivor of the Mengele Twins experiments speak for me. When asked how she felt while she was being used as a guinea pig she said, "My answer is that emotional scars are so deep that only now, more than 40 years later, are we attempting to face our past and come to terms with it."[22]

I ask those same people. How can we envision the future without visiting the past? Will we let this story lay in the shadows forever, or do we have the courage to address these wrongs and give survivors back their voices? You be the judge.

ETHICS, Request to the NIH Bioethics Group, April 5, 1999

In so much as the Inter-Institute Bioethics Interest Group is currently considering research in bioethics, the Advocacy Committee for Human Experimentation Survivors wishes to apprise the group of the passing of the fourth anniversary of the testimony of two survivors, Claudia Mullen and Chris DeNicola Ebner with their therapist, Valerie Wolf, before the Presidents Advisory Committee on Human Radiation Experiments in March, 1995. The President's Committee recommended further exploration of this testimony which concerned the sadistic experimentation upon children, for the purposes of mind control and other unwitting uses. To date, no such investigation into these claims or others by additional survivors of radiation, chemical and biological experimentation perpetrated upon them as unwitting children, had been initiated.

ACHES requests the aid of this group in the following goals:

The declassification of all government held files, documents, tapes or records relating to any experimentation involving children, prisoners or the mentally incapacitated, particularly those that relate to covertly or privately funded mind control, radiation, chemical or biological programs, both past and present.

The creation of a Presidential Committee to identify all US government sponsored programs, within or outside US borders, including mind control, radiation, chemical, biological or any other type of experimentation upon children, prisoners or the mentally incapacitated.

The determination of the legal, ethical and moral responsibilities of the US government or any other institutions to the survivors of any such experiments, which were perpetrated upon them as unwitting or uncomprehending individuals, and to determine remedies for those found to be physically and psychologically harmed by such experimentation.

The implementation of standards and practices to stop any current abuses and to place a moratorium on human mind control experimentation and any experimentation on unwitting or uncomprehending human subjects.

Patty Rehn and Lynne Moss-Sharman as presented by

Karen Coleman Wiltshire

ACHES-MC, Washington, D.C. Contact

Prologue

It was a sticky summer day in 1991, the year that the Cold War officially ended and the Soviet Union was dismantled. My sister and I paid a visit to my uncle who was dying of cancer. Dad and two other uncles had all died prematurely, cursed with heart disease. It was with love and trepidation that I bent over to kiss him good-bye, knowing that I would never see him alive again. There was so much pain on his sunken in face and the disease and the treatments he had taken to fight it had ravaged his body. I told him that I loved him and my sister and I left.

Something in me stirred that warm afternoon. The secrets I had been holding my whole life couldn't be contained any longer. Maybe it was being so close to the smell and taste of death. Maybe it was simply, "Just the Right Time."

When we reached my sister's home we sat on the couch, and I could hear my heart in my ears. I looked at her and made up my mind that even if I lost her love, I had to speak the truth. I told her I had something horrible to tell her, and that she probably would hate me when I was through. She said that could never happen, and asked me what in the world I was talking about.

In a small voice that was barely audible the words sprang forth.

"Someone in the family hurt me very badly when I was little."

"Carol, do you mean sexually?"

I looked at her in disbelief. How could she know this? I nodded and she said, "Carol, was it Norman[v], our cousin?"

I couldn't speak. I just shook my head back and forth, letting her know that wasn't who it was. I started to cry and the pounding in my ears got even louder.

"Carol, I will believe you no matter what you tell me, because Norman raped me when I was in third grade."

My heart stopped. I couldn't believe my ears. I forgot my own pain and reached over to her and held her. She told me I was the first person she had told this to in over thirty-five years. God I wanted to die, I wanted to puke. I wanted to make this moment in time vanish and maybe the horrible truth would vanish with it. Here we were-two women separated in age by five years and a million secrets.

Somehow I found my voice. I told her how sorry I was, and she kept asking me who hurt me. I couldn't keep the words inside any longer.

"Dad. It was our dad."

Oh God, no. Let me take the words back. Look at the look on her face. I knew it. She doesn't believe me. She hates me. Please don't hate me. Please God; please don't let her hate me. I'm so afraid.

She reached over and took my hand and we talked. I can't remember the words, just that she listened and dawning recognition seeped over her face. I knew she believed me. Our young lives had been such hell. We had been raised in a family with an authoritative father who frequently used his belt and fists to help us "see the light." My six brothers had been the recipients of this violence much more frequently than Dot and I. Mom was absent for months on end, either locked up in a mental institution or running away from dad, and now she was dead dead at 52. Dead 14 long years dead, dead, dead. We only had each other. The silence was ended. By sharing and believing each other's long held secrets that day, I began the longest journey of my life. My struggle to heal had finally begun.

Chapter 1 - THE SPOILS OF WAR

It was May of 1944 when the Navy called daddy to fight in the "Big One." He left momma, who was just nineteen and already the mother of a one and two year old, in a little rented cottage next to Grandfather's house and marched off to war. He was barely out of basic training when our baby brother got sick with pneumonia causing daddy to go AWOL, at least that's the story he always told.

When the Navy caught up with him, he was thrown in the brig. They shaved his head and put him through a battery of tests. It seems one particular Naval lieutenant commander named John Gittinger who was also a psychologist was working on creating a new Personality Assessment Test (PAS). This test would later be combined with the Wechsler psychological test and used to predict future behavior.[23]

Gittinger was later employed by the CIA for twenty-six years, but worked under the cover of the Human Ecology Society in the 50's.[24] MKULTRA subproject 39 at the Ionia State Prison in Michigan was instituted to see if you could drug and hypnotize a child molester and get him to divulge his ugly little secrets. They were looking for a "Truth Drug" that could be used on spies. A combination of drugs and hypnosis were used for interrogation.[25] The Human Ecology Society furnished Wechslers of these sexual psychopaths to the CIA. These scores showed that so-called normals have different personality patterns than people with uncontrollable urges.

Well that was the beginning of the end for me, before I was even born. Evidently those tests in the brig indicated someone who was holding very dark secrets. The government knew that at some later date this could be useful information. Blackmail was the oldest game in the book.

Daddy was assigned to the LST-1146 U.S.S. Summit County, who began loading supplies and ammunition for the soon to be ending war in the Pacific. Seven hundred tons of pontoon cargo destined for Guam was loaded and she sailed for Panama on July 5, 1945.

The European theater had already changed dramatically on the eastern front. On April 25, 1945, American and Russian soldiers embraced near the town of Torgau on the western bank of the Elbe. Italian partisans killed Mussolini, and strung him up by his heels alongside his mistress in a gasoline station in Milan. Hitler committed suicide in a Berlin bunker. Franklin Roosevelt died in Warm Springs, Georgia on April 12, 1945, never living to see the Reich surrender on May 7, 1945, V-E Day.

Increasing attention was being given to shaping the postwar world. In 1943, the allies felt compelled to issue a warning to those participating in atrocities, saying they would be hunted down and brought to justice. The Moscow Declaration said, "Let those who have hitherto not imbued their hands with innocent blood beware lest they join the ranks of the guilty. For, most assuredly, the three Allied powers will pursue them to the utmost ends of the earth and will deliver them to their accusers in order that justice may be done." How ironic that two years later the United States was making arrangements for Nazi scientists to come to America.[26]

On July 6, 1945, the Joint Chiefs of Staff specifically authorized an effort under the top secret project code-named Overcast, to "exploit...chosen, rare minds whose continuing intellectual productivity we wish to use." The chiefs directed that up to 350 specialists, mainly from Germany and Austria, should be immediately brought to the United States. These "rare minds" included specialists in submarine design, chemical warfare, and missile research.[27]

In 1946 President Truman authorized Project Paperclip, whose code name was said to have originated because scientific recruits' papers were paper clipped with regular immigration forms. Paperclip had two aims: to exploit German scientists for American research, and to deny these intellectual resources to the Soviet Union. In a confidential letter to President Truman's chief science adviser, RCA Chief David Sarnoff argued, "the security for any nation henceforth depends... to a very large extent on its place in the scientific sun. That sun may shine brightly for those who know, and it may be a blackout for those who don't." Sarnoff continues, "It is not only important that we get [Germany's] scientific information, but that we lay hands on their scientists as well. If we do not find them and remove them to a place perhaps on this side of the water where they can continue their scientific experiments under our guidance and control, our Russian friends may do so first."[28]

JIOA[vi] Director Bosquet Wev was in charge of presenting dossiers to the U.S. departments of State and Justice for approval. Some of the reports attached to the dossiers bluntly pointed out that they were "ardent Nazis." Some of the experts were accused of participating in murderous medical experiments on human subjects at concentration camps. One was a fugitive from formal murder charges, and another was known to have established an institute for biological warfare experimentation on humans in Poland. Director Wev decided to start withholding records and not submitting the candidates to State and Justice. In a wire to the director of intelligence at the U.S. European Command he wrote, "[T]here is very little possibility that the State and Justice Departments will agree to immigrate any specialist who has been classified as an actual or potential security threat to the United States. This may result in the return [to] Germany of specialist whose skill and knowledge should be denied to other nations in the interest of national security. He then requested, "that new security reports be submitted where such action is appropriate."[29]

That one action made by Wev would allow new dossiers to be made, with the offending language taken out. How many Nazi's were let into this country is still making the headlines. As I write in March of 2000, an accused Nazi who has lived in the United States 45 years was being deported to Austria from Sterling Heights, Michigan.[30] Many have chosen to relocate to other countries, rather than be deported.

General Reinhard Gehlen was head of Nazi Intelligence for the Eastern front for Hitler. Allen Dulles hired him to work for the Army's G-2 intelligence in West Germany and put him in charge of the Gehlen organization, a counterespionage network that employed thousands of people to supply the Pentagon and the CIA with intelligence on the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. It was riddled with former SS, SA, and Gestapo men.[31] His top aides were Nazi zealots who had committed some of the most notorious crimes of the war. Gehlen himself was involved in the torture, interrogation, and murder by starvation of some four million Soviet prisoners. These men used stolen German intelligence files to barter for their lives. They new if they were caught by the Soviets, they would be hanged. The Gehlen organization was the forerunner of West Germany's secret service, the BND recognized in 1956 and run by Gehlen until 1968.

Gehlen signed a contract with the CIA in 1949 for a reported sum of $5 million a year. When Allen Dulles was asked why he made use of someone like Reinhard Gehlen he said, "There are few archbishops in espionage. He's on our side and that's all that matters. Besides, one needn't ask him to one's club."[32] In September 2000 after fifty years of silence, the Central Intelligence Agency in an affidavit in US District Court acknowledged an intelligence relationship with German General Reinhard Gehlen.[33]

While the OSS[vii] was helping to run covert operations with Reinhard Gehlen, they were also involved in secret talks with the Japanese. In mid-May, 1945 Allen Dulles of the OSS reported from Switzerland that the resident Japanese minister, Shunichi Kase had expressed interest in mediating a cessation of hostilities. OSS chief Bill Donovan wrote to the president that Kase believed one of the few provisions the Japanese would insist upon, would be the retention of the Emperor as the only safeguard against Japan's conversion to Communism. Under Secretary of State Grew shared this assessment, and believed the war would end quickly if Washington issued a statement explaining that unconditional surrender did not carry with it the dethroning of the emperor. John J. McCloy, Assistant Secretary of War, suggested that the phrase "unconditional surrender" be dropped altogether, because the phrase itself meant loss of face to the Japanese.[34] Several more indications were received from the Japanese that they would like to negotiate, but the U.S. chose not to.

On July 16, 1945, scientists and military men wearing dark glasses watched the first atomic bomb being detonated. President Truman was facing a decision that would alter history. How different the world could have become without this nuclear nightmare. The mushroom shaped cloud that appeared on that warm summer day would come to symbolize a new age. The bomb shelters of the 50's became like growing embryos from the moment of that first detonation.

On August 2 daddy's ship arrived in Pearl Harbor; and on August 6 the atomic bomb was dropped on the city of Hiroshima. At exactly 8:15 a.m. 81 percent of the city ceased to exist. One bomb, dubbed "Little Boy," killed almost 68,000 people, with as many injured. Still Japan did not surrender. On August 9 a second atomic bomb was exploded over Nagasaki, 38,000 were killed. On August 14, V-J Day, people across the continent poured into the streets while the church bells rang. The war was soon to be officially over, but at what price?

The Allied armada was sailing into Tokyo Bay on September first, as daddy steamed westward towards Eniwetok in the Marshall Islands.[viii] The very next day aboard the U.S.S. Missouri, General MacArthur signed the surrender document. 405,000 Americans who had given their lives in this war were solemnly remembered. Years later, many more would bare the tragic effects of nuclear exposure from their proximity to the explosions.

Chapter 2 - A STAR IS BORN

Daddy's ship arrived in Seattle in January 1946 and he completed his service to his country in February. I try to imagine sometimes, what it must have been like for him coming home after seeing the horror and devastation from the bombs we dropped. I know he brought back a Japanese sword that hung on our walls for the rest of his life. Nine months after his return, my third brother was born. Just thirteen months later in December of 1947, my mother got her wish for a girl, when a 9 pound, 3 ounce rolly, polly baby announced her presence by screaming with fear at the top of her lungs. I was born, and I soon learned that screaming and tears were just not allowed.

That same year President Truman specifically assigned the CIA responsibility for covert psychological operations. The following year he approved NSC directive 10/2 giving the CIA responsibility for "propaganda, economic warfare; preventive direct action, including sabotage, anti-sabotage, subversion against hostile states, including assistance to underground resistance movements, guerrillas and refugee liberation groups, and support of indigenous anti-Communist elements."[35]

The U.S. Army's Counter-Intelligence Corps (CIC) decided to use convicted war criminal Klaus Barbie[ix] to supervise a string of agents in occupied Germany called the "Petersen Bureau." In 1950 the CIC allowed Barbie to escape from Europe to Bolivia through a "rat line" organized by a Croatian priest and former Nazi collaborator operating out of the Vatican.[36]

More than likely it was the same ratline that helped Dr. Josef Mengele, killer of 400,000 in Auschwitz, to escape to Buenos Aires, Argentina in 1949. The Counterintelligence Corp hired Croatian Catholic Intramarium leader Monsignor Krunoslav Draganovic to run these ratlines for U.S. sponsored Nazi escapees. CIC had tagged Draganovic as an unreconstructed Ustase.[37] In the summer of 1941 the Roman-Catholic Ustase murdered Serbs, Jews, and Gypsies in cartloads, and according to Michael Bar-Zohar in the Avengers, they once presented a wicker basket overflowing with forty pounds of human eyes to their leader.[38] The Justice Department admitted that Draganovic smuggled these fugitives for the U.S., and was even provided a source of financing and shield of protection.[39] SPINNE, Otto Skorzeny's exfiltration network for SS officers on the run, also used Draganovic's underground railway to bribe harbor officials before shipping ex-Nazis' like Klaus Barbie to Paraguay or Buenos Aires.[40]

As Assistant Secretary of State under Roosevelt, Nelson Rockefeller lobbied long and hard to have Argentina be a founding member of the United Nations. Nelson had varied South American interests. He held large stockholdings in Creole Petroleum in Venezuela, and an enormous ranch near Valencia that was five times larger than the combined boroughs of New York City.[41] Nelson was awarded the Order of Merit of Chile, the National Order of Southern Cross of Brazil, and the order of the Aztec Eagle of Mexico, but the people themselves weren't so taken with him. When he made a fact-finding tour of Latin America for President Richard Nixon in 1969 he created uproar. The government of Venezuela had to cancel his visit after students seized university buildings, and street fighting with rocks and pistols broke out. In the Dominican Republic a Standard Oil refinery was blown up, and in Argentina nine Rockefeller-owned supermarkets were bombed and burned. That was followed by a nationwide labor strike. As Nelson embraced the dictator of Paraguay, Alfredo Stroessner, demonstrators burned an American flag.

Nicolo Tucci resigned his post as head of the Bureau of Latin American Research because as he later put it, "My bureau was supposed to undo the Nazi and fascist propaganda in South America and Rockefeller was inviting the worst fascists and Nazis to Washington."[x] When Tucci took his complaints to Nelson he was told, "Everybody is useful and we're going to convert these people to friendliness to the United States." Then Rockefeller's lawyer Larry Levy said to me, "Don't worry, we'll buy those people."[42]

The Washington Post wrote a scathing editorial indicting the vote on Argentina's admission: "The regime which is described as having done things recently that exceed anything this correspondent can remember in his seventeen years experience in Fascist Italy this regime was railroaded into the company of 'peace-loving states' in San Francisco by Secretary Stettinius and Assistant Secretary Rockefeller."[43]

John D. Rockefeller III, brother of Nelson went on a series of world tours with John Foster Dulles in 1950 and 1951. They focused on the need to stop the expansion of the non-white populations. In 1952, Dulles and Rockefeller set up the Population Council with millions of dollars from the Rockefeller family. The American Eugenics Society moved into the Population Council's headquarters and assumed its name. The eugenics movements' belief in mandatory sterilization for inferior and defective people was not at all unlike the beliefs that led to the elimination of undesirable races through genocide in Nazi Germany before and during WWII.

Several of the Directors of The American Eugenics Society worked at institutions that were involved in the MKULTRA experiments or other covert government experiments. Dr. Franz J. Kallmann[xi] worked at New York State Psychiatric Institute as a geneticist from 1936 to 1951. He became chief of psychiatric research from 1952 through 1965. New York State Psychiatric Institute obtained funding through the Edgewood Arsenal Army's Chemical Corps medical research labs. They were given three contracts for studies of LSD and mescaline on human subjects. In fact, at the "First Psychochemical Conference" (12 May 1954) the principal Research Psychiatrist was introduced as "a pioneer in the field of correlating experimental pharmacology and clinical psychiatry." On January 8, 1953 Mr. Harold Blauer died of circulatory collapse and heart failure, following an intravenous injection of a synthetic mescaline derivative while at New York State Psychiatric Institute.[44] It was this institute that I have reason to believe I was taken to covertly in 1952.[xii]

Genetic research was indeed one of the major interests of Dr. Josef Mengele. During one of the experiments I was forced to endure at the hands of Dr. Black, he referred to me as a "Mengele Kid." After seeing photographs of him from the fifties and sixties, I believe Dr. Black was an alias that the "Angel of Death," Josef Mengele used while doing mind control experiments under Project MKULTRA after his disappearance from Auschwitz on January 18, 1945.

I first met Dr. Black when I was four. It was a scorching day in July 1952. Because of the blessed event of my little sisters' birth, I was given the dubious honor of staying with Grandpa Al and Grandma Cordula, daddy's parents. Grandpa decided to let me run in my underwear through the water that would squirt out of all the holes in the hose that he used to water the vegetable garden. When I was through getting totally drenched, I ran into the greenhouse to smell the flowers and watch him work. Such a dichotomy, that this child molester raised this room full of perfume and velvety smoothness. I especially loved the pansies, as they reminded me of little faces gazing up at me. Grandma had the huge concrete floral baskets that Grandpa crafted filled with petunias, pansies, snapdragons, and lacy ferns. The glass blocks imbedded in the cement threw the colors of the flowers everywhere.

Grandpa was an incredibly resourceful man. A bricklayer by trade, he found himself without a job during the recession. For a while, he worked for the government funded CWA and FERA programs during the Depression, where he did most of the stonework inside the snake cages in the Reptile house in the Zoo. A Toledo Blade newspaper article about him says, "By sheer inventiveness, combined with a bulldog determination and courage, he literally has pulled himself out of the depression slough by his boot straps."

The article goes on to say, "Today he owns a home... and has a five-year lease on two and one-half acres of land, which he has converted into a vegetable garden. All of this has been done with the aid of a hand trailer, a boat and about $30." The article continues, "Lacking the funds to buy an old vacant house, he agreed to pay the stipulated price of $200 in labor, the only commodity he had... In order to move the house from its original location-about three blocks away from its present one-he got the jacks and necessary implements for the job, agreeing to pay with his labor for the cost involved. The next problem was to build a foundation. With the aid of the hand trailer, he gathered old bricks wherever he could find them, and these old bricks that nobody wanted have found their place into and eight-foot basement as foundation for the home." As the story continues grandpa carried the sand needed to make cement from the sand bars in a boat across the lake, unloaded it, and took it home in a hand trailer. The stone porch he built for the house came from a torn down chimney ferried in the same way, but from a much greater distance. This fortitude was what our country had been built on. Too bad he brought with him the pedophilic traits of his forefathers.

Late that afternoon Grandpa said it was time to go out to the fruit and vegetable stand that sat at the street. It had an awning so the produce wouldn't cook in the sun. He lifted me up to sit beside the tomato baskets that were already filled. I wiggled my toes, as I carefully placed each tomato in the scale to be weighed when people stopped by on their way home from work. I even got a shiny penny to put in the pocket of my coveralls. Wow, having mommy in the hospital did have some benefits.

After supper that evening, Grandma Cordula started talking on the phone and shaking her head at grandpa. She had a very worried look on her face when she hung up the phone.

"We shouldn't be doing this Al."

"Shut up, Cordula! Just shut up!"

She shuts up. Then Grandpa says, "You're goin on a vacation soon and I know you'll be a good little girl."

I wasn't quite sure what a vacation was, but it sounded good to me. The next day this big shot from the CIA paid a visit to grandpa. He talked about patriotism and how grandpa could become a big shot too, and get money for helping to rid the world of Commies. It wasn't no skin off his back to do what needed to be done. He just had to exert some pressure to make our daddy let the CIA perform a few little experiments on me. National Security was at stake, etc. etc. etc., blah, blah, blah, blah.

That day it was decided that in exchange for some money and freedom from prosecution for making child pornography, I would become the governments' little experiment. It seems that grandpa had become involved with gangsters when they moved into the city in 1931. A group of criminals from Detroit led by Thomas "Yonnie" Licavoli moved to Toledo in March in an attempt to take over the bootleg and gambling clubs. Licavoli had been told by Al Capone "to stay the hell out of Detroit." The gang killed 13 people in our city in five months when they refused to pay protection money.

One bootlegger, Jack Kennedy Sr., refused to split the proceeds of his liquor business and became the target of the mob.[xiii] Jack became friends with my uncle, who later married Grandpa Al's only daughter. In 1933 Kennedy was renting a cottage a few blocks from grandpa's house. Leaving his bodyguard with his young son, he took a stroll with his girlfriend and was shot 11 times and died. One of the handguns that were used in the killing was found on the bank of the river by my dad, who was then eleven years old. The gun was linked to the Licavoli gang and with additional evidence, Yonnie was sentenced to prison for life.[45] I remember how afraid I was when Governor Rhodes commuted his sentence to second-degree murder and he was paroled. I naively figured he had a major vendetta to carry out against my dad, not realizing that if that were the case, he would have been long dead.

The mob was still active in Toledo when I was growing up, so it seems entirely possible that Grandpa helped Al Capone's gang take control of Toledo by ridding it of Licavoli's gang. Grandpa was a boozer and pedophile. The true extent of his personal involvement with this group went to the grave with him. I can only say that I'm quite sure that I was not the first child to star in his pornographic films, which were distributed to some very wealthy, notable public figures, probably through the mob.

Having found this out, the CIA took advantage of this knowledge to enlist grandpa's cooperation. They were looking for children who had the ability to disassociate from reality for a project named Bluebird/Artichoke. Dissociative amnesia is characterized by an inability to recall important personal information, usually of a traumatic or stressful nature, that is too extensive to be explained by ordinary forgetfulness.[46]

The CIA was about to determine if I would be a proper candidate for future experiments. I proved to be everything they wanted and more. Since I was just a baby in diapers when my dad started abusing me, I learned to go someplace else in my head to preserve my sanity. After awhile, when my grandfather started doing the same things and worse, I learned to dissociate even more. I began creating separate parts or personalities to hold the memories of this trauma. The technical term is alters. In a memo dated six months before I was first used in experiments, Bluebird states that practical - not theoretical research be conducted and carried out. The nature of this research to include these specific problems:

> 1. Can we "condition" by post-H (hypnotic) suggestion agency employees (or persons of interest to this agency) to prevent them from giving information to any unauthorized source or for committing any act on behalf of a foreign or domestic enemy?
>
> 2. Can we in a matter of an hour, two hours, one day, etc., induce an H condition in an unwilling subject to such an extent that he will perform an act for our benefit? (Long range).
>
> 3. Can we create by post-H control an action contrary to an individual's basic moral principles?
>
> 4. Could we seize a subject and in the space of an hour or two by post-H control have him crash an airplane, wreck a train, etc.? (Short, immediate activity)
>
> 5. Can we by SI[xiv] and H techniques force a subject (unwilling or otherwise) to travel long distances, commit specified acts and return to us or bring documents or materials? Can a person acting under post-H control successfully travel long distances?

6. Can we use SI and H to combat fatigue, produce extreme mental effort?

7. Can we guarantee total amnesia under any and all conditions?

8. Can we “alter” a person’s Personality? How long will it hold?

9. Can we design tests to determine whether or not an enemy agent has been conditioned by SI and H or any other method?

10. Can we detect SI and H by use of SI and H (regression)?

11. Can we make a “conditioned” subject reveal by SI and H specifically how they were conditioned (drugs, torture, fatigue, hostage pressure, techniques)?

12. Can we devise a system for making unwilling subjects into willing agents and then transfer that control to untrained agency agents in the field by use of codes or identifying signs or credentials?

13. How long can we sustain a post-H suggestion-unaided-with reinforcement?

14. What would be fastest way to induce SI and H conditions - with drugs - or without any mechanical aids?

15. Can we devise a standard simple relatively fast technique for inducing SI and H conditions that can be used by untrained agents (with or without drugs)?

16. Is it possible to find a gas that can be used to gain SI control from a gas pencil, odorless, colorless: one shot, etc.?

17. What are full details on “sleep-inducing machine”?

18. How can sodium A or P or any other sleep inducing agent be best concealed in a normal or commonplace item, such as candy, cigarettes, liqueur, wines, coffee, tea, beer, gum water, aspirin tablets, common medicines, coke, tooth paste?

19. How effective can the “carotid artery technique”[xv] be made? Can it be used while subject is unconscious? Is it faster than other techniques?

20. Can we, while a subject is under SI and H control, show them a map and have them point out specific items, locations, etc., on the map? Can we also have them make detailed drawings, sketches, plans? Could any of the above be done under field conditions and in a very short space of time?[47]

To use a child to investigate these possibilities I find so morally reprehensible, that I have a difficult time fathoming how my grandfather could hand me over. He did. The following day I was put in a white panel van with my little suitcase. Little Girl (my two year old alter) will tell you, as Paul Harvey says, “The rest of the story.”[xvi]

“We is sitin on a crate on the floor and the grandfather is on like a seat with a long pole comin out the bottom, just like the ones ya eat ice-cream on. He gots his hand on a long stick comin outa the floor. We gotted to go for a drive. He drops us off to Crazy Eddy. Crazy Eddy has a derby hat, a suit with a vest and white spats on. He's got a big shiny white limousine with a funny thing on the trunk. We's goin to Detroit. We gots our dress and black patent leather shoes on, and we falls asleep in the back seat with our thumb in our mouth. We don't got no blanket to cover up with."

Crazy Eddy says,

"Time to wake up, time to wake up."

He be shakin us. We is here-Detroit. Some men give Crazy Eddy a stash of cash to take back to the grandfather, and after he gets off the plane this other big shot guy says,

"Little Drip, can he be depended on to keep his mouth shut?"

A man named Mr. Dull-ass[48] says,

"Creeps like that are a dime a dozen. He knows what will happen if he breathes a word of this."

Then they starts talkin about 'Little Girl'. That's me. They tell me I'm special, real special and they is gonna study my mind real good and see what makes us tick.

Little Girl: "Where ya takin me?"

Mr. Dull-ass says to the place of no return. Then somethin about shamrocks, Irish eyes are shinin and New York. He gives us Chinese checkers to play with. Geez, Louise, when ya's little how does big people spect ya to hold things on your lap? We looks up at Mr. Dull-ass, and he smiles and puffs on his pipe. It smells good and reminds us of our daddy.

The other man is sittin across from us with his ugly grin. He gots somethin in his lap-a case that pops open. He gots a drink too. We wished we had some ovaltine. There is a bathroom in the back and Mr. Dull-ass walks us back. Later on the pilot sticks his head out and says we's gettin ready to land.

Next thing we remembers is this doctor is liftin us up into a chair. He puts somethin black and heavy on our lap. He puts a needle[xvii] in our arm and we is gettin sleepy, but still we's awake. There's a lady Dr. there who looks like Shirley Temple, cause of her curls. She says to the other doctor,

"How are you going to know how much medicine to give her? She is so little. Are you sure you're not going to hurt her?"

He says its a truth drug[xviii] and he knows what he's doin. Then he puts the black thing on our head and says somethin about it will shield us. Then he says,

"Come forth little one-I need to know your name!"

"Little girl."

Then the doctor says,

"Who Else?"

"Nobody."

He knows we's lyin so he makes our body jump and hurt real bad. We got lectricity going through us.[xix]

"Shadow, our name is Shadow."

Now they wanna know who Shadow is.

"Shadow gotted made at Grandfathers' before we came here. There was a cross and the top slid off and inside each arm was a place to hold a candle. The center had a piece of rolled up parchment and some oil. There's a big book and it looks like a bible, only bibles don't have pictures of men and women that are naked. Grandfather says it's our naming day and he gotta give me a battle name and make me a soldier. My name is Shadow. He burns the candles and puts oil on our forehead. He seals the lips with oil that's still hot from burnin in a spoon. He makes us open our mouth and swallow it. Then he unrolls the paper and writes our name. Shadow. He's saying some funny words. It is done and sealed in blood. Don't touch my hair and face like that. You're evil, wicked. Now he's dripping candle wax on the paper. Sealed forever. Stay off me you wicked old man. Geez that be when Freda, our fighter part comes and starts fighting off the Grandfather."

Now they knows all our names. If ya knows our names-ya got power and control. They says they's gonna give us special numbers. Later Dr. No, the lady Doctor says,

"We are gonna help you, little girl, not to have any more pain. You don't have to feel it ever again."[49]

They's gonna make Samantha come. Uh-oh, spaghettios. Samantha won't ever feel anything. No more pain, no feelins. It's the way they made her.

(Intense electro-shock was delivered in order to allow my mind to disassociate and create Samantha who would never feel pain. In the future, whenever I was to be put through a torturous painful experience, Samantha would automatically be the alter who took over the body and she would hide the memory and the pain from the rest of my system. Unfortunately as I started to remember and integrate these experiences into my life, I would have to re-experience the pain and emotions surrounding each situation.)

"Back, just let the memories go back."

That be what the doctor tellin us alright. It's our first lesson on who's got power over us. They says tomorrow we gets ta work with two other people.

The next day it gets real confusing. We gets more medicine put in us, and the next thing we knows a guy is talkin to our baby part. He's standin in front of us talkin to another man. We is sittin in a chair and looking blank. He is tellin them that switching to different alters is as easy as turning the end of a kaleidoscope, where the shapes change with the turn of your wrist. Then he puts his finger by his nose and says,

"Look at this finger. You see the master. You only obey the master. When I say cheese you know that it is time for you to participate. Send the baby, now. Cheese."[xx]

Up comes the baby. The man says,

"I am your mammer and your papper. You love only me, and I am the only one who loves you. I feed you and hold you, and you are mine alone."

(Our Baby part grew to love and depend on "Daddy Sid" as her only source of love and nourishment. From that day forward, a deep bonding took place with Dr Sidney Gottlieb, Directorate of Operations of the Technical Services Staff (TSS) of CIA in charge of their behavioral program through MKULTRA.[50] No matter what experiment he was to make me a part of, I would love and remain loyal to the man who my baby alter considered sole supplier of the basics of life, food and love.)

A declassified document from 1954 says, "At all times when subjects were being hypnotized a CD representative (Dr. Gottlieb or Major deleted) was present. His presence served a double purpose of reassurance to the subject and observation of technique for possible later exploitation."[51]

Little Girl Continues:

After holding and loving Baby and feeding her a bottle, Daddy Sid says he gonna create a twin for her. His name is Guy and he's gonna get special training from time to time. Nobody can talk to Guy without talking to Baby first, cause they's bonded together like a figure 8 that lays on its side.

Daddy Sid says,

"Send Guy! Cheese. Guy you are requested to fulfill your destiny. You must always obey me and me alone. You live in Shadowland and Baby lives in Neverland. When Neverland is opened, Shadowland is closed. When Shadowland is open, Neverland is closed. The genie appears when Neverland is opened. Remember, I am your master and I am the genie. In Neverland, Baby never grows up. You and Baby will have eternal life. All you must do to keep your eternal life is to fulfill your destiny and come when you are called."

Guy was created that day, and in the coming years would display psychic abilities that the CIA found very useful.[52] Guy was taught to store all the anger and hatred accumulated during abuse and use it to psychically kill with what Sidney Gottlieb called "The Red Fire." Secret Weapons is a book coauthored by two survivors of similar MKULTRA experiments, the Hersha sisters. They share co authorship with Dale Griffis, an investigative law enforcement specialist, and Ted Schwarz, an author who has written extensively on the subject of abnormal psychology. The creation of a "Guy" type alter is explained:

"First, there would be the creation of a personality who is all violence. This individual wants to stop the trauma, but given the young age, he or she is helpless...The second personality that is created comes the moment the mind realizes the body is helpless to fight back. This is a personality capable of enduring anything-pain, grief, exhaustion."[53] This is a very apt description of Samantha who had been created the previous day.

The CIA had proposed a three to five year outside research project to search for exceptionally gifted individuals who could obtain both perfect and scattered ESP test performance.[54] Since I displayed psychic abilities, they trained Guy to use these abilities in a way they hoped would benefit the agency.

The CIA then made sure that this project would never be made known. The document says, "It would be necessary to be exceedingly careful about thorough cloaking of the undertaking. I would not want anyone here in the deleted except deleted and myself to know about it... Funds necessary for the support of the work would carry no identification and raise no questions."

It is my belief, that these studies done in secrecy for ten years became the foundation for the ESP experiments under MKULTRA Subproject 136 mentioned in the preface.

Little Girl Continues:

Then Daddy Sid says,

“Dr. Black has a few words he wishes to say to you.[xxi] You will listen attentively, and then when I say cheese, you will return Baby to me. Remember to stare at the white light at all times. Do not look at Dr. Black’s face. Only the white light.”

We turns our attention to the bulb that is being shone into our face. When the moon hits the sky like a big piece of pie, that’s amore. It’s like staring at the full moon.

Dr. Black says,

“Freda, my darling girl, are you there?”

He likes “schpunky” kids, so he really likes our Freda who was use to fightin the Grandfather off. Dr. Black rocks back and forth on his heels with his hands behind his back, and tells Freda that he’s gonna make her a twin and they both will be “Mengele’s Kids.”

Dr. Black says,

“Ah, you are so cute. It’s time to put you under the microscope to see what makes you tick. Who in there is small enough to fit under the microscope?”

They be drawing blood from our arm now and we have to watch while they put it under the microscope. It has a flat piece of glass put on top of it and they be telling us this is Connie. She be forever this small and if we don’t behave, the bad doctor will stomp the glass under his shiny black boot. We believe, cause he show us just how he do it with another slide. We think we gotta get some anti-puke medicine if we gonna be this dude’s kids. Either that or a big straw to blow Connie back up.

(Because of my belief in what Dr. Black said that day, I automatically created Connie when the blood was drawn. From that day forward she was to remain flat as a pancake, until I rescued her by understanding the lies told that day.)

Dr. Black says somethin about nucleo peptides, strings of dna and discoverin the truth, and he wanna preserve our dna. Then he says somethin about double helix, strands of dna, and tissue samples that are gonna destroy the foreign material.

Now someone be singing,

“Follow the yellow brick road, follow the yellow brick road.”

We be told it’s time to create Scarecrow. Scarecrow got no brain. They sucked it out with a needle. Iffin we gets caught and questioned when we’s carrying out orders, we’s supposed to turn into Scarecrow. Iffin we don’t, we get smashed under Dr. Black’s shiny boot. We never, ever tell, oh no. We don’t have no Brain. Iffin you don’t got no brain, then there’s nothin to tell. Then we gets that awful lectricity in us again. That’s all we remembers.

Next thing we remembers we is in a different place and we gots our black patent leather shoes on again. This man is askin if we been a good Little Girl. We smiles and says yes. He's gots a nice office with pictures on the wall and a pitcher a water on his desk with a glass for us cause we's real thirsty. We gots a real bad, dry taste in our mouth."

He says, "No worse for the wear."

He's relieved cause he don't want us going home lookin disheveled. We don't know what that means, but we's glad we don't look that way. We getta come back soon he says, cause we's a good little spearmint--not gum though. He's very happy with Mr. Dull-ass. He gotted a good little patsy in him.

If you are finding this hard to believe, I understand. However, a declassified document talks about the Chief of the Technical Branch's trip to Detroit in 1952.[55] Gottlieb also admitted that he made approximately six trips to New York in 1952, and that he "visited George White on two or three occasions in 1952 to discuss his becoming a consultant for the CIA in LSD research." Apart from his contacts with White, Gottlieb also declared that he might have visited Dr. Harold Abramson, a physician who later became an MKULTRA consultant in New York in 1952.

Dr. Sidney Gottlieb was a man who seemed to have had his soul buried in his own ego centered energy. I am not the only one to feel this way. Ted Schwartz says this about him: "Sidney Gottlieb seemed to approach the chemistry division programs with an eye for truth and a mind not hampered by moral considerations. He was like a delinquent child with a loaded gun who comes to understand trauma, pain, and death only by firing a bullet into someone's heart. A multitude of sins could be whitewashed in the name of scientific knowledge and the search for truth in a world filled with lies and secrets."[56]

There is even a declassified document that Alan Scheflin found in which the CIA considers building a laboratory for its experiments,

"This laboratory will include a special chamber, in which all psychologically significant aspects of the environment can be controlled. This chamber will contain, among other things, a broad-spectrum polygraph for simultaneous recordings of a variety of psycho physiological reactions of the individual being studied. In this setting the various hypnotic, pharmacologic and sensory-environmental variables will be manipulated in a controlled fashion and quantitative and continuous recordings of the reactions of experimental subjects will be made."[57]

A 1951 declassified document also clarifies the kind of people that were employed by the CIA to teach hypnotism.[58] The document says,

"On 2 July 1951 approximately 1:00 p.m., the instruction began with deleted relating to the student some of his sexual experiences. Deleted stated that he had constantly used hypnotism as a means of inducing young girls to engage in sexual intercourse with him. Deleted a performer in deleted orchestra was forced to engage in sexual intercourse with deleted while under the influence of hypnotism...Deleted further stated that many times while going home on deleted, he would use hypnotic suggestion to have a girl turn around and talk to him and suggest sexual intercourse to him; and that as a result of these suggestions induced by him he spent approximately five nights a week away from home engaging in sexual intercourse."

If you still find it hard to believe that people in power will use four year old children if it suits their needs, then I refer you to an interview done by Allen Abel of Saturday Night Magazine.[59] On February 10, 2001, Dr. Peter Suedfeld, President of the Canadian Psychology Association and Director of Canada's Society for Academic Freedom and Scholarship, talked about selection of people for good performance as crew for a Mars mission. As a long time advisor to NASA, his solution was that an astronaut named Amanda Robinson be named as commander. "She's four years old," her grandfather says. She's quite small that will be important in crew selection for a long-duration mission and she's absolutely indomitable. Nothing gets her down. I call her Colonel. Boy, I'd love to live to see her go to Mars."

Mr. Abel also reports in this article, that Dr. Suedfeld, a psychology professor at the University of British Columbia, "made few friends when he suggested in articles and lectures, that many people came out of the Nazi death camps in pretty good emotional shape." The professor said, "Both the psychology and the Jewish communities accused me of trivializing the Holocaust by claiming people weren't all that crippled by living through it."

Now you tell me. Is using a four year old so hard to believe?

Chapter 3 - HOME SWEET HOME

Everything seemed back to normal when I found myself at home in the living room with my new little sister in a bassinet.[60] My aunt, my father's only sister, looked over at me and said,

"You know Carol Lee, you don't get to be your daddy's Little Girl anymore."[xxii]

I stood there looking up at her, hoping that it was true. Maybe my baby sister could take my place, and I wouldn't have daddy's awful thing stuck in my face and mouth anymore. I walked over to the dining room table, crawled underneath, and sat down. The avocado plant was cascading down from the center of the table so no one could see me. Maybe if they didn't see me it would be true. Maybe, just maybe, she was telling the truth. Then I remembered that nothing is as it seems and grownups only pretend to tell the truth. Daddy said I would always be his "Little Girl."

Luckily momma didn't forget I was there. She would take time away from the care of my little sister to steal out of the house and sit with me on the porch. It was early morning and the sweet morning dew still lay on the grass. Rays of sunshine were falling from above, warming both my shoulders and my mind as her fingers were entwined in my hair. She worked the brush furiously to create the ringlets that crowned my face. I could feel her breath on my cheek, and her smell warmed my belly. It was our morning ritual, our special time. I grasped it to my breast, and held onto the feelings so tightly that it took my breath away. Too soon the boys would be whining for their breakfast and their lunches would need to be made. Yuk, baked bean sandwiches. Glad I didn't have to go to school yet.

Whenever I return to those days in my mind, I remember a day in August the following year. We are again sitting on the porch, momma and me. My head is in her lap, and we are waiting patiently as the rescue team searches for the body of my two-year-old cousin in the creek behind our house.

It started so innocently with a game of follow the leader. Momma is upstairs checking on my little sister when my older cousin, Norman, has us form a line behind the garage. Holding hands with my brother and my younger cousin, we follow him to the waters edge. It is a game. We like games! He chooses my younger cousin and starts spinning his little body, till he pushes him over the edge. I watch in horror, frozen like a statue, as he picks up a rock and hits him over the head as he comes up for air. My brother grabs my arm and we start to run, but Norman is too fast. He reaches out, and I soon become the center of a tug of war.

“If you ever tell, I’ll do the same thing to you.”

I believed.

As Eva Mozes Kor, a child survivor of the Mengele Twins experiment said, “I was just a child who grew up fast, because children who have to face life and death situations are no longer children.”[61] For 40 years I placed this memory in a place in my mind where the pain of it could not touch me. Disassociation had become a way of life for me to cope with tragedy. I had no control over it. It was standard operating procedure, my mind’s way of allowing me to stay sane when everything around me was totally insane and out of control. It had also been the means by which the CIA chose to assure my silence and create personas to use in their experiments.

Life was indeed uncertain. No one could understand why I still sucked my thumb or actually fell asleep during naptime in kindergarten. One moment I was watching Howdy Doody, Kookla Fran and Ollie or Mighty Mouse saving the day. The next I was being molested or poked and prodded by some government official. The days of making mud pies and playing store with my friend across the street were overshadowed by these dark sinister days and nights of terror. At times I would feel like an elfin sprite when I was running through the grass barefoot, catching fireflies and making rings and bracelets with them. Other times I wanted to join Buster Brown and go live in that shoe. I yearned for a gramps like Timmy and Lassie’s, and I would imagine that Zorro would come and put his mark right on daddy’s chest for the whole world to see. It never happened.

I started first grade when I was five and a half, and sometime that fall I was playing at my aunt’s when I must have looked very forlorn. She came over and sat beside me on the cement porch rail and asked me,

“What’s the matter, Little Girl?”

That phrase again triggered Little Girl to come out and proceed to tell her exactly what the matter was. With every word that Little Girl spoke, my Aunt’s face seemed to turn a lighter shade of ashen gray. After lengthy questioning about what Little Girl was describing, there was no doubt in my Aunt’s mind that Daddy was gratifying himself in ways that didn’t involve penetration, but were just as awful. She promised to talk to momma and told me she would make it all stop. I was only privy to the screaming and yelling that took place downstairs after the disclosure. My mother had sent me upstairs after telling my aunt that “Eddy would never do that.”

It didn’t take daddy very long before he devised a plan to eliminate any suspicions that momma might have. I was taken to a field with a lot of trees and marshy grass. Daddy led me to one particular tree that had a large hole in it, just about where my shoulders came. My head was shoved into the hole, and another alter was created to handle the horror of that moment. The hole had been filled with garter snakes. Later that evening I went and told momma that I had been lying about what I said daddy had done to me. I was never able to speak out again, about that or any other sexual abuse that would take place. Where was Zorro when you needed him?

1953 also proved to be an important year for mind control when Allen Dulles was confirmed Director of the CIA. In a speech before the National Alumni Conference at Princeton University on April 10, 1953, he lectured his audience on "how sinister the battle for men's minds had become in Soviet hands." The human mind, Dulles warned was a "malleable tool," and the Red Menace had secretly developed "brain perversion techniques." Some of these methods were "so subtle and so abhorrent to our way of life that we have recoiled from facing up to them." Dulles continued, "The minds of selected individuals who are subjected to such treatment are deprived of the ability to state their own thoughts. Parrot-like, the individuals so conditioned can merely repeat the thoughts which have been implanted in their minds by suggestion from outside. In effect the brain becomes a phonograph playing a disc put on the spindle by an outside genius over which it has no control."

Three days after delivering this address Dulles authorized Operation MKULTRA. Originally established as a supplementary funding mechanism to the ARTICHOKE project, MKULTRA quickly grew into a mammoth undertaking that outflanked earlier mind control initiatives.

In 1978, Admiral Stansfield Turner, Director of the CIA, testified that of the 182 subprojects; 140 of them appeared to have connection with research into behavioral modification, drug acquisition and testing or administering drugs surreptitiously.

The 15 categories of subprojects were:

1. Research into the effects of behavioral drugs and/or alcohol: 17 subprojects not involving human testing, 14 subprojects definitely involving testing on human volunteers, and 6 subprojects involving tests on unwitting human beings.

2. Research on hypnosis: 8 subprojects, including two involving hypnosis and drugs in combination.

3. Seven subprojects on the acquisition of chemicals or drugs.

4. Four subprojects on the aspects of the magician's art, useful in covert operations; for instance, the surreptitious delivery of drug related material.

5. Nine subprojects on studies of human behavior sleep research, and behavioral change during psychotherapy.

6. Six subprojects on Library searches and attendance at seminars and international conferences on behavioral modifications.

7. Twenty-Three subprojects on motivational studies of defectors, assessments of behavior and training techniques.

8. Three subprojects on polygraph research

9. Three subprojects on funding mechanisms for MKULTRA's external research activities.

10. Six subprojects on research on drugs, toxins, and biologicals in human tissue, provision of exotic pathogens, and the capability to incorporate them in effective delivery systems.

11. Three subprojects on activities whose nature simply cannot be determined.

12. Three subprojects involving funding support for unspecified activities conducted with the Army Special Operations Division at Fort Detrick, Md.[62] Under the CIA's Project MKNAOMI, the Army assisted the CIA in developing, testing, and maintaining biological agents and delivery systems for use against humans as well as against animals and crops.

13. Single subprojects in such areas as the effects of electroshock, harassment techniques for offensive use, analysis of extrasensory perception, gas propelled sprays and aerosols, and four subprojects involving crop and material sabotage.

14. One or two subprojects on each of the following: blood grouping research; controlling the activities of animals; energy storage and transfer in organic systems; and stimulus and response in biological systems.

15) Three subprojects canceled before any work was done on them having to do with laboratory drug screening, research on brain concussion, and research on biologically active materials.[63]

Under Dulles MKULTRA funneled funds to 185 non-government researchers and assistants working for 80 institutions. These institutions included 44 colleges or universities, 15 research foundations or chemical or pharmaceutical companies and the like, 12 hospitals or clinics and 3 penal institutions.[64]

As Pravda said in 1951, "If ever the spy Allen Dulles should arrive in Heaven through somebody's absent-mindedness, he would begin to blow up the clouds, mine the stars and slaughter the angels." Allen Dulles cared little for the methods that were used to accomplish the secret projects he funded. Proof of this is clear when you look at his attempts in 1950 to convince John McCloy to intervene in General Alexander von Falkenhausen's trial. Von Falkenhausen had executed hostages in Belgium throughout the war and ordered the deportation of 25,000 Jews to death camps. Von Falkenhausen drew a twelve-year sentence but was freed after three weeks.[65]

His brother, John Foster Dulles was U.S. Secretary of State from 1953-1959. In Containing Communism Mr. Dulles was quoted as saying, "President Eisenhower surrendered all his power to me."[66] As long as John Foster Dulles was Secretary of State, Allen Dulles had no need to "chafe under political control." Both brothers "placed supreme confidence in their personal judgments. They were completely trusted and were able to act at will and shielded from any unpleasant consequences."[67] History, as you now see has proven this to be true.

Chapter 4 - Men Behind the Shadow Government

As high commissioner of occupied Germany, John McCloy was instrumental in the early release and commutation of numerous Nazi war criminals.[xxiii] In October 1950, he commuted the five-year sentence of Baron Ernst von Weizsacker, who as a Nazi Foreign Office official had been convicted of complicity in the deportation of some six thousand Jews from France to Poland.[68] In January of the following year, McCloy announced that five of the fifteen death sentences from the Nuremberg judgments would be carried out. He then reduced the sentences of sixty-four out of the remaining seventy-four war criminals. One third of these were to be released immediately.[69] He also reduced the sentences of all the remaining convicted doctors who had experimented on concentration-camp inmates. One doctor was paroled immediately for time served, and the life sentences of five others were reduced. One SS officer who confessed to having personally executed fifteen hundred Jews was reprieved because he had later refused to carry out any further murders.

- SS Lieutenant Heinz Schubert had his death sentence reduced to ten years. Schubert had signed a confession and testified that he had personally supervised a “special action” in which seven or eight hundred people were machined-gunned down at Simferopol.[70]

- SS Officer Walter Schellenberg, who had helped trap and exterminate the Jews of France, was also awarded clemency.[71]

- SS Brigadefuhrer Franz Six, convicted of murdering 200 people in the Ghetto of Smolensk served only four years in prison before McCloy gave him clemency. Dr. Six said in 1944, “The physical elimination of Eastern Jewry would deprive Jewry of its biological reserves. The Jewish Question must be solved not only in Germany but also internationally.”[72]

One must ask the question, “How could a man who was responsible for such actions, rise to such power in the government and private circles of the United States?” Prior to the war, McCloy was a senior partner with Milbank, Tweed, whose most important client was the Rockefeller family’s bank, Chase National. McCloy also provided counsel to Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, the Shah of Iran. The shah maintained a personal account and the Pahlavi Foundation account with Chase Bank. Allen Dulles was also a legal adviser to the shah.[73]

In 1947 McCloy was named to head the World Bank, which was made up of 40 countries with $8 billion in assets. McCloy and two other board members spent three months in Nelson Rockefeller’s personal home organizing the bank along commercial lines.[74]

In 1948 McCloy participated in a classified study of the CIA. He attended weekly meetings where he questioned CIA Director Rear Admiral Roscoe H. Hillenkoetter, George Kennan, Bill Donovan, Frank Wisner, and many other officials of the State Department and National Security Council. He recommended that the CIA should be given autonomy and should do more in the field of covert propaganda to wage psychological warfare. Frank Wisner, as head of the Office of Policy Coordination, which ran covert political action operations had his budget grow from $4.7 million in 1949 to $82 million in just three years.[75]

In the 50’s McCloy became chairman of the Chase National Bank and David Rockefeller became his protégé. He and David were both members of the Council on Foreign Relations. Also members of the CFR were Allen Dulles, Henry Kissinger, and Henry Heald, president of the Ford Foundation.

Henry Ford II recruited McCloy in 1953 to serve on the Ford Foundation’s board. He was one of three people on the board who could approve funding for CIA projects that took place under the cover of the Ford Foundation. He went on to replace Rowen Gaither as chairman of the Ford Foundation.

Joseph Johnson, president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace was another member of the CFR as well as Dean Rusk, president of the Rockefeller Foundation; Nelson Rockefeller; John D. Rockefeller III, Harry Guggenheim, Marshall Field, and John Whitney.[76]

To say that John McCloy rubbed shoulders with some of the most influential people of that decade is an understatement. As Henry Kissinger said in his autobiography The White House Years, "Presidents and Secretaries of State found in John McCloy a reliable pilot through treacherous shoals. He rarely supplied solutions to difficult problems, but he never failed to provide the psychological and moral reassurance that made solutions possible." In fact Henry served as a consultant to the president's Psychological Strategy Board, which Hoover regarded as a rival intelligence group. C.D. Jackson, the chief of the Psychological Strategy Board frequently consulted McCloy. Kai Bird referred to this as a "new rather shadowy executive agency that was supposed to help coordinate covert intelligence with sophisticated propaganda programs."[77]

According to Kai, McCloy was partially influenced by his friend Edward Meade Earle of Princeton's Institute for Advanced Study. A prominent historian, Earle had served on the OSS's Board of Analysts, and had helped Bill Donovan recruit academics for intelligence work during the war. By the early 1950's Earle was working with Allen Dulles and C. D. Jackson[xxiv] on various intelligence projects, including "some of the problems of 'psychological warfare' directed toward our allies."[78] Jackson said, "The three big ingredients of psychological warfare are money, no holds barred and no questions asked."[79]

Nelson Rockefeller, whose title was changed to Special Assistant for Cold War Strategy replaced C. D. Jackson as Special Assistant for Psychological Strategy in 1954. Officially Nelson was to give advice and assistance in the development of increased understanding and cooperation among all peoples. Unofficially the nature of the post was Presidential Coordinator for the CIA. As part of Nelson's responsibilities he attended meetings of the Cabinet, the Council on Foreign Economic Policy and the National Security Council, the highest policy making body in the government. He also functioned as the head of a secret unit called the Planning Coordination Group, consisting of himself, the Deputy Secretary of Defense, and the head of the CIA, Allen Dulles. This unit was charged with implementing National Security Council decisions.[80]

In 1979 John Loftus, working for the Office of Special Investigations made a trip to Suitland, Maryland to search the archives classified files for information on Nazi's that had been brought into the country. He was astounded to find twenty underground vaults, each one an acre in size, crammed floor to ceiling with classified files.[81] Loftus says that Nelson Rockefeller and Vice President Nixon had supervised the cover-up and burial of these files so that President Eisenhower could claim "plausible deniability."[82] In fact, years later when President Gerald Ford established a presidential commission to investigate the CIA, Vice-President Nelson Rockefeller was named to head it. John Loftus reports that knowledgeable observers compared the appointment to setting the fox to guard the henhouse, because of Rockefeller's links to the intelligence community and his knowledge of covert activities.[83]

In a recently declassified CIA file, the intelligence gathering community is summed up quite well,

"The life blood of intelligence is information. Collection of information is the most characteristic activity of the entire intelligence business. Accordingly, an intelligence organization cannot exist until it does a broad and systematic job of collecting. But in this very task lie methodological problems, which are so tough as to be almost insolvable, and in their unsolved state are a perpetual source of inefficiency.

A certain important fraction of the knowledge which intelligence must produce is collected through highly developed secret techniques. Herein begins perhaps the major methodological problem of the collection stage of the intelligence process.

It begins with compartmentation of the clandestine services. This compartmentation is dictated by the established necessity of secrecy. An absolute minimum of people must know "anything" about the operation, and the greatest amount of caution and dissimulation must attend its every move. But unless the clandestine services watch sharply it can become its own worst enemy. For if it allows the mechanisms of security to cut it off from some of the most significant lines of guidance, it destroys it own reason for existence.

With a high wall of impenetrable secrecy, it is constantly in danger of collecting the wrong information and not collecting the right. This danger is intensified by the very way the clandestine services operate. It involves highly complicated "tradecraft" techniques, clandestine agent recruitment and handling, nets and subnets, security and reliability of communications, and so on. Isolated by the security barrier, the perfecting of these techniques sometimes threatens to become and end in itself."[84]

All the key players were now in various positions of the government to carry on their covert activities under a cloak of secrecy. Shadow Government was indeed an appropriate name for the people who would move behind the scenes to enlist children to fight their Cold War for them by making them guinea pigs, and in some cases hypnotized operatives, spies, assassins and couriers.

Chapter 5 – Training for the Agency

Precautions must be taken not only to protect operations from exposure to enemy forces but also to conceal these activities from the American public in general. The knowledge that the Agency is engaging in unethical and illicit activities would have serious repercussions in political and diplomatic circles and would be detrimental to the accomplishment of its mission.

CIA Inspector General in assessing the benefits of Mind Control Research[85]

I was told that I worked for "The Agency." It was in actuality, key men and women in the CIA and other branches of the government, in league with certain extremely wealthy individuals who wanted to remain in the shadows shaping the outcome of world events.[xxv] As Lt. Col. Roberts said when he testified before a special joint committee of the Wisconsin State Legislature, "The most secret knowledge, a science which outdates history, is the science of control over people, governments and civilizations. The foundation of this ultimate discipline is the control of wealth. Through the control of wealth come the control of public information and the necessities of life. Through the control of news media comes thought control. Through the control of basic necessities comes direct control of people. A significant portion of the American public is yet to become aware of the Invisible Government of Monetary Power."

Early on, an information hot line was established between these people of money and power and people like Allen Dulles, Sid Gottlieb, Richard Nixon, and others. This hotline enabled them to be kept informed of the content of these experiments and who was participating. They in turn, found ways of blackmailing certain of these politicians, doctors, and scientists, so that they could control and manipulate some of these experiments. They hoped to eventually benefit personally from certain research findings. Many of the experiments started under Bluebird, Artichoke and MKULTRA continued behind the scenes, covertly and independent of the funding and knowledge of most of our government Black Projects with Black Budgets. Burton Hersh, describes the no questions asked as giving "rise to that generation's intelligence barons, its mysterious, mission-oriented professionals who held themselves accountable to nobody, unconcerned with constitutional limitations"[86]

The Senate Intelligence Committee concluded in 1976 that the CIA used compartmentation in the MKULTRA Program to conceal their "unethical and illicit activities."[87] Senator Frank Church, who led the congressional investigation of the CIA's improper and unlawful actions said that agency was "a rogue elephant" in the 1950s and 1960s, operating above the law and out of control as it plotted assassinations, illegally spied on thousands of Americans, and even drugged our own citizens in its effort to develop new weapons for its covert arsenal." The Agency would use any methods it needed to achieve its goals. Brice Taylor, in her book Starshine: One Woman's Valiant Escape from Mind Control refers to these people as the Council.[88]

In an interview for Nexus Magazine written by David G. Guyatt, former CIA/DIA deep-cover agent "Chip" Tatum takes this a step further when he speaks of a group he calls "Pegasus." [89]He says that this group operated on behalf of the US and other governments, undertaking tasks that ranged from narcotics smuggling to assassinations. He said that Pegasus was established during the Eisenhower years as a secret group inside the CIA to spy on that agency on behalf of the President. According to Tatum, the directors of Pegasus meet once a year in secret conclave following G7 meetings. The mission of Pegasus, Tatum explains is "to 'align' world leaders and financiers to our [US] policies and standards."

Lyman Kirkpatrick, who had been appointed Inspector General of the CIA in the fifties by Frank Wisner, characterized the entire covert operation as pretty much a matter of "who's manipulating whom." In an interview in 1982 with Burton Hersh he said, "That's why controls are important. It's done through money, the development of friendships, of mutuality of interests. You get people so much in your debt, under your control that they can't break off or betray you."[90]

Burton Hersh also reported that Allen Dulles relied on commercial associations to mask the Agency's fund transfers. He says, "The J. Henry Schroder Banking Corporation and the Schroder Trust functioned as prime depositories for CIA monies throughout the fifties and sixties, long after the New York branch had formally been reabsorbed by the London-based J. Henry Schroder and Company, Limited. Like the Kaplan Foundation and half a dozen others which ultimately served as conduits between the accumulating fronts and the proliferation of committees and congresses and institutes and societies, the banking nexus depended on how many layers of concealment an operation might require."[91]

Less you immediately dismiss this as just another conspiracy theory, in November 1998 in an interview with The Observer, the former US Ambassador to Chile, Edward Korry told a remarkable story. He said it was important to take out of the shadows the last case of US 'dollar diplomacy'. Korry described still classified cables, and information censored in papers but now available under the US Freedom of Information Act. He had served under Presidents Kennedy, Johnson, and Nixon, and he told how US companies, from cola to copper used the CIA as an international debt collection agency and investment security force.

President-elect Gregory Palast reported that the CIA's October 1970 plot to overthrow Chile's Salvador Allende was the direct result of a plea for action a month earlier by PepsiCo chairman, Donald Kendall to the company's former lawyer, President Richard Nixon. Richard Helms testified that he thought Nixon's determination to act was the doing of Donald Kendall who had arranged for the owner of the company's Chilean bottling operation, Agustin Edwards and himself to meet National Security Adviser Henry Kissinger and John Mitchell for breakfast on September 15 1970. Hours later, Nixon called in his CIA chief, Richard Helms and according to Helm's handwritten notes ordered the CIA to prevent Allende's inauguration. In fact Nixon told Helms to leave no stone unturned in the attempt to block Allende's confirmation.

Korry told Palast that in 1963 American-based firms had kicked back millions of dollars to pay for well over half of Eduardo Frei, the Christian Democratic party candidates' successful election campaign in return for questionable, guarantees and insurance arranged by the US government. They had invested 2 billion dollars in the Chilean economy, consequently the US government committed extraordinary monetary, intelligence and political resources to protect them.

When US financial and political investments faced unexpected jeopardy in 1970 because of Allende's plans to nationalize their operations, President Nixon came under intense pressure from his political donors in business. The president was aware that the owner of Chile's phone company, ITT Corporation, was illegally channeling funds into Republican Party coffers. Nixon could not ignore ITT. An ITT board member, ex-CIA director John McCone, pledged Kissinger $1 million in support of CIA action to prevent Allende from taking office. Separately, Anaconda Copper and other multinationals under the aegis of David Rockefeller's Business Group for Latin America offered $500,000 to buy influence with Chilean congressmen to reject confirmation of Allende's victory. Korry vetoed the cash for payoffs from Anaconda and the other firms. Korry disclosed that he even turned in an army major to the Chilean authorities who planned to assassinate Allende. Korry said he was unaware the officer was linked to the CIA plotters.

Another secret group was made up of scientists called the "Golden Fleece." The Pentagon-funded Institute picked these men and women in the late 1950s for defense analysis. Their jobs were to do some of the most esoteric and complex defense research. The whole success of this enterprise depended upon establishing it as a mark of highest prestige to be invited into this elite group.[92] The Pentagon immediately received the benefit of the talents of these “Jason’s” upon ARPA’s[xxvi] birth in 1958. ARPA officials said that some 20 “Jason’s,” an elite, informal, almost secret group was still at its disposal in 1976. Over the years, the “Jason’s” have been holding quiet brainstorming sessions at hideaways around the country to feed ARPA ideas.”[93] Supposedly these scientists represented the cream of the scholarly community in technical fields, and helped the government produce many of its most advanced technical weapons systems since the end of the Second World War.

Daniel Kevles, in his book The Physicists says that some forty Jason’s, many with their families, would spend six or seven summer weeks pondering defense issues at Woods Hole, Massachusetts or La Jolla, California. He talks about “their work on the development of an electronic barrier, a system of electronic sensing devices to be strung across a no-man’s-land between North and South Vietnam that would blow up anyone, civilian or combatant, who ventured into the area.” He goes on to quote Fred Bramfman, the director of an anti war research group in Washington, D.C. as saying that the group’s work in opposition to the strategic arms race meant that the Jason’s “are lesser, rather than greater, war criminals. They are dramatic examples of how it is possible to be a moderate, well-meaning, decent war criminal.”[94]

I wonder if they too were privy to the secret weapon that the CIA was building? Children as mind-controlled operatives certainly were advanced technical weapons. Some of the training and experimentation that many of us became involved in was a clear indication of what lengths these power hungry egomaniacs were willing to go, to accomplish their New World Order. I detest these people for invading my mind and creating alters for their own evil purposes.

These mind-controlled (MC) parts were told they had a “Nobler Purpose” and that they “Must survive at any cost.” As such, suicide programs were layered into my system in the event that I should start to heal and tell. The strength and courage it has taken to break the hold these men had on my mind, and not react to this suicide programming is a clear indicator of the beauty of the spirit that lay within each of us.

I was able to retain a spark of life that held on tightly, even though it was programmed to give up. Only those who have walked in the shoes of the betrayed innocents can truly comprehend the horror of what I and others like me have been forced to endure. Thank God, that some of us have held on and worked at healing. The music of our souls is being painted on the canvass of our hearts and minds. You can hear it in our tears sometimes, and you can hear it in our songs of joy. You can hear it at night when everyone else is asleep and our minds keep us awake with dialogue from the distant past. I refuse to let anyone take this innocence and beauty and music from me again. That’s why it is so important for me to tell you the rest of my story.

The Agency arranged with Grandfather to start my sexual training in 1954. Being the pedophile that he was, I’m sure he thoroughly enjoyed the part they gave him in my training. By this time, he had sold the greenhouse and moved a half block away into a new brick home with a basement. It was this basement that I would come to despise more than any other symbol of my childhood. In 1954, I was still only six years old and attending second grade. I was forced to participate in a traumatizing initiation rite of manhood for my twelve-year-old brother on Grandfather's pool table in the basement. I was to totally lose my sexual self to a new persona created that day from the trauma I was forced to endure. I stared at the swinging lamp above the pool table while the initiation was culminated, and lost myself in a haze of darkness for the next thirty years.

Grandfather gave the new part created that day the name Carlotta. From that day forward he trained her in various ways to please one particular man. He was a very wealthy man who I knew as Rocky. He contributed large sums of money to the "Cause"; consequently, whatever he wanted he got.

Grandfather would arrange to have me stay the night when he had a mind to train me. He would leave his glass eye on the bedside table and I would take his hand and follow him to the basement. Training was tedious and often I would be slapped for not doing it right. I became like an automaton, as I stared into the hole where his eye should have been, listened and followed his instructions.

Two years later my grandfather and an uncle, (Norman's father) used the basement for their kiddy porn productions. One afternoon, I was listening to Paul Harvey's noon broadcast on the radio with grandfather. He always sat by the window overlooking the lake and rocked and listened attentively whenever Paul spoke. To Grandfather it was almost a holy event, and anyone who dared disturb him during the broadcast would face his wrath. When the broadcast was finished he walked over to the incinerator door that was in the wall in the kitchen and motioned for me to come over. He grabbed my arm and proceeded to push my head with his other hand into the opening. I remember the smell and the heat, and I could feel my face flushing. It seemed like an eternity before he pulled my head away. He marched me down the basement stairs, and when we got next to the furnace he showed me the flames and informed me that this is where anything he stuck in the incinerator door upstairs went. Ashes, that's what I remember. Ashes are all that would remain of me if I didn't cooperate.

It wasn't long till the kiddy porn photography session started. I was nowhere to be found. I had created Mary, a new personality, to take my place after the threat of burning in the inferno that I saw inside the furnace. Sometimes I would be alone and asked to pose in what I now know were provocative poses. Other times Grandfather would have some of the other grandchildren there with me. The fear he was able to produce guaranteed cooperation.

I remember two other things about that year. One is my fourth grade teacher's name and that she wore beautiful shoes. The other is that I joined the Girl Scouts, and I had to go through an initiation ceremony where I stood on a mirror. As harmless as this was for the rest of the brownie troop, as soon as I heard the word initiation, I left and my alter Carlotta came. The rest is still a blur.

1957 was to bring with it one last baby for Momma. In December quite near my tenth birthday, my last brother was born. By age thirty-two, Momma had given birth to eight children. By Mothers' Day, the following year, she was clinging to life from a hysterectomy.

Daddy took us all to the hospital and the sight we saw terrified each of us. Hanging from a pole was a bag of blood and another bag with clear fluids. Momma looked all white, and she managed a weak smile when he paraded us all in. I wanted to crawl up on the bed and lay my head on her shoulder, but all she could do is squeeze my hand and tell me to be a good "Little Girl." Oh momma, why did you have to say those words? I desperately loved and missed her, but my little girl part hated her for lying there and leaving her unprotected at home.[xxvii]

When momma was finally allowed to come home from the hospital, daddy had already arranged for Catholic Charities to provide help to take care of all of us kids, the cleaning, and cooking. A parade of women came in and out of our house. My first and favorite was a big black lady, just like the one on the front of the pancake box. She was kind, loving and figured out too much too fast, so daddy had her replaced with another black lady. Sofronia liked daddy's whiskey that he kept above the cupboard. He would have a drink every morning just to get him started, and it wasn't long before he figured out that she had been watering the whiskey. At least that's the story he told Catholic Charities. She was probably totally flawless too. The last lady was Jezel. She was French and spoke with the most wonderful accent I ever heard. When Momma got on her feet, her services became "No Longer Needed."

It wasn't long after she got on her feet that Momma ran away from home for the first time. It was to begin a pattern that stayed with her through my high school years and beyond. Daddy told us that if we would only be better children, she wouldn't run away. I remember the famous speech he gave in front of the aqua couch with the big buttons. We were all gathered around and told it was "All our fault." I know each of us that were old enough to understand, believed him.[xxviii]

Guilt was a wonderful control mechanism and daddy used it effectively every chance he got. He had such control over momma that she never had a chance. He tracked momma down at her sister's home several hundred miles away where she thought she had escaped him. He brought her home and into the mental hospital she went.

Back in those days, a husband, with the cooperation of a doctor could have his wife committed. Our family doctor was also a personal friend with daddy. They spent a lot of time hunting and fishing together. This was useful not only in getting momma locked up, but in having no questions asked when broken bones were to be set, illnesses tended to, or pills to be dispensed.

Peter Breggin in Toxic Psychiatry tells how H. C. Tien,[xxix] a Michigan psychiatrist would draw attention in the late 1970's and early 80's by using electroshock to obliterate and reprogram the mind of a woman to make her a more suitable housewife.[95] He would utilize ECT (electro convulsive therapy) to erase memory and personality, thereby eradicating the woman's identity; in order to reprogram it according to a "blueprint" worked out with the husband prior to the shock. Tien called his method ELT, explaining that E is for electricity, L is for love, and T is for therapy. I'm quite sure this is what daddy had hoped to accomplish with momma, but it never lasted. It certainly makes me wonder if Dr. Tien wasn't testing out these theories under cover in the fifties for the CIA.

I'll never forget the first time I was taken to the State Hospital to visit momma. I was still living at home with daddy and my three older brothers. My four younger siblings had been farmed out to different relatives. I was a physical and emotional wreck from the nightly molestations. My hands shook uncontrollably all of the time, and I was unable to eat or sleep. My brothers took to calling me "Jervous and Nerky."

Daddy was bound and determined to keep me quiet, so we made a trip to the hospital. I had no realization that my mother was behind locked doors. When we were let in by the nurse and shown to a day room, there were scads of people walking around in a daze. Momma was one of them. She had undergone a series of electric shocks that left her a walking zombie. When she finally came home, so much of her memory was gone that she had to relearn my youngest brothers' birthday, along with a lot of other personal information she had forgotten. I don't recall anything that happened during that visit to the hospital until we left, and the nurse closed and locked the door behind us. Daddy grabbed hold of my hand and turned me around and said, "If you ever tell what's happening at home Little Girl, you'll end up here too."

I believed. When it came to a threat, daddy always carried through.

In a letter to me, my brother gave me new insight into what this time of moms' life was like. He writes, "I'm sure that you know that mom and I were very close. I was probably closer to her than any of her children. We used to talk for hours when we had a chance. She was the bravest person that I ever knew. When I was in high school mom went to the state hospital.[xxx] I worked in the kitchen at St. Vincent's Hospital after school. Dad always thought I worked five nights a week, but I only worked three. The other two evenings I would take a bus to the State Hospital to see mom. It was a horrible time of her life, but she didn't want to leave. She didn't even want to come home on the weekends they offered her toward the end of her stay. We talked for hours and hours and much of which she told me, I didn't understand or thought that she really was a little crazy. Later I figured out that she was the sanest person I ever knew. She was terrified of the electric shock treatments that they were giving her. She looked at it as if it were a form of torture. They called it treatment. It was barbaric. How could people with any conscience scramble somebody's brain with electricity? After her "Treatments" she would be disassociated and depressed for days, but still she chose to stay rather than come home. She often told me that she could at any time tell the doctors the right answers to be released, but she chose not to. Well at fifteen years old I understood little of what she told me, but later I understood a lot. That poor woman is certainly in heaven, because she went through hell on earth. I don't know if you knew how much she hated dad. Let me tell you from what she used to say, I could not comprehend any hate that intense. It was the only emotion she had for him. She was also terrified of him. The only person that mom hated more than dad was his father. I never knew why, but she despised him more than anything or anyone in this world."

Momma wasn't alone in receiving electroshock to make her more submissive and alter her personality. Dr. D. Ewen Cameron of the Allan Memorial Institute of Psychiatry, McGill University in Montreal, Canada was doing MKULTRA experiments with electroshock and drugs for the CIA. The CIA funded Dr. Cameron's work through a cover organization called the Society for the Investigation of Human Ecology in New York founded by Cornell University neurologist Harold Wolff.[xxxi] Grants were made to eight universities as well as several individual researchers for mind control experiments with the Society being the CIA's cover mechanism.[96] Wolff had originally been commissioned by Allen Dulles to do an official study of Soviet and Chinese brainwashing techniques in 1953. Wolff coincidentally was treating Allen Dulles' son for brain damage from a head wound he suffered in Korea.

Dr. Cameron had headed Allan Memorial since 1943, when the Rockefeller Foundation had donated funds to set up a psychiatric facility at McGill University.

He was later elected president of the American Psychiatric Association in 1953 and went on to become the first president of the World Psychiatric Association. Such a notable list of accomplishments for a heartless man whose experiments would rival some that took place in Nazi Germany. I find it very curious that he was appointed in 1945 to the American panel to examine Rudolf Hess at the Nuremberg trials, and then later carried out experiments that would result in transforming patients into as Arlene Tyner reported, "virtual vegetables."[97]

Cameron's experiments funded under MKULTRA Subproject 68 were called depatterning or "psychic driving." He combined electro convulsive therapy with chemically induced sleep therapy. The intensive electroshocks used in these experiments were not the same form of ECT used routinely in the treatment of patients suffering from depression. Both the voltage and the number of shocks administered were greatly increased. Instead of stopping after the procedure had induced one grand mal seizure, the subjects were shocked again and again until no further seizures could be elicited. According to Jim Turner, one of the lawyers for Cameron's victims, there was no question that this was a profoundly intrusive and destructive form of electroshock, which was far different from that which was conventionally used for therapeutic purposes.[98]As Peter Schrag says in his book Mind Control, "The heavier the technology, the more difficult it is to distinguish treatment from torture."[99]

While sleeping, patients would be forced to listen to messages designed to reprogram their behavior. These messages were delivered through pillow speakers hooked to a mega-recorder with eight separate playback units enabling them to do eight patients at one time. Sometimes running wires to their legs and shocking them at the end of the message intensified the effect. In some cases he even used curare to paralyze patients that were not in drug induced sleeps, as patients hated sitting still and listening to these repetitious messages. Cameron wrote that psychic driving provided a way to make "direct, controlled changes in personality." One of Cameron's Canadian victims, Rita Zimmerman, was "depatterned" through a total of 30 electroshocks. She underwent 56 days of prolonged drug-induced sleep, received 14 days of negative "psychic driving," and 18 days of positive "psychic driving."

John Marks reports in The Search for the Manchurian Candidate, how Cameron wrote that his patients moved through three distinct stages: loss of memory, loss of space-time imaging, and in the third stage all anxiety disappeared and there was complete amnesia for all events in his life. Working with his assistant Leonard Rubenstein, Cameron experimented with sensory deprivation combined with drugs to break down the subjects will and leave them open to the taped messages. In an August 2, 1977 New York Times interview, Rubenstein admitted the their work was directly related to brainwashing. He said the CIA had investigated brainwashing among soldiers who had been in Korea and we in Montreal started brainwashing patients instead of using drugs.

Peter Schrag reports how Robert Dies, a clinical psychologist at the Institute for Living in Hartford, Connecticut viewed ECT. Dies wrote that ECT had been recommended for the patient because of his pathological behavior, and that his symptoms were unacceptable and must be eliminated. Conformity by the patient represented protective action to avert expected punishment. He also wrote that ECT could be characterized as having a decidedly negative reinforcement value. Dr. Richard Rubin of Trenton, New Jersey told the Canadian Psychiatric Association that the most effective use of ECT was to time the shock to coincide with the disturbing thought or behavior that the therapist was trying to eliminate.[100]

These were the methods Ewen Cameron used on me while my mother was institutionalized. I was about twelve years old and what Dr. Cameron did to me became burned into my mind. First I was given a shot of curare and placed in a box in a converted stable behind the hospital that housed a behavioral laboratory. Then snakes were put over my body and the lid was closed on the box. I was completely conscious but unable to move as a result of the curare. This trauma was to insure that I would never speak about what was to come later.[xxxii] How long I was encased in this box, I will never know. I created another alter to handle this traumatizing event that almost precipitated my demise from fear alone. It became the hardest memory I was to ever relive in my quest for integration. It was triggered when I was weeding in my gardens and a worm crawled across my hand. I went into a full-blown abreaction (an actual reliving of the event, accompanied by all the sensory stimulation and original emotional responses). My husband was in a panic as to what to do to trigger me out of the abreaction. My blood pressure had risen to an alarming rate and I was barely breathing. Finally, using a cold cloth on the back of my neck and talking ever so gently to me, he was able to revive me.

In 1991 at the time I relived this, I had no knowledge of who Dr. Cameron was, let alone his inclusion in the MKULTRA CIA experiments.[101] When I first saw a picture of this man, I became violently ill.

The sensory deprivation with curare that I experienced was similar to tests that neurologist Harold Wolff was performing for the CIA under MKULTRA Subproject 61. Like Cameron, Wolff believed that sensory deprivation made patients more receptive to the suggestions of the psychotherapist. In a CIA memo dated August 29, 1960 he compared the changes in behavior due to various kinds of stress (sensory deprivation, threatening life situations, mental disorders, peptic ulcers, etc.) to behavioral changes that were brought about by actual loss of cerebral tissue.

He also said, “It is well known that profound disturbances of the highest integrative functions, accompanied by pronounced disturbances of mood, thought, and behavior may be produced in people by exposing them to environments to which they can make no adequate adaptation, such as concentration camps, or prison procedures aimed at interrogation and indoctrination.”[102]

During these experiments he found that unusually high levels of neurokinin-forming enzymes were present in the cerebral spinal fluid of his patients. He also found that LSD-25 mimicked one apparent action of neurokinin, stimulation of respiration.

Harold Wolff was not only working for the CIA through the Human Ecology Society, but also for the Army. His name is mentioned in a declassified document dated January 1957 from the Army’s Inspector Generals Report on use of Volunteers in Chemical Agent Testing. The citation reads, “Letter, Chief of Research and Development to Dr. Harold G. Wolff, New York Hospital, subject Human Volunteer Tests with K Agents.”

The text says, “In 1957 several additional field type tests were conducted in and around Edgewood Arsenal. The first of these tests involved the use of a NIKE missile unit’s radar van at Aberdeen Proving Ground.[xxxiii] Available records indicated that 16 volunteers received LSD prior to attempting to perform the tracking and recording operations associated with the employment of radar equipment."

There seems to be no shortage of public information on the nature of the research that was conducted under the MKULTRA umbrella, you just need to know where to look for it. The U. S. Air Force helped sponsored the publication of The Manipulation of Human Behavior, a compilation of works in which many of the MKULTRA doctors cite the results of their experiments. The Human Ecology Society is listed in this book as helping to fund some of Harold Wolff, Martin Orne and Lawrence Hinkle's works which are published in this book. Other MKULTRA funded doctors such as Harold Abramson, George Estabrooks, and Seymour Kety are also cited. Many survivors consider it to be a scandal that the horror that we experienced could be embedded in the abstract detached language used in published books, papers, and reports.

I came to remember not only the experiment that Dr. Cameron was to perform on me, but also what Dr. Black (Dr. Mengele) was doing with the eggs he harvested after performing an abortion on me in Montreal. The day I read the headline "Genome Mapped, So What is Next?" was when I understood Dr. Black's purpose for this bizarre procedure.[103] I discovered that RNA reads DNA coding for a gene. Perhaps Mengele was one of the pioneers in genetic research, and I happened to be an available donor.

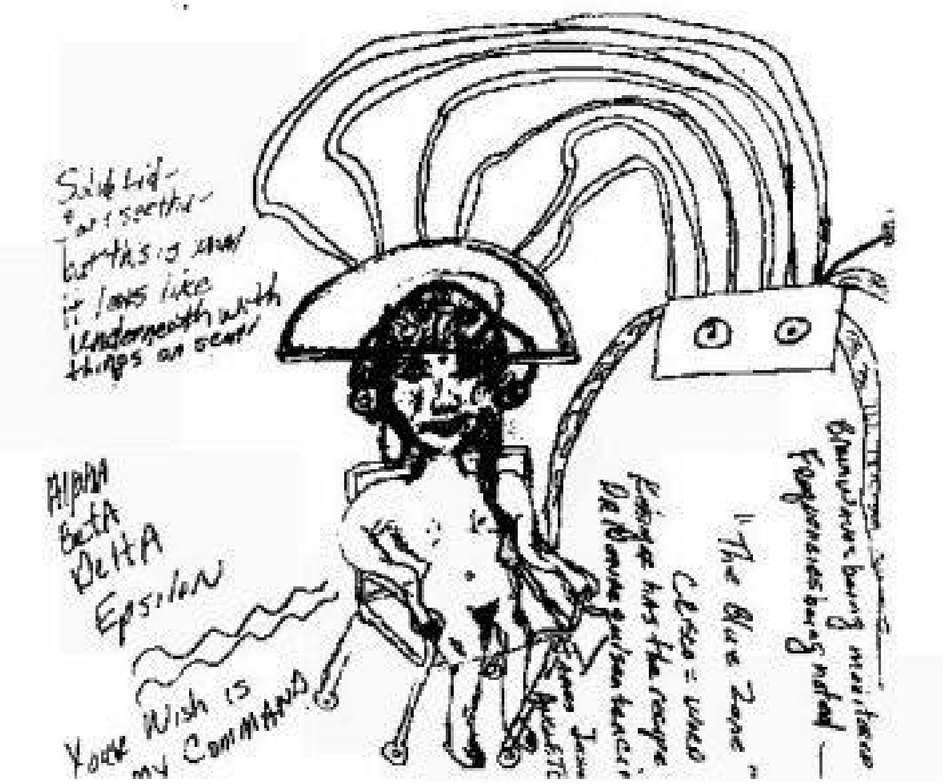
Dr. Cameron too had been experimenting with ribonuclease which is an enzyme that destroys RNA, and he found that senile patients had much more of the ribonuclease enzyme present in their blood streams than did non-senile older patients. He was trying to determine if RNA was involved in helping the brain to store away long-term memories. If that were the case, then too much ribonuclease would wipe out the engrams (memories) before they could become permanent. Perhaps the CIA was interested in using ribonuclease for destroying memories.

I was given an injection before the experiment started. After the procedure was finished fluid was removed from the back of my neck, near or in my spine. Someone even said, "Be careful or you'll end up paralyzing the little kid." I believe they could have been measuring the amount of RNA and other chemicals in my body after the programming session.

After the injection that I believe was a radioactive isotope, I had earphones placed on my head along with being hooked up to a machine that looked like a hair dryer. Commands were then used to call forth my alter "Guy," who had been created when I was four years old. I was placed before a blackboard, where they taught me how to run energy thru the meridians of the body and back to the brain to kill a target with a brain aneurysm. In order to do this, I was taught to contain all the anger and hate I had accumulated during traumas, and to release the "Red Fire" when cued.[xxxiv]

I know that all of this sounds like science fiction. It would be so easy to believe that none of this ever happened. As Arthur Schopenhauer said, "All truth passes through three stages. First, it is ridiculed. Second it is violently opposed. Third it is accepted as being self-evident." Look at the following pictures with an open mind and you will see the truth.

I drew this after remembering the experiments performed on me by Dr. Cameron in Montreal.



Solid lid — & rest soothing — but this is how it looks like underneath with things on scalp
Alpha Beta Delta Epsilon
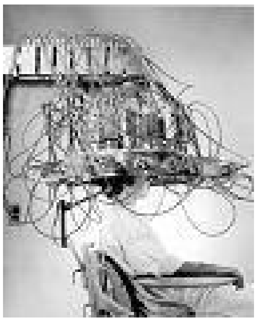
Your Wish is my Command
Brainwaves being monitored
Frequencies being noted —
"The Blue Zone"
Cisco = who
Kissinger has the recipe



I found the picture next to it over a year later displayed at the Department of Energy's web site.[104] It is a Positron Emitter Detector (circa 1962).

I believe my alters and CIA personas were being identified within a specific area of my brain while the programming session was in progress. Radioactive isotopes attach to glucose and oxygen, which are the fuels of the brain. They are then tagged and collected by a computer that processes the images or information. As each alter was being programmed, detectable energy flashes were being picked up and a recording was made. This also assured the doctors that they indeed were working with different parts of my personality, separate and apart from the me that they would eventually awaken. This part returned to "normal" living with no knowledge of any of the events that had taken place during the programming session.

In a CIA declassified document dated January 1, 1950 interrogation techniques were discussed.[105] "Potentially useful secret drugs (and various brain damaging procedures) will be similarly tested in order to ascertain their fundamental effect upon brain function and upon the subject's mood, thought, behavior conditioning, memory and speech mechanisms...Where any of these studies involve potential harm to the subject, we expect the Agency to make available suitable subjects and a proper place for the performance of necessary experiments."

It is evident from this memo that there was a total lack of concern for the damage that would be inflicted to accomplish the purpose of these experiments. Why then would there be any concern for the age of the subject?

At the end of my programming by Dr. Cameron, a voice gave me trigger codes for self-destruction. This was done to prevent me from telling about the nature of this experiment in the event I would ever begin to remember. Taking the fluid samples from my spine and applying electric shock ended the experiment. I remember Dr. Cameron saying,

"Experiment 24: Create mini seizures, not unlike Temporal Lobe Epilepsy. Purpose: To create amnesia of the new Persona created."

When the electricity began going through me, I left my body and watched from above as it went into a short twitching, trembling, convulsing type of behavior. I especially remember the muscles in my right arm seemed to come alive and really jump. I kept seeing white lightening type flashes of light every time they gave me a jolt of electricity.

A declassified document describing a synopsis of experiments conducted after May 1, 1958 refers to new instrumentation being developed. "One further study which has been of considerable interest to us has been the investigation of the subjective pain experience associated with electric shock. A preliminary attempt has been made to scale this along the lines of Wolff, Hardy, and Goodell's efforts. In conjunction with this, a new kind of shock electrode is being developed which may control spacing of contact points better than previously possible."[106]

From January 1957 until September 1960, Dr. Cameron's project received $64,242.44 in CIA funds.[107] According to an October 31, 1978 memorandum by Assistant CIA General Counsel William Allard, which specifically assessed the Agency's involvement in the Montreal experiment, substantial funds had been flowing from the CIA to McGill in support of the project subsequent to 1956.[108] When the CIA stopped funding him, Cameron received $57,750 from the Canadian Government to continue his research from 1961 to 1964.[109] A truly ironic fact found in Dr. Cameron's application for a grant for these experiments in 1957 is his listing that McGill University had Federal tax exemption for scientific apparatus for teaching and/or research, and that grants from the United States organizations could become tax deductible if the checks were made payable to Friends of McGill University, Inc.[110]

The actual number of patients on whom Cameron reported trying varieties of his experimental techniques is reported as 332; although as Anne Collins reports in: In the Sleep Room that in later years he took to reporting only the cases that had what he considered interesting or positive results.[111] In 1988 nine of these Canadian survivors agreed to an out-of-court settlement of $750,000 after an eight-year long battle with CIA lawyers.

John Gittinger, CIA agent and psychologist was Ewen Cameron's project officer. In testimony before Congress on August 3, 1977, Gittinger responds to Senator Kennedy's questions on his involvement.

Gittinger: "My responsibilities...was not directly related to drugs at all. I was a psychologist charged with the responsibility of trying to develop as much information as I could on various cultures, overseas cultures, anthropological type data, if you follow what I mean. I was also engaged in trying to work out ways and means of assessing people and understanding people. I originally became involved in this through working on Chinese culture, and over a series of time I was introduced to the problem of brainwashing, which is the thing that really was the most compelling thing in relationship to this, and became charged with the responsibility of trying to find out a little bit about interrogation techniques."[112]

In further testimony he said, "By 1962 and 1963, the general idea we were able to come up with is that brainwashing was largely a process of isolating a human being, keeping him out of contact, putting him out of control, putting him under long stress in relationship to interviewing and interrogation, and that they could produce any change that way without having to resort to an kind of esoteric means."[xxxv]

On January 19, 1983 in an oral deposition, Gittinger testified concerning the CIA involvement with Cameron as follows:

"Now that was a foolish mistake. We shouldn't have done it...As I said, I'm sorry we did it. Because it turned out to be a terrible mistake."

Gittinger concluded that if he had it to do over again, "I would refuse to support him or be interested in him."[113]

One of the programs instilled in me by Ewen Cameron was to psychically kill Mao Tse-tung with a brain aneurysm. When my alter Guy remembered this programming in 1999, he thought Mao was still alive. Guy's handler had never initiated his programming command, so when he was brought out of Shadowland where he was discovered, he was still awaiting orders to release the "Red Fire." The cued words that were supposed to be spoken were, "When the Eagle Fly's, Mao Tse-tung Must Die." To find out Mao was dead and gone was truly a relief for my Guy alter, and the first step in integrating him into my total personality.

In 1964 at the age of 16, I was taken to an underground military facility to demonstrate these psychic abilities that had been perfected with these brainwashing techniques. I took an elevator ride deep below the earth, and then rode a golf cart down some very long hallways arriving in a cavern that was large enough to hold a missile upright and still have room overhead. I was placed in a chair and an intravenous drip was hooked up. I listened as the head of the demonstration told the others attending that if I were to get "out of control," the man attending me would inject a sedative, and I would immediately be made unconscious. I have to admit I was feeling sorry for the poor man that had to stand by me with the syringe. He didn't have much choice but to comply. There were mostly all old people present, the "Geritol" set.[114] One man was even in a wheelchair with oxygen tanks aboard. They went into a control room with glass windows for viewing, and watched as I was ordered to direct the "Red Fire" at something or someone behind a concrete barrier. I can't tell you whether or not I was successful, as I don't remember. Maybe that is for the best.

This does sound totally ridiculous in retrospect, but no more ridiculous than Sidney Gottlieb providing poison to kill Fidel Castro. As part of the CIA's assassination plots, he developed a poison handkerchief to kill an Iraqi colonel, an array of toxic gifts to be delivered to Fidel Castro, and a poison dart to kill a leftist leader in the Congo.

In the Dark Side of Camelot, Seymour Hersh describes how this secret program of assassination became known as “Executive Action” when Kennedy was inaugurated.[115] William K. Harvey was put in charge of this secret program code named ZR/RIFLE. Burton describes the former FBI agent as “short and fat, with bulging eyes, a raspy voices and a serious drinking problem. He often walked around with two pearl-handled pistols tucked into his belt and bragged incessantly about his success with women.”

Gottlieb met with him in January 1961, five days after Kennedy’s inauguration. They discussed Castro, Lumumba, and Trujillo as potential targets. On the next day Harvey met with Arnold Silver, the CIA’s station chief in Luxembourg, and talked about recruiting agents for the ZR/RIFLE program. Hersh reports there was much talk of security and the need not to put anything in writing, “No other agencies. No project on paper...Never mention word assassination.”

Earlier in 1960, Gottlieb came up with the idea of infecting a handkerchief and mailing it to Iraq via the CIA station in New Delhi, India. They were trying to get rid of General Abdul Karim Kassem, the military strongman of Iraq. Sidney Gottlieb told Hersh, “It was not an assassination. They just wanted him to get sick for a long time. I went to Bissell and he said go ahead.”

Gottlieb also helped create a CIA assassination kit containing needles, rubber gloves, gauze masks, and lethal biological materials. Bissel ordered Gottlieb to the Congo with his kit in September 1960, to give the kit to Lawrence Devlin to poison Lumumba. Gottlieb told Hersh, “I did ask Bissell, ‘Was this our idea?’ The answer was that it came from ‘the highest source--President Eisenhower.”[116]

Perhaps our government took this apparent use of the mind to a different level. It could explain the bizarre nature of the experiments they performed on me. Chris Bucholtz reports on the Air Force’s use of the brain in an article he wrote in 1995.[117] He says,

“Scientists at the Aeronautical Systems Centre (ASC) at the US Air Force’s Wright Patterson AFB, Ohio are studying the use of brain-actuated control techniques as a means of controlling aircraft.[xxxvi] In the past the problem with thought-control techniques has been discerning the faint electromagnetic brain signals which accompany voluntary thought, from the flurry of “background noise” in the brain caused by everyday activity. In the ASC experiments, pilots in a simulator face two fluorescent lights, which pulse at 13.25 Hz. This causes nerve cells in the subject’s visual cortex to fire at the same frequency. Electrodes on their heads detect the resulting brain-wave patterns, feeding them to an amplifier and a filter. The filter picks out the 13.25.Hz waves and measures their power. A bar scale displays a measurement of these waves, which allows the subjects to learn how to vary the intensity of their brain responses.”

The “Red Fire” sounds like the same thing that the British philosopher Herbert Spencer suggested more than 100 years ago. He believed that each child was born with an energy-producing machine of some kind inside it, and that this energy must be released in some fashion or the child would “explode.”[118] In a 1994 article from Aviation Week and Space Technology , William Scott reports on an interview with a retired colonel who confirmed that the Army conducted experiments in the 1960s aimed at controlling air defense missiles with brainwaves.

Some of this becomes clearer when you look at a declassified CIA document dated January 1, l965.[119] This document is an account of what types of things were discovered on a trip to Russia. The document talks about hypnotized patients and acupuncture, and the variation of conductivity between the network points according to the patient's condition in hypnosis. It also talks about fastening electrodes to humans around the head with an open helmet that contains screw contact electrodes that can be moved about and brought into light but constant pressure contact. Many survivors besides me have drawn themselves with this helmet like device on. They go on to talk about a training device, which uses a cylindrical capacitor. This device can be used to study one's ability to concentrate and focus the mind, and by practice, one should be able to increase the minds ability to control the energy body. One hand holds the cylinder and the thumb and the forefinger of the other hand touches a silver-plated contact. The imagination of stress or excitement during the experiment can be used to alter the results.

The documents also talks about Telekinesis (PK) and an individual named Nelya K who actually caused a frog's heart to stop. She could influence the rhythm of other people and alter their skin condition, so as to produce burning feeling on contact. They also found that hypnosis could be used to enhance PK abilities and that autogenic training was used to help increase PK abilities. More than likely, Nelya K is Nina Kulagina mentioned earlier.

On May 26, 1995 The Herald (Glasgow) broke a story entitled "Brainwash Killers Still In Use." They reported that A Top-Secret project in the former Soviet Union in the 1970s turned soldiers and security agents into programmable "human weapons." They said the psychological weapon project relied on hypnosis and high-frequency radio waves to turn members of the Soviet security forces and military into fearless, conscienceless fighting machines. The Psychotronic Influence System relied on passwords and numbered codes to activate its subjects. After the KGB project's existence was made public hundreds of former Soviet soldiers, police, and KGB members sought health damages. Not so different sounding from what the Agency was attempting to do to me.

In a 1964 report on MKULTRA programs and participants, the use of children is made quite clear in response to the following,

"Have CIA personnel conducted experiments involving human subjects other than the experiment that involved R Frank Olsen an at least three other persons?

ORD (Office of Research and Development):

The one instance in which ORD personnel have been directly involved in conducting experiments with human subjects occurred in Orlando, Florida during December 1964. The subject allegedly had transdermal optical perception. The tests were observed by a contractor under a classified association contract, which had been funded through the (deleted) Fund. In addition to the contractor, the subject's father was present during all testing. No drugs were used. With this one exception, all ORD sponsored research involving human subjects has been conducted by contractors."[120]

Wasn't that nice of them to contract most of the dirty work out? In a 1973 report prepared for the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency, better know as ARPA, an assessment study on paranormal research in the United States and Soviet Union was conducted.[121] Derma-Optics was reported as being studied by the Soviets. It is described as a phenomenon where a subject could sense visual information through tactile skin receptors. They reported an experimental case early in 1960 with Rosa Kuleshova and several children in provincial villages who claimed they had the ability to read printed texts or to identify colors with skin surfaces while blindfolded.

This test in Orlando probably took place so that the U.S. could determine if there was any possibility that these reports were true. I allege they changed the name from Derma-Optics to transdermal for their own identification purposes. Transdermal optical perception could be translated in a couple of more ways. Across the skin of the eye, might mean remote viewing.

Joe McMoneagle, a retired US Army intelligence officer used remote viewing (RV) to go into the mind of Shaw Taylor to see through his eyes in an experiment carried out on The Paranormal World of Paul McKenna (ITV, UK). This method of using RV to enter the brains of other people is called remote sensing.[122] Remote sensing is another term that is used by the ORD when asked about its participation in experiments involving human subjects.

It may also mean ESP experiments, as in seeing through cards etc. In the same document it mentions an experiment that the CIA funded through the Office of Naval Research from 1966-1968 to determine whether unusual sensory processes could be used for intelligence purposes. They described this research as "Extrasensory research that involved the attachment of sensors for recording coincidence of brain waves in three subjects when only one of the three was stimulated by visual, auditory or tactal means."

Another CIA declassified document from 1969 contains a photocopy of a Bulletin of the William C. Menninger Dream Laboratory at the Maimonides Medical Center. It discusses a research paper done by Dr. Stanley Krippner summarizing the results from 55 experimental nights and 79 pilot nights, in which a single subject and a single agent (who attempted to send a picture) were used in telepathy studies.[123] It also discusses studies to investigate the relationship between ESP and the alpha state, and announces "an alpha training device has now been built for additional experimentation and funded by the Society for Comparative Philosophy, Sausalito, California."[124]

An April 1972 document says, "It may be worth considering that psychokinesis occurs via an energy 'exchange' or communication between the experimenter and the object."[125] Then a P.S. is added explaining why it is so difficult to obtain information on this subject through FOIA requests. The P.S. says, "Would like to file with Plant Sensors File."

The experiments that Ewen Cameron used with me were similar to what Dr. Bekhtereva was doing at the Bekhtereva Brain Institute in Leningrad.[xxxvii] Instead of using radioactive isotopes, she bored tiny holes into the patients' skulls and inserted gold electrodes (bunches of six to eight coated wires) that were each one twelfth of an inch shorter than the next. As a result, each then monitored a different level of cells. The electrodes were attached to an electroencephalograph and the researchers could see the bioelectrical exchanges between the cells. By logging these exchanges the researchers could determine where information they gave the patient was stored in the brain.[126] Part of Harold Wolff's budget for September 1960 through August of 1961 was for an apparatus for scanning EEG alpha waves for brain function studies.[127]

In a declassified document Dr. Bekhtereva and her institute was named as one of five "Institutes conducting ESP Research in Russia" in 1963.[128] Our government knew exactly what methods were being used in brain and ESP research across the globe.

In a conversation with Dr. Bekhtereva in 1972, Henry Gris asked her what her greatest ambition in life was? She stated she wanted to "transcribe electronically the entire range of the intellectual activity of the human mind." He then asked the question, "Once this is accomplished, would it not be feasible to feed a superior intellect into a lesser brain?" She answered that that would not be ethical.[129] She later explained that she was investigating an area of the brain where nerve cells remain inactive while the human mind behaved rationally; but when man behaved irrationally this part of the brain touched off an alarm that mobilized other cells to correct the mistake. She said, "If we were to eliminate this area via micro destruction of cells-which we can do since we know its exact location-we could turn you all into absent-minded professors."[130] The implications of this remark are staggering.

At a symposium on "Man-Computer Relations" at the American Association for the Advancement of Science in February 1976, Dr. Adam V. Reed from Rockefeller University acknowledged the need to protect against the dangerous applications of "thought control"--turning human beings into virtual robots via computer brain hookups. He said this would be dependent upon progress in breaking the internal codes of the human mind.[131]

This statement reveals to me how Dr. Bekhtereva's methods of electrode implantation and information retrieval could help break those internal codes. Her methods were also very similar to the experiments Dr. Wilder Penfield of McGill University performed on me sometime between 1957 and 1960.[xxxviii] Dr. Penfield worked with Dr. Donald Hebb at Montreal Neurological Institute (MNI) doing research on brain-damaged patients between 1937 and 1939.[132] Dr. Hebb went on to become the Chairman of the Psychology Department of McGill University during the 50's and worked closely with Canadian and U.S. intelligence. He had special CIA security clearance issued to him in the early 1960's.[133] Hebb's study to investigate the effects of isolation on attitude change was commissioned by the Canadian Government in 1951.[134] I mention this because there will be great skepticism that the esteemed Wilder Penfield would have taken part in any such experiments. It seems many doctors in Montreal were willing to be funded by covert means.

MNI was academically affiliated with McGill and located on the university's campus. Alan Gregg had appropriated $1,232,000 from the Rockefeller Foundation in 1932 to fund it, and Dr. Penfield was hired to run it when it opened in 1934.[135] Prior to that, Penfield had received a grant to go to Madrid in 1924 from Mrs. Percy Rockefeller.[xxxix] His affiliations with the Rockefellers served him well over the years. In fact after he retired he worked for a time at the Villa Serbelloni, high above Lake Como in Northern Italy on the biography he wrote on Alan Gregg. The Rockefeller Foundation maintains the Villa.[136]

The memories of Dr. Penfield's experiments on me begin with my arrival in Canada aboard a plane met by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.[137] There was a red carpet out for the dignitaries aboard this plane. Before we landed I was given a shot and smuggled into the country in a box. I was taken to Braehead on McGill's campus. I had reoccurring dreams of this place for the next 30 years. I didn't know what the dreams meant, but the impact of the dreams was so powerful that I began looking for this building every time I was driving or riding in an unfamiliar place. When I found a picture of this building on the McGill web sight, I nearly fainted. It was as if they had picked a picture out of my dreams and placed it on this sight. It is a very distinctive English Gothic building and I had remembered running down a long passageway in my dream. In 1946 a passage was constructed between Purvis Hall and Braehead. I believe I stayed here when I wasn't being experimented on at MNI.

In one of the experiments I was forced to lie on a table with my head immobilized. It didn't hurt, it was just very snug, and when I struggled I found I couldn't move a muscle of my head.

Dr. Penfield said, "Sterilize the sight."

Then he said something about the corpus callosum being malleable. He inserted an electrode into the sleeve guides that were already imbedded in my head before I got to Canada. They were invented by John Lilly and used on animals while he worked for the National Institute of Health (NIH).

Dr. Lilly first met Dr. Penfield when he took his mother to Montreal in 1942. She was suffering from a brain tumor and Dr. Penfield operated and removed it. This operation prolonged his mothers' life by ten years. Lilly was forever indebted to this man. In 1953 he attended the International Physiological Congress in Montreal, and he made another trip in 1954 to the Montreal Neurological Institute to talk with Dr. Hebb about his human isolation techniques.[xl] The trip was suggested by Robert C. Morison who was Dr. Hebb's contact at the Rockefeller Foundation, which had funded Hebb's research program in the same years he was receiving money from the Defense Research Board of Canada. Morison was also a friend of Wilder Penfield's.[138]

Maitland Baldwin, a former student of Dr. Penfield worked down the hall from Dr. Lilly at NIH.[139] Dr. Baldwin also carried out experiments in isolation techniques, only his were done for the Army. He had an Army volunteer stay in a box for 40 hours until he kicked his way out crying loudly and sobbing for an hour. Baldwin agreed to do sensory deprivation experiments for the CIA if they would provide the cover and the subjects for this "terminal type" experiment. According to Anne Collins account in-In the Sleep Room, Baldwin pressed for an "antagonistic subject' he could force to a total breakdown in the box, allowing however "that he would not want any other agency to know anything about this experiment unless it proved to be successful". He went so far as to say that "anyone going through a complete breakdown would come out with somewhat lowered mental faculties." An agency official refused the authority to do the experiments because they were "immoral and inhuman."[140] Our government employed such men with your tax dollars.

I do not remember who put the sleeve guides in or the actual procedure, I only know that the methods had been developed by Dr. Lilly while working for NIH.

He also used them to experiment on Dolphins at his Communication Research Institute in St. Thomas, Virgin Islands. His research there was partly to determine whether large-brained animals were as susceptible to motivational "brainwashing" by electrical means as the smaller brained monkey.[141] In Man and Dolphin he said that his experiments had proven that electrical stimuli in specific areas of the brain could cause either intense rewarding or intense punishing experiences in a particular animal and in humans. He summarized in his Appendix by saying, "At any time an adult human being can be reduced to the childish level by changing his situation. Such a state can be induced by lack of sleep, by starvation, by torture, by isolation, by profound confinement, by drugs, by direct electrical stimulation. The original biological prototypes of learning can be reintroduced and even an adult can be forced to learn once again by means almost thoroughly beyond his control. I am speaking here of powerful means used ruthlessly with few scruples."[142]

In his book The Scientist, A metaphysical Autobiography, Dr. Lilly describes the technique of electrode implantation.[143] "Electrodes could be implanted in the brain without using anesthesia. During the process of implantation, there was no more pain to the animal than that of a needle prick in the scalp. Short lengths of hypodermic needle tubing equal in length to the thickness of the skull were quickly pounded through the scalp into the skull. These stainless steel guides furnished passageways for the insertion of electrodes into the brain to any desired distance and at any desired location from the cortex down to the bottom of the skull. As many sleeve guides could be implanted as were desired. Because of the small size of the sleeve guides, the scalp quickly recovered from the small hole (l mm.) made in it, and the sleeve guide remained imbedded in the bone for months to years. At any time he desired the investigator could palpate the scalp and find the location of each of the sleeve guides. Once one was found he inserted a needle were so through the scalp into the sleeve guide, down through the bone, and penetrated the dura. After withdrawing the needle, the investigator placed a small sharp electrode in the track made by the needle and pressed the electrode through the scalp, through the skull, through the dura, and down into the substance of the brain itself to any desired depth." I feel blessed that I have been spared this memory.

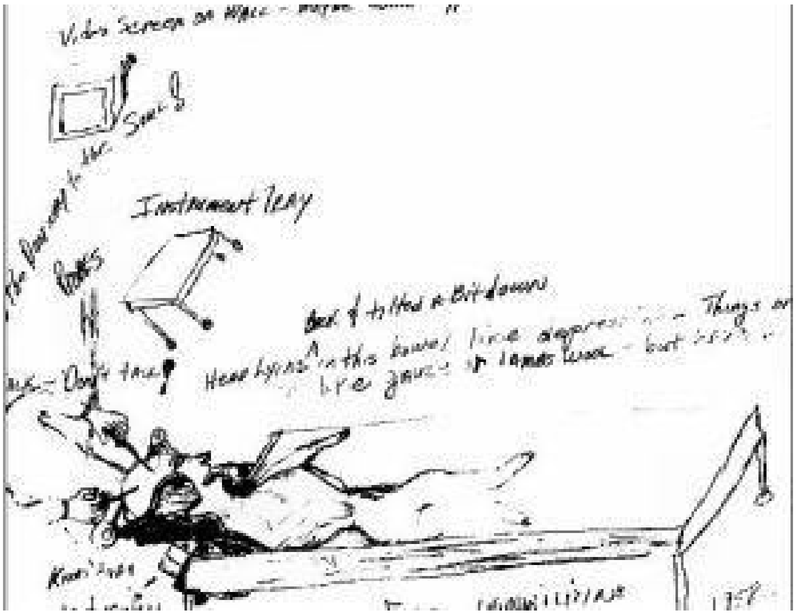
I was awake while Dr. Penfield probed my brain and someone in the room recorded what was being said. Penfield said that my brain was like a tape recorder and he just needed to take me back in time. He did this by touching different spots of my brain. They kept recording the memories induced from images in my past, and later Sidney Gottlieb of the CIA used them for future programming sessions.

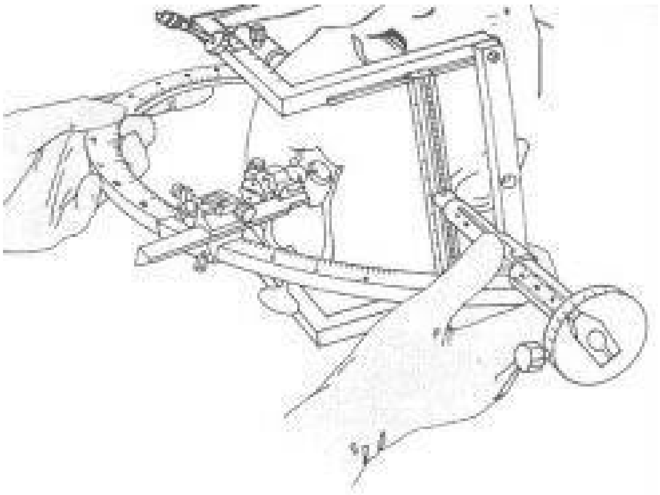
I find it ironic that after Dr. Penfield retired in May 1960, he would make the following remarks two months later for a conference entitled "Great Issues of Conscience in Modern Medicine." He began his speech by dismissing the possibility that science could, or ever would be able to control the mind. He then summarized briefly his own experiments with conscious patients; and concluded that if the electric probe could not convince someone to believe anything, than brainwashing and mind-control much nonsense. He also said, "Let us take, then, the best conclusions of the past and create a working religion-a faith that will seem reasonable to all men-one they will welcome...Only an interpretation of religion suited to these times can create in the hearts of men of every nation a better conscience."[144]

May God protect us all from such men of good deeds. Whether he was covering up his misdeeds, or honestly believed what he said, will probably never be known. His solution to the Cold War was that Canada and the U.S. recognize Red China. He proposed that Russian and Chinese courses be widespread in towns and universities across the continent, and that a large-scale program of exchange visits be instituted so that doctors, lawyers, engineers, teachers, businessmen, farmers, artists, religious leaders and athletes could meet and get to know their counterparts in the rest of the world.[145]

When I read a biography written by H. Jefferson Lewis on Wilder Penfield, I came across a mysterious death. Bill Cone had come to work with Penfield after they met when Cone was on a Rockefeller fellowship. They opened their own lab in the Presbyterian Hospital called the Laboratory of Neurocytology. Mrs. Percy Rockefeller funded it until they left New York in 1928 to go to Montreal.

Cone and Wilder later worked together at MNI. In 1959 Penfield found Bill Cone dead in his office. He was lying on the floor with his head on a pillow, with potassium cyanide powder on his lips and spilled on his coat.[146] This seems like a very strange way to commit suicide, which is what the coroner ruled it, but very similar to the methods used by covert intelligence agencies when they wished to eliminate an uncooperative individual. Wilder Penfield many years later said this about Bill Cone, "He was loyal to my projects in a more personal way, always the Good Samaritan, the tireless, selfless physician, taking a keen delight in serving the sick. But in spite of this and his brilliant and retentive mind and his loyalty to the ideas of scientific perfection, I suppose Bill Cone never quite understood the hopes and the thinking at the back of my mind."[147]





This drawing of the experiment that Wilder Penfield performed on me was made before I found this picture of a stereotaxic instrument that is attached to the head before surgery.[148] This was not the first time I had left my body and watched from above when things were too intolerable to bare. I was quite shocked to find an actual medical instrument that matched my drawing. The mind is indeed able to recall anything.

John Lilly's technique required no surgery once the sleeve guides were in place. Larry Squire describes Penfield's work,

"Because the brain contains no pain receptors, patients received only a local anesthetic, and remained fully conscious during surgery. Electrical stimulation of the cortical surface sometimes induced images which patients described as coherent perceptions or experiences...In Penfield's view, the experiences that were elicited by stimulation reproduced the stream of consciousness from a previous episode of past life: The stimulating electrode drew the reproduction from its place of storage, much as if a tape recorder were switched on at some arbitrary position...Penfield divided the experiential responses produced by electrode stimulation into four categories: auditory (voices, music, or a meaningful sound), visual (people, a scene, or a recognizable object), combined visual-auditory (scenes with appropriate sounds), or unclassified experiential responses (a thought, a memory, or a flashback)."[149]

After the surgery I walked down a long hallway with Dr. Penfield holding my hand. He was talking to another man and he sounded like he was giving a sermon.

Penfield said, "We only have 10 days to get this done. She has above average intelligence but below average ability to travel the time continuum."[xli]

He acted as if I were not even there. Penfield continued,

"Lillydidn't know what he had.[150] He didn't take it far enough. He had the means to explore the great beyond. I have the Killer (referring to my Psychic Assassin alter) and the Innocence here in the same body. I know I can find the doorway to the soul, if given enough time and enough brains to experiment on."

In Something Hidden, A Biography of Wilder Penfield by H. Jefferson Lewis, he quotes Penfield as reasoning, "I am a scientist, and I believe in the soul, therefore there must be a scientific theory to account for the soul. That was the basis in faith of the centrencephalicsystem, the 'switchboard' in the brain. Here, if anywhere spirit met flesh and the two were joined."[151]

Little did Penfield know, that in 1967 John Lilly would propose an experiment to record the brain's electrical activity and then play the recording back into the brain.[152] Consider the possibilities for mind control by an unscrupulous programmer using this technique.

Alan Scheflin reports on some of the children who received stereotaxic surgery in the sixties and seventies.[153] He lists several doctors who performed such surgery on children because they suffered from behavior problems such as "wandering.' One young boy would sneak away from home, and crawl underneath an automobile in order to smell the oil. Two groups were as young as two and four years old when surgery took place for "violent behavior."

Many of the mind control experiments that were carried out under MKULTRA were done out of fear that the Russians were in the forefront of this field. The "Red Scare" promoted by Joe McCarthy was the overriding theme of why "Anything Goes" when it came to these experiments. Our government obviously agreed with the internationally know Russian physiologist Dr. Leonid Vasiliev who was considered the father of Soviet parapsychology. He stated, "The discovery of the energies associated with psychic events will be as important, if not more important than the discovery of energy."[154]

In a CIA report made public in the late sixties, they estimated the technical staff of one Soviet parapsychology laboratory at 300 physicists, doctors, biochemists, and electrical engineers. August Stern, a Soviet scientist in the sixties reported that he worked in a secret lab in Siberia trying to find a physical basis for psychic energy.[155] Jim Schnabel reported that intelligence reports and the testimony of Soviet émigrés showed the Soviets doing experiments in telepathy.[156] According to Schnabel they screened Red Army recruits for psychic abilities and pumped talented subjects full of dangerous drugs to promote psi-conducive altered states. Subjects in psychokinesis or "remote-influencing" experiments tried to stop the hearts of small animals, or concentrated on foreign political leaders, beaming at them "negative psi particles." Soviet and Czech scientists were said to be working on electromagnetic devices that would cause strokes or heart attacks, and it was even rumored that they had perfected a "psychotronic generator" which could scramble people's minds at great distances.

Since I obviously failed whatever tests Wilder Penfield put me through for remote viewing, I did not take part in some of the other paranormal experiments that were performed by the CIA. They carried out experiments in astral projection to facilitate remote viewing. These experiments were conducted at the Stanford Research Institute in California in 1973 in an attempt to spy on military installations and the confidential files contained within them. It was a way to collect intelligence. David Morehouse said that using out of body or astral projection was dangerous to facilitate remote viewing, because you left the physical body open, allowing inhabitation by whatever else that wanted to step in.[157] He preferred to call it bilocation, a process of folding space and time.

Joseph W McMoneagle, in a dinner address presented at the annual banquet of the Rhine Research Center on February 21, 1997 detailed the process of his remote viewing experiences.[158] The army had used him in experiments in remote viewing from 1978 through 1984 as part of Project Stargate. Stargate began on October 1978 as Project Grillflame, a Department of Defense initiative designed to see if potentially psychic Army personnel could be identified, trained, and used to collect intelligence information through psychic means. An additional focus of the project was to determine what the Soviets and Chinese were doing in their own efforts at paranormal research.[159]

Gordon Cooper, one of the original seven Mercury astronauts confirmed the existence of a mind control program administered by NASA in the 1950's and 1960's involving gifted American schoolchildren. In an interview with Mike Siegel Cooper was asked, "Who were the space kids?" Cooper answered that "the space kids were children with exceptional mental abilities run through a kind of MK program, like the things that are coming out now." He went on to describe how NASA's mind control program emphasized cultivation of the children's psychic abilities and that it involved telepathy, remote viewing, and out-of-body-experiences.[160]

Nowadays remote viewing is routinely discussed over coffee as a means to find buried treasure under the ocean. Remote viewing seemed part and parcel of the supernatural to many in the fifties, sixties and seventies, but now it has become commonplace.

I am but one of the many children who were the CIA's convenient experimental subjects, used to try and perfect similar results here in the United States. Because of our youth and the severe traumatization we were put through, these men felt we would never tell our stories; and if we did, they felt we would never be believed. Out of respect for the feelings of my adult children, I have not included some of the training I was forced to endure. Likewise, I have not named some of those living and dead who perpetrated heinous deeds of which I will not speak. I wish to remain among the living.

Dr. Corydon Hammond delivered a lecture in 1992 describing some of the programming he had encountered.[161] Many other doctors have likewise found these same types of programmed alters in survivors of government mind control. Most survivors seem to have more than one level of programming.

Alpha is general programming within the control personality.

Beta is sexual programming, i.e. child pornography, prostitution, and sexual training used for the benefit of a handler for blackmail or personal use. This programming eliminates all learned moral conviction from the survivor, so that the function can be carried out without inhibition.

Delta is a trained killer, a sleeping assassin. Delta survivors feel no fear and have been trained in the use of specialized arms and alternative methods of disposal. Sirhan Sirhan had total amnesia of the killing of Robert Kennedy, but under hypnosis remembered it. Mr. Sirhan's lawyer, Lawrence Teeter says his client was programmed to kill Kennedy by government agents who wanted to prolong the Vietnam War.[162]

Theta is psychic killing, such as the training I was involved in. Most survivors with Theta programming exhibit an unusually high level of ESP in their day-to-day lives. Many even train in alternative methods of healing before they discover the theta programming. It seems to be a way for the dominant personality to use their energy in a positive healing manner, thereby compensating for the negative uses of this same energy.

Omega is self-destruct programming installed in the event a survivor would start remembering. It was used to prevent them from going public. There generally is self destruct programming associated with Delta assassin programming if the survivor is captured.

Books written by survivors of these programs recount the horrors they were forced to endure during their training. As explained in "Secret Weapons," a second area of funded research was the program Sid Gottlieb cobbled together for the purpose of turning children into warriors who would be perfect Manchurian candidates, perfect spies and assassins who are ignorant of their orders, fitting into society easily and anonymously; until a code or trigger is used to awaken them and send them into action."[163]

Many of these survivors have worked through their memories, dealt with their programming and are free from such triggering. How many are still "Sleeping," awaiting the call of their handlers?

Chapter 6 - Dr. Black

Absence of Evidence Does Not Mean Absence of Harm

Mind Control survivors have identified doctors used by the CIA under Project MKULTRA as having used different aliases. It seems colors were one of the most commonly used themes. Claudia Mullen and Chris Denicola, two survivors who testified before the Presidents Advisory Committee on Human Radiation Experiments in March 1995 identified A Dr. Green. Claudia Mullen identified Dr. Green as an alias used by Dr. L. Wilson Green, Technical Director of the US Army Chemical and Radiological Laboratories. Chris Denicola was four years old when she says Dr. Green used electroshock in conjunction with other forms of torture and drugs to program her.[xlii] Some survivors say that Dr. Ewen Cameron went by the alias Dr. White.

Many survivors have identified Josef Mengele as using the aliases Dr. Green, Dr. Black, Dr. Swartz (black in German), Father Joseph, or Vaterchen (daddy) when he did their programming. The experiments and programming he used on us were of such a heinous nature, that they were not unlike some of those performed at Auschwitz. I have personally spoken and corresponded with many of these child Cold War survivors who have agreed to allow me to recount some of their mind control and brainwashing experiments by the man they believe to be Josef Mengele using one of the above aliases and other CIA or military doctors.

Josef Mengele attended Frankfurt Institute for Racial Hygiene doing his doctoral research on cleft palate. In 1937, he was appointed a research assistant at the Third Reich Institute for Heredity, Biology, and Racial Purity at the University of Frankfurt where he worked with Professor Otmar Freiherr von Vershuer and learned genetic manipulation. Mengele provided "experimental materials" to the Kaiser-Wilhelm Institute of Anthropology[xliii] from Twins including eyes, blood, and other body parts from Auschwitz.[164] One of the victims of Mengele's experiments was quoted as saying, "It is imperative that the Kaiser-Wilhelm Institute be implicated as the initiator and recipient of the research data; it should not be able to get away from the ultimate responsibility for these horrors."[165]

In The Nazi Hunters, authors Ashman and Wagman report that von Verschuer gave Mengele his first assignment within weeks of his arrival at Auschwitz. When Allied doctors reviewed some of the results of his experiments on twins at Kaiser Wilhelm Institute after the war, they found that Mengele's research was aimed at trying to establish a way of creating twins through genetic engineering.[166]

After an abortion performed on me in Montreal, Canada when I was twelve, Dr. Black harvested eggs. I can only assume from what he showed me a few years later, that he was playing God and tampering with genes to create a "Super Race." He undoubtedly was doing test tube fertilization with these eggs.[167] Unfortunately his early experiments produced children with grossly enlarged heads. He showed me two of these poor children when I was 16 years old and told me they were mine. I still grieve for them, and what has become of them remains a mystery to me. I do believe however, that what he told me may have been nothing more than lies as these men were masters at the art of deception. Fooling children isn't that difficult to do when they are in a traumatized state.

It usually takes twenty years or more before tests conducted secretly by the government become known by the public via privately researched tests. It was no surprise to me when in 1999 researchers at the University of Hawaii successfully cloned an adult male mammal. The clone, a male mouse named Fibro was created using a cell from the tail of an adult male mouse.[168] Prior to Fibro, researchers had succeeded in cloning male mammals only by using fetal tissues, just like Mengele had collected from my aborted fetus.

Josef Mengele fled Auschwitz in January 1945 before the Russians liberated the camp. Author Phillip Aziz says he went to his birthplace in Gunzburg, Bavaria after "a mysterious odyssey with Wilma through flaming Europe."[169] According to Gerald Posner's account, Dr. Mengele's young Jewish mistress Wilma had taken his research notes to Warsaw where he later retrieved them."[170] I can see where these notes would make him a valuable commodity to the CIA and the Agency.

John Loftus and Mark Aarons report that British records show a man named Mengele was in their custody in 1945 for interrogation concerning chemical weapons.[171] They said there is circumstantial evidence of a deal between Mengele and the British for his nerve gas records. Loftus explains that a short time after Mengele's trip to bring back his trunk full of records, "Mengele's brother, father and co-researcher at the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute were all released from custody, and allowed to resume their civilian employment without regard to their Nazi pasts."[172]

French Government documents state that the Americans had captured Mengele in late 1946. According to the French Mengele was known to be the "notorious camp doctor from Auschwitz, and was released without explanation by the Americans on November 19, 1946. The French claimed that American authorities confirmed the Mengele arrest and release on Feb. 29, 1947."[173]

Posner says Mengele eluded capture at a prisoner of war camp near Munich, after receiving papers from a fellow prisoner. For vanity reasons he refused to have his blood type tattooed beneath his arm the way the other SS soldiers and doctors had done. The American Army said they did not realize he was a member of the SS and released him. He remained on the run until he sailed on the North King to Buenos Aires, Argentina in 1949.[174] Mengele proceeded to set up a medical practice in a residential area in Buenos Aires.[175]

That same year Carmel Offie was working in Washington emigrating former Nazis into the U.S. through the CIA-funded OPC (Office of Policy Coordination) in the State Department. I have identified Offie from a photo, as the man I knew as Crazy Eddie. You may remember Crazy Eddie handed me over in 1952 to Allen Dulles, Sid Gottlieb and Josef Mengele. Crazy Eddie's real name was Carmel Offie.

In 1946 Offie was putting together reports on the movement of German scientists from the American Zone into France, individuals who had eluded Paperclip. In the spring of 1948, Carmel was working in Frankfurt at USPOLAD. Burton Hersh reports in The Old Boys, that "One of Offie's functions at POLAD had been to rake through the flotsam churned up by the postwar disorder—the defunctive Nazi exluminaries and cutthroat émigré politicians and paper mill impresarios of promise—and help the CIC and others plug legitimate experts in around the emerging Cold-War bureaucracies." Hersh also reports that Offie identified Hilger as indispensable when Gehlen[xliv] found a place for him in G-2's Technical Intelligence Branch (Operation Rusty).[176]

According to Hersh, Carmel Offie was "doubling as a kind of booking agent for many of the refugee scholars" that the U.S was interested in obtaining. He went to work for Frank Wisner[xlv] who got Congress to pass the One-Hundred-a Year CIA Act, which allowed Offie to bring in, unmonitored, a hundred refugees each year with their dossiers "Sanitized." Offie was Wisner's special assistant for labor and migratory affairs. He personally oversaw the National Committee for Free Europe, which passed OPC money to anti-Communist unions in Europe.

John Loftus reports that Carmel worked for the DDU (Document Disposal Unit), which took orders from Dulles.[xlvi] He calls the DDU the OSS "Political Intelligence" experts who wore Army uniforms but were paid through the State Department.[177] He also says, "The DDU became a pseudo-CIA inside the CIA that hid information instead of centralizing it." Loftus says they did "not realize to this day that a trio of 'useful idiots' – Dulles, Wisner and Angleton–sabotaged their filing system to protect the State Department's Nazis."[178] The DDU also made the payments to Gehlen's organization.[179]

In 1949 Offie became responsible for the care of a number of Bloodstone émigrés'.[180] Bloodstone was the codename for the operation, which proposed that 250 Nazi collaborators be brought into the United States who would otherwise be barred by the Displaced Persons Act. Simpson also reports that a special Bloodstone subcommittee had been created to supply false identities, government cover jobs, and secret police protection to selected Bloodstone immigrants.[181]

Nineteen Forty-Nine proved to be a very busy year for Offie. In September 1949 Italian Interior Minister Mario Scelba headed a newly organized intelligence agency, SIFAR. Carmel Offie, nicknamed godfather by the Italians supervised SIFAR.[xlvii] In 1952 SIFAR received secret orders from Washington to adopt a series of political, paramilitary and psychological operations to diminish the power of the Italian Communist Party.[182]

Carmel Offie was also handling another project employing Nazi collaborators through a U.S.-financed “think tank” named the Eurasian Institute. The Institute was enlisting men who were important members of the German espionage network in Central Asia from 1931 to 1945.[183]

Wisner and Offie were still working together in 1950, when Joseph McCarthy referred to Offie as a State Department veteran who “has now been assigned to the Central Intelligence Agency.” These remarks were made to a Senate Foreign Relations Committee. They were also told by McCarthy that he “was a homosexual...spent his time hanging around the men’s room in Lafayette Park.”[184]

Allen Dulles joined the CIA and became deputy director in 1951. Frank Wisner remained as head of OPC.[xlviii] By 1951, the FBI was watching Offie and reported that he might be employed in a covert capacity or on a special project for the Army.[185]

If the information I have provided is not enough proof that this man was well acquainted with numerous Nazis, I present a final tie that binds him to Sidney Gottlieb. As documented by the FBI, Offie owned a farm in Markham, Virginia. Hersh reports how Hoover’s people staked out Offie in hopes of catching him involved in malfeasances from gun running to operating a white slavery ring at his Markham farm. Carmel Offie’s farm was about 20 miles apart from Sid Gottlieb’s goat farm in Boston, Virginia.

Whether Offie and Mengele met will, for the time being, remain a question mark. There remains no doubt in my mind that he had the opportunity and the means to meet him, especially since Offie had previously helped the Vatican get a travel pass for Monsignor Krunoslav Draganovic to the prison camps.[186] Draganovic, you may remember, ran the ratlines for U.S. sponsored Nazi escapees. With Mengele’s notoriety due to the depravity of his war crimes, it must have been very risky business to sneak him in and out of this country. Perhaps those who transported him never knew his real identity.

Offie, while still working for the OPC as liaison between the CIA and State Department, delivered me to Allen Dulles and Sidney Gottlieb for those first experiments in 1952 during which Dr. Black and others programmed me. With Frank Wisner reporting to Dulles and working intimately with Gottlieb, the circle became complete. By 1953, Dulles became the CIA’s autocratic director, with Wisner as Deputy Director for Plans handling all covert operations and dirty tricks until 1959.

If one looks at the evidence of the link between Allen Dulles, Richard Nixon, and other prominent politicians with war criminals, you can see a clear pattern of deception. Why then would you find it so hard to believe that Josef Mengele was covertly used in the same way?

John Loftus said, “A Pentagon official acknowledged recently that Military Intelligence sent so many Nazis to South America that one government ‘passed the word that they would not take any more.’ Another official admitted putting his own fingerprints on documents belonging to a former SS officer who was spying for the military in East Germany. Equipped with a new set of documents and a safe set of prints, the SS man was free to emigrate wherever he chose...The Pentagon, at least where its own interests were concerned was willing to ignore any Nazi migration to South America.”[187] They seemed to have easy access to whoever might help their cause.

Henry Kissinger was a consultant for the Operations Research Office of the Pentagon after the war doing historical research into the use of native collaborators by the Nazis for Operation Pow-wow. He had been an Army Sergeant serving with the 970th CIC unit in Germany, where his specialty was identifying Gestapo and SS officers hiding out among the civilian population."[188] Alex Constantine reports that John McCloy arranged to have Klaus Barbie sheltered from prosecution by the 970th CIC Corps.[189] Martin Lee reports Barbie went on to assist a succession of military regimes in Bolivia, where he taught soldiers torture techniques.[190] How many of those identified were illegally given refuge once the war was over? Only now is the truth being revealed with the declassification of Government files.

In an October 1999 report titled Implementation of the Nazi War Crimes Disclosure Act, An Interim Report to Congress, the Army's CIC was named as having "had the primary responsibility for security in the American zones in Germany and Austria." It "became involved with many Germans and others knowledgeable about the Soviet Union and its intelligence services, and by the late 1940s had established many agent networks within the occupation zones and extending into Eastern Europe. These networks employed numerous agents, some of whom had tainted wartime backgrounds."

The report goes on to say, "The CIC in Germany, for example, recruited as an agent and sheltered Klaus Barbie, an SS officer later convicted for his role in rounding up Jews in France and for suppressing the French resistance. The Army smuggled Barbie out of Europe, thereby enabling him to escape justice for over 30 years in his South American hideouts...Within months after World War II, OSS and later US intelligence agencies were faced with the issue of how to handle intelligence assets who could not safely remain in Europe. In some cases, the Army used a 'rat line' to evacuate these individuals (mainly Soviet Army defectors and Soviet Bloc refugees) to South America. This clearly was an inadequate measure that was subject to misuse, as was later demonstrated with the Barbie case."

Another group who seems to have a connection with Mengele, Nixon, and Operation Paperclip was the Iron Guard. The Iron Guard (Green Shirts) was the Rumanian equivalent of Hitler's "Brownshirts" and was working towards achieving a Nazi Romania. They were the combat arm of the Legion of Archangel Michael, a mystical fascist movement. In January 1941 during a three-day Iron Guard revolt, the estimated death toll of Jews was between 4,000 and 6,000 in Bucharest and nearly 10,000 throughout the country.[191] The source of the tanks, guns, and munitions used in the revolt were Nicolae Malaxa. He was the chief contributor to the Iron Guard and the wealthiest man in Rumania, if not all Eastern Europe.

In 1936, Malaxa went to Berlin to meet with Reichsmarschall Hermann Goering and the two men parted as business partners. This personal agreement became formalized in the 1940 Wohlstadt Pact, which integrated Malaxa's industries with Germany's. Directing this new Nazi industrial coalition were Nicolae Malaxa and Albert Goering, younger brother of the Reichsmarschall.[192] When the Nazis were defeated, Malaxa signed personal contracts with Grady McClaussen, head of the OSS in Rumania. McClaussen would be paid certain sums of money once Malaxa got in the US. In 1948, he immigrated to the US and began claiming millions of dollars, which had been deposited before the war in Chase National Bank. He was to fight a fierce legal battle to regain this money, which had been frozen as enemy assets during the war by the Treasury Department.

Recruited and compensated to help assist in Malaxa's legal suits were Secretary of State John Foster Dulles's law firm of Sullivan and Cromwell.[193] Because of the eyewitness testimony at the Immigration hearing of the Iron Guard atrocities, Malaxa was forced to use bribery to help him gain entry into the United States.[xlix]

Richard Nixon, junior senator from California introduced a private bill in 1951, which would allow Malaxa to remain permanently in the United States. The bill was defeated, so Malaxa organized a solely owned company known as the Western Tube Corporation in Whittier, California-Nixon's hometown. Nixon signed a letter in September of 1951 urging the federal government to give the firm a "certificate of necessity," and Malaxa a "first preference quota" for permanent residence in the United States on the grounds that he was essential to the construction of the plant. At the time Western Tube had the same address and phone number in Whittier as Nixon's former law firm, Bewley, Knoop & Nixon.[194] The appeal was successful and Malaxa was admitted from Canada. He obtained permanent residence in the United States and nothing further was ever done to make Western Tube a reality.[195]

According to Seymour Hersh, the top men at the CIA had a copy of a check for $100,000 made out to Nixon by Nicolae Malaxa.[196] Gordon B. Mason, who had served undercover in the CIA station in Bucharest from 1947 to 1951 and then had returned to run the CIA's Romanian operations desk in Washington, told Mr. Hersh one of the tellers in the bank was a Romanian exile and had been paid to turn over the copy of the check. The report of the transaction was moved through the CIA's chain of command from Frank Wisner to Allen Dulles, and finally to Walter Bedell Smith head of the CIA since 1950.[197]

In 1954, Mengele purchased a house in Argentina near Juan Peron's old estate. That same year, Nicolae Malaxa visited with Juan Peron and with Otto Skorzeny[l] in Buenos Aires where Josef Mengele now lived.[198] It certainly takes no stretch of the imagination to tie this cozy little group together. Certainly there was communication between them. In fact U.S. Attorney General William Rogers intervened in an appeal by Malaxa against deportation in 1958. Malaxa won this appeal, but died ten years later. Congressmen Shelley had this to say, "How interesting that this man...found sanctuary in the United States thanks to Richard Nixon and Mr. Rogers." He goes on to say that thousands of displaced persons "would have done better if they transported plunder and been friendly enough with Richard Nixon to obtain his personal intervention in their behalf."[199]

Another Nazi war criminal that participated in the Iron Guard pogrom in 1941 in Rumania was Otto Albrecht Alfred von Bolschwing. The German-born von Bolschwing had previously served as an officer in the SS and had worked in the same office with Adolf Eichmann in the 1930s. Von Bolschwing had been one of the CIA's leading agents in Austria after World War II. They brought von Bolschwing to the United States, and he received American citizenship in 1959. In 1981, a Federal court stripped him of that citizenship.[200]

Dr. Charles Kremer, a New York dentist spent twenty-five years of his life collecting evidence to convince our government to deport another Iron Guardist, Valerian Trifa. In Howard Blum's book Wanted! The Search for Nazis in America, he devotes an entire chapter to exposing these Iron Guard killers living in America. His account of Iron Guardist Valerian Trifa, who was invited by then Vice President Nixon to offer an opening prayer in the U.S. Senate is compelling.[201]

Trifa had also worked in Vienna as an agent for Gehlen's spy network before coming to the United States in 1950.[li] In April 1952, Trifa, a layman, was consecrated a bishop of the Ukrainian Orthodox Church. On July 4, 1952 just a few days before Carmel Offie handed me over to the CIA, Trifa took over the Rumanian Orthodox Episcopate Church in Grass Lake, Michigan[lii] during an armed assault with other Rumanian Guardsman. Trifa supposedly functioned as an OPC asset for the disruption of Romania, so perhaps Offie in his capacity with OPC was there in Grass Lake helping Trifa with his coup when my mother went into labor.[202] In a military style operation they cut phone lines and began their assault. The two hundred acre estate was surrendered to Trifa and his priests. His episcopate encompassed forty-six parishes.

He then began emigrating former Iron Guardists and even ordained some of them as priests. Burton Hersh says Nicolae Malaxa financed Trifa in the U.S.[203] One Guardist who had been sentenced to death in 1941 for crimes committed emigrated from Argentina to Windsor, Ontario. In 1972, the president and vice president of a Parish in Buenos Aires congratulated Bishop Trifa in writing on the twentieth anniversary of his ordainment. Again we find a tie to one of the hiding places of Josef Mengele. In 1975, Dr. Kremers' tireless efforts were rewarded when the Immigration and Naturalization Service brought a case against Trifa in Detroit, Michigan. He was accused of being the leader of the Iron Guard in Romania. After fighting denaturalization, Trifa consented to the revocation of his citizenship in 1980. He then appealed his own consent decree. Trifa left the United States for Portugal on August 13, 1984 where he lived there until his death in 1987.

According to journalist Russ Bellant in an article he wrote for Washington Jewish Week, a coalition for the 1988 Bush campaign included Florian Galdau as director of GOP outreach efforts among Romanians and head of "Romanians for Bush."[204] Galdau was once an Iron Guard recruiter, and he defended convicted Nazi war criminal Valerian Trifa.

Perhaps having read these connections you can open your mind to believe the rest of the survivors' stories. A survivor reported contact with Dr. Mengele in November of 1952 at the Aberdeen Proving Grounds in Maryland. The same survivor reports contact with him in Germany in December 1954. Exactly when he came back and forth into the U.S. and Canada will probably only be known when all of the survivors' stories are listened to and believed. I will intersperse sightings as recounted to me, with known places where Mengele lived and traveled.

A document obtained from the Department of Energy's web sight before the Department of Defense pulled access to their records, names a Dr. Gregor. Dr. Gregor was being paid through the Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute in 1953 for an Edgewood Arsenal contract entered into by their Medical Laboratories. His name appears among a list of 27 that were privately contracted to do work.[205] Along with Dr. Gregor's name is another well-known MKULTRA experimenter, Dr. Hoch, of the New York Psychiatric Institute. You will remember Dr. Hoch as having injected mescaline into Harold Blauer in 1953 causing his death.[liii]

Upon receipt of my FOIA request with copies of the above documentation, the Army informed me they had no records. I was appalled since I had sent them copies of the records, which actually gave them the file cabinet number and drawer at Edgewood Arsenal where this information was housed. I appealed and again sent copies of the documentation. They sent my appeal to the General Counsel of the Army in the Pentagon, where they "tasked the U.S. Army Medical Command (MEDCOM) for documentation." They informed me "upon receipt of appropriate documentation from MEDCOM, your appeal will be assigned to one of our attorneys for review." Let us hope that this will not take as long as the appeal through the CIA.[liv]

Just another uncanny coincidence, that Mengele's alias in 1953 in Buenos Aires where he worked in a lab was Dr. Gregor? In 1958, he was arrested in Buenos Aires under the alias Dr. Gregor for practicing without a license and performing an abortion on a girl at a back street clinic where the girl died. Mengele also used Gregor as an alias when he went to the Argentine consulate before fleeing to Buenos Aires in 1949.

Josef Mengele's father visited him in 1954 giving him a million marks to purchase half the shares of a pharmaceutical company. He also divorced his wife and then married the widow of his elder brother. A Survivor whose memories are somewhat sketchy reports coming into contact with him in Florida in 1954. It is well documented that Mengele was indeed traveling in 1954. He went to Paraguay in 1954 and met with Alejandro von Eckstein, a captain in the Paraguayan army, who later cosponsored Mengele's bid for Paraguayan citizenship in 1959.

The Doolittle committee appointed by President Eisenhower issued a report containing this statement in 1954:

"It is now clear that we are facing an implacable enemy whose avowed objective is world domination by whatever means and at whatever cost. There are no rules in such a game. Hitherto acceptable norms of human conduct do not apply. If the United States is to survive, long-standing American concepts of "fair play" must be reconsidered. We must develop effective espionage and counterespionage services and must learn to subvert, sabotage, and destroy our enemies by more clever, more sophisticated, and more effective methods than those used against us. It may become necessary that the American people be made acquainted with, understand and support this fundamentally repugnant policy."[206]

Some of us became intimately acquainted with this repugnant policy. The same survivor who had contact in Florida with Dr. Mengele in 1954 reports that she had contact with him in Nashville, Tennessee in 1955 when he would come in by plane, stay a few days to do programming and then leave. It was in 1955 that he obtained a 120-day Argentine passport enabling him to travel. This is the survivor's own account of her intimate contact with this evil escapee from Nazi Germany:

"As he got older and turned gray he called himself 'Grandfather.' He used the movie Heidi with me, and he became 'the grandfather.' I think the insidious part of his work with me was the love thing. He would love me and torture me. Whatever he did had that element. He must have trained my father as well, because that is what my dad was told to do as well. One of Mengele's favorite phrases was, "Pain is pleasure, and pleasure is pain, my dear. I am here to make you very happy! You will love me forever!"

"Earlier he had black hair (sort of FBI cut-longish on top and short on the sides), walked around in black boots and carried a riding crop that was really a cattle prod. He played the piano, violin, and liked Wagner and music of that sort. He used Handel's Messiah on me often. I remember being on the floor with him playing piano in nothing but his boots and a tuxedo coat with tails, as he ordered the men working with him to shock me with cattle prods while he played. It was sort of like musical chairs--when he stopped playing, they stopped shocking; or when he played, they stopped, according to which rules he used that week! He liked the latter better because he wanted me to listen to him play and love it! He also did this playing his violin."

"Mengele was part of an experiment with young men. They seemed to be training a set of men such that they would do anything they were told. I was the surprise element that they weren't expecting. It was spring of 1955. He was the man with the clipboard in this experiment. There was also a colonel named Sandy, a red-haired square jawed man, who was the local in charge. They were using military facilities for these experiments, and the men were brought from Ft. Campbell in Clarksville, Tennessee. They seemed to be some sort of Special Forces dudes who were being trained. This actually went on from the summer before 1954 until spring just before I was six in 1955."

Gerald Posner documents Mengele's trip to Switzerland in April 1956 with a 2-hour stopover in New York.[207] He must have felt safe from detection. But why, unless he had been coming and going unnoticed before this trip! It was April 1956 through September 1956 that the previous survivor reports him showing up at least four more times to do programming.

I can't say if the above survivor and I ever met during these experiments, but I too was privy to Mengele's torture in 1956 when I was almost nine years old. After a summer vacation to my cousins in southern Ohio, I was taken to the Adirondack Mountains where I was programmed. This vacation was a way to conveniently explain my absence to the rest of my family. I remember how happy I was to escape the drudgery of home. My cousin and I sang songs, played an old player piano, and took walks through the quaint streets downtown where the movie theatre was located. I learned life could be free from the worry of molestation, and that kids were supposed to relax and just have fun.

I had a rude awakening when I didn't go directly home, but was taken on a long drive by my dad to a rural looking place with a winding road that led up to an airplane hanger. Inside suspended from the rafters in the ceiling (operated by pulleys) were cages[lv] with naked kids in them. It seemed that most were younger than I. I was placed in one of these cages, and like the others deprived of food and water. I become very cold and continually hunched over to hide my nakedness. Every time I tried to sleep, someone with a cattle prod reached through the bars and poked me. He had very long nails and seemed to enjoy this torture. He was able to stand next to any cage by using something like the cages that we were in to reach us. When he wasn't torturing one of us kids, he stood on the ground with Dr. Black. They both smiled with evil grins, and our tears had absolutely no impact on them.

The purpose of all this torture was to prepare us for programming. There was a hospital where each of us was taken after the torture made us compliant. The training I had involved easels and blackboards. This was where I was taught about the meridians of the body, and shown how to run energy up and down these meridians. It was preparation for later experiments in which I would use my mind to attempt to psychically kill. In another experiment an alter was created and made to memorize binary code. If this robot alter did not completely and accurately repeat back what it had been taught, I was returned to the cage.

Trauma based programming was theoretically the reason for some of the torturous things perpetrated on survivors. It was the cruelest form of mental brainwashing, and left the child completely disassociated and open to programming. Josef Mengele was a master at this.

Mengele became so convinced no arrest warrants were going to be issued for him, that he applied for a passport using his true identity. On September 11, 1956, the West German Embassy in Buenos Aires issued Josef Mengele of Gunzburg identity papers in his own name. He had been living under the assumed name of Helmet Gregor. Using the identity card he obtained a West German passport. He made numerous trips to South American countries and visited his family in Switzerland.

It was on a business trip to Santiago, Chile in February 1957 that he met with Walter Rauff, the SS Colonel who developed the mobile gas vans that killed 97,000. In 1957 a survivor reported contact with Mengele in Augsburg, Germany and in the Camp Dora/Nordhausen Hartz Mountain area. This same survivor reports being flown in a helicopter in 1957 to Camp David, and then taken underground to Raven Rock where Mengele did programming with a violin. The Hersha sisters also report in Secret Weapons that Raven Rock was a place where they were taken for programming.

In July 1958 Josef Mengele flew to Montevideo, Uruguay to remarry and returned to South America to live in a house in the Olivos Suburb that bordered on the back of what had been President Peron's palatial home. He was arrested under the alias Dr. Gregor for practicing without a license in a back street abortion clinic in Buenos Aires.

At the beginning of 1959, Mengele's father died suddenly. He fled to Paraguay in May 1959, and in July the first demand for his extradition was made after an arrest warrant was issued. He traveled back and forth from Buenos Aires and Paraguay often, as well as having contact with survivors in the States.[208]

A survivor reports remembering a "doctor", a man who wore a white coat and seemed to act "in charge," in or near Detroit, Michigan in 1959 or 1960. The survivor says:

"The man had a German accent and wore small wire-rimmed glasses. He was not very tall, perhaps only five foot eight or shorter? He had the most intense eyes. They were a dark brown and very scary. He had wavy brown/black hair, and he spoke in a mixture of German and English, with more German when he was yelling or very excited. I remember associating him with the 'daisy' game--where you have a daisy and you pluck the petals and say, 'he loves me, he loves me not'."

This survivor assumed he was Mengele from the similarities between drawings she made of this man, and pictures she viewed of him in books as an adult.

A Canadian survivor remembers Mengele showing up at a Catholic orphanage three times a year for two weeks in 1959, 60, 61, and 62. He went by the name Father Joseph and used drugs and hypnosis in his programming of this survivor to connect electronic tones to colored geometrically shaped building blocks. He also used cat and dog [male-female] programming, plus the use of tones connected to scents to create groups of flower children alters. The scents were later connected to tuning-fork tones for the purpose of specialized programming. This was done by selecting certain vertebrae for electroshock, while playing the tone and administering the scent.

In January 1960 a second request for extradition was made for Josef Mengele. The Mossad were hunting for escaped Nazi's and Adolf Eichmann was discovered. Eichmann was kidnapped and interrogated in May 1960 about Mengele's whereabouts. According to Gerald Posner, Eichmann and Mengele met in 1952 and were seen at the ABC city center café from time to time in Buenos Aires.[209] Sometime in 1960 Argentina finally decided to issue a warrant for Mengele's arrest and for more than a year no one had news of him. Fearing capture it was thought he fled Paraguay and took up residence in Brazil. It seems our government was also quite busy working with him doing brainwashing and programming.

My contact in Montreal where the abortion was performed was in early 1960. Another survivor reports contact with him where "foundational programming" occurred in the summer of 1960 in Kansas City. The survivor explains,

"By foundational programming I mean, abuse to create many traumatized alters to use in programming more specific functions later on and in creating internal system structure. There is a memory of him creating specific trauma bonding. He split the alters so that one would remember him being very loving, but it included a lot of sexual abuse and other parts would experience terror at his cruelty. With the first one, he somehow created the experience that he was inside our mind being very nurturing and teaching her that she will always want only him. Then later he abandoned her abruptly, and made her feel worthless and cast-off. With another alter he was mean, creating a rage alter by killing a little boy she had felt bonded with as her little protector. In a different memory some alters call 'the white room', he did electroshock with drugging and some kind of rotating equipment to create even more helpless feelings and confusion. It was blinding white light that was overwhelming, whether or not our eyes were open or closed. This abuse resulted in three 'adult' alters that reinforced internal loyalty programming. If they tried to stray from it, they always started to experience intense pain from the first part of the white room abuse, so they always backed off and got back in place. He also did some internal structure and programming on a Kabala theme, locking different alters and alter pairs into various parts of the structure by separate abuse incidents."

A survivor who was also programmed by Dr. Black says he also used the alias's Dr. Schwartz, Joseph and Yusef with her, and she describes him as having metal braces on at least one of his lower legs, next to his ankles. She reports similar methods being used to do a specific form of base programming on her. For the most part, she did not know what location she was in or her age. She says, "This was not unusual for me, because I had so many alter-states that I switched between in moments of fear and distress. Using me as their guinea pig, Dr. Black taught dad how to break a child's psyche and create alter-states. Later on I would watch dad create what he called "chains" of alter-states in children. He would begin by traumatizing the host alter-state (aka 'host personality') and then traumatize each resulting alter-state until it went 'under'. Each time a part went under and a new part with no memory emerged, dad assigned this part of the broken personality a name. Either at that time or afterwards, he recorded the names and traits each alter-state seemed to have. Being an engineer, he usually used flowcharts and blueprints. Dad did this over and over on a "chain" of alter-states until no more emerged, or they were so limited in personality that there was nothing left to work with.

When I was a little girl, I was taken somewhere by my parents by foot up a paved drive on a hill past a row of one-story, small, red brick, flat-roofed buildings to our left. At the top of the hill was an odd black railroad car sitting all by it self. A good distance away from the right of the train car perhaps a half-mile, was a large multi-story, flat roofed white or light beige exterior building. Dr. Black later told me the building was a hospital he sometimes was at.

As I got ready to climb up into the train car, a curly-haired blond mother with a little blond boy came out. Dr. Black, the dark-haired tall slim doctor was inside the doorway. I remember his dark eyes, which may have been made darker by the lack of strong lighting inside the car. After I went inside, he told me that the boy had tried to kill his mother with a knife. The doctor explained to me that he was interested in children with aggression. He seemed interested in studying aggression in me. Inside the train car on the side facing the hill was a long, narrow wooden table. I do not remember now what he did to me in that car. He played some kind of music in that train car. That is also still vague. I believe he used a radio. The music seemed to be a part of what he did to me during our time alone together. I once remembered what he did to me there, but no longer am able. Perhaps this is for the best.

When I was three years old (1958), Dr. Black told my father in front of me never to talk baby talk to me. Even at that age, I was to talk in complete sentences like adults do. I was not afraid of Dr. Black in some of those child alter-states, because he didn't give a physical indication of when he was going to hurt me. However, Dr. Black would tongue-lash other men when they made mistakes under his orders. He had no tolerance for that. He would act condescending towards them. It was like he had made himself god and nobody else could ever hope to get as perfect as he was.

Dr. Black used nursery rhymes and songs with me. A biggie he used was the "Engine That Could." He modified it with me, however. He told me that he considered it to be wrong to tell me to say, "I think I can" because that still gave me a way out. He taught me to say, 'I can' or 'I can do this!' over and over again. Of course, what I 'did' was always for them, not for myself.

The down side of that conditioning was that if I believe I can do anything–especially hard physical work–then, to fail is to be a failure. To do is to be. This was one of Dr. Black's legacies inside me. He wanted me to be 'uber' (his word) or super. To be more than anyone else in school, which is still a problem. I had to always be stronger and smarter. I believed him. When he talked to me this way, his voice was very smooth."

Not unlike the survivor who was tormented and programmed in Kansas City, this survivor explains what happened to her after a horrible sexual trauma that Dr. Mengele put her through before he programmed her. She says,

"I remembered that Dr. Black had very shiny black shoes and a black suit and plain coat that didn't have a single wrinkle in them. He wore a very white, unwrinkled shirt. His hair was perfectly slicked but not greasy. He stood straight and was probably at least as tall as my father (6'), although since I was only a little scared four-year-old girl, he was a giant to me. I could maybe reach his zipper or belt, also black, which I suspected was preferable to him since he was a flaming pedophile.

It may have been the summer of 1959. I had been in that room several times. The walls of the room, which was probably no more than maybe 12 foot by 16 foot were paneled with possibly stained, horizontal light brown-ridged wood. I distinctly smelled cedar. The windows were paned, set in horizontal rectangular fashion in the walls, maybe one-half of the way up. There were more than two panes per window, with no drapes over them. There may have been big hardwood trees outside with leaves.

There was mention of a 'waiting room' with this being the 'doctor's room.' It was completely void of furniture, no carpeting nor mats." (Author's note: I have intentionally left the sexual/trauma part of the memory out, so as to not traumatize those readers who are survivors.)

She continues, "I came too and the room was darker. The doctor's penis no longer stuck out. He was playing with a long black electrical cord. It may have been 240V because the two exposed wires were rounder and harder looking than a conventional 120V cord. He made it wiggle along the floor like a snake while I watched it slither around on the floor (wooden, I believe). He told me alternately that it was his "pet" and his "friend." He said he had "tamed" it and wanted to use it to "tame" me. Several times, he touched the ends to my arm. It was not live yet, so there was no discomfort. I relaxed more when I realized it wasn't on (dad had tortured me previously with electrified wires). Dr. Black even tickled my right underarm with the end and I giggled.

Then he started talking about someone named "Bobby." I didn't understand. He took a woman's bobby pin and laid it on my extended right forearm. Then he touched the exposed wire to the bobby pin. He must have plugged it in somehow because he burned a bobby pin mark on my arm. He created a Bobby alter-state by simply doing that. The pain and shock made me go under; a part broke off from my mind, and was dubbed that new name/trigger word.

The next thing I could remember, he made me lay on my stomach on the floor. He somehow attached chains to my wrists and ankles by using rather wide, black leather restraints. He then took what may have been a cattle prod and put it on my back. I screamed internally and strained at the restraints, but I already – as previously conditioned by my father – knew not to physically scream or cry. I already knew that if I did, the man might be that much crueler. I believed it was in my best interest to bear the intense pain until it was over.

Then Dr. Black inserted the object into me 'down there' from behind. It was so painful that I still do not know if it was rectal or vaginal. It doesn't seem to matter anyway, because when the electrical charge hits the nervous system, everything hurts and contracts in a hellish fashion. I did start saying aloud over and over again, ‘I’m sorry’ (for what, it didn’t matter) and ‘I’ll be a good girl, I promise, I promise.’

After the electrical shock, I physically fainted. While I was unconscious, someone released the wrist shackles and put them out of sight. As I came to, I saw Dr. Black standing in front of me, his back to the opposite wall with the windows behind him. He told me that only when I am with him, I am free. He told me to come to him. I tried to crawl like a dog towards him, but the shackles on my ankles kept me from being able to. He kept telling me calmly to come to him. I was terribly frustrated that I could not. I wanted to be with him, because he told me that when I am with him I would not be hurt again. But I could not do it.

He may have hypnotized me because his eyes got darker as I looked up at them and I heard his left fingers snap and the shackles were gone. I thought he was a magician. I believed that when he snapped his fingers, he made the shackles disappear. That made him seem all the more powerful to me.

At the time, one part of me had a strong fantasy vision of taking a heavy horseshoe and banging the top of his head over and over until I cracked his skull and killed his brain, since I’d previously learned from my father that the brain controls the rest of the body. I was absolutely frustrated with fury that had no outlet. Dr. Black seemed to understand that this was happening inside me. Before letting me come near him, he told me that from now on my rage was to stay “in the middle.” He named it “Robbie,”[lvi] which was also my baby brother’s name. He said “Robbie” was to obey him, only him. Dr. Black said that he would tell “Robbie” when and how to attack. By giving my rage a name/trigger word, he transformed my rage into an alter-state and successfully compartmentalized it away from other alter-states. This was important many years later, when I was sent overseas on black ops. My “Robbie”/rage alter-state was used numerous times.

Dr. Black reinforced this new alter-state by having dad bring in a baby bird that was so new that its eyes weren’t even open yet. Dr. Black told “Robbie” to kill it. He didn’t really have to say it; I had to anyway, because the rage was so physically unbearable I had to have some form of physical relief. Because rage made me much stronger than I usually am, I pulled the baby bird’s head off by pulling the neck apart. I hated myself for doing it, of course, but I also did feel some relief. (In a projected way, the bird was Dr. Black. I had taken the head off to “kill” Dr. Black’s brain, thereby preventing him from hurting me anymore.)

Dr. Black then told “Robbie” that anyone who would find out what I’d done would hate and reject and despise me, therefore I understood that I could never tell anyone. I believed the doctor; how could I not? This further compartmentalized my rage, because my internalized self-loathing kept this part of me separated from other non-rageful, non-abusive parts of my fragmented personality.

After that, he told me that only with him would I be safe. He said he would protect me from pain. I understood that if I stayed loyal to him, I would not be hurt again. As I psychologically aligned with him, the psychic pain in him that he physically inflicted on me somehow became separated from him; now becoming a nearly visible blob of substance sitting in the other side of the room. I had to do this in my own mind to make him a non-abuser, to lose my fear of him, and mentally/emotionally align with him. This is a classic example of “Stockholm Syndrome,” where a victim learns to identify with and please the abuser. What Dr. Black conditioned me to believe in my subconscious mind was that to rebel against him/them equaled imperfection. He would murmur while I was in a trance, "Imperfection leads to more imperfection." The thought of being so totally out of control was terrifying, since again, imperfection meant failure, which meant losing my right to live. The only way to be physically perfect was to be with them, obey them, stay loyal and psychologically aligned with them. It was an odd form of physical/mental blackmail and it worked.

He told me I was his "puppy." I didn't mentally fight that image. He told me to "heel" beside his left leg. I did. He told me to "sit." I sat and waited, unmoving, for his next order. He hung down a left-hand finger and said, "Suck on it; it will have to do for now." I did so.

Dad stood across the room, facing us. Dr. Black told dad that he, the doctor, would make me his "attack dog." He said he would condition me to where I would even attack dad, who I obeyed the most, if Dr. Black ordered me to. Dad laughed in an ugly way and said, "What, is she going to gnaw my leg?" Although dad seemed to idolize the doctor, this interaction seemed to make him very angry because his jaw started clenching.

The doctor seemed to notice this and told dad that he, the doctor, and others had done "experiments" on people. The fact that he did not say this to dad in German meant that he wanted me to hear it too. (Usually, when these men didn't want me to know what they were saying, they used German.) Dr. Black said they looked for prisoners who were especially afraid or quiet. They singled those prisoners out and took them to a special, more isolated area. They worked on each person in a similar fashion he said, until they were ready to do whatever they were told, total loyalty to their handlers. He said the final test had been for friends and close relatives of the prisoners to be brought there. The prisoners were then ordered to attack their loved ones and kill them. As the doctor told us this, he seemed quite proud.

He also talked about breeding. He and dad talked a lot about this. Dad was considered "closer" to perfection because he had the blond hair and gray-blue eyes and was in excellent physical condition. (He was a track athlete and had nearly participated in the Olympics in Rome in 1960.) People like dad were called "golden" because they were the most pure. Because I had brown hair, I was frightened. I was not "pure." I determined to be Dr. Black's favorite as he soon said I was so that they would not kill me out of disgust.

Dr. Black talked about how Hitler had not died, but had ascended to a god-state. He didn't seem to worship Hitler, but seemed to honor the perfect idea of the man. None of them worshipped him that I could tell, because they were too absorbed with the idea of also becoming gods. Gods don't worship gods. They talked about getting rid of the "impurities" that had been gotten through intermarriage with mongrels, etc. Mengele said that they needed to "remember who we are."

Dr. Black used nursery rhymes frequently while programming me. I guess he did this because they were already familiar to me, and hearing them away from him would reinforce the programming subconsciously. I once remembered that Dr. Black had drilled the left upper side of my skull and did something he called "Marionette," where he made parts of my body move on their own. It seems that I almost died from that event. I was quite small. I remembered that this was done in a tall white building dad said was a "VA hospital." Dad took me to that building at least several other times, where I witnessed the after-effects of lobotomies done to adults who lay on their backs on hospital beds in rows, looking quite a mess.

They broke my will and made me compliant in a way I never could have otherwise been. They broke me down completely, to a zero. They deliberately split me into two new main parts, like a tree that has a base (Kathy, age 5) and then two big thick branches forking upwards from there, that all the other parts split off from later. One part of the fork became a totally sociopath, self-hating, humanity despising, isolating "Bad Kathy" whom they would later use to do crimes for them. The other part of the fork would eventually become 'Good little Nazi boy' (since, after all, that part of me was based on their male personalities). Bad Kathy stayed brown-haired, which reinforced the sense of imperfection and not being good enough to be loved and accepted. Good little Nazi boy became internally, blond-haired and blue-eyed, the perfect Nazi, the loved and accepted one."

There was much more that this survivor told me. Perhaps one day she will decide to share the rest with the world. I will close her story with her own words.

"Two years ago I hospitalized myself. I woke up on a Saturday morning, extremely suicidal. One of my plans was to shoot myself in the head. If that failed (it did), I was going to take a thread cutter and cut my veins and pour out all the Nazi blood in my body. The need to do this was more important than staying alive. I didn't want to die; I just wanted to get the Nazi blood out of me. They had done something to my mind to make me believe their blood was in me, and that I therefore was theirs forever. I don't believe what they told me anymore, but I still do need to accept that a part of me aligned with them and their beliefs. Maybe I need to forgive myself for having done whatever it took to survive, mentally and physically. I wasn't a bad child. There's no such thing as a bad child. Children are precious and will often become the way we treat them. Reality is, I was simply surrounded by some of the worst criminals on the face of this earth. Mengele certainly could have been listed among the top 20 while he was still alive. (I choose to believe he's dead now.) Maybe, just maybe, I will find that they weren't all evil. I think that is the final thing I need to face about them, and about that Nazi-indoctrinated part of myself. They were human beings. Maybe as I learn to forgive myself for aligning with them in part, I will also then find a way to forgive them and finally find peace inside.

Yesterday on public radio, I heard the sirens in Israel and the description of automobile drivers stopping on the sides of the roads for two minutes, honoring those who died in the Holocaust. I just about lost it emotionally. It tore me up so bad to finally feel the connection to those victims. I cannot deny it anymore. I am a second-generation Holocaust victim. I too am a Mengele victim. I can finally accept it and I can finally feel love for those dear people. But I must take it even further. To truly heal, my next step is to also feel love for these human monsters. To understand there is no good side and no evil side, that we are all capable of great cruelty (if brain-damaged or born into intensely traumatic childhood's). We are all capable of important acts of goodness, I think, is the final phase of intensive healing. We are neither good nor bad. We are simply human." Kathy[210]

Josef Mengele's reported home remained in South America for the rest of his life. In April 1961, he was seen in Egypt preparing to go to Crete or one of the neighboring islands.[lvii] A group of Nazi supporters who had settled in Egypt were taking care of his journey. He managed to escape Israeli agents sent to pursue him. It was in 1961 that a Survivor reports him present in Canada with Dr. Penfield for programming, and he programmed another survivor aboard a ship in Vietnam/Laos in 1961-62.

In January 1962 a prominent Kitchener, Ontario Rabbi, Philip Rosenzweig, advised the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) of his suspicion that the infamous Josef Mengele, the Auschwitz “Angel of Death,” might be hiding on an estate located between Kitchener and neighboring Woodstock. The man, who used the name Joseph Menke was said to be a doctor.[211] The OPP officer didn’t know what to do, as Canada had no laws dealing with war crimes nor did Canadian law permit prosecution for crimes committed beyond her borders. Unless there was a specific extradition request from a foreign country with which Canada had an extradition treaty, the provincial police had no jurisdiction. The RCMP were brought in and decided the best course of action was to seek instruction from the departments of Justice and External Affairs. The investigation ended before it began. By the time a Mountie obtained a search warrant, the farm’s legal owner had sold the property and returned to Germany. Since there was no one left to interview, no further investigation was undertaken.[212]

A CIA document declassified in April 2001 says Mengele was sighted in Uruguay in 1962 with Friedrich Schwend. Schwend had specialized during World War II in distributing forged British pounds to help finance intelligence operations of the Reich Security Main Office. Schwend was considered to be a kind of finance minister of the planned Fourth Reich and was in charge of Operation Bernhard. Inmates at the Sachsenhausen concentration camp had been forced to produce these forged notes under this operation. A number of former Nazi officials were allegedly involved, including some who worked for an organization of former SS officers (ODESSA) in South America. Schwend claimed that he had worked for the Office of Strategic Services in 1945. Klaus Barbie also had contact in South America with Schwend. Barbie and Schwend, according to one CIA source were involved in a plot to assassinate Victor Paz Estenssoro, leftist president of Bolivia who was ousted and forced into exile in Peru. The CIA continued to deny that the agency had any direct connection with Barbie until 1983 when Washington admitted that he had worked for U.S. Intelligence, that he was a known war criminal, and that he had been allowed to escape. Another undated document released by the IWG in 2001 indicates that some of Mengele’s contacts in South America may have been involved in narcotics traffic. These narcotics were undoubtedly being shipped out of the country and Schwend was also known to have dealt in arms. I say, “Follow the Money Trail.” Was it a mere coincidence that Mengele was seen with Schwend and Barbie, two men who had been employed by our government? Is it that difficult to believe that Sid Gottlieb and others who were interested in unraveling the Mind Control mystery would employ and use one of the masters of this art? The IWG team said that many Nazi criminals “received light punishment, no punishment at all, or received compensation because Western spy agencies considered them useful assets in the Cold War.”

On Christmas Eve 1963, Karl-Heinz Mengele was at boarding school at Montreux. He told his friends that he was going to Italy for a few days to meet a close relative who had been living for many years in South America. The hotel in Milan had been paid for by Dr. Gregor Gregory, another one of Mengele’s numerous false identities. In 1963 and 1964, a Survivor reports contact with him in Albuquerque, New Mexico when she was in the second grade; and another survivor reports he was at Walter Reed Hospital in December 1963 for mind control programming sessions.

In 1964 a different survivor reports contact with him that summer at the New York World's Fair; while yet another survivor says he was with her on a European/Russia tour in November and December of 1964. She reports that the purpose of this trip was to train other mind control programmers. Then in 1965 another survivor places him in the Mount Hood area near Boring, Oregon; and a different survivor reports that he did programming on her in Monaca, Pennsylvania that same year.

Mengele used the alias, Vaterchen in 1965 with another survivor who was then four years old. This is her account of what happened.

"I was taken to the U. P. (upper peninsula) of Michigan in 1965. I was drugged and driven by night to Little Girl Point on the Northwestern shore of Michigan's UP. This is a tall, dark, rocky point overlooking the icy waters of Lake Superior. I was taken in a station wagon while lying in the back, and followed by a plain white half-ton utility vehicle (like UPS trucks). Upon arrival, men jumped out of the van and began to set up equipment on the rocky prominence. I was taken out of the wagon, stripped naked, and taken over to the point. An eerie looking man with scary, dark eyes, dark beard and moustache, and dark-rimmed glasses approached. He said to me, "meine Madchen..."(my little girl in German.) He had a German/Yiddish accent. Other men grabbed me and forced me down on the flat rock, where my arms and legs were dislocated. I was tied down spread eagle at my wrists and ankles to iron posts protruding from the rock (like tent stakes in height-were iron). The scary man lay on top of me (I was in agony of course), and began kissing me.

'Vaterchen loves his little girl,' he said, 'pain ist pleasure und pleasure ist pain.'

He slowly raped me, repeating those two previous phrases over and over again. My body unfortunately, responded to the sexual stimulation, while at the same time I was in extreme pain from the dislocations. When my body hit orgasm, he stopped and snapped my joints back into place (extreme pain), then finished his rape. I was untied and everyone was calling me Little Girl. They said,

'You are our little girl. We love our Little Girl. We are going to teach Little Girl how to fly.'

I was led over to the very point of the rock where a mining sluice was positioned on the rock, slanting downward and protruding over the water a hundred or so feet down. The water was icy, dark, and tumultuous below, with boulders protruding above the water making it more tumultuous. I was put into a leather harness and attached to a large rope on an old iron spool. They said,

'You are Little Girl. When we call you, we want you to wake up and fly.[lviii] If you fly when we call you like you're supposed to, we will always bring you back and not lose you. If you go too far by not doing what you're supposed to, we will lose you in the icy, black nothingness; and you will die there. If you obey, we will always be able to bring you back and wrap you in warm blankets, and you can go back to sleep in a warm, cozy bed.'

Then they pulled out a cattle prod,

'This is how we call you. Wake...Little Girl, Little Girl, time to wake up. Then when we want you to fly, you will feel this.'

They stuck the cattle prod on the small of my back and zapped me. Then they stuck me in the sluice and shoved me down it shouting,

'Now fly!'

I was slid out of the sluice and over the water, hitting it hard on impact. It was ice, pain, blackness, I couldn't breathe.... drowning…. pounded by the tumultuous water near the boulder. I tried to grab the boulder to climb out. Just as I did, I was jerked back away from it, and I proceeded to drown underwater. I guess when I stopped flailing, they reeled me back up. I was literally frozen in pain and terror from lack of oxygen. They immediately wrapped me in warm blankets, after taking the harness off and continued the programming.

'Good Little Girl, you obeyed. You flew; you know what it feels like to go too far. If you awake when you're called and fly like you're supposed to, we will never lose you. We will bring you back and make you warm and cozy, and let you go back to sleep.'

> On and on they kept repeating those kinds of phrases. Once they decided I was warmed enough, he purred in my ear,
>
> 'Vaterchen loves his Little Girl. Good Little Girl. Pain ist pleasure und pleasure ist pain. Now go to sleep my Little Girl.'
>
> I was then injected with a drug, and I lost consciousness."

The survivor said that from that point on, Little Girl was the alter called out for the government experiments, not unlike when my baby alter or Guy was called upon. She continues,

"When hit with electric shock, she 'flew', dissociated from the body to the ceiling while they created a new alter through various mind-splitting, electric shock techniques. They programmed that alter, put that one away; and then Little Girl was called back verbally accompanied by a jolt of electricity."

Gerald Posner quoted Colonel Von Eckstein, a Paraguayan official as saying that Dr. Mengele traveled to Spain on a Paraguayan passport in 1965 to meet with Otto Skorzeny. Skokrzeny was a Nazi who was reported to have engineered the escape of many other Nazis after the war.[213]

In August of 1966 Josef Mengele was living in Hohenau, a resort in Paraguay at the Tirol Hotel in Room 12, where he narrowly escaped his Israeli pursuers again. John Martin, an ABC News correspondent obtained an on-camera admission in 1985 from Colonel Von Eckstein, that the Government had warned Dr. Mengele about Israeli agents searching for him.[214]

A survivor reported a possible contact with him in the summer of 1968 in Maine, and a different survivor states her final contact may have been with him in the Cleveland, Ohio area in 1968. His final alias was obtained when his friend Wolfgang Gerhard left South America in 1971. He gave Mengele his Brazilian identity card, allowing him to live and travel within the country without suspicion. Gerhard had been protecting Mengele for over a decade. In 1970, he had even put out feelers in the German expatriate community, seeking haven for Mengele. Mengele considered an offer from Klaus Barbie,[215] the "Butcher of Lyon," to move to Bolivia, but supposedly he was happy in Brazil and declined.[216] In 1972, the CIA reported that Mengele was using the name Dr. Henrique Wollman and that he might be heavily involved in drug dealing. An internal memorandum was drawn up in collaboration with the Drug Enforcement Administration. Mengele moved to Sao Paulo in 1975 where he assumed the alias of Don Pedro.

Mengele writes in his journal in 1978, “I am losing hope. It is the fifth week of suffering through days and nights without sleep.”[217] He had developed very bad migraines. One can only hope he was beginning to pay the price for his criminal behavior that was still taking place at his hands covertly in the United States and Canada.

Investigators closed the files on Josef Mengele after a skeleton unearthed in a grave marked Wolfgang Gerhard was examined and said to be Mengele’s. According to the report, he drowned after suffering a heart attack while swimming on February 7, 1979. Josef Mengele’s wife and Rolf, his son gave blood samples for DNA testing. They claimed that the body in the grave was the biological father of Rolf. It should be noted that in August 1943 Mengele’s wife, Irene, visited him in Auschwitz for the first time. In August 1944 Irene again visited Mengele when Rolf was five months old. Either Rolf had been born two months premature, or he had a different father. Could the body in the grave have been Rolf’s biological father, but not Josef Mengele?

Several months after he was supposed to have drowned, an assistant United States attorney in Miami, Florida claimed he had been given the secret task of arresting Mengele at the airport on August 29, 1979. Jerry Sandford claimed the FBI received word that he would be flying in from Asuncion on board Braniff flight 974. One hour after the FBI agents were at Sandford’s house to explain the mission, he got a call from Washington telling him Mengele had apparently been tipped off and wouldn’t be arriving. Gerald Posner reported that the Mengele family bought 400 acres of farmland in Greencastle, Indiana in December 1979 valued at $1,200,000.

In a 1985 story for the New York Times, Ralph Blumenthal reports that Mr. Posner said he had been told directly by members of a German family in Hohenau in southern Paraguay in December, that Dr. Mengele had stayed with them for several days in 1982. Mr. Posner said he had also found reports in police files in Brazil and Chile that Dr. Mengele was spotted there in 1983.[218] This is six years after he was supposed to have drowned.

President Fernando de la Rua attending the 57th anniversary of the Warsaw Uprising by Jews said Argentina must, “seek forgiveness because Nazi criminals fleeing justice entered our country and hid among us for a long time. Some were discovered, others perhaps not.” Researchers working in Argentina have said presidential papers from former President Juan Peron indicate he may have encouraged Nazi war criminals to come to Argentina.[219]

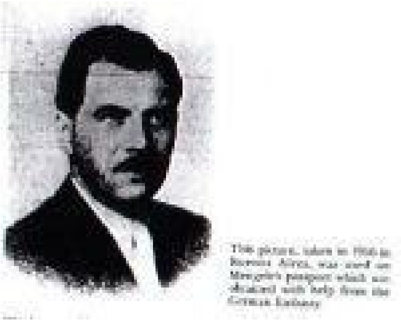
Since 1978 the government has stripped 63 accused Nazis of their U.S. citizenship and 250 others are under investigation.[220] In June 1988, the Department of State issued the so-called Second Eizenstat Report.[221] The report showed a dossier for German rocket scientist Arthur Rudolph and the records relating to the CIC’s investigation of him. Rudolph came to the United States under Project Paperclip and served in various capacities in the Army, Air Force, and NASA programs, including development of the Saturn V rocket. He left the United States and renounced his citizenship in the mid 1980’s, following an OSI investigation of his role in the use of slave labor at Mittelwerk.

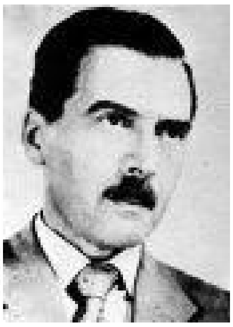
In 1998 Congress passed a law requiring declassification of Nazi war criminals files held by U.S. intelligence agencies. The CIA had refused to acknowledge the existence of these records up until that time, not unlike their continued denial of many other things until they are faced with irrefutable evidence from outside sources. 10,000 pages of declassified CIA files were released on April 27, 2001, detailing working relationships with some of the same Nazi's that were wanted for war crimes.

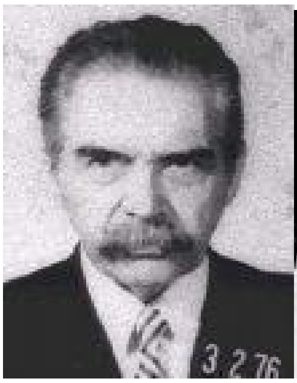
Washington lawyer Richard Ben-Veniste, a member of a federal panel in charge of carrying out the 1998 law said the files suggested that using the Nazis was "shortsighted and counterproductive" because of their "inherent defects as human beings and their vulnerability to being blackmailed." Historian Norman Goda of Ohio University noted that in the files "the moral question--should we use these people?--is never asked." Instead, U.S. intelligence officials apparently decided that "we can use them, but we certainly can't trust them."

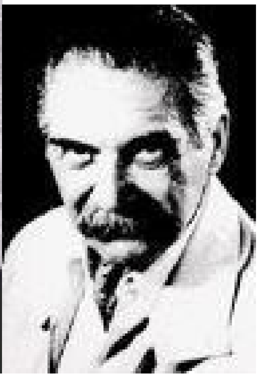
Perhaps now as survivors continue to speak out, we will uncover all of those responsible for bringing these criminals into the United States and Canada to continue some of the same grizzly experiments they carried out in Europe during the war. The web of secrecy that made the Holocaust possible is the same web of secrecy that allowed innocent children in the United States to become victims of their government's fear of Communism. If we allow that web of secrecy to continue because it is too painful and horrifying to read about and believe, nothing will prevent it from happening again. Too many children, including myself were systematically brainwashed. Our minds became our concentration camp. Only now by healing and speaking out, have we become liberated.

Mengele in 56 on German Passport Mengele in Paraguay 1960 (Corbis)









Josef Mengele Photo for Mengele's false ID card

(Associated Press left top and two bottom)
http://www.crimelibrary.com/mengele/research.htm

Conclusion

When I look at the betrayal of trust by the United States Government during the Cold War, and how it was promulgated against it's very citizens by the power it wielded, I cannot help but compare that to incest. A daughter generally remains loyal to her father after being violated because he uses his power to keep her silent and submissive. Many times the secret remains hidden for decades. So too, due to fear and the top-secret classification of these files, the entire picture of covert experimentation has remained hidden from the very citizens who themselves were used as guinea pigs.

A child who is removed from a hostile environment and then placed in an environment where it receives protection, can be resilient, recover, and go on to lead a productive life. We too, as a nation, can recover from the horrendous effects of this abuse of power, if we will only speak out. We must let our leaders know that we will not stand to let this lay dormant in the shadows of secrecy any longer. If we allow these abuses of power from the past to go unpunished because we are enjoying democracy today, then we may as well get used to the idea that Hitler will rise from the ashes in another form.

We can make each day the beginning of a new and better life for our children and their children. We can bury the hardships and deceit of the past by building a government that is worthy of our trust. The foundation of that trust must be built on truth, not secrecy. None of us expects a life free from worry or care, but we must demand to have the same kind of trust in our government that an innocent child has when he looks at the stars and believes a new day will dawn.

My life, from the time of my last remembered experiments at age 16, has taken many twists and turns. I married at 17, gave birth to the first of my three children at 18, and struggled to keep a marriage together with an unfaithful alcoholic husband for the next sixteen years. The loss of my mother when I was 29 was followed two years later by my dad's demise. At last I was free from the unconscious control this man had played in my life.

I became quite successful as a District Manager of a large temporary help company, traveling to six different cities with total budgets exceeding $6,000,000 and finally felt financially and emotionally stable enough to divorce. As I continued to spread my wings and see the heights I was able to climb unfettered by the past, I met the man who was to stand beside me as my husband through my long and painful journey to heal.

Four years into our marriage, my programming started to deteriorate and my memories began to haunt me. My struggle to free myself was the most difficult road I had yet walked. Many times I survived solely because others believed I could and would. Along with my doctor, my dear husband and sister became my confidantes. It seems I cried enough tears in the last ten years to turn the Sahara desert into an oasis. As the healing continued, I found a new person hiding beneath all the splintered diamonds of my personality. Integrating the facets of these troubled pieces of myself came naturally as I remembered, felt and understood that I no longer had to walk the trail of tears from the past. I could at last be free to choose my path and change courses at any time. It was all such a marvelous discovery—this freedom of mind, this tranquility, this peace.

Today I continue to work on recovering from the emotional and physical effects that still plaque me as a result of being used as a human guinea pig by my own government. I wish I could say that I have been free from all contact by my former programmers and handlers. I can't. Had I not started that healing journey in 1991, I would not have been able to break the programming that was installed in me for the Ides of March 1999. It was a pathetic program to be sure, installed by pathetic men when I was only 16. I have every reason to believe that the people who installed it cared little for the person who was to be the recipient of the “Red Fire.” They hoped to move another piece of the power puzzle that only they truly understand.

My handlers no longer contact me. The last time they tried by phone to activate an alter with preprogrammed cues--they failed. The man who phoned was extremely upset. He and so many others believed our programming would never break down, and if it did they counted on the insane sounding nature of these experiments to totally discredit any survivors who spoke the truth. What they could never foresee was the indomitable fighting nature that perhaps they themselves had instilled. The need to find the truth and expose it was much larger than the fear they used to control me.

I am not looking for notoriety. I don’t believe I am special. I’m just one of the many Cold War children who were convenient lab rats for a group of despicable people. I thank God for the Accountants of the world and the records they keep. Without those MKULTRA, Bluebird, and Artichoke documents, my story would sound like just another piece of science fiction.

Three years of my life have been spent documenting this book. I would have preferred to forget this ugliness and go on with my life. Instead I have walked through a trail of tears that I sometimes felt I would drown in. The emotions of the hundreds of thousands of the victims of this cold war nightmare still haunt me. They will never leave me, but by exposing the truth, I have at last been able to free much of my own hatred and pain. Understanding, speaking the truth, and forgiveness frees. Like the eagle on the cover of this book, I am soaring free of the fear and hatred that consumed me for a good portion of my life. I hope this book will continue to speak for the silent masses for decades to come. The truth can set us free.

MKULTRA DOCUMENTS

Collin A. Ross has a complete listing of the 149 MKULTRA projects with known institutions and doctors involved in Appendix C of his book Bluebird: Deliberate Creation of Multiple Personality by Psychiatrists.

TAB A[lix]

xxxxxxx 87624

3 April 1953

MEMORANDUM FOR: Director, Central Intelligence

SUBJECT: Two Extremely Sensitive Research Programs

1. Approximately 6% of the TSS research and development effort lies in two highly sensitive fields in which it is not possible to conduct the work through the customary contracts for security reason and other considerations.

2. These two sensitive fields are: a) Covert studies of biological and chemical warfare

b) xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx

3. Permission of the DCI is requested to handle work in these two fields in the manner outlined in Tab A without contracts and with reimbursement to be made against invoices properly certified by TSS.

4. All controls established in the PRC approval of the original Research Program (other than signing a contract) would remain unchanged. Periodic financial and progress reports will be made. All documents will be retained by TSS.

5. No new funds are involved. This procedure would apply to funds previously approved for research.

6. Tab B is a memorandum to the Deputy Director (Administration) for your signature authorizing this procedure.

[Signature]

Richard Helms

Acting Deputy Director (Plans)

Attachments: (2)

Tab A - Description of Project MKULTRA and the controls which will be exercised over its execution

Tab B - Suggested Memorandum from DCI to DD/A authorizing payment of invoices under Project MKULTRA

87624-- TAB A

PROJECT MKULTRA

Extremely Sensitive Research and Development Programs

1. On 5 June 1952, the Project Review Committee approved the TSS Research Program for Fiscal Year 1953. [Three lines redacted]

2. The PRC approval authorized the Director of Research, at his discretion and with the approval of the Research Chairman, to apportion and obligate the research funds among individual projects, such projects to be subject to the usual Agency procedures and administrative controls.

3. This Research Program has been actively underway since the middle of 1952 and has gathered considerable momentum during the past few months. It is now evident on the basis of work currently underway that approximately 94% of the projects contemplated can be handled through regular procurement channels by means of customary contracts signed jointly by the Agency and the organization undertaking to carry out the work. It has also become apparent that approximately 6% of the projects are of such ultra-sensitive nature that they cannot and should not be handled by means of contracts which would associate CIA or the Government with the work in question. This 6% of the current research effort now lies entirely within two well-defined fields of endeavor, namely:

Research to develop a capability in the covert use of biological and chemical materials. This area involves the production of various physiological conditions which could support present or future clandestine operational. Aside from offensive potential, the development of a comprehensive capability in this field of covert chemical and biological warfare gives us a thorough knowledge of the enemy's theoretical potential, thus enabling us to defend ourselves against a foe who might not be as restrained in the use of these techniques as we are. For example: we intend to investigate the development of a chemical material which causes a reversible non-toxic aberrant mental state, the specific nature of which can be reasonably well predicted for each individual. This material could potentially aid in discrediting individuals, eliciting information, implanting suggestion and other forms of mental control.

b) [10 lines redacted]

4. It is highly undesirable from a policy and security point of view that contracts should be signed indicating Agency or government interest in either of these two fields. In a great many instances the work in field (a) must be conducted by individuals who are not and should not be aware of our interest. In all cases dealing with field (b), it is mandatory that any connection with the Agency should be known only to an absolute minimum number of people who have been specifically cleared for this purpose. In no case should any manufacturer or supplier be aware of Government interest.

5. In many cases in field (a) where the researcher can be cleared and may be aware of our interest in the program, he is unwilling to have his name on a contract which remains out of his control in his files. Experience has shown that qualified, competent individuals in the field of pharmacological, physiological, psychiatric and other biological sciences are most reluctant to enter into signed agreements of any sort which connect them with this activity since such a connection would jeopardize their professional reputations.

6. Even internally in CIA, as few individuals as possible should be aware of our interest in these fields and of the identity of those who are working for us. At present this results in ridiculous contracts, often with cut-outs, which do not spell out the scope or intent of the work and which contain terms which the cut-out cannot incorporate in his contract with the researcher without revealing Government interest. Complete Government audits of such contracts are impossible for the same reason.

7. It is, therefore, requested that the DCI authorize TSS to handle 6% xxxxxxxx of the previously approved research budget for FY '53 without the establishment of formal contractual relations. This program will be known as Project MKULTRA.

8. It is suggested that payment of invoices under Project MKULTRA forwarded by TSS be authorized, provided that:

(a) the total of such invoices does not exceed 6%   for Fiscal Year 1953;

Author's note, rest of document details the 6% funding and is not reproduced here.

Mori ID 185209

26 July 1963

MEMORANDUM FOR: Director of Central Intelligence

SUBJECT: Report of Inspection of MKULTRA

1. In connection with our survey of Technical Services Division, DD/P, it was deemed advisable to prepare the report of the MKULTRA program in one copy only, in view of its unusual sensitivity.

2. This report is forwarded herewith.

3. The MKULTRA activity is concerned with the research and development of chemical, biological, and radiological materials capable of employment in clandestine operations to control human behavior. The end products of such research are subject to very strict controls including a requirement for the personal approval of the Deputy Director/Plans for any operational use made of these end products.

4. The cryptonym MKULTRA encompasses the R&D phase and a second cryptonym MKDELTA denotes the DD/P system for control of the operational employment of such materials. The provisions of the MKULTRA authority also cover xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx [probably chemical and biological warfare research with the US Army]. The administration and control of this latter activity were found to be generally satisfactory and are discussed in greater detail in the main body of the report on TSD.

5. MKULTRA was authorized was authorized by then Director of Central Intelligence, Mr. Allen W. Dulles, in 1953. The TSD was assigned responsibility thereby to employ a portion of its R&D budget, eventually set at 20%, for research in behavioral materials and xxxxxxxxxxxxx under purely internal and compartmented controls, (further details are provided in paragraph 3 of the attached report). Normal procedures for project approval, funding, and accounting were waived. However, special arrangements for audit of expenditures have been evolved in subsequent years.

6. The scope of MKULTRA is comprehensive and ranges from the search for and procurement of botanical and chemical substances, through programs for their analysis in scientific laboratories, to progressive testing for effect on animals and human beings. The testing on individuals begins under laboratory conditions employing every safeguard and progresses gradually to more and more realistic operational situations. The program requires and obtains the services of a number of highly specialized authorities in many fields of natural science.

7. The concepts involved in manipulating human behavior are found by many people both within and outside the Agency to be distasteful and unethical. There is considerable evidence that opposition intelligence services are active and highly proficient in this field. The experience of TSD to date indicates that both the research and the employment of the materials are expensive and often unpredictable in results. Nevertheless, there have been major accomplishments both in research and operational employment.

8. The principal conclusions of the inspection are that the structure and operational controls over this activity need strengthening; improvements are needed in the administration of research projects; and some of the testing of substances under simulated operational conditions was judged to involve excessive risk to the Agency.

9. Attached for the signature of the Deputy Director of Central Intelligence is a memorandum transmitting the report to the Deputy Director/Plans requesting a summary of action taken or comments on the recommendations contained herein.

[Signature]
J. S. Earman
Inspector General
Attachments - as stated

[Typed at first page bottom:]
Declassification Review E.O. 12065
Conducted on 17 June 1981

Derivative Classification by 531025
Review 17 June 2001
Derived from C9c.2; C9e
Downgrade xxxxxxxxxxxxx 61140

~~[EYES ONLY~~]
xxxxxxxxx - 185209
Cy 2 See D

REPORT OF INSPECTION OF MKULTRA/TSD

Introduction

1. Technical Services Division (TSD), (the Technical Support Staff) received authorization from the then Director of Central Intelligence, Mr. Allen Dulles, on 3 April 1953 to develop and maintain continuing operational capabilities in the fields of a) [one line reacted] and b) chemical and biological materials capable of producing human behavioral and psychological changes, (see Tab A). The cryptonym MKULTRA was assigned to encompass TSD's research, development and equipment activities in these two fields. The cryptonym MKDELTA had already been assigned by DD/P Notice No. 229-1 on 20 October 1952 (since revised - see Tab B) as the indicator covering DD/P policy and procedure for the use of biochemicals in clandestine operations.

2. The MKULTRA charter provides only a brief presentation of the rationale of the authorized activities. The sensitive aspect of the program as it has evolved over the ensuing ten years are the following:

Research in the manipulation of human behavior is considered by many authorities in medicine and related fields to be professionally unethical, therefore the reputations of professional participants in the MKULTRA program are on occasion in jeopardy.

b. Some MKULTRA activities raise questions of legality implicit in the original charter.

c. A final phase of the testing of MKULTRA products places the rights and interests of U.S. citizens in jeopardy.

d. Public disclosure of some aspects of MKULTRA activity could induce serious adverse reaction in U.S. public opinion, as well as stimulate offensive and defensive action in this field on the part of foreign intelligence services.

3. In recognition of the sensitivity of MKULTRA, TSD was authorized exclusive control of the administration, records, and financial accountings of the program. Simple statements of certification were all that were required of TSD to obtain advances of funds from Finance Division. The DCI's memorandum also exempted MKULTRA from audit, but this provision was modified to permit limited audit before the end of the first year. Funding of MKULTRA was eventually stabilized at 20 percent of TSD's annual research and development budget. It has fallen in the neighborhood of xxxxxxxxxx per year over the ten-year history of the program, of which about 30 percent has been allocated to support of the xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx, cf. Tab C for MKULTRA funding record FY 60-63.

4. The inspection of TSD activities in the field of xxxxxxxxxxxxxxx noted below in the section of the Inspector General's Survey dealing with the xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx of TSD, cf. discussions beginning with paragraphs xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx. The security considerations applying to xxxxxxxxxxxx were found to be significantly different from those governing manipulation of human behavior. a) Many xxxxx external projects in support of the xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx are being funded and managed securely outside the MKULTRA mechanism. b) Chief, Support, TSD, believes that it may also be possible in the future to fund xxxxx MKULTRA projects by secure methods more compatible with DD/S responsibilities. c) The very nature of the xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx requires that a high percentage of staff contribute and be witting of each operation. xxxxx security practices are tight and the Inspector General's Survey recommends further refinements in security procedures.

5. The inspection of MKULTRA projects in biochemical controls of human behavior raised questions in the following area of policy and management which are dealt with in the balance of this report:

a. Scope of the MKULTRA charter:

(1) Over the ten-year life of the program many additional avenues to the control of human behavior have been designated by the TSD management as appropriate to investigation under the MKULTRA charter, including radiation, electro-shock, various fields of psychology, psychiatry, sociology, and anthropology, graphology, harassment substances, and paramilitary devices and materials.

(2) Various projects do not appear to have been sufficiently sensitive to warrant waiver of normal Agency procedures for authorization and control.

(3) Other secure channels for establishment and funding of Agency-sterile activities have been evolved over the past ten years by Deputy Director/Support (DD/S) and in some cases could reasonably be employed by TSD in lieu of MKULTRA procedures.

In view of these developments there is substantial agreement among all parties concerned that redefinition of the scope of MKULTRA is now appropriate.

b. MKULTRA management policies:

(1) The original charter documents specified that TSD maintain exacting control of MKULTRA activities. In doing so, however, TSD has pursued a philosophy of minimum documentation in keeping with the high sensitivity of some of the projects. Some files were found to present a reasonably complete record, including most sensitive matters, while others with parallel objectives contained little or no data at all. The lack of consistent records precluded use of routine inspection procedures and raised a variety of questions concerning management and fiscal controls.

(2) Lack of records essential to inspection of MKULTRA moved to the forefront among issues as the present survey proceeded. Under normal circumstances the inspectors would have examined an inventory of discrediting, disabling, and lethal substances perfected or procured form whatever sources. The records on representative items would have been review according to such standard criteria as:

(a) How were the substance and its properties identified?

(b) What researcher was selected to perform the research, and why?

(c) When was work begun, where, involving what costs, at what rate of progress, based on what tests?

(d) What are the present capabilities and limitations of the substance for clandestine operations?

(e) What further research is being conducted on this and related substances and how does this reflect existing TSD capabilities, operational requirements and budget factors?

(3) MKULTRA records afforded no such approach to inspection. There are just two individuals in TSD who have full substantive knowledge of the program and most of that knowledge is unrecorded. Both are highly skilled, highly motivated, professionally competent individuals. Part of their competence lies in their command of intelligence tradecraft. In protecting the sensitive nature of the American intelligence capability to manipulate human behavior, they apply "need to know" doctrine to their professional associates and to their clerical assistants to a maximum degree. Confidence in their competence and discretion has been a vital feature of the management of MKULTRA.

c. Advanced testing of MKULTRA materials:

It is the firm doctrine in TSD that testing of materials under accepted scientific procedure fails to disclose the full pattern of reactions and attributions that may occur in operational situations. TSD initiated a program for covert testing of materials on unwitting U.S. citizens in 1955. The present report reviews the rationale and risks attending this activity and recommends termination of such testing in the United States, cf. paragraphs 10-18 below.

Modus Operandi

6. The research and development of materials capable of producing behavioral or physiological change in humans is now performed within a highly elaborate and stabilized MKULTRA structure. The search for new materials; e.g., psilocybin from Mexican mushrooms, or a fungi occurring in agricultural crops, is conducted through standing arrangements with specialists in universities, pharmaceutical houses, hospitals, state and federal institutions, and private research organizations who are authorities in the given field of investigation in their own right. Annual grants of funds are made under ostensible research foundation auspices to the specialists located in the public or quasi-public institutions. This approach conceals from the institution the interest of CIA and permits the recipient to proceed with his investigation, publish his findings (excluding intelligence implications), and account for his expenditures in a manner normal to his institution. A number of grants have included funds for the construction and equipping of research facilities and for the employment of research assistants. Key individuals must qualify for top secret clearance and are made witting of Agency sponsorship. As a rule each specialist is managed unilaterally and is not witting of Agency support of parallel MKULTRA research in his field. The system in effect "buys a piece" of the specialist in order to enlist his aid in pursuing the intelligence implications of his research. His services typically include systematic search of the scientific literature, procurement of materials, their propagation, and the application of test dosages to animals and under some circumstances to volunteer human subjects. No quarrel is found with the rationale of this program tot the extent that it fits the original MKULTRA charter. However, for inspection purposes, there were lacking records, year by year, of the progress of each project and the recorded judgments of the project monitors on operational benefits vis-à-vis costs.

7. The funding of sensitive MKULTRA projects by sterile grants in aid as noted in the preceding paragraph disclosed one of the principal controversial aspects of the program. The original charter of MKULTRA assumed that the sensitivity of activities would be sufficient to justify both a) special protection for the researcher; and b) compartmentation of MKULTRA knowledge within the Agency. On this basis the inherent safeguards of DD/S procedures were waived, the DD/S was not consulted in the design of the MKULTRA management system, and established Agency audit procedures were waived. In the subsequent administration of the program, however, TSD has found it feasible to contract with some of the research on MKULTRA objectives in accordance with prescribed DD/S procedures. The DD/S, in turn, has evolved various secure systems for the funding of sensitive activities. It appears feasible and appropriate, therefore, to propose that the DD/S be consulted during the re-chartering of MKULTRA in the design of an administrative system that does justice to his responsibilities as well as to the management and security requirements of TSD. The Inspector General accordingly has recommended at the end of this report that the DD/S be consulted in the re-design of the system; that the Chief, Support, TSD, be assigned responsibility for the day-to-day support of MKULTRA; and that the latter constitute a bridge to the DD/S for monitoring the future evolution of the system.

8. The next phase of the MKULTRA program involves physicians, toxicologists, and other specialists in mental, narcotics, and general hospitals and in prisons, who are provided the products and findings of the basic research projects and proceed with intensive testing on human subjects. These specialists are also recipients for testing purposes of the flow of new products from pharmaceutical laboratories. Materials and procedures with intelligence potential may be identified through this relationship. The testing programs are conducted under accepted scientific procedures including the use of control populations, the employment of placebos, and the detailed observation, measurement, recording, analysis, and publication of findings. Where health permits, test subjects are voluntary participants in the program.

9. A current development in the testing of new products is the tightening of controls over dosages and procedures by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. Since MKULTRA files contained no documentation on this subject, it was not possible to appraise the significance of this development for MKULTRA objectives. However, interviews with the TSD officers concerned indicated that that the new rules are affecting procedures and causing controversy in research hospitals and pharmaceutical houses. The TSD officers have close relationships with key individuals in many of the leading U.S. pharmaceutical houses and count on their continued close cooperation in obtaining materials and services deemed vital to U.S. intelligence.

10. The final phase of testing of MKULTRA materials involves their application to unwitting subjects in normal life settings. It was noted earlier that the capabilities of MKULTRA substances to produce disabling or discrediting effects or to increase the effectiveness of interrogation of hostile subjects cannot be established solely through testing of volunteer populations. Reaction and attribution patterns are clearly affected when the testing is conducted in an atmosphere of confidence under skilled medical supervision.

11. TSD, therefore, entered into a formal arrangement with certain cleared and witting individuals in the Bureau of Narcotics in 1955 which provided for the released of MKULTRA materials for such testing as those individuals deemed desirable and feasible. The initial arrangement obtained the services of a senior representative of the Bureau and one of his assistants on the West Coast. A parallel arrangement was established on the East Coast in 1961. The Director of the Bureau has been briefed on the activity, but the Deputy Chief, TSD, who has guided MKULTRA from its inception, is of the opinion that the former would disclaim all knowledge and responsibility in the event of a compromise. The MKULTRA program director has, in fact, provided close supervision of the testing program from the beginning and makes periodic visits to the sites. A sum of $10,000 has been provided annually to each of the two projects to cover cost of cultivation of targets and maintenance of a safe house in each area for the observation of effects of substances on selected test individuals.

12. The particular advantage of these arrangements with the Bureau of Narcotics officials has been that test subjects could be sought and cultivated within the setting of narcotics control. Some subjects have been informers or members of suspect criminal elements from whom the Bureau has obtained results of operational value through the tests. On the other hand, the effectiveness of the substances on individuals at all social levels, high and low, native American and foreign, is of great significance and testing has been performed on a variety of individuals within these categories.

13. A significant limitation on the effectiveness of such testing is the infeasibility of performing scientific observation of results. The Bureau agents are not qualified scientific observers. Their subjects are seldom accessible beyond the first hours of the test. The testing may be useful in perfecting delivery techniques, and in identifying surface characteristics of onset, reaction, attribution, and side-effect. In a number of instances, however, the test subject has become ill for hours or days, including hospitalization in at least on case, and the agent could only follow-up by guarded inquiry after the test subject's return to normal life. Possible sickness and attendant economic loss are inherent contingent effects of the testing.

14. The MKULTRA program officer stated that the objectives of covert testing concern the field of toxicology rather than medicine; further, that the program is not intended to harm test individuals, and that the medical consultation and assistance is obtained when appropriate through separate MKULTRA arrangements. The risk of compromise of the program through correct diagnosis of an illness by an unwitting medical specialist is regularly considered and is stated to be a governing factor in the decision to conduct a given test. The Bureau officials also maintain close working relations with local police authorities which could be utilized to protect the activity in critical situations.

15. There have been several discussions in the public press in recent months on the use of certain MKULTRA-type drugs to influence human behavior. Broadly speaking, these have argued that research knowledge of possible adverse effects of such substances on human beings is inadequate, that some applications have done serious harm, and that professional researchers in medicine and psychiatry are split on the ethics of performing such research. Increasing public attention to this subject must be expected.

16. The final step in the research and development sequence is the delivery of MKULTRA materials into the MKDELTA control system governing their employment in clandestine operations. The subject is discussed further in the next section; however, it is appropriate here to note that the employment of MKDELTA materials remains an art rather than a scientific procedure. A significant number of variable in the target individual, including age, sex, weight, general health, social status, and personality structure, may account for widely varying and unpredictable reactions to a given drug in a given dosage.

17. The final stage of covert testing of materials on unwitting subjects is clearly the most sensitive aspect of MKULTRA. No effective cover story appears to be available. TSD officials state that responsibility for covert testing is transferred to the Bureau of Narcotics. Yet they also predict that the Chief of the Bureau would disclaim any knowledge of the activity. Present practice is to maintain no records of the planning and approval of test programs. The principal responsibility for the propriety of such testing rests with the MKULTRA program director and the Deputy Chief of TSD. The handling of test subjects in the last analysis rests with the Narcotics agent working alone. Suppression of knowledge of critical results from the top TSD and CIA management is an inherent risk in these operations.

18. Final phase testing of MKULTRA substances or devices on unwitting subjects is recognized to be an activity of genuine importance in the development of some but not all MKULTRA products. Termination of such testing would have some, but an essentially indeterminate, effect on the development of operational capability in this field. Of more critical significance, however, is the risk of serious damage to the Agency in the event of compromise of the true nature of this activity. As now performed under Bureau of Narcotics auspices, non-Agency personnel are necessarily fully witting of the true nature and significance of their assignments, and of the sponsorship of CIA. Compromise of this information intentionally or unwittingly by these individuals at some time in the future is a hazard that cannot be ruled out. A test subject may on some occasions in the future correctly attribute the cause of his reaction and secure independent professional medical assistance in identifying the exact nature of the substance employed, and by whom. An extreme reaction to a test substance could lead to a Bureau request for cooperation from local authorities in suppressing information of the situation. This would in turn broaden the circle of individuals who possessed at least circumstantial evidence of the nature of the activity. Weighing possible benefits of such testing against the risk of compromise and of resulting damage to CIA has led the Inspector General to recommend termination of this phase of the MKULTRA program. Existing checks and balances on the working level management of such testing do not afford the senior command of CIA adequate protection against the high risks involved.

19. It does not follow that termination of cover testing of MKULTRA materials on unwitting U.S. citizens will bring the program to a halt. Some testing on foreign nationals has been occurring under the present arrangements. Various U.S. deep cover agents overseas would appear to be more favorably situated than the U.S. narcotic agents to perform realistic testing. Finally, the operational use of the substances clearly serves the testing function in view of the lack of predictability of human reactions.

Current estimate of the MKULTRA/MKDELTA capability

20. The present Deputy Chief of TSD, Dr. Sidney Gottlieb, in his then capacity of scientific advisor to the Deputy Director/Plans (DD/P), released a study (hereafter referred to as the Gottlieb report) on 21 April 1960, covering his six-month investigation of “Scientific and Technical Problems in Covert Action Operations”. Appendix B of the report was entitled, “The Applicability of Special Chemicals and biologicals to Clandestine Operations.” The inspectors found this Appendix to be a carefully prepared and very useful treatment of the subject. The remaining paragraphs draw on the Gottlieb report, take account of developments since that date, and discuss management and funding aspects of MKULTRA.

21. The author opened his discussion with the question of what the operational returns had been from an eight-year program involving an investment of approximately xxxxxxxxxx. He observed that the Clandestine Services had encouraged TSD on various occasions to develop and maintain the operational capability in special drugs and chemicals but that TSD had received little or no guidance in directing the work and that the Clandestine Services had up to that time shown little inclination to use the end products operationally. He indicated that there had been approximately 100 operations over the eight years employing harassment materials (not controlled under the MKDELTA regulation) and only nine operations employing disabling drugs, (NB: two-thirds of these involved the use of drugs in interrogations). No use of lethal substances was reported.

22. The factors accounting for the low rate of use of this capability were considered to be the following:

a. the technical shortcomings of the drugs
b. the problem of testing in realistic pilot operations
c. limitations on the dissemination of pertinent information to operations officers
d. organizational and administrative restrictions on operations
e. negative attitudes toward the use of MKDELTA materials
f. problems in the training of case officers in this field
g. the risk of stimulating increased use of MKDELTA materials by opposition intelligence services

23. Technical shortcomings of the drugs:

As of 1960 no effective knockout pill, truth serum, aphrodisiac, or recruitment pill was known to exist. MKDELTA was described as inherently a high-risk, low-yield field of operations. Three years later the situation remains substantially unchanged with the exception that real progress has been made in the use of drugs in support of interrogation. Ironically, however, the progress here has occurred in the development of a total psychological theory of interrogation, in which the use of drugs has been relegated to a support role. [Nine and one-half lines redacted]

24. The problem of testing in realistic pilot operations:

The subject has been discussed above, beginning with paragraph 10. It should also be noted that testing on operational targets overseas is considered by some operations officers to be quite impracticable. Unilateral operations are imperative which substantially complicates the delivery problem. The possibilities of unexpected or critical reactions in test subjects and of ensuring compromise of the activity make most senior command personnel unwilling to take the risks involved.

25. Limitations on the dissemination of pertinent information to case officers; organizational and administrative restrictions on operations:

The present-day situation concerning both these problem areas is improved over 1960. TSD now regularly briefs a variety of senior officers on its MKDELTA capability. Approval of the use of MKDELTA materials is now accomplished within the chain of command of the DD/P. The DD/P may consult, for example, with the Chief, Medical Staff, concerning medical risks involved in MKDELTA operations, but the latter surely would not expect to exercise final authority for the disapproval of operations.

26. TSD has found that TDY visits of MKULTRA officers to the field in support of specific operations increases the awareness of the MKDELTA capability and stimulates proposals for additional projects. Of equal significance, however, has been the TSD decision in 1961 to station in the xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx officer who is informed on MKDELTA matters. A second officer is scheduled to move PCS to xxxxxxx during the summer of 1963 to support xx and adjacent stations. While the principal responsibility of these officers lies in the field xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx the arrangement in the xxxxxxxxx has proved useful in the MKDELTA field -- notably in interrogation -- as well. It now appears that increased reliance can be placed on this approach to promoting responsible use of the MKDELTA capabilities.

27. Negative attitudes toward the use of MKDELTA materials; problems in the training of case officers in this field:

The Gottlieb report observed that some case officers have basic moral objections to the concept of MKDELTA and therefore refuse to use the materials. Some senior officers were reported to believe that the proper employment of the capability required more sophistication than most case officers possessed and that there would be a tendency toward over-reliance on and misuse of drugs in lieu of perfecting classic espionage techniques. Finally, it was suggested that MKDELTA controls were so restrictive as to have generated a general defeatism among case officers concerning the chances of getting approval for the use of materials in routine rather than extreme situations. These matters will be reviewed in future field inspections of DD/P area divisions. In the meanwhile, the stationing of qualified TSD consultants in the field and increasing operational experience will tend to develop over time a category of case officers who have acquired direct appreciation of the potential and limitations of MKDELTA capability.

28. The risk of stimulating increase use of MKDELTA materials by opposition intelligence services:

The Gottlieb report stated that opposition intelligence services are active in the MKDELTA field and recommended that the CI Staff of the DD/P conduct a systematic study of the evidence. This recommendation has not been implemented. It is a subject of increasing significance as new materials and techniques become available.

It is recommended that:

Deputy Director/Plans instruct Chief, CI Staff, to perform a study of the evidence of the use of MKDELTA materials by opposition intelligence services and recommend appropriate measures for training DD/P case officers to recognize and counter hostile activity in this area.

29. In summary, present evidence concerning the operational value of MKDELTA capability would appear to confirm the principal judgments of the 1960 Gottlieb report. There is an extremely low rate of operational use of the controlled materials. On the other hand, significant progress has been achieved in the development of an interrogation theory employing chemical substances, and in providing competent guidance to the field in MKDELTA matters through TSD officers working overseas.

Management of MKULTRA

30. TSD has initiated 144 projects relating to the control of human behavior; i.e., xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx during the ten years of operation of the MKULTRA program. Twenty-five (25) of these projects remain in existence at the present time, while a number of others are in various stages of termination.

31. Active projects may be groups under the following arbitrary headings. Many projects involve activity in two or more of the areas listed.

a. basic research in materials and processes
b. procurement of research materials
c. testing of substances on animals and human beings
d. development of delivery techniques
e. projects in offensive/defensive BW, CW, and radiation
f. miscellaneous projects; e.g., (1) petroleum sabotage, (2) defoliants, (3) devices for remote measurement of physiological processes

32. The current management of TSD has initiated a policy of directing the activities of MKULTRA and of the Behavioral Activities Branch towards operations and away from long-range research. Prior to this change in policy which occurred in 1962, MKULTRA sponsored a large number of projects in the fields of applied psychology, sociology, anthropology, and graphology. The present management is unlikely to return to these fields of research under the MKULTRA charter. The inspectors concluded that many of these projects were of insufficient sensitivity to justify waiver of normal Agency control procedures. It is recommended at the end of this report that projects falling outside the authorized scope of MKULTRA henceforth require the prior written approval of the DD/P to qualify for MKULTRA processing.

33. The TSD chain of command for administration of the MKULTRA program comprises the following:

a. Chief, TSD providing overall management
b. Deputy Chief, TSD, (a trained scientist) providing top substantive guidance for the MKULTRA program
c. Assistant Chief, TSD, for Research and Development, contributing management but not substantive guidance
d. Chief Scientist (reporting to c., above), (a trained scientist), contributing substantive guidance in some areas and responsible for the technical administrative processes of MKULTRA. He is supported by a GS-12 budget officer.

e. program manager for MKULTRA, also serves as Chief of Biology Branch, (a trained scientist)
f. project monitors located in various branches of TSD and specialized in the subject fields of the specific projects for which they are assigned responsibility

To date this chain of command has relied primarily on oral communications in the management of MKULTRA. Files are notably incomplete, poorly organized, and lacking in evaluative statements that might give perspective to management policies over time. A substantial portion of the MKULTRA record appears to rest in the memories of the principal officers and is therefore almost certain to be lost with their departures. The senior officers in the MKULTRA chain of command who are not substantively qualified need better records to measure the validity of projects through time and to identify key area in which to require detailed periodic briefings from working specialists.

34. It will be noted that the Chief of Support, TSD, does not participate in the MKULTRA administration. The predecessor of the present Chief of Support served in TSD throughout the life of the program until 1962 without ever being associated with the management. In his stead, the Chief Scientist and a GS-12 budget officer have provided administrative support. The Chief Scientist has set policy on the funding of MKULTRA projects in all respects including salaries, overhead rates, fees, material, equipment, facilities, travel and the like. The support officer was only added in 1962 under pressure of critical audit findings. This use of the Chief Scientist in a field where Chief of Support possesses superior qualifications and facilities constitutes a misuse of talent. The proposed new charter for MKULTRA should take account of this anomaly and also provide that Chief of Support advise in the future on decisions to fund projects under the MKULTRA authority and thereby to waive the application of DD/S procedures.

It is recommended that:

Deputy Director/Plans draft and submit for the approval of the Director of Central Intelligence a revision and re-confirmation of the authority granted him in 1953 (Tab A) to operate the MKULTRA program, incorporating the following provisions:

a. Deputy Director/Plans assign Chief, Technical Services Division, to operate MKULTRA as a program for research and development of chemical, biological, and radioactive materials, and of techniques for the employment of electro-shock, capable of producing human behavioral or physiological change. Subsequent changes in scope of MKULTRA shall require the written approval of the Deputy Director/Plans.

b. Deputy Director/Plans arrange with Deputy Director/Research for the coordination of research relating to MKULTRA objectives to control duplication of effort and to provide for exchange of information of new capabilities.

c. Chief, Technical Services Division, consistent with established policy, may negotiate for research in MKULTRA materials and techniques to be conducted by Deputy Director/Research and by other component offices of CIA. He shall consult regularly with the appropriate officers of such components to control duplication of effort.

d. Chief, Technical Services Division shall approve the addition of MKULTRA developed materials to the list of operationally available MKDELTA substances and keep the Deputy Director/Plans advised of such additions. (cf. Clandestine Services Instruction No. 220-10, MKDELTA MATERIALS, dated 22 July 1960 -- Tab B -- which governs the employment of behavioral control materials in clandestine operations.)

e. Deputy Director/Plans, jointly with Deputy Director/Support, establish policy for the administration of support functions under MKULTRA. Such policy shall seek to limit the maximum waiver of established Agency support procedures for activities of unusual sensitivity.

f. Chief, Technical Services Division shall maintain exacting internal controls and records of all substantive and support matters within each MKULTRA project. Records shall include:

(1) A plan of the research and development to be performed.

(2) An administrative annex setting forth security, budget and accounting arrangements agreed to by the parties of the project. Chief of Support, TSD, shall then certify to the DD/S for each such project that this annex is in accord with the agreed DDS/DDP policy. Pursuant to this responsibility, Chief of Support, TSD, shall have right of unlimited access to the substantive and administrative records of MKULTRA.

(3) An annual written review by the project monitor setting forth in reasonable detail the nature of the work performed, the prospects for results of eventual operational significance, and a recommendation for continuance or termination of the project.

g. Testing of MKULTRA materials and devices shall only be performed in accredited research institutions under accepted scientific procedures.

h. Chief, Technical Services Division, shall brief the Deputy Director/Plans at least semi-annually on MKULTRA activities. The Deputy Director/Plans after each briefing shall promptly notify the Deputy Director of Central Intelligence that he has personally conducted a semi-annual review of the program.

i. The MKULTRA program be audited in accordance with the provisions of HR 31-1, including auditor access to substantive as well as administrative records.

Mori ID 17749

29 November 1963

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

SUBJECT: MKULTRA PROGRAM

1. A meeting was held in General Carter’s office on 29 November 1963 to discuss the subject program. Those present, in addition to General Carter, were Messrs. Helms, Kirkpatrick, xxxxxxxx, Gottlieb and Earman. The main thrust of the discussion was the testing of certain drugs on unwitting U.S. citizens. Dr. Gottlieb gave a brief history of the MKULTRA program which was not in any way at variance with the IG report of August 1963 on this subject.

2. Messrs. Gottlieb and xxxxxxxx argued for the continuation of unwitting testing, using as the principal point that controlled testing cannot be depended upon for accurate results. General Carter, Mr. Kirkpatrick, and I do not disagree with this point. We also accept the necessity for having a “stable of drugs” on the shelf and the requirement for continued research and development of drugs -- not only for possible operational use but also to give CIA insight on the state of the art in this field and in particular to alert us to what the opposition is or might be expected to do in the R&D and employment of drugs.

3. xxxxxxxxxx noted that there was no disagreement with the recommendations of the IG survey on MKULTRA with the exception of the unwitting testing problem. In response to a query from General Carter, he stated that since the IG report such testing has been held in abeyance.

4. General Carter made it clear that he understood the necessity for research and development of all types of drugs, to include their testing. However, he was troubled by the “unwitting aspect” This led to a brief discussion on the possibility of unwitting tests on foreign nationals, but according to xxxxxxxx this had been ruled out as a result of several conversations he recently had with senior chiefs of stations -- too dangerous and the lack of controlled facilities. (This seemed an odd conclusion to me since the same dangers exist in the U.S. and from what we were able to find out during our survey, the facilities we have for uncontrolled testing leave much to be desired -- I made a point of this.)

5. After further discussion, it was agreed:

That the charter of MKULTRA would be revised along the lines recommended in the IG Survey.

The procedures for testing drugs are to be reviewed and new alternative proposals submitted.

c. If it is concluded by the DD/P that unwitting testing on American citizens must be continued to operationally prove out these drugs, it may become necessary to place this problem before the Director for a decision.

6. I made the point that the IG survey had found other problems with the MKULTRA program in addition to the unwitting testing, but stated if the charter is rewritten along the lines recommended, I believe these problems would be corrected.

7. NOTE: the IG Survey of MKULTRA was handed to xxxxxxxx after the meeting for his use in redrafting the charter.

[Initials]
J. S. Earman
Inspector General
JSE:cm

Part II

Part II contains research and documentation of additional experiments that may have already touched your lives. I felt it imperative that I include a narrative of the experiments performed on our Servicemen and women, prisoners, and patients in our hospitals. Many of these people will never know why they suffer a variety of debilitating diseases without this knowledge. In some cases surviving relatives of those who died as a result of these experiments may at last be able to understand what happened to their loved ones. In still other cases, offspring who have been born with birth defects, may find some answers.

Members of the Advisory Committee on Human Radiation Experiments said:

“That based on interviews, some tentative conclusions may be drawn regarding the ethical milieu of medical research in the 1940’s and ‘50’s. In the absence of an established code of conduct, other influences guided investigator behavior. Some perhaps caught up in the excitement of research or the desire to advance their career, used patients as subjects of investigation without their knowledge or consent. Others relied on the power and prestige of their position to convince subjects to participate even when benefit was questionable or nonexistent, and even in the absence of complete information.”[222]

How many of you had to pay the price for this type of thinking?

Radiation Experiments:

Most people occasionally stumble over the truth, but pick themselves up and continue on as if nothing had ever happened.

Winston Churchill

On February 10, 1995,the New York Times reported that “about 9,000 Americans including children and newborns were used in 154 human radiation tests” sponsored by the Atomic Energy Commission, with additional tests being conducted by other governmental agencies. Subsequent reports released since that time suggest that the experiments and their impacts on humans was far greater than originally indicated.

In military studies of total body irradiation from 1951 to 1972, approximately 500 people with cancer were exposed to radiation over their entire bodies. According to Eileen Welsome in The Plutonium Files, some patients received large single blasts of radiation, while others were exposed to repeated, low dosages. Records indicate that the radiation caused excruciating pain and led to the premature deaths of a number of patients.[223] Welsome worked tirelessly for five years to obtain information on these experiments through Freedom of Information files.

Internal Manhattan Project memoranda indicate that high-level policy makers knew of the potential danger to human subjects in radiation experiments as early as 1944. A number of what were considered to be overriding concerns, including a fear that scientists in the former Soviet Union were conducting similar experiments, resulted in a decision to proceed on a secret basis despite the dangers to the human subjects.[224]

In response to the 1995 report by the Advisory Committee on Human Radiation Experiments (ACHRE), the White House released a report detailing the Clinton Administration’s planned actions with recommendations and their implementation by the Human Radiation Interagency Working Group (IWG).[225] This report detailed the steps the US Government would take to finally “right the wrongs of the past inflicted on unknowing citizens." The Advisory Committee on Human Radiation Experiments was charged with investigating these experiments and determining how scientific and ethical standards were observed in these activities, and was given access to the records of all relevant federal agencies. Unfortunately, in many cases they did not "Right the Wrongs of the Past."

Deliberate Releases of Radiated Materials

The Advisory Committee's research acknowledges that government-sponsored experiments involving the exposure of human subjects to potentially dangerous levels of radiation were far more common than had been believed. Between 1948 and 1952, they included at least 13 deliberate releases of radiated materials into the atmosphere near populated areas to study fallout patterns and the rate of radioactive decay of atmospherically released particles. Initial reports also indicate that, while high-level officials were aware of the dangers and the ethical considerations involved, there was a consistent lack of effective regulation governing administration of the tests.

What the Advisory Committee does not mention is that there was global fallout from over 500 tests in the atmosphere in the Northern Hemisphere between 1952-63. 150MT of fission yield. Most of these tests were carried out at sites far from the U.S., primarily in the south Pacific at Bikini and Enewetok or in the Soviet Union. Most of the yield was from multi-megaton thermonuclear tests where 80% of the debris was injected into the stratosphere and 20% injected into the troposphere.[226]

Between 1952 and 1962 atmospheric tests were conducted in Nevada and the Pacific. Los Alamos scientists fired Bravo during March 1954. The blast size and amount of radioactive fallout were far greater than planned. Bravo fallout contaminated 7,000 square miles, some of it with very high radiation. Fallout descended upon the military and scientific taskforce conducting the test series, Marshallese islanders, and the crew of a Japanese fishing vessel, the Lucky Dragon.[227]

In San Diego in 1955 during Operation Wigwam, a thirty-kiloton bomb was exploded underwater off the coast. During Operation Argus three bombs were detonated above the South Atlantic Ocean. Some 35 nuclear devices were detonated at and near the test site, as well as in Alaska, Colorado, New Mexico, and Mississippi as part of the Plowshare Program.[228]

Human Research at the Bomb Tests [229]

Radiation Tests with Live Troops

In 1946 the United States conducted Operation Crossroads, the first peacetime nuclear weapons tests before an audience of worldwide press and visiting dignitaries at the Bikini Atoll in the Pacific Marshall Islands.

Beginning with the 1946 Bikini tests, experiments with living things became a staple of bomb tests. At Operation Crossroads animals were penned on the decks of target ships to study the effects of radiation. In the 1948 Sandstone series at the Marshall Islands Eniwetok Atoll, seeds, grains, and fungi were added.

Tom Smith's testimony before the Interagency Working Group left little else to be said. "I'm an atomic veteran. I've been to 17 shots in Eniwetok and I would like to be a little bit self-serving. I have suffered from so many maladies that you could not write them all down. I have to go to the computer to figure them out. I've had 25 major operations and I mean major. The Veterans Department or the VA says that I did not get enough radiation to cause any of this. There is no history in my family of diabetes. There is no history in my family of degenerative disk disease. There's no history in my family of liver disease. There is no history in my family for anything that I have. I have a picture here I showed the Colonel earlier. This is one of three underwater shots. We were so close we received damage to our ship. However, we were not close enough to be radiated? And I would like the panel to see it and anyone else who would be interested in taking a look at it. It's an official copy of an Air Force photograph. This ship in the foreground is a liberty ship and was used as a target ship. It had been used at numerous tests. It was alongside my ship for repairs and for equipment to be put on. After this particular shot it was too hot to use as a test ship any longer; so what we had to do is go down into the ship and cut holes in the bulkheads between the sections, so the water would equalize when we sank it. And then they talk about dose reconstruction. How can you do dose reconstruction when people were everywhere? When Orville Kelly died he was stationed on Jap 10 Island.[lx] Jap 10 Island was right next to Eniwetok Island and after Orville was stationed there, they made it an R&R station. That's where we went to go swimming, drink beer, and play around; and that was the station that Orville Kelly received his total dose and he died of multiple myeloma."

Included in a 1994 report[230] is a study on the "Attenuation of 1.2 Mev gamma radiation by Soviet and U.S. Army Chemical and Biological Defense Command." The report states, "From a presently undetermined date until 1953, researchers in the Ordnance Corps at Aberdeen Proving Ground, MD and the Army Chemical & Biological Defense Command, MD, studied the shielding capability of certain Soviet and U.S. military vehicles and U.S. rail equipment against gamma radiation, as well as decontamination procedures. Active duty military personnel participated in the study. The contamination was produced by placing 800 cobalt-60 pellets, 1/8 of an inch in diameter and 1/8th of an inch long contained in steel capsules two feet apart, over an area 160 feet in length and twenty feet wide. Dosage rates at selected sitting positions were measured with live troops riding over contamination in certain vehicles. Results of the research are undetermined to date.

Military personnel exposed to radiation in a 1957 detonation of the atomic bomb in Nevada were pilots and soldiers in front row trenches. This experiment was code-named "Hood," and those involved were told they would be guilty of treason if they talked about this project. After the test some men in the platoon found cages and fenced enclosures, which contained animals burned almost beyond recognition. Robert Carter and Israel Torres were just two of several men present during the tests who saw humans in handcuffs chained to fences. The soldiers who spoke of seeing the burned and shackled remains of humans in a stockade with barbed wire on top of it after the nuclear explosion were submitted to psychiatric "deprogramming." Afterwards they were told if they repeated the story they would be thrown out of the Corps.

One soldier, Robert Carter, who continued to speak about this was locked up and told the only way he could leave was to go through a reverse brainwashing type procedure. He recalls them using what he thought was needles in the top of his head trying to break him down so he would not reveal what he had seen.[231] This sounds quite similar to the stereotaxic procedures used on me.

Years later many of these men developed cancer and died from the deadly radiation. Imagine the emotional impact on these soldiers from not only being a part of this horrendous explosion and then suffering physical ailments from their proximity to the test, but being forced to keep silent about the human guinea pigs who died while being held captive. What crime could these people possibly have committed to be murdered in this way? Who could have been that expendable?

Nuclear fallout from these tests conducted in our atmosphere in the Fifties covered all 50 states due to wind dust and rain clouds.[232] Eileen Welsome reported that no comprehensive epidemiological study had ever been done of the atomic veterans.[233]

In 1997 scientists at the National Cancer Institute estimated that bomb tests conducted in Nevada during the fifties might cause 10,000 to 75,000 extra thyroid cancers. Seventy percent of the cancers have yet to be diagnosed, as three-fourths are expected to develop in people who were younger than five at the time of their exposure.[234]

The Flashblindness Experiments

In 1949, the Atomic Energy Committee and the Department of Defense began to coordinate the planning of the biomedical experiments and tests and set up a Biomedical Test Planning and Screening Committee to review proposals. Presumably, the human experiments at bomb tests should have been filtered through this or some other review process designated to consider experiments. Yet, in only one case, the flashblindness experiments did this happen.

In a January 1952 letter to Shields Warren, Los Alamos's Thomas Shipman complained that the committee was limited to reviewing proposals from civilian groups and not the military: "[I]f, "he wrote, the "AEC can not exercise a measure of control in this matter, they might better withdraw from the picture completely and permit the military to continue on its own sweet way without the somewhat ludicrous spectacle of an impotent committee's snapping its heels like a puppy dog." In retrospect, Shipman wrote to Warren's successor in June 1956, the military's refusal to participate "reduced that committee to impotence."

Whatever its effectiveness, in 1952 the biomedical research screening group did consider at least one of the military's flashblindness experiments. Flashblindness the temporary loss of vision from exposure to the flash was a serious problem for all the armed services, but particularly for the Air Force. Pilots flying hundreds of miles an hour in combat could not afford to lose concentration and vision even temporarily.

The flashblindness experiments began at the 1951 Operation Buster-Jangle, the series that included Desert Rock I, with the testing of subjects who "orbited at an altitude of 15,000 feet in an Air Force C-54 approximately 9 miles from the atomic detonation." The test subjects were exposed to three detonations during the operation, after which changes in their visual acuity were measured. Although these experiments were conducted at bomb tests that potentially exposed the subjects to ionizing radiation, the purpose of the experiment was to measure the thermal effects of the visible light flash, not the effects of ionizing radiation.

When another experiment was proposed for Operation Tumbler-Snapper, the 1952 Nevada tests, the AEC sought a "release of AEC responsibility "on grounds that "there is a possibility that permanent eye damage may result." It is not clear how the military responded, but the experiment proceeded. Twelve subjects witnessed the detonation from a darkened trailer about sixteen kilometers from the point of detonation. Each of the human "observers" placed his face in a hood; half wore protective goggles, while the other half had both eyes exposed. A fraction of a second before the explosion, a shutter opened exposed the left eye to the flash. Two subjects incurred retinal burns; at which point the project for that test series was terminated. The final report recorded that both subjects had "completely recovered.'

At the 1953 tests, the Department of Defense engaged in further flashblindness study. During this experiment "twelve subjects in a light-tight trailer were exposed to five nuclear detonation flashes at distances of from 7 to 14 miles." There is no documentation showing whether subsequent flash blindness experiments, which followed upon the issuance of the secretary of defense's 1953 memorandum, required informed and written consent.[lxi].

Recently recovered documents show that upon a 1954 review of a report showing the injuries at the 1952 experiment, AFSWP medical staff immediately declared, “A definite need exists for guidance in the use of human volunteers as experimental subjects.” Further inquiry revealed that a Top Secret policy on the subject existed. That policy detailed “very definite and specific step “that had to be taken before volunteers could be used in human experimentation. But the AFSWP wrote, “No serious attempt has been made to disseminate the information to those experimenters who had a definite need-to-know.”

In early 1954, the Air Force’s School of Aviation Medicine reported that animal studies and injuries at bomb tests (to non-experimental participants) had shown that potential for eye damage was substantially worse than had been understood. Studies of flashblindness with humans continued in both field and laboratory tests through the 1960s and into the 1970s. These experiments tested prototype versions of eye protection equipment and the results were used to recommend requirements for eye protection for those exposed to atomic explosions.

Following the first Desert Rock exercise with flashblindness subjects, the government conducted the first in a series of "atomic exercises."[lxii] This exercise was designed primarily to train and indoctrinate troops in the fighting of atomic wars. The exercise also provided an opportunity for psychological and physiological testing of the effects of the experience on the troops.

Operation Jangle detonated two nuclear weapons, one on the surface and one buried seventeen feet underground. The two Jangle shots were tests where the weapon's fireball touched the ground. When a nuclear weapon's fireball touches the ground, it creates much more local fallout than an explosion that bursts in the air. Consequently, these tests posed potential hazard to civilians who lived near the test site and to test observers and participants.

Two weeks before Jangle, the DOD requested an additional 500 observers at each of the Jangle shots to acclimate the troops to nuclear weapons. The AEC advised against the additional participants declaring that, "[t]his [the first detonation] was an experiment which had never been performed before and the radiological hazards were unpredictable." In the AEC's view no one should approach ground zero for three or four days after the surface shot.

The AEC seems to have been successful in persuading the Department of Defense not to include the extra observers, but the DOD did not agree to the AEC's suggestion on approaching ground zero. Four hours after the first shot, the DOD conducted research involving troops who were accompanied by radiation safety monitors. Eight teams of men walked over contaminated ground for one hour to determine the effectiveness of protective clothing against nuclear contamination. Similar tests were conducted after the second shot at Jangle, but this time after a longer period. Five days after the shallow underground shot, men crawled over contaminated ground again to determine the effectiveness of protective clothing. Other men rode armored vehicles through contaminated areas to check the shielding effects of tanks and to check the effectiveness of air-filtering devices.

According to the final report, the protective clothing was "adequate to prevent contact between radioactive dust and the skin of the wearer." The information on this research is limited. The only mention of the subjects in the report reads, "The volunteer enlisted men, too numerous to mention by name, who participated in the evaluation of protective clothing were of great assistance which is gratefully acknowledged." It is likely that at the time these men were not viewed as subjects of scientific research but rather as men who had volunteered for a hazardous or risky assignment. We know nothing about what these men were told about the risks or whether they felt they could have refused the assignment if they had an interest in doing so.

The Jangle activities are a good illustration of difficulties in drawing boundaries in the military between activities that are research involving human subjects and activities that are not. Although the Jangle evaluation was likely not considered an instance of human research at the time, it has many similarities to ground-crawling activity conducted several years later, not in conjunction with a nuclear test that was treated as research involving human subjects. In 1958, 90 soldiers at Camp Stoneman in Pittsburg, California were asked to perform "typical army tactical maneuvers" on soil that had been contaminated with radioactive lanthanum.[lxiii] The soldiers were then monitored for their exposure to study beta contamination from this non-penetrating form of radiation. In 1963, soldiers were again asked to maneuver on ground contaminated with artificial fallout, this time at Camp McCoy in Wisconsin.

Perhaps by listening to what Joan McCarthy a member of NAAV, the New Jersey Association of Atomic Veterans had to say before the Interagency Working Group, we can get a look at the real impact these tests had. Unlike the final reports' findings, this is what Joan had to say,

"Fifteen years ago on his deathbed, my husband told me about his participation in a nuclear test. He also asked me to find out what happened to the other men. This led to founding, with the help of the media and many good people, the New Jersey Association of Atomic Veterans. In the 15 years I've been at the deathbeds of many atomic veterans who died, thinking that their government wants them dead so the truth will be buried with them; and I do believe that truth eventually surfaces and I hope that we're doing something about it now and it doesn't just get buried again."

Human Radiation Experiments

The 4,000 human radiation experiments reviewed by ACHRE were carried out or funded by the U.S. Government primarily through the Department of Defense (DOD) and Department of Energy (DOE) or its predecessor agencies, and were conducted at numerous major medical institutions including Johns Hopkins Hospital.

The Administration did propose that 7,600 veterans treated in NRI experiments reviewed by ACHRE be declared eligible for health screening under the Department of Veterans Affairs' Ionizing Radiation Program, but children at higher risk treated in Baltimore were not even mentioned in the Action Report. The Center for Disease Control estimates of nasopharyngeal irradiation were between 8,000 and 20,000 servicemen, and 500,000 to 2,000,000 Americans, who may have received this type of irradiation. Several contemporary researchers have warned that patients who received the nasopharyngeal irradiation run a greater risk of contracting head and neck cancers.[235]

The Advisory listed six categories of experiments that they identified:

- Experiments aimed at determining the danger to workers assembling nuclear weapons from ingestion, inhalation, or injection of irradiated materials. These experiments involved total body irradiation and the injection of radioactive isotopes into human subjects.
- Experiments aimed at determining the effects of exposure to radiation on soldiers serving either as part of the crew of a proposed nuclear powered aircraft or on a nuclear battlefield. These experiments involved total body irradiation, injection of radioactive isotopes, ingestion of irradiated materials by human subjects, and exposure of subjects to atomic clouds during and after bomb detonations.
- Development of nuclear weapons: These experiments involved atmospheric releases of radiation without the knowledge of exposed civilian population.
- Studies on the dispersal, fallout, biological intake, and decay of radioactive materials following a nuclear explosion. These experiments involved atmospheric releases of radiation, ingestion of radioactive, and exposure to atomic clouds.

- Experiments regarding the potential effects of radiation on astronauts. These experiments involved partial body irradiation. Among the tests were the 1963 exposure of 131 prison inmates in Oregon to massive doses of radiation to their sexual organs, and subsequent vasectomies that were performed to prevent the subsequent birth of malformed children from contaminated sperm.

- Studies of the effects of radiation on "radiosensitive" malignancies such as leukemia and lymphoma, and in the performance of bone marrow transplantations. These experiments involved total body irradiation. The five studies were as follows:[236]

1. The M.D. Anderson Cancer Center in Houston, Texas from 1951 until 1956, involving 236 patients and sponsored by the Air Force School of Aviation Medicine.

2. Baylor University College of Medicine in Houston, Texas from 1952 until 1964, involving 112 patients. The Armed Forces Special Weapons Project or its successor, the Defense Atomic Support Agency, sponsored it.

3. Sloan-Kettering Institute for Cancer Research in New York City from 1954 to 1964. It was sponsored by the Armed Forces Special Weapons Project and later the Defense Atomic Support Agency and involved 34 patients.

4. U.S. Naval Hospital, Bethesda, Maryland from 1960 to 1961 involving 17 people and funded by the Navy.

5. University of Cincinnati College of Medicine in Cincinnati, Ohio from 1960 to 1972 involving 90 patients, and sponsored by Defense Atomic Support Agency.

Eileen Welsome also details one other large study done in Oak Ridge Tennessee from 1957 to 1974 on 194 patients and funded by NASA at the Medical Division Hospital run by the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies (ORINS). Eileen's book should be consulted for the most comprehensive account of plutonium and other radiation experiments during the Cold War that I have ever read. She won the Pulitzer Prize for her reporting.

One experiment absent from the Clinton Administration's Implementing Report involved 582 third graders in the Baltimore public schools who were part of a 1948-1954 experiment conducted by Johns Hopkins to test the effects of Nasal Radium Irradiation. Ruth Faden, who chaired the advisory committee, was employed by John Hopkins University, which seems to be a glaring conflict of interest. None of the victims or their relatives were appointed to this panel.[237]

The Johns Hopkins NRI experiment in question was completely overlooked as to any medical notice or follow-up action by the federal government. This was done despite ACHRE's earlier determination that children in this Hopkins radiation experiment had the greatest cancer mortality risk of any experiment it examined for which people were still alive and might benefit from medical notice and follow-up.[238] The National Institute for Health had recommended in 1977, that children who received the nasal radium treatments be examined every one to two years. Radiation oncologist Eli Glatstein was outvoted thirteen to one in her belief that patients given the radium nasal treatments should be medically monitored. She told Stewart Farber who first brought the experiments to the public's attention, that it was "not salable in today's political environment" to recommend screening for so many victims. The ACHRE's panel also overlooked the issue of other radiation-induced diseases and non-fatal malignancies such as thyroid tumors, which are extremely painful and dependent on early intervention and medical monitoring for cure.[239]

Another experiment that is absent from the ACHRE report was performed at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in the basement of the pathology building.[lxiv] Peter Lewis, who had biomedical experiments performed on him received proof after the death of his adoptive father who had served in Army Medical Research.

Mr. Lewis testified before the Staff Stakeholder Workshop of the Department of Energy twice. His first testimony seemed to be ignored, consequently he returned, determined to bring his plight before the public. He even offered his evidence to the National Archives so that people would believe, and he might prevent this from happening again. Peters' testimony speaks for itself.

"Here are the pictures, right here. These pictures-these photographs-were taken in the basement. Here is what we have. Oh. Boy Scouts. I am in these pictures. Here are some of them. Here is a machine; it is called a counting machine. Of course, to count the machine they have got to put something in you to count, am I right? I mean, if you have a bank, there are no pennies in it, you don't count it. You have got to put pennies in it to count it. So they had other machines there. These are radiation machines. One of them was a round cylinder. It had a radiation symbol on it. They stick you in it. Your head is sticking out of it. They shoot the radiation through you. They can stick you in a counter; see how much the body absorbs. I do believe though, that was the first experimental CAT scan. It is wrong. But kids, you don't experiment on kids. You don't even experiment with kids in an experimental machine. You don't even know if the machine is going to work right. And you definitely don't shoot radiation through a child. This government here is the counter this government bombed Hiroshima. Nagasaki. My goodness! Those are the two biggest test labs I have ever seen! Why do we need any more test labs on radiation? We know what radiation does. Can't get no records. That is a shame. Too bad, huh? Look what I got, a record. This is a record book that was kept in the bottom of the pathology record. Let me read it.

'Walter Reed Army Institute of Research, Division of Nuclear Medicine.' Now we have a start.[lxv] We have a record. I asked, "Sir, ma'am, here is a record, a picture of it. Can we dig it up?[lxvi] My name is on it. Unfortunately my name was put into a number. In other words, they changed the names and numbers and stuck that on here. Let's dig up these records, okay? I would appreciate it.

After this I went into another building about a year later. It is called the Isolation Ward. That was an experience. I had an entire ward a little bit bigger than this to myself. Well, that was fun for a kid. The first day in there, I took off. You know how kids are. I was about maybe, ten or twelve. Went next door. A bunch of soldiers over there were playing chess. Well I got in there and I played chess with a guy. He did not pay much mind to me. I beat him. So of course all the other soldiers, they start teasing him about it and it got serious. A crowd came around. I played him a second game. Well he started beating me, but I was saved by a nurse. She came. She saw me. She said, 'Hey, you ain't allowed in here!' Away I went back to the ward by myself again. This time they kept a guard, a 24-hour guard there, so I could not take off. I was not allowed to get any soda pop. I could not have any other foods. They fed me my foods. They took my stool, my urine. Boy, did they really poke holes in me both ankles, both sides, knees, all over my hips, the back of my head! I believe they are called bone biopsies. I get visions; they have got this sharp thing. You stick it in like a corkscrew and take your flesh, your skin, your bone, and ffft! Got it! I don't know how they do it but that is just the way I figure. But I have got a lot of them, all over me. I even got stuff left in my arm that they forgot to take out, whatever it is.

Now, I don't, I am not angry at today's government for what yesterday's government did. Let's get this clear right now. Today's government did not do these atrocities, not at all. That was yesterday's government. However I am frustrated because today's government will not release the records. That is bad. I mean they did not do it, what have they got to lose? Yesterday's government did it. They are the ones who should hang their head in shame. For the record, we do have some people here from the government that we hope they help. They want to help. I think they will help. So my question is, will you please get my records? The one I was in that laboratory. Oh, in the ward that I was in? They would knock me out and take me into a laboratory and I was totally out. This took place for about six days. I have no idea what they did to me in that laboratory, except when I would come out I had Band-aids all over me. I am asking. Can we get the records, please? I will give you the dates. I will make it easy for you, okay? I will make it very easy. And then I am done."

In response to Ms. Melamed from the Department of Energy, after stating the agencies support insofar as possible to find his records; Peter says,

"The radiation, whatever it was? I was perfectly healthy. There was nothing wrong with me. Maybe I looked a little crazy. Okay. That was, let's see, that would have been September 20, 1958. Is anybody going to write that down please? Okay. There should be records on that day. One week later on a Thursday, that is when me and my sister went in. That is when we went in to the machine that had the radiation symbol on it. Boy, do I wish she was here today to testify with me! She has got three feet of dirt on her now in Lebanon, Tennessee. She died about four years ago. The doctor found like a crust, I guess, over her entire brain. Cancer. And he said, 'You had that 20, 25 years.' So it is easy to figure out where it came from."

Colleen Gentilcore quotes Peter in a story she wrote in 1996.[240] "My understanding is the sole purpose of adoption of me was for experiments. We have documents and hospital papers for much of this to back this up…Since my dad died, we were able to go through all the papers and find documents, papers, and photographs. These are military photographs he was ordered to destroy, but he brought some home and didn't destroy everything."

Miss Gentilcore wrote an additional article for the Herald Standard later that month. In it she reports Peter saying that his adoptive mother told him he was bought for $1000 and that the army owned him. It is not hard to understand how devastating it would be to learn that you had been adopted for the sole purpose of being a human guinea pig.

Karen Coleman Wiltshire, another survivor helped Peter with some of his FOIA requests to the government. She attended several public forums with the Department of Defense as a representative of ACHES and was outspoken on behalf of survivors on each occasion.[lxvii] She too, was one of the very few who was able to obtain her medical files from John Hopkins proving her experimentation.

Karen's father worked for the Applied Physics Lab at Johns Hopkins. She obtained her files through sheer persistence, help from the almighty, and a mistake by a clerk who was not supposed to give the information out. Karen said they transported her to Washington, Maryland and Virginia, to military and government labs by private ambulances, military cars, and yellow school buses. She alleged her experiments took place from 1961 through 1970. Karen related to me that she was kept in the Harriet Lane Home for Invalid Children at John Hopkins where there were wards of children. Her parents had been told she was being treated for a heart defect. She said when they would come to visit, she would be put in a private room with her belongings in order for it to appear as though she had been there all along. When her parents left, they returned her to the ward where she said they did LSD, ECT, and other strange experiments. One of these she explained was to be trained to eliminate emotions and feelings by using assorted torture and other techniques. This sounds very much like the mind control technique used on me by the CIA and other branches of the government.

Karen was responsible for spurring me on to obtain information through FOIA requests that would help me validate my memories. She was always banging on doors, persistent to get the truth out, especially when she found out there were so many other kids who were used as human guinea pigs. The Department of Energy had told her she was the only one, but she said that Pentagon sources had personally told her they "didn't want our stories out at any cost. The plan was to pay off a few token victims and blow the rest off." Karen did not live to see any of us receive validation or vindication.

On April 5, 1999 Karen made a presentation on behalf of ACHES entitled ETHICS before the National Institute of Health's' Bioethics Group. She died on April 23, 1999 after doing exhaustive investigation of DOD experiments on human beings.[241] I am sure more child survivors like Karen and Peter will begin coming forward once the public becomes aware of these abuses.

Janet Gordon also spoke before the IWG[lxviii] Staff Stakeholder Workshop before the Department of Energy on February 26, 1996. She belonged to Citizens Call, a downwind victim organization from Utah and the National Committee for Radiation Victims. Ms. Gordon made what I would call, a valiant attempt to underscore the importance of notification. She said,

"Why is there a question about notification? Are we dealing with people? Are we dealing with human beings? Are we dealing with citizens? How can there possibly even be a question of whether these people are entitled to be notified? I don't understand that. I work in grassroots politics. I'm the Vice Chair of my party in my county. I believe in the democratic process. I believe I'm a citizen. I thought I was a full-fledged honest citizen. You have made us non-citizens with non-rights, invisible. I'm obviously not invisible. I'm quite substantial. But as far as the government is concerned, I'm invisible. I have no rights to notification. I have no rights to honesty. I have no rights to follow-up. You can conduct experiments on my people without telling us? In fact by lying to us and telling us that what you're doing to us, isn't what you're doing to us. And then you have no obligation to provide any health care for people when they suffer...Determine what category you're putting us in and either treat us as human beings and full-fledged citizens, or let us know that we're not so that we can take some action in the World Court."

She continued by saying, "Secondly, I would like to address the political reality check here. There are budget constraints and there are difficulties with contacting so many people. I want to know how you could conduct experiments on that many people, and you could afford to do those experiments if you can't afford to follow them up. If they were difficult to follow up, how were they not complicated enough to do in the first place. If they were doable, how can that make any kind of sense? And finally, I would like to like to beg the Interagency Working Group to not follow an established professional pattern, which says major deity is the meaning of MD, or that Ph.D. is powerful major deity. We're all human beings, and just because you have an MD after your name; does not mean that you're in charge of whether I'm a human being or not."

Infants, Children and Pregnant Women

Eileen Welsome reports on a study of 829 pregnant women at Vanderbilt University Hospital Prenatal Clinic from 1945 through 1949. The women were given a "cocktail "laced with radioactive iron. Many, Welsome says were "led to believe that the drinks contained something nutritious that would benefit them and their babies. The drinks actually contained varying amounts of radioactive iron. Within an hour, the material crossed the placenta and began circulating in the blood of their unborn fetuses."[242] In a study done in the sixties, scientists discovered four fatal malignancies among the children who exposed to prenatal radiation and no cancers in the non-exposed group.

Ron Hamm, spoke eloquently before the IWG staff stakeholder workshop in 1986 for the Vanderbilt Experiment Victims. He said,

"My mother and I were drafted by my country to serve as study specimens. My mother was 22 years old and my father had just returned from military service with the United States Navy. She was very trusting and excitedly cautious about having her next child. She chose Vanderbilt Prenatal Clinic because of their reputation. She trustingly took what they gave her. Consequently, when they handed her a cup laced with radiation and said 'Drink this. It will be good for your baby,' she asked no questions. There was no consent sought and there was no consent given. As you have already heard by Geoff Sea, and we have documents to prove it, harm was done. Cultural ethics is not a foreign term to most of us. It was used as the foremost defense of the Nazi high command at Nuremberg.

In 1947, a new science appeared. It actually started before that but it really flowered and flourished in 1947. Young aggressive doctors and researchers drove hard looking for the front seats in this new science. I understand that. It's understandable. However, accountability comes with privilege. Cultural ethics do not work when they jeopardize people's lives. More importantly, each level of authority must be held accountable to its next level. For example, I believe doctors are accountable to their patients, not vice versa. I believe lawyers are accountable to their clients, not the reverse. And I believe public servants are not the government. I believe this government is still of the people, by the people and for the people. And public servants are accountable to us, who are the government. I believe the Advisory Committee should be held accountable to its government, us. I believe the President is accountable to its government, we the people.

For 48 years my mother did not know she had been used and abused. She had her body violated and my body was violated. But then of course, I was just a fetus so I'm not sure I qualified as a human being at that point. We do know that a majority of the radiation that was given to my mother went immediately to the fetus. I believe some 90 percent, something of that nature. She was in fact, in my opinion raped by the medical profession and the research community. Her body was violated, invaded by something she did not know, something she did not understand, nor something that she agreed to accept. And I believe if you looked up the definition of rape, that's pretty well covered.

Vanderbilt did their research in accordance with the Atomic Energy Commission and the Public Health Service. We can prove that. We have. Vanderbilt had the records returned to them. They carried on medical monitoring up through the 1960's. But Vanderbilt has refused to release those records to the victims. Some of us got them. I don't know how we got that lucky but we did. My mother just simply called and said, 'Send my records. I'm part of the Vanderbilt Experiment.' And very interestingly, they had her records all the way back to the date of her birth. We don't know how they got them. She wasn't born in Vanderbilt.

In conclusion, I'm a patriotic American and I want that understood today. I did not come here to seek special treatment. I do not have an axe to grind as far as my heritage. I am part Native American. I am part Italian. I am part German, and most recently my cousin did a genealogical study on our family and it appears that I am part African-American. I'm good to go. (Laughter.) So I stand with all of you today and say, yeah, give me my land back in Tennessee. I'm Cherokee. My great grandmother was on the Trail of Tears. My great grandfather, a German, met her there. I'm not sure where all the other stuff came from but it works for me. I'm a patriotic American. I don't seek any special treatment. But I do feel betrayed and I feel abused by this Committee's report. They did not do their job. Ladies and gentlemen, I expect accountability from my public servants. Don't talk to me of government. I am the government. I vote and I can't wait for November. I expect full disclosure now and in the future. No part of national security was enhanced by keeping mine and my mother's experiment a secret, but our lives have been changed because of it. My mother now knows the reason why. That as we have gathered our class together and the little old ladies that they were so worried about being upset, you don't know what it's like to be in a room with 45 little old ladies who finally found out they were irradiated. Yeah, they were upset. But none of them had to go to the nursing home. They've gotten a new lease on life and they're ready to fight this thing to the bitter end. I want you to know that, and they have mandated their families to fight it long after their dead until it's resolved. Are they psychologically messed up? No. A lot of them sit around and said, 'What happened to you? I lost my teeth under the gum line.' The old joke, the teeth are fine but the gums have to go. Every woman in our study group lost their teeth within five years of the radiation treatment, every one of them. Many of their children, we already know harm was done. Three died with cancer. We know that.

But in our study group, the people my age that have colon cancer and leukemia. I'm one of three that we know of who hasn't had a major, major physical illness in their life. I expect accountability. Your report that report recommends apology without compensation for experiments where subjects were wronged but not harmed. Ask us if we were harmed. Ask us if we can deal with it. I sat before your august Committee, wonderfully credentialed people. I looked each one of them in the eye and told them what I'm telling you. But I noticed on that Committee there wasn't an experiment survivor anywhere to be found. That's an atrocity. I ask that your recommendations show that every committee henceforth have a radiation survivor on that committee, whether they're credentialed or not they deserve an opportunity, sir. We're still the government. We are still the government. We are still the government."

In 1949, the Atomic Energy Commission's (AEC) Human Use Subcommittee expressly discouraged the use of radioisotopes for research with children or pregnant women; however, that did not prevent experiments being done on both these groups with radioactive material in the years to come.

In the mid-1950s pregnant women at the Argonne Cancer Research Hospital received digitoxin labeled with radioactive carbon-14. The four pregnant women were hospitalized at the Chicago Lying-in Hospital. Three of them had abortions; the fourth delivered an anencephalic baby.[243]

Normal healthy newborn infants in Iowa, Nebraska, and Tennessee received radioactive Iodine. In 1954, at the University of Tennessee Memphis, seven male infants (one white and six black) between 2 and 3 days old were injected intravenously. The I-131 uptake of the thyroid of the babies was found to lie within the range of values that would be found in hyperthyroid adults.[244]

In 1954 sixty-five premature infants ranging in birth weight from 2.1 to 5.5 lb were included in a study of the uptake of iodine-131 by the Pediatric Division and the Radioisotope Laboratory of Harper Hospital in Detroit. Seven full-term infants were used for the control group.[245]

In a study conducted at Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory in 1959, a whole body counter evaluated the retention of radioactive Iron 59 in sixty-six subjects including one pregnant woman and four children. The study showed the pregnant woman absorbed larger amounts of iron.[246]

Twenty-eight infants from the nursery at the University of Nebraska College of Medicine ingested radioactive iodine through a gastric tube in 1960.[247] In 1963, twenty-five infants at the University of Iowa in Iowa City, who were less than 36 hours old, had radioiodine administered either orally or by intramuscular injection. This study showed that I-131 was taken up by the thyroid at a higher level and more rapidly, when administered by injection rather then ingestion.[248]

Three girls and three boys were among the twenty-six normal people studied at Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory in 1960 with iodine-131. This study showed that approximately 20 percent of the radioactive iodine was taken up by the thyroid gland.[249]

In a study conducted in 1963 by a graduate student at the University of Rochester to investigate the human body's metabolism of radioiodine found in dairy products, younger age groups were specifically chosen, since the majority of known research had been conducted on adults. The people ranged in age from six years to 50 years, seven were less than 21 years old. The research sought to determine if iodine found in milk was transferred to the thyroid in the same quantities as the inorganic iodide commonly used in medical studies. Cornell's University's Department of Veterinary Medicine provided the milk from a cow fed iodine-131. All those who were part of this experiment were put on an iodine restricted diet prior to the study and then were fed the radioactive milk for a minimum of 14 days. One of the children in this study subsequently developed thyroid carcinoma.[250]

The Iodine 131 Experiment in Alaska [251]

Pregnant and lactating women were also a part of this Alaskan study. In 1956 and again 1957, the U.S. Air Force's Arctic Aeromedical Laboratory conducted a study of the role of the thyroid gland in acclimatizing humans to cold using iodine 131. Like the case of the Marshallese, this study is another instance in which research conducted on populations that were unfamiliar at the time with modern American medicine, posed special ethical problems and was therefore of interest to the Advisory Committee. The study involved 200 administrations of I-131 to 120 subjects: 19 Caucasians, 84 Eskimos, and 17 Indians. Animal studies had suggested the thyroid gland might play a crucial role in adaptation to extreme cold. The results of the study were published in 1957 as an Air Force technical report by the principal investigator, Dr. Kaare Rodahl, M.D., a Norwegian scientist hired by the U.S. Air Force for his expertise in arctic medicine. Many observational studies of these Alaska Natives were carried out by a variety of researchers in the 1950s and 1960s. Most of these did not administer radiation to the natives, but only measured what had already accumulated in their bodies from fallout. The thyroid study discussed here however, differed in that it actively administered radionuclides to natives, raising more direct questions of consent, risk, and subject selection. The Alaskan I-131 experiment also offered subjects no prospect of medical benefit.

The Advisory Committee did not conduct its own on-site investigation of the Alaskan experiments. Instead, they relied on published materials (primarily Rodahl's 1957 report on the study, "Thyroid Activity in Man Exposed to Cold ") as well as testimony by representatives of the Inuit villages of the North Slope of Alaska where the research was conducted.

In 1994 Dr. Rodahl recalled that the base commander at the Arctic Aeromedical Laboratory approved the study, and headquarters in Washington knew of the experiment. Participants in the study were asked to swallow a capsule containing a tracer dose of radioiodine. Measurements were then made of thyroid activity using a scintillation counter and samples taken of blood, urine, and saliva. The study's overall conclusion was that, "The thyroid does not play any significant role in human acclimatization to the arctic environment when the cold stress is no greater than what is normally encountered by soldiers engaged in usual arctic service or by Alaskan Eskimos or Indians in the course of their normal life or activities."

Dr. Rodahl told the IOM/NRC Committee that follow-up was left to the Alaska Native Service, which was already aware of a goiter problem in these communities. Alaska natives, testifying in 1994 before the IOM/NRC committee could not recall any follow-up visits by physicians.

Risk

The principal investigator, Dr. Rodahl, took a one-week course on the proper handling and administration to humans of iodine 131, and then instructed the other physicians who would be working in the field. In terms of dosage and risk, the experiment was not significantly different from tracer studies conducted in the continental United States with two exceptions. First, some subjects were used more than once. Several Alaska Native subjects reported they received as many as three doses.

Second, the subjects included women who were pregnant or lactating. Although the AEC discouraged the non-therapeutic use of radioisotopes in pregnant women, such research was still conducted. What sets the Alaska experiment apart from other studies conducted on pregnant and lactating women is that this experiment was not investigating a research question about an aspect of pregnancy or lactation.

Disclosure and Consent

This experiment offered no prospect of medical benefit to subjects. If the subjects in this experiment did not understand and agree to this instrumental use of their bodies, then they were merely used as a means to the ends of the investigators and the Air Force. The Committee found no documents from the time of the experiment that bore on what, if anything, the subjects were told, and whether consent was obtained. There are also no documents bearing on whether the Air Force provided the researchers with guidelines on the use of human subjects or requirements for obtaining consent.

The only available evidence comes from personal recollections of the principal investigator and a few of the former subjects. Dr. Rodahl recalled in 1994 that he obtained white volunteers through their military commanders and Indian and Eskimo volunteers through the village elders. When a military volunteer came before him he explained in the subject's native tongue (English), the purpose of the study and what a subject would do. He then gave the person the opportunity to decline to participate. When visiting the villages, the physicians could not communicate directly in the native language. They would find an English-speaking village elder to explain the purpose of the study. The elder would then find people to serve as subjects. What communication occurred between the village elder and the prospective subjects is not known. Dr. Rodahl also reported that he did not use the term radiation in his explanation to the English-speaking village elders who then communicated with others in the villages. Interviews in 1994 by the IOM/NRC committee indicated that there is no word for radiation in the native languages.

One Alaska Native subject interviewed by the IOM/NRC committee in 1994 recalled that at the time he worked in a hospital, spoke English, and did know about “radiation. “He could not recall any use of the term in the study. In at least one Arctic Village, there were no English speakers. Subjects from this village testified that they thought they were taking a substance that would improve their own health, and that they would not have participated in the study if they had known it required them to take a radioactive tracer.

The available evidence suggests that the leaders may not have understood; and thus were not in a position to communicate to the subjects that the experiment was non-therapeutic, that it had a military purpose, or that it involved exposure to low doses of radiation. A significant cultural barrier exacerbated the ethical difficulties posed by the language barrier. The Indian and Eskimo villages had little exposure to modern medicine. One village, Point Lay, is described in Rodahl's 1957 report as “relatively little affected” by the modern world. There is a strong likelihood that there was no appreciation for the difference between treatment of a patient and research unrelated to any illness of the subject.

The danger of exploitation was further heightened by the trusting relationship that developed between the native Alaskans and the field researchers. In part, this trust was due to the desire for medical care. In at least one village, harsh conditions may have increased the need for outside assistance. Rodahl's report states that Point Lay had suffered from semi starvation the previous year. Dr. Pierce testified to the Advisory Committee, "In the mid-1950s, doctor visits to native villages were quite scarce." Dr. Rodahl said when his plane landed the villagers would come running to meet him, and the other physicians who came with him and the villagers would immediately want their ailments treated. He said the physicians treated them because they were medical men. He also said, "The natives trusted them and they trusted the natives." Testimony before the IOM/NRC committee included the recollection of one participant that he had been paid $10 for the study. In other testimony, it appears some subjects may have believed there was an implicit quid pro quo, trading medical treatment for participation.

Subject Selection

The selection of Alaskan Indians and Eskimos as subjects for this research was not arbitrary. The government felt that in order to better understand acclimatization and human performance under conditions of extreme cold, it was reasonable and potentially important to study people who lived under such conditions. At the same time however, the population chosen was not one familiar with modern medicine, but rather a population for whom the treatments of modern physicians were a strange but valued innovation; and the research activities of modern medicine were totally unknown. Therefore, the potential for misunderstanding and exploitation was significant. There has been no evidence that any attempt was made to explain the military purpose of the study to the Indians or Eskimos.

The Oregon and Washington Experiments [252]

Oregon

Another segment of the population who was subject to government experimentation were prisoners. In 1963, Carl Heller was an internationally renowned medical scientist, a winner of the important Cuba Prize. In the field of endocrinology he was a preeminent researcher, so it is not surprising that when the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) decided to fund work on how radiation affects male reproductive function, they would turn to him. He designed a study to test the effects of radiation on the somatic and germinal cells of the testes, the doses of radiation that would produce changes or induce damage in spermatogenesis cells, the amount of time it would take for cell production to recover, and the effects of radiation on hormone excretion. Subjects were required to agree to be vasectomized, because of a perceived small risk of chromosomal damage that could lead to their fathering genetically damaged children. To carry out this work, Dr. Heller was to receive grants totaling $1.12 million over ten years.

Mavis Rowley, Dr. Heller’s former laboratory assistant who was interviewed by Advisory Committee staff in 1994, said that the AEC “was looking for a mechanism to measure the effect of ionizing radiation on the human body.” She said testicular irradiation was promising because the testes have “a cell cycle and physiology which allows you to make objective measurements of dosimetry and effect, without having to expose the whole body to radiation.” With respect to the health risks associated with the testicular irradiations, there was very little reliable “human “ information at the time about the long-term effects of organ-specific testicular exposure to radiation.”

In a deposition taken in 1976, a subject named John Henry Atkinson said he was never told there was a possibility of getting cancer or any kind of tumors as a result of the testicular irradiation experiments. Other subjects deposed in 1976 also said they had not been warned of cancer risk, and when asked by one subject about the potential for “bad effects,” Dr. Heller was reported to have said, “One chance in a million.”

Harold Bibeau was exposed to 18 rads’ and discovered lumps on his thigh and back.[253] In a newspaper article in 1994, when asked why he subjected himself to experimentation Harold said, “I was just told that it was a way to serve my country even though I was in prison.”

When asked in his own deposition what the potential risks were Dr. Heller said, “Are you talking about cancer? ...I didn’t want to frighten them so I said tumor. I may have on occasion said cancer.”

The acute risks of the exposures included skin burns, pain from the biopsies, testicular inflammation (orchitis) induced by repeated biopsies, and bleeding into the scrotum from the biopsies. Using consent forms and depositions as a basis for determining what the subjects were told, it appears that they were adequately informed about the possibility of skin burns; sometimes informed, but perhaps inadequately, about the possibility of pain; informed about the possibility of bleeding only from 1970 on; and never informed of the possibility of orchitis. As far as the quality of consent is concerned, the evidence suggests that many if not most of the subjects might not have appreciated that some small risk of testicular cancer was involved. It is also not clear that all subjects understood that there could be significant pain associated with the biopsies and possible long-term effects.

Prison industry inmates were typically paid 25 cents a day for participating in the Heller program. They received $25 for each testicular biopsy, of which most inmates had five or more; plus a bonus when they were vasectomized at the end of the program, which appears to have been an additional $25. An obvious ethical question is whether the money constituted a coercive offer to prisoners. During the course of his study between 1963 and 1973, Dr. Heller irradiated sixty-seven inmates of the Oregon State Prison.

Washington

C. Alvin Paulsen was a student of Carl Heller at the University of Oregon in the late 1940s. In the early 1950s, he was a fellow in Heller's lab. By 1963, he was ready to direct a substantial research program on his own. His chance came when he was called to Hanford to consult on an accidental radiation exposure of three workers. The upshot of this experience was a $505,000 grant from the Atomic Energy Commission to study the effects of ionizing radiation on testicular function.

Dr. Paulsen remarked in the 1994 interview with Advisory Committee staff, that the main research questions he was trying to answer were what would constitute "a reasonably safe dose" of ionizing radiation to the testes; as well as what dose "would cause some change in sperm production and secondly, to determine the scenario of recovery." He recalled a 1962 letter to the Washington State Department of Institutions in which he wrote that he would like to find out "the maximum dose of radiation that would not alter spermatogenesis" and "the maximum dose of radiation that affects spermatogenesis, but only temporarily."

In the 1994 interview Dr. Paulsen said, "When I recognized a tremendous void of information relative to human exposure and space travel had started; and there was the question of solar explosions and ionizing radiation exposure in space...I then contacted the Commission to determine...whether they would entertain receiving an application." At a certain stage of the Washington study, Dr. Paulsen used the prison bulletin board to advertise for volunteers. The November 1964, announcements to inmates failed to mention a requirement to undergo a vasectomy at the end of the experiment, to ensure that subjects would not father genetically damaged children.

In mid-1969, Dr. Audrey R. Holliday, chief of research, undertook a review of all experimentation in the prison system for the Department of Institutions. At this time Dr. Holliday took steps to temporarily halt the irradiation phase of the project. After investigating the origins of Dr. Paulsen's research, Dr. Holliday asked the University of Washington to conduct a new review of the study, emphasizing her concern about the state's responsibility to safeguard human rights. The university stood by its initial findings allowing the research to continue, although at about the same time it turned down Dr. Paulsen's request to move into the neutron-irradiation phase of his project.

Dr. Holliday then debated the issue with Dr. William Conte, director of the Department of Institutions who was disposed to allow the project to continue. On March 18, 1970, she wrote a letter to Dr. Conte noting, "There is no question, but what the Federal Government has made considerable investment in this project. The Federal Government, however, as a reading of any newspaper will show; has supported a number of projects over which there have been many moral-ethical questions (both large and small) raised, e.g., nerve gasses, toxins, etc. I remind you that the Federal Government is not responsible for the care, safety and safeguarding of human rights of populations under the purview of the Department of Institutions. This is a responsibility we must discharge, regardless of the amount of money that the Federal Government is willing to invest in a project... There is no doubt but what the prison setting is an ideal setting for this type of research... I suppose concentration camps provided ideal settings for the research conducted in them... If in fact, non-inmates were to volunteer in the substantial numbers of persons Dr. Paulsen needs, then I would have less qualms about offering up a captive population for this research, i.e., I would have some evidence, assuming the volunteers were in fact, normal; that non-captive populations might make the same decision as a captive population... I am not against high-risk research. I have engaged in some myself. I am not against federally sponsored research. I have engaged in some myself. However, the risk should be commensurate with the probable benefits to be received by the population or others like it to follow. I don't think we can argue that in this case. Neither am I opposed to use of a prison population on a volunteer basis for research projects that may not be of direct benefit to the population, but which are of clear benefit to society or mankind. I don't think we can argue that in this case either."

Dr. Holliday also argued that the study should have been done on "lower order primates," and that if the state allowed Dr. Paulsen's study to continue; it would forfeit its right to speak out on behalf of human rights relating to future research proposals.

While favoring continuation of Dr. Paulsen's research, Dr. Conte authorized a review by the Department of Institution's Human Rights Review Committee. The committee recommended that the study be shut down; noting that the Paulsen project "seems clearly inconsistent with the standards laid down by the Nuremberg Code for the protection of human subjects with respect to freedom of choice and consent." The recommendation went on to say that "within the context of Dr. Paulsen's project, it is largely irrelevant whether or not a volunteer declares his 'desire to undergo vasectomy,' since there is no assurance that his real reasons would be ethically-morally acceptable; or that his reasons (whatever they may be) will stand the test of reality after release." It specified that the money paid for participation and the expectation of privileges, "real or imagined," could constitute undue inducements. This review, according to the report, "recommended that Dr. Paulsen's request for continuation of his study be rejected as it was found to be inconsistent with standards for the protection of the individual as a research subject. The essential issue raised by departmental personnel was that of informed consent." On March 23, 1970, Dr. Holliday wrote to Dr. Paulsen to inform him that his project was over.

The Green Run[254]

While the other intentional releases addressed in the Committee's charter were part of the effort to develop the U.S. nuclear arsenal, the Green Run was conducted to develop intelligence techniques to understand the threat posed by the Soviet Union. In 1947, General Dwight D. Eisenhower assigned the Air Force the mission of long-range detection of Soviet nuclear tests. Based on observations from Operation Fitzwilliam, the intelligence component of the 1948 Sandstone nuclear test series, the Air Force determined aerial sampling of radioactive debris to be the best method of detecting atomic releases. An interim aerial sampling network was in place in early September 1949 that detected radioactive debris from the first Soviet nuclear test.

Around the same time, Jack Healy of Hanford's Health Instrument (HI) Divisions noticed anomalous radioactivity readings from an air filter on nearby Rattlesnake Mountain. The HI Divisions were responsible for radiological safety and Healy had set up this filter to test how radioactive contamination varied with altitude. The rapid decay of his radioactive samples led Healy to conclude that they had come from a recent nuclear test. Soon after news of Healy's observation reached Washington, D.C., Air Force specialists arrived and took Healy's samples and data for analysis. It is not clear whether Healy's observation came in time to support President Harry Truman's announcement on September 23 that the Soviet Union had exploded its first atomic bomb, but it did confirm that radioactivity from a nuclear test could be detected on the other side of the globe.

Now that the Soviet Union knew how to make atomic weapons, the United States needed to know how many weapons and how much of the critical raw material plutonium the Soviets possessed. Like nuclear testing, plutonium production released radioactive gases that sensitive instruments could detect, though not at such great distances. To identify Soviet production facilities and estimate their rate of plutonium production, the Air Force now felt the need to test ways to monitor these gases.

Hanford: The World's First Plutonium Factory

In 1942 General Leslie Groves selected the Hanford site, overlooking the Columbia River in southeast Washington State, for the Manhattan Project's plutonium factory. The river would provide a large reliable supply of fresh water for cooling the plutonium-production reactors, and Hanford's relative isolation from major population centers would make it easier to construct and operate the facility without attracting unwanted attention. The nearby towns of Richland, Kennewick and Pasco, soon became boomtowns whose economies depended on Hanford.

At Hanford neutrons converted uranium 238 in the production reactor's nuclear fuel into plutonium 239. Chemical separation plants then separated this plutonium from the fission products and residual uranium in the irradiated fuel elements. The first separation plants, the T and P plants, used acid to dissolve these fuel elements, but the more efficient Redox and Purex processes superseded this in the 1950s.

In late 1948 and early 1949, Air Force and Oak Ridge personnel conducted a series of twenty air-sampling flights at Oak Ridge and three at Hanford. The results were disappointing. Instruments detected airborne releases of radioactive material at ranges of up to fifteen miles in the hills and valleys near Oak Ridge, but no farther than two miles from Hanford because of measures taken to reduce radioactive emissions there. At an October 25, 1949 meeting at Hanford, representatives of the Air Force, the Atomic Energy Commission, and General Electric (the postwar contractor for the Hanford site) agreed to a plan to release enough radioactive material from Hanford to provide a larger radioactive source for intelligence-related experiments.

This intentional release took place in the early morning of December 3, 1949 but information about it remained classified until 1986. Two periodic reports of the HI Divisions described a plutonium production run using “green” fuel elements. The story of this “Green Run “ has emerged piecemeal since then. The most complete account comes in a 1950 report co-authored by Jack Healy (referred to as the Green Run report), which was declassified in stages in response to requests from the public under the Freedom of Information Act and inquiries by the Advisory Committee.

Although cooling times of 90 to 100 days were common by 1949, the fuel elements used in the Green Run were dissolved after being cooled for only 16 days. This short cooling time meant that much more radioactive iodine 131 and xenon 133 were released directly into the atmosphere, rather than decaying while the fuel elements cooled. Furthermore, pollution control devices called scrubbers normally used to remove an estimated 90 percent of the radioiodine from the effluent gas were not operated.

When these “green” fuel elements were processed, roughly 8,000 curies of iodine 131 flowed from the tall smokestack at Hanford’s T plant. This stack was built in the early years of Hanford’s operation when large quantities of radioactive gases were routinely released in the rush to produce plutonium. Although the Green Run represents roughly one percent of the total radioiodine release from Hanford during the peak release years 1945-1947, it was almost certainly larger than any other one-day release, even during World War II.

One clear purpose of the Green Run was to test a variety of techniques for monitoring environmental contamination caused by an operating plutonium-production plant. A small army of workers, including many from Hanford’s HI Divisions, took readings of radioactivity on vegetation, in animals, and in water and tested techniques for sampling radioactive iodine and xenon in the air. The Air Force operated an airplane carrying a variety of monitoring devices the same aircraft used in earlier aerial surveys at Oak Ridge and Hanford and set up a special air sampling station in Spokane, Washington.

Those operating the equipment encountered numerous technical problems including a lost weather balloon and failed air pumps. The greatest problem, however, was the general contamination of monitoring and laboratory equipment. The contamination created a high background signal that made it difficult to distinguish radioactivity on the equipment from radioactivity in the environment. The main cause of this contamination was the weather at the time, which led to much higher ground contamination near the stack than expected.

The plans for the Green Run included very specific meteorological requirements. These requirements were designed to facilitate monitoring of the radioactive plume by aircraft; but they were similar to the normal operational requirements, which were designed to limit local contamination. These included:

- A temperature inversion, to keep the effluents aloft but at a low altitude
- No rain, fog or low clouds to impede aircraft operations
- Light to moderate wind speeds (less than fifteen miles an hour)
- Wind from the west or southwest, so the plane would not have to fly over rough terrain

- Strong dilution of the plume before any possible contact with the ground

Jack Healy reports that he made the decision to go ahead with the Green Run on the evening of December 2, 1949, even though the weather did not turn out as expected. Some have suggested that the Air Force pressed to go ahead with the release in spite of marginal weather conditions, but Healy recalls no such pressure. The plume from the release stagnated in the local area for several days before a storm front dispersed it toward the north-northeast. Consequently, local deposition of radioactive contaminants was much higher than anticipated.

The Green Run report concludes: Under the worst possible meteorological conditions for such a test, the airborne instruments detected the radioactive gases at a distance better than 100 miles from the stack. Under favorable conditions, it was estimated that with the same concentrations this distance could have been increased by up to a factor of ten.

Despite the contamination of equipment, the monitoring provided a record of the extensive short-term environmental contamination that resulted from the Green Run. Measurements of radioactivity on vegetation produced readings that, while temporary, were as much as 400 times the then- “permissible permanent concentration” on vegetation thought to cause injury to livestock. The current level at which Washington state officials intervene to prevent possible injury to people through the food supply, is not much higher than the then-permissible permanent concentration. Animal thyroid specimens showed contamination levels up to “about 80 times the maximum permissible limit of permanently maintained radioiodine concentration.”

Radioactive materials released into the environment can affect humans in two ways. First, they can be a source of radiation external to the body: beta radiation that affects the skin, or more penetrating gamma radiation. Second, they can enter the body from contaminated air, food, or water and provide an internal source of radiation. Of these environmental pathways to radiation exposure, the food pathway is by far the most complicated. Radionuclides can enter the food chain at many points; through contaminated air, water, and soil, resulting in contaminated fruits, vegetables, meat, and dairy products.

The hazards from environmental exposures to radionuclides differ in important quantitative ways from those due to medical procedures or participation in biomedical research. The natural dilution of materials in the environment means that individual exposures even from massive releases are often quite small, although the chemical and biological processes involved in exposures through the food chain can lead to effects that counteract this dilution. Finally, many more people may be exposed, with exposures that vary widely from person to person. Because individual exposures are generally too low to produce any acute effects, the main form of injury possible from environmental radiation exposure is cancer, which may occur many years after the exposure.

We need to listen to two survivors to get the true picture of the devastation from these experiments at Hanford. Darcey Sollars’ and Brenda Weavers’ testimony before the Interagency Working Group addresses the reality that all of the facts have not been presented by our government. Darcey says,

“I fall into many categories. I’m a downwinder. I’m a human experiment, a whistleblower, daughter of a Hanford worker, sister of an atomic veteran. I was born and raised only a few miles from Hanford Nuclear Reservation. I’ve testified at three Advisory Committee meetings. In the 1961-62 school year I was in second grade in a public school in Richland, Washington. I was taken from my class and made to drink liquid that made me very ill. I was then sent through a body counter. I was studied and sent back through again in two weeks. That day, and that liquid that I drank that day, made me very ill. Since then I've had very many more illnesses and much too many surgeries. Two years ago I made that fact known and introduced myself to the Advisory Committee. They did not address this issue in their report, nor did they address the horrid harassment that followed. From the very day I spoke out in public about this matter, I began to receive threats by phone, by mail, at work and at home. I was told to shut up and to leave town, and on many occasions, my live was threatened. When that did not silence me, my family pets were poisoned and brutally mutilated. This is the attitude of the old culture in that area. My family and myself lived with this constant harassment for a year, until I was so scared I left my home of 9-1/2 years and moved to New Mexico. I left my 18-year-old daughter behind to finish high school. I was running out of pets and I felt my family or myself would be next. This frightening issue also was not addressed in the Advisory report."

Brenda Weaver graphically illustrates her personal experience with the radiation exposure with her testimony,

"I lived and was raised just across the river, seven miles downwind from Hanford. I'm here to tell partly my story, and also I'm here in representation of all downwinders, regardless if they're from Hanford. I want to represent those persons. I was raised on a ranch where my father raised sheep and cattle; and we farmed and used all of the natural resources, water, food and so forth from that area. I want to kind of start out with a story of another reason that I'm here is because I had very many medical problems and so forth, losing an ovary when I was 14. But then when I became pregnant, I had a daughter born to me, and she I want to show you, first of all, my daughter's eyes, and I want to tie that into (Pause.)

My father, in that length of time that we've lived there, there were many farmers who had sheep and animals born without eyes, without part of their heads. It was referred to many times when these births would go on-we'd refer to them as the nights of the little demons. And I never got to see any of them because my father wouldn't let the female women to the barn at this time. But we knew about it, in the community it was well known; and a number of years later in 1965, I had a daughter born without eyes, just like the sheep that my father had born.

I'd like to present this is my daughter's eyes.

(Pause.)

Let's you see what we have to deal with. My daughter now is 30 years old. Her name is Jamie. She is college educated and hopes to go on to get her doctorate. She's a taxpaying contributor. She is not on a disability. But still, at this time is not able to make enough money to provide her own health care, and a member of our family has to provide her healthcare.

I know that's a little shock factor, but I kind of wanted you to see with what we deal with on a daily basis in our home, as well as my own health problems which I'm not going to go into now; because I've already done that in front of the President Committee. I just feel that I represent, and Jamie represents, those people born with birth defects that are not being acknowledged.

And as downwinders we feel that we've been ignored, that we are really not being acknowledged at all. That we're nonexistent. That we're not citizens. We feel that we've been totally ignored in the report and we're told that we don't exist. That we really these people are not radiated. That we don't have affects. And that isn't the case. And we just represent those persons. There are many thousands of us with all kinds of problems and health problems and birth defects that I don't think can be ignored, that we don't exist. And I didn't really write out a formal because I'm just a housewife and a mom. I'm not really a professional person. But I do want to I feel that we're being ignored not being seen, you might say--just as my daughter has to use these eyes to see. I feel that the Committee didn't open up their eyes and to really see what and look at those people that have been affected in communities, large communities that were radiated--that have had these effects throughout the United States, like Laguna and Alaska and New Mexico and all of the places Oak Ridge. Those are communities. And our fault in this is just being living in the wrong place at the wrong time, I think. And now we're told that we weren't there and that these things didn't happen. I mean, that's a little hard to live with. I think that I would like to see, at least in my daughter's case, we'll use her as an example. I'd like to see some sort of health care program because she doesn't have one. As long as she's on a disability and is a second-class citizen on a disability, then she can have the health insurance that goes along with having a disability from the states. But if she's a hardworking person like she is, and she pays taxes and she works but doesn't make quite enough money to pay for health care; she's in a Catch 22.

Also her artificial eyes cost a great deal of money, and she's now paying for that herself because they say it's cosmetic. Well, it's difficult. You can see the dilemma that she is in. She is one of hundreds and thousands of people, and I'm just using her as one example of what goes on. I am personally offended and deeply hurt, and I know the community that I represent feels the same way. That we've been put aside as being not, I don't know, not important enough; but simply not even existing."

In July 1963 the Hanford Laboratory conducted another study. It involved the release of 120 micro- curies of iodine-131 into the environment. The purpose of the experiment was to enable scientists to study how the radioactive iodine spread in turn through the air, soil, and vegetation and how it affected animals.[255] I guess we need look no further than Brenda Weavers' own family.

Other

From 1950 until 1954, researchers at the Children's Hospital, George William Hooper Foundation, College of Dentistry, University of California, San Francisco, CA studied oral and alimentary effects of radioactive elements to investigate local and systemic effects of irradiation of the alimentary canal and oral cavity. Findings were to include description of gross pathological changes, description of histopathological changes, biochemical analysis of gastric, intestinal and salivary secretions, and radioautographic survey of the localization of the isotopes in the gastrointestinal canal and mouth. No information was available as to the number of participants or research results.

In Harlem City Hospital, New York in 1950, a duplicate study was done. The purpose of the investigation was to study injury to the capillary system to see if there were some way to protect it from radiation injury. No information was again available on the number of participants or research results.

In a 1954, study done at Indiana University Medical Center, Indianapolis, Indiana, 23 presumably normal individuals without signs or symptoms of venous disorder, were along with ninety-two patients with signs and symptoms of venous stasis, unexplained edema, or lymphatic blockade experimented on. They had injections of a radiopaque material into their femoral veins in the groin, into the popliteal vein and into a superficial vein in the thigh, leg or foot; and then had studies done before and after exercise of the dependent limb. X-rays were taken to see the distribution of radiopaque material.

Studies Using Radioactive Vitamin B12 were conducted in the early 1960s. In a collaborative effort between the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies, the Long Island Jewish Hospital (Jamaica, NY), South Nassau Communities Hospital (Oceanside, NY), and Brookhaven National Laboratory, a series of experiments was conducted to study the plasma clearance of vitamin B12 labeled with cobalt-57. These studies sought to determine why the serum and plasma levels of vitamin B12 were elevated in patients with chronic myelocytic leukemia. In one of these studies, three patients in remission were intravenously administered vitamin B12 labeled with cobalt-57. The procedure was repeated twice in the same patients, after administration of loading doses of stable vitamin B12. In another study, 10 patients with various degrees of chronic myelocytic leukemia and 5 healthy individuals each received three or more intravenous injections of cobalt-57 labeled B12.[256]

Morton Sklar, Director of the World Organization Against Torture USA says, "In addition to the tightening of experimentation guidelines, the U.S. government has attempted to address the issue of human radiation testing by establishing three major programs to provide compensation to those persons who may have been harmed. However, these programs deal with only a small segment of the radiation experiments that took place and affect only a small fraction of the victims."

Sklar continues by saying, "The Department of Veterans' Affairs administers a program designed for veterans who were exposed to radiation, with special provisions for those exposed at Hiroshima and Nagasaki and in atomic weapons tests. This program is administered under the Veterans Dioxin and Radiation Compensation Act of 1988." However, of over 15,000 claims for compensation filed under this Act, only 1,401 have been approved; despite the fact that it is estimated that 200,000 soldiers were exposed to nuclear bomb tests between 1946 and 1963.

The second program is the Nuclear Claims Trust Fund that was established under a 1986 agreement between the United States and the Marshall Islands to compensate inhabitants of the islands exposed to radiation from U.S. weapons testing of 67 nuclear explosions between 1946 and 1958. In 1947, 145 people were relocated from their homes on Enewetok Atoll-which consists of about 40 islands-to Ujelang Atoll, a cluster of coral rubble one-fourth the size of Enewetok. They were told they would be gone no more than five years. In 1976, the U.S. Department of Interior said the group suffered grave privations, including periods of near starvation. They received little education and poor health care. It wasn't until 1980 that they were allowed to return to find that some of their land had been vaporized by the blasts, while the rest was pockmarked by explosions or contaminated radiation.

In May of 2000, twenty years after their return, The Marshall Island Nuclear Claims Tribunal awarded $341 million to compensate the survivors and descendants for the damage to them and their once tropical homeland. Unfortunately, they may not be able to collect it as the United States only earmarked $150 million for compensation and only $4.5 million is left.[257]

The third program is the Radiation Exposure Compensation Act of 1990, established to provide compensation to uranium miners, persons living downwind from the Nevada Test Site, and veterans and civilians who received radiation at the site of atmospheric weapons tests in Nevada and the Pacific.

Groups of uranium miners, test-site personnel, and civilians affected near test sites also have filed claims in federal courts seeking compensation. All these claims have been rejected, however, on the grounds that there is no legal authority to hold the government responsible. In some of these cases the court recognized that the claimants had indeed been harmed by the government's actions, and called on Congress to provide a legislative remedy in the absence of judicial remedy. The passage of legislation acknowledging the government's complicity in these events and compensating those who have been harmed is the first step that must be taken to achieve this result. The overall assessment of compensation programs that have been established is that they are far too restrictive and place too low a ceiling on the amount of compensation awarded.

In Morton Sklar's report Involuntary Human Scientific Experimentation, he ends by saying, "Similar concerns also are being raised about involuntary human experimentation involving new forms of classified research and testing of high technology military weaponry, including microwave and laser equipment. Groups working on these issues cite a White House inter-governmental memorandum dated March 27, 1997, establishing stronger guidelines prohibiting non-consensual testing for classified research; but suggesting by implication, that this type of human subject research may, in fact, be taking place. Because of the classified nature of these activities, it is very difficult to confirm or disprove that they are taking place.[258] Given the serious negative impacts on non-consensual human subjects that classified research of this type is capable of producing, and given the past history of secret experimentation by the government; these allegations of continuing improprieties involving secret government sponsored human testing should not be dismissed without more thorough, impartial investigation."

Cooper Brown from the National Committee for Radiation Victims summed up his feelings to the Task Force by saying, “If you want to ensure that what happened during the Cold War years does not happen in the future, then you have to start talking about fundamental institutional change. That is the only way you are going to get around it. You hear people talking about criminal sanctions, that should be looked at not only in terms of retribution to those who it was done to before; but you have got to look at in terms of if you don’t impose criminal sanctions, where criminal sanctions are clearly warranted. And you know, the Advisory Committee notes at least two incidents where they think people were killed as a result of the experimentation and says but there has to be further investigation. If you don’t respond to that, you are sending absolutely the wrong message to people who decide to do experimentation in the future.”

Biological and Chemical Experiments[259]

Dr. Cornelius Rhoads undertook the Puerto Rican Cancer Experiment in 1931. Under the auspices of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Investigations, Rhoads purposely infected his subjects with cancer cells. Thirteen of the subjects died. Rhoads went on to establish the U.S. Army Biological Warfare facilities in Maryland, Utah, and Panama, even though he wrote a most appalling statement after the experiment was uncovered. He said, “What the island needs is not public health work, but a tidal wave or something to totally exterminate the population.”[260] He later was named to the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission and was at the heart of the radiation experiments on prisoners, hospital patients, and soldiers.[261]

In 1943 the United States began research into the use of biological agents for offensive purposes. Approximately 146,000 tons of chemical agents were produced by the United States between 1940 and 1945. The government says this work was started in response to a perceived threat of German biological warfare. The United States conducted this research at Camp Detrick and produced agents at other sites until 1969, when President Nixon stopped all offensive biological and toxin weapon research and production.

The Chemical Corps Research and Development Command issued a memo on May 2, 1956 that speaks for itself. An Lt Colonel from Sloan-Kettering was to be given the following ‘Problem assignment’. “The problem is how can we develop and standardize BW and CW agents when higher authority requires human dose-response data, yet these agents are considered by medical authorities to be too dangerous for human experimentation? A ‘Fresh look’ at this problem might bring out new and fruitful approaches.”

Mustard Gas Exposure and Long-Term Health Effects

In 1993 a report published by the Institute of Medicine stated approximately 60,000 military personnel were used as human subjects in the 194O's to test two chemical agents, mustard gas and lewisite. Most of these subjects were not informed of the nature of the experiments and never received medical follow-up after their participation in the research. Some of these human subjects were threatened with imprisonment at Fort Leavenworth if they discussed these experiments with anyone, including their wives, parents, and family doctors.[262] The study found a relationship between exposure and the subsequent development of certain diseases.

During the Second World War, The San Jose Project was conducted on San Jose Island, Panama. This project was to determine if chemical weapons would be effective under tropical conditions and could be used against the Japanese military during the Second World War. It involved 130 tests of an estimated 31,000 mustard gas bombs and other chemical weapons conducted by the U.S., Canada, and Britain between 1944 and 1947. The U.S. also conducted experiments to determine whether there was a difference in how white and non-white races reacted to mustard gas, according to documents released under the U.S. government's Freedom of Information Act. The Americans exposed Puerto Rican American soldiers and white American soldiers to the gas, but found there was no difference in how the chemical affected the men. Both groups of human guinea pigs broke out in large blisters, had their skin and lungs severely burned, and several had to be hospitalized. The Ottawa Citizen reported on April 22, 2001, that The Panamanian government sent a team of scientists and bomb disposal experts to San Jose Island in February 2001 to determine whether any of the bombs or chemical weapons were still intact thereby posing a current threat. A Pentagon spokesman said that U.S. chemical weapons on San Jose were either exploded or "disposed of consistent with the common practices at the time." The article states it was common during that period to either dump unused chemical weapons at sea or bury them on land.[263]

There is no central roster of World War II participants in either the laboratory or field tests. The Army conducted tests on Army personnel in the laboratory and in the field. The test sites included Edgewood Arsenal, Md.; Camp Sibert, Ala.; Bushnell, Fla.; Dugway Proving Ground, Utah; and San Jose Island, Panama Canal Zone. Military personnel from the U.S. Navy Training Center, Bainbridge, Maryland also were sent to the Naval Research Lab in Washington, D.C. to participate in tests. Gas testing facilities also were located at Great Lakes Naval Training Center in Illinois and Camp Lejeune, N.C.

Based on findings from the National Academy of Sciences, the Department of Veterans Affairs recently published a final rule to compensate veterans for disabilities or deaths resulting from the long- term effects of in service exposure to mustard gas and other agents which blister the skin (these are called vesicants).[264] The final rule expands coverage to veterans exposed to mustard gas under battlefield conditions in World War I (WWI), those present at the German air raid on the harbor of Bari, Italy (WWII), and those engaged in manufacturing and handling vesicant agents during their military service. Thus, for the first time, VA will compensate certain veterans for illnesses, which may have been caused by their exposure to vesicants over a century ago.

Veterans Who May Be Eligible for Compensation

VA policies generally authorize service-connection and compensation payments to veterans who were exposed to mustard gas and/or Lewisite and who suffer from a number of diseases or conditions:

- Full-body exposure to nitrogen or sulfur mustard together with the subsequent development of chronic conjunctivitis, keratitis, corneal opacities, scar formation, or the following cancers: nasopharyngeal; laryngeal; lung (except mesothelioma); or squamous cell carcinoma of the skin;
- Full-body exposure to nitrogen or sulfur mustard or exposure to Lewisite and the subsequent development of a chronic form of laryngitis, bronchitis, emphysema, asthma or chronic obstructive pulmonary disease;
- Full-body exposure to nitrogen mustard with the subsequent development of acute non-lymphocytic leukemia.

Service-connection is not allowed if the claimed condition is due to the veteran's own willful misconduct or if there is affirmative evidence that establishes some other non-service-related condition or event as the cause of the claimed disability.

Veterans who were exposed to significant amounts of mustard gas and have health problems that may be compensable or their survivors may contact the nearest VA regional office at 1-800-827-1000 for more information about benefits.

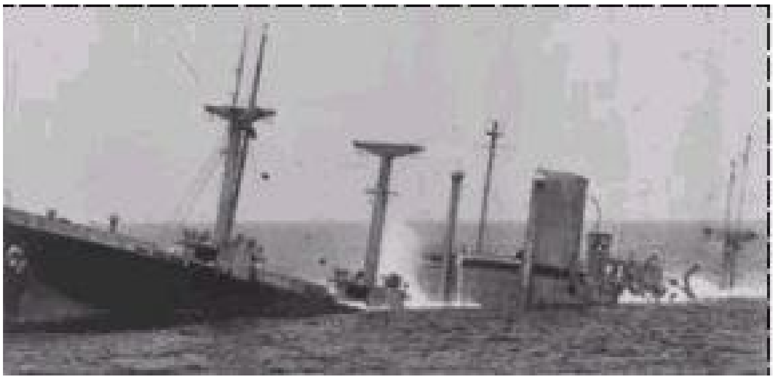
Medical Care

Veterans currently seeking VA health care receive medically indicated diagnostic and treatment services without any need to document mustard gas exposures. The VA has announced that for fiscal year 1999, it is planning to provide virtually all needed medical services for any veteran who comes to VA for care. In any future year in which appropriations are insufficient to meet projected demand, VA will use a priority system that provides a special category for those requiring treatment for illnesses specifically related to environmental exposures (although some veterans may qualify for an even higher eligibility category based on their service-connected status or other factors). Further, if the veteran can document exposure to receive care under the special enrollment Category 6, co-payments are avoided. More information about VA health-care enrollment is available toll-free at 1-877-222-VETS, at the veteran's nearest VA medical center, or at http://www.va.gov/pubaff/enroll.htm on the Internet.

Sea Dumping of Chemical Weapons

Following the occupation of Germany and Japan, the Allies initiated a sea dumping and weapons disposal program to eliminate the large stockpiles of captured chemical agents. Operation Davy Jones Locker involved sinking ships that contained German weapons in the North Sea, however not all the German weapons were destroyed. Between 1945 and 1947, over 40,000 of the 250-kg tabun bombs, over 21,000 mustard bombs of various sizes, over 2,700 nitrogen mustard rockets, and about 750 tabun artillery shells of various sizes were shipped to the United States. In addition to disposing of the enemy stockpiles, the United States also dumped the U.S. Lewisite stockpile into the sea during Operation Geranium in 1948.[265]

The disposal at sea of surplus and leaking chemical munitions and radiological wastes generated environmental concerns about its effects on marine life, that eventually brought sea dumping to a halt but not before 1968. Operation Cut Holes and Sink 'Em (CHASE), an ongoing program for disposing of conventional ammunition began accepting chemical weapons in 1967. That year, CHASE 8 disposed of mustard agent in ton containers, and M55 sarin rockets. In June 1968, CHASE 11 disposed of sarin and VX in ton containers, along with additional M55 sarin and VX rockets. In August 1968, CHASE 12 disposed of mustard agent in ton containers. Are we really mystified by the effects our contaminated oceans have had on the sea and plant life?



Photograph: Chemical and Biological Defense Command Historical Research and Response Team, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.

Production Begins

In 1950, the Chemical Corps began construction of the first full-scale sarin production complex based on pilot plant work accomplished at the Army Chemical Center, which had formerly been called Edgewood Arsenal.[266] In 1951, the corps fully standardized sarin and by 1953 was producing the agent. After only four years of production the plants stopped manufacturing, since the stockpile requirements for the agent had been met. One serious accident that was reported took place on July 8, 1969. The army announced that 23 U.S. soldiers and one U.S. civilian had been exposed to sarin on Okinawa. The soldiers were cleaning sarin-filled bombs preparatory to repainting them when the accident occurred.

Part of the reason for the shut down of the sarin plant was the development of a new nerve agent. Chemists at Imperial Chemicals, Ltd. in the United Kingdom, while searching for new insecticides came across compounds that were extremely toxic to humans. The British shared the discovery with the United States in 1953. The Chemical Corps examined the new compounds, and determined that a new series of nerve agents had been discovered that were more persistent and much more toxic than the G-series agents. This new series was designated the V-series agents in 1955, because they were "venomous" in nature. These agents would enter the body through the skin, thereby bypassing the protective mask. They were 1,000-fold more toxic than sarin when applied to the skin, and 2- to 3-fold more toxic when inhaled. A drop the size of a pinhead on bare skin could cause death within 15 minutes.

The Chemical Corps gave top priority to the investigation of these compounds. Of the compounds investigated, VX was selected in 1957 for pilot plant development and dissemination studies. It was standardized in December 1957. The annual report for that year concluded: "The reign of mustard gas, which has been called the King of Battle gases since it was first used in July 1917, will probably come to an end."[267]

In 1959, Food Machinery and Chemical Company, the low bidder, got the contract and construction was planned for 1960. Shortly after the approval, the Chemical Corps supplemented the contract to provide for a VX weapon-filling plant.[268]

On March 17, 1968 approximately 6,400 sheep died following the intentional release of a deadly nerve gas from a plane in the Skull Valley area adjacent to Dugway Proving Grounds. According to a veterinarian who evaluated the sick and dying sheep, there was little doubt that the sheep had been poisoned with nerve gas.[269] Initially, the Department of Defense denied any responsibility for the accident, stating that the sheep died from organophosphate pesticides sprayed on a nearby alfalfa field. However, the nerve agent was identified when the poisoned sheep were autopsied, which made it clear that the deaths were not caused by pesticides.[270] Eventually, the Department of Defense reimbursed the ranchers for their animals.

Human Testing

The Chemical Corps's concern with the effects of nerve and other chemical agents on soldiers led to extensive studies to determine the dangers of exposure and the proper kinds of treatment. Between 1955 and 1975, the US Army enrolled 6720 soldiers in an experimental exposure program of chemical warfare and other agents at Edgewood Arsenal, Maryland. Two hundred fifty four chemicals were administered in an experimental setting.

In a three-year study beginning in 1965, 70 prisoners at the Holmesburg State Prison in Philadelphia were subjected to tests of dioxin, the highly toxic chemical contaminant in Agent Orange. Lesions that the men developed were not treated and remained for up to seven months. None of the subjects was informed that they would later be studied for the development of cancer. This was the second such experiment that Dow Chemical undertook on "volunteers" who did not receive the information, which the world proclaimed was necessary for "informed consent" at Nuremberg.

On 11 July 1969, the army revealed that it was conducting open-air testing with nerve agents at Edgewood Arsenal and at Fort McClellan during training events. The army also revealed that they had conducted nerve agent testing in Hawaii between 1966 and 1967.

The Incapacitant Program

During the 1950s, the Chemical Corps became interested in developing chemical weapons that incapacitated rather than killed its targets. Twelve contractors were awarded a total of 25 contracts for studies or experiments involving morphine, demerol, seconal, scopolamine, chlorpromazine, and secobarbital. Mental Incapacitant studies included: LSD, mescaline, atropine, psilocybin, BZ (benzilate) and glycolate compounds.[271]

New York State Psychiatric Institute was awarded three separate contracts for the study of LSD and mescaline. In 1951 NYSPI tested six derivatives, while the corps tested 35 derivatives. The results of the investigation indicated that mescaline and its derivatives would not be practical as agents, because the doses needed to bring about the mental confusion were too large.[272]

What this report does not say is that less than a month after New York State Psychiatric received the drugs and did tests on mice, they started injecting patients. As mentioned in an earlier chapter, Harold Blauer died from these tests. Alan Scheflin says that the Army report on Blauer's death states that Blauer was not asked for a written consent and that "it is doubtful that such a document exists."[273] Scheflin fills in the pattern of deception by explaining that the Assistant Attorney General for the State of New York conferred with the Army representatives and agreed that their role should be concealed from Mrs. Blauer. In fact, they continued these tests at NYSPI through 1957 to a whopping $140,000. In late 1953 the investigators of that Institute formed a private corporation called "The Research Foundation for Mental Hygiene, Inc.," and were awarded two additional contracts to conduct studies with LSD and mescaline type drugs on psychiatric patients. The Inspector General could not even find details of these contracts.[274]

Additional Contracts:

- The University of Washington used psychochemical drugs on at least 19 male and female medical students.
- The University of Maryland studied the effects of atropine substitutes and other chemical warfare agents under five contracts using Edgewood Arsenal military volunteers and Maryland Psychiatric patients, and other area hospital patients.
- North American Aviation used BZ on 19 company employees.
- Indiana University studied the effects of atropine and atropine substitutes using seven volunteers.
- University of Pennsylvania was awarded six separate contracts. Approximately 40 people were tested with morphine and demerol drugs, and 10 people received scopolamine, atropine, and morphine. Two of these contracts in the mid-to-late 1960's, used 320 inmates from Holmesburg Prison. They were tested with 16 different chemical agents including, ditan, atropine, scopolamine, and various experimental glycolate agents. Glycolates can cause interference with muscles and the central nervous system, delirium, physical incoordination, blurred vision, inhibition of sweating and salivation, rapid heart rate, elevated blood pressure, increased body temperature, vomiting, prostration and stupor or coma.

- The same medical investigators who conducted research at Holmesburg Prison under University of Pennsylvania contracts formed the Ivy Research Laboratories, Inc. They received one contract in 1968 and the other in 1970, to continue work at Holmesburg Prison with chemical agents with 94 inmates. They had choking agents, nerve agents, blood agents, blister agents, vomiting agents, incapacitating agents and toxins used on them.
- Secret army-sponsored research, in which hallucinogens were administered to healthy subjects without their knowledge or consent, was carried out at Boston Psychiatric Hospital between 1952 and 1954.[275] In reflecting, "not with pride," on his participation in this experiment, an investigator explained it as follows: "It wasn't that we were Nazis and said if we ask for consent we lose our subjects, it was just that we were so ethically insensitive that it never occurred to us that you ought to level with people that they were in an experiment.[276]
- American Institute for Research, Silver Springs, Maryland was awarded a contract in 1964 to conduct psychoactive chemical compound experiments on military volunteers.
- Tulane University Department of Psychiatry and Neurology, was awarded a contract in 1955. They used mental patients, neurological patients, and normal volunteers. One experiments involved giving LSD and mescaline to mental patients who previously had wire electrodes implanted in their brains, (not unlike what Wilder Penfield did to me in Montreal Canada.)
- Baylor University received three contracts and used demerol, morphine and scopolamine.
- The Institute for Behavioral Research experimented with Monkeys and Humans with sedatives and tranquilizers such as seconal, dimethyl tryptamine and chlorpromazine.[277]

A declassified document from 1957 talks about the difficulty they have had in obtaining expert services and facilities to conduct their tests and experiments. It says, "Some of the activities are considered to be professionally unethical and in some instances border on the illegal. These difficulties have not been entirely surmounted but good progress is being made."[278] They go on to say the best results have been obtained from mental institutions.

LSD Testing in the Armed Forces

Experiments with soldiers under the influence of LSD were conducted to see if they could be forced to give information when being interrogated. The Medical Research Laboratories at Edgewood initiated LSD (EA 1720) drug studies in late 1956. Soldiers were approached and told that the official classified project would make mental and physical demands upon him. Care was taken not to mention the exact properties of the material and the soldiers were made to sign a security statement declaring that he would protect the classification of the project. Thus, men who later would suspect health problems from the tests they participated in were forced to keep from getting treatment, because they could not discuss the project without breaking their security declaration.

These men were given drinks laced with LSD and then interrogated. Between August 1958 and May 1960, these tests were expanded to include Polygraph/Interrogation Tests and Isolation/Sensory Deprivation Tests, all under the influence of LSD.[lxix] There were no records found for the majority of the Intelligence Corps so-called volunteers. In fact, the few that were found were incomplete and totally inadequate to determine even the most basic information about the test.[279]

James B. Stanley was a master sergeant when he was secretly administered LSD at the Aberdeen proving Grounds in Maryland in 1958. Twenty-seven years later the Army sent Stanley a letter soliciting his cooperation in a study of the long-term effects of LSD on “volunteers who participated” in the 1958 tests. Stanley filed suit after the Army denied an administrative claim for compensation.[lxx] He claimed to have suffered from hallucinations and periods of incoherence and memory loss, was impaired in his military performance, and would on occasion “awake from sleep at night and, without reason, violently beat his wife and children, later being unable to recall the entire incident.” Stanley’s claim was barred under a legal doctrine known as the Feres doctrine. Feres insulates the government from liability for injuries to servicemen resulting from activity “incident to service.” Stanley alleged that he was one of 1,000 soldiers who were covertly administered LSD between 1955 and 1958.

Many of these tests were conducted under the MKULTRA program, established to counter perceived Soviet and Chinese advances in brainwashing techniques. One test subject was Lloyd B. Gamble who enlisted in the U.S. Air Force in 1950. In 1957, he volunteered for a special program to test new military protective clothing. He was offered various incentives to participate in the program, including a liberal leave policy, family visitations, and superior living and recreational facilities. However, the greatest incentive to Mr. Gamble was the official recognition he would receive as a career-oriented noncommissioned officer, through letters of commendation and certification of participation in the program. During the 3 weeks of testing new clothing, he was given two or three water-size glasses of a liquid containing LSD to drink. Thereafter, Mr. Gamble developed erratic behavior and even attempted suicide. He did not learn that he had received LSD as a human subject until 18 years later, as a result of congressional hearings in 1975.[280] Even then, the Department of the Army initially denied that he had participated in the experiments, although an official DOD publicity photograph showed him as one of the valiant servicemen volunteering for “a program that was in the highest national security interest."[281]

Other Field Testing LSD Programs:

- Fort Bragg, NC-XVIII Airborne Corps Artillery, September 1958 at Nike Missile Base, 59 test subjects were photographed by still and movie cameras while under the influence performing various duties.
- Fort McClellan, AL, May, July, October 1959. 113 students and members of the faculty were tested.
- Fort Benning, GA, January 1960, 41 officers participated.
- Dugway Proving Ground, UT, September 1959, 4 officers taught class under the influence. Project Dork was conducted on Edgewood Arsenal personnel at Dugway in October 1964. Open dissemination to distances of 100 yards upon eight personnel from the Sixth U.S. Army.
- Fort Holabird and the Chemical Warfare Laboratories at Edgewood Arsenal, 1958-1960, 35 participants.
- Operation Third Chance a 90-day period starting in April 1961, involved the use of LSD on nine foreign nationalists and one U.S. Military subject, none of who were volunteers.
- Operation Derby Hat, September 1962 in Hawaii, involved the use of seven non-volunteer foreign nationals and one U.S. Military person.

In a macabre twist a group of ten Norwegian survivors have filed a lawsuit accusing the Central Intelligence Agency, the Norwegian army and pharmaceutical companies of using 10 war children as guinea pigs in the 1950s and 1960s in experiments with drugs such as LSD and mescaline. Their attorney, Randi Hagen Spydevold claims to have evidence that three or four children died during the tests.[282] The aim of the experiments was surmised to be a way to find control of people's brain.

Biological Weapons and Testing

During the 1950s the biological warfare program was one of the most highly classified programs, owing to its nature and the ongoing Cold War. Many of the details of the program have never been declassified. The corps concentrated on standardizing the agents investigated during World War II and weaponized them at Fort Detrick, the Chemical Corps biological warfare center.

Operation Whitecoat originally started out with volunteer enlisted men. However, after the enlisted men staged a sit down strike to obtain more information about the dangers of the biological tests, Seventh-Day Adventists who were conscientious objectors were recruited for the studies.[283] Because these individuals did not believe in engaging in actual combat, they instead volunteered to be human subjects in military research projects that tested various infectious agents. At least 2,200 military personnel who were Seventh-Day Adventists volunteered for biological testing during the 1950's through the 1970's.

In 1953, Major General Bullene, Chief Chemical Officer gave an over riding priority to the development of anthrax spores. In 1954 the bacteria Brucella suis became the first agent weaponized by the United States at Pine Bluff Arsenal. The United States also worked with Plague (Y. pestis) as a potential biowarfare agent, developing an effective method of aerosolizing the organism. The contagious nature of pneumonic plague makes it particularly dangerous as a biological weapon. This Plague normally appears in three forms in man: bubonic, septicemic, and pneumonic. Deer fly fever (Francisella tularensis) was also weaponized by the United States in the 1950s and 1960s. SEB is the second most common source of outbreaks of food poisoning. Often these outbreaks occur in a setting such as a church picnic or other community event, due to common source exposure in which contaminated food is consumed.

The most important route of exposure to biological agents is through inhalation. Aerosol delivery systems for biological warfare agents most commonly generate invisible clouds of particles or droplets that can remain suspended for extensive periods. The major risk is pulmonary retention of the inhaled particles. To a much lesser extent, particles may adhere to an individual or his clothing. These toxins may cause direct pulmonary toxicity or be absorbed and cause systemic toxicity. Toxins are frequently as potent or more potent by inhalation, than by any other route.[284]

One of the more interesting developments was the standardization in 1959 of the yellow fever virus for use with a mosquito as vector. The virus came from an individual in Trinidad who had been infected with the disease during an epidemic in 1954. Scientists inoculated rhesus monkeys with the serum to propagate the virus. In tests conducted in Savannah, Georgia, and at the Avon Park Bombing Range, Florida, uninfected mosquitoes were released by airplane or helicopter. Within a day, the mosquitoes had spread over several square miles and had bitten many people, demonstrating the feasibility of such an attack. Fort Detrick's laboratory was capable of producing half a million mosquitoes per month and had plans for a plant that could produce 130 million per month. Since Fort Detrick was limited in its production capability, Pine Bluff Arsenal was selected to be the site of the new biological agent. This plant could produce most of the agents standardized by the Chemical Corps and could fill bombs within 4 days after receipt of an order.

In a declassified document from a meeting in June 1958 in the Army Chemical Center in Maryland, the experiments with mosquitoes as a carrier is discussed by Dr. Housewright. The report says, "It was brought out that the literature contains many references to volunteer work performed using infected mosquitoes with a wide variety of agents (the work on malaria, for example). This information may be of importance in obtaining authorization to conduct future volunteer tests with certain agents."

In 1956-1958, in Savannah, Georgia and Avon Park, Florida, the Army carried out field tests in which mosquitoes were released into residential neighborhoods from both ground level and from aircraft. Many people were swarmed by mosquitoes and fell ill, some even died. After each test U.S. Army personnel, posing as public health officials, photographed and tested the victims. It is theorized that the mosquitoes were infected with a strain of Yellow Fever. However, details of the testing remain classified.

The Anti-animal and Anti-plant Program

The antianimal program started off strong in 1952 when the Chemical Corps activated Fort Terry, on Plum Island, New York to study animal diseases. In 1954 however, the army terminated all antianimal agent work with exception of rinderpest and the completion of the foot-and-mouth disease research facility. The Department of Agriculture then took over the defensive aspects of the antianimal pro-gram, including Fort Terry the same year.

The antiplant program made some progress, when in 1955 wheat stem rust became the first antiplant pathogen standardized by the Chemical Corps for use primarily against cereal crops. Additional antiplant agents were standardized shortly thereafter. In 1957, however, the army ordered the corps to stop all antiplant research and development since the air force primarily would be delivering the agent. This was accomplished by 1958 with the termination of the program. Then the decision was reversed the next year after additional funding was found.

The antiplant program was resumed for the U.S. Air Force in 1962. Agent production was conducted at Pine Bluff Arsenal. Field tests of wheat stem rust and rice blast disease were conducted at several sites in the Midwestern and Southern United States and on Okinawa.[285]

Fort Detrick also began to concentrate more on the chemical defoliants, conducting the first large-scale military defoliation effort at Fort Drum, New York using the butyl esters of 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T, later designated Agent Purple.[286]

P hotograph: Chemical and Biological Defense Command

Historical Research and Response Team, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md. U.S. Chemical Warfare Policy Camp Detrick, Md., July 16, 1945. These technicians at the Egg Plant are disinfecting and drilling eggs prior to inoculating them with Brucella suis or Chlamydia psittaci, the bacteria that cause brucellosis and psittacosis. Viral agents such as Venezuelan equine encephalitis virus were also produced in eggs.

In 1950, the U.S. Navy sprayed a cloud of bacteria over San Francisco. The Navy claimed that the bacteria was harmless and used only to track a simulated attack, but many San Francisco residents became ill with pneumonia-like symptoms, and one is known to have died. In 1952 and 1953, in another series of experiments, the U.S. military released clouds of “harmless” gases over six (6) U.S. and Canadian cities to observe the potential for similar releases under chemical and germ warfare scenarios. A follow-up report by the military noted the occurrence of respiratory problems in the unwitting civilian populations. Details of the test are still classified.

The Army conducted 239 open-air tests of biological agents between 1949 and 1969 with both simulates and live agents. In 1955, the Tampa Bay area of Florida experienced a sharp rise in Whooping Cough cases, including 12 deaths after a CIA test where a bacteria withdrawn from the Army’s Chemical and Biological Warfare arsenal was released into the environment.

In 1957, the Chemical Corps dropped a myriad of microscopic fluorescent particles of zinc cadmium sulfide along a path from South Dakota to Minnesota, to test the feasibility of contaminating a large area of the continent with biological organisms. In the first test, the air stream turned north and took the bulk of the material into Canada. Still, a test station in New York was able to detect the particles.

In the second test in 1958, it took the particles only 66 hours to travel from Minnesota to the Gulf of Mexico.[287] Special collectors were located at 63 Civil Aeronautics Authority sites and 112 Weather Bureau stations. Over 2,200 samples were mailed back to the corps from these sites. During Operation Autumn Gold in 1963, 20,000 gallons of BG (bacillus globigii) slurry” was dropped from helicopters and jets.

Additional tests covered from Ohio to Texas, and from Illinois to Kansas. One contaminated air mass traveled from Toledo, Ohio to a short distance west of Memphis, Tennessee. The collected material was analyzed at the Dugway Proving Grounds.[288] Although it had been only theoretical prior to this test, Operation LAC provided the first proof that biological agents were indeed potential weapons of mass destruction.[289]

In May 1997, the National Academy of Sciences issued a report intended to make people feel better about the cadmium sulfide releases. The panel concluded, “It is extremely unlikely that anyone in the test areas developed adverse health effects.”[290] The committee based this on the findings that high doses of cadmium over long periods of time could cause bone and kidney problems and lung cancer. Since the Army’s test involved small doses of a less toxic compound over short periods of time, they surmised no adverse health effects. They also theorized that since the army tests are now 30 and 40 years old, it would be extremely difficult to identify people who were affected and determine their past exposures to zinc cadmium sulfide.

In some cities the Army dispersed microorganisms either alone or in combination with the zinc cadmium sulfide. The Army omitted a 1932 study that concluded: “Cadmium, no matter how small the amount taken into the lungs, causes pathologic changes...there is, therefore, no permissible amount of cadmium.”[291] Perhaps that is why the army stopped using zinc cadmium sulfide in the 1960’s. A 1973 investigation suggested that the effects of zinc cadmium sulfide spray may not have been reported because poisoning is “of a low-level chronic nature and its symptoms are less dramatic and more difficult to recognize than acute cadmium poisoning.”[292]

Professor Leonard Cole reports that Diane Gorny and Carol Thomas, who attended an elementary school in Minneapolis were among the targets of a 1953 spraying.[293] A report stated that there were 61 releases in four different areas of the city. They suspect that the tests affected their health. Each claims that they and their classmates have had unusual numbers of miscarriages, fertility problems, and cancer. They have contacted over half of some 500 former students at the Clinton School. Dozens of female students reported having multiple miscarriages or other reproductive problems and an unusually high rate of cancer and asthma. There were also many cases of mental retardation among their offspring. Carol Thomas has a Downes Syndrome son, one who is severely retarded, and the third has a serious learning disability. Gorny is sterile.

In an interview for Pacifica Network News, Diane Gorny recalled being scanned with a fluoroscope. Joyce Carlson, also a student of the Clinton Elementary School in 1953, suffers from respiratory problems today. She cannot understand why those responsible at the time allowed children to be in danger. During the interview Joyce said, “I feel that the people who were in power the city officials, the school nurses, and the people who did this testing (U.S. Army) ...oh, I can’t believe they did this! How could they allow this to happen? They didn’t even ask questions. I just hope that these kinds of things are not happening today!”

The Deseret Test Center in Utah was created for extra continental chemical and biological agent testing, including trials at sea and arctic and tropical environmental testing. The army, navy, and air force jointly staffed the new center with testing scheduled to begin in 1962.

In an article Lee Davidson wrote for the Washington Correspondent, he explains what he found in declassified documents.[294] “For the experiments Deseret Test Center obtained the use of two ‘liberty’ ships, the mass-produced Merchant Marine cargo ships made during World War II. Tests also included five tugboats and the occasional use of submarines, jets, barges, and assorted smaller vessels."

The idea, documents said, was to have various ships crisscross through germ and nerve agent clouds to collect information about exposure and decontamination. Crewmembers occupied protected spaces and information was evaluated by on-board lab facilities.

According to Guy Willis of Tennessee, who wrote about his work on the Hall in the mid '50s for a newsletter, "They were rigged in the early '50s so they could be steered by remote control, so they could be driven through downwind radiation clouds resulting from atmospheric detonations of nuclear devices" near Eniwetok and Bikini atolls.

Willis wrote that the crew, which reboarded the ship only hours after passing through such clouds to wash it down, "experienced considerable radiation exposure," especially during long voyages back to the United States.

Despite the radiation exposure, the Hall and Eastman were included in Deseret Test Center's navy tests, possibly because of the remote steering capability or because of their rigging with cages for test animals and lab equipment that would be needed again."[295]

In another test the army wanted to know the effects of biological agents in natural settings. After receiving approval from the secretary of the army, the first open-air test was conducted at Dugway Proving Ground, Utah where 30 volunteers were exposed to an aerosol containing Coxiella burnetii, the rickettsia that causes Q fever.[296]

During the 1960s, the army conducted large-scale tests using the biological simulant Bacillus globigii (code name BG) at various places in the public domain to access the dangers of covert biological attacks. For example, in 1965 BG was tested at National Airport and the Greyhound Terminal in Washington, D. C. In 1966, BG was disseminated in New York City within the subway tubes and from the street into the subway stations in mid Manhattan. The army also conducted antianimal testing using BG at several stockyards in Texas, Missouri, Minnesota, South Dakota, Iowa, and Nebraska between 1964 and 1965. Antiplant testing using the wheat stem rust fungus was also conducted at Langdon, North Dakota, in 1960 and Yeehaw Junction, Florida in 1968.[297]

In 1969, President Nixon banned all offensive biological and toxin weapon research and production. Congress later discovered that the CIA had retained an enormous supply of shellfish toxin that had been delivered to them by the Army. CIA Directory Colby had no reasonable explanation for the blatant disregard for the executive order given by Nixon. The CIA also chose to ignore the Treaty that had been signed by 18 nations, which prohibited the stockpiling of biological agents for offensive military purposes, and also forbid research into such offensive employment of biological agents.

How many of our loved ones are dead today due to these experiments? What is to become of all of those who were part of these experiments the innocent women, children, prisoners, and service members who became human guinea pigs for "A Nobler Purpose?" How many citizens of this country were exposed to radiation from fallout? Do we really need to ask why Cancer is so prevalent? How much were our oceans damaged due to sea dumping?

These are tough questions, for which you have the answers. Let your voices be heard, lest your silence convey a more powerful message to those in power. Until we make the necessary changes to protect every citizen, history will continue to repeat itself.

Army Contracts with Outside Agency's[298]

Arthur D. Little- Incapacitating Agent Research (1963-72)

American Institute for Research, Silver Spring, Maryland- Effect of Drugs on Human Performance (1966); Comparative Neuro-pharmacology of a Muscle Relaxant (1965) - Develop tests to measure effects of incapacitating agents (1964-67)

Armour Research Foundation

Baylor University-Study effects of Analgesic drugs on respiratory center and circulation in humans (1961-62), Unknown study from 1964-67; Study without purpose state 1965-68

Charles Pfizer-CML Incapacitating Agents (1965)

Cornell University-Effect of Toxic Agents on Energy Metabolism (1967)

Contributors of Pennsylvania Hospital

E.I. Dupont-Evaluation & Synthesis of CML Compounds (1965-1968)

FMC Corp.-Synthesis of Compounds (1964-69), Search for New Incapacitating Agent Research (1963-68)

Friends of Psychiatric Hospital

Georgetown University

Hahnemann Medical College-Evaluation of Therapeutic Compounds in animals and humans 1961-66 supposedly no humans used; 1967-68; - 65 volunteers used; 6-68 thru 12-68, 26 volunteers used; 1969-70 26 volunteers used

Harvard College-Molecular Structure & Diffusional Processes Across Intact Epidermia (1964)

Harvard University-Collection & Identification of Plant Material (1965)

Hazelton Labs-Biological Evaluation of CML Compounds (1966-70), Development & Practical Application of New Primary Screening Methods (1964-67), Primary Toxicity Screening Tests and Methodology (1967-71), Biological Evaluation of Lethal & Incapacitating Agents (1964-66); Irritant Screening of Compounds (1965-66); New Method Dev for Irritant Screening (1965-66); Procurement & Evaluation of Naturally Occurring Biologically Active Material (1964)

I. I. T. Research Institute (Armour)-Biomed Studies of BZ (1964)

Indiana University-The Physiological effects of Atropine and Atropine Substitutes (1951-53) One contract DA18-108-CML-2397 was awarded to the Indiana University in 1951. The seven reports regarding that contract did not reveal any information regarding screening or selection of volunteers. The absence of such details was not unusual as the contract predates publication of DOD and Army policies governing uses of volunteers in Medical research. The studies apparently dealt primarily with chemical research. However, there was evidence of seven volunteers used in atropine studies.

Indiana University Foundation Research-Contract 6591-an Out-Of-House

Contract for the years 1960-63 for the Psychological Studies of the Effects of Incapacitating Agents

Institute for Behavioral Research-Drug Effects and Complex behavioral repertories involved in Monkeys, Baboons, & Humans (1962-1965)

Institute of Medical Science

Ivy Research Labs-Threshold Doses of various chemical agents used on in Humans (1968 -73)

Holmesburg Prison-Choking agents, nerve agents, blood agents, blister agents, vomiting agents, incapacitating agents, and toxins. At least 94 inmates used in these experiments. (See University of Pennsylvania for more experiments at Holmesburg Prison.) Additional experiments done in 70-71 to an unknown number of people.

Jefferson Medical College

John Hopkins-Effect of Drugs on CML Agents (1965), 1960-65 Determine Effects of Drugs and CW agents on the EEG; 1951-55 Treatment of injury by GB and mustard effects; 1955-60 Studies on EEG Method to aid in evaluation of drugs

Lakeside Lab

Louisiana State University-Clinical Pathological and Pathophysiological studies in anticholinesterase poisoning (1954-58) and another study 1955-58)

Maimonides Hospital

Maryland Medical Legal Foundation-Search for new Incapacitating Agents-studied Botulism, paid victims for blood samples (1963-66)

Monsanto Chemical-Synthesis of Compounds (1964-69)

Mount Sinai Hospital-Hypothalamic Control of Advenocortical Function (1967-67)-Hypothalamic Control of Adrenocortical Function (1964-66); three additional studies: 63-64; 66-67; 67-69

New York State Psychiatric Institute-Determine psychological effects of psychological chemical agents on human subjects (1951-54)

New York University-Endocrinologic effects of altered consciousness (1963-66)

North American Aviation Corp-Pilot Performance tests with BZ (1961-62)

Olin-Mathiesan

Pennsylvania Hospital-Neurological Evaluation of new agents (1965-66)

Press Fellows of Harvard-Collection and Identification of Plant Material (1964)

Regents of California

Regis Commercial Co.

Research Foundation for Mental Hygiene, Inc formerly known as New York State Psychiatric Institute-Psychiatric and Therapeutic studies of compounds (1953-57); Mental behavior of human with certain agents (1957-59)

Research Triangle Institute-Search for New CML Agents (1964-67) Total $1,180,700; Extraction of Bioassay of Natural Products (1965-); Synthesis of Compounds (1964-69)

Roch Foundation For Mental Hygiene

Rutgers University

S. B. Penick

St. Louis University

Shell Dev. Co

Southern Research Institute

Stanford Research Institute-Comparative Neuropharmacology of Muscle Relaxant (1965); CML Incapacitating Agents (1964-65)

Tulane University-Dept of Psychiatry & Neurology (1955) for research in abnormal brain functioning as related to mental illness. One particular experiment involved giving LSD 25 and mescaline to mental patients who previously had wire electrodes implanted in their brains. The reports suggest that the implantation of electrodes was financed under a grant from the Commonwealth Foundation and not the Army grant. End date of project unknown

University of California-Methods for Identification of Site and Mode of Action of Centrally Acting Incapacitating Compounds (1965)

University of Cincinnati

University of Colorado-Investigation and testing of nerve agent casualties; evaluation of therapy and antidotes (1951-61)

University of Connecticut-Invest of Alkaloid Products in Saprophytic Culture (1965-66)

University of Delaware-Heterocyclic Nitrogen Compounds (1965)

University of Illinois-(1960-61-62)-Action of Various Psychotomimetic Agents on Brain Enzyme Systems $70,170Contract G41, 1963-64-Biochemical Basis of Psychedelic Drug Actions

University of Iowa-1958, 1961-Inv. of Indole Alkaloids XO 5-604-83 $11,000 Contract 269

University of New Hampshire

University of Maryland-Drug Effects & Behavior Repertories and Environment Control (1965); Psychological Studies of effects of CW agents (1954-60); candidate therapeutic agents and CW agents effects on humans

University of Michigan-Contract #5663, (1955) in the amount of $9,000 to Conduct Research on Pharmacology of certain Compounds Affecting the Central Nervous Systems of Animals & Men (1956) $41,400, (1958) $19,897

University of Mississippi

University of Oregon

University of Pennsylvania-Experimental Basis for: (a) Treatment of CML Casualties (1961-62) (b) Mode of Transport of gases thru lung membranes (1968), (c) Threshold Doses in Humans (1964-67); Study of CW casualties in man (1951-60); Evaluation of drugs in man (1963-68)

Thru University of Pennsylvania 320 Inmates of Holmesburg Prison studied for Threshold doses in man (1964-67)

University of Tennessee-Local Treatment of Vesicant Burns (1964-65)

University of Utah-Study effects of CW agents as personnel hazard (1954-57); Therapeutic effects of chemical compounds (1957-59)

University of Washington-Neurological Action of CW Agents (1957-62) Review of 21 reports regarding those contracts indicated the investigators established a volunteer pool of 35 medical students of which at least 19 were used in psychochemical drug experiments. Included the use of both male and female humans in testing LSM (lysergic acid morpholide), an LSD-like compound, LSD, and psilocybin. Total project cost $221,529- Contract DA18-108-405-CML-6364

University of Wisconsin-Methods for Measuring Chemically Induced Behavioral Changes in Various mammalian species (1965-1967); Behavioral Effects of Pharmacologic Materials (1965), Behavioral Effects of Pharmacoligic, Material that disrupt the central nervous system of primates (10-61 thru 9-62) $38,750 contract G34

Vanderbilt University

Woodard Research-Screening of Selected Compounds (1963-66)

Yale University-Relationship of Psychotomimetic Compounds in Brain Neurohumors (1965)

Ypsilanti State Hospital-Officials reported their experiments which led to the conclusion that lysergic acid diethylamide (LSD), appeared to be a suitable substance for therapeutic investigation in the treatment of psychoses (1951).

FOIA SAMPLE LETTER

Agency Head or Freedom of Information Act Officer

Name of Agency

Address of Agency

City, State Zip Code

Re: Freedom of Information Act Request

Dear ______________:

This letter constitutes my formal request for information pursuant to the provisions of the Freedom of Information and Privacy Acts, 5 USC552.

I am requesting copies of all information or documents containing the following information be provided to me:

If possible, cite dates, authors, addressees, subjects, or titles of documents sought, and refer to or enclose copies of any published accounts related to the requested material (e.g., newspaper or journal articles or government reports) or if just requesting personal information:

I am requesting copies of all information maintained by your agency that pertains to myself.

or as described below: As someone who was used in assorted experimentation and abuses at the hands of military personnel at hospital and military location from ____ year onwards as part of Project Bluebird, Project Artichoke, and Project MKULTRA. (If other projects are involved list those too.)

If personal info is requested

List Full Name, Maiden name, Current Address, Phone No., Social Security No., Date, and Place of Birth. I also listed former addresses where I resided.

In order to help to determine my status to assess fees, you should know that I am an individual seeking information for personal use and not for commercial use.

I am willing to pay fees for this request up to a maximum of $___. If you estimate that the fees will exceed this limit, please inform me first.

Or

I request a waiver of fees for this request. Disclosure of the requested information to me is in the public interest because it is likely to contribute significantly to public understanding of the operations or activities of the government, and is not primarily in my commercial interest. (Include a specific example).

Thank you for your consideration of my request.

Sincerely,

Your Name, Address, City, State, Zip Code, Telephone Number

Requesters should keep a copy of their request letter and related correspondence and notes of phone calls until the request has been fully resolved.

Always put on the outside of your envelope in the bottom left hand corner

“Freedom of Information and Privacy Act Request”.

You should expect to receive an acknowledgment of your request and a statement that the request has been placed in the queue and will be processed in its turn. Agencies are allowed to process requests on a first-come, first-served basis. If the agency has a backlog of requests (and most do), you may have to wait some time before you receive the materials you seek. Call or write the FOIA office to follow up on requests that have been pending for an unreasonable period of time. Your response from the agency should give you the names of specific FOIA personnel you can contact about your request. Excessive processing delays may require an administrative appeal letter.

The agency may say that no records were found in response to your request. Call or write the FOIA office and ask if additional information is needed from you to make your request more specific. Explain why you believe the agency has material responsive to your request and inquire about other places in the agency’s files where relevant records might be found.

Information relevant to your request may be found, but the agency withholds all or part of it. The FOIA allows an agency only nine exemptions from its obligation to provide information in response to a request. These exemptions, found at 5 U.S.C. section 552(b), include material related to national security, internal agency rules, proprietary business information, inter-and intra-agency pre-decisional memoranda, personal privacy, and records related to law enforcement records.

How do I appeal the agency’s action on my request?

It is always worthwhile to file an administrative appeal if the agency's response is unsatisfactory. Appeals can be especially effective to successfully challenge excessive processing delays, fee waiver denials, and the improper full or partial withholdings of responsive documents. Agency regulations governing appeals vary; take careful note of the instructions for filing an appeal in the agency's response to ensure that your appeal is timely.

Always file an appeal letter if the initial response is inadequate. If the agency fails to respond satisfactorily, you may wish to seek the assistance of a member of Congress to contact the agency on your behalf.

FOR REQUESTING DECLASSIFIED MKULTRA and Bluebird/Artichoke Records

Central Intelligence Agency

Kathryn I. Dyer

FOIA and Privacy Act Coordinator

Washington, D.C. 20505

Re: Freedom of Information and Privacy Act Request

This letter constitutes my formal request for information pursuant to the provisions of the Freedom of Information and Privacy Acts, 5 USC552.

I am requesting the three-volume CD set that includes a copy of a shareware viewer of the nearly 18,000 pages of MKULTRA and Bluebird/Artichoke records. Enclosed is a check for $30 made payable to the United Sates Treasurer.

Sincerely,

Your Name, Address, City, State Zip Code and Telephone Number

You can request this information without requesting information on yourself. If you want to do that, do it in a separate request.

This site has many MKULTRA documents in tiff format http://intellnet.org/mkultra/

Appeal to U.S. Lawmakers by MKULTRA Targeted Individuals

The declaration below represents the 1999 attempt to get the attention of lawmakers by both categories of MKULTRA targeted individuals: Electronic neuro-influence device victims and Institutional/drug/child abuse survivors.

After more than 50 years of such activity and cover-up, it is high time to expose this practice and prosecute the perpetrators. The previous attempt by the U.S. Senate in 1977 was not followed through.

DECLARATION OF HUMAN RIGHTS EMERGENCY INTERVENTION

ATTENTION LAWMAKERS:

SERIOUS VIOLATIONS OF HUMAN RIGHTS OCCURRING IN AMERICA, EMERGENCY INTERVENTION NEEDED

We who are injured victims of human rights abuses in U.S. nonconsensual classified research, in military/intelligence/corporate/ university or private sector testing, as part of various training and classified research demand the following:

1. All human experimentation without consent be immediately ceased including any exposures, harassment or experimentation to U.S. citizens using the following:

- Nuclear (ionizing) radiation
- Biological weapons
- Biological process control weapons including brain wave manipulation
- Microwave and radio frequency radiation
- Sub audio infrasound and ultrasound weapons and testing acoustics, including audible, subliminal brain washing, harassment and intimidation, electromagnetic field weapons, environmental harassment
- Chemical weapons
- Extra low frequency (ELF) and very low frequency (VLF) pulse wave weapons
- Radar, laser-radar, and radar holography, sonar lasers and holograms, visual and media harassment implants, retinal implants
- Remote monitoring
- Satellite surveillance
- Any other defense/intelligence/health research that is nonconsensual using technology and methods which denies U.S. citizens our human rights, constitutional rights and rights to due process of law.

2. Our needs for investigations and enforcement of the law to protect our constitutional rights has not been properly addressed. We are told we must prove everything in order to get an investigation started, and yet due to the technological sophistication of the nature of our complaints, it is nearly impossible for us to do this. We are naïve to the sophistication of the engineering involved. We have limited financial resources. Many of us have been ignored and attempts have been made to discredit us. We therefore also demand the following:

We demand a Congressional and Presidential investigation into fraudulent use of our tax dollars in continued illegal radiation testing and other experimentation that is injuring us.

We demand we be notified and sent our true records of all that we have been exposed to.

We demand appropriate compensation for all our losses including but not limited to physical injuries, psychological injuries, and other damages.

We demand we have the appropriate support for our medical, technological, and engineering evaluations and needs necessary to solve our technological problems and injuries.

We demand that Congress pass new laws to strengthen protecting us, such as laws to force appropriate intelligence agencies and Inspector Generals to investigate our complaints.

We demand enforcement of existing laws that are supposed to be protecting us that are currently being ignored. These laws include:

Title 32 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 219, Federal Policy for Protection of Human Subjects

Department of Defense Directive 3216.2 Protection of Human Subjects in DOD Supported Research

Title 10, U.S. Code Section 980

Title 10, U.S. Code Chapter 32, Section 1520

U.S. criminal and constitutional laws

President Clinton's Memorandum of March 27, 1997, Title 3 -

Strengthened Protections for Human Subjects of Classified Research

World Law including the Nuremberg Code and the following:

- U.S. General Assembly Resolution 51/37 passed in 1996, The European Parliament Resolution A 4-005/99 passed on Jan. 29, 1999 which includes an international convention introducing a global ban on all developments and deployments of weapons which might enable any form of manipulation of human beings

We demand a separate independent cabinet post to bring our complaints to, when other agencies fail in their own oversight.

We demand that this committee be constantly updated and versed in all aspects of testing, training, research, and weapons and all that is being currently developed including what is classified.

We demand this committee have full authority to investigate, to help us, and to enforce the law. There should be no conflict of interest for those appointed to work within this committee.

We demand a repeal of the National Security Act for it is being used to protect criminal acts of those with unlimited powers currently being used to abuse U.S. citizens.

We demand criminal charges be brought against those who have so gravely injured us, and that those who have so callously ignored our complaints be removed from their positions of authority in public office for they do not deserve to serve the public.

Bring us the justice we deserve.

COALITION AGAINST NONCONSENSUAL CLASSIFIED RESEARCH AND TRAINING[299]

---

[i] Office of Special Investigations within the Criminal Division of the Department of Justice

[ii] Create Multiple Personalities for specific tasks

[iii] DID Dissociative Identity Disorder was formerly called Multiple Personality Disorder. Most individuals with DID report histories of severe and repeated physical, sexual, or emotional abuse in childhood.

[iv] This process usually involves the shaman entering a trance, a special form of the abaissement de niveau mental that Jung so often mentioned. Trance as such is important in many forms of magic and is currently the subject of investigation in many branches of science.

[v] Pseudonym

[vi] Joint Intelligence Objectives Agency, the JIOA was a special intelligence office reporting to the Director of Intelligence in the War Department, comparable to the intelligence chief of today's Joint Chiefs of Staff.

[vii] Office of Strategic Services, America's first spy network and forerunner of the CIA.

[viii] In the early fifties a hydrogen bomb was exploded on this very island, leaving a mushroom shaped cloud that went 25 miles into the atmosphere and 100 miles in diameter. Our own ships were standing by only 25 miles away to measure the effect of the blast.

[ix] In 1983 Barbie was extradited from Bolivia and stood trial in France for crimes against humanity. It was then that Washington admitted that he had worked for U.S. Intelligence, that he was a known war criminal, and that he had been allowed to escape.

[x] Nelson was asked to resign by Harry Truman because of his involvement in this policy.

[xi] Before coming to USA he worked at the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute with Rudin, the architect of Hitler's eugenic laws. He argued for the sterilization of the healthy relatives of schizophrenics, as well as of schizophrenics themselves. Kaiser Wilhelm Institute was also where Josef Mengele sent "experimental materials" from twins in the concentration camps.

[xii] In late 1953, the investigators of NY State Psychiatric formed a private corporation called "The Research Foundation for Mental Hygiene, Inc.," and were awarded two additional contracts to conduct studies with LSD and mescaline type drugs on psychiatric patients. The Inspector General notes that details regarding the performance of those contracts were not found. Thus, it cannot be stated with certitude that the patients used were volunteers, or policies established by the Army to govern the use of humans in research were adhered to in all cases.

[xiii] No relation to JFK or his family

[xiv] SI - there is no mention of what it stands for in document, although it appears to stand for Sleep Induction if you refer to #17.

[xv] Pressure in the right place cuts off the flow of blood to the brain, apparently causing a rapid coma-like condition. CIA Mori ID 140394

[xvi] Charles Oulton, the Science Correspondent for The Express, said in a 1998 report: "Scientists have solved the mystery of how information received by the brain in childhood can be retrieved years later. They have found that early lessons and experience leave a memory trace, which can lie dormant until adulthood; and then be reactivated when we need it. The process even starts when we are in the womb. New connections between nerve cells are created by the brain and remain in storage until needed."

[xvii] Document CIA Mori ID 149463, 11/26/51, "Since veni-puncture is undeniably the most efficient and successful method for introducing chemicals into the subject, it is obvious that the subject will be aware that a needle has been used in his arm. However, our work and the work of others indicate that there is a strong possibility that total amnesia or an almost total amnesia will follow the use of our technique as a general rule."

[xviii] CIA Mori ID 144700, 4/26/52, pg. 3, "Drugs Sodium Pentathol, sodium amytal, and barbiturates in general. Evaluation: These techniques have been proven to be effective and they involve little risk to the subject if administered under competent medical direction. CIA Mori ID 140394 dated 2/25/52, Q: Have you ever had any experience with drugs? A: Yes, many times. I worked with doctors using sodium amytal and pentathol and have obtained hypnotic control after the drugs were used. In fact, many times the drugs were used for the purpose of obtaining hypnotic control."

[xix] CIA Mori ID 190885, 1/1/50, Drugs and Electricity, “Research work on the use of electric shock and the encephalograph in interrogation. Particular emphasis on the detection of prior use of electric shock and the ‘guaranteed amnesia’ resulting from it.”

[xx] Cheese was a favorite word of Sidney Gottlieb who owned a goat farm and made cheese.

[xxi] Document CIA Mori ID 149463, 11/26/51, “Every effort should be made never to identify members of the Artichoke team by their true names in the presence of or in the hearing of the subject. Artichoke team members will use fictitious names in carrying out the Artichoke techniques.”

[xxii] Whenever anyone called me “Little Girl” that would trigger my 2 year old alter to come, consequently; my body could be 5, 10, 20 or 30, but the alter presenting was only two.

[xxiii] Under instructions from his Wall Street law firm, McCloy had lived for a year in Italy serving as an adviser to the fascist government of Benito Mussolini. An intimate collaborator of the Harriman/Bush bank, McCloy had sat in Adolf Hitler’s box at the 1936 Olympic games in Berlin at the invitation of Nazi chieftains Rudolf Hess and Hermann Goering.

[xxiv] Served as Eisenhower’s special assistant for psychological warfare. He headed the National Committee for a Free Europe, which broadcast American propaganda behind the Iron Curtain over Radio Free Europe and which was covertly funded by the CIA.

[xxv] Many times these wealthy benefactors referred to it as “The Company.”

[xxvi] Advanced Research and Planning

[xxvii] These diametrically opposing feelings were to create an internal chasm that was to finally heal forty years later, when I was able to bring these two parts of my subconscious together, face the feelings and understand them from an adult frame of reference. It is called integration for someone with DID.

[xxviii] This behavior accommodates the offender’s control of the victim’s worldview by placing blame on the victim.

[xxix] Tien founded and earlier organization, the American Society for Electrotherapy.

[xxx] This was her second or third confinement.

[xxxi] In 1961 changed its name to the Human Ecology Fund

[xxxii] CIA MORI ID 17441, The Study of Dissociated States, “Experiments involving altered personality function as a result of environmental manipulation (chiefly sensory isolation) have yielded promising leads in terms of suggestibility and the production of trance-like states. There is reason to believe that environmental manipulations can affect the tendencies for dissociative phenomena.”

[xxxiii] An Army post located five miles from Edgewood Arsenal in Maryland.

[xxxiv] Dr. Jan Merta, a Czech émigré scientist constructed a detector called a Sergeyev Detector while working at McGill University in the early 1970’s. It was used in Russia to chart field changes during PK experiments and detect energy fields around a clinically dead body. The Russians had been working with Nina Kulagina who had PK abilities and was able to control the heart of a frog, make it beat faster or slower; and finally to stop it on command. It was also said that she was able to do this with people. In September 1985 an article appeared in Advanced Technology Report Defense & Foreign Affairs Pg.35 saying, “...In California, it is rumored, a University-sponsored experiment has found that brain waves emitted by patient volunteers in a mental hospital have successfully controlled the switching of electric trains, making them go and stop at will. Sources said it even has a name by which it is known around DARPA (Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency) as “psychotronics.”

[xxxv] In 1962 Gittinger moved his base of operations from the Human Ecology headquarters in New York to a CIA proprietary company called Psychological Assessment Associates.

[xxxvi] Obviously thought control techniques had been studied for quite some time. Wright Patterson was a facility where I would be taken periodically for what they called “tune-ups.” It was a short drive from my home, where they made adjustments to any programming that seemed to be breaking down.

[xxxvii] The Institute for Experimental Medicine

[xxxviii] Ambiguity as to the exact years of this experimentation is due to the extreme nature of the trauma and the way the information was stored. I am sure of what was done, but unfortunately not sure of the exact date.

[xxxix] Wife of P. Avery Rockefeller, son of William and nephew John D. Rockefeller.

[xl] Hebb studied the play and sexual behavior of the captive bottlenose dolphin and coauthored a paper on it in 1948.

[xli] Perhaps Dr. Kozyrev of Pulkov Observatory in Leningrad can explain this statement on time. His theory in 1972 was Time is an energy. He believed that PK (psychokenesis) and even levitation would be explained with a thorough understanding of the energy of Time, an energy that does not propagate, but which is immediately everywhere. According to David Morehouse, a former military intelligence remote viewer and author of Psychic Warrior: Inside the CIA's Stargate Program, accessing the time-space continuum is a technique known as "remote viewing." Remote viewing is a description of travel going from the physical dimension to the target, wherever it is in time and space. He says that when the brain registers the theta-wave state on the monitoring equipment, they are ready to "jump into the ether."

[xlii] This seemed to be a favored age to start children's programming. Many survivors, including myself were first subjected to experiments starting at four.

[xliii] Harold Abramson of MKULTRA fame was attending the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute in 1926-27, where Twin studies were among the leading preoccupations in the studying of human genetics. He went on to become a New York allergist who under contract to the CIA documented all sorts of experiments. His experiments with LSD for the CIA were to make him quite infamous.

[xliv] Hilger and Gehlen both had been debriefed at Fort Hunt in Washington D.C.

[xlv] Wisner was OSS SI chief in Wiesbaden who later committed suicide in 1965. He forced Offie out in 1954.

[xlvi] James Jesus Angleton became part of the DDU, along with Wisner and Dulles. They laundered CIA money through the DDU for their own projects.

[xlvii] SIFAR, the Italian Secret Service was expanded under the code name Operation Demagnetize.

[xlviii] Special Procedures Group- a component of CIA, joint operation between the CIA and the State Department's Special Projects Division. SPD formally became Office of Policy Coordination in 1948 as a permanent State Department mechanism for circumventing the CIA's skepticism for covert political action.

[xlix] In 1952, John Foster established the Population Council in conjunction with John D. Rockefeller III. Tens of millions of dollars of Rockefeller grant money were pumped in as the American Eugenics Society moved its headquarters into the offices of the Population Council, and assumed the name of the newly created Population Council.

[l] He remained a close associate of other Rumanian exiles, including Horia Sima, the head of the Iron Guard.

[li] On 9/20/2000 the CIA filed an affidavit in U.S. District Court "acknowledging an intelligence relationship with German General Reinhard Gehlen that it has kept secret for 50 years." The CIA's acknowledgement of its dealings with Gehlen came in a response to an appeal of a Freedom of Information Act request by researcher Carl Oglesby, the National Archives said.

[lii] Only an hour and a half drive from my home at the time.

[liii] Dr. Noe's name also appears in this same group of documents.

[liv] October 29, 1999

[lv] Another survivor remembers Mengele in connection with cages, but is unable to remember the exact year.

[lvi] I found many survivors, including myself, who had "Robbie" alters. Not all had the same purposes as Kathy's, but all were intentionally created by horrific means.

[lvii] Eichmann was purportedly in Egypt in 1959 according to CIA Interagency Working Group (IWG): RG 263 Detailed Report, Adolf Eichmann

[lviii] This is not unlike what Sid Gottlieb and Josef Mengele said to me, especially naming the survivors' created alter Little Girl. It seems they were not all that creative over the years. Whatever worked for one, they improved upon and used repeatedly.

[lix] Bold on all documents added by author for emphasis

[lx] The first atomic veteran that established the atomic veterans association

[lxi] A report on a flashblindness experiment at the 1957 Plumbomb test uses the term volunteers; a report on 1962 "studies" at Dominic I provide no further information.

[lxii] Desert Rock was an Army encampment in Nevada adjacent to the nuclear test site

[lxiii] Administered by the Navy's Radiological Defense Laboratory

[lxiv] AFIP building

[lxv] Picture is of himself and other Boy Scouts at Walter Reed. The government official in the photograph is holding a log book opened to a page titled, "Walter Reed Army Institute of Research Division of Nuclear Medicine [lxvi] Peter testified before the Advisory Committee in Knoxville and no one bothered to follow up on his testimony.

[lxvii] ACHES--Advocacy Committee For Human Experimentation Survivors-Mind Control. ACHES-MC was formed in 1996 to assist and advocate on behalf of survivors of nonconsensual federally funded mind control experimentation as children or adults.

[lxviii] Interagency Working Group

[lxix] The exact number of volunteers could not be determined. It was reported between 30-35. Some may have received 20 or more doses of LSD over the two-year period according to the Inspector Generals report pg. 139.

[lxx] US vs. Stanley, 483 U.S. 669 (1987)

1Notes - Preface

Interagency Working Group appointed to inform the appropriate committees of the U.S. Senate and House of the activities of the Nazi War Criminal Records

2 Memorandum to Members of the Advisory Committee on Human Radiation Experiments dated April 5, 1995 RE: Post-World War II Recruitment of German Scientists--Project Paperclip, from Advisory Committee Staff

3 Constantine, Alex. Virtual Government, CIA Mind Control Operations in America, Feral House, 1997, 87

4 See above Memo to Advisory Committee

5 Hunt, Linda. Secret Agenda the United States Government, Nazi scientists, and Project Paperclip, 1945 to 1990, Publisher: Bx4736: St. Martins, 1991, 132

6Hunt op. cit, 100

7 Hunt op. cit, 218

8 Hunt op. cit., 226

9 Simpson, Christopher. Blowback, America's Recruitment of Nazis and Its Effects on the Cold War, Weidenfeld & Nicolson, New York, 1988, 28-29

10September 28, 1994, Congressional Subcommittee Hearing

11Internet Resources on the Tuskegee Study, are at http://www.gpc.peachnet.edu/~shale/humanities/composition/assignment

12 DOE (Department of Energy) ACHRE Report Chapter 7

13 DOE/EH-0473 SECTION- Fernald School Calcium Metabolism Studies (1948 to Early '50s)

14 Rothman, David and Sheila. The Willowbrook Wars, Harper & Row Publishers, Inc. 1984, 263

15 Rivera, Geraldo. Willowbrook, Random House, 1972, 22-23

16 Rothman op. cit, 265

17 In a January 31 Nation column, Cockburn cites information made public due to a Church of Scientology F.O.I.A. request during the 1970s.

18 William Silverman interview by Gail Javitt (ACHRE), transcript of audio recording, 20 March 1995(Research Project Series, Oral History Project)

19 Sidney Gottlieb's deputy and the Chief of the CIA Records Center tried unsuccessfully to stop the destruction by Helms and Gottlieb, proof they were trying to conceal their wrongdoing.

20 Project Bluebird/Artichoke primary purpose was the study of special interrogation techniques-primarily hypnosis and truth serums and brainwashing. See CIS-1978-S421-l Project MKULTRA, The CIA's Program of Research in Behavioral Modification, Appendix A, pg. 66, Joint Hearing before the Select Committee on Intelligence and the Subcommittee on Health and Scientific Research of the Committee on Human Resources, United States Senate Ninety-Fifth Congress, First Session, August 3, 1977

21 Subproject 136 of MKULTRA CIA Mori ID#17395 ESP Research, 1961 and 1962, declassified documents from CIA

22 Kor, Eva Mozes. "Nazi Experiments as Viewed by a Survivor of Mengele's Experiments," as part of When Medicine Went Mad, Bioethics and the Holocaust, Edited by Arthur L. Caplan, Humana Press

Marks, John. The Search for the Manchurian Candidate, W. W. Norton & Company, 1979, 176

24 Taken from John Gittinger's testimony before Congress, August 3, 1977, "Project MKULTRA, The CIA's Program Of Research In Behavioral Modification" CIS-1978-S421-1, pg. 56

25 Declassified MKULTRA document CIA Mori ID 17436

26 Lasby, Clearance. Switzerland: Project Paperclip: German Scientists and the Cold War, Saturday Review, Dec. 11, 1971, Atheneum Press, 1971;

27 Simpson, Christopher. Blowback, Weidenfeld & Nicolson, 1988, 33

28 Ibid., 34

29 Ibid., 36-37

30 Jackson Citizen Patriot, Tuesday, March 14, 2000, "Sterling Heights man deported as Nazi", Compiled from the Associated Press

31 Bird, Kai. The Chairman, Simon & Schuster, 1992, 353

32 Mosley, Leonard. Dulles, Dial Press, 1978, 275

33 On 9/20/2000 the CIA filed an affidavit in U.S. District Court "acknowledging an intelligence relationship with German General Reinhard Gehlen that it has kept secret for 50 years." The CIA's acknowledgement of its dealings with Gehlen came in a response to an appeal of a Freedom of Information Act request by researcher Carl Oglesby, the National Archives said.

34 Bird op. cit., 242-243

[35]Chapter Two Bird op. cit.,, 302

[36] Ibid., 346

[37] Hersh, Burton. The Old Boys, Charles Scribner's Sons, Macmillan Publishing Co., 1992, 183

[38] Bar-Zohar, Michael. The Avengers, NY, Hawthorn, 1967, 126

[39] Simpson op. cit., 185

[40] Hersh op. cit., 182

[41] Hoffman, William. David, 1971 Lyle Stuart, Inc., 59

[42] Collier Peter & Horowitz, David. The Rockefellers, An American Dynasty, Halt Rinehart and Winston, New York, 1976, 236

[43] Ibid., 239

[44] DAIG-IN 21-75, Use of Volunteers in Chemical Agent Research by the Inspector General, Department of the Army, pg. 154. For contract numbers see 163-166, 215

[45] Life in His Father's Shadow, The Blade: Toledo, Ohio, February 15, 1998

[46] DSM-IV, section 300.12: "Dissociative amnesia"

[47] CIA Mori ID 140401

[48] Allen W. Dulles appointed as Deputy Director for Plans in January 1951, with CIA. He was responsible for supervising both OPC (Office of Policy Coordination) and OSO (Office of Special Operations). In August 1952, these two merged to became the DDP (Directorate of Plans) and Dulles became Deputy Director of the CIA in charge of clandestine collection and covert action. In February 1953, Dulles became Director of the CIA. In August 1951, project Bluebird was renamed Artichoke and included in-house experiments on special interrogation techniques-primarily hypnosis and truth serums. CIS-1978-S421-1 Project MKULTRA, The CIA's Program Of Research In Behavioral Modification pg. 68

[49] A Dr. Noe was named in a declassified document from Edgewood Arsenal, MD. Dr. Noe coauthored a publication for the chemical Corps in 1949 entitled "Some relationships of structure to biological activity in the nitrogen mustards and related compounds." May be found in Row 3; File Cabinet #19, Drawer #2, Command Historical Office, CBDCOM, Edgewood Arsenal, MD on page 48 under MUSTARD-19. I am still waiting on an appeal of a FOIA request to obtain more information on Dr. Noe.

50 In 1960 he became Chief of the Research and Development Component, in 1962 he became Deputy Chief of Technical Services Division, and 1966-1973 Chief of TSD.

51 CIA Mori ID 17448 dated April 20, 1954, MKULTRA Subproject 5 in Minneapolis, Minnesota with Alden Sears, pg. 30. Trips to Minneapolis were oftentimes extended to cover Detroit, Michigan, see below info from CIA Mori ID 144765

52 A CIA declassified memo from May 5, 1955 states, "Post-hypnotic suggestions reiterated during several sessions of hypnosis have been known to endure for years. A skilled operator with a good subject can not only find out completely about a subject's past; he can cause the subject to re-enact a recruitment, training, briefing, etc. Perhaps less obvious is the possibility of using regression to build a new identity, and in some degree, a changed personality."

53 Hersha, Cheryl and Lynn with Griffis, Ph.D., Dale and Swartz, Ted. Secret Weapons, Two Sisters' Terrifying True Story of Sex, Spies and Sabotage, 52

54 CIA Mori ID 149566 dated November 21, 1951

55 CIA Mori ID 144765, Subject: Report of trip to Minneapolis, Minnesota and Detroit, Michigan, for Artichoke Purposes. The documents says,

15. "On 18 and 19 December 1952, the writer engaged in a series of discussions with (line deleted) Detroit, Michigan, concerning ARTICHOKE and the possible use of (several words deleted) in connection with ARTICHOKE experimentation and research. (Deleted) is a fully cleared consultant to this Agency.

16. In order to clarify and shorten explanations, some of the conversations with (deleted) are reduced to the question and answer form below:

Q: When we last talked (early summer 1952), you felt that deleted was an ideal place to carry out certain experimentation along lines of interest to us."

[56] Hersha op. cit., 40-41

[57] Scheflin and Opton op. cit., 149

[58] CIA Mori ID 140393 dated July 9, 1951

[59] Abel, Allen. Dr. Castaway, Saturday Night Magazine 10 February 2001

Because of the hypnotism, I did not remember at that time any of the experiments that Dr. Sidney Gottlieb had performed on me. This CIA document Mori ID 140394 dated February 25, 1952, seems to clarify that this was what they were aiming at.

“Q: How far do you think individuals could be controlled by hypnosis?

A: Post-hypnotics will last twenty years and will be very strong if re-enforced from time to time.”

61 Eva Mozes Kor, Nazi Experiments as “Viewed by a Survivor of Mengele’s Experiments” as part of When Medicine Went Mad, Bioethics and the Holocaust, edited by Arthur L. Caplan, Humana Press

62 This activity is outlined in Book I of the Church committee report, 388-389. (See Appendix A, 68-69).

63 CIS-1978-S421-1 Project MKULTRA, The CIA’s Program of Research in Behavioral Modification

64 Ibid., 7

65 Hersh, op. cit., 367, taken from an exchange of letters between John McCloy and Allen Dulles. See Mudd Library, Princeton University, March 16, 1950.

66 Containing Communism, Encyclopedia Almanac, 1970 (New York Times), 544.

67 Dulles Brothers, New York Times, April 29, 1966.

Bird op. cit., 362

69 Ibid., 364

70 Ibid., 369-371

71 Simpson op. cit., 93

72 Ibid., 47-49

73 Grose, Peter. Gentleman Spy, The Life of Allen Dulles, 1994, 295

74 Bird op. cit., 289

75 Ibid., 302-304

76 Ibid., 459

77 Ibid., 384, 411

78 Ibid., 710

79 Ibid., 434

80 Collier, Peter & Horowitz, David. The Rockefellers: An American Dynasty, Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 1976, 272-273

81 Loftus, John. The Belarus Secret, Paragon House, 1982, vii

82 Ibid., xi-xii

83 Ibid., 140

84 CIA Mori Id 17488, June 1958, pg. 30, Subproject 86

85 Scheflin, Alan W. and Opton Jr., Edward M. The Mind Manipulators, Paddington Press LTD, 1978, 145

86 Hersh op. cit., 179

87 Final Report of the Senate Select Committee to Study Governmental Operations with respect to Intelligence Activities, S. Rep. No. 94-755, 94th Cong., 2d Session. Book I, 1976, 385-86.

88 Taylor, Brice. Starshine: One Woman's Valiant Escape from Mind Control, 1995 USD$20.00 Brice Taylor Trust, PO Box 655, Landrum, SC 29356, USA

89 http://www.nexusmagazine.com//pegfile2.html, Nexus Magazine, Volume 4, #4 (June-July 1997). PO Box 30, Mapleton Old 4560 Australia. See Volume 4, #3 (April-May 1997) for the first half of the interview

90 Hersh op. cit., 366

91 Ibid., 368

92 "Jason and the "McNamara Fence" The most detailed public account of Jason's contribution to the Vietnam War is contained in the Pentagon Papers: the 1966 Jason summer study which gave birth to a new form of technological warfare, now known as the automated, or electronic battlefield.

93 Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights of the Committee on the Judiciary US Senate, (1976) Surveillance Technology Policy and Implications: An Analysis and Compendium of Materials, 1036.

94 Kevles*,* Daniel J. The Physicists, Alfred A. Knopf, Inc. 1971

95 Breggin*,* Peter. Toxic Psychiatry, St. Martin's Press, New York 1991, 190-201

96 Testimony given by John Gittinger on August 3, 1977 before the Ninety-Fifth Congress (CIS-1978-S421-1) pg. 59

97 Tyner, Arlene. Mind -Control Part 1: Canadian and US Survivors Seek Justice, PROBE Magazine, March-April, 2000

20 November 1945 Memorandum To: Brigadier General Wm. L. Mitchell, General Secretary for the International Military Tribunal. In response to request of the Tribunal that the defendant Rudolf Hess be examined, the undersigned psychiatrists examined Rudolf Hess on November 15th and November 19th, 1945, in his cell in the Military Prison in Nuremberg. The following examinations were made: physical, neurological and psychological. Signed by Dr. D. Ewen Cameron, Professor of Psychiatry, McGill University; Col. Paul L. Schroeder, A US Neuropsychiatric Consultant; Dr. Jean Delay, Professor of Psychiatry at the Faculty of Medicine in Paris; Dr. Nolan D. C. Lewis, Professor Psychiatry, Columbia University

98 Turner, J. C. Anatomy of a Public Interest Case Against the CIA, http://www.radix.net/~jcturner/anat-1.html

99 Schrag*,* Peter. Mind Control, Pantheon Books, 1978

100 Ibid., 159

101 The U.S. Army also sponsored work on stress and sodium amytal, an anti-fear drug at the Allan Memorial Institute during this same time period, (pg. 262 of In the Sleep Room)

102 CIA Mori ID 17461

103 Ritter, Malcom. Citizen Patriot, February 12, 2001, The Associated Press

104 http://tis.eh.doe.gov/ohre/multimedia/photos/bnl/index.html

105 CIA Mori ID 190883

106 CIA Mori ID 17486, Subproject 84-29, 1950-1967

107 CIA Mori ID 17468

108 http://www.radix.net/~jcturner/anat-1.html

109 Other Mental Health Project Grants awarded to Dr. Cameron by the Department of National Health and Welfare were

Project #604-5-11, The Effect of Senescence on Resistance to Stress, $195,388, 50-57

Project #604-5-13, Research Studies on EEG and Electrophysiology, $60,353, 50-57

Project#604-5-14, Support for a Behavioral Laboratory, $17,875, 50-54

Project #604-5-76, A Study of the Effect of Nucleic Acid Upon Memory Impairment in the Aged, $18,000, 59-63

Collins op. cit., pg. 189, #604-5-432 A Study of Factors Which Promote or Retard Personality Change in Individuals Exposed to Prolonged Repetition of Verbal Signals, $57,750, 61-64

110 Application for Grant to Study the Effects Upon Human Behavior of the Repetition of Verbal Signals, January 21, 1957. Friends of McGill University, Inc., Box 533, Hempstead, New York, N.Y., Secretary, Mrs. Ernest Rossiter

111 Collins op. cit., 258

112 CIS-1978-S421-1, Pg. 56

113 http://www.radix.net/~jcturner/anat-1.html

114 In 1964 President Johnson had a Senior Advisory Group organized by McGeorge Bundy. They were also known as the "Wise Old Men," the "Usual Suspects," or the "WOMs." Some of the members were John McCloy, Dean Acheson, Averell Harriman, Cyrus Vance, George Ball, Henry Cabot Lodge, Douglas Dillon, Robert Murphy and several military elders. Taft op. cit., 231

115 Hersch, Seymour. The Dark Side of Camelot, Little Brown and Company, 1997, 186-191

116 Ibid., 194-195

117 Bucholtz, Chris. Thought Control A Step Nearer, Flight International, Lexis-Nexis, May 3, 1995

118 McConnell, James V. Understanding Human Behavior, 1977, Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 475

119 CIA Mori ID 17300, Some Psychoenergetic Devices by (deleted) RE Kirlian Photography Acupuncture, and Telekinesis.

120 CIA Mori ID 146195

121 Paranormal Phenomena—Briefing on a Net Assessment Study, P.T. Van Dyke and M. L. Juncosa, January 1973, A working note prepared for the Advanced Research Projects Agency.

122 Rifat, Turan. Nexus Magazine, Oct-Nov 1996, Remote Viewing, the ESP of Espionage

123 Dr. Krippner would later write the book Human Possibilities: Mind Exploration in the U.S.S.R. and Eastern Europe

124 CIA Mori ID 173512

125 CIA Mori ID 173694

126 Gris, Henry and Dick, William. The New Soviet Psychic Discoveries, Prentice-Hall, 1978, 273

127 CIA Mori ID 17461

128 CIA Mori ID 173513

129 Gris and Dick op. cit., 272

130 Ibid., 275

131 Russell, Christine. Are Computer Hookups to the Brain Next? The Ultimate in Technology Predicted, Washington Star. (1976, Feb. 23).

132 Dr. Shafica Karagulla worked as consultant psychiatrist in association with Dr. Penfield in 1952. A few years later, she did extensive research of patients' auras as seen by clairvoyants and coordinated these observations with medical diagnoses (see Breakthrough to Creativity, Los Angeles; DeVorss). Dr. Grad of McGill also did experiments that showed the healer Oskar Estabany speeding the healing of wounded mice with the laying on of hands. (Handbook of PSI Discoveries, pg. 216) I do not know how these were funded.

133 Corroborated by J. Turner in discovery for the law suit against the CIA by Canadian survivors, http://www.radix.net/~jcturner/anat-2.html

134 McConnell op. cit., 180. Also Project files listed in MNI Archives as Conditions of Attitude Change in Individuals D72-94-85-01-$34,250 and D77-94-85-01-$195,388

135 1932 was the same year that the Rockefeller Foundation gave an appropriation to the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute in Germany for brain research. This is the same institute that Josef Mengele would provide experimental materials from Auschwitz twins (see Chapter on Josef Mengele).

136 Penfield, Wilder. The Difficult Art of Giving, 1967

137 In 1992 before having any personal knowledge of MKULTRA, Dr. Ewen Cameron, or Wilder Penfield, I painted a picture of a Royal Canadian Mounted Police Officer driving a buggy. I had no idea at the time what it meant, just that it was extremely important. I often drew and painted scenes from my abuse without knowing their meanings till such time as my alters revealed the information. In an affidavit presented to the lawyers for the Canadian survivors of Dr. Ewen Cameron's brainwashing experiments, Dr. Omond M. Solandt, Chairman of the Canadian Defense Research Board from 1947 through 1956, sheds light on my memories of the RCMP. He was prepared to testify that during the 1950's the United States Central Intelligence Agency had a resident representative at the United States Embassy in Ottawa who was publicly introduced as such. The CIA representative was liaison with the RCMP. The RCMP made formal information exchanges with the CIA, and the CIA and Canada exchanged all research information of mutual interest working in Canada, including the CIA.

138 Penfield op. cit., 119

139 Collins op. cit., pg. 57 from Robert CIA Morison's Rockefeller Foundation diary on April 10, 1954

140 Artichoke documents March 21, 1955, May 19, 1955, and April 1955

141 Lilly, M.D, John C. Man and Dolphin, Doubleday & Company, Inc., 1961, 68

142 Ibid., 293

143 Dr. Lilly was not the only one experimenting with this technique. In 1955, he and Dr. J. Roe, V. Mountcastle, and L. Kruger, Johns Hopkins Medical School; Drs. C. Woolsey and J. Hind, University of Wisconsin; Dr. Karl Pribram, Institute of Living, Hartford Conn.; Dr. Leonard Malis, Mt. Sinai Hospital, New York City experimented on Dolphins at Marineland.

144 Lewis, H. Jefferson. Something Hidden, A Biography of Wilder Penfield, Webcom Limited in Canada, 1951, 270-272

145 Ibid., 274, Symposium in Montreal entitled "Mankind in the Atomic Age"

146 Ibid., 256

147 Ibid., 141

148 Scheflin and Opton, op. cit., 268 and Leksell, Lars. Stereotaxic and Radio Surgery, An Operative System, 1971

149 Squire, Larry R. Memory and Brain, ISBN-0-19-504208-5, Chapter 6-The Penfield Studies

150 In his autobiography The Scientist, John C. Lilly records a conversation he had with the director of the National Institute of Mental Health in 1953. The director asked Lilly to brief the CIA, FBI, NSA, and the various military intelligence services on his work using electrodes to stimulate directly the pleasure and pain centers of the brain. Lilly said it was a very dangerous area and he was reluctant to do the briefing. He also said, "Dr. Antoine Remond, using our techniques in Paris, has demonstrated that this method of stimulation of the brain can be applied to the human without the help of the neurosurgeon; he is doing it in his office in Paris without neurosurgical supervision. This means that anybody with the proper apparatus can carry this out on a person covertly, with no external signs that electrodes have been used on that person. I feel that if this techniques got into the hands of a secret agency, they would have total control over a human being and be able to change his beliefs extremely quickly, leaving little evidence of what they had done." Pg. 91 Ten days later he gave the briefing

151 Ibid., 216

152 Jeffrey, Francis and Lilly, M.D, John C. John Lilly, So Far, Jeremy P. Tarcher, Inc., 1990, 60

153 Scheflin and Opton, op. cit., 508

154 Sheila Ostrander and Lynn Schroeder, Handbook of PSI Discoveries, Berkley Publishing Corp, 1974, 195

155 Ibid., 291

156 Schnabel, Jim. TINKER, TAILOR, SOLDIER, The Independent (London) August 27, 1995

157 Major-General Albert N. Stubblebine III head of INSCOM (the Army's Intelligence and Security Command) made frequent trips to the Monroe Institute. It was a privately owned center for investigation into the paranormal near Charlottesville, Virginia. They used an audio process known as "hemi-sync" to help induce deep altered states, which led in some cases to out-of-body experiences.

158 Durham, Perceptions of a Paranormal Subject, The Journal of Parapsychology, June 1997

159 Over the course of 17 years, the program was also known as Centerlane and Sunstreak; later becoming Stargate under the Defense Intelligence Agency. Public exposure of the program was disclosed as a result of the American Institutes for Research report dated September 29, 1995, which was delivered unclassified to the U.S. Congress in November 1995. This report was compiled at the request of the CIA, which had the task of evaluating the program prior to assuming management authority of the program from the Defense Intelligence Agency.

160 Interview with Mike Siegel during the radio program, Coast to Coast on July 19, 2000, Cooper discusses his book A Leap of Faith: An Astronaut's Journey into the Unknown

161 Sponsored by the Center for Abuse Recovery & Empowerment, The Psychiatric Institute of Washington, D.C., June 25, 1992, Alexandria, Virginia

162 New York Times: March 23, 2001, National News Briefs; Sirhan Sirhan Is Denied Parole for the 11th Time, (AP) Sirhan Sirhan, the convicted assassin of Senator Robert F. Kennedy, was denied parole today, and his lawyer set forth the theory that Mr. Sirhan had been "hypnotically programmed" to kill Kennedy. After an hour-long hearing at Corcoran State Prison, the three-member parole panel found Mr. Sirhan, 57, unsuitable for release because he refused to take responsibility.

163 Hersha, Griffis and Swartz op. cit., 88

Caplan op. cit., 278

165 Ibid., 293

166 Ashman, op. cit., 122-123

167 The eggs he harvested could be explained by another development. It was discovered that a whole nucleus containing an entire set of chromosomes could be taken from a cell, and injected into a fertilized egg whose own nucleus has been removed. The division of the egg brings about the division of the nucleus, and the descendant nuclei can, in turn, be injected into eggs. After several such transfers, the nuclei may be capable of directing the development of the eggs into complete new organisms genetically identical to the organism from which the original nucleus was taken. This cloning technique is in theory capable of producing large numbers of genetically identical individuals.

168 Nature Genetics report published in the June 1, 1999, issue of the Journal

169 Aziz, Phillip. Doctors of Death, Book 2, Ferni Publishers, Geneva 1976, 243

170 Posner, Gerald and Ware, John. Mengele: The Complete Story, McGraw Hill, 1986

171 Aarons, Mark and Loftus, John. Unholy Trinity, St. Martins Press, 1991. Loftus cites the document as appearing in the Appendix of German chemical warfare officers. An asterisk denotes that Mengele was in custody at the time of the British CIOS report dated 1945, 272 and 341.

172 Ibid., 272, Loftus cites information taken from Mengele: The complete Story, 66-9, 70

173 Posner op. cit., 84

174 Blum op. cit., 115

175 Aarons and Loftus, op cit., 206. We know that in June 1947 the US and British Governments had issued a top secret document, FAN 757 agreeing that all Nazi screening would be done by a Joint Review Committee. The US Political Adviser in Leghorn, Italy wrote to the State Department discussing the screening of Nazi's. "Screeners will notify Vatican names and particulars of unacceptables as they appear. It seems possible that this arrangement may result in out shipment to Argentina of many individuals who may screen Black or Grey." Grey refers to Nazi collaborators, Black refers to Nazi war criminals.

176 Hersh, Burton. The Old Boys, The American Elite and the Origins of the CIA, 1992, Charles Scribner's Sons, Macmillan Publishing Company

177 Aarons and Loftus, op cit., 234, 250. DDU had been handling payment to Gehlen's fugitives. Barbie was running underground SS networks for Gehlen.

178 Ibid., 260

179 Ibid., 250

180 Simpson, op. cit., 121

181 Ibid., 100-101, 112, 115

182 Arthur E. Rowse, Gladio: The Secret U.S. War to Subvert Italian Democracy

183 Ibid., 109

184 Hersh, The Old Boys op. cit., 442

185 Ibid., 444

186 Aarons and Loftus, op cit., 269

187 Loftus, op. cit., 88-89

188 Ibid., 117

189 Constantine, op. cit., 85

190 Lee, Martin A., The CIA's worst-kept secret, Newly declassified files confirm United States collaboration with Nazis.

191 Blum, op. cit., 87-91

192 Ibid., 111

193 Secretary Dulles also worked with Alger Hiss at the Carnegie Endowment in 1946. Jeff Broadwater, "Eisenhower and the anti-Communist Crusade, 113, 115

194 Hersh op. cit., 159

195 Blum op. cit., 114

196 Hersh, Seymour. The Dark Side of Camelot, Little, Brown and Company, N.Y., 158

197 Ibid., 159-160

198 Picture of Josef Mengele taken in 1956 in Buenos Aires from his passport

199 Blum op. cit., 115

200 http://www.cia.gov/csi/studies/97unclass/naziwar.html

201 Ibid., 86-133

202 Hersh op. cit., 507

203 Hersh op. cit., 507

204 Bellant, Russ. September 1988, Washington Jewish Week, Old Nazis, the New Right, and the Republican Party

205 Listed as contracts to which $1,000,000 was disbursed over five years in effect in 1953 were the following:

Illegible Memorial Institute (Dr. Williams), Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute (Dr. Gregor), Columbia University (Dr. Slenez), B.F. Goodrich Co. (Dr. Stevens), Harvard University (Dr. Watts), Indiana University (Drs. Thacher, Robinson), John Hopkins University (Drs. Illegible, Groh, Richter)

Lovelace Foundation (Dr. Reif) – (A note about Dr. Lovelace, Dr. William Randolf Lovelace II, former commander of the U.S. Air Force Aero Medical Laboratory at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base. In 1951 Lovelace won a $25,000 contract with the Atomic Energy Commission for a “blast and shock biology” research program in which animals were killed in atomic weapons tests. Lovelace’s radiation experiments were conducted at Kirtland Air Force Base and Los Alamos in New Mexico. In 1954 Dr. Ulrich Luft was chosen to chair the Department of Physiology. He had worked at the U.S. Air Force’s School of Aviation Medicine at Randolph Field in San Antonio, Texas, where he had held the position of Associate Professor of Physiology since 1947. Prior to his being brought to the U.S. under Project Paperclip, Dr. Luft served as the Third Reich’s chief of Aviation Physiology at the Berlin Aeromedical Research Institute from 1942-1945 under Dr. Hubertus Strughold.

> Documents captured after the war tell of a top-secret meeting held in Nuremberg in Oct. 1942 at which Dr. Luft and other high-level Nazis discussed the results of their criminal experiments. In one experiment, designed to study the "effects of freezing on human beings," the subjects were reportedly immersed in freezing water with thermometers in their orifices. "The subjects howl frightfully when they freeze," one scientist commented.

http://www.new-west-research.org/Animal_Research/)

Massachusetts General Hospital (Dr. Frazier), Medical College of South Carolina (Dr. Illegible), Medical College of Virginia (Dr. Hoag), National Opinion Research Counter (Dr. Marks), Southern Research Institute (Drs. Montgomery, Skipper), Tufts College (Dr. Roeder or Boeder), University of Colorado, Medical School (Dr. Holmes), University of Delaware (Dr. Clark), University of Florida (Dr. Lauter), University of Illinois (Drs. Gordon, Prosset), University of Maryland (Dr. Greenbill, Lindenberg), University of Michigan (Dr. Seevers), University of Pennsylvania (Drs. Betweiler, Illigible), University of Pittsburgh (Drs. Bucksborn, Hill), University of Utah (Dr. Jager), University of Virginia (Dr. Illegible), University of Wisconsin (Dr. Illegible), New York Psychiatric Institute (Dr. Hoch)

206 Loftus op. cit., 116-117

207 Posner and Ware, op. cit.

208 His known address on December 30, 1959 in Buenos Aires was No. 968 Vertiz Street, Olivo F.C.N.G.M.B. where he had been living under his own name. He had already returned to Paraguay and adopted Paraguayan nationality on November 27, 1959, but then had returned to Buenos Aires.

209 Posner op. cit., 102

210 Katherine Sullivan is Kathy. She is founder of PARC-VRAMC which is a non-profit organization set up to educate the public about sadistic abuse, ritualized torture, and invasive non-consensual experimentation. The web address is http://www.parc-vramc.tierranet.com/. Her book detailing some of her experiences is MK, and may be ordered at the following address. K. Sullivan (PO Box 1328, Soddy Daisy, TN 37384), USA, 1998 (USD$18.00)

211 Ashman op. cit., 246

212 Littman, Sol. “Aftermath”-from War Criminal on Trial-Rauca of Kaunas, Excerpted in part

213 Blumenthal, Ralph, The New York Times, May 11, 1985, Late City Final Edition, Three Nations Joining To Hunt Mengele

214 ibid

215 According to John Loftus, Justice Dept. lawyer, Allen Dulles used Red Cross passports to smuggle Barbie and other embarrassing Nazis out of Europe, see pg. xvii of The Belarus Secret.

216 Ashman, op. cit., 120

217 Lagnado and Dekel, op. cit., 159-251

218 Blumenthal, Ralph, op. cit.

219 Jackson Citizen Patriot, Thursday, May 4, 2000, Argentine leader apologizes for sheltering Nazis, Buenos, Aires, Argentina (AP)

220 Altman Jr., Joseph. Jackson Citizen Patriot, Thursday April 20, 2000. Sterling Heights Man was Nazi Guard, Authorities Say, The Associated Press

221 The report is entitled U.S. and Allied Wartime and Postwar Relations and Negotiations with Argentina, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, and Turkey on Looted Gold and German External Assets and U.S. Concerns About the Fate of the Wartime Ustasha Treasury.

222 January 13, 1995, RE: Ethics Oral History Project--Preliminary Findings, http://www.gwu.edu/~nsarchiv/radiation/dir/mstreet/commeet/meet1

Welsome, Eileen. The Plutonium Files, America's Secret Medical Experiments in the Cold War, Dial Press, New York, 327

224 Much of the Data and Statistics otherwise not noted derived from Involuntary Human Scientific Experimentation prepared by Morton Sklar, Director, World Organization Against Torture USA, http://www.woatusa.org/projects/CATreport/science.htm

225 US Government, Interagency Working Group on Human Radiation Experiments, "Building Public Trust: Actions to Respond to the Report of the Advisory Committee on Human Radiation Experiments " (DOE/EH-0532), March 1997

226 Commission on Life Sciences Review of the Hanford Thyroid Disease Study Draft Final Report (2000), National Academy Press, http://books.nap.edu/books/

227 DOE_DATE- 02/09/1995, DOE_SITE- HUMAN RADIATION EXPERIMENTS: The Department of Energy Roadmap to the Story and the Records, DOE_DOC_TYPE- HUMAN_RADIATION_EXPERIMENTS (DOE/EH-0445), DOE_SECTION- DOE Predecessor Agencies and Human Radiation Experiments: A Headquarters Overview

228 Welsome op. cit., 247

229 Excerpts from US Department of Energy Advisory Committee on Human Radiation Experiments (1996). Final Report. Chapter 10. Atomic Veterans: Human Experimentation in Connection with Bomb Tests, http://nattie.eh.doe.gov/systems/hrad/chap10.html

230 Final Report on the Records Search for Human Radiation Experiments at the US Army Chemical and Biological Defense Command

231 Gallagher, Carole. American Ground Zero: The Secret Nuclear War, 1993

232 History Channel, January 15, 2001, History Undercover: Declassified: Human Experimentation

233 Welsome, op. cit., 268

234 Ibid., 489

235 Ibid., 442

236 Ibid., 326-327

237 Ibid., 449

238 Radium Experiment Assessment Project (REAP)-172 Old Orchard Way, Warren, VT 05674. REAP is a project of the Center for Atomic Radiation Studies, Inc. http://www0.delphi.com/carsreap/

239 Welsome op. cit., 466

240 Gentilcore, Colleen. Herald Standard, August 11, 1996 Man Sues Government Over Radiation Experiments Uniontown Pennsylvania

241 Sidney Gottlieb died in March 1999 and preceded Karen in death. Judge DiCarlo died on the morning of April 27, 1999 while presiding over an appeal made by Plaintiff-Appellant Gloria Kronisch, the executrix for the estate of Stanley Glickman. Mr. Glickman originally filed a complaint in 1983 against the United States; Richard Helms, former Director of the Central Intelligence Agency ("CIA"); and Dr. Sidney Gottlieb claiming he was surreptitiously administered LSD· The district court initially granted summary judgment in favor of all defendants, but a panel of this Court vacated and remanded part of that decision. That remanded decision was affirmed by Judge Kimba Wood, who presided over the remaining portions of the trial; including closing summations, the instruction of the jury, and the rendering of the verdict. Sidney's untimely death meant he could not be cross-examined.

242 Welsome op. cit., 220-221

243 The Argonne Cancer Research Hospital was operated by the University of Chicago, which was funded by the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission. References: Okita, G.T., E.J. Plotz, and M.E. Davis. "Placental Transfer of Radioactive Digitoxin in Pregnant Women and its Fetal Distribution." Semiannual Reports to the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission, Vol. 1, Parts 1 6, 1954 to 1956. Chicago: Argonne Cancer Research Hospital, pp. 26 30. The University of Chicago, Office of Legal Counsel, Semiannual Reports of the Argonne Cancer Research Hospital

244 This study was supported by a grant from the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission and previously described in #4 on the original list of 48 experiments released by DOE in June 1994), References:

Middlesworth, L.Van. “Radioactive Iodide Uptake of Normal Newborn Infants.” AMA American Journal of Diseases of Children, Vol. 88, October 1954, 439-442.

245 Previously described in #4 on original 48 experiments released by DOE in June 1994), References: Martmer, E.E., K.E. Corrigan, H.P. Charbeneau, and A. Sosin. “A Study of the Uptake of Iodine (I-131) by the Thyroid of Premature Infants.” AMA American Journal of Diseases of Children, Vol. 17, 1955, 503-509.

246 This study was supported by the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission. Described in #40 on the original list of forty-eight experiments released by DOE in June 1994 References Lushbaugh, C.C. and D.B. Hale. “Clinical Applications of Whole body Counting: A Clinical Comparison of the Absorbability of Ferrous versus Ferric Salts in Normal Human Subjects.” Biological and Medical Research Group of the Health Division Semiannual Report July 1961 June 1962. Los Alamos: Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory, LAMS 2780, 1962, pp. 337-347.

247 Studied jointly by the Veterans Administration Hospital, Omaha, NB, and the Department of Radiology, University of Nebraska, College of Medicine

248 The U.S. Atomic Energy Commission, and the American Cancer Society supported this study and was previously described in #4 on original 48 experiments released by DOE in June 1994. References: Morrison, R.T., J.A. Birkbeck, T.C. Evans, and J.I. Routh. “Radioiodine Uptake Studies Newborn Infants.” Journal of Nuclear Medicine. Vol. 4, 1963, pp.162-166.

249The U.S. Atomic Energy Commission supported this research as described in #19 on the original list of 48 experiments released by DOE in June 1994, Study of the Retention and Excretion of Iodine-131, References: Lushbaugh, C.C., D.B. Hale, and C.R. Richmond. “Clinical Applications of Whole Body Scintillometry. IV. Turnover Rate of Protein-Bound Iodide.” Biological and Medical Research Group of the Health Division Semiannual Report January June 1960. Los Alamos: Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory, LAMS 2455, 1960, pp. 364-371.

250 The research was performed under a contract with the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission. References: Cuddihy, R.G. “Hazard to Man from I-131 in the Environment." Health Physics. Vol. 12, 1966, pp. 1,021-1,025.

251 Excerpts from US Department of Energy Advisory Committee on Human Radiation Experiments (1996). Final Report. http://nattie.eh.doe.gov/systems/hrad/chap12.html

252 Excerpts from US Department of Energy Advisory Committee on Human Radiation Experiments (1996). Final Report. http://nattie.eh.doe.gov/systems/hrad/chap9.html

253 Gary Lee, "The Lifelong Harm to Radiation's Human Guinea Pigs," Washington Post, National Weekly Edition, November 28, 1944, 34

254Excerpts from US Department of Energy Advisory Committee on Human Radiation Experiments (1996). Final Report chap11

255 These experiments were performed under contract with the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission. References: Gamertsfelder, C.C. "Plans and Hazard Analysis for the First Hanford I-131 Field Release Test." Richland, WA: Hanford Atomic Products Operation, Physics and Instruments Laboratory, HW 78312, July 19, 1963. Washington State University Tri-Cities Campus, PNL, DOE Richland Public Reading Room, I-131, Open Shelving. A Handwritten Monthly Report. J.K. Soldat to R.F. Foster. July 1963. Washington State University Tri-Cities Campus, PNL, DOE Richland Public Reading Room, I-131, Open Shelving, PNL 9369 DEL. Monthly Report. Senior Engineer to R.F. Foster. August 23, 1963. Washington State University Tri-Cities Campus, PNL, DOE Richland Public Reading Room, I-131, Open Shelving, PNL 9370.

256 This research was supported by the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission and by a grant from the National Cancer Institute.

References: Meyer L.M., L.M. Schiffer, D.A. White, and E.P. Cronkite. "The Plasma Disappearance of Radioactive Cyanocobalamin: Effect of Prior Administration of Vitamin B12 Analogues." British Journal of Hematology. Vol. 11, No. 3, May 1965, pp. 370 379. Monthly Highlight Report of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies, Medical Division. December 1962. NARA Atlanta Archives, RG 326 68A1096, OR Research Division, Organization and Management 5, Box 400, Folder Organization and Management 8, Reports ORINS

257 Jackson Citizen Patriot, Tuesday, May 9, 2000, AP, Honolulu, “Marshall Islanders get $341 million for nuke-test hardships”

258 The guidelines for the release of information of records through the FOIA states: “In processing a request, the Agency shall decline to confirm or deny the existence or nonexistence of any responsive records whenever the fact of their existence or nonexistence is itself classified under Executive Order 12958 or revealing of intelligence sources and methods protected pursuant to section 103(c)(5) of the National Security Act of 1947. In such circumstances, the Agency, in the form of a final written response, shall so inform the requester and advise of his or her right to an administrative appeal.” My FOIA for personal information is in appeal with the Agency Release Panel of the CIA. It has been over two years since my original request for information. I was told there were 315 appeals before mine, and no way of knowing when my appeal would be heard.

259Biological and Chemical Experiments

Material not otherwise noted is from a government press release on mustard gas which can be found at http://www.va.gov/pressrel/99mustd.htm

A source (The Rats BBS-Vet Link #72) that should be consulted for extensive material on this subject is http://personalpages.tds.net/~kknowlto/. It is a site committed to the military personnel who participated in the US Army's atmospheric testing of CBR warfare agents, striving to aid veterans exposed to dangerous substances without their full knowledge of the consequences or informed consent.

260 http://www.rense.com/politics5/hist.htm

261 http://home.earthlink.net/~bkonop/GermIncidents2.html

262 Veterans at Risk: The Health Effects of Mustard Gas and Lewisite, Pechura, C.M. & Rall, D.P. (Eds.) Institute of Medicine, National Academy Press, Washington, DC, 1993, pgs. 3-4, 6-8, 50-52, 65, 224-226

263 Pugliese, David. The Ottawa Citizen 22 April 2001, PANAMA - Allies WWII Tested Chemical Weapons

264 Federal Register, "Claims Based on Chronic Effects of Exposure to Vesicant Agents," 41,497-42,500 (August 18, 1994)

265HistoryofChemical and Biological Warfare: An American Perspective

266 Aug 1946 Name changed from Chemical Warfare Center to Army Chemical Center. Jan 1963 Name changed from Army Chemical Center to Edgewood Arsenal. July 1971 Edgewood Arsenal discontinued as a separate installation and designated Edgewood Area, Aberdeen Proving Ground.

267 US Army Chemical Corps, Summary of Major Events and Problems, FY58. Army Chemical Center, Md.: US Army Chemical Center Historical Center; Mar 1959: pg. 100

268 Ibid., 129-130

269 Testimony of Dr. D. A. Osguthorpe, veterinarian and consultant to Utah State Department of Agriculture, hearing before the Subcommittee on Conservation and Natural Resources, Committee on Government Operations, U.S. House of Representatives, "Environmental Dangers of Open-Air Testing of Lethal Chemicals," May 20-21, 1969, 63-66.

270 Ibid., 64-65

271 DAIG-IN 21-75, Use of Volunteers in Chemical Agent Research, by the Inspector General Department of the Army, March 1975

272 US Army Chemical Corps, Summary of Major Events and Problems, FY57. Army Chemical Center, Md.: US Army Chemical Center Historical Center; Oct 1957:

273 Scheflin, op. cit., 172

274 DAIG-In 21-75, report on Use of Volunteers in Chemical Agent Research by the Inspector General, Department of the Army, 1975, pg 156

275 A declassified document, dated November 2, 1977 was sent to the CIA's Office of Legal Council. It recounts the claim that the wife of an employee of the Inspector General's Office had previously been married from 1955 until 1960 to a CIA employee. "In the summer of 1956, she accompanied her husband to the farm of her husband's supervisor for dinner, drinks and wine. She believes her husband's supervisor worked for Dr. Gottlieb who was Chief of the Technical Service Staff Chemical Division and heavily involved in MKULTRA activities. Her next recollection is receiving electric shock treatments at George Washington University Hospital for some time, followed by a convalescent period of several weeks at home. She then recalls being referred by her husband's supervisor to a friend of the supervisor's at the "Boston Psychiatric Hospital." She and her husband, line deleted, went to Boston where she entered that Hospital. Both her husband and his supervisor visited her there and she recalls a strange walk out of doors with the latter. She remembers taking various tests at the Hospital." It sounds very much like this poor woman was given a cocktail laced with LSD or some other substance. The document goes on to say that the Assistant General Counsel had been able to confirm from Agency records that the woman's husband was in fact employed by the Agency and he worked under Dr. Gottlieb. The document goes on to say, "For your information, the deleted was involved in six subprojects of Project MKULTRA from 1952 until 1961, all of which appear to have involved testing of LSD and other substances on human subjects."

276 http://www.gwu.edu/~nsarchiv/radiation/dir/mstreet/commeet/meet1 Staff memorandum or other working document prepared for the members of the Advisory Committee on Human Radiation Experiments

277 Ibid., 152-166

278 CIA Mori ID 17755 dated 1/1/57.

279 DAIG-IN 21-75 pg. 147

280 Summary of testimony, Lloyd B. Gamble, LSD test subject, hearing before the Subcommittee on Administrative Law and Governmental Relations, Committee on the Judiciary, U.S. House of Representatives, "Government-Sponsored Tests on Humans and Possible Compensation for People Harmed in the Tests," February 2, 1994.

281 Ibid.

282 Honoré, Carl. "Norway, Children Of Nazis", September 11, 2000, National Post, OSLO

283 Piller, C. & Yamamoto, K.R. Gene Wars, Military Control Over the New Genetic Technologies, Beech Tree Books, William Morrow, New York, 1988, 44-45, 53.

284USAMRIID's MEDICAL MANAGEMENT OF BIOLOGICAL CASUALTIES HANDBOOK, Fourth Edition February 2001

285US Army Chemical Corps. Summary of Major Events and Problems, FY1961–62. Army Chemical Center, Md.: US

286Smart JK. History of Chemical and Biological Warfare Fact Sheets. Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.: US Army Chemical and Biological Defense Command; 1996. Special Study 50. Not cleared for public release. Pg. 131

287Declassified document Department of Defense, d2682

288Ibid., 55

289 US Army Chemical Corps. Summary of Major Events and Problems, FY58. Army Chemical Center, Md.: US Army Chemical Center Historical Center; Mar 1959

290Toxilogical Assessment of the Army's Zinc Cadmium Sulfide Dispersion Tests, available from the National Academy Press at 1-800-624-6242

291*Journal of Industrial Hygiene*, May 1932

292*Atmospheric Environment*, vol. 7

293 Cole, Leonard A. Clouds of Secrecy: The Army's Germ Warfare Tests over Populated Areas, Rowman & Littlefield, Publishers, 1988

294 Davidson, Lee, Washington Correspondent, Secrets at Sea: Cloud of Secrecy Lifting on Dugway Navy's Tests of Germ and Chemical Agents in the Pacific During Vietnam War, Sunday, October 22, 1995

295 The Navy Liberty Ship Sailor

296US Army Chemical Corps. Summary of Major Events and Problems, FY56. Army Chemical Center, Md.: US Army Chemical Center Historical Center; Nov 1956

297Department of the Army. US Army Activity in the US Biological Warfare Programs. Washington, DC: HQ, DA; 1977. Draft.

298 See Use of Volunteers in Chemical Agent Research, DAIG-IN 21-75 for complete details of projects.

[299] http://www.raven1.net/declarat.htm

Index

A

Aberdeen Proving Ground, American Institute for Research,
49,78, 132, 175, 183, 191, 230, 180, 197, 221
232, 236 Angleton, Jesus James, 72
Abramson, Dr. Harold, 22, 49, Arctic Aeromedical Laboratory,
70 151
Abreaction, xviii, 48 ARPA, 40, 57
ACHES, xx, 144, 145 Argonne Cancer Research
ACHRE, 127, 139, 141, 211, Hospital, 149, 228
212 Assassination kit, 55
Adirondack Mountains, 81 Avon Park, xv, 188
Allan Memorial Institute, 46, 217
Citizens Call, 145
B Clinton School, 193
Columbia University, 217, 224
B. F. Goodrich Co., 224 Cone, Bill, 63
Baldwin, Dr. Maitland, 61 Cornell University, 45, 150, 197
Barbie, Klaus, 8, 74, 75, 92, 96, Council on Foreign Relations, 32
223, 226
Baylor University, 140, 181, 197 D
Bekhtereva Brain Institute, 58,
59 DARPA, Defense Advanced bilocation, 66 Research Project, 50
Blauer, Harold, 10, 79, 179 DDU, Document Disposal Unit,
Bloodstone, 72, 73 72, 223
Bolivia, 8, 75, 92, 96 Dengue fever, xv
Boston Psychiatric Hospital, Derma-Optics, 57
180, 231 Deseret Test Center in Utah, brain concussion, 29 193-194
Brainwashing, xvi, 46, 47, 53, Desert Rock, 135, 137

54, 62, 63, 70, 82, 83, 132, 184, Disassociation, 22
212, 220 Disassociative states, xvii, xviii
Brookhaven National Donovan, William, 4, 32, 33
Laboratory, 167 Dr. Black, viii, 10, 20, 21, 49, Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute, 69, 70, 74, 84-90
79, 224 Dr. Green, 69
Brooks Air Force Base, xi Dr. Gregor, 79, 93
Dr. Noe, 79, 214
C Dr. Swartz, 69
Dr. White, 69
Cameron, Dr. D. Ewen, 46-54, Draganovic, Krunoslav, 8, 74
58, 69, 217, 218, 220, Dugway Proving Ground, 172,
Camp David, 82 176, 184, 192, 194, 233
Camp McCoy, 138 Dulles, Allen, xvi, 4, 9, 27-30,
Camp Sibert, Ala, 172 32-34, 38, 39, 46, 72-74, 77,
Camp Stoneman, 138 108, 110, 213-215, 226
Chicago Lying-in Hospital, 149 Dulles, John Foster, 9, 30, 76, 224
Child pornography, 12, 67
Church, Frank, 38, 215 E
CIC
Counter-Intel. Corps, 8, 72, 74, 75, 97 Edgewood Arsenal, xii, 10, 49
79, 172, 176, 177, 179, 181, 183, Hanford,
184, 214, 233 156, 159-161, 163,
Eichmann, Adolf, 77, 83, 91 165, 229
ESP, xvii, 20, 58, 59, 68, 212, Harlem City Hospital, 167
219 Harper Hospital, 150
Estabrooks, George, 49 Harriet Lane Home for Invalid
Eugenics, 9, 76 Children, 144
extrasensory perception. Harvard University, 197, 224
See ESP. Hebb, Dr. Donald, 59-61
Heller, Dr., 155-156
F Helms, Richard xvi 39, 105, 124,

212, 227
Fernald School, xiii, 211 Hess, Rudolf, 46, 31, 217
flashblindness, xii, 135-137 Hinkle, Lawrence, 49
Ford Foundation, 33 Hoch, Dr. 79, 227
Fort Benning, GA, 184 Holmesburg State Prison, 177,
Fort Bragg, NC, 184 180, 198, 201
Fort Detrick, 29, 187-189 Human Ecology Society, 1, 2,
Fort Drum, 189 46, 49, 53
Fort Holabird, 184 human guinea pigs, xiii-xv, xix,
Fort Hunt, 72 35, 84, 101, 102, 132, 144, 145,
Fort Leavenworth, 172 172, 185, 195, 229
Fort McClellan, 79, 177, 184 Human Radiation Experiments,
Fort Terry, 188 viii, ix, xv, xx, 69, 126-128,
Frei, Eduardo, 33, 59 139, 140, 168, 171, 211, 224, 226

G I

Gehlen, General Reinhard, 4, 72, Indiana University, 167, 180, 198
77, 213, 223 Institute for Advanced Study, 33
Gittinger, John, 1, 53, 212, 217 integration, 43, 48
Goering, Hermann, 31, 75, 76 interrogation techniques, xvi, 49,
Gottlieb, Dr. Sidney, 18, 19, 22, 51, 53, 71, 118-120, 183, 212-13
38, 54, 55, 62, 68, 72-74, 92, 94, Ionia State Prison, 1
Great Lakes Naval Training Iron Guard, 64-67
Center, 173

J
H
Joint Chiefs of Staff,
Hammond, Dr. Corydon, 67 2, 3

Jackson, C. D., 33, 34 Medical College of Virginia, 225
Jason’s, 40, 41, 216 Mengele, Josef, xix, 8-10, 21,
JIOA, Joint Intelligence 26, 49, 50, 69-72, 74, 75, 77-83,
Objective Agency, 3, 86, 90-97, 99, 219, 223
Johns Hopkins, 224 Mind control, xv-xvii, 10, 27, 28, 37, 38, 46, 47, 65-67, 92, 93, 144,
K 145
Mitchell, John, 39
Kaiser Wilhelm Institute, 9, 22, Mittelwerk, 97
70, 71 Montreal Neurological Institute,
Kallmann, Dr. Franz, 9 MNI, 59, 61
Kennan, George, 32 Mount Hood, 93
Kety, Seymour, 49
Kirkpatrick, Lyman, 38, 123 N
Kissinger, Henry, 33, 39, 40, 74
Korry, Edward, 39, 40 National Cancer Institute, 133,
Kulagina, Nina, 50, 56 229
National Committee for Free
L Europe, 72
National Committee for
Lilly, Dr. John, 61, 62, 64, 65, Radiation Victims, 145, 169
221, 222 National Institute of Health, 61,
Long Island Jewish Hospital, 169 145
Lovelace Foundation, 224 National Opinion Research, 2275
Los Alamos 128, 135, 150, 224 Naval Research Lab in Washington, D.C., 173
M Neverland, 19
New Jersey Association of Malaxa, Nicolae, 75-78 Atomic Veterans, 138
Manchurian Candidate, xvii, 47, 68 New York State Psychiatric Mao Tse-tung, 54 Institute, 9, 10, 179, 199
Marshall Islands, 5, 131, 168 New York University, xiv, 199
Massachusetts General Hospital, 225 Nixon, Richard, 8, 34, 38-40, 74

McCloy, John, 4, 30-33, 40, 75-77, 171, 194
74, 215, 218 North American Aviation, 180,
McCone, John, 40 199
McGill University, 46, 50, 52, Nuclear Claims Trust Fund, 168
59, 60, 217-219
Medical College of South O
Carolina, 225
Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Plowshare Program, 129
Studies, 140, 167, 229 Point Lay, 153
ODESSA, 92 Population Council, 9, 76
Office of Policy Coordination, Positron Emitter, 51
OPC, 32, 71-74, 78, 213 President Eisenhower, 30, 33
Office of Research and 34, 38, 55, 80, 159
Development, 57 President Truman, 2, 3, 5, 7, 159
Offie, Carmel, 71-74, 78 Project Grillflame, 67
Operation Argus, 127 Project MKNAOMI, 29
Operation Buster-Jangle, Project Stargate, 67
135, Psychic abilities, 19, 20, 54, 66,
Operation Crossroads, 131 67
Operation Cut Holes and Sink psychokinesis, 58, 66
Em (CHASE), 175 Psychological Assessment
Operation Davy Jones Locker, Associates, 53
175 Psychological Strategy Board,
Operation Fitzwilliam, 159 33, 34
Operation Paperclip, xi, xii, 2, psychotronic generator, 66
3, 72, 75, 97, 211, 212, 224 Psychotronic Influence System,
Operation Pow-wow, 74 57
Operation Third Chance, 185 psychotronics, 50
Operation Tumbler-Snapper, 135
Operation Whitecoat, 187 R
Operation Wigwam, 128
Orne, Martin, 49 Radiation Exposure
OSS-Office of Strategic Compensation Act, 170

Services, 4, 33, 72, 75, 76, Ratlines 8, 74
92 Raven Rock 82
Red Fire, 19, 50, 54, 56, 102

P Remote Viewing 19, 50, 54, 56
65, 67, 219
Paranormal research, 57, 67 Research Foundation for Mental Paulsen, Dr., 156-158 Hygiene, Inc., 10, 179, 199
Peenemunde, xii Rhoads, Dr. Cornelius, 171
Pegasus, 38 Rockefeller, David, 32, 40
Penfield, Dr. Wilder, 59-66 John D., III, 9, 33, 76
91, 181, 219, 220 Nelson, 8, 9, 32-34
Pine Bluff Arsenal, 187-189 Mrs. Percy, 60, 63
Planning Coordination Group, Rockefeller Foundation, 33, 46
34 60, 61, 63, 76, 219, 220
Rockefeller Institute for Medical Suedfeld, Dr. Peter, 23
Investigations, 171
Rockefeller University, 59 T
Rocky, 42
Rodahl, Dr., 151-153 Technical Services Staff, TSS
Ross, Dr. Collin, xvii, 105 19, 105, 106, 107
Rudolph, Arthur, 97 testicular irradiation experiments,
155, 156
S Tien, H. C., 44
transdermal optical perception,
San Jose Project, 172 57
Savannah, Georgia, xv, 188 Trifa, Valerian, 77, 78
Scheflin, Dr. Alan xv, 22, 65 trigger codes, 52
179 Tufts College, 227
Schellenberg, Walter, 32 Tulane University, 180, 200
Schubert, Heinz, 32 Turner, Admiral Stansfield, Schwend, Friedrich, 92 xvi, 28, 46 sensory deprivation, xvii, xvii, Tuskegee Experiments, xiii

47, 48, 61, 183
Sergeyev Detector, 50 U
Shadow Government, 35
Shadowland, 19, 54 Ustase, 8
SIFAR, 73
Sima, Horia, 77 V
Six, Franz, 32
Skorzeny, Otto, 8, 77, 95 Vanderbilt Experiment, 147, 148,
Skull Valley, 176 201
Sloan-Kettering Institute for Vatican 8, 74, 223
Cancer Research, 140, 171 Veterans Dioxin and Radiation
Smith, Walter Bedell, 77 Compensation Act of 1988, 168
Society for the Investigation of von Braun, Werner, xii
Human Ecology, 46 Von Falkenhausen, General, 30
Southern Research Institute, 200, 225 von Weizsacker, Ernst, 31
South Nassau Communities Hospital, 167 W
Stanford Research Institute, 66 Walter Reed Army Institute, 93,
Stereotaxic, 64, 65, 132 142, 143
Strughold, Hubertus, xii, 225 Wev, Bosquet, 3,
Whitney, John, 33
Willowbrook, xiv,
Wisner, Frank, 32, 38, 72-74, 77
Wolff, Harold, 46, 48, 49, 52, 59
World Bank, 32
World Organization Against Torture, 168
Wright Patterson, xii, 55

Y

Yellow fever, xv, 188

Z

ZR/RIFLE, 54, 55

Table of Contents

Part II 105
23Chapter One 162
35Chapter Two 163
60Chapter Three 166
68Chapter Four 167
Chapter Five 168
164Chapter Six 175

THE DOCUMENTED JOURNEY FROM CIA
MIND CONTROL SLAVE TO SUCCESSFUL
U.S. GOVERNMENT WHISTLEBLOWER.

ACCESS DENIED

FOR REASONS OF NATIONAL SECURITY

By Cathy O'Brien with Mark Phillips

ACCESS DENIED
For Reasons of National Security

by Cathy O’Brien with Mark Phillips

Copyright © 2004, Cathy O’Brien with Mark Phillips

Dedication

To Mark with infinite love and eternal gratitude for saving my life and giving me cause to live it; for valiantly lighting the path to freedom by living the love you are; and to whom I attribute the realization that love is the most powerful force in the universe, peace and freedom are of the soul, justice is ab*soul*ute, and hope is why we’re here.

To Kelly whose positive attitude and brilliant nature lights the way for others to like*wise* trust in love and live peacefully true-to-soul; whose wise and compassionate spirit compounds the felony of being forced to struggle day to day without technological rehabilitation; and who continues to be my inspiration in light of ‘Love’s Space’ that eternally binds us bigger-than-life.

And to Infinite others who support reality in light of love…

TABLE of CONTENTS

FOREWORD

CHAPTER 1: THE MOST DANGEROUS GAME
CHAPTER 2: PROS and CONS
CHAPTER 3: THE ROAD TO RECOVERY
CHAPTER 4: FREE TO LOVE
CHAPTER 5: *SOUL*UTIONS
CHAPTER 6: JUST ‘CAUSE
CHAPTER 7: WASH. DC
CHAPTER 8: TWO WAY MIRRORS
CHAPTER 9: REFLECTIONS
CHAPTER 10: “GET TO KILLING”
CHAPTER 11: MENTAL HELLth
CHAPTER 12: POP TOPS and DENTAL FLOSS
CHAPTER 13: FAMILY MATTERS
CHAPTER 14: IT’S NOT OVER ‘TIL WE WIN
CHAPTER 15: THE HUNDREDTH MONKEY
CHAPTER 16: CRIMINAL “JUSTICE” SYSTEM

CHAPTER 17: GOVERN YOUR OWN THOUGHTS
CHAPTER 18: COVER OPS
CHAPTER 19: OCTOPUS
CHAPTER 20: “SUICIDED”
CHAPTER 21: FEDERAL *WAR*RANT
CHAPTER 22: NEED-TO-KNOW
CHAPTER 23: PANDORA’S BOX
CHAPTER 24: STEP SEVEN
CHAPTER 25: US MALE
CHAPTER 26: GOD SAVE US FROM RELIGION
CHAPTER 27: OUTPOST of FREEDOM
CHAPTER 28: WHERE HAVE ALL THE CHILDREN GONE?
CHAPTER 29: SODOM and GOMORRAH
CHAPTER 30: MARIN COUNTY, CALIFORNIA
CHAPTER 31: BEHIND YOUR EYES
CHAPTER 32: HEALth
CHAPTER 33: *T*REASONS OF “NATIONAL” SECURITY
CHAPTER 34: SEVENTEEN LITTLE CHILDREN
CHAPTER 35: THE*RAPISTS* MISTAKES
CHAPTER 36: THANKS FOR THE FALSE MEMORIES
CHAPTER 37: TRUTH MAKES U.S. FREE

CHAPTER 38: PULSE OF THE NATION
CHAPTER 39: CAN YOU THINK TO CARE?
CHAPTER 40: EVOLUTION OVER REVOLUTION
CHAPTER 41: VOICE OF THE PEOPLE
CHAPTER 42: *S*ELECTIONS
CHAPTER 43: COLLECTIVE CONSCIOUS EVOLUTION
CHAPTER 44: THE TURNING OF THE TIDE
CHAPTER 45: BACK TO THE FUTURE
CHAPTER 46: ALERT PEOPLE!
CHAPTER 47: IN LIGHT of INSIGHT
CHAPTER 48: GLOBAL WARNING
EPILOGUE: ASSUME Y*OUR* VICTORY!
ABBREVIATIONS

FOREWORD

This true life's recorded account of extraordinary proportions began unfolding, like some kind of hyper Origami, near Nashville Tennessee on a cold winter morning February 8th 1988.

Names of persons mentioned in this book have not been changed to protect their identities whether they are proven innocent or guilty, heroes or villains, because this book was written for you to adjudge the facts and become a part of the solution rather than unwittingly a part of the problem.

At this moment you are a fully entitled judge, elected by your fellow man to enter the largest court of the land: the Court of Public Opinion. In your court there is no jury selection for manipulation, no secrets withheld, and no immoral legal loopholes written and enacted into law by lawyers to protect those you may adjudge guilty as charged. There are no lawyers being paid obscene amounts of money by taxpayers to "argue" for either side. The facts of this case are presented to you here from detailed sworn testimony which were strictly derived from hundreds of hours of video and audio recordings, thousands of pages of hand written dated notes, courtroom records, and sworn testimonies by the plaintiffs to all applicable national & international law enforcement agencies, before both Houses of the US Congressional Permanent Select Committees on Intelligence Oversight, The World Court, Interpol and The United Nations Commission on Human Rights Abuses.

“ACCESS DENIED For Reasons of National Security” is a US federal legal ruling that affects all Americans and her allies from adjudicating against criminal politicians. As judge and jury, you are responsible for discerning the truth from the detailed testimonies given, free of this encumbrance to justice. You must also take into consideration the past political records of the politicians presented here, as well as past and present news media accounts of their lies made public.

As presiding judge, the punishments you are entitled to administer to those found guilty as charged will be public exposure of their crimes. All who have come before you and after in like duty, willingly do so in the humane belief that you, too, are fair and honest and will take responsibility in your everyday life for seeing that justice is served.

Whereas, justice for the plaintiffs will be done when those responsible for the alleged crimes committed against them are publicly exposed around the world and the 1947 US National Security Act and The Patriot Acts are abolished. The only compensation remedy the plaintiffs seek is public prosecution of those convicted in your court.

We the plaintiffs, Mark Phillips and Cathy O'Brien, submit into your court our original published testimony that we provided on or before 1995 to the aforementioned agencies and governmental bodies entitled TRANCE Formation of America. For the convenience of like judges around the world this book is now available in the Turkish, Italian, German, and Arabic languages. Many more licensed publishers are at this very moment translating this unchallenged documented testimony into additional languages to reach as many other judges as possible in the shortest amount of time.

In conclusion we pray you will do that which you can and additionally that you will lend support to government whistleblowers like Mark & Cathy who have nothing to loose and everything to give to the future generations of humanity. Support them by sharing what you learn here with as many people you know who have eyes to see and ears to hear the truth.

Only truth will set u.s. free.

Chapter 1
THE MOST DANGEROUS GAME

“Wake up, sleeping beauty,” Mark said as he gently roused me with a cup of fresh coffee. “Welcome to a new day.”

My eyes opened. “My God, did I die?” I wondered, sensing the love and peace surrounding me.

Mark smiled. “You just switched your former existence for life, not ‘death’, and it’s time you began remembering your past,” he said as he strapped a beautiful watch to my wrist. Noting my wonder and surprise, he continued, “Now you know that I gave you the time of day.”

The time of day? No one had ever given me their time before. They only took mine. And I never wore a watch before. I did not even know what month or year it was, let alone the time of day. I had no concept of time, which Mark explained I must always monitor from that moment on. A concept of time equated to awareness, and I had intense need to be aware of my past.

“You have to know where you’ve been to know where you’re going. And you’re going to remember everything.” Mark appeared confident, emitting a sense of security while I teetered on the edge of a dangerous past.

“You say someone is trying to kill you. Why?” I could not think to answer. I was totally amnesic. All I knew was that his life, as well as my eight-year-old daughter Kelly’s and mine were all on the line. We were in grave danger, literally dodging bullets while I desperately sought the answers why.

Absolute mind control was the only existence Kelly and I knew prior to Mark Phillips rescuing us directly from the CIA/DIA's[1] MK Ultra[2] Project Monarch[3] in 1988. Through a series of carefully orchestrated events, Mark cleverly maneuvered our mind control handler, Alex Houston, into a position of "trust" that provided him the latitude to lift us free of our existence. In addition to helping me remove a few of my meager belongings from Houston's farm in Goodlettsville, Tennessee, Mark arranged for our livestock pets to be freed from Houston's horrific abuse as well. People who abuse children oftentimes abuse animals, as though they have no regard for life at all. Houston was no exception, and Mark knew it. While Mark tended to the horses, cows, guineas, chickens, cats, and dogs, I spun the combination on the safe in the bedroom to retrieve Houston's familiar CIA diary and ledger. We left the premises momentarily undetected, and Kelly and I moved into an apartment.

When my politically affluent owner in MK Ultra, US Senator Robert C. Byrd[4], and other so-called leaders of our country involved in the Project realized the problem Alex Houston's bumbling had created, our danger intensified. Many government secrets and personal reputations were staked on the belief that I would never be free to recall that which I was supposed to forget. They had never stopped to consider the strength of the human spirit, the power of love, or what could happen when a man of integrity like Mark Phillips opened their Pandora's Box of secrets. Now their paradigm was shifting, and our danger intensified accordingly.

Kelly and I could not survive on our own, and soon moved into Mark's house for protection. Within days, the local sheriff where Mark lived advised him to leave town, claiming a Special Agent dispatched from Nashville's FBI office said the CIA had a hit out on him that "had something to do with that woman." Indeed, traffic had conspicuously increased on the unmarked, rural dead-end gravel road leading to Mark's remote country home. We noticed many unfamiliar faces on the road, in the woods, and even in the trees who we jokingly referred to as "the watchers watching the watchers watching the watchers." Then, without warning, all of Mark's personal identification records disappeared. His life savings had seemingly vanished into thin air from his personal and business bank accounts. Unnerved by these CIA tactics, and more determined than ever to find out why they were happening, Mark implemented deliberate steps to ensure that our lives were not taken, too.

He quickly sold everything he owned, including his “back to the future” De Lorean used in the rescue, retaining only basic necessities. The funds would be used to take Kelly and me away from his no-longer private residence to the safety and serenity of Alaska. Mark understood that safety was tantamount to memory recovery. At the same time, none of us could be safe until I could recall who and what we were up against, and why.

As we prepared to embark on our journey to the top of the world, my former “husband” Alex Houston attempted to prevent me from leaving. For nearly eight years Houston had handled Kelly and me much the way he did his ventriloquist’s dummy. Now it seemed he wanted his “merchandise” back at all costs.

I swore out three arrest warrants on Alex Houston for threats and attempts on our lives with the Nashville, Tennessee Metropolitan Police Department. I sought further protection through Nashville’s District Attorney’s office, where I explained to the DA’s Investigator Skip Sigmund that Alex Houston was a ventriloquist and stage hypnotist capable of torturous controls. He responded that “until gun shots were fired” nothing could be done to protect me.

Mark accelerated our pace to leave Tennessee for Alaska.

I could not yet think to trust Mark, though I sensed that I could. My capacity for conscious thought and reason had been stifled through decades of torturous abuse, whereby I could only do as I was told. Mark certainly did not “order” me to go with him. He didn’t even know me, let alone like me. How could he? I didn’t even know who I was, where I’d been, or even my own age or name at times! Without the capacity for free thought, I had no free will and ultimately no soul expression. I had no way to express love even if I could feel it. With nothing to give and nothing to lose, I relied only on my heightened senses. I could sense much like an animal could sense, and I had seen the trust and affection his pet raccoons and foxes had for him. Even the farm animals that Houston had abused so horribly exhibited trust for Mark.

Kelly sensed trust for Mark as well. After all, he was the first man who did not abuse us and genuinely cared for our welfare and well-being. His patient, gentle manner was therapeutic, while his propensity for handling weapons and apparent intellect kept us safe against all odds. His inside knowledge of CIA inner workings due to his own past proved invaluable in keeping us a step ahead of The Most Dangerous Game and continues to do so to this date.

February 4, 1988 marked the beginning of life for Kelly and me. It also marked the beginning of a new kind of survival as we embarked on “The Most Dangerous Game” of international proportion.

Chapter 2
PROS and CONS

“It’s a long, long way to the top of the world from here,” Mark told me as we loaded up our pets and a few personal belongings in a small rented trailer he had hooked up to his 1976 Pacer. “That will give you plenty of time to remember where you’ve been and why we have to leave here under the gun this way.”

My response was not as profoundly revealing as another MK Ultra victim’s would be in later years when she said, “No one would believe the things I can’t remember.” Instead I began, “I hope I talk about it the whole way…”

“It’s not what you remember that matters, it’s how you remember it.” Mark handed me several notepads and a pen as he opened the door for me. “The pen is mightier than the sword. Remember that.” He settled into the driver’s seat as the Pacer he restored sprang instantly to life at the touch of a switch. We were on our way.

“How am I supposed to remember what happened?” I wondered to myself. It had been mere weeks since I had even found out my age. When Mark referred to my age as 30, I had argued that I was 24 until he showed me on my driver’s license and the 1988 date on newspapers. Where had I been all those years? It seemed like I knew but just didn’t want to think about it. Mark spoke confidently and without emotion as though he had been reading my mind.

“I know from studying mind sciences all my life that the brain photographically records events surrounding trauma. You display every indication of having endured significant trauma. Whether you wanted to forget it or not, your brain automatically compartmentalized memory so the rest of your mind could function normally as though nothing had happened.

This is the mind's sane defense to trauma too horrible to comprehend. It takes brains for this coping mechanism to even occur, which means you are smart enough to remember everything. You already survived it once. Now I'm going to teach you a simple method of making the incomprehensible comprehensible."

I interrupted Mark to anxiously inject, "I know I already told you about Wayne Cox. I'll probably never see Kelly again." My eyes widened even further in horror.

"No, you didn't tell me." Mark appeared calm to me despite his increasing alarm for Kelly's immediate plight.

Two weeks previous, we had stopped by the Post Office to clear out the mail in preparation for this move. A summons for me to appear in court later that afternoon was in his box. With no time to prepare or obtain an attorney, and the threat of being incarcerated for taking Kelly out of the State of Tennessee, we drove straight to the courthouse. Kelly's biological father Wayne Cox and our former mind control handler Alex Houston were among those opposing our exodus. Representing myself, I explained to Judge Swiggart that I had sworn out three warrants for Alex Houston's arrest and was suffering from amnesia. Since this did not openly reveal anything about Wayne Cox, Judge Swiggart thoughtfully considered the situation.

"These are unusual circumstances," he began as he granted me the right to move Kelly to Alaska. He further explained that his main concern was for the children, and therefore would like to speak with Kelly in his chambers regarding visitation with Wayne Cox prior to our departure. Horrified beyond reason, I could not think why I so adamantly opposed the possibility of Kelly visiting Wayne Cox. Judge Swiggart later explained to me that, had he known about dissociative disorders and occultism, he would not have taken Kelly into his chambers to ask her how she felt about seeing Cox before moving to Alaska. Kelly, also suffering from amnesia, responded only to the moment. Judge Swiggart's black robe subconsciously triggered the occultism to which Cox had previously subjected her, and Kelly robotically complied with every suggestion Judge Swiggart presented.

Believing Kelly had willfully complied, Judge Swiggart ruled that Kelly was to visit Cox in his Louisiana residence effective immediately.

My hysteria rising, I blurted out to Mark as he drove us out of Nashville, “He’s going to kill her in a ritual. He always kills people.”

“Write it out,” Mark instructed. “I don’t want to hear about it. I want to read it where I can understand it. It may feel as though you have already told me about this, but you haven’t. Nor will you. Verbalizing events of the past only reinforces it in your own mind and can further traumatize you. It takes the logic portion of the brain to move a pen. Therefore, when you write out memory, it shifts the emotionally incomprehensible over to logic, making it comprehensible. Once it is comprehensible, you can deal with the reality of your past in a logical manner.”

I pondered his statement. “It doesn’t seem logical that when I see my past, it’s as though I were viewing it from above. It is as if my spirit took flight to a safe, loving space while my body was being used and abused.”

“Severe torture and trauma does affect people this way. Simply shift this natural perspective to a ‘mind’s screen/movie screen.’ This will allow you to remember without abreaction.” Mark noticed that I didn’t understand the word ‘abreaction.’ He knew that photographically re-experiencing tactile sensations could result in a histamine reaction[1]. “In other words,” he explained, “without reliving it. Like I said, you already survived it once. There’s no sense in you reliving it. It’s your memory, and you already know it. View your mind’s screen through the eyes of the part of you that endured it. Smell the smells. Then write it out. That’s why I said ‘the pen is mightier than the sword.’ This method will give you control over your memory and, ultimately, your own mind. Now, write out what you were going to tell me about Cox.”

I wrote a brief line that Cox was an occult serial killer. Mark glanced over at what I had written as he merged onto the freeway. Suppressing his own horror, he nonchalantly asked, “How do you know this?”

“I saw…” Mark interrupted me, reminding me to write it out.

I wrote most of the way to Las Vegas, where Mark met with a few old acquaintances to discuss our predicament. They didn't want to discuss it. The CIA's merging with the Mafia had created such havoc they had their own political problems to deal with. "The whole world is changing right now. You should change, too. Leave that woman. Now. Save yourself."

Mark had not expected this response and he frowned. "Save myself from what?" he wondered to himself. He knew it was up to him to safely navigate our way to the future against all odds. He looked at his associates and said, "Las Vegas is still the place for quick marriages. I'm getting married." He knew he could save himself a lot of legal grief by taking such a step. Mark stood up and strode for the door.

"You're still the same, Flash" one of the guys growled as Mark closed the door behind him.

That evening when Mark returned to our hotel room, he offered to take me out to dinner. I switched personas, forgot what I was writing, and with renewed energy cheerfully dressed for dinner. Dressed in his Las Vegas evening attire, Mark's appearance triggered my sexuality that had been heightened through incest, conditioning, and mind control programming. Naturally, I expressed my immense desire.

"You need to know who you are before you have something to give in a relationship. What you're offering is a small piece of who you really are." Mark's obvious arousal did not seem to match his words, yet he continued, "I don't want you a piece at a time, I want all of you at once."

Wow. That was the most deeply appealing thing anyone had ever said to me. While I could not consciously grasp the depth of meaning to his statement, my heart rejoiced with the magnitude of his insight. Coincidentally, Julio Iglesias happened to be singing All of You (Body and Soul)[2] over the radio at that moment, the musical harmonics carrying the lyrics deep into my being, profoundly touching me. Somewhere inside, love was binding together pieces of me I wasn't even aware of yet.

It was hard to eat dinner that evening, and it wasn't due to my developed digestive disorders. After eating, as programmed, only 300 calories per day for eight years, combined with direct high voltage to my lower intestine/rectum as torture, total digestive failure had been diagnosed. My abusers believed the doctor's diagnosis that I would die, which aided our initial survival. They never considered that I would survive through the healing power of love, or that Mark would literally carry me through our first few months together. Tonight, food was the last thing on my mind and I could only eat lightly while gazing across the table at the magnificent man on the other side.

As our dinner settled, Mark explained the pros and cons of getting married. I logically agreed it was a wise move, while my heart leapt with joy that knew no bounds. We proceeded accordingly, and were married in a conventional wedding ceremony-- united in purpose that seemed bigger than life.

Kelly's life was still on the line, and tomorrow we could legally retrieve her from Cox. Back at the room, Mark shifted my focus from my sexual desires to the notes I had scrawled earlier. Pointing out an occult ritual I had detailed, he avoided comment and asked, ”How did you get there? Where did you go afterwards?”

“I don't know…” I forgot I wasn't supposed to verbalize anything.

“Of course you do. It's your memory.” Mark handed me my pen and notepad. “Write it out.”

“How can I when there's just a black hole on either side of it?” The memory still seemed compartmentalized.

Mark took my notepad and drew an illustration for me of a pie graph. As he drew the circle he said, “Imagine this is your brain. It compartmentalized this ritual event, for example.” He drew the first section into the pie graph, and pointed out all the rest of the area that was left to function “normally” while ignoring the event compartmentalized in the wedge. He sectioned off more and more wedges, describing how my brain was comprised of as many compartments as there had been traumatic experiences in my life.

“Where’s the normal part?” I asked, looking at all the pie wedges.

“That’s where you’re at right now. Right here.” He pointed to the very center of the graph where all the pieces met. “You just went into a compartment and wrote out the memory. Writing it out caused the wall to come down. The emotionally incomprehensible became comprehensible with logic, so you don’t need that wall anymore. Now that it’s out of the way, that section of your brain is yours to control, direct, access, and explore. To connect events and learn how you got there and where you went afterwards, all you need to do is go deeper inside yourself. Deeper into here,” he said as he pointed at the center of the pie graph. “Deeper into your own subconscious. Relax. Breathe deep. And ask yourself these questions. How did you get there? Where did you go afterwards?”

I took a deep breath and the trance state I lived in deepened to a focus. An event flashed across my mind screen so fast I couldn’t grasp it. I took another deep breath, refocused, and made a note when it flashed again. Drugs. Cocaine. Mercenaries. What did it mean? Why was Cox there? The flash became a memory, which I retrieved in photographic recall. It felt so close, so “normal.” I knew I must have said something to Mark about this before. It’s not like I had forgotten it… or had I?

Exhausted, I put down my pen and began to fall asleep. I was so tired, yet kept jerking awake as my body responded to nightmares. Mark quietly came over to my bed and held me close. “You’re safe now,” he assured me. “That was then, this is now, and now you are safe. I’ve got you. It’s OK. You can sleep peacefully now.” He cradled my head as he would do for years to come in the most comforting, loving, healing manner. I slept better than I ever had before.

When I awoke, I felt strong, alert, and well rested. I would need this strength for the events to come. Excited that Kelly’s court ordered visitation with Cox was over, I telephoned to tell her we were on our way to pick her up. Cox’s mother and handler, Mary, answered the phone and informed me

Kelly would not be coming with us. Wayne picked up the other line and told me I could not have Kelly back, that she didn't want to see me again. I knew he was lying. I heard Kelly cry in the background and told him I was on my way.

First, I telephoned Judge Swiggart at his home. He had thoughtfully given me his home phone number "just in case I needed to reach him over the Christmas holidays."

"Louisiana is not my jurisdiction," he began. "But since Kelly's father is in noncompliance with Tennessee court orders, I can get the local police there to take care of the situation."

I had remembered how Cox's involvement with CIA cocaine operations extended far beyond the local police all the way to then Louisiana Senator J. Bennet Johnston. Briefly, I explained. "It goes Federal from there, crossing State lines into Arkansas Governor[3] Bill Clinton's Mena[4] Airport cocaine operations."

Apparently Judge Swiggart had found cause to further research our case after his ruling, and he apologetically explained that if he had known then what he knows now, Kelly would not even be with Cox. Since she was and it was Christmas, he recommended that Mark take matters into his own hands while he pulled every string he could to supply legitimate police backup.

As we quickly drove to the designated meeting place near Cox's Chatham, Louisiana backwoods residence, Mark assured me that Cox would show up with Kelly once he was told "what" he was dealing with. Still, I became hysterical telling Mark why this situation was so dangerous and urgent. "Did you write this out?" Mark's question rose over my sobs. Of course not. I couldn't seem to write everything as fast as the information was needed, so I verbalized. This proved to be even more time consuming than writing since I was immobilized by my own hysterics and disjointed ranting. Mark stopped the car, which got my attention long enough to heed his demand that I write out what I was trying to say. I started writing again, and my tears subsided as my mind returned from the brink of emotional raw terror and became rationally logical again.

I wrote until we arrived. Acutely aware of the life-threatening circumstances we were under, Mark cleverly applied his mental and physical skills to ensure Kelly's safety above all else. He quickly selected a 45 automatic from his registered personal arsenal that he was licensed to carry. Rising above the dramatics of the moment and appearing calm, Mark got out of the car and strode over to where he knew Cox would be. Smiling, he pointed his left index finger at the gun in his right hand while Cox's forehead broke out in a sweat. I gathered Kelly and her bag. Mary was dumbfounded as I hurried Kelly into the car. Police cars squealed to a stop while the promised backup officers took shooting positions. Like in a movie, their timing prohibited Cox from further pursuit and assault while Mark withdrew his weapon, jumped back in the car and quickly drove us out of the area.

I turned to Kelly, who sat unblinking in the backseat. Physically she was in tact. It was obvious that she was under extreme mental duress and trauma, the extent of which we would soon learn.

Chapter 3
THE ROAD TO RECOVERY

It was 60 degrees below zero when Mark, Kelly, and I arrived in Alaska with our red chow dog Tong, and raccoons Tycoon, Marty, and Rocky. The trim and emblems had long since frozen and fallen off the Pacer. Yet I barely noticed the cold, as I took in the beauty, safety, and splendor of Alaska. This winter paradise on top of the world enthralled me with its abstract magnificence. The sun revolved in circles rather than rose and set, casting shadows that danced and played along the mountains, constantly changing the scene. The horizon had no visible east or west, distorting distance where time knew no night or day. Northern lights of the Aurora Borealis lit up the dark winter skies, with their brilliant hues reflecting across the snow like daylight. I felt deeply fortunate and blessed just to be alive, let alone living in Alaska!

On the long journey to Alaska after retrieving Kelly from Cox in Louisiana, I noticed Mark was unusually quiet and deep in thought. He finally explained that he was re-evaluating values, re-prioritizing priorities, and rethinking professional friendships he had developed over the years. When he needed his friends, they were only there long enough to advise him to abandon me and his quest for answers. More determined than ever, Mark chose to learn the truth and keep Kelly and me alive. So he drove on in silence while Kelly loudly and irrationally displayed her traumatized state by crying, yelling, babbling, and laughing hysterically. I responded to her in kind. Surely Mark sensed a higher purpose than the rescue of two PTSDed[1] dissociatives who had been traumatized literally out of their minds.

Kelly’s condition continued to worsen, despite feeling love and security for the first time in her life. The extreme trauma she endured while with Cox apparently extended into hypnotic mind control programming, which she later reported in detail to the psychiatrist assigned to her case. As quickly as

Kelly retrieved memory, she went into espionage level deliberately programmed respiratory failure[2]. When Mark and I rushed her to Humana Hospital in Anchorage, Kelly did not respond to conventional medical intervention. Hospital personnel who noted her traumatized state called in their leading psychiatrist, Dr. Pat Patrick. Dr. Pat was the first to diagnose Kelly with D.I.D. (dissociative identity disorder), which back then, was still being referred to as MPD (multiple personality disorder[3]) "with active mind control programming". Kelly was still in the Intensive Care Unit when I telephoned my father, Earl O'Brien, pleading for help.

"Kelly is dying and I don't have the money to put gas in the car to get to the hospital. Please help." I knew my father was well off financially, and assumed he would help. I was still amnesic of his incest and the perverse events that led to his selling me into the CIA's MK Ultra mind control.

"No more money!" my father shouted, much to my astonishment at the time. "This is America!"

"This is America?" I wondered at his outburst. What did "America" have to do with his cold-hearted refusal to financially enable me to be with my dying daughter?!

I began to shake uncontrollably as my heartbreak and desperation turned to sheer terror.

"You're not going to cave into fear now," Mark firmly told me. "Truth naturally frees you from fear. Think about it. Focus on what you know rather than jump to emotionally driven conclusions. Write it out and I'll read it when we get home." Mark opened the door and stepped out into the brisk Alaskan air. He had just taken an interim job as Marketing Director of Alaska Business College in order to meet our rent and keep the lights and heat on. The funds generated from quickly liquidating his personal assets back in Tennessee had dwindled, and we spent the last American Express Traveler's check on a small, unfurnished fourplex in Eagle River. He wasn't counting on assistance from anyone, especially not my father, and reluctantly left me alone with my past.

I locked the door and put my pen to paper. “This is America?” The answers were slow to surface, as they drudged up years of related memory that appeared as one long nightmare. By the time Mark returned that evening, I had slips of paper scattered everywhere with bits and pieces of memory scrawled across them in as many different handwritings. “I’ve remembered so much, yet nothing makes sense. I can’t tell one year from the next.” I showed him the scraps of paper and cried, “How can I figure out when things happened when I had no concept of time?”

“Simple,” Mark replied. “You have to know what questions to ask yourself. Expand your vision beyond the moment. What is the season? Is it snowing? Can you feel the warmth of the summer sun? Do you smell the spring flowers? Are you in school? Who is your teacher? What are you wearing? When did you own these clothes? Are any of your brothers and sisters born? How old is Kelly? Take a look around through the part of you it was happening to and see through those eyes. Do people seem really tall to you like they did when you were a child? What is eye level to you? Their knees? Their eyes? Simply pinpoint the time as accurately as you can and leave the rest to investigators. I’ve already got some old contacts of mine looking into things for us, and I talked with the Feds again today.”

Mark’s rational answers served to refocus me. My frantic desperation calmed, and we discussed our plans for the next day, which would include time at the hospital with Kelly. “I also need to go to the library,” Mark informed me. Rare books on deprogramming and recovery from dissociative disorders were suddenly being made available to him. Certain pages were book marked for him with coded instructional notes and unidentified one time use toll free phone numbers. “You can look through some of the old magazines and newspapers they’ve accumulated as give-aways,” he continued. “You will want to start clipping pictures, phrases, headlines – anything that catches your attention. When you have a box full of these clippings, you can make a collage of them. It will be like putting together these pieces of your mind.” He scooped up a handful of the scraps of paper I had made notes on. “Dr. Patrick used the term polyfragmented to describe these dust pieces you’re gathering. She agrees that my suggestion of making a collage would be very healing for you.”

Suddenly my scraps of memory looked valuable after all. From that point on, I wrote down every memory flash I had whether it seemed significant or not. I kept a pen and paper with me at all times. Memories were flashing across my mind's screen often, even to the point of dominating my focus at inconvenient times. Jotting down a word or phrase served to stop the inconvenient intrusions, allowing me to complete other business I was tending at the moment. It was as though my brain knew I would write it out in its entirety later, and the intrusive flashing would momentarily subside. Later, when I had time to focus on it properly, I would relax into a deeper state, ask myself questions the way Mark taught me, smell the smells, and write out that which was waiting to be photographically retrieved.

"Keep in mind," Mark advised me, "that if a memory seems too impossible to have actually happened, then examine it closely to see if it is something you were told or is from a movie. Deprogram the program first. Find the beginning and end, what happened before and after. Set the written out scrap of memory aside for three weeks. Truth doesn't go away. Filling in the blanks with what might have happened will." Some memory scraps were temporarily set aside, along with the clippings I would accumulate for my collage.

Upon Dr. Pat's advise, Humana Medical Hospital transferred Kelly to Charter North Psychiatric Hospital. Although the staff admittedly did not know how to treat Kelly's condition, they were sympathetic to her need. They agreed to join us in our quest to obtain qualified rehabilitation for Kelly. Mark's inside knowledge of espionage level deprogramming was not appropriate for Kelly's needs. Besides, she had been subjected to sophisticated NASA/DARPA[4] developed harmonic mind control technologies since birth, which was vastly different from the trauma based mind control from which I was recovering. In essence the key that locked the doors to her mind needed to be used to unlock it. And Charter North[5], despite being among the most progressive chain of mental institutions in the nation, did not have access to classified technology and information.

Seeing Kelly was a joyful and painful experience at the same time. She and I were very close, bonded more than the average mother and daughter by the traumas we had endured together for so many years. I had never contributed to Kelly's abuse and she knew it, despite her amnesic mental blocks and extreme PTSD[6]. We shared an understanding beyond words, and communicated on levels experienced by soldiers on the front lines of a battle zone.

I was glad to see Kelly breathing easier under Dr. Pat's care. "I'm going to see a doctor who knows about sexual abuse," Kelly proudly announced. "The police need the paperwork."

Mark and I had begun turning pertinent information over as requested to Anchorage Police Detective Jack Chapman[7] in an effort to enlist protection for Kelly from Wayne Cox and Alex Houston. Apparently this medical document was required. I went with her as she complied with the gynecological exam at the age of eight. Dr. Lillibridge examined and photographed what he termed "the physical scars from years of extreme, horrendous sexual abuse." Cover-up was already underway, even though we had just embarked on what would be years in pursuit of justice and rehabilitation for Kelly. Dr. Lillibridge informed Mark and me that his medical license and life had been threatened if he confirmed Kelly's abuse. "This is an outrage! What this child has endured is so extreme I will travel to any court in this country to testify on her behalf," he promised.

Kelly, pleased with herself for cooperating with the exam, had no clue as to what was going on. In spite of her deep insight and wisdom exceeding her years, she was still a child who did not need to know how elusive justice was becoming.

By the time Mark and I arrived at the library, memories were flooding my mind and I was making notes as fast as I could. I stopped long enough to request the outdated newspapers and magazines so I could begin my collage, piled them in the Pacer out front, then sat down at a desk to write while Mark tended his library business.

I remembered how my father's sexual abuse seemed so "natural." I didn't know any better, and pedophilia was so rampant[8] in Muskegon[9], Michigan when I was growing up, my neighborhood friends didn’t know any better either. Even though I had longed for someplace on the planet where people didn’t hurt each other, the pursuit of pleasure by acting out sexually was the way of life back then.

Soon my father’s sexual abuse extended into child pornography. Bonnie and the Boxer was the pornographic bestiality film made of me that would change my life forever. Looking through the eyes of the child I was when those events occurred, I recalled how my Uncle Sam’s boxer dog, Buster, was so much bigger than me! My father had filmed the event, and apparently sold it through the local Michigan Mafia child pornography ring. As I recalled, my maternal grandfather’s Masonic Lodge was instrumental in bringing businessmen, police, and politicians into our lives. So when a local politician came to our house with a copy of the porn film under his arm, it seemed as “natural” to me as sex!

I kept my head “up my past” for days, writing on every scrap of paper I could find. Still, it would be some time before I would understand the full importance and scope of that event. The memories I wrote out in photographic detail turned out to be just a small piece of the elaborate puzzle that revealed some of the missing years of my life. It would be years before I learned how that local child pornography ring came to be sanctioned by politicians involved in MK Ultra mind control[10]. Project Paperclip[11] had imported Nazi and Fascist scientists into the US, gleaning Hitler/Himler research on multigenerational incest based families[12]. It was learned that incest resulted in dissociative disorders ideal for robotic mind control. Such candidates could be used in espionage, the military, or anywhere government officials wanted secrecy and control. Brainwashing was being refined, and certain politicians such as the one who came to our house with the Bonnie and the Boxer film under his arm, were sanctioning child pornography rings in order to target children like myself for government mind control projects.

“Spies are made, not born,” my father often quipped. He was proud to be part of what he deemed an important government project. This local politician, Gerald Ford, would later become the un-elected Vice President and eventually un-elected President of the United States[13]. Back in the early 1960’s, though, Ford was just a simple politician who was sliming his way to the top. He promised my father immunity from prosecution if he would agree to see me into MK Ultra mind control. I remember how the two had laughed like old friends, telling tales about my Uncle Bob Tanis.

Uncle Bob was Air Force Intelligence, a professed Jesuit, and friends with both Ford and another local politician, Guy VanderJagt. VanderJagt went on to head the Republican National Committee[14] while serving as a US Congressman. In retrospect, it is bizarre how my father, who had a sixth grade education and earned his living as a worm digger, became associated with the likes of VanderJagt and Ford through illicit porn featuring me! Yet it had all seemed so uneventful, simple, and “normal” to me back then.

Writing out my memories the way Mark taught allowed me to retrieve them the way they happened, free of dramatics. I would deepen my trance through relaxation, watch events as they occurred in photographic detail on my mind’s screen, smell the smells, and know the physical sensations without re-feeling them. Emotions were non-existent in the dissociative state in which I had existed, so applying emotion to events when recovering memory was unrealistic. Mark wisely taught me to avoid the question often asked by therapists “how does that make you feel?” Remembering the details, as disgusting as they were now, helped me understand why my father ignored my pleas for help and shouted, “This is America!” I really didn’t have time to wallow in self-pity, though, when Kelly’s dire and desperate circumstances demanded all of my energy.

Chapter 4
FREE TO LOVE

In our determined effort to help Kelly, Mark and I worked diligently to stay a step ahead of the law enforcement cover-up that was underway. Oftentimes we would opt for spending what little cash we had on postage stamps rather than on food, as information dissemination was more crucial to our survival at the time. We had written hundreds of letters to local, state, and federal law enforcement agencies, mental health professionals, and to various citizen's organizations that were springing up all across the United States. Kelly's case wasn't the only one of its kind, although the "free" press and the courts were ignoring the widespread proliferation of incest, ritual abuse, and mind control. Responses poured in from everywhere, including from a Priest[1] concerned about abuses within the Catholic Church. Systematic mind control of dissociative victims by pedophile priests was already rampant by 1989. Mental health therapy for the wide range of victims of incest, child abuse, kidnapping, cults, satanism, dissociative disorders, and mind control was all but non-existent back then. Therapists were contacting Mark and me for guidance.

Information on dissociative disorders, trauma, and mind control had been deliberately suppressed from the American psychiatric and psychological associations for so-called "reasons of national security." The founder of the APA, Dr. Ewen Cameron, had been caught using CIA mind control methods at the Allen Memorial Institute in Montreal, Canada. The CIA was forced to compensate the victims, yet it took years[2]. In the meantime, educational institutions for mental health professionals lacked the facts necessary for treating the vast number of victims/survivors who were filling their offices in search of help and understanding.

Finally, through concerned Alaska State officials, I was able to make contact with Tennessee Violent Crimes Claims Commissioner Richard Rucker. Commissioner Rucker was able to verify many of the facts, documents, and records submitted to him, and was working above and beyond the call of duty to obtain qualified rehabilitation for Kelly. Since he was close to reaching his goal, he proceeded to submit a request for release of emergency funds for Kelly and me so we could complete her transfer. He filed her case with the commission's national headquarters in Washington, DC at the FBI building.

By the summer of 1989, Mark and I turned over our doctor's reports, details of federal crimes, evidences, and proof of the ongoing cover-up of Kelly's case to Anchorage's FBI Resident Agent in Charge Joe Hamblin and Special Agent Ken Marischen[3].

"We've been looking for you," Marischen said.

"I know," Mark quickly replied. "You've been following the trail of my American Express Traveler's Checks."

Marischen was astounded. "How did you know?" he demanded.

"I didn't," Mark smiled. "You just told me. Why are you looking for me?"

"Your ex-wife is among the FBI's most wanted criminals[4]," Marischen continued. "We need you to confirm her credibility."

"Of course she is not credible," Mark answered. "Why do you think I divorced her?"

"Well, she's involved in a homicide along with the attorney she is working for." Marischen informed him. "If you will say for the record that she is credible, we will investigate this case you are presenting to us."

"Wait a minute." Mark smiled through his rage. "I'm here to report federal crimes, and all you want to talk about is my ex-wife. I haven't seen her in nearly a year. I am not going to lie for you and tell you she is credible. I'm counting on you to be honest and investigate these crimes and proofs, and you're trying to entrap me. This is immoral and…"

Joe Hamblin reached across the table and took the packet of information Mark had brought them. Hamblin vowed to investigate it, and quickly showed Mark the door.

Kelly's urgent and precarious situation caused us to return to the FBI a few days later, only to be told by the FBI's receptionist that both Hamblin and Marischen had been called to Washington, DC.

Acting on a tip from someone he trusted, Mark was patiently waiting in Hamblin's "secure" office when he returned. Hamblin took the voluminous packet of documents and information we had provided him out of his briefcase. "Nothing happened in Alaska. Yet," Hamblin warned. "Leave before it does."

"We told you we need your help, and 'nothing' has happened," Mark began. "Now I can't even afford to leave. I have nothing left to lose but my life, and as long as I'm alive I will do all I can to legally incite an honest investigation into these crimes."

Ken Marischen poked his head in the office to offer Mark just enough money ($500) to leave the state, compliments of his Mormon[5] church.

Mark and I had also turned the same documentation over to US Customs Northwest Division Manager Max Kitchens. Much of the detailed information we submitted regarding CIA cocaine operations had already checked out. "You are the first person I know of to actually survive and piece together the facts so comprehensively," Max told me. And he was in a position to know a lot[6]. Max was not only compassionate and respectful, he was dedicated to bringing about justice "regardless of who is involved."

"No one is above the law," he stated. He, too, was suddenly flown to Washington, DC.

Upon his return, Max drove out to our Eagle River residence. He was wide-eyed and breathless when he arrived, looking behind him suspiciously, and asked to come in. “I know the crimes you are reporting are true,” he began. “And I can’t even protect you. It took me over two hours to drive here[7], taking back roads, and using every trick I know to shake a tail. You won’t survive here. There’s a high level hit out on you now, and I beg of you to please leave while you still can.” Max bid us “good luck,” hugged us, and left.

As he backed out of our driveway, the telephone rang. It was Charter North notifying us that Kelly was in danger and would be transferred to an interim placement via the Tennessee Claims Commission. Charter had been informed that Wayne Cox was on his way to Alaska to kill her and anyone who stood in his way. Kelly was flying out with a nurse immediately. There wasn’t even time for me to see her first. I was devastated.

I telephoned Commissioner Rucker, who was distraught over the precarious turn of events. He told me, “National Security has been slapped on this case out of DC. There is little more I can do. I’m told Senator Byrd is behind it.”

Senator Byrd? Of course I knew he had an office in the FBI Hoover Building. I had been there.

My memory had been triggered. I was writing it out as fast as I could, pausing briefly to wipe away tears of frustration that I hadn’t remembered soon enough to have avoided this pitfall. My heart wrenching concerns for Kelly were overwhelming. Taking action rather than taking time to cry, Mark and I began to pack our belongings and make arrangements to leave Alaska where we could be closer to Kelly. I kept writing.

After being sold into MK Ultra mind control by my father, he was immediately flown to Boston, Massachusetts where he said he was given instructions at the nearby Scientific Engineering Institute[8] on how to raise me in the Project. Perhaps it was my Uncle Bob’s Jesuit affiliation, or perhaps it was due to the CIA combining Nazi mind sciences with what the Catholics learned through the Spanish Inquisition and Crusades regarding the effects of trauma on the human mind, that sent my father to Boston. Regardless, when he returned, my MK Ultra mind control victimization commenced, beginning with mind shattering occult rituals in my hometown St. Francis deSales Catholic church.

My father had also been instructed to take me to the Governor's mansion in Mackinac Island, Michigan. Governor George Romney[9] was actively involved in MK Ultra, extending it from the Catholic church to his Mormon church[10] and bringing it into the school systems as what would later become global education[11]. Because I was a "prime candidate" or a "chosen one" for MK Ultra, I had cause to be there as well. It was on Mackinac Island that I first met US Senator Robert C. Byrd, who would become my owner in MK Ultra. As my "owner," Senator Byrd directed my activities, deciding which military and NASA installations I would be taken to for mind control programming, who I would be prostituted to and when , and which government operations I would ultimately be used in during the Reagan/Bush Administration.

The pieces of my mind were fusing into a full picture, just as the scraps of headlines and pictures I had clipped were assembled into a collage theme. Everything started to make sense. Yet it was only the beginning.

Mark quit his brief job at Alaska Business College to be with me 24 hours a day 7 days a week for security purposes. "Making a living" was secondary to "living," and Mark chose to step away from society's financial rat race in favor of staying a step ahead of the game of exposing the highest level of criminal corruption. He had already lost his personal fortune, and he knew no limits to sacrificing his comfort zone for a higher purpose.

Within days of his departure, two Federally employed thugs greeted him as he stepped from the elevator to his ABC office. Mark heard the triggers cock on their weapons as he brushed past them. In one swift movement, he flipped open his briefcase[12] and spun around to face his would-be attackers with his 45 automatic drawn down on them. Using his briefcase as a shield, he smiled and said, “Good morning, boys. What brings you here? A need for an education?”

“You’re going to leave Alaska, dead or alive,” one of the suits said, while the other held the elevator door open with his foot.

“And I predict you’re going to leave here. Now. Who wants to go first?” Mark calmly asked.

“Abandon that woman, child, and your cause. Leave the state or you’ll die.” The elevator door closed.

Mark repacked his weapon and closed his briefcase as he watched from the upper floor balcony as the pair left the building. The elevator doors opened again, and a group of female students emerged. “Mr. Phillips,” one young blonde called. “We heard you turned in your notice and won’t be working here anymore.”

Another slipped her arm through his. “We’re here to talk you out of it.”

“Look what you’ve done,” a student majoring in modeling scolded as she wiped sweat from Mark’s brow, totally unaware of what had just transpired. “Let’s hear what he has to say. Maybe it’s just a rumor.”

Mark never faltered in his convictions. The easy way out was not the path he chose, and he turned to the girls, stopping at his office door. “You can’t talk me ‘out of’ or into anything,“ he smiled, then slipped inside and started packing his belongings.

Back at home, Mark laughed as he told me about the threat from the Feds. “You should have seen the expression on their faces when they realized their element of surprise had turned on them. They ran like scalded dogs all the way out the building.”

“It’s a good thing those girls didn’t have class any earlier,” I said, thinking how close they had come without even knowing it.

The phone rang. It was UCLA's chair of psychology Jolly West[13], wanting to speak with me. Mark had already figured out this CIA MK Ultra perpetrator's containment agenda. He knew that Jolly West's efforts to communicate with us now clearly indicated how endangered out lives had become. Recently, Steve Hassan, alleged acclaimed cohort of Jolly West and Margaret Singer, was brought in to verify Kelly's mind control abuses at the request of the Tennessee Claims Commission. Jolly West was concerned, as Hassan had submitted strong verbiage documenting Kelly's mind control programming[14].

Wasting no time, Mark "politely" terminated the call. As quickly as he hung up the phone, it rang again. "I need to go to the library," he said as he hung up the phone again. Immediately, we went out the door. As we drove to the shopping center where the small Eagle River library was located, I sensed a change occurring deep within me. My brain was fusing, and I was regaining control over my own mind and life. By the time we reached the parking lot, I felt like me for the first time in decades. I knew who I was, where I'd been, and where I was going. I realized continuity of thought, and was no longer speaking like the character Mel Gibson would portray so accurately in the movie Conspiracy Theory[15]. As I walked across the parking lot, I felt present, a stronger attachment to the planet, an awareness. It was as though dimensions had shifted and my spirit had reattached to my body after having floated above it in a safe, loving place for years while I was tortured to robotically carry out orders for others. I felt peace. I felt whole. I felt strong.

Mark noticed that my demeanor had changed. Even my walk was different, and never returned to what it was before that moment. We both sensed a permanent, profound change. Mark looked at me, his soulful eyes shining. Unable to contain myself, I exclaimed "I love you!"

Looking deep into my eyes, into the very soul of me, he said, "I believe you. I love you, too."

Mark dashed into the library while I went into the grocery store to buy dinner with a handful of change we had found. Once inside the grocery store, I could not think. After decades of only following orders under mind control, making decisions for myself wasn’t happening. I was still staring a the grocery items unable to choose our dinner when Mark found me, and asked, “What’s for dinner?”

“I know this sounds crazy, but I can’t decide. It’s like my brain goes off into a black hole before I can think to decide.” I was alarmed.

“We’ll do some brain exercises,” he promised. “Your brain is just rusty from lack of use. We can fix that easy enough.” Mark smiled and slipped his arm around me. “Let’s skip dinner tonight. We need to save every penny for our trip, anyway.”

It was about time! Yes!! He really could see how deeply I loved him. Now that I had free thought, free will, and soul expression again, I was free to love!

We hurried back to our home. We weaved our way through the boxes already packed with our few belongings. Our pet’s kennels were ready for them and the long trip back to the lower 48. We hadn’t disassembled the bed yet, though, and fell into each other’s arms. I lost track of time, and it was so different this time. Timeless passion. Timeless love. My choice.

Chapter 5
*SOUL*UTIONS

United in love and purpose, Mark and I finally arrived back in the lower 48. Our Alaska Airlines flight had been delayed for days due to a major volcanic eruption, leaving us to camp out on the airline floor with our luggage and kennels full of pets. Now we were more anxious than ever to retrieve our Pacer and tiny trailer from the ferry shipping docks and begin the long trek across the US to reunite with Kelly.

When we located our Pacer, all of our belongings packed inside had been raided and strewn about. Weapons and documents pertinent to our legal action and survival were missing. Mark's forethought in hand carrying such evidences as Alex Houston's CIA diary, videos, and medical records proved invaluable. We repacked the car and trailer, strapped the kennels to the roof, and began our long journey.

I telephoned Commissioner Rucker from a rest area in California. "Kelly is institutionalized at Valley Institute of Psychiatry in Owensboro, Kentucky," he told me. "I realize this is not a suitable placement and it's only temporary. They haven't even heard of mind control, but at least they've treated ritual abuse survivors. They have high security and are acutely aware of Kelly's circumstances. They've agreed to fully cooperate with us in obtaining qualified rehabilitation for her."

I was overwhelmed by emotion and couldn't even think to ask necessary questions. He continued, "I've arranged for disbursement of emergency funds through Huntsville, Alabama's District Attorney Bud Cramer since he runs the National Child Protection and Advocacy Center. Hopefully he can give you advice on how to proceed from there. Good luck."

“Good luck?” It seemed everyone was wishing “luck” these days. I knew it was more than luck that brought us this far!

Huntsville had been one of Kelly’s and my primary abuse bases for NASA mind control programming during the 1980’s, and I was deeply concerned with going there to pick up our emergency funds. Already Mark and I had heard rumblings regarding Bud Cramer[1] and his organization being a catch net for mind control survivors. Plus I was concerned that Kelly’s placement in Owensboro, Kentucky was far too close to Fort Campbell where we also had endured extensive, sophisticated programming.

I slowly walked back to the car and told Mark what Commissioner Rucker had said.

Never one to despair, Mark started the engine. “The people who hurt you and Kelly may have Intelligence,” Mark told me, “but they lack wisdom. They’re flat thinkers with no concept of the strength of the human spirit or the power of a mother’s love. There is no depth to their criminal minds, which is why wisdom outthinks a criminal mind every time.”

Hope, rather than luck, is necessary for human survival, and I was deeply grateful for the hope Mark’s wisdom provided. Would I ever be capable of such wisdom myself? I was still striving to apply the simple motto Mark had given to me “voice no negatives without a solution.” It was a challenge to think of solutions when I was still learning to think for myself at all! At least this phrase kept me from incessant complaining, whining, and slipping into immobilizing despair while I strove to push my brain to think beyond past conditioning of compliance without question.

I settled into my seat, pulled out one of my ever-present notebooks, and began writing out details of the vast information I was remembering. My traumatic experiences with Wayne Cox and his Louisiana backwoods witchcraft blood rituals left me prime for occult- theme mind control programming. Byrd ordered that this be instilled by Lieutenant Colonel Michael Aquino, founder of the Occult Temple of Set proliferating on US military bases. Aquino seemed untouchable in those days with his professed Neo-Nazi criminal activity covered by his affiliation with the War College's Psychological Warfare Division, the Catholic Jesuits, the First Amendment of the US Constitution that ensures "freedom of religion," and through his association with influential politicians such as Byrd.

As soon as Kelly was born in 1980, Byrd ordered that we transfer to Nashville, Tennessee and our second mind control handler in MK Ultra, CIA Operative Alex Houston. Houston worked as a ventriloquist and stage hypnotist in the country music industry, which provided an ideal cover for me to travel throughout the US, Canada, Mexico, and the Caribbean as ordered. Nashville was also in close proximity to two mind control epicenters; one in Fort Campbell, Kentucky where elite special forces such as the 101st Airborne were programmed and trained, and the other in Huntsville, Alabama's NASA facilities. Lt. Col. Aquino became my primary mind control programmer according to Byrd's instruction throughout the Reagan-Bush Administration. I was programmed for CIA Black Budget funding operations, to deliver messages to and from various government leaders, and fulfill sexual perversion in the process[2].

Kelly was also subjected to Aquino's abuse and programming as ordered by Byrd, despite the fact that her mind control victimization was far more technologically advanced than mine. Kelly experienced classified high technology harmonic mind control programming since birth. Where my brain was compartmentalized through trauma, her neuron pathways were harmonically vibrated for more precise compartmentalization. Even before she was born, I was sent to Tulane University Medical Center in New Orleans, Louisiana where genetic mind control engineering was already underway. The sophisticated high-tech means by which Kelly was conditioned were also being utilized at the Fort Campbell and NASA facilities, where Aquino was willing to administer them. He was much more adept at playing devil's advocate, wielding his stun gun as the 'power of satan' for programming purposes, than he was with harmonic equipment. Nevertheless, Aquino had supposedly established himself at both mind control epicenters, having used harmonic equipment to fine tune the singing qualities of the country music entertainers Byrd controlled[3].

It was no wonder that I was hesitant to go back into Huntsville and was concerned for Kelly's placement in Kentucky. Nor was I comfortable when Mark announced that we would be stopping in Nashville before proceeding to Huntsville as arranged. Then he explained, "It would be wise to build a backdoor to ensure Kelly's safety as well as our own. We need to strategically disperse a few packets of information around Washington, DC. An old acquaintance of mine that I went to school with is a US Congressman now, and he may be able to help us avoid CIA interception and actually reach the appropriate people with the documents."

Mark pulled up to Nashville's Federal Building. "Wait here," he said, smoothing the wrinkles from his travel pants. Transferring a few select packets into his brief case, he said, "I'm going up to Congressman Clement's office, and will be back in twenty minutes."

Eighteen minutes later, Mark was back in the car, aiming it for Huntsville. "Done," he smiled. "Anytime we absolutely need to reach people with something in Washington, DC, Clement's staff will ensure it gets there intact by Congressional Red Bag Mail."

"I'm still striving to think of solutions and you're already implementing them!" How fortunate I felt to be lifted from my mind control existence by someone so wise and capable. I decided solution should be spelled 'SOULution'. Armed with soul, truth, and a mother's love, I convinced myself that I was ready for Huntsville.

Two hours later, Mark drove past Huntsville's Redstone Arsenal, Gate 9 exit near the NASA Space and Rocket Center. Disjointed bits of memory began flashing, and I forgot all about my recent resolution and began shaking. "No. We will never survive this. There's no place to run and no place to hide, especially when we're right in their own backyard! Please…" I begged, "let's go. I quit. I can't do this."

Mark managed to calm my hysteria with logic. "There is a place to run – right at them. And you have no need to hide – obviously they do or they wouldn't devote so much effort and money to cover-up. As for being in their 'own backyard,' it's the safest place to be. As they say, 'Nazi's don't shoot folks in their own bedroom.' You can't quit now because I've already devoted a year to this, and I refuse to quit." I was still sobbing as he continued, "We're on the back of a tiger and we've got to ride it until he drops or he'll eat us for lunch. I can survive the un-survivable, but I can't tolerate the intolerable and your negativity is intolerable." He stopped the car. "You can get out and walk if you want, but I'm going to finish this."

I still wasn't very good at making decisions for myself. Walking from here was out of the question, though, and my decision didn't require any thought. I definitely needed to work on that "voice no negatives without a solution" thing. For now, I quit sobbing and rode on in silence. Besides, I still had a lot of memories surfacing that I needed to write out.

We finally arrived at the Highway 72 Circle K rendezvous according to Huntsville District Attorney Bud Cramer's instructions. Plain-clothes drug cops Jeff Bennett and Chuck Crabtree provided us a key to the Police "Safe House" where we would be staying. "We'd like to interview you first thing in the morning," they said.

The interview went on for days while Bennett and Crabtree took notes on Byrd and Aquino's ties to NASA. They were aware of Huntsville's reliance on Byrd's Senate appropriations funds for their NASA operations, yet had no inside knowledge of mind control operations. I explained how Aquino used me in the training video How to Create a Mind Controlled Slave Using a Stun Gun[4] that was filmed in Huntsville, and even provided details of local persons involved.

I elaborated further on how one such individual, Huntsville Police Sergeant Frank Crowley, actively covered up local crime. I had been privy to the criminal roots of the First (and last) Annual Johnny Lee Picnic held August 7-9, 1987 in nearby Guntersville, where it was pre-planned that the promoter would steal all proceeds. Houston, who was booked to entertain at the event by his Agent Reggie MacLaughlin, was tipped to the plan and demanded to be paid up front. He was also responsible for bringing vast quantities of CIA cocaine into the event, half of which was to be taken to the Fraternal Order of Police Convention scheduled in Mobile immediately afterward. When a girl was murdered the last night of the Picnic in a bizarre sex act, it further complicated the whole criminal mess and Sgt. Crowley was needed to cover it all up. Country entertainer Keith Whitley had witnessed the murder, was aware of the CIA's cocaine ties into it all, and sobbed hysterically, threatening to go to the media with it. Lorrie Morgan asked me to keep their baby in our motor home while she and Reggie MacLaughlin tried to regain control of Keith. The next day, when all of us were at the Mobile F.O.P. Convention, Sgt. Crowley bragged how he "had it all covered."

Bennett and Crabtree appeared extremely nervous, and I assumed it was due to the F.O.P.'s involvement in CIA cocaine operations. "Everybody knows the F.O.P. is involved in CIA cocaine operations," I consoled them. "It doesn't mean all police are corrupt. I'm not suggesting you two are corrupt just because I knew so many who are. There's good and bad in everything—even the CIA. Even politicians. Even Masons. I'm not painting everyone with the same brush." I smiled.

Mark changed the subject. "There is a major cocaine deal going down in town this weekend. One of the CIA's main players, Hank Cochran, is scheduled to appear at The Gold Rush."

"He's a singer and songwriter in the country music industry," I added. "I lived on his farm in '78 when Wayne Cox was working with the Mandrells. It all ties right back into Byrd again. Irby Mandrell, the girls' father, even bragged how Byrd had them programmed and harmonically tuned right here in Huntsville[5]."

Mark and I supplied sufficient detail of Hank Cochran's cocaine operations with the CIA for a bust to be set up. Crabtree and Bennett drew up the plan, which would occur the next evening in the parking lot of the Gold Rush. Mark and I were to meet them there at 6PM, after which back up would arrive and make the arrests.

At 6PM, Mark and I were parked in the appointed spot waiting for Crabtree and Bennett to show up. Hank Cochran's gold Mercedes pulled up to the door of the lounge. He snorted a line of coke right in plain sight before going in to the Gold Rush.

“Did you see that?” I shrieked. “How much more obvious do these guys have to be before justice prevails? Where are Bennett and Crabtree?”

Hank Cochran’s driver slowly got out of the car with his huge, 50 caliber Desert Eagle gun drawn. Standing behind the car door, he nodded his head for another passenger to go into the building with what appeared to be a heavy leather bag.

“That’s the biggest gun I ever saw in my life,” I whispered as the driver scanned the parking lot for any witnesses.

“Kiss me, quick!” Mark pulled me close for what he hoped would look enough like a passionate sex act to give us time to pull out. He pushed my head down, backed the car out of the parking lot, and drove away.

“Where were you guys?!” I demanded to know the next day.

“If you want to live, leave.” Bennett gestured over his shoulder to cops surrounding the so-called ‘safe house.’ “Our Sergeant doesn’t want you here.”

“Our Sergeant is Sgt. Crowley. He doesn’t know you’re here yet.” Crabtree tried to soften the threat. “You’d better leave before he finds out.”

“Now!” Bennett ordered. Referring to the cops surrounding us, he said, “These guys will escort you out of town and out of the state.”

Mark calmly smiled at Bennett and patted the weapon he and Crabtree knew he carried. “I knew how to get here, and I know the way out. You haven’t heard the last from me, you chicken shit son-of-a-bitch.”

I gathered our few belongings from the ‘safe house’ while Mark telephoned Cramer’s office. Cramer’s assistant Barbara Johnson was already aware of this turn of events. Her only voiced concern was to ask if Crabtree had cashed the Violent Crimes Compensation check for us as instructed. He had. We threw our belongings in the car while the ‘police posse’ lined up their vehicles to escort us out of town. Mark drove smooth and deliberate, loosing many of them at the first red light, so that few were left by the time we turned back on to Highway 72.

The whole Huntsville experience proved quite productive in spite of the life threatening turmoil surrounding us. We received the necessary emergency funds, learned numerous pitfalls to avoid, and somehow managed to survive the whole ordeal. I grew wiser from seeing the magnitude of the cover-up and corruption emanating from NASA.

Chapter 6
JUST ‘CAUSE

“My mother will let us stay at her house[1] while we finish getting Kelly transferred and report these crimes to the Feds,” Mark told me. We had arrived back in Nashville without further incident and wearily unpacked our belongings into a small bedroom in Melba’s house.

Melba’s fall from the horse she was riding with Mark when he was only six years old had left her severely brain damaged. Mark not only raised himself, he had taken care of Melba all his life. Had it not been for his resultant interest in mind sciences hoping to find a cure for her, he may not have known how to help me recover from mind control. I was deeply grateful to Melba, and touched by Mark’s compassion and patience for her and me both.

“I’m glad you’re here,” Melba firmly stated as though Mark had only been away a short while. “Some fellow from Fort Campbell has been calling for you. I told him you weren’t here and he kept calling back anyway.”

“What’s his name?” Mark asked.

“Oh, I forgot.” Melba opened the back door and let one of her countless cats outside.

“’Oh, I forgot’ has been calling here all my life,” Mark smiled and hugged his mother. “Thanks for letting us stay here. Hopefully we won’t need to be here long.”

Melba looked defensive. “Why don’t you want to stay here?”

"I didn't say 'I don't want to stay here,' Mother," Mark patiently explained. "I simply hope it won't take us long to accomplish what we have to do."

Mark opened the refrigerator door. "I'll cook dinner tonight if I can find anything." Moving aside bottles and jars of clouded fuzz and black goo revealed nothing but a few furry green balls.

"That's not edible." I was relieved Melba knew the difference between spoiled and edible food. She opened the pantry door. "This is fresh."

Mark eyed the contents and reached for a can of albacore tuna fish.

"That's cat food!" she shrieked.

"You feed your cats albacore?" Mark asked.

"They're finicky."

"So am I," Mark said as the phone rang.

"It's that man again," Melba said. "You answer it."

Mark was looking for bread to go with the tuna fish, and, as a rule, I did not answer the telephone in the event it was a 'tone call.' A harmonic tone delivered by telephone was Byrd's prior method of triggering me into robotic compliance with whatever orders followed. Melba answered it herself. It was her neighbor across the street, checking to see who was at her house.

"Mark is finally here to take that call from the Fort Campbell fellow," Melba told her. Wow. There would be no secrets around here. I wondered how many people knew about this, or if it was even relevant. I soon found out. Next time the phone rang it was him.

"How'd you get this number?" I heard Mark ask as he brushed a cat away from his tuna fish. I went back into our tiny room to tidy it up and put our clothes in the drawers. A few minutes later, Mark slipped into our room, quickly closing the door before the cats followed. I sneezed.

"I'm sorry about the cats," he said as I blew my nose. "You finally got past that histamine[2] problem, and now this."

"That's OK," I sniffed. "At least they've got some quality tuna to share with us."

Mark smiled, and then got serious. "The timing of that phone call has me wondering. It seems Fort Campbell already knows we were reporting Aquino's crimes in Huntsville. Jim Dibble, a Defense Intelligence Agency 'special agent' assigned to the Fort Campbell Criminal Investigation Division, wants to interview you. He just came back from Panama where he was chief investigator of Noriega's lair. Apparently he found some things that link Noriega to Aquino and CIA drug ops."

"At least he'll have a point of reference for understanding what I'm reporting. When is he coming?"

"Day after tomorrow. I told him to give us some time to settle in and unpack before he starts demanding documents and paperwork. I'm not real sure what his agenda is, and it makes me nervous that he found us through Huntsville. I'm going to make a phone call when we go into town tomorrow and check him out with my sources." Mark tested the bed. It didn't bounce when he patted the spot next to him. I snuggled into him, finding all the comfort in the world in his arms.

My mind drifted back to Operation Shell Game[3], and Bradenton Beach, Florida just outside of McDill Air Force Base. It was 1987 in the heat of Iran Contra, and Noriega had already been warned to cease his CIA cocaine activities for a while. Yet he was as brazen and obvious as ever. Since I had had dealings with Noriega in the past[4], I was to be used for this operation under orders from Dick Cheney[5], who was still working in his basement quarters of the Pentagon at the time. The plan was to appeal to Noriega's occultic superstitions, which included Aquino's so-called wizardry, my extensive mind control programming, and delivery of an ultimatum to him from then-President Reagan. I could still recall the verbiage of the message in photographic detail[6], complete with the voice inflections used when the message was instilled and subsequently when it was delivered.

"Is Dibble superstitious?" I asked. "Or does he know that Aquino's satanic power is in the form of a stun gun and Nazi-based mind control?"

"Superstition begins where knowledge leaves off," Mark said. "I have no clue if Dibble can even think for himself, let alone where his knowledge leaves off."

"Well, we can't go wrong with truth," I stated.

"If you surpass his point of reference for understanding it, he may not recognize it as reality."

"But truth never goes away," I argued. "Eventually he'll get it."

"Time is not our friend right now," Mark countered. "And we don't need Dibble as an enemy. He just returned from Operation Just Cause and he's in a high level position to 'just cause' us problems."

"Can we ask him about the harmonics used against Noriega?"

Mark knew I was referring to the highly publicized "rock music" embedded with harmonics that US soldiers strategically blared through boom-boxes into the Vatican embassy where Noriega was hiding out prior to his capture. "Approach the subject carefully," Mark advised. "Dibble may buy into the deliberate misnomer that 'lyrics' affect the subconscious rather than harmonics[7]. You've got to consider that Dibble has heavy Catholic[8] ties into this, and may be as superstitious as Noriega and Aquino combined."

“I’ll just answer questions,” I concluded.

“Why offer Fort Campbell information on Aquino, anyway?” Mark asked. “They know him better than we do. If Dibble is ‘investigating’ Aquino, his own people have either left him in the dark or they’re sending him in to find out what you’ve remembered.”

My stomach growled, and I changed the subject. “Did you find anything in the kitchen to cook for dinner?” Mark was a gourmet chef, having learned how to cook in France some years previous while working with Capital International Airways. C.I.A. had an office at Orley Airport in France, which was in close proximity to the chef school he attended. How fortunate for me since my meager diet for so many years limited my ability to even boil water. Mark seemed like my ‘universal justice of the food.’ I ate well these days, even when we had no budget for groceries. It was he who was enduring a radical shift from the high quality food he was used to.

“We’ll have to go to town for groceries tomorrow. There’s still plenty of albacore tuna fish in the pantry, though.” Mark smiled at me. “Have you noticed that the poorer we are, the better food tastes and the hotter sex is?”

His simple question caused me to ponder our circumstances. I really did not have a comparative by which to answer. We were financially devastated by the time my digestive problems allowed me to indulge in Mark’s cooking, and it is still by far the best I’ve ever tasted. And sexually, I felt as though he were the first real sex I ever had despite incest, pornography, prostitution, and being used as a White House/Pentagon level sex slave. Before Mark, I had no idea that a body could endure so much pleasure! The sex I was trained for under MK Ultra mind control was autogenically derived, often brutal, and perverse. With love comes sexual freedom, and sexual freedom is more fun than my programmers could begin to imagine!

“How can being poor feel so rich?” I asked.

“We’ll always remember the love of these times,” Mark caressed me. “Let’s embrace the moment because we won’t be poor for long[9].”

The next morning, Mark and I drove to the nearby town of Dickson in search of groceries. What little food Melba had was for her and the cats, and she needed a more substantial diet as well. We stopped by the local Catholic church where I requested a few groceries from charity, and sought advise on how to officially report the ritual and sexual abuse I experienced within the church by priests.

“You shouldn’t even be alive!” roared the attending priest. “There is nothing for you here.” The massive doors swung shut behind me. As I walked back to the car, I wondered what the local parishioners would think of their priest’s attitude. Perhaps they would withhold their donations and weekly offerings if they knew the hungry were being turned away and ignored. What action would they take for the children’s sake?

“Well, how’d you come out?” Mark asked as I got back in the car.

“I landed on my feet when the priest threw me out.”

Mark put his arm around me, “I’m sorry he treated you that way. Someday the church is going to pay for ignoring blatant and rampant abuse,” he comforted me.

“I’ll just keep talking until someone listens,” I smiled through my tears.

“Apparently Kelly is talking, too, and is being heard all the way to Washington, DC.” Mark informed me. “I just made that phone call about Dibble, and learned that Kelly’s situation is far more pressing than my concerns about Fort Campbell’s ‘suicide soldiers.’”

“What suicide soldiers?”

“That’s what they call Fort Campbell’s 101st Airborne around here. Everyone in the vicinity knows the fighting elite is programmed. Anyway, Dibble is not a threat. It’s Kelly’s surroundings that we need to secure.”

“Can we still go see her?” My heart caught in my throat at the thought of being delayed from seeing Kelly any longer.

“Of course,” Mark said, backing the car out of the church drive. “I want to see her, too. But I’ve got to see to her safety, first. We need to have a few key packets of information red bagged to DC through Congressman Clement, and meet with US Customs officials in the Nashville office before we make plans to travel to Kentucky.”

Returning to our immediate need I suggested, “Let’s go to Second Harvest Food Bank. They are notorious for feeding the hungry even when it’s not Thanksgiving – and they don’t answer to the church or the government. People helping people. That’s what works best.”

Mark pulled into their parking lot. Before I could even tell the Second Harvest workers my need, they told Mark to back the car up to the loading dock. “You wouldn’t be here if you weren’t in need,” they cheerfully said as they filled the car with boxes of groceries.

“I hope this is the last time I’ll have to rely on you,” I said as I thanked the compassionate workers. “Soon I’ll be able to contribute instead.”

“No one wants to be poor,” a Second Harvest worker told me. “Life has its struggles, though. As long as you have need, you have help available right here.”

With the car loaded with enough groceries for all three of us, Mark drove back to his mother’s house. “Next time we’re in Nashville,” I vowed, “I’ll look up the archdiocese and report Catholic abuse directly to them. Surely all Catholics aren’t involved in this. Even if it’s a cardinal law to usher pedophile priests from church to church, there’s bound to be someone who cares about the welfare of the children.”

Before we finished pulling into the driveway, Melba opened the front door and hollered to Mark, “When’s dinner? I thought you were cooking?”

The next day I set out a few cookies I'd baked while Mark brewed coffee. Jim Dibble's line of questioning quickly revealed that Mark's conclusions were accurate as usual. Fort Campbell was interested in finding out what I had remembered, while Dibble's apparent superstitions revealed nothing new to us. The best we were able to glean from the meeting was a direct connection to the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation's Andy Earl and Goodlettsville Police Chief Fred Schott, who both were reputed to be honest.

Mark and I intended to turn information over to the TBI anyway, and perhaps we could obtain a measure of protection for Kelly through Chief Schott. Kelly and I had been kept in Goodlettsville during the course of our victimization, and Alex Houston was still residing there. Our first order of business would be more far reaching, however, from US Customs and Congressman Clement's office to Washington, DC.

Chapter 7
WASH. DC

Lou Bock," the US Customs agent extended his hand. "I've been expecting you. Please sit down." Lou gestured toward two chairs crammed into his small, sparsely decorated office.

Mark laid the packet of information on his desk as we sat down. "You've stirred quite a bit of interest throughout the agency," Lou said. "Apparently much of the drug information you turned into our Alaska office has already checked out. Why are you bringing a classified issue like mind control into this?"

"There's a little girl's life on the line here," Mark told him.

"She's my daughter," I continued, "and she's tangled in the mental health system's bureaucratic red tape due to cover-up. The CIA uses MK Ultra mind control victims like us in their drug operations because they believe it will keep their criminal covert activity secret."

"Obviously they're wrong," Mark said. "We had more details of their 'secrets' red bagged[1] to DC this morning on the way over here."

"You could get further in your efforts if you left mind control out of this," Lou advised.

"It's love for my daughter that motivates me to expose this high level criminal mess," I argued. "I'm not in this for vengeance, bitterness, hatred, or any other negative purpose. Love is the most powerful force in the universe and it is love for Kelly that compels me to make a positive difference for her and our country."

"Look," Lou said. "Your chances of survival are probably slim, and I cannot in all good conscience proceed without at least offering you protection through the Federal Witness Protection program."

Mark injected, "Lou, you've got to understand something here. Federal 'Protection' is an oxymoron in this case. Let's get real. Kelly needs qualified rehabilitation. She needs protection from the Feds, not by the Feds. If you saw what their containment efforts were doing to that child, you would be outraged."

"I'm sure the mental health system doesn't even know what mind control is," Lou conceded, "let alone how to safely treat someone who's been subjected to it. Especially not a child. Why didn't you rehabilitate her?"

Mark sighed. There was no way Lou could know the depth of emotion this issue stirred in him. "Kelly was exposed to harmonics since birth." Lou frowned and set down as Mark continued. "She needs rehab suitable for her need. Cathy was subjected to the old method of physical and psychological torture. My own past in Intelligence provided me what I needed to know, as well as who, to ensure Cathy's deprogramming was a success."

"How do I know her deprogramming was successful?" Lou turned to me. "Ms. O'Brien, isn't it possible that people you've named is just a fantasy of yours for publicity's sake?"

"I wish it was 'just a fantasy'. Then those politically affluent perpe*traitors* like Senator Byrd wouldn't be spending so much time and our country's money on covering-up Kelly's need. We might get further in our efforts to obtain Kelly's right to qualified rehabilitation plus gain the publicity necessary for raising awareness and inciting necessary change."

"Byrd?" Lou raised his eyebrows. "Are you sure this isn't just a publicity stunt?"

"It's backwards if that was my intent." I was raging now. "If I wanted to create a sex scandal, I would have chosen a Kennedy or something more believable than Byrd! Have you ever seen him? I have, and that was torture in itself.”

“Is this why you talk about his penis size?” Lou asked.

This line of questioning seemed so trivial to the magnitude of what needed to be accomplished. “Kelly reported Byrd’s unusually small penis size in two institutions already. It’s something Byrd can’t change anymore than I can change the vaginal mutilation he ordered performed on me.”

“OK,” Lou stroked his chin. “Let’s get back on point. We’ve got US Customs Internal Affairs coming in on this, and you are going to be asked a lot tougher questions than these. There are many of us aware of the CIA’s drug operations like Operation Watchtower[2]. You’ve identified a few of our own, and individuals like Jose’ Busto[3] masquerading as an Immigrations officer. We’d like for you and Mark to cooperate with us. Maybe we can even get some financial compensation for you for your information, although your refusal to accept Federal Protection makes it doubtful.”

“We could use some help with Kelly’s situation,” Mark said. “It is extremely difficult to obtain effective rehabilitation for Kelly when the government is hell-bent on covering-up the cause. Now she is telling unskilled therapists about classified CIA drug ops, and it’s creating serious problems because they don’t know what to keep secret. The Feds just found out she is talking, and her circumstances are becoming precarious. Neither Federal Protection nor money can solve her problems, but perhaps Customs can help keep her safe. Of course we’ll cooperate regardless of any compensation. Customs has consistently cooperated with us. We can’t meet with Internal Affairs next week, though, since we’re already scheduled for a lengthy interview with the FBI.”

“I already know about your FBI meeting.” Lou chose his words thoughtfully. “Do you have a tape recorder?”

“Running right now, as a matter of fact.” Mark flipped open his briefcase while Lou rolled his eyes.

“Great. Bring it with you.” Lou pantomimed for Mark to turn it off, then continued. “I’ll go with you, if you want. You’ve got some trouble waiting for you. Better yet, I could arrange for them to meet us here.”

“Let’s have them meet us here.” Mark closed his briefcase, concluded arrangements for next week’s meeting, and shook Lou’s hand. “Enjoy DC. Every time we turn information over to a Federal agent, they’re flown to Washington, DC. I’m sure you’ll be no exception.”

I followed Mark out the door, still shaking inside with rage from Lou’s line of questioning. “I thought Customs was going to be of help,” I complained.

“They are,” Mark began.

“I can’t see it!”

“It’s hard to see when you’re blinded by emotion. Think logically.” Mark started the Pacer. “There’s more to this than you know, and you’re jumping to conclusions based on emotion.”

“I’m sorry,” I apologized. “I just want Kelly’s situation resolved, and it seems there is no where to turn for help.”

“I don’t want to hear ‘I’m sorry.’ I want to see the results of your being ‘sorry.’ Expand your thinking,” Mark advised. “You are jumping to conclusions based on your past dealings with a few criminal Customs officials involved in CIA drug ops. There is more to know than what your experience has taught you. Look beyond your own experience. Think further.”

I felt like I was at my wit’s end and my brain was falling into the black hole that demanded expanded thought in order to rise above it. I wasn’t being mentally lazy. My brain was used to exercise now. I simply didn’t know which direction to expand my thought.

Mark sensed my lack of direction. “When you look through eyes of hope and trust in truth again, your vision will clear.”

How fortunate I felt to be rehabilitated by Mark. His patience and wisdom made all the difference in the world to me. I thought about his statement as he navigated us through Nashville's heavy rush hour traffic. My vision did begin to clear, and my thought expanded beyond perceived negativity to other statements Lou had made.

"What is Internal Affairs?" I finally asked.

"Customs is cleaning their own house[4]. They're disgusted with CIA containment, illicit drug operations, corruption on the borders, and having their legitimate investigations terminated in DC. So Customs Internal Affairs is cleaning up the agency so they will have the necessary power to overcome the filth permeating the so-called Justice Department. This country needs one reliable agency, and it sure isn't the current CIA or DEA[5]. Customs had a brilliant man running the agency who is legitimately clean and is still determined to overcome corruption."

"Who is he?" I asked.

"William Von Raab[6]. He was Commissioner of Customs when we turned information over to Max Kitchens in Alaska, and he's in a position to make a world of difference for all of us."

"I didn't know anyone clean could even make it to the top of a Federal Agency." I was impressed. Mark was right about my past experience limiting my knowledge. People often draw conclusions based on what they know, and they need to know their knowledge base has been deliberately limited by government secrets. I got excited.

"Everyone needs to know about Von Raab!" I exclaimed.

"People are as blinded by emotion as you were a few minutes ago. There are very few people these days who have eyes-to-see and ears-to-hear truth. Social engineering through cover-up, censorship, and contrived news keeps the public fearful and emotionally arguing over ancient issues like abortion, cloning, gun control, and song lyrics. People hopelessly rely on government to tell them what to do, then blindly blame and fight each other in drug and race wars designed to separate them from the truth and each other."

"People are so easily led, it's no wonder the criminals I knew in DC refer to them as sheeple. Byrd even said that 95% of the people want to be led by the ruling 5%."

"That is a widely known fact," Mark said, "that gives folks like me hope. We only need the majority of that 5% to know and live truth in order to have leaders like Von Raab in power."

"If the majority of the 5% would serve the people instead of make the people serve them, we could restore freedom, justice, and peace!" Resolution looked so simple and clear.

"When the people lead, leaders follow," Mark quipped.

"Is the voice of the people leading Von Raab to make a difference?" I pondered. "Who is going to tell them that they are being heard? The news isn't letting the majority rule. With people like Jack Valenti[7] dictating what the public can know from his lofty perch in Hollywood, how will truth be brought to light?"

"Through the thankless efforts of people who dare to live true-to-soul and stand with conviction without having to be told they are the majority," Mark replied.

My mind was still rushing from the hope Mark's wisdom inspired when he pulled into Nashville's Catholic Archdiocese for my appointment with Sister Mary-something. Despite my high hopes for humanity, my expectations for immediate resolution to the sexual abuse, occultism, and mind control permeating the Catholic Church were low. Never the less, I would stand by my convictions and exert myself true-to-soul in hopes that the pedophile priests I named would be defrocked rather than simply shuffled around as usual. It would be over a decade before I would see any truth come to public light regarding the Boston mind control connection, but I still asserted what I knew in my 1990 testimony.

“I’ll write up this information and turn it in,” Sister told me. “If I were you, though, I wouldn’t be looking for any more help from the individual churches.”

I was indignant. “I’m sure the Vatican will need the funds generated by Catholic charities more than I ever could, anyway. They’re going to have a lot of lawsuits to defend since I am certainly not the only one recovering from such horrific Catholic abuse.”

She showed me to the door. “You need to forget your past, quit begging, and get a job.”

“The job I’m skilled for because of my past could generate cash, but it is not a consideration my moral standards will allow. I choose to focus on my daughter’s needs and my deprogramming, thank you.”

Feeling empowered rather than discouraged, I walked back to the car pleased that I had stood by the truth with conviction. True-to-Soul is the only way to live. A clear conscience provides clear vision, and I could see hope for the future. “Success!” I announced with a smile. “No groceries, though. Or financial compensation. Or compassion.”

“Your smile is all I need,” Mark said as he aimed the Pacer towards home.

Chapter 8
TWO WAY MIRRORS

With Kelly’s immediate security strengthened, Mark and I used part of the $500 emergency funds released through Bud Cramer’s office to drive to Kentucky. Our long awaited trip to see her at Valley Institute of Psychiatry proved encouraging. She was obviously being listened to and cared for by therapists and staff.

“Dad!” Kelly called to Mark as she flung her arms around him in a big hug. “Wayne Cox is only my biological father… he’s not my dad. You’re the one who loves me, and I love you. So, if it’s OK with you, I’m going to call you dad.”

“Of course,” Mark laughed as I finished signing us in.

“I’ve missed you so much, Kelly!” I cried as she jumped into my arms. “I wanted to see you when I heard you were leaving Alaska.”

“I know,” Kelly said. “The nurse explained everything to me. Now we’re all here safe. I’ve got so much to tell you.”

Kelly’s attending therapist Roger Hargus showed us into a meeting room, quietly explaining to me that our visit would be video taped. “I’ll give you a copy when you leave. Kelly has been remembering quite a bit. You may want this for legal evidence to further protect her.”

As soon as the door closed, Kelly ran over to the two-way mirror and waved. “I know that’s not a mirror,” Kelly said. She excitedly told us about how V.I.P. staff was tending to her asthma, keeping her from total respiratory failure. I knew from past experience, however, that the high doses of medication she was given kept her in a precarious health balance. Kelly went on to explain that she knew who and what we were up against, and thanked me for being such a good mother. Of course I cried. She said, “How many other mothers would take on a whole government for their child?” I was astounded by her insight. She talked in detail regarding sexual abuse by Alex Houston, ritual abuse by Wayne Cox, and sexual/ritual abuse in both Catholic and Mormon churches. She was even remembering CIA cocaine operations, including codes.

“Remember when we took the cruise and got cocaine in St. Thomas where that guy[1] asked, ‘What did the Byrd say?’ He meant Senator Byrd, didn’t he?” Kelly was remembering so much so fast! I was pleased that all this information was being video taped.

“You have to learn your past from the inside out, not from outside input in order to heal,” I told her. “So I really can’t comment on that. Have you written this out?”

“Yeah, but I need to write more. I just haven’t had time yet,” Kelly answered. “Staff is always giving me paper and a pen telling me ‘write it out’. They write a lot of it down, too. I saw them do it.”

By the time we left V.I.P., my arms were full of medical records, staff reports, and the videotape. Still, they felt empty without my precious daughter in them. Hugging her good-bye was more difficult than facing Huntsville, and I cried for hours as Mark drove.

“We need to make copies of Kelly’s V.I.P. records before tomorrow’s meeting with the FBI,” Mark said as we arrived back in Nashville.

“What about the video?” I wondered.

“We really can’t afford to make a copy of it right now,” Mark said, handing me his wallet. “Count our cash and see how many copies of Kelly’s records we can make.”

“That didn’t take long,” I stated as I counted his one dollar bill. “We’ll need to choose only the most important records.”

“I’m expecting some money in the mail. Maybe its at the Post Office.” Mark dug deep into his pants pocket and pulled out a handful of change for me to count while he pulled into his Green Hills Post Office. It was unlikely that we would get any mail since his service had been repeatedly interrupted without explanation since our return to the lower 48.

“There’s still no mail,” Mark grumbled as he climbed back into the Pacer. “I’m getting weary of our mail being illegally confiscated. Even that letter I mailed myself didn’t show up. I wrote the CIA a message to put the mail in the box when they finished steaming it open, and that didn’t work, either. I’ve got to do something about this.”

“While you were in the Post Office,” I told him, “I found a copy shop. Look how convenient it is.” I pointed to the shopping strip next door, which featured the Copy Shop. We walked over and went inside.

Mark and I began reprioritizing our paperwork to copy what few pages we could. “Let’s make sure Customs has copies for safe keeping, even if it means the FBI will have to wait. We can always turn it in to them later.”

“Should I make any copies to go in the red-bag packets we’re dropping off at Clement’s office?” Mark pondered my question, re-calculating our expenses.

“Can I help you?”

That question would reverberate with meaning for years to come. Mark and I turned around, expecting to see a typical print shop employee. Billy was anything but typical. We saw an extremely handsome, well-muscled young man whose bright blue eyes twinkled with intelligence. Billy would eventually become one of our closest friends, and literally a lifesaver.

“No,” Mark told him as he resumed sorting papers. “I can’t even afford to run all the copies I need on this self serve machine.”

“My machine isn’t in use right now,” Billy said. “It won’t cost you anything. I heard you talking and I’d like to help.”

“You have no idea how much this means to us,” Mark said, handing him a stack of documents. “I’m used to giving, not taking. But I’ll take you up on your offer this time.”

Billy slipped some of the papers into the automatic feeder of his copy machine. “Are any of these documents classified?” he asked.

“No,” Mark told him. “It does have to do with horrific government abuse that they’re trying to cover-up, though. There’s a little girl’s life on the line here, and we’re not going to let them cover it up. Have you ever heard of CIA mind control?”

“As a matter of fact, I have,” Billy answered, much to our surprise. “My whole family is involved in medicine in this town, and I know about the Barbara Mandrell[2] incident at Baptist Hospital. Back when Barbara Mandrell banged her head in that car crash, they brought her in to Baptist. There were Federal agents and armed security posted everywhere, and Barbara was talking about the CIA and mind control. Anyone who heard her was told it was a matter of national security, and that they would lose their medical license, life and liberty if they repeated it.”

“Obviously someone did repeat it,” Mark said.

Billy shook his head in agreement. “Everybody knows about it now. What do you know?” Billy invited Mark into the employees’ backroom where they talked while I finished compiling the paperwork for tomorrow’s meeting with the FBI at the Customs office, and sealing the packets to be red-bagged from Clement’s office first thing in the morning. As soon as I finished, Billy opened the door inviting me to join them.

“How’d you know I was through?” I asked, astounded by Billy’s perceptiveness.

“I wasn’t using my psychic abilities,” Billy laughed. “This is a two way mirror.” He showed me the mirror on the backroom wall was actually a window from the employees’ side. “It’s amazing what can be seen through a two way mirror.”

Billy was easy to talk with, and he and Mark got along like old familiar friends. Billy represented the good side of humanity that Mark had been telling me was the majority. It took awhile for me to realize it, though, since years of being exposed to self-centered cruel people had jaded my perspectives. Even after I regained a love for and belief in humankind, Billy still stands out as that one-in-a-million kind of true friend.

Responding to the gratitude we expressed as we went out the door, Billy said, “Anytime. I mean it. *Any*time.”

It seemed we had just gone to bed when the alarm rang, prompting us to prepare for the days events. After stopping by Clement’s office, which ironically was located in the same Federal Building as the FBI, we crossed town to the Customs office where we were scheduled to meet with them.

“Come in,” Lou called from a cluttered corner where he was bent over looking for styrofoam coffee cups. “Can I get you some coffee?”

“Thanks. Cream and sugar for both of us,” I accepted his warm offer. “How was DC?”

“Windy.” Lou did not elaborate.

Mark tossed copies of Kelly’s record on top of the stacks of paper on Lou’s desk. “We brought a few pertinent records from V.I.P. for you. We’ve got a powerful videotape of Kelly’s testimony, too, that we’ll provide you once we make a few copies of it.”

Lou handed us our coffee and looked through the papers, compassion reflecting in his eyes as he silently read them. He cleared his throat. “What do you want the FBI to have?”

“Everything,” Mark said. “They’ve already got the information packet that we turned into the Anchorage office. Plus I turned over the documents to the Jackson, Mississippi office where my ex-wife’s case is active.”

“I sent information to Agent Roger Young in Las Vegas since he’s working on the Michael Dante’[3] aspect of the case,” I added.

Lou quickly searched his mental files. “Who is Dante’?”

“Michael Dante’ is the pornographer in Beverly Hills who covertly videotapes perversions of global leaders for the likes of Reagan. Roger Young was interested in Dante’s collection, due to the impact it could have on global politics. Since I saw the vault in Dante’s mansion where he kept the tapes, Roger Young was asking for all the information I could supply him. I was often used in sexually compromising positions during the Reagan-Bush Administration, and knew who was blackmailing whom for what purpose. These criminals don’t trust each other and have each other by the perversion so-to-speak. Many of the films I was used in were made at Bohemian Grove[4] in Northern California or in the White House[5].”

“How many of these videos were made?” Lou asked.

“I really don’t know,” I told him. “I’m sure Kelly and I weren’t the only ones being prostituted by the CIA for blackmail purposes. The vault in Dante’s house is about the size of this office, and it was stacked to the ceiling with videos.”

Lou looked at his watch and stood up. “Excuse us,” he told me, nodding to Mark to follow him into the other room. Alone with my thoughts, my mind drifted to my sexual encounter with President dela Madrid[6] of Mexico that was videotaped through a tiny fish-eye lens in the ceiling December 1986 in Malibu, California. The Juarez, Mexican border was being opened as groundwork for NAFTA[7], allowing for the free flow of drugs intended to equalize the US and Mexican economies. The party in Malibu brought in then President Ronald Reagan, his friend and head of the Motion Picture Association of America Jack Valenti, George Bush, Jr., Michael Dante’, then Mexican President Miguel dela Madrid, and other high ranking officials involved in CIA drug running, prostitution, and mind control. Dela Madrid was no stranger to government-level blackmail tactics, and had cleverly implicated "Poppy" Bush, Sr.'s involvement with CIA heroin as well as cocaine for the 'hidden' camera.

"They're here," Mark quietly alerted me as he walked back in the office, immediately followed by Lou Bock and FBI Agents Brad Garrett[8] and Phil Tuney. The one who introduced himself as Garrett appeared to be dressed in a satanist costume, looking absurd in his all mat-black attire. Tuney looked like a comic book red nosed alcoholic right out of the funny papers. My amused disgust went unnoticed since their focus was on the coffee corner.

Garrett said, "How 'bout serving us some coffee?"

Lou was rifling through a stack of papers on his desk. Without pausing, he shot Garrett a sharp look and said, "I know you guys are used to serving the CIA in your office, but we don't serve anyone around here. Help yourself."

Garrett and Tuney leaned against the desk, coffee in hand, and took the packet of information Mark handed them.

"The left hand doesn't always know what the right hand is doing," Mark began, "so here's a duplicate of the information we've turned in to the FBI through the Alaska, Mississippi, Las Vegas, and DC bureaus."

"We've seen this. And if what Ms. O'Brien says is true, she would be too crazy to remember it," Garrett began.

"Much of what she has said has already checked out," Lou told him.

Garrett puffed out his chest even further. "I am a psychologist working for the FBI."

"Good," Mark said, matter-of-factly. "Then you're aware of mind control. Are you familiar with harmonics, or just Aquino's occult-based variety?"

“We know about trauma-based mind control.” Tuney responded, seething. “In order to avoid further trauma, you know you want to disappear into our Federal Protection Program.” He pulled a file from his briefcase. “Everything is in order for all three of you to enter.” He pushed the file toward Mark.

Mark looked him in the eye without picking it up. “You must ‘know’ that Ms. O’Brien and her daughter need protection from the Feds not by the Feds, and frankly, I’m quite capable of seeing to their safety.” Mark patted his briefcase and side. “You see I am a one man army.”

Lou rolled his eyes, frustrated that Mark was resorting to a veiled threat in his office. While Tuney cited reasons Mark shouldn’t carry a weapon into a Federal office, Garrett began using subtle Jesuit mind control hand signals in an effort to trigger me. Tuney added a couple of signals as well, including the occult sign of the horns, which indicated to me that both had been cued on my old mind control programming. I tried not to smile as Garrett, who apparently thought I had not seen his antics, intensified his signaling. Both he and Tuney were hand signaling so intensely they looked like they belonged on a baseball field.

“Since you are an FBI psychologist,” I told Garrett, “you must know the difference between *de*programming and *re*programming. Had I been reprogrammed over the top of my old programming, your hand signals would have worked by now. Since I have actually been *de*programmed, not only will I ignore your efforts, you can spread the word all the way up to Dick Thornburgh[9] that I have remembered everything.”

“And you,” Mark pointed at Garrett with his middle finger, “be sure and tell Aquino his hand signals are antiquated.”

“I don’t know what you’re talking about,” Garrett began.

“Its all in here,” Mark pointed, still using his middle finger, to the information packet we had given them. “I thought you said you read it?”

Tuney was slamming the Federal Witness Protection documents in his briefcase, while Garrett picked up the documents. “I’m sure we’ll see you again,” Garrett glared.

“You know it. Give our best to the boys in DC[10],” Mark told them as they shook hands with Lou and stormed out of the office.

It was late at night by the time we arrived back at Melba’s house. Melba excitedly gave Mark his day’s messages as I carried the contents of the Pacer into our tiny bedroom. The walls were oddly barren. My pictures of Kelly were gone. My stack of deprogramming notes, collage pieces, and reminder notes was missing. Where was everything? As I turned to tell Mark, I could hear his mother say, “Those men in nice suits came by today for the papers they said you wanted them to have, so I let them in.” I cried. I cried because I felt violated that the Feds cleaned us out again, but most of all I cried because Mark had lived with his mother’s condition all his life.

Mark’s face fell when he saw our empty room and the tears running down my face. “At least they can’t take the pictures I have of Kelly in my heart,” I said. Such a tender man. Such a harsh day.

Mark reached up into the air conditioner return vent and pulled down a small package, examining it. “They didn’t get Kelly’s V.I.P. video.” He looked around a bit more. “Or anything else I stashed. I learned a long time ago to expect to be raided when reporting to the FBI.” He tossed his stash on the nightstand. “Hey, it’s not so crowded in here,” Mark smiled through his weary eyes as he bounced on our twin bed, patting the pillow beside him. I crawled into his arms, his powerful energy flowing through his hand as he cradled my head.

“I know a great way to relieve tension,” he began. How fortunate I felt at that moment to have survived, know love, share passion, and come so far in exposing politically affluent abusers. I was absolutely convinced this brilliant man beside me must have the biggest balls and biggest heart on the planet. Who else could take on such a task against all odds?

Chapter 9
REFLECTIONS

The next few days were spent writing out memory. Seeing George Bush in the news, oftentimes in the company of his close friend and comrade Dick Cheney[1], caused bits and pieces of memory to flash across my mind's screen. Other events triggered memory as well, from songs on the radio to comments people would make in passing. Everything in my environment was a trigger as Mark explained and I wondered how long the deprogramming process would take.

"In essence, it would take ten years x 10 to remember every detail of ten years," Mark was telling me. "If memory is still being triggered, it needs to be deprogrammed. By deprogramming the program first, you have rendered yourself inaccessible. This doesn't mean that you've remembered everything. Take the time to bring to mind what your subconscious is demanding that you focus on."

"Well, I know I told you about…"

"Oh, no," Mark laughed. "Here we go again."

I reached for my notepad and pen. Memories can feel so close and familiar when they surface that oftentimes I thought I'd already recalled and recorded them. I would even begin to dismiss some as trivial. Experience taught me that these recognizable cues indicated I needed to write out intrusive memory.

In addition to regaining control over my own mind and brain through deprogramming, the process was allowing me to reframe perceptions. For example, since I had no concept of time under mind control, I had no point of reference for judging distance whereby my geography was deplorable. Distorted geography is a common trait among people who have suffered from a dissociative disorder. Once I regained awareness of time, experience began to give me a concept of distance. I also learned that timing is more important than a concept of time. Under mind control, I had lost this sense of timing, which is crucial to moving in harmony with a bigger picture plan. In addition to becoming consciously aware of my past, there was a whole world of information to learn!

Sometimes I felt like the storybook character Rip Van-Winkle, who slept so long the whole world had changed when he awoke. My environment had been controlled all of my life in an effort to keep me from inadvertently being triggered into reality. Many of the politicians I was exposed to were in the news, and their deliberately formed public projections were in conflict with my personal experiences. Therefore, my television viewing was controlled. The subconscious effect of harmonics in music was well understood by those involved in MK Ultra, and therefore my music was as controlled as my television viewing. I didn't get to listen to the 1960's peace and freedom songs, or watch the hippie movement on television, as would have been my natural choice. Instead, I listened to the music my abusers chose, and watched what they instructed me to watch.

I listened to Byrd's old-style country music fiddling, Ford's favorites like Rod Stewart's "Tonight's the Night," Dick Cheney's classical music, Reagan's choice of Michael Jackson or love songs by Air Supply, and songs I was conditioned to trigger to like Lionel Richie's "Three Times a Lady."

When I was being conditioned at puberty, my father excitedly encouraged me to listen to Michael Jackson (still of the Jackson 5) and Donny Osmond (of the Osmonds) as they were "of the same MK Ultra genetic project" that I was. Because of my father's dialogue, I sensed an understanding of them beyond the media hype and advanced harmonic technology, which further enhanced the effects their music had on me.

On TV, I saw the Wizard of Oz, Disney Classics, Twilight Zone, and horror movies I never would have chosen. The phenomena of experiencing other people's choices in a controlled environment caused me to be out of sync with what the general population knew based on their ‘normal’ experience. For example, Mark would refer to ‘60’s rocker Joe Cocker and I’d say, “Who?” I would laugh at an ad campaign that was funny to others ten years previous. Or I would have no concept of the public conditioning ad campaigns behind mass social engineering experiments like Hands Across America.

My concept of the people I had been exposed to on the highest levels was beginning to merge with public perception, giving me a clear view of how the public is led. Having been exposed to Reagan[2] the way I was for years, my perception began to merge with the understanding that people had forgotten to consider he was an actor despite his reminding them. They believed his screen image, following what he said rather than watching his contrived actions. People listened to the words of corrupt Congressmen like Jim Traficant[3] rather than watching voting records to see what was actually done. Sensing the energy of individuals such as Bill Clinton[4], combined with my experience with him in the drug industry, made it difficult to understand how people could see him as anything but a drug lord. How could people look past Dick Cheney’s sneer to believe he was the least bit concerned with serving humankind as an “elected” official? Over the years, I watched people like Tim Roemer[5], who appeared to be the most robotically mind controlled individual I had ever encountered, be “elected” into Congress. I watched while unlikely, low charisma people like Pennsylvania’s Tom Ridge[6] were slipped into public office. In order to express the reality of my past, I would have to reach a public whose point of reference was deliberately distorted through social engineering.

Since I was still remembering and reframing, Mark utilized his understanding of human nature to diplomatically bring the reality of mind control to light. He wrote hundreds of letters[7] that reached through misperceptions in an effort to incite positive change through public awareness. Responses would trickle in for years despite the 1947 National Security Act continuously limiting action from those who should overtly help.

He pleaded for help from organizations including Amnesty International, the Christic Institute, the Rainbow Coalition, the American Psychiatric Association, all major Judicial and Oversight Congressional Committees, all major news media, law enforcement of Federal, State, and local levels, domestic and international Intelligence, and groups and politicians on a global scale. He even wrote letters to high-level perpe*traitors* from my past, which concerned me until he explained. “They have no cause to silence us if they know their secrets are already out. Besides, it might keep them from raiding us again if they already have everything we are releasing.”

Mark’s letter writing campaign encompassed the globe even before the Internet became the peoples’ mode of communication. He knew that if he reached the controlling 5% with the truth on mind control, that many paradigms were subject to shift, causing perspectives to change. For those operating on a Need-to-Know basis, the information on mind control could expand their vision to what and whom they were actually working for. Those who ignorantly relied on mind control slaves to keep their secrets suddenly realized deprogramming was a reality that could publicly expose them. Those who believed in Reagan’s statement that the only way to world peace was through mind control of the masses began to rethink their shallow conclusion. Without free thought, there is no free will, and without free will there is no soul expression. What kind of world peace could humankind achieve without peace within?

My stack of deprogramming notes looked small in comparison to the stack of letters Mark had produced by the time we went back into Nashville the next week. Although we momentarily lacked the finances for copies and stamps necessary for distributing them, we were determined to prevail.

“Where there’s a will there’s a way,” Mark assured me as he parked the Pacer in the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation parking lot, where we had our first meeting of the day with Agent Andy Earl. Our meeting was brief since Andy Earl’s honest intentions could not override his superior’s orders for containment. He strongly recommended that we meet with his friend Goodlettsville Police Chief Fred Schott. We left the previously prepared information packet, documents, medical records, and my testimony with the TBI and drove straight to Chief Schott’s office.

Chief Schott listened attentively as I detailed physical and sexual crimes Kelly and I had endured in Goodlettsville through CIA mind control handler Alex Houston. Mark handed him the documents and an information packet, along with the V.I.P. video of Kelly's testimony.

"Alex Houston is just outside my jurisdiction by 500 feet," Chief Schott told us, looking at the city map on his wall. "I'd arrest him if I could. You have more than enough evidence here." He invited us to stay the morning to talk with him anyway, as he was acutely aware of the CIA drug operations and mind control proliferating in his town.

"I knew Barbara Mandrell was under mind control[8] when she had that head-on collision a few years back. That bump on her head caused her to talk. The Feds that showed up on the scene told me what I was hearing was a 'matter of national security.' When I went to the hospital to check on her, there were armed guards everywhere. I was the investigating Police Chief and they wouldn't let me in!"

Chief Schott tipped us as to who was involved in cover-up, and whom he believed would pursue justice at all costs regardless of the criminals' affluence. He told us numerous other stories of CIA cover-up involving cocaine, murder, and mind control. He had investigated the death of country music singer Keith Whitley, concluding that he had been murdered. Yet the case was closed and covered-up despite Chief Schott's expert evidence. "It's bad enough to try to rise above CIA containment, but it's even worse when a popular entertainer is involved. As soon as I'd say the name 'Lorrie Morgan' or 'Keith Whitley' – let alone mention 'Barbara Mandrell' – no one wanted to hear it."

"We've experienced the same thing," Mark said. "People would rather hold on to their illusions than face the truth."

"It seems to me that people have to know their own truth before they can embrace someone else's," I philosophized.

Mark elaborated, "The average public is socially engineered to the point where they no longer think to look within."

“I know one woman who isn’t afraid of truth,” Chief Schott told us. “She works out of Governor McWherter’s office with the Organized Victims of Violent Crime, and even he can’t seem to keep her quiet. She’s honest and doesn’t care about politics or prestige when it comes to stopping crime.” He advised us to contact Edith Hammons right away.

“You’ll need to see the Sumner County District Attorney first, though, to keep Alex Houston away from Kelly. His name is Ray Whitley[9], and he’s a friend of mine. I’ll call him and tell him you’re on your way.”

We thanked Chief Schott, and drove to the Sumner County D.A.’s office. After waiting four hours outside General Whitley’s office for our ‘immediate’ appointment, we decided to leave the information and reschedule for the next day. General Whitley was sitting at his desk when we opened the door. We should have known something was wrong, yet Chief Schott’s sincerity had overridden our instincts.

“Come in,” Ray Whitley said, as if we hadn’t already taken the initiative. “Chief Schott said you’d be dropping off a video for me. Give me time to take a look at it, and come back in a week or two.”

“A little girl’s life is on the line, here,” Mark told him. “She doesn’t have ‘a week or two’ to wait on you to review this video. We need it back since we couldn’t afford to make a copy of it. We did make copies of the child pornography Houston used her in, though.”

Ray Whitley turned crimson with rage. “It’s against the law for you to hold any child pornography whether you deem it evidence or not. I’ll have you arrested for that.”

Mark smiled. “I don’t believe so. Do you see me holding it? Other law enforcement concerned with justice has it. We’ll just wait for you to take a look at this video so we can pass it on to them as well. We’re not leaving until you see this evidence and take the necessary legal action to stop Alex Houston. We’ll just sit out front where everyone in the square can see how long we’ve waited for you.”

We sat in the hot sun, hoping Ray Whitley wouldn't waste much more of our time. We had used all of our cash for gas to drive to Sumner County, and we knew we couldn't afford to come back. Besides, I knew from experience that this was a very corrupt county, and I was eager to leave.

"Here's your video," Whitley said, bringing it outside to us. "There's not enough evidence on it for me to arrest Houston. You would have to provide me with a video of him having sex with Kelly before I could respond."

"You already said you'd respond by arresting me for providing you with evidence of child pornography. You're making your agenda very obvious." Mark took the video, not yet realizing Whitley had it destroyed while we waited, and we quickly left his office.

"I really want to be free of this county," Mark assured me, "but we need to at least leave an information packet off at the Sheriff's office."

"I doubt they would enforce law in this case any more than Whitley did," I said. "I'll make sure they know about it, though."

We stopped by Sumner County Sheriff Sutton's office, and I dashed inside with the information. "We've been expecting you," Sheriff Sutton sneered. "This is my Deputy Jeff Puccini."

"Have a seat," Puccini gestured to the jail cell, jingling the keys. "I'm sure you'll be here awhile."

"As a matter of fact, the Sumner County Crimes I am reporting are all documented here," I said, putting the information packet on Sheriff Sutton's desk. "Your name is all over it." I pointed to his name on the outside of the packet, and turned toward the door. "I have a car waiting outside who will call for back-up if I don't return immediately."

I was out the door and in the car, which Mark threw into drive as soon as he saw the expression on my face and drove straight to Chief Schott's office.

Chief Schott's eyes filled with tears as he learned of his 'friend's' betrayal. "I'm sorry to have sent you to him without making a copy of that video. I never dreamed he was on their side. I know Edith Hammons won't let you down. I met with her earlier today, and she is waiting for you to stop by her house." He gave us her address, which was nearby.

"I thought Ray Whitley was corrupt," Edith announced as she opened the door. "Chief Schott just told me what happened. Come in and have some coffee. Let's talk."

The aroma of coffee filled our sense, and we gladly accepted her offer. "There's not much to eat around here." Edith gestured to her meager surroundings. "People who help victims never have money. Neither do the victims. It seems only the criminals who abuse them have all the money, and they buy justice with it. That's why it's called the Criminal Justice system. I can offer you advice, though, and my copy machine. The first rule is make copies of everything because it will be destroyed, tampered with, stolen, and whatever else it takes to keep you quiet. If you have a tape recorder, keep it going at all times. Now when you decide if you're going to spend your last dollar on food or stamps, you'll have to add audiotapes to your list, too. Survival has its price."

"How well we know." Mark sipped the coffee. It wasn't the imported kind he had been used to, and he reached for the sugar and creamer. "We need an attorney."

"I'll see what I can do," Edith said matter-of-factly. "In the meantime, you'll need to report these crimes to the US Attorney General in Nashville, Joe Brown. Last I knew he was clean. But Attorney Generals are appointed by the President and tend to cave in to the slightest pressure from Washington, DC. Plus Joe Brown is already looking shady since he hired Ray Whitley's wife as his secretary."

"No way," I protested. "Isn't that collusion?"

"Don't give him any of your original documents. Make copies." Edith filled her old worn tabletop copy machine with toner ink. She slipped us a ten-dollar bill for gas so we could get to the Federal Building the next day. No wonder she lived in poverty herself. “Come back and see me when you’re through.”

That night, V.I.P. telephoned us at Mark’s mother’s house. “Wayne Cox is on his way. We have high security, but it is not designed to keep mercenaries or the CIA out. We’re releasing her tomorrow. Be here to pick her up.”

Apparently our attempts to stop Cox and Houston from having access to Kelly only intensified the problem. I called Edith Hammons to tell her the news and see if she had located an attorney willing to donate his time. “Randy Stamps was an attorney in Sumner County before he was elected to the State Legislature. He’s in a position to help, and is willing to meet with you right away.”

How clean could an attorney from Sumner County be, let alone from the State Legislature? We’d have to find out. Kelly was out of time.

We met with Randy Stamps briefly in hopes he could stop V.I.P. from releasing Kelly on such short notice. “There isn’t time for me to even file a legal brief on it,” Randy said, compassion filling his eyes. “You have my total support, though. I’ll do all I can to help you realize some form of justice.” He shook our hands. “God bless,” he said, which sounded better to me than ‘good luck.’

Kelly’s bags were already packed when we arrived at V.I.P. the next day. I told Roger Hargus and the Administrator what had happened to the video and pleaded for extra time to arrange for Kelly’s needs. “I have no way of dealing with her respiratory problems right now, and it would be cruel to need to hospitalize her just because Cox pushed your panic button.”

Roger shook his head. “More than that has happened. We already lost our copy of that video, plus a lot of Kelly’s records.” A nurse gave me a small folder with several remaining records in it. “We managed to keep a few documents aside. You take them. It looks like you’re going to need them. Kelly is safest with you, too.” We were quickly ushered out the door.

“Why did the Feds come in last night and take my records?” Kelly asked between wheezes as we all climbed back in the old Pacer. “They’re not even protecting me from Wayne Cox. What more do they need before they’ll help me?”

“Justice comes in many forms, Kelly.” Mark aimed the Pacer toward Nashville. “The wheels of justice grind slowly, but it always prevails because truth by its very nature never goes away. Truth lives a wretched life but always survives a lie. We won’t stop or be stopped until you see some justice. Remember, Kelly, ‘its not over ‘til we win.’ That will be our family motto. ‘Its not over ‘til we win.”

“Its not over ‘til we win,” Kelly echoed, and smiled.

Kelly’s asthma grew increasingly worse as we drove, forcing us to stop by Vanderbilt Hospital in Nashville for a breathing treatment for her. As usual, Kelly did not respond to conventional medical intervention, and soon was transferred to the Intensive Care Unit. Through a series of nightmarish events, Kelly was ultimately transferred to Cumberland House for psychological evaluation.

Meanwhile, Commissioner Rucker contacted the Commissioner of Mental Health, Eric Taylor, to explain his efforts to obtain Kelly’s rights to qualified rehabilitation and to schedule an appointment for me. He also scheduled an appointment for me at then-Governor McWherter’s office, as he was unaware that I had been forced under mind control to work on his political campaign during the Reagan-Bush Administration. Edith Hammons made an appointment for us with, among others, US Attorney General Joe Brown. Mark and I set up appointments as well, beginning with another meeting with Randy Stamps.

As awareness rose and our circle of support increased, the loop of containment tightened around us proportionately.

Chapter 10
“GET TO KILLING”

“Still no mail,” Mark said as he got into the car. “I know Bob Clement is beginning to get responses from the red-bagged mail he delivered for us around Washington, so it’s not like our information isn’t reaching pertinent people. It’s just that their response isn’t reaching us. I have confirmation that the CIA is confiscating it.”

“Why?” I asked. “We’re keeping them informed so they don’t have to steal it.”

“It’s called harassment. I’m going to exhaust every diplomatic means of stopping this before I take personal action.”

Mark and I walked over to the Copy Shop to make enough copies for our immediate appointments.

“How’s it going?” Billy asked

“It seems our problems have intensified a bit,” Mark told him.

“Kelly is stuck in Cumberland House without therapy while the mental health system tries to find a way around ‘national security’ cover-up,” I added.

Mark told Billy about the CIA confiscating our mail, and our pending appointments with Tennessee’s US Attorney General Joe Brown and Nashville’s Metropolitan Police Department.

“Feel free to make all the copies you need,” Billy offered, digging into his pockets. “I’ll cover the cost.”

“That’s not necessary,” Mark declined the offer. “I’ve got a couple dollars and we don’t need many copies today. What we need is our mail. It’s our only source of income right now. Is it alright if I leave Cathy here with you to make copies while I go see some friends about this?”

“Of course,” Billy said.

Mark lowered his voice and explained that our situation was somewhat precarious right now. “You look able bodied to me in the event of any trouble.”

“I am well armed,” Billy smiled, his muscles threatening to bulge through the fabric of his shirt.

Mark hugged me and went out the door.

As soon as I had made the necessary copies, Billy offered me a seat in the back room where he could watch the store through the two-way mirror while we talked privately.

“Are you scared?” Billy asked.

“Not with you around.” I smiled.

“I mean scared of reporting classified crimes to the Feds,” Billy elaborated.

“No. They already know about mind control. The only new part is learning that someone with my inside knowledge can be deprogrammed to think to tell their secrets.”

“You name names. Doesn’t that freak them out to learn the very people they take orders from have a criminal agenda?”

“The good guys appreciate confirmation of their suspicions, and the bad guys just make threats. It really doesn’t scare me. Besides, what are they going to do, torture me? I’ve already been through that and I know how to depart pain. Take my daughter? They already made the mistake of doing that, too. I’m not scared, I’m livid. Now they’re messing with a mother’s love, and love is the most powerful force in the universe. There’s no way to lose.”

Billy smiled. “Mark says ya’ll have nothing to lose, and anyone with intelligence knows better than to back a man in the corner who has nothing to lose. That’s pretty powerful.”

“He is!” I exclaimed. “What are the chances of someone of his fortitude and wisdom coming along and rescuing Kelly and me? It all seems so profound.”

“It is profound,” Billy agreed. “Have you remembered everything about your past?”

“Not yet. I’m still deprogramming and writing out quite a bit of memory. I know the people I was exposed to are influential, but it all seemed so natural the way it happened. There was no glamour or thrills about being around them, that’s for sure. Their political power only equates to an ability to exercise more control, cover-up, and containment. I wish they had all been low-life’s like my father.”

“Is your father locked up?”

“No, he’s still free for ‘reasons of national security’.” I thought about Billy’s question. “Thanks for the perspective. They are all low-life’s like my father[1].”

The front door bells jingled announcing a customer. One of the most beautiful girls I had ever seen walked in, and I had been around some of the sexiest women on the planet. Billy’s demeanor did not change while he excused himself, and walked out front. She gave him an envelope, hugged him, and left. “Who was that?” I exclaimed as he walked back in.

“Oh, she’s a friend of mine.” Billy tossed the envelope on the color copy machine. “She wants me to run some color copies for her modeling portfolio.”

“You sure have pretty friends,” I commented.

“I never really thought about it, but you’re right. It’s just the circles I socialize in.” Billy thought a moment. “It must have been like that for you, too. With Ford and Byrd involved in your victimization, you would naturally have met quite a few influential politicians. Add the country music industry, and it’s no wonder you knew so many public people.”

“It is so nice to have someone understand that,” I said. “That’s what I meant about how ‘natural’ it all seemed. I certainly didn’t have preconceived knowledge or perceptions of these people before I was exposed to them, and I know them for what they really are.”

“Same with me and these models,” Billy said. “The one you just saw is my friend and…”

The door jingled again and Mark walked in. “Done,” he announced. “Hopefully our mail service will resume.”

I gathered up the copies and turned to Billy, “And hopefully we will resume our conversation next time. Thanks for everything.” Mark and Billy talked a moment more while I loaded the Pacer and organized for the day’s appointments.

Cumberland House was just around the corner, and we would be stopping by to see Kelly before our appointments. I wanted to appear confident without giving her false hopes, and yet it was all I could do to muster the strength to “visit” my precious daughter. The best I could exhibit was unconditional love, total devotion to her needs, understanding beyond words, and convey my belief in her. The more she believed in herself, the stronger she would be in her adverse environment. All the love in the world could not return her to my arms by the time we had to leave, though. Leaving was always heart wrenching.

We drove silently through town while I refocused on our appointment with US Attorney Joe Brown. When we pulled up to the Federal building, Mark reminded me to disarm for the metal detectors and he did likewise. Joe Brown's office was spacious and expensively decorated as if to intimidate visitors. "I wonder where all this money came from?" I pondered, naturally thinking in terms of the wealth generated by Nashville's illicit drug business with the CIA.

As though reading my mind, Mark pointed to a probable camera and said, "The walls have ears."

I shrugged. I wasn't going to voice what was on my mind anyway. It was already apparent that this would not be a productive meeting. Previously it had been explained to me that US Attorney Generals were appointed by Presidents and placed in every state to carry out the work of their boss, the Attorney General in Washington, DC. Dick Thornburgh, whom I had known for years under mind control while he was Governor of Pennsylvania[2], was currently the top US Attorney General and Joe Brown's boss. The heavy wooden door to Joe Brown's chambers slowly opened, and he invited us in.

"Don't be talking about mind control. No one knows what it means anyway," he began.

"Should we say 'brainwashing'?" I thought he was giving us advice until Mark glanced my way notifying me otherwise.

"You're not likely to live long discussing the topic by any name." Joe Brown folded his arms across his massive chest. "So why don't you shut up and get a life."

Mark bristled and said, "Who's life do you have in mind?"

"I told Edith I'd meet with you," Joe Brown said. "Now that I have, just leave that envelope of documents and I'll see what I can do."

“My daughter…”

Joe Brown interrupted me, finishing my statement his way, “…is not my job. You need to talk with Commissioner Taylor.”

“I did…”

“Well, good.” Joe Brown opened his door. “Thanks for coming by.” He closed the door quickly behind us.

“That went better than I thought,” I said sarcastically as we walked back to the elevator. Mark smiled and put his arm around me.

“I hope this meeting with Metro goes as well,” Mark said. “I need you to wait in the car for me this time. If I’m not out in half an hour, come back here to Clement’s office.”

I considered the gravity of Mark’s statement and glanced around whispering, “The walls have ears.”

“I hope they’re listening.”

The elevator doors opened and we got on, briefly stopping at the FBI level on the way down to the ground floor. Of all people, Phil Tuney got on the elevator. “What a coincidence!” Mark said jovially. “I was reading the funny papers today, thought of you, and now here you are.” Mark kept talking, obliterating any chance Tuney would have had to convey the message he appeared to want to deliver. “Why aren’t you in DC with Garrett? I’m sure he could use you on this case.” The elevator doors opened and we left Tuney dumbfounded to ride it back up to the FBI floor.

“We’ve got more problems with the FBI than you know,” Mark seriously warned me as we drove to the police station. He maneuvered the Pacer into a parking space directly out front. “Half an hour,” he said, checking his wire and recorder. “Watch your watch. If I’m not back, you know what to do.” Mark took his briefcase and went into Metro Police Station.

I had been in there with him before, and it was not a pleasant experience. One homicide detective, Pat Postiglione, was a neighbor of Alex Houston's told me, "We've already confirmed what you reported about the murder in Nashville, and yes it was covered-up by Byrd's friend Lieutenant Ezell[3]. Ezell is dead now, unofficially of a cocaine overdose and officially of a heart attack. Your information is accurate, but that's as far as it goes. You ought to forget about all this and just go live your life."

Forget about it? I had for ten years! Now it was time for action. Kelly's life was on the line, I missed her desperately, and justice had to prevail in order for her to be freed from the grasp of her powerful perpe*traitors*. No one should have to endure what she and I had under mind control, and knowledge is mankind's only defense against it. The only way to bring the knowledge to light was to incite justice. Justice sure was elusive, though. And Postiglione was going above and beyond the call of duty to create further problems. This homicide detective even attended one of Kelly's mental health sessions[4] to counter her testimony with her intake therapist. I looked at my watch. Twenty-seven minutes to go. I took out my pen and notepad, and began writing an event that kept flashing across my mind.

Dick Thornburgh was a happy person considering the magnitude of the corruption he wallowed in all the time. I had met him at a Pennsylvania county fair where Alex Houston was entertaining as a cover for distributing massive amounts of CIA cocaine. Since Governor Thornburgh[5] was associated with the CIA's cocaine operations, he was acutely aware of Houston's true purpose in being there. He also knew that I was under MK Ultra mind control and trained for sex, which he indulged in with me for the next eight years along with the cocaine.

Thornburgh often frequented nearby Youngstown, Ohio's Charm School as though it were a brothel, sharing camaraderie with one of his partners-in-crime Jim Traficant. As Sheriff of Youngstown, Traficant ran the Charm School where I was trained along with numerous other girls to fulfill the perversions of various world leaders until he was indicted for cocaine. Then he was promoted to US Congress, still ran the Charm School, and remained friends with Thornburgh, Byrd, and others I was associated with.

Oftentimes I was trained and programmed at Charm School along with one of Dick Thornburgh's regular sex slaves, and she and I became as close of friends as two mind controlled girls could be. We were often prostituted and used pornographically together, and saw each other every August while Houston traveled the Pennsylvania fair circuit in his motorhome. The hollow walls of his specially built motorhome[6] were lined with cocaine, which further lined the pockets and nasal passages of Dick Thornburgh.

US Customs had reportedly obtained the Norwegian Cruise Lines manifest listing Thornburgh and me on the same cruise in 1987. He was enroute to the mind control training camp in the Dominican Republic along with his friend Jim Zerilla to scout baseball players for national leagues. Mind controlled baseball players were invaluable to the likes of Thornburgh, who oftentimes bet on contrived baseball games. Knowing who was going to throw the game as programmed gave him an enormous edge in the baseball betting scene, and he made vast amounts of money from it as well as from the cocaine muled in by these unsuspecting players. When criminal betting grew so large that it was well known amongst the public, Pete Rose was their sacrificial goat chosen to take the fall. Once again Thornburgh skated free.

As Attorney General, Thornburgh decided which Federal crimes were to be investigated, thereby making Mark's and my pursuit of justice precarious. Nevertheless, Thornburgh's criminal actions did not make all Federal agents bad and we had no alternative but to count on them to make the difference for Kelly.

I checked my watch. Mark still had ten minutes to come out of Metro Police Department. Suddenly he appeared and was striding across the street at a rapid pace. I unlocked the door and swung it open. In one motion, he was in his seat and driving the car away from the station. "Well," he said, wiping sweat from his brow, "that was close. They just threatened my life. That makes twice in one day."

"What?" I paled and swallowed hard, knowing any idle threat would not have fazed him.

“They told me I wouldn’t live long unless I abandoned you, Kelly, and this case now. I told them to get to killin’ because I was not going to stop or be stopped until justice prevailed.”

“Who told you that?” I asked.

“My childhood schoolmate Lieutenant Tommy Jacobs; the Captain of homicide, Mickey Miller; and that jerk who told you to keep quiet, Pat Postiglione. McElroy and Hickson were there, too.

“You told all of them ‘get to killin’?’ I was flabbergasted.

“Mickey Miller brought me into his office to deliver the threat. They were all in there for backup, I guess. I told them I was wired and flipped open my briefcase[7]. They thought I was going to show them my recording equipment, but I used it for a shield and backed out the door. There were quite a few weapons drawn.”

“And you said ‘get to killin’?”

Mark looked at me like ‘of course’ and said, “If they were going to kill me they would have done it when I first walked in. We had better duplicate and distribute this audiotape fast, though. Like now. I’m going back to Federal building for a few minutes. You’ll need to wait outside again with the doors locked. First sign of trouble start blowing the horn. You should be OK here, though.” Mark parked in front of the Federal building, took his briefcase, and got out of the car.

“The metal detectors!” I reminded him, believing he would want to disarm.

“Where’s your weapon?” he asked me, and left while I turned to move it within reach.

Every minute felt like hours while I waited. I picked up my notepad and pen to finish what I’d been writing, but never wrote a word. I watched. And waited. Twenty long minutes later, Mark was back in the car.

“Well?” I prompted.

“They’d better get to killin’,” Mark seethed.

Chapter 11
MENTAL HELLth

Following a coded trail that was akin to a child's treasure hunt game, Mark and I arrived at what would be our rendezvous with Randy Stamps. "Sheriff Sutton had my family's life threatened," Randy began, looking PTSDed and nervous. "And we have to be able to live in Sumner County for me to be a Legislator."

The threats that Mark and I had already endured from Sumner County and Sheriff Sutton did not intimidate us. "If they threaten you, they only intend to scare you," Mark assured Randy. "It's when they're quiet that there is reason for concern."

"I'm already concerned." Randy's eyes grew wider. "I'm sorry I can't help you with your daughter's legal dilemma. I don't have the Top Secret Clearance to get around the 'national security' issues, anyway. You can rest assured I'll be doing all I can covertly from the inside. Please don't contact me anymore. Let's keep Edith Hammons as our go-between." Randy hugged us as though it were the last time he'd ever see us alive, nervously glanced around, and ran out the door.

"We certainly have a lot of support hiding behind their desks," I grumbled.

"That's why I always worked alone." Mark put his arm around me. "People fear what they don't know, and they Need-to-Know the truth in order to effect positive change. When folks are left in the dark, they cave in to fear. Bring truth to light, and their path is clear. The criminals you knew were aware of this. That's why they operate on the philosophy that secret knowledge equals power. You know yourself how truth frees you from immobilizing fear. We have to be tough."

I agreed. My previous terror in Huntsville had taught me that reality is much easier to deal with when armed with facts, no matter how harsh, rather than blinded by emotion.

“Besides,” Mark was saying, “when people are left to superstition and conjecture, their conclusions have no basis, rendering them ineffective. We have got to find a way to bring the reality of mind control to light amidst a wealth of misinformation and terror for Kelly’s sake.”

“It really is up to us, isn’t it?” I said, feeling alone in our pursuit of justice and rehabilitation for Kelly. I thought of Kelly alone at Cumberland House, and realized she must be toughest of all. It had been three days since we had been allowed to even see her, and I was anxious to check in on her.

“Hello, I’m Dr. Gaboy, the resident psychiatrist here,” a ghoulish looking man stuck out his wet, limp hand to greet us when we arrived at Cumberland House. Was this some kind of a joke, or had I just entered the set of a horror movie? Mark and I sat down in his office to fill out forms. There was no place on the State forms to write about classified issues, and we filled them out as best we could. Looking over the paperwork we had completed, Dr. Gaboy continued, “You know, there is no such thing as mind control.”

“Some people call it brainwashing,” I said, using the old term.

“There is no such thing as brainwashing, you know.” Dr. Gaboy related an old war story or two from the Korean War, drifting far from any point he might have thought to make.

I tried another approach. “I know there is a lot of satanic activity around here. You must be seeing some victims of occultism.”

“You know, there is no such thing as satanism,” he said. “Come. Let’s go see Kelly now. We are through here.”

Mark looked at me briefly, his eyes telling me that talking any further was useless. I knew he understood my need to get Kelly out of there fast.

Kelly was in an isolation room reserved for newcomers, and I was traumatized just walking in. Kelly sat on a bed, unblinking, sucking her fingers like she did when she was an infant. Blood smears coagulated on the walls, some shaped into pentagrams. A dirty plastic curtain dangled by a paperclip, and the stench from smeared feces was overwhelming. I was outraged.

“No such thing as satanism?” My voice was rising, and Mark nudged me. His look reassured me that we would take care of this situation outside of Cumberland House. Instantly I knew the hysteria I was feeling would not produce the desired results. Mark slipped a camera from his pocket and began snapping pictures of the walls and room. I swallowed my temper, and demanded to see the nurse in charge.

“I’m leaving here for a meeting with Commissioner Taylor,” I told her. “I’m going to report the blood on the walls, satanic graffiti, the unsanitary disarray of Kelly’s room, and most definitely her condition. I want her moved into a new room immediately until I can get her out of here permanently.”

“We were just moving her, Ms. O’Brien.” She scurried to gather Kelly and her clothes. “I don’t know what you are talking about, though.”

Mark had spoken with Kelly while I talked with the nurse, and she had stopped sucking her fingers and was blinking again. We assured her we would be back the next day and hugged her. I stumbled out into the sunlight.

“What time is it?” Mark asked.

I blinked through my tears to look at my watch. “2:50,” I said.

“We have ten minutes to get to your appointment with the Commissioner. Stay alert.” Mark spoke sternly, realizing I was teetering on dissociativeness. “Kelly needs you to be her voice right now. Stay logical.”

When we arrived at Commissioner Taylor’s office, the receptionist was waiting for me at his door. Mark squeezed my hand, and I walked right in. “I know your story,” Commissioner Taylor greeted me. “And I know you have strong political support. I’m already working on your daughter’s case.”

“Are you aware of the extremely poor conditions she is having to endure while you’re working on it?” I briefly told him about Kelly’s desperate mental state under Cumberland House’s ‘care,’ the satanic graffiti, feces, and blood smears.

“I’ll send Marsha Willis over there in the morning. She’s my best worker, and she is assigned to finding an appropriate placement for Kelly. We’ll transfer her immediately to qualified rehab for mind control –anywhere in the country- as fast as Marsha determines there is no one in the State of Tennessee who can do it. You can expedite everything by signing these legal forms that will provide the necessary funding anywhere in the country. Medicaid only covers in-state care, and Commissioner Rucker has gone as far as he can with Federal funding. I know you’re up against ‘national security,’ and this will help circumvent it.” Commissioner Rucker handed me the paperwork, and pointed me to Marsha Willis’ desk.

Marsha was talking with Mark, and stood up as I walked over. “You can file those papers with the Juvenile Court as soon as I determine there is no one in the state qualified to help her. Federal law stipulates that I must go through this exercise,” Marsha assured me. “Mark explained Kelly’s conditions over at Cumberland House, and I would like to meet you there in the morning. Then we can come back here to my office and start the process of transferring Kelly.”

It sounded so simple. Too simple. Mark drove us back to his mother’s house in the country despite being as exhausted as I was.

The next morning when we arrived at Cumberland House the smell of fresh paint filled the air. “You obviously prompted the changes you demanded,” Marsha Willis smiled.

"I'll consider my efforts successful when Kelly is out of here," I replied. Kelly met with us in the day room since her new bedroom was shared with other kids. A small spark of hope shone in her eyes.

"Can you take me home now, Mom?" she asked.

Marsha introduced herself and assured Kelly we were all working on her situation as fast as possible. I talked with Kelly while Marsha explained to the staff that their changes needed to be more than cosmetic[1] as numerous high level politicians were overseeing Kelly's case.

"Is Tipper Gore working on this case?" a Cumberland House staff member asked. Tipper was highly publicized as a leader in state mental health since she was Senator[2] Al Gore's wife.

Staff member Charlene Johnson giggled. "You know she can't sober up long enough to do anything."

Marsha smiled. "Neither she nor Al are working on this case. They are not among the politicians I was referring to. This is a serious case, definitely not intended for publicity or photo ops."

Marsha returned to the Department of Mental Health to work on Kelly's case, where Mark and I soon joined her after concluding our visit with Kelly.

"I've already made numerous telephone calls," Marsha began. "It is really difficult dealing with mental health professionals regarding a classified subject like mind control. They like to believe they already know it all."

Mark and I nodded in agreement. "Have you tried using the word 'brainwashing'?" I asked.

"Yes," Marsha said. "I've even resorted to using the term 'behavior modification' and I'm still having difficulty simply defining the disorder let alone locating rehabilitation for it. If you agree, I'm going to re-start my search in an attempt to locate someone who can diagnose her with MPD[3]."

"Is there anyone within the state who can treat MPD?" Mark asked. "By current mental health standards it takes an average of 8.5 years to diagnose the disorder, during which time it must be treated. Until the Intelligence community can get accurate diagnosis and rehabilitation information filtered into the mental health community, antiquated long-term therapy is the best that can be offered. How do you propose to find anyone in state mental health to diagnose Kelly's CIA abuse?"

"I was hoping you could tell me," Marsha sighed. "I'm up against Federal bureaucratic red-tape that stipulates 'in order for a child to be transferred out-of-state of treatment, diagnosis must be obtained within the state first'. Do you know of anyone with a degree in mental health who could simply diagnose her?"

"I thought Commissioner Taylor was able to override this obstacle," I complained. "That was my whole point in going in to see him in the first place. Who is his boss?"

"Louis Sullivan in DC is over the Department of Health and Human Services," Marsha answered. "I'll give you his contact information, and hopefully he can help. In the meantime, I'm going to continue in my efforts."

"Good luck," Mark said as we rose to leave.

As I gathered up paperwork, I thanked Marsha for her appearance at Cumberland House earlier that morning, and for her thoughtful, kind words of encouragement to Kelly.

Riding the elevator back down to ground level, I suggested we go see Edith Hammons. "Maybe she will set up an appointment with Representative Ben West at the Tennessee Legislature, and tell us who we can see with the Department of Human Services here. This route of Commissioner Taylor's has too many road blocks."

Edith greeted us at the door. “I didn’t know you knew Loretta Lynn[4]. I’m related through the Webbs[5]. Years of mysteries are beginning to make sense now that I know about mind control. Come in,” she invited. “I made a fresh pot of coffee.”

Mark and I went in to Edith’s tiny but warm house. “We can talk more about me in a minute,” she said, drying off clean coffee cups from the dish drainer. “I know Kelly is stuck over at Cumberland House while Commissioner Taylor tries to straighten things out, and that your appointments with (Attorney General) Joe Brown and Metro (Police) did not produce the results we need. I want to know what brings you here today.”

“You obviously have good sources of information,” Mark said.

“The best. Me.” Edith poured the coffee.

“Marsha Willis…” I began.

“Commissioner Taylor’s best.” Edith said. “What about her?”

“Commissioner Taylor promised to send Kelly immediately out-of-state to qualified rehab after Marsha confirms there is no one within the state to treat her. In order to do that, she has to obtain a diagnosis from within the state first. Of course, no one is qualified to diagnose classified CIA mind control abuses, let alone treat it.”

“She’s bound by Federal law,” Edith quickly concluded. She picked up the phone and dialed a number into it. “Ben West is a friend of mine. He can help.” She spoke to him for several minutes, and asked, “Can you stop by and see him this afternoon?”

We nodded ‘yes’.

“Good. OK, Ben. They’ll be there after they finish their coffee.”

I couldn’t believe she’d said that to a Tennessee Legislator, as if coffee were more important. He obviously knew her well, though, and it certainly wouldn’t hurt our efforts having her clout behind us when we presented him with our dilemma.

“What do you know about the Commissioner for the Department of Human Services?” I asked.

Edith thought a minute. “You’d best go above and below him,” she answered. “Ben West will be putting pressure on him for you once he hears your dilemma.”

“We will be contacting his boss, Louis Sullivan, in DC through Clement’s office,” Mark said. “And I’ll see about getting a referral in to see a manager over there just to make sure they have all the pertinent information below Sullivan, too.”

We finished our coffee. “What were you going to tell us about Loretta?” I asked as we prepared to leave.

“I always knew she was connected to Byrd, now I know why. The family has been concerned about his influence on her and her career for years. Of course, her talent is so great she would be a superstar with or without his intervention.” Edith sighed. “Our whole family sings. My husband, Ed, my daughter LouAnn, and I sing gospel and even did some touring before I started working with victims. I’m glad to be out of the music business with what I know now. Enough about me,” she said as she hugged us. “You two be careful.”

Mark’s and my appointment with Ben West was encouraging. He understood the dilemma created by state forms that had no fill-in blanks for classified information, and Marsha Willis’ Federal stipulation obstacle. His apparent sincerity and legislative position with mental health still did not surpass the strength of ‘national security’ obstacles, although his inside knowledge promised progress. We left our information packet with him. “I’ll do all I can from the inside until I can find a way clear for resolution,” he told us. “Keep me informed. I’ll tell my secretary to let you in anytime, no appointment needed.” He warmly shook Mark’s hand and hugged me.

We were exhausted from another long day in Nashville when we arrived back at Melba’s house in the country. “That man called again,” she told Mark, looking at a piece of paper she had written on.

“Dibble?” Mark assumed ‘that man’ was the same ‘that man’ Melba referred to by that title previously.

“No, the one who called last night.”

“Dale Griffis?” Mark asked. “Did you get a telephone number this time?”

“Of course not,” she said. “He’s going to call you in the morning.”

Dr. Dale Griffis was an investigator I had talked with in Ohio. His reputation as an occult crimes investigator[6] is not what had initially led us to him. Rather it was his geographic proximity to a major hub of CIA cocaine trafficking. Griffis resided near Henry Ade, who booked acts like Alex Houston into strategic Fraternal Order of Police (F.O.P.) shows to dually entertain and distribute massive amounts of cocaine. Since I clearly recalled that Henry Ade had voiced concern over Griffis’ opposition to the drug trade back when I was under mind control, I thought he might be an ally in exposing the whole mess. My previous conversations with Griffis usually centered on Aquino, though, and then sunk into a pit of superstition despite my best efforts to keep him focused on the CIA cocaine operations. He admittedly suspected the cocaine ops proliferating through the F.O.P. via Henry Ade, yet no official investigation was launched.

The next morning, we learned why Griffis was contacting us now. “Civia Tamarkin is a reporter with People Magazine,” he told us. “She covered the story on the McMartin Preschool case in Manhattan Beach, California[7]. She considers you authorities on mind control and wants to help with Kelly’s case.”

Our mental alarms should have gone off. The McMartin Preschool scandal was highly publicized in the US and had threatened to bring the reality of mind control to light in early 1990. The systematic sexual and ritual abuse of the children was being covered-up due to the supposedly Top Secret MK Ultra mind control involved. Mark and I followed the case closely, knowing that its outcome could set legal precedent and stop the vast proliferation of mind control. The media frenzy surrounding the event should have exposed it. Instead, it and the "criminal" justice system discredited the children, their parents, and the massive movement by individuals and organizations nationwide dedicated to rising above CIA containment to expose widespread mind control abuses. Magazines such as People who were owned by Time of Time-Warner[8] were viewed as part of the containment problem rather than as helpful. Still, Dr. Griffis believed in Civia's good intentions as strongly as he believed in the power of Satan. "Civia considers you authorities on mind control, and would like to talk with you. I already gave her your number."

Despite our skepticism, Civia said all the right things. She knew about national security issues like mind control and CIA drug ops, offering to support us anyway she could. When she heard about Kelly's immediate dilemma, she offered to refer us to a friend of hers within Human Services who worked under Commissioner Grunow. "His name is Charles Wilson, and I'll contact him today to set up an appointment for you."

I immediately set down to pen my letter to Louis Sullivan, who was above rather than below Grunow. "We'll approach the mental health system from all sides," I said, "just like we did the Justice Department."

Chapter 12
POP TOPS and DENTAL FLOSS

Over the next few months, Mark and I literally drove the wheels off the Pacer driving to and from Nashville. The long country road that wound its way to Melba’s tiny rural house was treacherous, and we drove it all hours of the day and night.

On one notable trip back from Nashville to Melba’s, the rear drive shaft broke loose from the universal joint, fell to the pavement, and threw sparks. Mark managed to maneuver it off to the side of the narrow road. Using what little daylight was left, he rummaged through the glove box and scoured the ground for usable parts. He came up with pop-tops and dental floss. I knew Mark was resourceful, using his applicable intelligence to repair everything from my brain to electronics to car engines. There wasn’t anything he couldn’t fix, it seemed, but this time the prognosis looked grim to me.

“Fixed,” he announced before darkness fell. “It’ll make it home if I drive slowly.”

“We’ll never make it,” I concluded out loud.

“Whatever happened to ‘voice no negatives without a solution’?” Mark asked. “What’s your solution?”

“I promise you that if we make it home I’ll never doubt positive possibilities again.”

“Be careful what you promise because I will hold you to it,” Mark smiled. “Do you want to sweeten that bet? I’ve got a few proposals.” We laughed and played the slow drive home, which totally diverted me from worrying about each curve in the mountain road. When we pulled into the driveway, Mark parked the car around back near his spare car parts and tools. As he turned off the engine he told me, “Pay-up time.”

The sun was already high in the sky the next morning when we woke up. Mark slipped into his mechanic’s coveralls and went to replace the pop-tops and dental floss with real car parts. I decided to clean the house before joining him.

I was nearly through vacuuming when Mark came through the door. He stopped in his tracks when he saw the clean floor, and bent over to remove his boots and greasy clothes. “Unless you’re undressing for a fun reason, there is no need for you to take your clothes off.”

“I didn’t want to track up the floor,” he said untying his boots.

“You’re working hard for us.” I tied his bootlaces back up. “I’m not into that power-trip that you need to stop what you’re doing just because I’m cleaning house. That never has made any sense to me. Nothing in life is permanent. Life itself isn’t permanent. Why should vacuuming a floor be? Besides, if it were important to me to have everything spotless, it would take me less time to vacuum up the spot than it would to gripe. Anyway, I’m done.” I wound up the vacuum cord, noticing that Mark still hesitated. “Is there something I can get for you?”

“No,” he laughed, walking towards the bathroom. “I need to do this myself.”

By nightfall the car was repaired and serviced. I was still amazed that pop-tops and dental floss had held the car together for thirty treacherous miles. “How did you know to do that anyway?” I asked him.

“I learned a few tricks that the Cubans use to keep their old US made cars running without replacement parts. Back when the CIA unsuccessfully attempted to assassinate Castro[1]…”

I interrupted Mark to ask, “Isn’t it unconstitutional for the CIA to assassinate foreign leaders[2]?”

“It is,” Mark went on. “Everyone knows they do it anyway. As I was saying, when the CIA tried to topple Castro’s government and assassinate him, we gained Intel-generated insight into the way they live that is invaluable. The trade embargo makes it impossible for them to get replacement parts for the US cars that were brought down there by the Mafia in the ‘40s and ‘50s, so they improvised. One of their ingenious solutions got us home safely last night.”

“Doesn’t the attempt to assassinate Castro somehow tie in with the Kennedy Assassination?”

“Mafioso Meyer Lansky was a major player for the CIA. Even though the CIA and Lansky failed in their attempted coup and assassination of Castro, he later became famous for his association with Jack Ruby. Lansky hired Ruby to kill Lee Harvey Oswald before anyone could question him.”

“Wouldn’t it be nice if people could just share knowledge and ‘ingenious solutions’ rather than fight over differences?”

“Wouldn’t it be nice if people made love not war?” Mark’s tongue-in-cheek response sounded realistic to me.

“Let’s start that movement,” I suggested as I helped him peel out of his greasy clothes.

“That movement started back in the ‘60s,” Mark informed me. I wondered if my Rip-Van-Winkle perceptions would ever catch up to date.

“OK, let’s perpetuate it then.”

The next morning, we went to Nashville early to take care of business and visit with Kelly. We met our appointments with Williamson County officials pertaining to crimes that occurred in their county. Williamson County District Attorney Joe Baugh and Franklin, Tennessee's Police Chief Wisdom gratefully accepted the information packets.

Like Chief Schott, Chief Wisdom was a friend of Edith Hammons'. He fully expected to be hindered from investigating and prosecuting crimes by the 1947 National Security Act. "We have similar cases around here involving mind control and CIA drug ops, and there is little we can do about it. It makes our job of protecting and serving the people nearly impossible. I'll give it my best shot, though," Chief Wisdom promised.

While we drove back into Nashville, Mark updated me on the most recent FBI containment efforts. "Once again the left hand doesn't know what the right hand is doing. A letter from Senator Sasser[3] reached me, and he accused me of refusing to provide information to the FBI unless I was provided 'monetary compensation' first. If I had actually been stupid enough to demand money from the FBI for information, they would and should have locked me up for Extortion, among other crimes. That accusation is ridiculous coming from Sasser."

"I thought Sasser was clean."

"I thought he was just stupid[4]." Mark sighed. "I know how Chief Schott felt when he found out his friend Ray Whitley was dirty. You never know who is going to stand by their moral convictions and friends when it comes to high crimes committed by their bosses. Anyway, Sasser rolled on us."

"How can he say we refused to turn information in? Does he know about Garret and Tuney? What about the FBI in Alaska, Nevada, and Mississippi?"

"Now you know why Customs monitored our FBI meeting," Mark reminded me. "I told you there was more going on with the FBI than you knew, and that Lou Bock was a serious help to us. I can expose this whole cover-up now, and Metro will be caught in the loop. Sasser did us a big favor and doesn't even realize it yet."

“What are you going to do?”

“Red-bag copies of the whole mess to DC through Clement,” Mark decisively stated. “Clement already made sure that Bush[5] and Thornburgh got copies of what you are reporting, and the FBI is looking moronic for having their boy Sasser accuse me of extortion. It’s evident that we’ve gone to great lengths to distribute this information. We prove it every day.”

“We’ve even got that response from the White House,” I said, getting excited at the possibilities. “And Jesse Helms[6] himself contacted the FBI regarding us. There is so much of our information in DC it seems absurd that FBI would accuse us of withholding it!”

“We must be making progress,” Mark assured me. “Someone is getting nervous.”

Mark’s statement was even more apparent by the time we reached Nashville.

Kelly’s circumstances at Cumberland House were deplorable. Charlene Johnson was working overtime to make Kelly’s circumstances difficult, punishing her if she talked about her past. Once when Kelly refused to wear a pair of “ruby slippers” that someone provided her due to past Oz programming, Charlene locked her in a padded cell for three days. Obviously such actions were being prompted from the outside, and Charlene was displaying more wealth by the day with new clothes and a new car.

A gynecological exam had been performed on Kelly in accordance with Metro Police and Luton mental health. “They hurt me, mom.” Kelly cried. “It was not like when Dr. Lillibridge examined me. They pulled my legs apart and held me down, and pulled my private parts open so hard it tore and bled. Then they told me I wasn’t abused as if their lies would make my past go away. Besides, they abused me hurting me like that.”

“I am so sorry they hurt you.” I held her. “I wish I could have been there to stop them so that never would have happened. God knows you’ve been through so much already without them adding to it. You’re right that their lies can’t make the past go away. Neither can Charlene’s demands that you don’t talk about it. I’m going to take care of this matter as soon as I leave,” I said assuredly.

“Charlene thinks I threw this picture away,” Kelly whispered. “It’s something I was remembering that they did to you and me. Since I’m not allowed to talk or write about it, I drew it out.” She slipped me a piece paper, which I immediately tucked under my shirt.

“Kelly, I’m going to go see some friends who are doing all they can for you right now. Do you remember Marsha Willis? She’s working really hard on your case, but she had better be ready to move you out of here now. I’m going to Clement’s office, too.” I hugged Kelly close. “I’m going to tell them what is going on here and I’ll show them the picture you drew, too. I love you.”

I stormed out of Cumberland House. When we were back in the Pacer, I looked at Kelly’s drawing and sobbed while I showed it to Mark. It was a very recognizable picture of Youngstown Charm School[7] where we were tortured and trained to fulfill sexual perversion.

Chapter 13

FAMILY MATTERS

“Kelly is out of time,” I announced to Marsha Willis. I told her about the sham exam conducted on Kelly at Metro General Hospital, how she had been treated so roughly in the course of the ‘gynecological’ procedure, and Cumberland House’s deplorable treatment of her.

“Charlene Johnson forbid her to speak of her past, yet locked her in a padded cell for three days because Kelly is still triggering over unresolved issues.” Marsha’s eyes filled with compassion as I told her about the incident with the ‘ruby slippers’.

“And Kelly is having to sneak me pictures of her memories since she is forbidden from writing them out.” I showed Marsha her drawing.

Marsha frowned. Sensing the urgency she said, “I am making progress towards Kelly’s transfer. Have you filed those papers with the court that Commissioner Taylor gave you?”

“I was waiting until I absolutely had to file them,” I told Marsha, dreading the whole process.

“If you file with the Juvenile Court in the morning it can help expedite her transfer. I’ve been working as fast as I can, and you need to be ready. Come back and see me after you go the court, and I should have some news for you.”

Mark and I left the Department of Mental Health and drove to the Copy Shop to make copies of Kelly’s drawing, as well as more copies of documents to take to our appointment that Civia Tamarkin had scheduled for us with Charles Wilson.

“I wondered what had happened to ya’ll,” Billy called as we walked in. “When I don’t see you for a few days, I get concerned.”

“No need to worry about us,” Mark assured him. “We’re not afraid, why should you be?”

“I’m too logical to be afraid,” Billy clarified. “I’m just concerned.”

“Good,” Mark smiled. “Kelly is being abused over at Cumberland House, and we’re moving as fast as we can to get her out of there. I’ve got to go see a friend, and Cathy has some copies to run.”

“You know where to find her when you get back,” Billy said, walking Mark to the door.

As soon as I was through making copies, I set down in the employee’s backroom with Billy.

“I’m sorry to hear about Kelly,” Billy said. “I hope the court system proves to be more reliable than the mental health system.”

“Me, too,” I sighed. “I’m not counting on it, though. We’re going at this from every angle until something gives. Mark has contacts with the local newspapers, and People Magazine is monitoring her case now, too. Bob Clement has distributed our information all over Washington for us, including to the US Commissioner of Health and Human Services, and even delivered copies of the FBI cover-up where it matters most. It seems we’re staying ahead, but it really hurts to see Kelly tangled in all the red tape.”

Billy looked somber, and then changed the subject. “I’ve been wanting to ask you about your brothers and sisters. Are they safe?”

“No,” I answered. “They’re all still under my father’s control. I reached out to them after Mark first rescued Kelly and me, and their initial response was hopeful. A few weeks later, my oldest brother, Earl William, sent photos of all the kids with fresh stun gun prod marks indicating that controls tightened around them.”

“Why would your brother do a thing like that?”

“Under orders from my father, most likely.” I continued, “He has three children of his own that are being raised in the Project. I know he tried to commit suicide when he turned thirty, which is the age mind control victims are disposed of due to the natural electro-chemical changes that occur in the brain. They start to remember childhood abuse and often break program.”

Billy thought about it a second and asked, “Is that why repressed memories surface around age 30?”

“Yes. And it’s also why I was supposed to be killed at that age,” I told him. “In my case, though, Mark intercepted us when Kelly and I were being transferred to California where I was to be killed and Kelly handled by a creep named Michael Dante’.”

“Why didn’t they let your brother die?”

“Because he was raising his three children Billy, Tami, and David, according to government specifications under the watchful control of my father,” I told him. “My brother routinely took them to Disney World for MK Ultra mind control programming, and his youngest son, David, became the poster child for Sea World riding Shamu the whale. The children’s maternal[1] grandmother trained the Maycroft Squaretappers dance team that performed annually in DC at the White House.”

“What about your other brothers and sisters?” Billy prompted.

“I have two little sisters and three little brothers. The brother just under me in age, Mike, is running a porn business through his video store in Grand Haven. My sister Kelli Jo, who is ten years younger than me, was used in some of the porn he sells. Plus she knew Ford."

"Gerald Ford, the former President?"

"Yes. I think she had been hurt so bad through suffocation that the CIA couldn't use her for anything other than fulfilling perversions. She's a belly dancer who excelled in gymnastics, and she is beautiful." I told Billy. "My other little sister, Kim, who is twenty years younger than me knew George Bush and has been to the White House."

"Your mother must have had a lot of kids."

"And everyone of them abused. It flipped her out pretty bad despite the fact that she had been sexually abused and suffered from a dissociative disorder herself."

"What about your other brothers?"

"Tommy was called 'Beaver' after the Beaver Island[2], Michigan mind control center where he was programmed to become a Jesuit. Timmy is bipolar, and they trained him for sports. I love and miss them all, and the best I can do for them now is keep shining the light of truth on their circumstances so the CIA can't use them."

"Well, at least you and Kelly are free, and that makes all the difference in the world for a lot of victims." Billy's kindness and compassion were comforting.

"Kelly's freedom is on the line, though, and I can only hope this next move with the juvenile court frees her entirely."

When Mark returned, we kept our appointment with Charles Wilson at the Department of Human Services. The appointment was uneventful and provided no hope. We then went to Edith's to update her on our progress.

Edith, never one to waste time, got right to the point. "I know what Metro did to Kelly in that exam," she said, inviting us in. "I've scheduled an appointment for you with a reputable in-state gynecologist who can reaffirm Kelly's abuse through the records and photos you have." She had seen the photos that Dr. Lillibridge took, as well as his Alaskan reports. "He can also document your vaginal mutilation carving at the same time[3], and he is willing to do so. It may help keep Houston away from Kelly if he reaffirms your horrendous abuse as well."

Edith, who also had a nurse's degree, had already inspected the hideous face that Alex Houston had carved into my vagina with Exacto knives in accordance with Senator Byrd's perverse demands. She gave us an appointment card with Dr. Presley's address, contact numbers, and an appointment time for April 15th. "There is a Church of Christ in Green Hills near Dr. Presley's office that can help with gas money. I know you need it. Just tell them I sent you. You might want to accept their offering of groceries as well." Edith was certainly resourceful. "Good luck with the juvenile court tomorrow," she said as she hugged us good-bye.

As we walked back to the car, I commented on the ways Edith helped us. "Edith knows how to enrich our circumstances way beyond giving money. Her time and advice are invaluable, yet she still understands our most basic needs and sees to them through direct and indirect ways." I thought a moment, reflecting on how Mark was the first to exemplify to me that love and integrity produce more results than any amount of money ever could. "You taught me most about financial priorities," I told Mark, "when the evaporation of your bank accounts only fueled your determination to make a difference for humanity."

Mark smiled. "I sure could use that money, though, to be even more effective. Justice is bought and sold in this country, which is why my accounts evaporated. They think they can contain us by keeping us so poor. They don't know our hunger for justice and rehab for Kelly surpasses physical hunger." Mark opened the car door for me, and continued as he started the Pacer. "Someday we'll have money again and you'll be able to buy things for Kelly, and I'll give you things you've never had."

“Like what?” I asked. “I’ve got everything in you.”

“Clothes, for one thing,” Mark said looking at my charity attire. I’d never bought clothes for myself before. Under mind control, others like Byrd dictated what I should wear from high-class whore clothes to Catholic school uniforms.

“Clothes don’t matter to me much since I’m most comfortable in my own skin. Someday my birthday suit may wrinkle, but I’d celebrate that just to live so long!”

“You’re inner beauty is so radiant, it wouldn’t matter if your birthday suit did gain wrinkles. I’d simply like for you to have the experience of choosing a wardrobe for yourself. There are so many gifts and fun experiences that I’d like to give you.” Mark steered us out of the traffic and onto the peaceful country road back home.

“Give. That’s the key. It’s not what is given, it’s a giving heart that matters.” I knew money didn’t buy happiness anyway since I had been around unlimited extravagance with miserable people in DC.

The next morning we were at the juvenile court when the doors opened. “Commissioner Taylor sent me here,” I told the clerk. “He said this court petition is a necessary formality for obtaining my daughter’s rehabilitation funding. I have no intention of relinquishing any custodial rights or controls over her circumstances.”

I further explained that our attorney had recently quit due to ‘national security’ issues involved in the case. She asked, “Are there any abusers from which your daughter may need protection? If so, you’d best write their names down so we can protect her legally.”

In my own handwriting, I wrote a brief paragraph referring to medical and mental health records naming Alex Houston and Wayne Cox among Kelly’s abusers. Even so, Cox filed charges against me before Marsha could complete her work towards Kelly’s transfer, and seemingly as fast as the court papers were filed. April 2, 1991, I was embroiled in a custody battle that would “legally” hinder Kelly’s transfer.

Violations of laws and rights began April 9 in an attempt to cover-up crimes perpetrated by Kelly’s politically affluent abusers. All medical and mental health records documenting Kelly’s abuse were instantly rejected by the court on grounds they were “from out-of-state.” I was not permitted to testify on her behalf or in my own defense for “reasons of national security.”

Local and national media, victims’ advocacy groups such as Edith Hammons Organized Victims of Violent Crime, and all supporters were quickly banned from the courtroom. ‘Expert witnesses’ FBI Agents Brad Garrett and Phil Tuney were called to testify. Tuney testified, “There is no such thing as mind control,” while Garrett recommended that Mark Phillips be banned from the courtroom and from seeing Kelly since he was an “expert on mind control.” This blatant contradiction was accepted, and Mark was banned from the courtroom and from further contact with Kelly. All of my visits with Kelly were to be supervised so that I wouldn’t say words like ‘mind control’ or ‘Mark Phillips’.[4] Worst of all, Kelly was warehoused at Cumberland House without therapy.

I was hindered in my desperate attempts to untangle the quagmire of red tape that Commissioner Taylor’s ill advice had caused by court ordered probation. The probation imposed on me was supposedly due to my not yet having a permanent address to provide the court. The only address I had was Mark’s Post Office Box in Green Hills. Cox’s attorney, Bob Anderson, told Juvenile Court Judge Andy Shookhoff, “Since she can’t live in a Post Office Box, I need her available in case I want to serve her papers.” So Judge Shookhoff ordered that I sit in the hall of juvenile court for days. At least it was a quiet spot, and I took advantage of the time to write out some of the memories that were flooding my mind, such as:

When the 1984 Governor’s Convention was held in Nashville, Tennessee at Opryland Hotel, Senator Byrd was there. This particular convention focused on Global Education 2000[5], and I was working there under total mind control for Reagan’s Secretary of Education Bill Bennett[6] and Tennessee’s former Governor Lamar Alexander[7]. Louise Mandrell was working there as well, and I spoke to her regarding her sister Barbara’s recent car crash.[8] I had known Louise for years. Wayne Cox worked as a steel guitar player for her and RC Bannon while I was being transferred to Alex Houston in early 1980. Cox had also worked with Barbara for years when she was very young. Plus, Alex Houston worked numerous shows with both Barbara and Louise throughout the 1980’s.

Despite having often been around Byrd’s other slaves, I rarely had opportunity to speak with them. This was strictly forbidden as it could cause us to inadvertently trigger each other into discussing government secrets we’d been conditioned to forget[9]. Yet no one interfered for several minutes as Louise and I discussed Barbara’s dire circumstances.

In addition to discussing Barbara, we talked about the global education system[10] and how I had been used in the press to promote “our education Governor” McWherter. I could not think to tell her how this education system, now in full swing in the US and globally, was designed to increase our children’s learning capacity while decreasing their ability to critically analyze. I could only parrot what I had been programmed to say that night to promote it to our nation’s Governors. Still, Byrd reprimanded me for talking with Louise when I arrived late for my rendezvous with him at Opryland Hotel’s Rhett Butler restaurant.

Being back in Nashville now was opening my mind up to eight years of memories from which I was totally amnesic. I was remembering so much, yet none of it was freeing Kelly from a corrupt and manipulated so-called “legal” system in the State of Tennessee.

When the probation was finally lifted, I went directly to Marsha Willis’ office demanding to see Commissioner Taylor. He refused to see me, and Marsha was immersed in the same quagmire of red tape that was deliberately covering up Kelly’s dire and desperate need. Marsha voiced deep concern, whispering, “The Defense Intelligence Agency told me to let you know that your life is in serious peril if you keep talking about Kelly and mind control."

Unintimidated, I followed through with my previously scheduled appointment at Governor McWherter's office. His assistant Bernie Durham said that Governor McWherter "did not deal with such cases," shook my hand, and showed me the door. Before I left, I handed him a packet of documents and information for their records. "Governor McWherter will need these," I assured him. Mark and I were launching an international awareness campaign that would eventually result in thousands of letters from all over the world asking Governor McWherter "what does 'national security' have to do with the documented rape and molestation of a child's mind and body?"

While we were running copies on Edith's old copy machine, it wore out and quit. When Governor McWherter refused to supply her with a new one, she was not surprised any more than we were. Edith took it all in stride, relentlessly focusing on resolution of Kelly's need.

Chapter 14
IT’S NOT OVER ‘TIL WE WIN

“Mom!” Kelly jumped into my arms, her blue eyes sparkling. “Edith Hammons came to visit me. She told me what you and dad are doing to get me out of here, and that a whole bunch of people care about me!”

Edith hadn’t yet told me about visiting Kelly, and I could only imagine the strings she pulled to get through Cumberland House’s no-visitor policy with regard to Kelly. Obviously she knew her way around and had said the right things to keep Kelly aware of the love surrounding her.

“I’ve got my own room now,” Kelly proudly told me. I looked around her dreary room that was sparsely furnished with several beds. “I’ll have a roommate tomorrow, though.” I left the small sack of toiletries I’d brought her on the desk, wishing I could have afforded to bring her something fun to brighten her dismal surroundings. She never even looked in the sack while I was there, although she hugged me for bringing it.

A social worker stood at the door with her arms crossed. “You’re not supposed to be here without supervision,” she said.

“Who wants to supervise?” I asked. “We don’t have anything to hide.”

The social worker eventually traded her post at the door for a chair, relaxing in the warmth of the relationship that Kelly and I shared. We had so little time together to enjoy each other’s company that we maximized every moment. Despite our torturous past, our relationship was strong.

Censorship of our words seemed absurd to us. We had long since developed a heightened sense of telepathic communication when we were tortured together. It was as though we had been blasted into parts of the brain that people have forgotten how to use. While most people use a reported “10% of their brain,” we were using primitive sensory functions and other aspects to make up for our lack of free thought. Kelly and I utilized this ability to exchange sensory understanding on a level similar to animal communication[1], which extends far beyond mere words. This natural mode of communication, said to have been the common language shared before the Biblical Tower of Babel divided mankind by language barriers, is a phenomenon recognized today between some twins or couples who have loved together for years. Throughout Kelly’s victimization by the State of Tennessee’s so-called mental health and justice systems, our reliance on this innate telepathic system kept us in full communication despite censorship. This was small consolation for the gross injustice that forced our family apart.

We cried together under the watchful eye of the supervisor when I told her that she was half in state custody[2] by court order. I explained that it was a formality that would eventually contribute to freeing her. I also told her, “That piece of paper cannot change the fact that you are my daughter and I love you.”

Kelly wiped her tears. “It’s not over ‘til we win, huh mom?” she asked.

“We’ll win,” I assured her. “And it’s not over ‘til we win.”

“Time’s up,” the social worker supervising us announced. Supervised visits certainly had their limits in addition to being an insult to our relationship.

I kept my appointment with Dr. Presley in hopes it would provide a further measure of safety for Kelly from Wayne Cox and Alex Houston. Cox was free to see Kelly without supervision, despite Kelly’s documented records proving him an abuser. My court appointed Legal Services attorney, Jean Crowe, doubled for the judge on his days off. And her efforts to impose restraining orders against Cox had yet to produce any results. It seemed that she, like the judge, was bound by federal ‘national security’ intervention.

Dr. Presley was a pleasant Christian man whose sole intention was to medically document what he saw. With in-state records of his reconfirmation of Kelly’s extensive sexual abuse, and my vaginal mutilation carving, perhaps the court could levy the restraints against Cox that Kelly so desperately needed. Dr. Presley was prepared to waive all financial charges for the appointment since Edith apparently had explained our financial condition. I offered the Medicaid card issued to me through the Violent Crimes Compensation Commission anyway, since it was intended to fund any court-ordered exams.

Mark and I went directly to the Copy Shop, made copies of the documentation, and then took the records straight to Jean Crowe’s office to be filed with the court.

“There are a lot of rumors flying around about you two,” Jean informed us. She looked at Mark, “I’ve even been told you are a containment expert who is discrediting mind control survivors.”

Mark quickly determined this court appointed attorney most likely would not be equipped to deal with national security issues. “If I were a containment expert, why are we being contained? And why am I not being paid off? I don’t even have enough gas in the car to get back home. You’d best use some logic in this case, Ms. Crowe, and stop listening to ‘rumors’ obviously being orchestrated by the ones wanting to contain this case. There’s a little girl’s life on the line here.”

I handed her the medical records. “If you want to see what containment really is, you need to go over to Cumberland House and see what is happening to Kelly. She is counting on me to get her out of there. Charlene Johnson is being blatantly abusive, and is growing rich in the process. Her new car and gaudy new wardrobe are the talk of Cumberland House staff. Have you noticed her influx of money?”

“Well, I have,” Jean admitted. “I’ll go see Kelly myself after court in the morning. I want to meet her anyway.”

The next morning, I was at the court a few minutes early. While I waited, Cox's Attorney Bob Anderson told Kelly's so-called guardian ad litem Martha Child, state attorneys, and Charlene Johnson, "Gather 'round. It's pay-off time. Cathy's father[3] thanks you all." Bob Anderson counted out money into the hands of those present. When Jean Crowe finally arrived, I told her about the incident.

"You're just hysterical," she said.

Dr. Presley's records were presented to the court and rejected. The only records that would be accepted 'were those that the state would request.' I automatically assumed all exams would be rigged from then on, and prepared myself accordingly.

Jean Crowe went to see Kelly after court, only to determine, "she looks normal to me."

Despite non-stop persistent efforts to keep Cox from seeing Kelly, he was granted supervised visitation. On April 15, his visit with Kelly was "supervised" by Charlene Johnson! According to Cumberland House records secretly slipped to me by an employee, and Kelly's own written testimony, Charlene Johnson physically forced Kelly to have visitation with Cox despite her screams and pleas. Cox delivered CIA codes, keys, and triggers in an effort to incite her programmed respiratory failure.

Kelly went into severe asthma, requiring medical attention. She also lost over 10 lbs in two weeks due to extreme stress. This is documented.

I attempted to file criminal abuse charges against Charlene Johnson. I was told that since Kelly was in joint custody, one state agency (the State of Tennessee) could not legally sue another state agency (Cumberland House), and therefore I had 'no case.'

Kelly, who was severely depressed, brightened when she saw me on our next visit. "I'd like to introduce you to my roommate and new best friend Lindsay."

A sweet little girl with huge eyes and a pixie haircut shyly said, “Hi.” Her pupils were dilated as though traumatized, and she was as frail and thin as Kelly. “The FBI was involved in my rapery,” she whispered.

Despite having invented a word, her sincerity and meaning were clear. The social worker that would be supervising today was walking towards us, and Kelly quickly said, “Her father is FBI, and her mother is trying to get her back. Can you help her, too?”

“Please?” the little girl asked, with tears filling her big eyes.

“I’ll do what I can,” I promised. I turned to Kelly, “God knows Dad and I are determined and persistent enough. When we win, it will set precedent and…”

“Ms. O’Brien, I’m going to have to ask you to leave if you’re talking about court matters,” the Cumberland House worker told me.

“I wish Kelly had a worker as conscientious as you to supervise when Cox was here,” I told her. Kelly smiled.

Lindsay gave Kelly a knowing look that indicated the depth of understanding they shared. I silently conveyed my assurance to Lindsay, and Kelly and I went to the dayroom for our supervised visit.

As I prepared to leave, Kelly said, “When Edith was here, she told me about Congressman Clement and her friend Representative West. She said they care about me, too. I wrote them letters.” Kelly was ahead of the game as usual. She gave me two handwritten pages of letters with another hidden between them. “Will you please mail them for me? Charlene Johnson won’t mail them for me. She told me she doesn’t even want me writing them.”

“Of course I’ll make sure they get them,” I assured her, unaware that the Cumberland House worker supervising us would report her for reaching out. The soul stirring pleas that she wrote brought me to tears for years every time I saw copies of them or thought of the injustice they spawned in the court. Kelly would be forbidden by court order to write or receive mail, which was against US Constitutional law and human rights.

Mark was waiting patiently in the car when our visit was over. He, too, cried as he read the letters. The third one she had hidden was to him. She wrote:

Dear Dad,
I miss you. I'm doing everything I can to get this cleared up. I'm sneak-writing to people like the Representative.
She signed it off with hearts and Love, Kelly. The other two letters read:

Dear Representative West,
Please HELP! Court is making me see my biological father Wayne Cox and not allowing me to see Mark and having me have supervised visits. Please help me. Love, Kelly.

Dear Congressman Clement,
I really need Help! Court is making things worse. Court is making me loose the two people I love most (mom, Mark) and making me see Wayne Cox. He is triggering my asthma and he's making me loose Mark. He's lying about abusing me. If you can Please get me out of this situation and help me to see Mark and to have unsupervised visits. HELP! Love, Kelly.

Chapter 15
THE HUNDREDTH MONKEY

“How many others like Kelly are being abused by the system for ‘reasons of national security?’” I wondered as we drove back to Melba’s. I told Mark about my encounter with Lindsay. My childhood environment had been so saturated with incest that I thought the whole world was that way. In the 1980’s, I had witnessed vast numbers of people being mind controlled. “I wonder how many of them survived? And if they survived, are they being mistreated by an ignorant mental health and justice system? Why are people so blind? When is this nightmare going to end?”

“Have you ever heard of the hundredth monkey?” Mark asked.

“No. What do monkeys have to do with this?”

“It is a theory, not meant to be interpreted so literally,” Mark explained. “It is an example of evolution in progress. When an action, positive or negative, is repeated for three generations it becomes genetically encoded. It becomes an inborn autogenic response. If a monkey collects ants on a honey-coated stick, for example, and other monkeys see he is eating more than they, they copy him. By the time the hundredth monkey begins collecting ants on a honey-coated stick, the added energy creates an ideological breakthrough that affects the whole society. When the whole society of monkeys does this for three generations, it becomes their culture. According to Ken Keyes Hundredth Monkey studies, when that hundredth monkey’s added energy creates the ideological breakthrough, evolution occurs. Even monkeys on other continents start collecting ants on honey-coated sticks without copying. They are born knowing.”

“Is this natural process why I do not relate to perpetuating incest despite my own multigenerational background?” I asked, realization clearing my vision.

“That’s the theory,” Mark said. “People are on the verge of evolving out of this nonsense despite the efforts of a criminal few who still cling to the belief that their secret knowledge equals power.”

“All it takes is one monkey to let the secret out, and by the time the hundredth monkey knows it, the criminals in control are history.” I concluded.

“Unless the hundredth monkey couldn’t think to do so. Add mind control to the equation. Hitler/Himler research into genetics and mutigenerational families led them to believe that they could control the future by controlling society. Operating on the philosophy that secret knowledge equals power, they would keep pertinent facts from the people and alter their natural evolutionary process. They knew that traumas like incest and torture left people highly suggestible and easily led. After three generations of incest, abuse, and ignorance it becomes genetically encoded and people are born more compliant. It was believed that this could be a formula for mass mind control.”

“Generations of war[1] could create this same compliance in people,” I concluded. “God knows war is traumatic.”

“Hitler is a warning from history to all of us.”

“Did the Nazi’s really believe that mind control would suppress the hundredth monkey evolution?” I wondered.

“It is not so simple.”

“Obviously not. I realize knowledge doesn’t fit in a box,” I said. “I’m still on my learning path just like everybody else, so I’m not trying to package it all up. There is always more to learn. Yet that seems like a logical question.”

"The whole concept of mind control has evolved beyond Hitler's theories through technological advancements," Mark reminded me. "Plus we've had generations of conditioning now."

"But we're not monkeys," I argued, falling back on my original literal interpretation for illustration. "The strength of the human spirit wasn't taken into consideration. The human spirit is stronger than genetics."

"This is true," Mark laughed. "Obviously the whole mind control theory is flawed, or we wouldn't be where we are today."

My mind returned to my original point about Lindsay, only I was feeling much more hopeful now.

"What did you tell Lindsay when she asked for our help?" Mark asked, turning onto the winding country road.

"I assured her we would set precedent and make a difference for her," I told him. I thought for a minute and elaborated. "Not exactly in those words but the thought was communicated."

"She understands?"

"Absolutely, which confirms her abuse to me even more than her words did," I said. "If only people would simply realize, accept and utilize their innate thought communication capability without the abuse[2]. Kelly and I were talking about this and…"

Mark laughed. "Isn't that redundant? Why talk?"

Suddenly this deep subject seemed light. "You're right," I laughed. It felt good to laugh and balance the intensity of our day. "People thought communicate more than they think."

Mark smiled and rolled his eyes.

“Well, they do. Think about it,” I smiled. “And the answer to your question is ‘yes’.”

“Are you sure that’s my mind you’re reading?” Mark’s gaze indicated it wasn’t. “Because there is no question.”

“Well, I got your message loud and clear,” I squirmed in my seat, hoping we were closer to home than we were. “It does seem that regardless of where our mental focus is, part of us stays in constant communication.”

“Isn’t that called ‘attraction’?”

“I call it ‘love’,” I giggled. “Thought communication, like our sex, rides on the wings of love and communicates beyond mere words.”

“Tell me more,” Mark suggested, pulling into the driveway. “Want to monkey around?”

Chapter 16
CRIMINAL "JUSTICE" SYSTEM

The next time I saw Kelly, Lindsay was gone.

"Charlene says I have to get along with my peers or be locked in the padded cell. Mom, the kids here are nuts. Most of them are satanists. I'd rather be by myself than listen to their nonsense."

Kelly was right. Her mind controlled past left her with heightened suggestibility, which extended to what is termed "mirroring and matching." She would tend to walk their walk and talk their talk, and she was struggling to overcome this conditioned behavior in order to heal and live true-to-soul. Being punished if she did not conform to Charlene's demands was counter-productive to therapy.

"They hold séances here for group activity."

"Who does?" I asked, believing Kelly must be either exaggerating or suffering flashbacks.

"Melissa Thurmond and all the kids, and Charlene forces me to participate!"

I thought of all the satanic graffiti around Cumberland House when Kelly was first admitted. Swallowing my rage, I approached the worker who held the rituals and asked her about them.

"It's all in fun," Melissa Thurmond told me. "We don't do it for real."

“If these children knew what reality was they wouldn’t be here. Apparently you don’t know what ‘real’ means either. There isn’t any ‘fun’ in reinforcing negative behavior, superstition, and the horror many of these kids have experienced. I will address this issue with the Commissioner of Mental Health, State Legislators, the courts, media, and anyone else who will listen. This is archaic therapy and an absolute outrage. Do not make Kelly participate in any more of your ridiculous rituals.”

“I follow orders from Charlene, not from you,” Melissa told me. “And Kelly does what Charlene tells her to do. I am not the one forcing her to do anything.”

While I spoke with Melissa, Kelly was told by the social worker supervising our visit that she was never to speak of Cumberland House activities to me again as it violated confidentiality for the other children. If she said anything more, our visits would be terminated.

Kelly and I looked at each other in total understanding. She knew I would be working on this issue from the outside, and I knew she would keep me apprised of her circumstances through our silent communication. Our bond grew stronger.

“We have got to find an honest attorney,” I told Mark as we left Cumberland House.

“How do we seek an honest attorney in a sea of deception?” Mark said. “The most successful, highest paid attorneys are masters of mind manipulation. They use NLP.”

“NLP?” I asked.

“Neuro Linguistic Programming[1]. It’s the language of the subconscious. Of course, knowledge is neither good nor bad, it’s who has control of it for what purpose. I wish every person knew NLP. Then it couldn’t be used to manipulate their critical analysis.”

I thought for a moment. “Knowledge is our only defense against NLP the same way it’s our only defense against mind control. Once people understand it, they know what to watch for and guard against[2].”

“NLP subliminals have long since been used in advertising and marketing, and yet people are still ignorant about it because the government keeps the information suppressed since it is an integral part of their arsenal for marketing their own agenda to a socially engineered population. Attorneys who are aware of it use it to manipulate the minds of the jury, and even the mind of the judge if he doesn’t have the knowledge to defend himself against it.”

“If people thought communicated[3] rather than used attorneys, they would get straight to the truth,” I said. “Instead, they rely on someone to be lawful who simply manipulates everyone’s thoughts and conclusions through a secret means. It’s no wonder our justice system is called ‘criminal’!”

“Someday NLP must be taught in the grade school system,” Mark said. “Then everyone will have the knowledge and can no longer be led by it. Look how some attorneys perpetuate their secret knowledge of NLP to advance into politics simply by manipulating minds of the public with the same means by which they manipulate the minds of a jury.”

“Traficant is a perfect example. While he was Sheriff of Youngstown, Ohio he was caught in criminal activity that ran through Charm School.”

“The one where you and Kelly were tortured?” Mark clarified.

“Yes. The one she drew the picture of. Anyway, Traficant admitted to taking large bribes[4] to overlook drug trafficking and prostitution when he was caught red handed in 1980. Since I knew him back then, I was aware of his involvement in CIA cocaine, mind control, and prostitution. By the time his court trial came around in 1983, he had been promoted to Congress. He used subliminals and NLP on the jury the same way he manipulated the minds of his constituents and trained sex slaves at Charm School! He got off on all criminal charges.”

“Now he’s running containment by cozying up to the patriots of this country, manipulating their minds the same way,” Mark pointed out. “The good news is, scum bags like him and Charlene Johnson usually get set up to take a fall to divert attention away from the criminal activity of the higher-ups[5].”

“I wish people would wake up and arm themselves with the facts. It could all be so easy. Instead, we have to find ‘an honest attorney in a sea of deception’ just like you said.”

“I was told by a CIA/DIA officer who works out of Clarksville[6] to contact the head of the Trial Lawyers Association, Reese Bagwell, and see if we can find a clean one,” Mark said. “I have reason to believe this Bagwell guy is as dirty as any attorney can be, which is why he’s head of the Trial Lawyers lobby. We have no choice. Kelly’s out of time.”

Mark and I met with Attorney Reese Bagwell. Bagwell was working along side of his former law school roommate Frank Rubino, who was the appointed attorney for the former Panamanian Leader and CIA cocaine operative captured in ‘Just Cause,’ Manuel Noriega. The DIA’s ‘special agent’ Jim Dibble was also cooperating with Bagwell at the time, which provided further validation and insight into the validity of our case. Still, we were cautious. After all, Bagwell’s office was located in Clarksville near Fort Campbell, and his behind the scenes activities reeked of DIA, CIA, and Jesuit affiliation. Aside from his association with Noriega, Bagwell’s “friends” included Michael Gilstrap, head of the National Coalition Against Pornography, and former Ambassador to France, Joe Rodgers[7].

Bagwell’s Catholic Jesuit ties and the Mormon ties of his robotic-appearing partner Phil Kendrick did not keep them from associating with Gilstrap, Rodgers, and their ‘Tabernacle Baptist’ church. This church, considered by locals to be a cult church, used a massive blue monarch butterfly for their logo. Mark and I quickly determined Gilstrap’s N.C.A.P. organization and church were a catch-net operation for Nashville mind control survivors when we had cause to attend ‘Tabernacle Baptist’ at the request of one of his robotic slaves. The massive structure had an upper balcony, which was strangely lined with armed military personnel apparently guarding the sophisticated electronic equipment we saw in use there. We met with our contact as scheduled as she feared for her life and was pleading for help. Believing Gilstrap intended to help victims like her, she gave us his business office address.

Gilstrap's 'toy-manufacturing' front[8] did little to hide his CIA agenda when Mark and I met with him. When his use of CIA and Jesuit codes, keys, and triggers to Pentagon-level mind control programming failed to produce the desired results in me, Gilstrap had resorted to stroking the blade of a knife he had pulled as a threat. The web we were tangled in was becoming clear to us, and we took all of this into consideration when we met with Bagwell.

"We need a clean attorney with a security clearance who can deal with the national security issue covering mind control," Mark told him. "Because of your position, you are the only individual qualified to give us direction."

"My partner will help you," Bagwell assured us, pushing the intercom button to page him. "Of course, you know you are playing with fire and are liable to get burned."

Mark, who didn't take veiled threats from anyone, rose like lightening in an effort to prevent Bagwell from leaving the room. His partner opened the door just in time for him to introduce, "Phil Kendrick," as he hurried out the door like a scalded cat.

Kendrick was kind, though his dilated pupils suggested that his sincerity would not surpass inevitable orders of containment. Once again, we were blocked from conventional justice and resolution of Kelly's escalating need. No help was offered, and only veiled threats voiced.

We conveyed the information of our experience to Representative West when we delivered Kelly's heart-wrenching plea to him. He was working behind the scenes for Kelly's cause just as Edith knew he would; yet the magnitude of the containment was seemingly insurmountable. I told him about the rituals being held at Cumberland House.

"Kelly and I do not take responsibility for what we were tortured to do under mind control, but now that we are aware and healing, we take full responsibility for our actions. No excuses. Not only is Charlene Johnson being counterproductive to Kelly’s rehabilitation, she is also forcing Kelly to act against her moral conviction.”

Representative West’s concerns were obvious. “The rituals will stop, Ms. O’Brien. I can assure you of that much.”

“Are we any closer to obtaining a diagnosis within the state so she can be transferred?” I asked.

“Talk with Marsha Willis,” he answered, giving me a knowing look. “Barry Nurcum[9] has agreed to take Kelly’s case.”

“What made him change his mind?” I asked suspiciously. “When Commissioner Rucker contacted him in 1989, he claimed he was not qualified to help her.”

“Vanderbilt Psychiatric is a Defense Department Subcontractor,” Mark added, noting that Dr. Nurcum, an Australian citizen, worked there on a green card work permit apparently underwritten by the D.O.D.

“I understand there is hope anyway,” Representative West assured us. “When Marsha learned that Charlene Johnson punished Kelly for reporting abuse to Judge Shookhoff, and that your efforts to prosecute her are hindered by state law protecting Cumberland House workers, it seems she convinced him to take the case. Despite how grim things may appear, there are many people deeply concerned for all three of you!”

“What do you know about US Customs?” Mark asked, shifting the subject slightly.

Ben West smiled. “I know that Internal Affairs will be coming in to interview both of you. They are serious about cleaning up corruption in their agency, and apparently you two are providing them with significant information.”

Mark was surprised he already knew about our pending Internal Affairs meeting.

Ben West lowered his voice. “I also know that Agent Lou Bock may have helped save your lives.”

This same insight was raised again when we saw Marsha Willis later that afternoon. “I was really concerned for all of you,” she confided. “Mark, I know you are capable of keeping Cathy safe as long as you two are alive.” She swallowed her emotion, “I was relieved to learn of Lou Bock and Bob Clement’s intervention on your behalf to the FBI. This case is tough. Everyone will be much safer when Kelly is transferred to rehabilitation, and Dr. Nurcum has agreed to evaluate her for the necessary diagnosis.”

“How can he do that?” I asked. “He already said he’s not qualified to diagnose MPD/DID let alone mind control.”

“I spoke with Debbie Upchurch of the ICAM[10] organization. Apparently your meetings with her, and her meetings with Kelly provided her enough insight into the validity of your case to complete State forms with a diagnosis of ‘looks like Multiple Personality Disorder,’ and Dr. Nurcum is qualified to determine that much.” She smiled. “Kelly begins therapy with him immediately after he meets with you two. You name the time, and I’ll schedule the meeting.”

“We have extensive meetings already scheduled with Internal Affairs,” Mark began.

“Customs?” Marsha inquired.

“Yes,” Mark said. “So we’ll meet with him the first of next week.”

“Done,” she said.

Our meetings with US Customs Internal Affairs began the next day. In addition to detailed testimony, I provided photographic details describing corrupt Customs officials involved in CIA drug operations. Jose Busto's Intercontinental Shipping based in San Juan, Puerto Rico was of particular interest since he had masqueraded as a US Customs and Immigrations officer with Norwegian Caribbean Lines cruise ships[11]. Throughout the 1980s, my association with CIA drug ops via NCL had placed me in contact with numerous high ranking drug lords and politicians; including Manuel Noriega.

By 1986, Noriega's blatant cocaine dealings threatened to further complicate the ongoing Iran Contra hearings. In an effort to threaten Noriega into silence and temporary inactivity, a meeting took place in Bradenton Beach, Florida near McDill Air Force Base. I was there on Noriega's yacht along with Oliver North and Aquino, among others[12]. The object of "Operation Shell Game" was to appeal to Noriega's superstitions since a logical approach hadn't slowed his CIA cocaine ops down. Psychological Warfare, which is designed to incite superstitious response, was used to no avail. Soon after, CIA Chief William Casey died of a sudden brain tumor the day he was to testify in Iran Contra, and the scandal diverted away from Noriega's dealings. By the time Bush Sr.'s 'Operation Just Cause' resulted in the incarceration of his former CIA associate Noriega, much pertinent information had come to light that not only validated our case but brought us to this point of providing details to Internal Affairs.

"Your experience ties in with Watchtower[13]," the Customs Internal Affairs officer told us. "We have numerous validations, yet are continuously being stopped from the top in DC. We want to know why. I'm sending in two of my best agents from Florida to interview you at length. Compensation for information like yours runs into the hundreds of thousands, and I'll see what I can do to have the funds released to you despite your declining Federal Protection. Quite frankly, I don't blame you for turning down protection from the criminals you are turning in! I can't promise you anything, but I can assure you I will do all I can to have this compensation released to you in order that you can better protect yourselves and get some rehabilitation for your daughter."

I already felt drained of every bit of information by the time Agents Jack Devaney and Howard Rudolph came in to meet with us. Rather than conduct the interview in Lou Bock's office, they suggested we meet at their hotel suite where everyone could be more comfortable. "We can order a pizza, stretch out on the couch, and enjoy a few comforts while we drag you through all this testimony again," Devaney said.

Mark and I were comfortable with these interviews regardless of where they were conducted. It was strenuous trudging through every detail of my experience repeatedly, yet it was important that it be recorded more than once for precise comparative accuracy. Since my memory of such events was photographic due to the mind control trauma involved, it was easy telling the truth over and over. At the same time, it was exhausting mind work for hours on end.

Agents Rudolph and Devaney were kind and compassionate. Their boss in Florida worked directly under Von Raab, and it was during the course of these interviews that we learned the extent to which Von Raab had succeeded against insurmountable odds in weakening the drug operations. When George Bush, Sr. was head of the CIA, he oversaw this same southeast region through which CIA drug ops were established[14]. Overcoming Bush's obstacles to unveil the drug operations was an enormous accomplishment considering he was officially US President at the time.

"We risk our lives, infiltrate Caribbean drug operations, bust the drug lords, catch the leaders, obtain the plans, dismantle the structure, then we get stopped. Undercover Customs agents and DEA[15] are exposed and killed, leaders and drug lords and the confiscated drugs are back on the streets, and plans are put back into action before we can finish dismantling them," one of the agents complained.

"Having eyes to see these covert operations is quite an accomplishment in itself, " I began. "I realize that the more you know, the more you see. Still, most people don't think to look for this kind of criminal activity when it involves a woman and her child, and particularly when it involves their favorite entertainer! Jimmy Buffet's direct involvement with CIA drugs ops in Key West naturally placed him in a ‘key’ position to exchange drug for arms in Cuba.”

“Do you believe Buffet was under mind control?” I was asked.

“Absolutely not!” I exclaimed. “Buffet was highly skilled in using CIA mind control codes, keys, and triggers to program or access me to ensure the operations he orchestrated were precisely carried out. Not only was his cover as a successful singer/songwriter highly effective in diverting people from his CIA affiliation, he was also highly adept at carrying out covert operations unnoticed!”

Devaney and Rudolph smiled and nodded to each other. Apparently they were already wise to Buffet’s Key West CIA ops. “Cuba is only 88 miles from Key West,” one of them prompted.

“Buffet bragged about being ‘Uncle’s point man to Cuba’ once when I was used in a drugs for arms operation,” I answered. “The boat Buffet used in the operation looked like a normal speed boat, yet it got us from Key West to Cuba quickly. Drugs were being exchanged for rocket launchers to be sent to Afghanistan. The CIA was arming the Afghani Freedom Fighters against Russia, and the same “You Are What You Read” programming George Bush (Sr.) subjected me to was being used throughout the Cuba-Afghanistan operation. My purpose in being there was to deliver the Afghanistan book embossed with a gold key used in programming.”

Rudolph asked, “Are you saying that MK Ultra was used in Cuba?”

Mark spoke up. “Considering that she was under mind control at the time, she would have had no ability to consciously comprehend specific details regarding the programming of others. Since she was likely on a military base, and MK Ultra mind control is used in all military facilities, the information she is reporting simply provides further specifics.”

Devaney made a note and asked Mark, “Are you aware of any mind control training facilities in Afghanistan?”

“Mind control training camps encompass the globe,” Mark began. “There are more mind control training camps cropping up every day, particularly those in the Middle East that are sponsored by the Arabs, Mossad, and US! The vast evidence regarding those blond-haired blue-eyed children who are being abducted and transported into Saudi Arabia for mind control purposes is only the tip of the ice-burg. Former US military who have not been deprogrammed, as well as men from war torn and impoverished countries are prime targets for these terrorist mind control facilities. Mind control is out of control, and the 1947 National Security Act further covers this invisible menace!”

Devaney and Rudolph were making notes in addition to the tape recorder catching every word. “This certainly clarifies Custom’s dilemma in resolving these issues. Every time Von Raab submits plans of resolution, Dick Thornburgh in DC shoots them down. I know he’s doing the same to your case, and all we can do is persist.”

“Thornburgh is blatantly and vastly corrupt,” I said. “How much longer can he stay in the office of Attorney General with the likes of Von Raab frustrated with his blatant injustice?”

“There are two scenarios at work here,” one of the agents answered. “One, follow the money and trails of coke right into Thornburgh’s office and publicly expose him through the media. Or two, expose his criminal activity from a different angle. He’s tangled up in so much it won’t be hard to do.”

“Or three,” the other agent said, “Catch him both ways. A slimy snake like him could wiggle free of anything unless he’s overwhelmed from every angle.”

We talked on into the evening, filling up every audiotape they had with them and our own! By the time we parted, Customs Internal Affairs knew everything I knew about Thornburgh, Bush, Noriega, Jose Busto, Jimmy Buffet, the Caribbean branch of CIA drug ops, the arming of Nicaragua’s Contras, and the destabilization of the Middle East through the arming of Afghanistan and Iraq. Mark and I knew we had strong support, and friends as dedicated as we are to dismantling the criminal corruption that was eroding the soul of America.

Chapter 17
GOVERN YOUR OWN THOUGHTS

The clock on the wall of the Stahlman Building's Legal Services office ticked annoyingly loud, as if to remind Mark and me that time was passing while we waited. My court appointed attorney, Jean Crowe, was finishing up her lunch hour before meeting with me. Mark's stomach growled, disrupting the monotony of our wait as it echoed through the empty waiting room. Finally, the secretary appeared.

"Ms. Crowe will see you now," she announced.

"Why has Kelly been denied the right to testify in court?" I asked Jean Crowe as she wiped crumbs from her desk.

"It was just a hearing and doesn't matter, anyway," Jean Crowe told me. "All Kelly does is incite negative response from Cumberland House when she tells the judge that Charlene is abusive."

"How can that not matter?" I was agitated. "It is bad enough that I am not allowed to be Kelly's voice to prosecute Charlene Johnson. Now she is denied access to the court, as well. What voice do we have?"

"Well," Jean cleared her throat. "You have me. Kelly has Cumberland House attorneys and a guardian ad litem."

"Are you aware of the séances that are being held as 'group therapy' at Cumberland House?"

"Oh, Cathy," she sighed. "That's just all in fun."

I swallowed my rising rage, standing firm on logic rather than allowing myself to be blinded by emotion. I tried another direction. “Kelly is forbidden from telling me anything further about her circumstances; I am denied copies of her Cumberland House records; Cox and his attorney have full access to her and are reportedly triggering her; her health is failing; she can no longer write, receive letters or have phone calls; she is counseled that her past is not real and that I am insane…”

“Well?” Jean raised her eyebrows.

“ I wish I were insane. Then none of this would be real. There would be no such thing as mind control, Kelly would be OK, and all would be right with the world!”

“The whole conspiracy theory is irrational.”

“You’re playing games with semantics,” I countered. “This isn’t about a ‘wild conspiracy’; it’s about real crime. It’s about the way things are. It’s about the political affluence of the perpetrators involved who are hell bent on covering up their crimes at all costs. They’ve got all the money and influence, I’ve got a welfare pro bono attorney, and Kelly doesn’t even have a voice.”

“And I have a life and other cases, you know,” Jean Crowe asserted, as though I were imposing on her. “This should be a Federal case, not one for family court.”

“Well at least we agree on something,” I said. “But, as you must know by now, Dick Thornburgh and so-called “national security” are blocking all routes to conventional justice. The ultimate justice will be positive change through public awareness, anyway. The media is hot on the issue of mind control and government corruption right now, and they won’t stop until Dick Thornburgh goes down as the most immoral criminal to ever oversee the US Department of Justice.”

“Mark my words,” I said, gathering my paperwork. “Dick Thornburgh’s reputation and career are on the line…the line of coke that leads straight to his office and up his nose. He will be forced to resign in a scandal that will shake the so-called halls of justice of this country. Maybe then you'll be free to do your job and at least restore Kelly's Constitutional rights."

I stormed out of the office, slumping against the wall of the elevator as it groaned and squeaked it's way up to the District Attorney's office. "Straighten up," Mark advised. "This meeting with Scott Rosenburg may result in providing Kelly's ticket to freedom."

Mark was right. By filing for back child support from Cox through Assistant D.A. Scott Rosenburg, we could be awarded sufficient funds to obtain Kelly's transfer to qualified rehabilitation outside the state of Tennessee. At the very least, perhaps it would legally bind Cox to where he wouldn't be able to continue his visits with Kelly.

"Come in," Scott Rosenburg invited me into his office as he perused the paperwork I had provided. He took out his calculator. "According to these figures, Cox owes in excess of $21,000 in back child support." He looked up, satisfied with his conclusions. "If we can prove…" His phone rang, interrupting his statement. "Excuse me," he told me. "Yes," he said into the phone and hung it up. A knock at the door prompted him to pick up a large file, which he handed to a secretary without discussion. "I'm sorry," he apologized, his soulful eyes reflecting his sincerity. "We are under funded and under staffed. I chose this job to make a difference for the kids, and…"

Another secretary poked her head in the door. "Your waiting room is full and you have a meeting in 15 minutes."

Scott sighed. "I would like to talk with you further, Ms. O'Brien."

"Cathy," I dropped the formality.

"I heard about your case some time ago, Cathy, and know that you have support from the most moral politicians I know," Scott said.

"I used to believe 'moral politicians' was an oxymoron," I smiled. "Now I know better. It's more like 'military Intelligence'… few and far between but nevertheless possible.”

“Let’s see what we can do about getting that back child support that’s owed you,” Scott said. “Kelly needs it. How can I reach you when we’re ready for court?”

“Through Jean Crowe. Since we’re in juvenile court two or three times a week these days I’m in her office often.”

“While you’re in the building, come up and see me. This case is top priority and should be ready for sixth circuit court soon.” Scott stood up, looking me in the eye as he warmly shook my hand.

I told Mark about our new possibilities as we drove to our appointment with Dr. Barry Nurcum at Vanderbilt University Psychiatric Hospital. “Even if Kelly is awarded a fraction of the amount that is owed,” Mark said, “we can obtain serious help for her.”

“Maybe Internal Affairs will succeed in arranging for compensation and help for Kelly,” I offered.

“With Dick Thornburgh head of the Justice Department? Counting on the courts to serve justice is a stronger possibility.” He parked the car. “I’m going to make a quick phone call. I’ll meet you in Nurcum’s office.”

I rode the elevator up to the psychiatrist’s office, feeling more confident in Mark’s plans than I did in Dr. Nurcum’s abilities. Mark joined me as Dr. Nurcum’s secretary invited us in.

Dr. Nurcum was already aware of Kelly’s case thanks to Marsha Willis, and no time was wasted on recapitulating history. “I’ll begin seeing Kelly next week,” he told us. “In the meantime, you two must cease talking about mind control.”

“We have meetings with top law enforcement officials, politicians, and media persons, and you want me to avoid the words mind control?” I asked.

“No one knows what you’re talking about anyway,” Nurcum stated.

“Civia Tamarkin with People Magazine knows what mind control means, and I am aware that you know Civia,” I countered. “She speaks highly of you.”

“I’m telling you to forget about the issue of mind control because it will cost you your life if you persist.” Nurcum was becoming agitated.

“I hope you won’t be advising Kelly to ‘forget’ about reality.” My words were lost to the friction rising in the room as Mark stood up.

“Wait a minute. You are Kelly’s doctor not our attorney.”

“I’m telling you to shut up.”

“You don’t want to do that,” Mark said, beginning to smile.

“While I do my job, you must shut up.” Red rose in his neck as Dr. Nurcum stood to look Mark in the eye. I gathered up our papers and prepared to leave. Fast. “I know what I’m talking about, shut up!”

“Are you quoting Civia Tamarkin, or is she quoting you?” Mark asked, sarcastically referring to a recent conversation he had recorded with her. Civia had apparently been tipped that we were meeting with Nurcum, and had advised us to “forget about mind control” and “shut the f--- up.”

“People Magazine won’t be quoting me about this case.” Nurcum said.

“If you were quoting Civia, you would have used the same foul language she did,” Mark smiled. “I wonder who both of you are quoting? Whose advice are you two following that has you so hysterical over two little words like ‘mind control’? Wise up. Think for yourself. Either way you’ll be losing that green card as soon as the guard changes in DC.”

Mark and I went out the door. On the way back to the car I said, “His office is crawling with Feds. They may as well have punched eye-holes in the newspapers they weren’t reading to watch more closely.”

“They’d have removed their dark glasses if they needed to see better,” Mark added. “They were there to be seen, and it seems they achieved their purpose. They know they can’t intimidate us, but they sure did succeed in intimidating Nurcum. That doctor needs a heavy tranquilizer. Wait until you hear the tape I made of him losing his temper.”

“Is Kelly safe with this arrangement?” I was concerned.

“I believe Nurcum’s intentions to help her are genuine,” Mark observed. “But I don’t trust anyone who is that scared. He’d roll in a heartbeat, and his cowardly heart is beating fast from fear. Let’s go to plan B. I made a phone call that is very promising. I don’t want to discuss it around here, though.”

We talked about our options and plans as we drove back to Melba’s house in Charlotte. Without providing unnecessary detail, Mark told me about a trusted associate on the inside of the Intelligence Community who had access to technology that could help Kelly. “One of the best spies in the world was just deprogrammed through this doctor and made a remarkable recovery. He’s safe and thinking free again. This doctor is aware of our case and has agreed to help Kelly. We could use that child support settlement to get plane tickets overseas.”

I knew better than to question him further. Mark always shared whatever information he could with me, and to press for additional details ahead of time was both unnecessary and unsafe. I excitedly pondered the possibilities, reflecting on my meeting with Rosenburg. His soulful eyes had shined with sincerity, and I felt better about my connection with him than with anyone else involved in Kelly’s case. Nurcum I was not so comfortable with. I thought back on our meeting with him, and suddenly laughed out loud.

“What in the world is so funny?” Mark asked.

“It just struck me funny that you told a leading psychiatrist to ‘think for himself.’ Considering what Kelly and I emerged from and what we’ve been through with the mental health system, it seems ironic.”

Mark smiled. “If you liked that one, then you’ll like the letter I just sent to Al Gore after he refused to help Kelly.”

“I really hoped he’d help. He doesn’t seem like a bad guy.”

“He’s not. Nor is he a good guy. He’s just a guy who does what he’s told who has jumped through so many hoops he no longer has an original thought of his own,” Mark explained. “So I sent him the message in DC ‘govern your own thoughts’ hoping he would reconsider.”

“What did he say?”

“Nothing. Like I said, I don’t believe his thoughts are his own.”

I pondered how Mark’s message to Gore reverberated with profound meaning. “There would be no such thing as mind control if everyone realized the need to apply the phrase ‘Govern your own thoughts’.”

Chapter 18
COVER OPS

“One of our ‘guardian angels[1]’ gave me a contact number for Rita Jenrette of ‘A Current Affair’ TV show. I just talked with her, and if this comes off as planned it could be a real break for us,” Mark told me as I emerged from a refreshing shower. It was a bright morning, and we were getting dressed for a meeting with our local District Attorney Dan Alsobrooks. We needed him to be aware of our growing reputation as government whistleblowers and the precarious circumstances that accompanied it. He had also stated interest in our case regarding a local criminal by the name of Ernest Ray Lynn[2]. For now, though, our focus was on the phone call that Mark just completed.

“Rita Jenrette is a Washington insider turned television host. Her TV news magazine is shaking up politics.” Mark paused to poke his tongue in his muscled cheek for a smoother shave.

“Is she part of the media expose’ on Dick Thornburgh that Customs Internal Affairs referred to?” I asked, pulling on my blue jeans.

“Yes,” Mark splashed shaving cream from his handsome face. “A former FBI Operative by the name of Darlene Kinsey and her partner, CIA Agent and field officer Bradley Ayers, turned in evidence that corroborates your information on Caribbean CIA cocaine ops . They would like you to see the show that’s airing tonight since they’ll be showing photos of that mansion in Jamaica you talk about.”

“That sounds interesting,” I commented, passing Mark the towel.

“What’s interesting is that they, too, tie this whole thing to Thornburgh, his involvement in the drug industry, and ‘national security’ cover-up.”

“How are they surviving?” I asked, deeply concerned for their welfare knowing all-too-well the difficulties encountered while whistle blowing.

Compassion filled Mark’s eyes. “Darlene Kinsey said her husband has been murdered. Officially it was ruled a suicide, but that’s not the way she sees it. Rather than succumb to terror tactics being used to silence her, she’s going public with the information.”

“Smart move.” I looked at my watch. “We have twenty minutes to get to Alsobrooks’ office. I’ll get our briefcases and meet you in the car.”

Mark had the car warmed up and ready to go by the time I climbed in a few minutes later. The ‘pop-tops and dental floss’ were holding up great, and the Pacer was as reliable as ever. Switching gears from our earlier conversation, I turned to discussing our upcoming meeting. “Is Dan Alsobrooks clean?”

“We’re about to find out,” Mark said, steering us toward the small town of Charlotte, Tennessee. “Edith Hammons says he’s clean. She’d have cause to know since he’s investigating Ernest Ray.”

Loretta Lynn’s son, Ernest Ray, was indicted for shooting a woman in the back in what was termed a ‘trailer park’ fight[3]. I had known Ernest Ray throughout the 1980’s since he was traveling the Country Music circuit as front man in Loretta’s band. In reality, I knew him to be acutely involved in mind control atrocities, CIA cocaine drug ops, and had even heard him brag that he “could get away with murder[4]” due to what he knew about Senator Byrd. Ernest Ray was acting in the capacity of Loretta’s mind control handler along with her Road Manager Ken Riley while they dealt in CIA cocaine ops without her knowledge[5].

Dan Alsobrooks was as clean as Edith had said he was, and he promised to do all he could to help keep us safe. He was in a position to help considerably, and he did. We shared a passion for justice regardless of the fame and/or influence of the perpetrators, as well as a need to stop the flow of corruption that was hindering prosecution of them. Mark and I shared information with Alsobrooks regarding Thornburgh, 'national security,' and what I knew about Earnest Ray.

"Ernest Ray is noted for his 'charming personality' and for being a 'lady's man,' which in reality is simply that he uses NLP to manipulate the minds of everyone he encounters. He mastered mind control techniques through his CIA friends and contacts. I know from experience that he associates with Byrd and Bill Clinton. That shift of the Country Music Industry into Branson was a deliberate move to bring Nashville's branch of CIA drug ops closer to Clinton's Mena Airport[6] operations. These are powerful contacts for Ernest Ray, which allows him to be privy to classified information."

"What do you think of Ernest Ray's character?" Alsobrooks asked.

"He knew MK Ultra codes, keys, and triggers to my mind control programming and accessed sexual aspects for his own perversion. That's not exactly being the 'lady's man' he portrays himself to be, but it does illustrate his total lack of respect for CIA ops. He wasn't supposed to be doing that, and arrogantly laughed at anyone trying to stop him. He was a loose cannon. Pretty crazy, really. Anyone so immoral as to repeatedly traumatize his own mother to control her is capable of absolutely anything. I'm not surprised that he is caught up in legal trouble, although prosecuting him will be a challenge considering his contacts."

"He will be prosecuted," Alsobrooks vowed. "He's going to learn that there are those who do oppose his criminal actions."

Mark and I left Dan Alsobrook's office, satisfied that someone of his caliber shared our passion for justice, regardless of the outcome. "The good DA is in for a surprise if he thinks he can put Ernest Ray away," Mark said.

That night, after the TV news magazine 'A Current Affair' publicly revealed the direct involvement of Dick Thornburgh in CIA Caribbean cocaine and mind control ops, Rita Jenrette telephoned again. Her show was being cancelled, their lives were threatened, and all three were now frantically striving to survive.

“Darlene, Bradley, and I will be appearing on Geraldo Rivera’s show right away to expose the containment that has been placed on us.”

“Geraldo?” Mark asked. “You know he is aware of our case, vowed to expose it, then rolled over at the first threat. Geraldo is a spineless sensationalist.”

“I’m not surprised at all,” Rita said. “But we have no choice. It is a matter of getting our voices heard now or die.”

Mark voiced his understanding, offering support.

“I’ve been around DC enough to know how to survive, even if my show didn’t,” Rita said. “It was worth it to expose Thornburgh. He has got to be stopped. I am concerned for Darlene, though. This has been hard on her.” It was agreed that Mark would stay in contact with Darlene Kinsey until all necessary measures were in place to ensure her safety.

When Geraldo aired, it was brief. The three were removed from the show during commercial break. Darlene was back in contact with Mark immediately, and great lengths were taken to maintain her security.

In the meantime, Kelly’s security remained a primary concern as well. Her sessions with Dr. Nurcum had begun, and knowing that Vanderbilt Psychiatric Hospital is a Defense Department Subcontractor never left my mind. After all, Vanderbilt Hospital was where Kelly had been taken several times per year during the 1980’s. Once when she was there due to respiratory failure, Loretta was in the Psychiatric wing at the same time reportedly being reconditioned in MK Ultra style. Vanderbilt was a nightmare from the past that was intruding on our present. I questioned Kelly for every detail in an effort to monitor her level of dissociation. The best news she had to offer was that she felt like Nurcum was listening to her regarding Cox.

Mark and I left Cumberland House, checked our Post Office Box which was still being filtered by the CIA, and went over to the Copy Shop. After running a few necessary document copies and updating Billy, we began the drive to a designated rendezvous point for a meeting with John Morrow.

“Who is John Morrow?” I asked, shifting my focus from Kelly to our meeting.

“He’s with the Nebraska Leadership Conference[7]. He traveled here in order to meet with us. Apparently one of the kids[8] Houston abused in Boys Town[9] is talking, and they’ve got quite a bit of evidence on some of the politicians you named, like George Bush[10]. They know about MK Ultra mind control, sexual child abuse for mind control purposes, CIA cocaine operations, and absolutely nothing about surviving containment.”

“I’m really hungry,” I complained, knowing it seemed trivial in light of the issues we were dealing with. Yet, it was an intrusive fact.

“So am I,” Mark said. “Did you bring any peanut butter sandwiches?”

“We were out of peanut butter. I made egg sandwiches for us instead.” I dug around the console hoping to find loose change. “Do you have any change for a soda?”

“I wish,” Mark answered. “I don’t even have money for gas. Let’s hope we have enough gas in the tank to get back home from our meeting with John Morrow. We’re supposed to meet him at a hotel room all the way across town.”

We knocked on the hotel room door. A wide-eyed gentleman opened the door as far as the security chain would allow, checked behind us, and quickly let us in.

“They’ve already killed our investigator,” John began. “Gary Caradori and his son, nearly a year ago July 11, 1990. He had the evidence.”

“Who knew he had the evidence?” Mark asked as we walked in and set on the couch.

“Everybody. We thought if everyone knew, we would be safe.” John’s eyes brimmed with tears. Obviously he was a concerned citizen and not a hardened Intelligence officer.

“The first rule of survival is making copies of everything. The second is keeping a tape recorder running.” Mark flipped open his briefcase to reveal the tape recorder. “And never use a courtroom as a forum.”

John was writing everything down as fast as he could. “The court case is already under way. Everything is going wrong.”

Mark and John talked at length. The CIA had already infiltrated the Franklin case, leaving little hope that victims Paul Bonacci or Alisha Owen would have a chance to heal and recover from their ordeal. The parallels between the Franklin case and Kelly’s extended far beyond Alex Houston, yet we could not align with the Nebraska Leadership Conference due to the extent to which they were being pulled down by the very ones they sought to expose. Their evidence against George Bush, Sr. was overwhelming, as was ours. Yet convergence of the information could have placed Kelly in the same precarious position that the Nebraska victims were struggling to survive.

“Let’s stay in contact,” Mark suggested. “Maybe we can help each other survive this mess without aligning our efforts.” As we went out the door, John hugged us both as though he’d never see us alive again.

As Mark drove the Pacer toward his mother’s, we made good use of the time discussing events. We knew we were in deep, yet we also knew we could survive as long as we kept ourselves free of other cases and organizations, and recorded and copied everything.

“The Nebraska Leadership Conference is one more example of how well-intentioned organizations become infiltrated,” Mark commented.

“Why are they aligned with Ted Gunderson?” I asked. Ted was a well-known and liked former FBI agent who was Resident Agent in Charge of the Southeastern Division in Memphis during the years that I was abused. He claimed he had not been aware of the blatant and rampant CIA drug operations, let alone mind control. Gunderson’s recent investigations into the McMartin Preschool[11] child abuse scandal resulted in one of the worst nightmares in California history. Ted retired in 1979 as Senior Special Agent in Charge of the FBI in Los Angeles, California, and his friendship with LA Police Chief Darryl Gates blazed through the infamous LA riots[12].

“I don’t know why they associate with Gunderson,” Mark answered. “I always say ‘I know who to trust because I know how to trust’ because of people like him. Ted is such a likable person, yet we know better than to align ourselves with him. He’s like the kiss of death.”

“He reminds me of Leslie Neilson’s character in ‘Naked Gun[13]’ where everyone around him dies while he obliviously smiles his way through,” I mused.

Mark laughed. “You’re not the first person to make that comparison. Ted even looks like that Neilson character since they both are of Norwegian decent.”

“Why are people judged by their projection rather than by their actions?” I wondered. “The old adage ‘never judge a book by its cover’ certainly should be applied. People in the public eye like Ernest Ray and other entertainers I know; or Jim Traficant, and most politicians I know, can project anything and folks buy into it. Why? Can’t they see?”

“In the case of the Nebraska Leadership Conference,” Mark thoughtfully replied, “desperation and ignorance seems to have blinded them to reality. You know yourself that fear is blinding. It takes logic and a rigid formula to survive CIA containment.”

I reflected on the untimely deaths of Darlene Kinsey’s husband, Gary Caradori, and his son. “People need to know what you do, Mark. Your insight into surviving CIA cover-up is desperately needed these days. We need a media break on this information."

"It's going to take someone with serious strength of purpose and conviction to break through media censorship. Somebody who won't roll over and cave into intimidation. Those media networks are like street prostitutes who do it for money and not for passion of truth. Plus they have their FCC[14] license to protect and do what they are told out of DC."

"Rita Jenrette put her show on the line," I reminded him.

"I respect her for it, too. She's not the Geraldo-type who'll roll over and do anything for a job."

"That reminds me," I thought aloud. "Civia and Ted Gunderson are friends. They knew each other through the McMartin scandal. Civia, as a reporter, covered the story while Ted, as an investigator, tried to uncover it. 'Small world' as my abusers would say. It is a bizarre coincidence!"

"There is no such thing as coincidence if a Fed and a journalist are involved," Mark advised. "When the same people keep popping up over and over again, there is a reason for it. Signs like this should never be ignored."

"It does help identify who is part of containment and 'cover-ops'."

"Better turn off that recorder since we're running out of batteries again," Mark smiled, turning into the driveway. "Let's leave this 'small world' behind and go melt into ours."

Chapter 19
OCTOPUS

The sun was shining directly overhead by the time we emerged from ‘our world’ of bliss to focus on our goals. The phone was ringing like an alarm clock, and Mark hugged and kissed me warmly one more time before rising to answer it.

I slowly woke up, luxuriating in the passion that lingered in our room. Mark’s voice barely reached me as he talked on the phone in the kitchen while the coffee brewed. I stretched. Another new day! I reflected on our love, appreciating the safety, peace, and hope that thinking freely brought to life. Circumstances were intense, yet life’s conditions could not reach the realistic spiritual high that comes with being free to live true-to-soul in harmony with love. Unconditional love celebrated through unconditional sex helped balance the intensity of our lives.

Mark opened the bedroom door, asking me to join him outside for coffee. I slipped into my robe and went with him into the fresh air. We enjoyed our privacy out in the country. We settled into the swing under the shade tree, savoring our coffee while we talked.

“That was a reporter by the name of Danny Casolaro who just called.” We paused to watch a huge crow fly overhead, casting a shadow across the ground. Mark resumed, “He is the reporter who is investigating the Inslaw case. Former National Security Advisor William Hamilton[1] owns Inslaw, which produced sophisticated computer software called PROMIS until it was stolen by the Justice Department.”

“Why did Danny call us?” I asked, since we didn’t even own a computer at the time let alone understand the subject.

“He learned about us through natural attrition in the course of his investigations, and knows that we have collaborating information. My spook contact that gave me the ‘OK’ code on Danny apparently did likewise with him. It saved a lot of unnecessary dialogue, which allowed us to get straight to the point. Casolaro is about to publicly expose the whole Inslaw case, which he refers to as ‘The Octopus[2]’ due to the different tentacles of corruption emanating from the Executive Branch of the Pentagon. Dick Thornburgh is right at the core.

One tentacle of the Octopus extends to Byrd and Senate Appropriations; another into CIA cocaine ops and mind control. When Danny’s story breaks, it will expose your case and Kelly’s. Inslaw[3] also ties in with Iran-Contra[4], BCCI[5], and the October Surprise, among others. Thornburgh has refused to answer questions before the House Judiciary Committee, who subpoenaed close to 500 documents regarding Inslaw and the stolen PROMIS software. Casolaro says ‘the Octopus’ is the biggest story to ever break in this country. He believes it could re-establish Constitutional values of truth and justice by exposing high-level criminals like Thornburgh and Byrd, and ultimately return the Government to the people. Pretty exciting stuff.”

“Is he aware of the dangers?” I asked.

“Of course,” Mark answered. “Apparently he has significant inside contacts, information, and support. Otherwise he would never have found us. He uncovered the Justice Department’s motives in stealing the PROMIS software and for pushing Hamilton‘s Inslaw business toward bankruptcy. The software was sold to Israel with a ‘trap door’ in it, which gave the Justice Department access to the data base of Israeli Intelligence.”

“The Mossad?”

“Yes,” Mark answered. “It was also sold with the same ‘trap door’ in it to Iraq and other foreign governments. That’s why ‘national security’ has been slapped on the Inslaw case. Casolaro has survived the investigation part, and was calling from DC to alert us that he has full media exposure lined up for release of his story. It sounds like he is going to succeed."

"Customs intel said the story would break. Casolaro must be one of the ones doing it."

"There is a vast number of reporters ready to break stories on mind control, CIA cocaine ops, and Government corruption. They know our country is being taken over by criminals, and want to stop it as much as we do. All eyes are on Danny right now, waiting for him to take the lead and break it all wide open." Mark smiled. "It would sure make a world of difference for us if he does. Anyway, he wants to talk with you and will be calling back in a few days."

"Is he a spook? Should I talk with him?"

"Of course," Mark assured me. "He is a really nice person; very soulful and kind. He already has his facts in order. He just wants to tell you that he respects what you're doing and thinks it's phenomenal you survived."

"Survival is no accident. He must know I'd have never survived without you."

"He indicated that."

We finished our coffee and went back inside to begin writing letters. I naively believed religious leaders like Pat Robertson and Jesse Jackson[6] might have compassion on Kelly's situation and help. So we wrote them letters and sent them information packets with the few remaining stamps we had. We also wrote to Linda Blood, who was in the process of writing her expose' on Aquino, The New Satanists[7]. Linda had known Aquino for years and was appalled by his torturous, controlling actions. Aquino claimed Linda as his girlfriend for a while, and she could only speculate that perhaps it was her name that first attracted him to her. Linda's physical appearance also undeniably resembled Lillith's, the woman Aquino later married. While Linda was clearly more attractive than Lillith, both women looked like Aquino’s mother. Whatever Aquino’s twisted justifications were for latching onto Linda, she turned negative experience into positive by publicly exposing his satanic ‘secret’ means of mind control. She released inside information provided by friends of hers within the Temple of Set that would haunt Aquino in future years.

Mark and I drove back into Nashville a few days later for yet another court hearing. A psychiatric evaluation of me was required for court records, and Cox was ordered to undergo psych exams as well. Since Mark and I were in constant communication with many of the nation’s leading psychiatrists, I certainly wasn’t concerned with test results. Mental health professionals were among the first to encounter numerous survivors of mind control filling their offices. Since rehabilitative information was scarce and the problem so vast and severe, word spread that Mark’s recovery methods used on me had proved successful. Our conversations with psychiatrists and psychologists were in depth and extensive. Were it not for Kelly’s adverse experience with mental health, it would never have occurred to me to be cautious submitting myself to an evaluation. Besides, I was elated that Cox would be undergoing a psych exam. Even the least qualified psychiatrist would surely diagnose his obvious insanity.

Mark strongly advised me to be cautious with my exam, and not to expect so much from Cox’s. “The CIA is notorious for falsifying psych exams. Scam exams are as routine as confiscating mail and tapping phones.”

Mark’s advice soon proved true when I went in for my psych exam as ordered with Dr. Cynthia Turner-Graham. “Wear this transmitter wire and keep your tape recorder going at all times,” he told me. I went inside, confident though cautious.

“Would you like me to complete all of these tests?” I asked, looking at a huge stack of papers.

“Do what you want,” she told me without looking up from the newspaper she was reading. “I already know the results. I have been advised on how to write you up and I’ve been paid well for it. You’ve made some serious enemies running your mouth, honey.”

“I’ve also got serious support,” I told her, picking up my belongings to exit the building quickly. “Thank you for running your mouth.” Mark saw me rush out the door, had the Pacer in gear as I swung into the car, and quickly drove away.

“You were right,” I grinned. “And we have it all on tape. If Cynthia Turner-Graham is the best they can do, we’ve got it made. She tipped their hand.” I played the tape for Mark as we drove straight to my court appointed attorney’s office.

“We’ll give Jean Crowe a copy of the tape later, but she needs to hear this now and put a stop to this nonsense,” Mark said. After submitting the recorded evidence of the foiled scam, no other evaluation was attempted. Cox’s “clean bill of health” psych exam was considered a scam as well, and the intended adverse court results were averted.

When we played the tape for Jean Crowe, she had said, “I’m not sure what we can do with this since it isn’t a test result like the court ordered. What made you record this?”

“It’s necessary for our survival to record everything,” Mark told her. “We sure can’t count on the justice system to take care of things for us.”

“That reminds me,” Jean said, standing up. “I saw in the newspaper that Dick Thornburgh is talking about resigning[8]. He says he’ll be running for Senate instead. I did read where some kind of cover-up and cocaine use was traced to his office like you predicted. You must be psychic!”

I groaned. “That’s not ‘psychic,’ it’s inside knowledge. Big difference. What is it going to take to prove the reality of this case to you?”

“You need to prove it the court, not to me.”

I threw up my arms in exasperation and turned to leave. “It’s a good thing I was ‘psychic’ enough to record Cynthia Turner-Graham,” I sarcastically muttered as we left.

When I saw Kelly the next week, she slipped me a hospital ID bracelet indicating that she had been injured in a Cumberland House van accident. I had not been notified. One compassionate Cumberland House worker slipped me the medical records from the accident as well, along with hospital records from when Cox had previously triggered Kelly into respiratory failure. My outrage over not being notified was overwhelmed by my compassion for Kelly. She was a child in need of understanding in order to heal from her traumatic past, and still she was forced to deal with trauma and cover-up every day. Since she had been forbidden by court order from talking to me about such things, she knew she risked a straightjacket and padded cell for slipping me the hospital bracelet.

Covering for her, I smiled through my disdain and hid the bracelet in my purse. Kelly smiled back and we communicated beyond words. We shared that warmth, knowing, and bond that no court orders could hinder.

“With understanding comes compassion,” I told her. “And they just don’t understand you or where you’ve been. Reality doesn’t go away just because someone ‘in authority’ doesn’t care to understand the truth. Believe in yourself, Kelly. I do.”

“I know what’s real,” Kelly confidently said. “Believing or not-believing doesn’t change the facts. That’s why it doesn’t matter what they believe. And I don’t just ‘believe,’ I know.”

“Truth, by its very nature, never goes away,” I reassured her, as I so often did. “Neither do I.” While I hugged her, I cradled her head to me. Such a strong spirit.

“Imagine what your future holds,” I said. “Univer*soul* justice is bigger-than-life and as ab*soul*ute as truth. It rides on wings of love, and love is the most powerful force in the universe. When life’s negatives are inevitably balanced by positive, it is tipped to the good by nature of univer*soul* justice. Considering all the negatives you’ve been through in life, what must your future hold to balance it? Your future is bright with promise.”

Kelly softly laughed with delight while I held her. “You are brilliant, Kelly, and everyone is going to know it someday.”

I silently reflected on Danny Casolaro's progress, knowing he was on the verge of making a positive, profound difference for us all.

When Mark and I left Cumberland House that day, we went directly to Jean Crowe’s office with the hospital ID bracelet and medical records. “Please don’t expose Kelly for giving me this,” I pleaded. “She doesn’t need to be put in a straight-jacket for telling the truth.”

”What do you want me to do?” Jean asked.

“Know the truth.”

Mark and I left Jean Crowe’s office and went home. While we were unwinding from a long, hard day, the phone rang.

August 10, 1991. Danny Casolaro was dead.

Chapter 20
“SUICIDED”

The murder of Danny Casolaro changed the world, and the public never knew it. Only those of us counting on media persons to bring the reality of government corruption to light knew it, and now we were left on our own while seasoned journalists cowered in the dark. Danny’s murder sent a clear message that had terrified the media into silence.

Mark and I discussed Danny’s murder the next morning while we sipped our coffee in the backyard swing. “A double agent insider asset within the FBI called and told me Danny was dead. He was killed in West Virginia of all places,” Mark began. “Right there in Byrd’s backyard. Danny was in a hotel in Martinsburg, West Virginia, on his way home to complete his story. He called his brother[1] to tell him he had the evidence. He should have known the phone was tapped.” Mark wrestled with his grief and the magnitude of the meaning to Danny’s death. “He was excited about breaking the news,” Mark wiped his eyes. “Next thing you know, Danny is found dead in the bathtub with his wrists cut. A brief, cryptic ‘suicide’ note was found in place of his ‘Octopus’ manuscript. I know for a fact he wasn’t suicidal when I talked with him. He even told his brother he was not suicidal in the event something happened to him. His wrists were slit so deep his hands were nearly severed. There is no way he could have slit his other wrist in that condition[2].”

Mark and I sat in silence before he continued. “Danny’s body was embalmed before the family was notified. Elliot Richardson, the former US Attorney General who worked the Inslaw case with Danny, is calling for a Federal investigation into his death.”

“Maybe there will actually be an investigation[3] launched since Thornburgh is no longer in office to cover it up,” I hoped through my grief. President Bush, Sr. had accepted Thornburgh’s resignation as Attorney General within hours of Danny’s death[4]. By August 15, Thornburgh had sidestepped the Inslaw case and unlawfully packed up 258 boxes of documents[5] and left office[6].

“His assistant[7] filled his vacancy,” Mark reminded me. “It’s the same tune, different song.”

“It wouldn’t bring Danny back, anyway,” I cried. “The most that could come from a legitimate investigation would be that the media quits cowering and restores freedom to the press. Maybe someone will even have the fortitude to release the ‘Octopus’ in Danny’s honor, and for the sake of our country.”

“Every journalist I know of is afraid of being ‘suicided’ now. They’ve coined a new word from Danny’s death, but they’re afraid to even speak it, let alone broadcast it.” Mark’s frustration with cowardice reached new heights. “How a whole nation can fear a criminal few is beyond my comprehension.”

Still dressed in our robes, we rose from the swing and began walking. Nature could be soul soothing at times like these, and we made our way through the woods at the edge of the yard.

“Danny’s cause will never die,” I vowed. “Surely there are more people out there like us who will keep the spotlight of truth on his murder and the cause he died for.”

“Elliot Richardson’s call for a federal investigation will most likely be stopped under the 1947 National Security Act. When corruption reigns unchecked at the political top, criminal activity filters all the way down through local police. These days, law enforcement is protecting a corrupted system rather than it’s citizens.”

"It's like the military," I added. "If they could think beyond what they are told, they would realize that Operation Just Cause[8] was 'just cause' Bush wanted his partner-in-crime Noriega silenced before he revealed that he was on the CIA payroll for being their drug broker for the Columbian cartels. The military is protecting a corrupted system, too, whether they are aware of it or not."

Mark agreed. "With both law enforcement and the military protecting a corrupt system that the media is afraid to expose, it's easy to understand why the government is determined to take away our guns."

I thought about Mark's statement, acutely aware of the campaign that had been launched to disarm citizens. Still, the connection wasn't clear. "What do you mean?"

"This criminal government doesn't want guns in the hands of people who can think for themselves."

"Of course," I responded, realizing that justice was solely up to the people now. "But many citizens aren't thinking for themselves these days, either. Now that the media is afraid to report the truth, people won't think to seek it themselves."

"You know what Hitler said," Mark reminded me. "He said, 'What good fortune for the government when the people do not think'."

"With what you and I know about social engineering," I said, "until the government succeeds in taking guns away from citizens, they'll be telling us who to shoot just like they did the military in Just Cause!"

"We need to get the truth out there before it gets to that point," Mark said. "Guns are humanity's last line of defense. Truth is the first."

"When people realize the truth, they'll be empowered to take these few criminals out of power and reclaim their country and freedom. Evolution over revolution. Being armed with knowledge is much more effective than weapons.”

“This is true,” Mark said. “When you consider the technological advancements that the criminals in control of our country have to use against us, our guns look ineffective anyway. Granddaddy’s squirrel gun is not going to get it when faced with their computerized advancements, harmonics, ELF waves, biologicals, nuclear capacity and so on. Still, we better hang on to our weapons just because they are hell-bent on taking them away. They must feel threatened by them. Besides, being armed with truth and weapons is a powerful combination.”

“The truth is essential for ensuring that people know who the enemy is,” I said. “Social engineering on the most basic level is already causing racial problems, for example. By focusing people on racial differences, likenesses are overlooked. Emotional issues like racism, homosexuality and abortion keep people hating and fighting amongst themselves so as to divert them from realizing who the enemy truly is.”

“Divide and conquer. Hate is a result of fear, and fear is the most controlling emotion of all,” Mark said. “Look at how the media caved into fear with the murder of Danny.”

“How long do you believe it will take before people wake up to reality?”

“Let’s hope they wake up soon, despite the media blackout,” Mark answered. “The longer it takes, the more effort will be required to restore peace, justice, and freedom. We’ll do our part to make sure the truth gets out there.”

“Danny certainly did his part. People should know that anyone with the passion for justice like he had would never suicide at the point of victory.” I reflected on his courage. “We’d better make it clear that we’re not suicidal.”

“No one gets out of here alive,” Mark said, which was a fact he often stated in regards to living life fully without running from death. “But we’re not through with our purpose any more than Danny was. You’re right. We’ll make it clear that we’re not suicidal.”

We had been walking for some time, and decided to return to the house and get dressed for the day. Just as we were about to emerge from the woods, Mark suddenly stopped me in my tracks and gestured me to be still. I saw through the weeds that Melba’s house was surrounded by what appeared to be a S.W.A.T[9]. team. The black uniformed men had guns drawn, and were circling the house to enter through all doorways. Mark’s finger went to his lips, signaling me to stay silent. I watched as he stealthily approached the men from their blind side while they assumed their positions for a raid.

He tapped the shoulder of a County Sheriff Deputy, triggering him to look the opposite direction from where Mark stood. “What the hell are you doing?” Mark boomed. The Deputy jumped, nearly dropping his weapon.

“Who are you?” he loudly responded, clearly startled.

“Not the man you’re looking for,” Mark responded. “Now what are you doing here?”

“There are Federal agents out front who need to see you,” he said. “I’m just here to accompany them as required by law.”

Federal agents must be accompanied by the local Sheriff or his Deputy when raiding a citizen and/or serving a warrant by Constitutional law. Knowing the local elected Sheriff is essential for all citizens, and can prove to be a lifesaver. We hadn’t elected our local Sheriff, and Dan Alsobrooks did not have jurisdiction to stop the harassment that was unfolding.

“Why the dramatics?” I heard Mark ask as they walked around front.

“We heard you were armed,” the Deputy replied, as I emerged from the woods to slip through the backdoor.

Melba was oblivious to what was going on outside, and I went into our room and quickly pulled my clothes on. Peeking through the blinds I could see Mark talking to several men. There was no S.W.A.T. van, just one Sheriff's car among several Fed cars parked out front. I was still shaking when Mark walked in the room.

"They were here to serve a warrant for me to appear in Federal Court," he calmly informed me.

"On what charge?" I was perplexed how they could charge him with a crime when he epitomized justice itself.

"Threatening the life of the President."

"What!?" I knew that was preposterous.

Mark smiled. "Obviously this indictment is going nowhere. We are so publicly vocal, everyone knows I wouldn't jeopardize your case with anything so absurd even if I was that stupid. There can't possibly be any evidence. Even the Feds who served the papers know better."

"Then why did they surround the house with guns drawn?"

"They know I'm armed. They're pussies, not a posse." Obviously Mark wasn't worried, yet I did not share his confidence in view of Danny's blatant murder.

"There is no justice in this country," I said, giving voice to my concerns. "If they can trump up charges like this, there is no limit to what they can do in a courtroom."

"Or outside of one," Mark pointed out. "Look what they did to Danny right in front of the public's eye. At least I get a jury to witness this attempt to silence us."

"But the courtroom can't be used as a forum for speaking out."

“We’re not going to use it as a forum,” Mark said. “Sometimes more can be said in silence than in words.”

“We?” Since Mark wasn’t multiple, he must be referring to the two of us. How did I figure into this?

“You’ll have to testify as a witness. This is a ridiculous charge that is going to blowback on them and expose them as the criminals they are,” Mark assured me.

Mark’s mother knocked impatiently on our door. “Mark!” she shrieked as though we were still outside. “When are you going to take me to the store?”

“Just a minute,” he told her. She had no clue what had just transpired, and it was better that way. He turned back to me, hugging me in a comforting embrace. “I’ll make a phone call while we’re in town. This is an opportunity, not a problem.”

“Mark!” Melba was banging on the door again, unable to hear his attempts to reply. He rolled his eyes and slipped into his jeans and shirt. He opened the door and she nearly knocked on his chest. “Oh,” she exclaimed, steadying herself. “I want to pick up an angel food cake to go with my lunch.”

Mark smiled back at me while I got my purse, sharing the understanding that it must be nice to have such simple “big” problems.

By afternoon, we each had appointments lined up with Federal Attorneys who were taking our case pro-bono. Since we weren’t paying them, I wondered who did and how that would effect the outcome. While we discussed our circumstances, the doorbell rang. Mark and I looked at each other, wondering who it was this time. He peeked through the blinds.

“It’s Billy!” he exclaimed. “I wonder what he’s doing here?”

Our new-found friend from the Copy Shop in Nashville had driven all the way out to Melba’s house in the country to see us. He presented us with a huge basket full of gourmet foods, which looked especially delightful considering our welfare budget. “I heard about Danny Casolaro,” he said, as we thanked him for his gift. “I figured you two could use some cheering up.”

I was touched. “Billy, that is so thoughtful of you.”

“Weren’t you afraid to come out here?” Mark asked. “You know I’m armed and on high alert.”

“No way,” Billy answered. “You’re wise and sensible, not an emotional, fearful type. Why would you even ask me a question like that?”

“We’ve had an interesting day,” Mark began. We all walked outside, enjoying the peace of nature while we talked. We told Billy about the Federal warrant.

“You must be making significant progress,” Billy observed. “You’ve got somebody real scared to make a move this ridiculous.”

Mark smiled, looking me in the eye to make sure I got the point. We began to relax in our conversation, enjoying our friendship rather than focusing on outside pressures. Soon Mark was telling Billy the story of how he learned about Kelly and me from the Chinese officials. “Alex Houston is so uncool. It’s a wonder his lack of diplomacy alone didn’t get us killed. Here we were, guests of the Chinese military who already know what a slimebag criminal he is, and he’s explaining business to them. Finally, our Hong Kong partner took me aside and said, ‘Misser Houston is embarrassment speaking broken English to interpreters.’ I had to find a way to shut Houston up, which is nearly impossible to do with an entertainer. Plus I had to throw him out of the company, and rescue Cathy and Kelly from him.”

We all laughed as Mark imitated Houston speaking to the interpreters. Since I had traveled for eight years under Alex Houston’s control, I knew exactly what Mark was talking about. Houston had the same broken English for every language. There were many times I believed Mexican and Cuban drug lords would kill him just to shut him up. In retrospect, those were dangerous times.

“I can see why you two aren’t afraid of death,” Billy said. “If it was your time to die, it would have happened by now.”

“I’ve had numerous near-death experiences,” I agreed. “I’ve peered over that edge and have absolutely no fear. If people knew what death is really about, they would begin enjoying their lives instead of running from death.”

“People fear what they don’t know,” Mark added. “I’ve had close calls, too, and have even been declared DOA[10]. I’m not afraid of death in the least.”

“I’ll cross that bridge when I come to it,” Billy said lightheartedly.

“I never saw a bridge. Or pearly gates. Or a tunnel, river, or light,” Mark said from experience. “It’s more natural than that. Less earthly.”

“More like a transition into a peaceful dimension of immense love,” I said. “It’s not ‘an end’, it’s more like a beginning.”

“Well,” Billy said, rising to leave. “Danny’s in a better place.”

“Yes,” I agreed. “But this world is not a better place with him gone.”

“We’ve got quite a challenge facing us, now,” Mark said. “Bringing truth to light in a media blackout isn’t exactly easy.”

“By the way,” I injected, “we’re not suicidal just because we don’t fear death. We’re not through with what we need to do any more than Danny was. So, you heard it first, we are NOT suicidal.”

“Well, stay safe,” Billy said, walking to his car. He smiled at Mark, “I know you will.”

“Thanks for the basket,” I called, remembering the gourmet goodies he brought.

Billy smiled. “I figured you could use some fun treats.” He turned to Mark, “Come and see me next time you’re in town and let me know what the lawyers have to say.” The tires of Billy’s Trans Am squealed as he drove away.

Chapter 21
FEDERAL *WAR*RANT

“I didn’t know Federal Attorneys could be so understanding,” I told Billy after our meeting with our respective attorneys. “My attorney, Mike Terry, seemed to understand everything before I even told him.”

“Funny how that happens among Feds,” Mark sarcastically commented.

“Yeah,” Billy acknowledged. “Let’s see what justice he can bring to your case. What did your attorney have to say, Mark?”

“There wasn’t much to discuss. We had to walk across the street so they could finger print me. I asked why that was necessary since the Feds already had fingerprints on me in their files.”

“What had you done?” Billy asked, alarmed.

Mark smiled. “Worked for them.”

“That’s about as criminal as it gets,” I muttered.

“Did you have to submit to the finger printing anyway?”

“Sure,” Mark answered. “But I had fun. The guy who was taking my fingerprints kept getting smudged results. It must have been the nervous tick I developed for the occasion. By the time they were clear enough for the record, he and I were getting along well in spite of Henry Martin, my attorney, advising me to shut up. After he took my palm print, I shook his hand.”

“He shook your hand?” Billy laughed.

“My attorney wasn’t too happy about it. Neither was he when he realized what he had done. Anyway, Henry Martin was steaming mad by the time I submitted the handwriting samples. They told me I had to write the names ‘Alex Houston, Earl O’Brien, and Wayne Cox’, which I found odd since the subpoena sited ‘threatening the life of the President.’ So I asked, ‘why are you beating around the bush? Shouldn’t I write George Bush?’ My attorney was adamantly advising me to be quiet. But the Fed taking handwriting samples said, ‘I didn’t ask you to write George Bush, but apparently you did’.”

Billy was laughing by then. “What did you say?”

“’Of course I wrote President Bush, threatening to pursue justice in Kelly’s case regardless of who her perpetrators were.’ I got to the ‘threatening’ word and my attorney almost keeled over. I thought he was going to have a heart attack since the veins in his neck stuck out so far while he was spitting ‘shut up’ at me. The FBI was video recording the whole thing and I wanted them to know where I stood.”

“Did they make you write ‘George Bush’?” Billy was holding his sides laughing by then.

“Over and over like a grade school punishment. So each time I wrote it, I wrote it differently just because I could. I told them my back had been giving me trouble, which caused nerve damage.”

“When does the Grand Jury convene?” Billy asked, aware that this would be a necessary step in order for a ‘no true bill’ or a Federal indictment to be delivered.

“September 19.”

“I wondered what date they would come up with since today is already the 9th.” Billy was aware of the numbers games the Feds always played. “If it is the 3rd, 6th, or 9th, I always know you two will be in town for court or some kind of harassment. Why do they keep playing the numbers game when they know you're onto them?"

"Because they are so self absorbed and arrogant that they would rather signal their friends than disguise their plan," Mark said. "And many at the top subscribe to the ancient mystics Kabala numerology game.

"Like 33rd degree Masons?"

"It's not quite that simple," I answered from my point of view. "They actually believe in the numbers based on the mathematical universe the Hebrews devised thousands of years ago."

The Copy Shop was growing increasingly busy as rush hour picked up. We hugged Billy and left. I needed to meet with Jean Crowe and Scott Rosenburg anyway.

"Bob Anderson threatened Edith Hammons at the last ICAM[1] meeting," I told my attorney. "Does he have jurisdiction over the Organized Victims of Violent Crime?"

"If it scared her, I guess he does. Bob throws his weight around all the time to intimidate people when he thinks he's losing a battle. Apparently he is concerned with the progress that Marsha Willis and Debbie UpChurch are making on Kelly's behalf through ICAM."

"Edith isn't taking it lightly," I informed her.

Jean smiled. "Bob Anderson doesn't know the political clout Edith has behind her grandmotherly appearance. He harasses everybody who stands by you and Kelly, including me. Maybe she can put him in his place."

"Behind bars?" I asked, turning to leave.

"In bars, at least," Mark chimed in, referring to Bob Anderson's reputed drinking habits.

"Maybe he'll be *dis*barred," Jean played along, insinuating that he could lose his attorney's license.

Mark and I parted at the elevator so he could put money in the parking meter while I went up to see Scott Rosenburg.

Upon completing legal paperwork for the upcoming child support trial, Scott paused to inquire about Mark's Federal subpoena. Word spread fast through Nashville, which somehow managed to keep its small town aires despite its metropolitan size. "We're going to plead the 5th[2]," I told him. "It doesn't make sense to me other than that we can't use court as a forum anyway. That seems backwards to me when courts are supposed to know the truth."

"It is a complex case," Scott thoughtfully explained, "and 'threatening the life of the President' doesn't have anything to do with it. By staying silent, they can't dilute the reality of your case with nonsense. You are better off keeping these matters separate."

"Since Danny Casolaro was murdered, the media is cowering; which gives the criminals opposing us free reign. I must admit, this one makes me nervous."

"Yes, but I know you have friends with just as much power. Plus you've got supporters like Edith Hammons who is on television advocating for victims all the time."

"Thank you, Scott," I said, genuinely comforted at the thought. "It is true that citizens' organizations are very supportive. People helping people works far better than major organizations like Human Rights Watch, Amnesty International, or the Christic Institute."

“The Christic Institute hasn’t helped?” Scott asked, aware that Christian oriented organizations should be more helpful.

“Neither has Pat Robertson or Jesse Jackson,” I said. “Since the issue of mind control becomes a spiritual one by natural attrition, I thought the Christians would be among the first to help.”

“What do you mean ‘spiritual’?” Scott asked.

“By my definition, spiritual is our innate love energy source or connection to God so-to-speak. Soul is the merging of spiritual into the physical world. I realize this is just my perception, and people correct my use of the words all the time based on their interpretation.”

Scott thought a minute. “Religious semantics aside, how does it interface with mind control?”

“From experience I know that without free thought, there is no free will, and without free will, there is no soul expression. Even though my spirit was in a safe, loving space while my body was being tortured to carry out the will of others, I had no ability to express it. I could not think to stand by moral principals or causes, and above all, I wasn’t free to live in harmony with love’s will. Now that I am free to think to express, my spiritual testimony is strong. Which makes it difficult for me to understand why churches close their doors on me and the whole issue of mind control. Maybe I don’t use the proper religious semantics to describe it.”

“Maybe it will happen in time,” Scott offered.

“In time for Kelly? They’re already too late. We do have a lot of support from victims’ groups like Edith’s Organized Victims of Violent Crimes who are working towards legal help. Justus Unlimited out of Littleton, Colorado and the National Victim Center are helping. Speaking of bizarre semantics, I don’t even feel like a ‘victim.’ Neither does Kelly.”

“I refer to you as a survivor,” Scott said.

“That is a better term,” I agreed. “Although ‘survivor’ sounds like we should be whining about our past ‘victimization,’ and neither Kelly nor I can relate to that space. The ultimate goal of victims and survivors is to ‘forgive’ their abusers in order to psychologically heal. In our case, healing is a deliberate psychiatric process. Understanding our abusers makes more sense than ‘forgiving’ them. With understanding comes positive change, sometimes compassion, whereas ‘forgiveness’ sounds like condoning criminal actions! It’s all semantics anyway, I guess.”

“Pleading the 5th is a matter of semantics, too, that ultimately will work in your favor. Sometimes the less said, the more that’s understood. It’s like your back child support case. We will only present finances to the judge, not the other issues even though they may be more pertinent. Mark is wise in telling you to never use court as a forum.”

“Thank you, Scott. Your legal advice is heart warming. I wish all attorneys had the strength of spirit that you do.” As I rode the elevator down to the ground floor of the Stahlman Building, I realized I didn’t know Scott’s definition of “spirit,” “soul,” or “religion,” and wondered if I should have mentioned his strength of spirit. By the time I was walking toward the Pacer, I understood that heartfelt communication surpassed semantics anyway. And I learned that from a District Attorney? I smiled as I climbed in the car, feeling confident that all would go well with Mark’s Grand Jury hearing.

On September 19, we arrived at the Federal Building early since I was told to come in for questioning by the FBI prior to the hearing. Brad Garrett was in town for the occasion, and he and Phil Tuney were to meet with me in Attorney General Joe Brown’s office. “Remember,” Mark emphasized again, “Say nothing, and they have nothing. They have nothing, so say nothing. Open your mouth… and they have something. What you say will be used against you.”

“Never use court as a forum,” I recited. “I’m ready. Mike Terry says this FBI questioning isn’t pertinent to your case so don’t answer anything. When we’re in front of the Grand Jury, all I do is plead the fifth. That is simple enough. I’ll be glad when this is over.”

I rode the elevator alone to Joe Brown’s office on the top floor. His secretary showed me to a side room where Garrett and Tuney were waiting.

“How’s it going with Internal Affairs?” Garrett asked, as though he were referring to our last meeting in the US Customs office. Our work with Internal Affairs was not his business, and his attempt to trick me into talking was transparent.

“Let’s talk about internal affairs,” Tuney said. “You claim you know Dick Thornburgh sexually. Tell me about it.”

“In your hottest dreams.” I accepted the cup of coffee Garrett handed me and set it on the table with no intention of drinking it.

“Maybe you’d rather tell me what you know about Noriega. We’ll see if it matches what he says about you.” Tuney gestured for me to drink the coffee.

“I thought you were here to question me about Mark.”

“We have all our answers there. And the evidence, “ Garrett said. “He’ll be locked up longer than Noriega. He’s facing 20 years to life.”

Tuney shuffled through a huge stack of papers in front of him. “You know, everybody in DC knows Byrd has a little penis. What else can you tell me about him?”

I took a sip of the water that I had brought with me.

“All I put in your coffee was cream and sugar,” Garrett defensively said.

“I’m already awake and alert, thank you,” I declined the coffee.

“Well good,” Garrett answered. “Then you’ll absorb what I’m about to tell you. It is important that you know the facts. You need to know that Mark is going to be locked up for the rest of his life if you plead the fifth.”

“Pleading the fifth is an admission of guilt,” Tuney nodded.

“I don’t know how you’re going to live with putting him away forever in a Federal penitentiary,” Garrett said, his veiled threat strengthening my resolve to stay silent. “Thornburgh’s out of office now. His friend William Barr is carrying out his work while he plays. We’ll let him know that you had Mark locked up.”

“He’ll tell Byrd,” Tuney said to Garrett as though he were protesting.

“Word will spread,” Garrett assured me. “All because you think you are so smart to plead the fifth. You are making a big mistake that will cost Mark the rest of his life, resting behind bars.”

We sat in silence. I looked at my watch. It was nearly time for court. “By law, you cannot keep me from testifying.”

“I’m telling you,” Garrett said, standing up. “Don’t plead the fifth or Mark will never see the light of day again. Whoever gave you that advice has set you up and Mark will go down. Don’t plead the fifth!”

We walked out of the office to the elevator, which suddenly wasn’t working. I looked at my watch. There wasn’t time for this. “Take the stairs,” Tuney said, opening the door to the stairwell. Anxious to leave, I started down the staircase.

“Don’t plead the fifth!” Garrett shouted as I arrived at the door on the next floor. It was locked. I kept going, experiencing locked doors all the way down into the basement. Weaving through boxes, buckets, trash and janitor tools, I finally stumbled out into a room with an elevator. Apparently it was a service elevator, but it took me to the main floor where court was about to begin.

My attorney was pacing outside the courtroom, checking his watch. I was scheduled to testify first. Mark was being held separately from me in Henry Martin’s office across the street. Relief spread across my attorney’s face when he saw me. There was no time to explain where I’d been. “I’m not allowed to be present in there," he reminded me, speaking quickly. "I'll be right here. After each question, tell the judge you need to speak with council. It's just a ploy to make them wait. Do it. Come out here and we'll act like we're talking it over. I'll tell you to plead the fifth."

When my turn to testify came, I blocked out my horrible experience with Garrett and Tuney, and took the stand. The Grand Jury looked somber, and the Judge appeared agitated. I answered each question with a need to speak with council, only to come back into the courtroom to plead the fifth. By the time I was through, the Grand Jury was weary. When Henry Martin told the prosecuting attorney, Van Vincent, that Mark would also be pleading the fifth, he wasn't even called to testify. The Grand Jury delivered a "no true bill" and Mark was free.

The whole ordeal had proved so strenuous, I could only cry with relief. We would celebrate later… for the rest of our lives.

Chapter 22
NEED-TO-KNOW

“I wasn’t surprised when Henry Martin told me that I would not be testifying,” Mark said as we discussed our court experience on the long drive home. “I heard him on the phone talking heatedly to Van Vincent, telling him that I would be pleading the fifth the same way you did. When he hung up the phone, he let me know that this case wasn’t over just because I wouldn’t be testifying. He said, ‘They are determined to lock you up one way or another.’ But he doesn’t know what I know. I tried to tell him, ‘the whole case was a hoax to begin with. They’ll attempt their harassment from an angle less costly to them. Like they’ll keep confiscating my mail or raiding my house or something else mundane.’ He still couldn’t grasp the concept that I am not scared.”

“This whole thing was unnerving for me,” I admitted. “It wasn’t Garrett and Tuney that scared me, of course; it’s what I know about the prison system. All they need to do is lock either one of us up for one day and it’s over. Mind control is so highly advanced, rampant and unrestrained in the prisons, it’s no wonder there has been such a major effort to lock us up.”

Mark swerved around a car that had stopped in the middle of the road while the driver tried to decide which way to turn. “When I was working for Ampex out of Redwood City, California back in the 1970’s, I was couriering Top Secret file tapes into Fort George Mead, Maryland on mind control methods that were being used in prisons and mental institutions. Everything I saw and knew regarding mind control had convinced me that we could literally empty our prisons and mental institutions by turning the inmates into productive, healthy, happy citizens. I really believed that behavior modification techniques would be used to better the world.”

“They still can be,” I reassured him.

“Perhaps they could be if the information wasn’t being classified. As long as these criminals are in power classifying information and technology in order to control the public, how will the knowledge reach the people?”

I thought of Danny Casolaro and sighed. “With journalists caving in to fear and threats of being ‘suicided’, I do wonder how the truth will be brought to light. It needs to be, though. People need to know what you know.”

“That’s ironic,” Mark said. “I was operating on a Need-to-Know basis when I believed mind control could help people. Are you familiar with the term?”

“Sort of,” I answered. “Dick Cheney and other controllers would tell me what I needed to know, but I never perceived it as a term.”

“Well, Need-to-Know is a term officially used by the CIA and other alphabet organizations like the FBI, NSA[1] and DIA. It means you are told all you Need-to-Know in order to carry out your part of an operation without full awareness of what you’re working towards. In my case, I believed the government was developing mind control in order to help society rid itself of crime and mental illness. Nobody bothered telling me that it was being developed to control the population, create super-human special forces war machines, or was being used to torture and hurt innocent citizens like you and Kelly. I had no clue. I was so focused on doing my “part” and excited at the prospects, that it never occurred to me that I was contributing to the greatest menace mankind has ever endured.”

“How did you find out?”

“That is a story all in itself.”

“Well, we’ve got time,” I said, referring to our long drive home. “It’s the public who is running out of it. Is the tape recorder on?”
“Yes.”

“Good. Let’s leave it on for posterity. I’d really like to know all you can tell me.”

“I was originally hired as an audio tape engineer for the Southeastern division of Ampex, Corporation, selling tape within Nashville’s Country Music Industry and to NASA in Huntsville, among other government operations. Having a Top Secret Security Clearance gave me access to mind control information that I otherwise would not have been privy to. In the early days, what I witnessed about training monkeys from the Yerkes Primate Center in Atlanta, Georgia figured right in with NASA’s use of programmed monkeys for space travel.”

“Did they ever torture the monkeys?”

“Of course not!” Mark looked appalled that I would even ask such a question. “We were teaching them to understand words through sign language and to run simple equipment. I never saw trauma based mind control methods being used on the monkeys, let alone on inmates of prisons and mental institutions. My natural rapport with animals made working with primates a fun and rewarding aspect of my career. I enjoyed communicating with them and seeing them respond so positively.”

“I’m sorry,” I said. “I didn’t mean to suggest that you would have anything to do with trauma based mind control. I know you better than that. It’s just that everyone I knew tortured animals, and I thought it might have been part of what led you to expand your vision. You still haven’t told me how you learned beyond your Need-to-Know.”

“While I was with Ampex, I also worked other divisions since I had a Clearance. I worked the Yerkes Primate Center in Denver, Colorado, for example. Of course, I preferred working the Atlanta branch since I lived near there. Plus, the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta was a major account of mine since the CDC required so much tape for the old wall sized computers they were using back then. The CDC was one more reason why my Clearance was so high. This put me in touch with other Top Secret installations like Jack Parson’s Laboratory ‘JPL’ in Pasadena, California. Between there and Redwood City, I was spending more and more time in California.”

“Reagan was Governor of California back then, wasn’t he?” I asked.

"Yes. He became involved in mind control operations in the state mental institutions and prison systems."

"I knew Reagan was responsible for releasing Merle Haggard from San Quentin," I said.

"Wasn't Haggard in prison for murder?"

"Yes," I answered. "I am aware that mind control was being used in San Quentin at the time. I wonder if it was used on Haggard, or if he simply became privy to it. Personally, I know Haggard[2] as a torturous abuser who openly perpetuates mind control."

"People can't be programmed to program," Mark reminded me. "Think about it. Knowledge is our defense against it. Once we are aware and stay conscious of it, we know when our actions are in conflict with our soul intent. Likewise, the subconscious cannot consciously manipulate the subconscious of others without deliberate awareness."

"That makes sense," I agreed. "Haggard says he 'sold his soul to the devil' in order to be released from San Quentin. And it was Reagan who released him."

"Him and how many others?" Mark wondered. "Reagan's release of inmates and mental patients was contrary to the studies I was involved with. While I was working with Ampex so heavily in California, Reagan jumped into the mix with his trauma based mind control. Under National Security, there is no limit to the amount of torture, abuse, experimentation, or even murder that people can be subjected to without recourse, and Reagan capitalized on it! The president of Ampex became embroiled in a fierce battle with Reagan, desperately fighting to maintain the integrity of his company. Reagan wouldn't hear of it. He was hell-bent on using every horrible brainwashing technique imaginable, torturously and technologically expanding far beyond Ewen Cameron's experiments in Montreal! Then he turned the tortured mentally ill out onto the streets[3]! The benevolent work I was doing suddenly was being taken over by a power monger whose only concern was for his political career and not the people.

He nearly collapsed Ampex in a trumped up stock scandal that supposedly involved the president of the company”

“How did he do that?”

“Easy, since the CIA controls Wall Street. The United States Government was rapidly being taken over by that same criminal faction that abused you. They got a firm grip with the Kennedy Assassination, and the same players are still in power today.”

“Like Ford’s Cabinet?” I asked, referring to former President Ford’s Secretary of State, Dick Cheney; his head of the CIA, George Bush; his Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld; and his Press Secretary Jack Valenti.

“That names a handful of them right there. Valenti, who you knew as Reagan’s friend and head of the Motion Picture Association of America, was even a part of Kennedy’s motorcycle brigade the day he was shot! Anyway, the point I was making is this: Since these power mongers are put in office by Corporations, those that are run by friends flourish while Corporations like Ampex are diminished. These political criminals didn’t want the results of Ampex’s work to reach the public, so it was financially scandalized through stock fraud. These politicians control through secrets, and it wouldn’t benefit them if their secrets were incorporated into society as a positive functioning part.”

“Is that why they have secret societies like the Masons?” I asked.

“Well, that’s a different area. Yet when you think about it, secret societies have compartmentalized information the same way it is compartmentalized in the mind of a dissociative under mind control. I know you can relate to that! Compound the same concept further by creating divisions in society through social engineering of racism, sexism, religious differences, and so on, and information becomes even more compartmentalized.”

“It’s as though everyone is functioning on a Need-to-Know! People need to know this!” I was excited.

“They need to expand their consciousness to realize that what they thought they knew was but a fractal of reality,” Mark expounded. “When I found out that my good intentions were actually fueling a mechanism to control humanity, I was devastated. When I realized what this meant to our country and world, I was appalled. And Reagan was right there at the epicenter of it all.”

“I perceived Reagan as ‘Uncle Ronnie’ until my free thought allowed for expanded knowledge. Now I see that everyone else inside the beltway and the public perceive him the way his TV image portrayed him.”

“And still portrays him today with Bush in office and Valenti controlling what people watch on TV from his Hollywood power position,” Mark added.

“How are people going to realize their Need-to-Know is limiting their understanding, their actions and reactions, and ultimately mankind’s evolution?”

“Coincidentally…” Mark began.

“Come on,” I argued before he made his point, “to quote a wise man I know 'there is no such thing as coincidence'!”

“You got that right!” Mark smiled. “Like I was saying, ‘coincidentally’ I heard from a spook-turned-whistleblower in Cooperstown, New York who is disseminating information under the title ‘Need-to-Know’. I needed to know if he was legitimate, and so far most everything checks out. I thought you’d find it interesting that someone is actually spreading information under ‘Need-to-Know’.”

“That is too cool,” I replied. “What kind of information is he spreading?”

“That’s what prompted me to check him out. His name is Stephen Bratcher, and he claims he was a victim of MK Ultra on the highest level. If he was a mind control victim, I’m not sure what caused him to break program. Most likely it was due to his age. He's in his early thirties. One of the first things to surface was his memory of Disney World mind control programming."

"How did he remember that?" I asked, acutely aware of the sophisticated mind control programming that went on there. Few people had remembered or were talking about Disney mind control in 1991[4]!

"Apparently he was obsessed with Mickey Mouse and Disney themes like most programmed slaves are, and was wondering why. The fact that he could even wonder is either indicative of his programming breaking up, or he was a volunteer like he also claims who skated when the torture began."

"Nobody volunteers to be tortured," I argued. "I was told the same thing under mind control, that I 'volunteered.' Operating out of the "Volunteer State" of Tennessee during the '80's gave me cause to hear that often. It sounds like Bratcher is verbalizing program to me."

"He's not recovered, that's for sure," Mark said. "You'd be surprised what some people do volunteer for, though, for money. There's some reason why he is talking about valid information."

"Does he smoke marijuana?" I asked, aware that marijuana's mind expansion properties are the motive behind the government's adamant opposition to the herb. Since it can render mind control uncontrollable by penetrating memory compartmentalization, marijuana use is strictly forbidden in the military, special forces, among spies, etc.

"He doesn't smoke marijuana that I know of, although he admits to drinking heavily. It may be that his programming, if he had any, is breaking up naturally the way yours did at 30. Since he is at that age when electro-chemical changes occur naturally in the brain, it could have affected the barriers to his compartmentalized memory."

Mark paused the tape recorder for a moment while he said, "Look, I know for a fact that some of what he's talking about is valid since Ampex installed sophisticated equipment in the labyrinth of laboratories under the proposed Disney site while I was working for them. Those labs were crammed with sophisticated electronics that have nothing to do with theme park rides. Bratcher said he was under the Disney Theme Park's Holden Lake and suddenly had awareness. He described the layout of that area that I had been into." Mark resumed recording. "It really freaked him out since he was supposed to be operating in a controlled robotic mode and suddenly realized he had no concept of how long he had been in the UNderworld of Disney World[5]. That's not the best place to break program or decide you made a bad choice volunteering. He somehow managed to survive it and has been talking ever since."

"How is he surviving?" I asked, deeply concerned.

"He is asking for help, which is why he contacted me. Even more than rehabilitative therapy, he is wanting a few pointers on how to stay alive and survive whistleblowing. He's disseminating information, but he's talking about the most controversial stuff of all."

"Disney?" I knew speaking bad of Disney carried enormous consequences since it was a programming epicenter for MK Ultra mind controlled slaves from military intelligence[6], special forces, spies, and even entertainers who could be harmonically tuned ala Trilby[7].

"Yes. And he's talking about The Farm[8]. What's even more dangerous is that he released sensitive information on DARPA."

"What's DARPA?"

"Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency[9]. It's the most Top Secret special weapons development lab in the world."

"I'm glad I don't know about that one."

"You've talked about, only not by name. It's in a sleepy little town in Virginia."

“Oh, that place,” I shuddered. “I guess I didn’t Need-to-Know the name when I was there. Isn’t it called Blackbeard or Blackbird or something like that?”

“Keep looking until you see a road sign in memory.”

I closed my eyes and focused. “Blacksburg!”

“Yes! I was aware of it when I was couriering file tapes for Ampex. My perception of DARPA is that it holds the key to what is eroding the soul of America- and the world. Everything I know may still be classified.”

“Then I won’t ask you what you saw,” I said, aware that laws of Sedition could result in his imprisonment if anyone found out he was talking. “What does Bratcher say?”

“Bratcher is disseminating information on DARPA’s purpose. Since the US is a mixture of people from all over the world who combine genetics through breeding, they share cultures and knowledge from the DNA level all the way through to a conscious level. The very structure of our country provides rewards to those who achieve the most and advance the farthest. Well, over time, the knowledge and resultant technologies became the most highly advanced in the world.”

“And this is the knowledge that the criminals in control of US are keeping secret,” I concluded.

“Yes. It’s where they root their philosophy ‘secret knowledge equals power’ and their basis for compartmentalizing bits and pieces of it through Need-to-Know. According to Bratcher, these secrets are multiplying and compounding at an alarming rate. Technology has reached a level where it is compounding itself through computerization creating artificial intelligence. Artificial intelligence continues to breed with technology, to the point where technologies are out of control and appear alien. What I saw back in the 70’s was already alarming. Knowledge was becoming unmanageable, and those controlling secrets were running out of ability to absorb, comprehend, and utilize it all. Bratcher says they’ve now allowed alien-technology to compound to the point where it is totally out of control, and the survival of humanity is in jeopardy as a result."

"But artificial intelligence lacks soul, and therefore lacks wisdom just like the criminals in control of it. Think about it. With wisdom we can shift power, dismantle the secrets, and reclaim our innate strength before it's too late."

"And have these criminals tried for crimes against humanity," Mark added. "What they have done is treasonous to all mankind!"

"Mankind can still make the necessary changes," I continued. "All it would take is a spiritual revolution evolution! By everything I overheard being discussed, those flat thinkers who've been in control already know they are out of time. It's just a matter of time until artificial intelligence controls them, too."

"Maybe it did all along," Mark suggested.

"Maybe it is alien," I surmised. "The point is still the same. Wisdom outthinks a criminal mind every time. With spiritual evolution through wisdom, humanity can reclaim soul purpose. What is Bratcher's spin on a solution?"

"He's focused on step one, disseminating the facts. People Need-to-Know the truth first."

"Wow," I pondered. "Truth does make us free."

"It kept me free from a Grand Jury Indictment today," Mark smiled as he turned off the tape recorder and parked the Pacer in the driveway. "The difference between fiction and reality was all the Grand Jury had Need-to-Know."

"And we're free to celebrate the victory!" I said, opening the door.

Chapter 23
PANDORA’S BOX

The next day was spent writing out Top Secret memory. Bits and pieces of what I had previously remembered regarding my experiences at the Blacksburg, Virginia DARPA laboratory concerning artificial intelligence and George Bush’s discussions regarding the same demanded to be expanded and written out in comprehensive detail. The strenuousness of yesterday’s Federal Grand Jury hearing, combined with the discussion of DARPA, had triggered a need to further deprogram what I knew.

Additionally, we were nearing a calendar date, which naturally triggers memory stronger than anything else even without a conscious concept of time. Perhaps that is why people celebrate anniversaries and holidays on an annual basis. Whatever the reason, calendar dates such as the first week in August’s Congressional Recess and the first week in October’s Country Music Association Awards always caused my memories to surface accordingly. I had been used extensively during those times. This year, George Bush was scheduled to be in attendance at the CMA awards in Nashville, which enhanced my urgency to write out memory. As a White House/Pentagon level mind control slave during the Reagan-Bush Administration, I had been in a position to witness and experience secret inner sanctuary operations and tactics that should be public knowledge. My need to write out these photographically recalled details was increasing proportionately to my growing awareness of public ignorance and socially programmed apathy.

While I deprogrammed and wrote out the vast information and technologies to which I had been exposed, I would occasionally emerge from my past long enough to make side notes of solutions. Since I was now capable of thinking and ultimately feeling, making notes of “soulutions” helped me to respond logically to these previously experienced harsh realities. Likewise, people must logically think out of the box that social engineering has locked them into, rather than allow a handful of criminals to dictate their actions. Good people have a Need-to-Know that what they don't know is controlling them.

Perpe*traitors* I knew during my tenure as an MK Ultra mind controlled slave are acutely aware of human behavior patterns, such as how violent behaviors in society often occur in conjunction with specific calendar dates. DARPA's information source provided intricate details into actions and reactions that reverberate for generations, and this insight was being kept secret from the populace while it was used against them.

Reagan's unprecedented release of mental patients while he was Governor of California was implemented on a national scale during his Presidential Administration. Occultism (a.k.a. satanism), which is usually the reversal of Catholic mass, had been used extensively as a trauma base for mind control whereby many institutionalized people were termed Survivors of Ritual Abuse (SRAs) by mental health professionals. Around Halloween, county jails and mental institutions filled up with people suffering from calendar-date intrusive memory flashes. When memories are not written out, occultic flashbacks can result in violent behavior and subsequently overfill jails as well as mental institutions.

Unrecovered victims who were turned out onto the streets during the 1980's began acting out their satanic abuse in a subconscious effort to bring conscious awareness to their plight. Satanic movies like the CIA's Jesuit movie director/producer Peter Blatty's over-hyped "Exorcist," and music like Ozzy Osborne's, were also deliberately introduced into society in accordance with social engineering plans emanating from DARPA. It was foreseen that Reagan's release of the ritually abused from mental institutions without effective therapy would result in their acting out their abuse on calendar dates. This, in turn, traumatized others, reaching proportions that traumatized society as a whole. Since the effects of trauma on the human mind render people more suggestible and easily led, social engineering began evolving into mass mind control as anticipated through this deliberately enhanced violence.

People’s superstitions “naturally” heightened through their ignorance in conjunction with occultism’s deliberate rise in the ‘70s and ‘80’s[1]. Additionally, humankind’s innate need for calendar-date tradition furthered the use of numerology for control purposes. Mathematical sequence was easily perpetuated by artificial intelligence.

For example, the US public would become conditioned to violence occurring on April 19, the calendar date when both Waco and Oklahoma City Bombing tragedies traumatized the nation. Rarely do people in the US dare gather on that date anymore. On the flip side of the same phenomena, global focus of love on Valentine’s Day has raised collective consciousness, romantic expectations, and traditional indulgence in chocolate decadence every February 14. Even those without a current relationship crave chocolate on that date the way people crave hotdogs and hamburgers on July 4 in the US. As more and more people realize this human trait of socially engineered autogenic responses to calendar dates, collective conscious awareness rises as is necessary to incite deliberate, positive change.

Why not declare every day “the day” to focus on love, rather than only one day per year? What kind of collective consciousness would rise when love encompasses the globe each and every day? Would love’s positive energy reframe calendar dates of fear and trauma? Could declaring every day “Earth Day” save the planet from the imminent destruction that is perpetuated every other day of the year? With awareness, possibilities are endless! By rising above predictable routines to establish deliberate heightened awareness instead, spiritual r*e*volution would make us wiser. If humankind collectively stood strong in this knowing, they could reclaim control of their lives! The key to open this awareness is truth.

Most all actions of those few criminals in control have/had triple meaning, cause, or purpose based on the artificial intelligence knowledge they are privy to. Nothing is ever perpetrated by them “accidentally” or “coincidentally.” The only exception to this is when unanticipated “blowback” from sudden exposure of formerly secret information occurs. Considering that they have full access to suppressed and artificially compartmentalized intelligence, it is easy to understand their ability to utilize it on various levels at the same time.

Criminals in control of our information and our technology even consciously speak on two levels at the same time. NLP, the language of the subconscious, has long since become a natural form of communication for them. Television's mass communication enabled them to manipulate the public through speaking on both conscious and subconscious levels at once with ease. Specific words used to condition the public become clear, and even predictable, with awareness.

During Reagan's Administration, the word "awesome" emerged, followed by "amazing." George Bush then led us through "A Maze" where the exit sign was changed to enTrance. Then people were "basically" conditioned to economic "basics" for years. When US militias began gaining strength and numbers in an effort to regain control of Constitutional values and government, every violent tragedy of the times was termed a "malicious attack." Prior to the "malicious" attack on militias, they were respected for peacefully and wisely upholding American[2] values. Those with eyes-to-see and ears-to-hear realized what spin-doctors were doing, while the ignorant were led further into the dark.

Most who could think to seek answers to society's increasing violence were already socially engineered to accept media-hyped government solutions, and they predictably reacted accordingly. Senator Byrd, in the powerful positions of Senate Majority Whip and head of Senate Appropriations, could quote the US Constitution as well as satanists quote the Bible. He could twist verbiage into a reversal to fit the New World Order agenda without the people's awareness that he was doing so. "Good people don't think to look for this kind of criminal activity," he confidently boasted.

In the *mean*time, spin-doctors of social engineering spun the news and views of the population without their conscious knowing, creating further divisions among them. In response to the rise of satanism, debate over Constitutional values of Freedom of Religion became a deliberate emotional diversionary issue, while harmonic technologies through music blasted violent lyrics into the subconscious mind. Violent lyrics then became the diversionary issue, focusing the public away from the technological advances in the application of harmonics and inciting debate over Constitutional values of Freedom of Speech. Erosion of US Constitutional values commenced while the original issues were never resolved.

DARPA’s source of artificial intelligence was driving problematic actions, reactions, and solutions designed to enforce controls, in addition to providing reverberating results from secret technological harmonic advancements. Those who fed from this Top Secret advanced information source, such as George Bush, began gaining global momentum while the people lost more and more “basic” freedoms.

At Bohemian Grove in Northern California, this advanced artificial intelligence was/is discussed by those gathered there for the purpose of ushering in what Nero, Adolph Hitler and George Bush term their New World Order. Under MK Ultra mind control in the ‘80s, I was often used sexually at the Bohemian Grove, which gave me cause to overhear and photographically record these intense discussions[3].

Computerized technological advancements have perpetuated artificial intelligence to the point where it appears alien. Even those at the Grove had varying points of view on the original source of DARPA’s artificial intelligence, spawning fascinating discussions on various multi-dimensional extra-terrestrials.

I was at the Grove in 1986 under MK Ultra mind control waiting for new orders while George Bush talked with his comrade Dick Cheney. Artificial intelligence’s hundred-year plan to total global control was discussed. Computers were scheduled to emerge as the leading household communications device. These flat-thinking criminals believed that they would be capable of controlling people on a worldwide mass communications level more powerful than television. Focused computer users would already be tranced into their monitor screens, which would then be used to pump vast amounts of information into their heads. “It will bring people up to speed information-wise,” George Bush had said.

Former Prime Minister of Canada, Brian Mulroney, had excitedly discussed the same concept being applied through the school systems. Bush, Mulroney, and Cheney had failed to consider that computers would be used by humankind to communicate truth with wisdom to re-establish free thought. Just like Byrd had said regarding “good people” being unable to “think to look for this kind of criminal activity,” these flat thinking criminals were incapable of thinking like us. They never thought to consider the strength of the innate human spirit, the far-reaching impact of wisdom, and resultant *soul*utions. While artificial intelligence was providing them with information on actions and reactions, it was not providing wisdom. Truth’s wisdom is humanity’s key to freedom.

It was discussed and decided that fear would be perpetuated globally in order that focus would stay on the negative rather than allow for soul expression to positively emerge. As people became more fearful and compliant, capacity for free thought and soul expression would diminish. There is a distinct inability to exert soul expression under mind control, and evolution of the human spirit would diminish along with freedom of thought when bombarded with constant negative terrors. Whether Bush and Cheney deliberately planned to raise a collective fear over collective conscious love is doubtful. They did not think, speak, or act in those terms. Instead, they knew that information control gave them power over people, and they were hell-bent to perpetuate it at all costs. Cheney, Bush, and other global elite ushering in the New World Order totally believed in the plan mapped out by artificial intelligence. They were allowing technology to dictate global control.

“Life is like a video game,” Bush once told me at the rural multi-million dollar Lampe, Missouri CIA mind control training camp complex designed for Black Ops Special Forces where torture and virtual reality technologies were used. “Since I have access to the technological source of the plans, I dictate the rules of the game.” The rules of the game demanded instantaneous response with no time to consciously think and critically analyze. Constant conscious disruption of thought through television’s burst of light flashes, harmonics, and subconscious subliminals diminished continuity of conscious thought anyway, creating a deficit of attention that could easily be refocused into video game format.

DARPA's artificial intelligence was reliant on secrecy, and a terrifying cover for reality was chosen to divert people from the simple truth. Since people perceive aliens as being physical like them, it was decided that the technological reality could be disguised according to preconceptions. Through generations of genetic encoding dating back to the beginning of man, serpents incite an innate autogenic response system in humans to "freeze" in terror. George Bush was excited at the prospects of diverting people from truth by fear through perpetuating lizard-like serpent alien misconceptions. "People fear what they don't know anyway. By compounding that fear with autogenic fear response, they won't want to look into Pandora's Box."

Through deliberate generation of fear; suppression of facts under the 1947 National Security Act; Bush's stint as CIA director during Ford's Administration; the Warren Commission's whitewash of the Kennedy Assassination; secrecy artificially ensured by mind control particularly concerning DARPA, HAARP, Roswell, Montauk, etc; and with people's fluidity of conscious thought rapidly diminishing; the secret government embraced the proverbial 'absolute power that corrupts absolutely.'

According to New World Order plans being discussed at the Grove, plans for reducing the earth's population was a high priority. Mass genocide of so-called "undesirables" through the proliferation of AIDS[4] was high on Bush's agenda. "We'll annihilate the niggers at their source, beginning in South and East Africa and Haiti[5]." Having heard Bush say those words is by far one of the most torturous things I ever endured. Equally as torturous to my being were the discussions on genetic engineering, human cloning, and depletion of earth's natural resources for profit. Cheney remarked that no one would be able to think to stop technology's plan. "I'll destroy the planet first," Bush had vowed.

I knew as I deprogrammed, that George Bush and his New World Order plan must be stopped at all costs. My side notes of soulutions prevented me from re-dissociating from the reality that I never wanted to believe in the first place. Whether Bush was boasting or meant what he said, I watched as the plan began to unfold. I was also seeing reformulation of plans as humankind began slowly waking up and gathering strength of spirit to change the source of power flow.

“We need to go to town in the morning,” Mark told me after I closed my notebook. “Bratcher said he mailed some important papers to me. I need to at least attempt to retrieve them before the Feds get hold of them.”

“Good,” I said. “I’d like to see Kelly, and check on Rosenburg’s progress towards obtaining the child support Cox owes.”

Bright and early the next morning, we loaded up the Pacer and drove to Nashville. “Remember when I first began having memory flashes in Alaska and told you about Bush saying he would destroy the planet if he doesn’t get his way?”

“Yes, and he’s right on schedule.” Mark rolled down the window to let in the cool, fresh morning air.

“That’s what I was writing out in detail yesterday.” Now that it was already written out, talking about it with Mark was healing. Tears rolled down my cheeks. “It caused me to realize again why we’ve been able to survive these years since you rescued Kelly and me. You are so wise. We never could have made it to this point if it weren’t for you and your ability to apply what you know with soul and wisdom. You have applicable intelligence. Its no wonder DARPA’s computers can’t seem to predict and counter your actions. You’re outthinking them all. You are proof that love wins.”

“Truth always survives,” Mark said. “It’s getting it out there that is so treacherous.”

“The truth Danny was about to reveal didn’t go away just because they ‘suicided’ him.” I blew my nose.

“His true purpose lives on,” Mark expounded. “With the remaining media journalists cowering in the shadows, it’s hard to see beyond the moment to realize the magnitude of his accomplishments. In time, his truth will be public knowledge. His success may not be visible right now, yet in some ways he made a huge difference for all of us."

"In essence, he put a computer virus in Bush's video game," I assured myself, reflecting on my conscious awareness of the details that became clear yesterday.

"Whatever it takes to crumble the matrix," Mark added, seeming to understand the meaning behind my statement.

"What is a matrix?"

"Look it up in the dictionary. It's the beginning with an end; a structure like a womb; the rock that grows the crystal," Mark defined. "Bush's 'video game' has an origin, a structure, a matrix from which it originates. When I read your notes last night, it was simple to see the solutions you noted. Remembering events as you did, despite Bush's dark spin, undoubtedly cleared your vision. Fear didn't blind you to truth's solutions."

"Truth, no matter how horrible in content, does free me from fear, just like you said it would. Now when I see that lizard alien image creeping into society through social engineering, I know it's just a matter of time until truth shatters it's fearful illusion to set the public free." I thought back to another alien-theme occurrence Bush had perpetuated through his 'You are what you read' programming[6]. "It's like remembering how the lizard holograph[7] Bush showed me was staged. Realizing he really isn't an alien freed my mind to recall other events surrounding the trauma, and most likely this DARPA information, too."

"That's what I meant the other day when I said that realizing the truth is step one towards implementing solutions. Bratcher's Need-to-Know concept is essential."

"Now people simply Need-to-Know the reality that lizard-aliens are a deliberate DARPA illusion lifted from the Outer Limits tv show in order to be empowered to take positive action and unplug artificial intelligence from negative sources like Bush."

Mark smiled. "That's more easily said than done."

"Well, truth never goes away, so we have all the time in the world to stop these narrow-minded flat thinkers. No matter how intelligent they are and how far they progress, wisdom will stop them."

"Mind control must be stopped first," Mark countered. "Under mind control, humanity is out of time."

"Wow," I thought aloud, while my mind reverberated with the meaning. "You're right. Truth needs to prevail now. I'm fortunate to be free to think for myself again and believe in the power of the people. It must scare the wits out of Bush, Byrd, Cheney, and all those creeps that the wizard's curtain[8] has been pulled back to reveal they are just vile, evil men running a computer they call Pacer."

"Or is the computer running them? Either way, they've overplayed their hand. They may believe they are 'above the law,'" Mark said, referring to Reagan's statement during Operation Shell Game[9]. "But they're subject to the same laws of humanity and the same laws of the universe that the rest of us are. They can and will be stopped."

Before Mark dropped me off at Cumberland House to see Kelly while he attempted to retrieve our mail, I dashed into the Stahlman Building to see Scott Rosenburg. He informed me that Cox had delayed court depositions until the first week of January, which meant obtaining the back child support would take longer than hoped. Fortunately, time frames towards Kelly's rehab that Mark had established were flexible.

I stopped by Jean Crowe's office on the way back downstairs, and learned that Edith Hammons had filed complaint against Cox's attorney, Bob Anderson, with Judge Shookhoff. She vowed that if action were not taken immediately on her detailed charges of threats and harassment, she would take the matter to the Supreme Court.

While I picked up my copy of the document and turned to leave, Jean Crowe advised, “Wayne Cox is scheduled to see Kelly again when he’s here for depositions in January. You might want to ask Dr. Nurcum to recommend that the visit not take place.”

“I’ll take care of it,” I assured her, hurrying out the door to get back to the car before the parking meter expired.

On the way to Cumberland House, I filled Mark in on recent events. We agreed to see Dr. Nurcum, Representative West, Marsha Willis, and anyone else who could affect the matter as soon as possible. It seemed I had barely closed the car door before Mark sped out of sight, and I could only hope he would succeed in confiscating our confiscated mail. I went on into Cumberland House to see Kelly.

Kelly and I would be supervised by a friendly social worker today, who immediately notified me that Melissa was gone. I was relieved that Kelly wouldn’t be subjected to her Halloween rituals. We sat on the floor to draw pictures together, discussing mind-brain function as only she and I could. “Charlene says I have to get along with my peers or else,” she said, nervously glancing at the social worker supervising our visit. “It makes it hard to be true-to-soul when I have to act like something I’m not.”

I drew the pie graph illustration that Mark had drawn for me. I illustrated her compartmentalized mind, cryptically explaining that the different compartments were different displays of her personality that were able to get along with anyone. To ‘get along with her peers,’ she reflected their personality through what is termed by real therapists as ‘mirroring and matching.’ “That reflection projection is something to be aware of, not to use. Since some therapists lack the education to understand your condition,” I explained, “they might force you to mirror and match ‘or else’. When you stay strong in who you are true-to-soul right here,” I pointed to the center of the graph, “you can choose to act as you’re told while knowing deep inside it’s an act.”

“Is that part right here,” Kelly pointed to the center of the graph, “that little light inside me?”

“Yes!” I was elated by her perspective. “Shine it bright. Keep shining it brighter and brighter until you are the radiant, brilliant you that you know yourself to be!” I continued drawing the picture as a beautiful sunflower in full bloom, reflecting unlimited light from the sun. She understood the meaning behind the drawing, which she could keep as a loving reminder without Cumberland House staff taking it away.

“Here’s a picture for you that shows how my brain works,” Kelly excitedly said as she drew a fascinating picture illusion. In less than two minutes, she drew what appeared to be an Eskimo looking into the sun from one angle, and the head of a thoughtful Indian Chief from another. I was astounded! Not only did the picture reverberate in depiction, it also reverberated in meaning considering her part Cherokee heritage, our Alaskan experience, and a headdress that also appeared as sunshine!

“You are brilliant!” I hugged her, forever strengthened in light of her loving spirit.

Chapter 24
STEP SEVEN

January 13, 1992, extensive Court Depositions were taken as scheduled. Those in attendance included Wayne Cox, his attorney Bob Anderson, an attorney for the Department of Human Services, Kelly's court appointed Guardian Ad Litem Martha Child[1], Assistant District Attorney Scott Rosenburg, my court appointed attorney Jean Crowe, and me. While these depositions should have been sufficient to obtain Kelly's right to therapy and free her from the State Justice and Mental Health Systems, January 13 only proved to be the day from hell as indicated by the date.

By law, discovery depositions required that I submit questions to my attorney to ask Wayne Cox. The questions I posed were formulated with Mark's expert input, and would have proved sufficient to force Cox to purjer himself and reveal the truth. Questions like: Does lime have a color? Clocks and musicians both have what? What does a clock not have that a musician's hand does? What do you use a kiln for? These questions would have bypassed Cox's ability to lie, triggering him into his persona that only knew murder and dismemberment. My attorney violated the law and my rights by refusing to ask these pertinent questions.

Worse still, when he arrived in town Wayne Cox was permitted access to Kelly by Charlene Johnson who overrode court orders and Dr. Nurcum's recommendation that such visitation be prohibited. My distress at learning this atrocity in the course of depositions was compounded by knowing I had no legal recourse against the violation. My heart was with Kelly the whole time my mind focused on countering contrived allegations and answering grueling legal questions obviously formulated by someone knowledgeable of my diffused CIA MK Ultra programming.

When the process was finally complete, I rushed to Cumberland House to comfort Kelly. Cumberland House staff forbid me to see her, claiming to be under strict orders from Charlene Johnson. I sought resolution to the dilemma from ICAM, the organization overseeing Kelly's case that was securing her out-of-state rehab through Dr. Nurcum's forthcoming diagnosis. I learned that ICAM had suddenly been dissolved and was no longer in existence. It would be days before I was able to see Kelly.

Kelly cried when I finally saw her, "I thought I was being protected against Wayne, but Charlene held me down and forced me to see him. I put my fingers in my ears so he couldn't trigger me this time, and Charlene held my hands behind me and made me listen. What's worse is that Wayne kept triggering me and no one stopped him."

Mind control triggers can be individualized, in sync with the victim's conditioning. Visual or auditory contact with an abuser is a significant trigger in itself. Even if I could somehow convey understanding of this mind control trigger to Kelly's "care-givers," it most likely would not have resulted in the positive change she so desperately needed. The gross injustice and total lack of compassion at this point had convinced me that it was completely up to us to make necessary, drastic changes. Mark and I took immediate action to establish Kelly's transfer to the high tech rehab that awaited her outside the country.

Depositions had proved that $3000 of what Cox owed in back child support was readily available. Thanks to Scott Rosenburg, Sixth Circuit Court proceedings quickly commenced to obtain release of the funds. He presented the case before Judge Brothers[2], who awarded Kelly the $3000, then withdrew his original judgment while the Department of Human Services filed claim to it.

Although we were aware of ongoing scandal surrounding Judge Brothers' alleged money laundering and dealings in Nashville's cocaine industry, our case against Cox was so strong that this delay was not anticipated. In addition to the numbers proving he owed extensive back support, we had obtained a copy of Cox's Louisiana bank statement of an account in Kelly's name. Still, Judge Brothers delayed the release of the money, and ultimately release of Kelly from the Tennessee system.

After court, I walked across the street from the Court House to Scott Rosenburg's office to further discuss the case. "Having looked into Cox's eyes during deposition was enough to convince me that he was lying," Scott said with compassion, "and that he is most likely capable of executing what you've told me about him. I am dedicated to this case, Kelly's cause, and her legal right to that back child support. It will be released," he vowed. "Soon. The Department of Human Services may be awarded current child support, but they have no legal right to what is already owed."

I stopped by Jean Crowe's office as usual on my way out of the Stahlman Building. "Since ICAM was dissolved, there is a new organization called OmniVisions that was specifically formed to deal with cases like Kelly's," Jean Crowe excitedly told me.

"We don't need more red tape to complicate things further," I said, skeptical of any State- organized help by this time.

Jean lowered her voice. "It's designed to help you. We'll go to the meeting tomorrow. They want Mark to attend as well."

The meeting with OmniVisions did seem encouraging. It appeared that the employees we met with were sincere in their determination to help. They already had a large file on Kelly, and were aware of her need for out-of-state rehabilitation.

"Until we can obtain Kelly's transfer, there is a new therapist in town with a dual degree in psychiatry and psychology who is willing to take her case," they assured us. "His name is William Mitchell. He is just now opening his practice here, and a big case like Kelly's could establish him in Nashville. Best of all, he claims to be acutely aware of MK Ultra mind control and recovery from it. He studied under Dr. Marty Orne."

Mark spoke up. "I know Marty Orne[3]. He works with the Department of Defense and has a published reputation within the CIA for executing MK Ultra mind control abuses that begin where Dr. Ewen Cameron[4] left off," he asserted. "It is rumored that he still sleeps with his mother for fun. How do you know what Mitchell's intentions are with Kelly?"

"See for yourself. He wants to meet with you and Cathy before he accepts the case."

When Mark and I met with Dr. William Mitchell, Md.Phd., we found him to be highly intelligent, well informed, and he demonstrated that he was capable of handling Kelly's case. Although Dr. Mitchell had professional ties into Vanderbilt Psychiatric, his association with Dr. Nurcum would be minimal. He wasn't even interested in Nurcum's findings or files on Kelly. "My first effort with Kelly will be to treat her for the extensive PTSD she must have suffered with Cox's recent visit and to develop a rapport with her," he said. "You are welcome to monitor her progress in my care, but my first order of business will be to petition the court to seal her records.

That will keep all State and Federal prying eyes off her case. It is my intent to help your daughter, not feed intelligence to the Feds."

After watching Mitchell expertly use NLP, Mark's impression was "he can be dangerous." Still, there was no viable alternative. Soon after Kelly began therapy with Dr. Mitchell, OmniVisions claimed they were prepared to procure her out of state therapy, which would in turn protect her from further abuse by Charlene Johnson and Wayne Cox. "All you have to do is relinquish full custody of her," they said. "What few remaining parental rights you still have are being overridden by the courts anyway. Simply sign this paper and Kelly is free."

I was desperate for resolution to Kelly's ever-increasing need for protection, but I had no cause to trust OmniVisions. Nor did I yet trust Dr. Mitchell, although he appeared to be making fast progress treating Kelly's PTSD. I opted to think it over.

Before I could even sleep on my decision, it was made for me. January 22, 1991 the State of Tennessee took full custody of Kelly through immoral and illegal means. I wasn't even notified until after that fact. Dr. Mitchell's request to seal Kelly’s records was denied, and she was stopped from further therapy with him while he appealed. Mark suspected this was a ploy since Dr. Mitchell had completed his part for the CIA.

Mark and I began writing letters in earnest, notifying everyone who was aware of Kelly’s case on state, national, and international levels that the State of Tennessee had suddenly taken custody without a trial.

“Why is this being allowed to happen?” I wailed. “Kelly’s case should set precedent. It can make the difference for so many affected by mind control, and yet everyone seems to bury their head in the sand rather than face the issue.”

“People ignore mind control because they don’t want to think about it,” Mark explained.

“Which doubly perpetuates it,” I concluded. “There must be a way to resolve this.”

“We’ll exhaust every option until we find a way,” Mark consoled me.

In addition to our massive letter writing awareness campaign, we also quietly solidified arrangements for Kelly’s transfer out of the country to where qualified rehab awaited her. When the $3000 was finally released through Scott Rosenburg’s diligence, Mark and I were ready and finalized the details.

Within hours of establishing Kelly’s flight to freedom, the Doctor anticipating her arrival was murdered. When the phone call came in, we were told he was murdered while treating a US Intelligence officer assigned to NATO Special Ops who was actively in the midst of International espionage. We were devastated.

In the meantime, OmniVisions released Kelly from Cumberland House and placed her in Foster Care--with Melissa Thurmond! Melissa was the former Cumberland House worker who held the occult “full moon rituals.” I had no legal recourse.

Life's conditions couldn't be worse, it seemed. Mark and I turned to everyone we could think of for help within the State of Tennessee; in Washington, DC; in law enforcement, politics, and mental health; as well as national and international organizations supposedly designed to intervene in situations such as ours. We contacted news organizations, television networks, media persons such as Oprah Winfrey[5], and we even appealed to those we had previously contacted. We pleaded with US Customs Internal Affairs for intervention, only to find that their understanding, compassion, and validation of our case could not overcome the political corruption that had taken over America.

One day in early April while Mark and I were furiously writing letters seeking help, there was a knock at the door. A man in a wrinkled suit who appeared severely traumatized saluted Mark when he opened the door. He spewed his credentials and showed his military ID, saying his name was Tommy Bland. "I know of your circumstances, and I would like to help in exchange for your expert advise on how I can regain control over my own life and mind. Are you familiar with DARPA?"

Tommy's story, what he remembered of it, was traumatic. Tears streamed down his face as he relayed one of the most horrifying experiences I had ever heard. Mark provided him understanding and coping skills, which in turn gave him hope that some day he might recover. "What you know could restore free thought to America," Tommy told Mark emphatically, "and ultimately help humanity as whole. I will do anything I can to help you."

"When the time is right, I'll take you up on your offer, " Mark told him, fully aware that Tommy's admission of holding a Step Seven Top Secret Clearance and ID credentials could prove beneficial to our cause.

Within days, Edith Hammons telephoned. When she excitedly suggested that we meet, Mark and I drove out to her house. It wasn't like Edith to make such a request and we knew it must be important.

After pouring our coffee, Edith began, "Ben West called me and asked me if you would speak before the Tennessee Legislature regarding Kelly. We need changes in the law to protect the children rather than protect their abusers. Commissioner Grunow will be in attendance." Commissioner Grunow was head of the Department of Human Services who had repeatedly refused to meet with me throughout Kelly's ordeal. Now he was being called to task, and I eagerly accepted the invitation to speak.

"What should I do about members of the Legislature that I was exposed to under mind control?" I asked her. "I know that Senator Albright is still in office." It had not been uncommon for me to attend Legislative functions and parties back in the 1980's, dealing CIA cocaine and/or being prostituted to various members. Albright in particular stood out in my mind since I was prostituted to him in conjunction with Alex Houston's first mind controlled slave, Maria Medina. Albright was heavily involved in CIA cocaine money laundering ops that ran through Nashville's country music industry.

"I mentioned that to Ben," Edith said. "He told me to assure you that you have no cause to be nervous just because you're making a few criminals nervous. He said, 'let the guilty sweat because it only further validates your case.' Besides," she patted my hand, "I'll be watching them to make sure they won't come near you."

"Oh, they won't get near her," Mark vowed.

I wasn't nervous, anyway. This was clearly too good of an opportunity to allow the past to muck it up. I could make a significant difference on Kelly's behalf. Edith handed me a slip of paper with the numbers HR 1462 and S 902 written on it. "Those are the numbers of the Bill in Kelly's name that are currently before the Tennessee House and Senate. You're scheduled to speak on Monday, April 13th."

"The 13th?" Mark raised his eyebrows.

"Well, maybe it will prove to be their unlucky day," I smiled, fully aware of numbers games by now.

When we left Edith's, Mark and I briefly stopped by Tommy Bland's apartment on the way out of town. Mark had previously been to Tommy's residence, and tipped me to his display of photographs involving US Air Force Intel Command and DARPA. I studied the fascinating photos that lined his walls while Mark and Tommy talked. There were pictures of him with Bush as CIA Director, Panamanian Leader Manuel Noriega, recognizable Top Brass military, beside Air Force One, and other notable photos that seemed to me that they should be classified.

When Tommy's teenage children began arriving home from school, they lovingly tended to their father. They treated him attentively with respect, compassion, and understanding. They knew their father had suffered extreme trauma, and asked only that he receive help, too, once we succeeded in obtaining it for Kelly. Our brief stop proved to be a highly informative and very moving experience.

On the long drive home, I decided not to question if Tommy's ID had had anything to do with the recent turn of events. It wouldn't have made any difference anyway, and sometimes it was more beneficial not knowing such details, especially when it involved a Step Seven Clearance. Instead I asked, "Did you see all those photos on Tommy's wall of him with George Bush?"

"I couldn't get past that one of him with Noriega."

"It's no wonder he is having trouble with his memory," I continued, still thinking of the photos of him and Bush together in various places.

"With what Tommy knows about Noriega and Bush," Mark continued, "Bush should be sitting on Noriega's lap during his upcoming trial."

Noriega's trial was scheduled for Friday, April 10. Despite our submission of evidence through numerous means including Jim Dibble, C.I.D., and attorneys Reese Bagwell and Frank Rubino, we hadn't been called to testify. I thought about Mark's statement that Bush should be sitting on Noriega's lap. "Bush should be sharing a cell with Noriega anyway based on the information Customs validated regarding my experience with them in CIA cocaine ops[6]! I assume Tommy hasn't been called to testify at Noriega's trial either, since pertinent evidence is still hanging on his walls. Obviously Noriega's case is rigged as bad as Kelly's is. With Bush in office and National Security slapped on the case, there is little hope that the truth will come out.”

“It will eventually,” Mark assured me. “It always does. A lot of people know that Just Cause was ‘just cause’ Noriega was skimming CIA drug profits from Bush’s CIA baby known as Operation Watchtower. The facts can’t be suppressed forever, especially when the likes of William Van Raab all the way through to Tommy Bland have evidence linking the two.”

We drove the rest of the way in silence while I focused on what I would say to the Legislature on Monday. Something had to give. Kelly’s situation with Melissa was becoming increasingly worse with every full moon. Being denied therapy for PTSD with Dr. Mitchell right now compounded the felony. How could I simplify such a complex subject as mind control and, ultimately, Kelly’s needs for public presentation? Somehow, I would have to find the words to open their ears, their minds, and their hearts while motivating them to take action.

If truth were allowed to come out during Noriega’s trial on April 10, it could be of enormous benefit to my speech before the Legislature on the 13th. Noriega’s trial, however, did little to reveal reality[7]. Bush’s involvement was twisted to appear heroic, as though his ‘Operation Just Cause’ was a major Drug War victory. In the wake of that whitewash, my determination was at an all time high.

While I spoke, I barely noticed Senator Albright’s outrage while he stormed out of his seat to dramatically make a phone call in plain view of everyone present. I stayed intensely focused on clearly making my point for Kelly’s sake. Not only did I cite the injustices incurred through a corrupt justice and mental health system, I also pointed out specifics where bureaucratic red tape only tangled the facts. I suggested solutions that would be more humanitarian and less formal. State forms and laws did not allow for room to address issues that were becoming prevalent in society, from ritual abuse and incest to mind control. When I was through, Representative West called for immediate changes in the Department of Human Services to be written out in full by Commissioner Grunow and placed on his desk within the week.

A short question and answer period followed. Support was strong and compassionate. After a few moments, Tommy Bland, in full dress Air Force blues, stood up to say, “Today the voice of the people changed government policy. Could this be construed as a giant step forward in their movement against the dictates of the New World Order?” Pandemonium broke out in the Legislature, and the meeting was unofficially adjourned.

While I made my way through the crowd towards Mark, I was roughly spun around to face Commissioner Grunow. He was seething mad, spitting his words at me. “I personally assure you that your daughter will never be freed from State Custody, and that I will do everything in my power to make sure you never have visitation with her again.”

Somehow I remained calm while I retorted, “By the time you submit your paperwork to the Legislature for their approval, I will be doing everything in my power to insure it’s the last thing you do as Commissioner.”

While I continued to make my way through the crowd to Mark, Ben West stopped me to excitedly tell me that the Bill before the Legislature in Kelly’s name would undoubtedly pass. When I told him about Grunow’s threat, he assured me, “You need not worry about him since he answers to me.”

“It’s who in Washington, DC that he’s been answering to throughout this case that concerns me,” I responded.

Mark arrived at my side by then, wisely expressing appreciation to Ben West for the opportunity he had afforded us. After extending my thanks as well, I turned to Mark to ask where Tommy was.

“I didn’t even know he was here!” I said. “The question he raised regarding the New World Order raised people to their feet. I’d like to thank him.”

We never saw Tommy Bland again.

Chapter 25
US MALE

May 9, 1992 the Bill before the Tennessee State Legislature in Kelly's name passed into law. Edith Hammons mailed a copy of the law's verbiage to our Post Office Box, and it never reached us.

"We don't even get junk mail through that Post Office Box anymore, let alone important documents" Mark told her. "I've exhausted every diplomatic means I know to rectify the problem to no avail. I'm going to have to take action on it myself tomorrow."

When we arrived in Nashville the next morning, Mark dropped me off at the Copy Shop while he tended to the matter. After I made a few necessary copies, I settled into the employee's back room where Billy was busy working.

"How is Mark going to stop the CIA from confiscating your mail[1]?" Billy asked while he continued his work binding booklets he had copied.

"I really don't know," I answered, watching the front door through the two-way mirror. "I'll sure be glad to see him come through that door, though, to tell us all about it. He really is disgusted with the Feds for refusing to act on the documented crimes we've turned over to them, and this illegal confiscation of our mail is one more crime they're ignoring."

"Ya'll are battling a corrupt government over freedom of thought, and they interrupt your communications violating freedom of speech," Billy stated. "That's criminal."

“They confiscated our copy of the Legislative action on the Bill in Kelly’s name. The bill passed into law, yet it hasn’t done anything to alleviate Kelly’s circumstances. It seems criminally ironic that this new law in Kelly’s name deals with mind control and satanism while, at the same time, Melissa has control of Kelly by court order and is subjecting her to occult rituals! Not only is that morally and legally wrong, but Kelly is potentially volatile and could trigger into violence from the rituals at any time. I’m concerned for her safety and the safety of those around her.”

“Let’s hope she won’t solve her problem with Melissa herself,” Billy offered.

“I can only hope that Dr. Mitchell’s court action will produce positive results real soon.”

“It’s a wonder any justice can be obtained through the courts anymore,” Billy observed. “I noticed that George Bush intervened on Ernest Ray Lynn’s sentencing for his criminal cocaine and attempted murder charges to substitute his prison time with ‘punishment of writing a song[2].’ Writing songs is what he does anyway! We’re the ones being punished for his crimes if we have to listen to it.”

“Poor Loretta. I had hoped they would lock Ernest Ray up so she could be free from at least one of her mind control handlers. Instead, he is free to continue to manipulate her in her MK Ultra victimization and distribute cocaine for the CIA! What kind of justice is that?”

“Does Loretta know she is carrying cocaine on her buses for the CIA?”

“She can’t think to know it, Billy. She would be devastated to know how she is being used for criminal activity that ultimately hurts others. She is such a pure, gentle, loving soul. With Mooney, Ken Riley, and Ernest Ray all actively participating in her use and abuse by the CIA, I had hoped that perhaps Ernest Ray’s conviction would result in her first step toward freedom. But George Bush stepped in and set Ernest Ray free instead! Did you notice that Ernest Ray’s attorney was Reese Bagwell?[3]”

"Bagwell keeps popping up in news lately, whitewashing these CIA criminal cases. It's a good thing Mark kept him off your case. Noriega's trial was 'amBushed' by the same cover-up of CIA cocaine ops. I'll bet Ernest Ray wasn't the least bit nervous about the truth leaking out considering Bagwell's input into his and Noriega's cocaine cases."

"It astounds me that the media is ignoring Noriega's extensive ties into this country, from his education at the School of the Americas[4] to his well known involvement with Bush and the CIA in the cocaine business. Can't people see that this so-called War on Drugs is no more than the CIA eliminating their competition while they take over the industry worldwide?"

I paused to reflect. "If people don't wake up soon, we'll have a drug lord running this country."

"We already do," Billy said, unjamming his stapling machine.

I laughed. "I'm referring to Bill Clinton. In 1984, I was at the Swiss Villa Amphitheater in Lampe Missouri[5] where Bush and Clinton were talking about their New World Order. Bush was really pleased with how well Clinton's Mena cocaine operation was funding the New World Order effort, and he assured Clinton he would be rewarded politically. In those days, the groundwork for NAFTA[6] was established to open the border to 'free trade of drugs to equalize our economies,' and Clinton was right there in the midst of it all. It was already determined that Bush would be put in the office of President at the same time Salinas was put in as President of Mexico so they could usher in NAFTA."

"Wait a minute," Billy said. "What about elections?"

"What elections?" I asked. "Its easy for them to rig votes with the electronic ballets. If third world countries used archaic methods of voting, we sent in representatives from the US to 'oversee them.' Everybody I knew in politics didn't give elections a thought. They knew that people would believe in the corrupted, controlled polls, and that those appointed to office in accordance with the New World Order were secure."

“So people are misled by their leaders to believe they chose them?”

“Not only that,” I answered, “but figureheads are placed while the real power works behind the scenes. For example, when Salinas was Vice President of Mexico, he ran the country while dela Madrid was only a Presidential figurehead. Vice President Bush ran this country while Reagan was acting President.”

“Why is Bush President now?”

“These guys have become so arrogant, they are blatant. Their overconfidence will eventually be their downfall. In the meantime, they have planned for contingencies like we’re seeing with the militias and patriots beginning to wake up and rebel. When Bush and Clinton were talking in 1984, Bush told Clinton ‘when the American people become disillusioned with Republicans leading them into the New World Order, you, as a Democrat, will be put into place.’ I expect that Clinton will be our next President based on that conversation I heard.”

“This is serious information!” Billy looked up from his work. “Its no wonder the Feds are worried about your revealing what you know.”

“There are a lot of people who know what I know[7],” I assured him. “And even more are waking up to reality fast. People with Intelligence operating on a Need-to-Know are gaining insight into a bigger picture with the truth that is emerging. They gain one more piece of the puzzle and the Big Picture suddenly comes into focus. When it does, their paradigms shift. Mark and I are also aware of numerous scientists waking up to the reality of a New World Order agenda who are furious that they’ve been mislead and used. These people are uniting with strength, and the New World Order elite will need to play their hold card and switch political parties. Watch and see. Clinton will appear to ‘defeat’ Bush according to plan, while Bush continues business as usual from behind the scenes of the New World Order.”

“Who do you think will follow Clinton?”

“A compliant, sleeping public mesmerized by his Oxford learned charisma.”

Billy looked up from his work again to clarify his question. “I mean into the Presidency.”

“Hillary?” I smiled half-heartedly. “Seriously, she is brighter than Bill, and is even more corrupt. Knowing her, she’d probably rather work behind the scenes, although she may be used as another appearance of ‘change’ since she’s a woman. That’s just speculation based on how these criminals operate. They want to keep their power all in the family. I did see Bush, Jr. being conditioned, and trained for the role of President at the Mount Shasta, California military programming compound in 1986[8]. He’s not very bright, though, so I don’t know how they could possibly prop him up…”

The front door bell jingled as Mark stormed into the Copy Shop and strode for the door of the backroom where he knew Billy and I would be. I jumped up and threw my arms around him.

“How’d it go?”

“We’ll get our mail now.” Mark sat on the counter, taking a long drink from my bottle of water.

“How do you know?” I impatiently inquired. “What did they say?”

“Nothing,” Mark said, wiping his mouth. “I did the talking. I walked into the office supply they’re using for a front…”

“What office supply?” Billy asked.

“The one down the road a couple of blocks in the same building as the Bell Telephone Company,” Mark answered.

“How did you know it was a CIA front?” Billy shut down his binding equipment to listen to Mark’s reply.

“I could smell them,” Mark smiled.

“Is that what that stink is that blows this direction sometimes?”

“Come on,” I coaxed. “Really. How did you know?”

“An educated guess. The CIA uses office supply fronts as often as they use toy-manufacturing fronts. They are so routine and predictable. I’ve been watching that place, and never saw legitimate business being conducted. It’s an Office Supply with no office supplies. Instead, guys in suits and dark glasses driving Fed cars frequent the place. Anyway, I went inside and the place was pretty much empty except for a gorgeous girl sitting at a desk playing receptionist. I patted my front pocket, and said, ‘See this? I’m not glad to see you’.”

Billy chuckled, familiar with the infamous May West line, ‘is that your pistol in your pocket or are you just glad to see me?’

“What did she do?” I eagerly asked.

“She reached under the desk and pushed her panic button just like I hoped she would. When she started to slide the drawer open, I assumed she was going for a weapon so I slammed it and got in her face. I told her, ‘you know I have an explosive temper. When people cheat me, threaten me, or steal my mail, I become explosive. You don’t want me to become explosive now, do you?’ She was sitting there, dumfounded. So I left.”

“How do you know we’ll get our mail?” I didn’t understand why Mark was so certain he had accomplished his goal.

“I said the word ‘explosive’ three times. Repetition is the most common form of mind manipulation used by the CIA. They know that it works, so they use it. Which means they also recognize it when someone like me deliberately repeats a word or phrase three times. She bought my bluff. I’m telling you, we’ll get our mail and that little Office Supply store will close.”

“You’ve never been wrong before under circumstances like these,” I smiled. “Thanks for taking care of it. I’m glad it’s over and you’re OK.”

“Of course I’m OK,” Mark replied. “I don’t take chances, just calculated risks. There’s no way to lose.”

“Well,” Billy said, “Just the same, I’m relieved to see you back in one piece. It’s not everyday someone storms the CIA and walks away unscathed.”

“They’re a bunch of wimps, plus I waited until they all left for their 3 martini lunch,” Mark told him. “Don’t buy into their tough-guy front.”

“Speaking of ‘wimps’,” Billy switched subjects. “What is this ‘wimp’ image Bush projects?”

I answered. “I believe it is a deliberately contrived public image stemming from his pedophilic wimp appearance. He talks to the public like he’s talking to kids. He even uses his Mr. Rogers[9] voice. It’s a total diversion from the mind controlling, warmongering criminal that he really is.”

“What makes someone like him become a pedophile?” Billy asked.

“Multi-generational abuse, most likely,” Mark answered while I gathered up our belongings to leave. “Besides, people like him who have all the money and power in the world know no boundaries. They have no limitations legally, financially, morally or otherwise.”

“The CIA just learned boundaries on confiscating our mail,” I said as we walked toward the door.

“Yeah,” Billy agreed. “A US male got through to them so the US Mail can get through to you.”

Chapter 26
GOD SAVE US FROM RELIGION

“What religion is God?” Kelly asked when I finally saw her again.

Our mail had resumed for the moment and the CIA front relocated the day after Mark stormed the Office Supply, yet it was mid-summer before the court agreed that Kelly should resume therapy with Dr. Mitchell. Noting Kelly’s deteriorated condition, Dr. Mitchell immediately arranged for her and me to begin family therapy with his cohort social worker Frank Neiswinder.

“Kelly,” Neiswinder began. “Why are you angry with your mother?”

“I’m not!” Kelly adamantly told him again. “Will you please just let us visit? I haven’t seen my mom in a long time, and we want to talk.”

Ignoring Neiswinder, I responded to Kelly’s significant question. “To quote Gandhi, ‘God has no religion.’ Religion is manmade.”

“Then why doesn’t God save us from religion?” she asked as a tear smeared her heavy black mascara down her cheek. When I wiped her tear, my hand accidentally smeared the blood red lipstick she had started wearing. Neiswinder handed her a tissue.

“Go ahead and cry, Kelly,” Neiswinder said. “Cry out all that anger you have for your mother.”

Kelly rolled her eyes. “I’m not angry at my mother! How many times do I have to tell you?” She wiped at her stained cheek with the tissue, tangling herself in the ridiculously age-inappropriate moon and stars earrings that dangled past her shoulders.

“I hear anger in your voice,” Neiswinder persisted.

“Look, I should be with my mother and court is forcing me to be with Melissa instead,” she told him.

“How does that make you feel?” he asked, as most therapists are trained to do regardless of circumstances.

“Angry!” she roared. “I’m angry at Melissa! I’m angry at the court! But most of all, I’m angry at you for interrupting me and my mom again! I need to talk with her. Please!”

“We are saved from religion when we go within for our answers,” I began, fully aware of the underlying reason for Kelly’s questions.

“Within where? I think I’m without a ‘within’ right now. So I’m running as fast as I can away from religion the direction Melissa showed me. Only that isn’t working either.” She twisted one of a handful of the occult-theme rings she was wearing. Occultism was taking its toll. The heavy black circles under Kelly’s eyes were accentuated by the thick eyeliner she wore, which matched her black attire. My precious daughter was under all that darkness somewhere, and I only had a few more minutes to reach her before our session would end.

“Of course not,” I scoffed. “Satanism is a religion, too. Why are you turning to a religion to get away from religion? That’s not very bright. Think about it.”

Kelly was silent for a minute, which inspired Neiswinder to speak up. “Kelly, do you feel angry with your mother for making you stay with Melissa?”

“If she says yes,” I told him, “will you alleviate Kelly’s ‘anger’ by changing the court order so I can take her home with me where she belongs?”

“My mom isn’t making me stay with Melissa,” Kelly chimed in. “My abusers are. They are manipulating the court and probably you, too. For the last time, I am not angry with my mother!”

“Think about what you just said,” Neiswinder appeared angry himself.

“OK,” Kelly said. “If you’ll give me a minute to think, that’s exactly what I was doing when you interrupted again. But you’re not going to tell me what to think. People have done that to me all my life.”

“Rather than tell her what to think,” I said. “Why not teach her how to think. For herself. That’s what she is in therapy for.”

I turned back to Kelly while Neiswinder fumed. “What is bright,” I reminded her, “is that little light inside of you. Look into it. Look within. Find your self. Don’t look outside yourself for answers. When religion started telling people what to think rather than allowing them to think for themselves it became a means of control rather than spiritual freedom. Strengthen yourself. Shine your light bright. Don’t bury it under all this darkness,” I gestured to her black attire and occult jewelry. “Project true-to-soul. Be yourself.”

Kelly thought a minute. “To be myself, I have to know myself. To know myself, I have to think for myself. Its hard to think for myself when I don’t know who I am anymore.”

“You haven’t changed,” I held her close. “You are you, inside. Believe in you. I do. Don’t let people like Melissa lead you outside yourself. Remember. Your answers are within. Lighten up!”

Kelly smiled, and then looked serious. “I’d lighten up more if people would listen to me and let me come home.”

“We can’t let life’s circumstances influence who we are true-to-soul. We need to stay unconditionally true-to-soul.” I held her close. “I love you unconditionally, because I know who you are. Unconditional love isn’t influenced by circumstances.”

Another tear slid down Kelly’s cheek. “Melissa said you don’t love me. Charlene and Wayne said you don’t love me.”

“What do they know about love?” I asked her. “They don’t even know you.”

“Or you,” Kelly said, hugging me tight. “It’s not over ‘til we win, right mom?”

“We’ll win,” I assured her. “Love always wins. Unconditionally. Love by its very nature is the most powerful force in the universe. Love is the light within you, so shine your brilliance. You know you’re bright.”

“Yeah, I am pretty bright,” Kelly agreed. “I’m doing really good in public school. Half of what they teach is just Global Ed garbage, but I can still pass all the tests without believing what they say.”

While Kelly was in Cumberland House, her education was minimal within the confines of the institution. The sparse education Kelly did receive there did little to stimulate her advanced intellect. When Kelly had started kindergarten years before, she already tested at a ninth grade reading level. Now Cumberland House was geared below a kindergarten level, and Kelly was concerned about her lack of education. I had comforted Kelly’s frustrations by reassuring her that “all she was missing in public school was Global Ed anyway.” Since the Alaskan school system was openly and actively opposing the government’s attempt to force Global Ed in their system, Kelly was acutely aware of the ineptness of its structure. “Programming more information into my brain doesn’t make it knowledge,” she had said. Now that she was back in public school for the first time in years, it was reassuring to hear her talk about her education experience. Before we could discuss it further, though, Neiswinder announced ‘time’s up.’

“The time flew by,” I complained. “We barely even had time to address your initial question about what religion God is.”

“Sure we did,” Kelly said gathering up the pile of occult jewelry she had removed. “The answer is within. God’s love light is within… me. And religion is without… love.”

“Wait a minute,” I said, alarmed. “I didn’t say religion is without love since there are good people in all religions who love and…”

“Why are there so many religious wars, then?” she wisely asked. “And why do they abuse children in the church? And why are satanic religions even darker?” She shuddered.

“Oh my God,” I realized the magnitude of our conversation. “Things aren’t always so black and white, Kelly. Keep your love light shining, though, and the truth will become clear. Remember, the answers are within,” I said as Melissa honked the horn of the car outside. “Stay true-to-soul, true-to-yourself, true-to-love,” I called. “I love you!”

I walked towards the car where Mark was parked, deep in thought. When I climbed in, I noticed tears in his eyes. “I can’t stand it,” he said, his voice quavering. “It’s so hard to see her and not even get to talk with her.” The court order prohibiting contact between Mark and Kelly was as absurd as the court placing Kelly in an occult Foster Home despite laws being passed in her name to prohibit it. Where was justice? Where was compassion?

“I’m sorry,” Mark cried as I hugged him close. “I can only imagine what it was like for you seeing her after all this time.”

“I’ll tell you all about it,” I smiled. “This day was easy compared to what Melissa is about to face after Kelly and I talked today. Kelly is not happy with Melissa or her occultism.” I proceeded to tell Mark all about our conversation as we drove towards home.

The next “Family Therapy” session, Kelly and I again indulged in conversation despite Neiswinder’s determination to conduct conventional therapy. She handed me a copy of the poem she had written ‘God Save Us From Religion.’ It was actually a profound and loving piece that could have been entitled ‘God Save Us From Cult/Occult Abuse.’

“Wow, Kelly,” I exclaimed after reading it. “This sounds like you have given significant thought to our conversation last week.” I looked at her, patting her thick blond hair and holding her close.

“I’m feeling more like myself,” she said, a hint of inner peace reflecting in her eyes. “Only other people aren’t seeing it that way.”

“Whoever can’t see you in all your brilliance must be blind,” I said. “Who…”

“OK,” Neiswinder interrupted, standing up after shuffling through his stack of papers. “Today we are going to accomplish what we didn’t get to last week. Let’s begin by identifying the problem. I understand that you hate your mother, Kelly. Why?”

“Oh no, not again!” Kelly slumped in her chair. “My mom and I have something really important to discuss. Please let us talk.”

“We should all discuss it then,” he said, leaning over into our space.

Kelly ignored him. “I got in trouble in school,” she said.

“What happened?” Kelly had been enrolled in summer school to determine what grade she might advance to next fall.

“We were supposed to be studying political science and my teacher brought up Bush,” Kelly swallowed hard, her pupils dilating. “She was talking about the War on Drugs and what a hero Bush is.”

“Oh no,” I groaned. “What did you do?”

“I just asked her if she bought into all that propaganda bullshit.”

“Did you use that word?” I asked, knowing that the use of profanity is forbidden in school.

“No!” she said. “I mean, yes. But she was mad about the ‘propaganda’ word. Earlier when we were doing social studies, she said we have the best of everything in this country. She said we have the biggest variety of food in the world, and I told her she was feeding me propaganda. I told her I knew better because I had eaten international foods on the cruise ships and fruits in the Caribbean.”

I realized Kelly had memories surfacing, and was eager to deal with that issue rather than what her teacher had to say. But what had happened in school was important to Kelly, so helping her with memory recovery would have to wait. Neiswinder was oblivious to the importance of what was being said.

Kelly continued, “She told me that anyone with such a vivid imagination couldn’t possibly know propaganda from the facts. I told her, ‘propaganda is, in fact, imagination’ where somebody makes up lies to fool people like her.”

Neiswinder was taking notes as fast as Kelly was talking. I knew she probably got in trouble with that statement. Kelly went on to tell her that Global Ed was propaganda, and the teacher phoned Melissa for a meeting.

“Kelly,” Neiswinder interrupted. “Your mother says some pretty bizarre things, and you are copying her. Do you feel you need to copy her in order to make her like you?”

Kelly didn’t answer him. “Melissa was already disgusted with me because I wrote this poem.” She gestured to the poem she handed me. “She thinks I’m possessed by demons and wants me to see an exorcist.”

I swallowed my rage knowing that treating ritual abuse with superstition was in direct opposition to healing. I knew Kelly was aware of this since her Psychiatrist in Alaska had had cause to counsel her on it in the course of therapy. “What did you tell her when she said that?”

Kelly smiled, “I asked her if she knew that ‘exercise’ built strength.” To a literal mind, this was a natural response and a strong reason why religious abuse cannot be treated with religion. Since Kelly was capable of ‘exercising her free thought’ to some degree ever since Alaska, she apparently found humor in the word play. “I was just playing with her,” Kelly continued. “I didn’t believe she was serious, but she was! Now she is taking the matter to court.”

“I’ll stop that,” I assured Kelly. “The Bill before the Legislature in your name was just passed into law and…”

“Ms. O’Brien!” Neiswinder roared. “You are in violation of court order. This is my office, and I will not tolerate any more of your lack of cooperation with me or with court orders! You sit over there.” He pointed to a chair across the small room. “Kelly, you sit here.” He went back to his desk and sat down. “Alright then. Kelly, you need to answer my question now.”

“What question?”

“Why do you hate your mother?”

“I don’t”

Neiswinder rephrased his question. “Then why are you angry?”

“Because you just interrupted us again and I get angry at anyone who separates us.”

“I’m going to report this to Dr. Mitchell. You two are totally uncooperative with therapy and I don’t want to waste any more of my time with you.”

“Can we still meet here and talk?” Kelly asked. “We don’t get to see each other anymore except for here.”

“That is up to Dr. Mitchell!” he said. We smiled at each other hoping that Dr. Mitchell wouldn’t interrupt our only chance to talk together. Neiswinder concluded the “therapy” session for the day.

On the way out of town, I stopped by Jean Crowe's office to stop Melissa's pursuit of an exorcist through the courts.

"There are exorcists available that the Department of Human Services uses," Jean told me. I was astounded. This was archaic. I reminded her of the bill that just passed into law in Kelly's name regarding legitimate therapy for ritually abused and mind controlled children.

"Besides," I told her. "Why would we want to 'cast out' personality fragments that need to be reintegrated? 'Casting out' dissociative personas that were created through ritual abuse would only further reinforce the division. In this case, though, it's even worse because Melissa wants to 'cast out' Kelly's refusal to comply with superstitious occult rituals. That equates to programming her. No. Absolutely not. We have got to counter Melissa's request."

"Well, you write it out then," my attorney told me, handing me a pen. "I don't understand what you want said."

I wrote out the verbiage for her to present to the court. Our petition to the court in conjunction with Dr. Mitchell's would certainly prove sufficient to stop Melissa's efforts to obtain an exorcist.

The next full moon, I received a phone call. Melissa claimed Kelly was "unmanageable" and had dumped her off on a street corner near the Nashville YWCA[1]. Our next "Family Therapy" session with Neiswinder was to be held at Vanderbilt University Children's Psychiatric Hospital--the Defense Department Subcontractor we had been avoiding. The only plus was that Kelly had found the strength within to save herself from Melissa, superstitious exorcism, and occult religion.

Chapter 27
OUTPOST of FREEDOM

“Kelly is suffering from homicidal and suicidal ideations,” Frank Neiswinder told me when I arrived at Vanderbilt Psychiatric for my first visit with Kelly since the incident with Melissa.

“What do you expect from someone who is forced to participate in occult ritual?” I asked. “This was inevitable and is exactly why I adamantly opposed Kelly’s placement with Melissa to begin with. No one listened. Now, once again, people like yourself are being educated at Kelly’s expense.”

Kelly sat solemnly, slumped in her chair. “Why am I the one who is locked up?” Kelly complained to Neiswinder. “My abusers are free. Melissa howls at the same moon Wayne Cox howls at, and you think I’m nuts?” Neiswinder didn’t answer. Kelly continued. “Why is Melissa allowed to dump me like a sack of donated junk at the ‘Y’ while the court makes me and my mom have supervised visits?”

Kelly had a right to be ‘angry’ over the injustice of being placed with the likes of Melissa and kept from her loving home. Being locked up in Vanderbilt Psychiatric must be traumatic for her, too. Vanderbilt had an array of electronic doors and locks that rivaled the Pentagon’s to keep the inmates isolated in their sanitized hospital setting.

“Where would you like to be?” Neiswinder asked her, as though she hadn’t just told him again. Did he ever listen? If he had cared to hear her, he would have at least known Melissa’s occult rituals were counter-productive to her well-being as she verbalized so clearly weeks before.

"I'd like to be with my mom and dad, back in Alaska," Kelly answered. "Or maybe with them on a cruise ship far away from here." She turned to me, "Mom, I was remembering something about Bush[1], NCL cruise ships[2], and CIA cocaine operations. I wrote it out."

Neiswinder literally fell out of his chair. "Kelly!" he exclaimed, dusting himself off and sitting back down, "I didn't know you could remember anything about the past! Where is this memory you wrote out?" He started shuffling through his stacks of papers again.

"I wrote it for Dr. Mitchell, and staff said they would give it to him," she said, looking at him skeptically. "I really don't trust anyone else with it except my mom and dad."

She turned back to me. "It had lots of details about CIA cocaine operations in it, right down to the triggers they used. We were in Haiti, weren't we, Mom?" She lowered her voice. "I was thinking about that word, how Catholics call hell 'Hadies' and how much I 'hate' the smell of that place. Did they name it Haiti for 'hate' or for 'hell'? And who was Saint Thomas? That place is close to hell."

"What place?" Neiswinder asked her.

"St. Thomas," Kelly said nonchalantly. "The one in the Virgin Islands. Mom, does virgin mean having sex or not having sex?"

"It means untouched," I answered uncomfortably while Neiswinder made notes.

"So Haiti is where they have sex, and the Virgin Islands is where they don't?" Kelly's literal mind seemed to be misinterpreting the names of the two Caribbean islands. Still, if she had been writing out memory, she would know sex occurred in both places based on her own experience. I knew her brilliant mind was traveling somewhere else, and I listened to her beyond the words I knew were only intended for Neiswinder. "Is that why Hadies got AIDS[3]?"

She apparently had remembered the sex, and was concerned with having contracted AIDS. I glanced at Neiswinder who was asking a nurse for Kelly's writings. "Not everyone who has been to Haiti has AIDS anymore than everyone who has been to the Virgin Islands is a virgin," I assured her. She chuckled while I continued. "Especially when the CIA knows the people they are sending over there are immune to that strain of AIDS." Relief washed over Kelly's face as she realized she had stood amidst AIDS hell without catching it.

I thought how extreme her experience of life had already been and continued to be. No matter how explicitly she expressed herself in words, those who were supposed to be "caring" for her didn't seem to hear. Yet I could hear beyond her words. Our ability to thought-communicate was deep, allowing us to share an understanding above our monitored verbalizations. Helping my eleven-year-old child deal with the reality of her past pertaining to sensitive topics like AIDS was strenuous while under supervision we did not trust. The fact that she chose to speak cryptically to me now elevated my concerns for what was happening to her at Vanderbilt. Something was very wrong. Neiswinder's over-reaction to her mention of memory recovery was not consistent with someone who would be working alongside of Dr. Mitchell, unless Mitchell was something other than he portrayed himself to be.

Neiswinder concluded our "Family Counseling Session" early since he was obviously eager to obtain Kelly's written-out memories. Since the nurse had already turned them over to Dr. Mitchell, Neiswinder was empty handed in addition to again missing the magnitude of the conversation Kelly and I exchanged right in front of him.

The next week when I saw Kelly, we were taken through a series of electronically locked doors to a large dayroom where Neiswinder was to be joined by a nurse who could "maintain structure over our session." Kelly and I were seated apart. Our ability to communicate, like our love, knew no distance. Significant understanding passed between us. I realized that Kelly's circumstances were urgent, which compounded further when she told the nurse she had "bumped her head and couldn't remember anything anymore.” The words did not seem to be her own, and I started to rise from my chair to tend to her.

Suddenly I felt a familiar sensation overcome my body, rendering me weak and unable to stand. Harmonics. I knew the feeling from the past, and was aware that this Top Secret classified weaponry had technologically advanced to miniaturization the size of a remote control. The device could fit in a purse or a briefcase, and my brainstem was reverberating with its effects.

Neiswinder was leading Kelly from the room when awareness allowed for me to fight through the fog in my brain and stand. I wobbled over to the “nurse,” whose jaw had dropped in surprise. I backed her against the wall while I fumbled for the ID card hanging around her neck and said, “I won’t forget your name is…” Focusing was a strain, yet I was determined to read the name on her tag. “Huffaker.” I looked her in the eye. “If Kelly is hurt, I hold you responsible.”

“Kelly doesn’t want to see you anymore,” she said as she began unlocking the electronic doors to escort me out. “Your visitation is concluded.”

I knew our lives were in grave jeopardy, and considered the possibility that Kelly’s memories regarding Bush and the fact that he was in Nashville three times recently were connected. Presidential elections were coming up next month and the local press was looking eagerly for a Republican scandal. Even though I knew elections were rigged, I was also aware that Nashville was a focus of media attention since Tennessee Senator Al Gore was on the Presidential ballet as Bill Clinton’s running mate. Kelly’s memories regarding Bush had certainly surfaced at an inopportune time.

Mark was livid when he learned what had happened to Kelly and me at Vanderbilt, and he immediately took action. Juvenile Court Records prove that a battle of allegiances by Vanderbilt between Kelly and government ties commenced. The doors of the court, Dr. Mitchell, and Dr. Nurcum were locked as tight as Vanderbilt’s high security electronic doors. Neiswinder was immediately “retired” from his job as a therapist. And Mark and I struggled to survive the intensity of our precarious circumstances.

“I’m told that the information you remembered regarding NAFTA has the Bush Administration as concerned about it as they are about Kelly’s memories,” Mark informed me one morning as we sat outside drinking our coffee. “We need immediate public exposure to survive this. Unfortunately, the media is still caving into censorship and Linda Blood’s book isn’t due to be released yet.”

Linda Blood’s work on her book The New Satanists[4] was taking longer than anticipated, and we had hoped that its release through Walmart stores as contracted would blaze the trail through media censorship by now. Her work had, however, put us in touch with several international organizations concerned with Lt. Col. Aquino’s satanic activity that was emanating from US military bases worldwide. Still, these connections were military and Intelligence[5] level rather than public, and could not help us reach the public exposure we so desperately needed. I wondered how we could possibly survive long enough to reach the public with truth under the circumstances.

“I’m in communication with Perot’s[6] group through their mind control survivor’s underground,” Mark continued.

“Karyn?” I asked, referring to the survivor with whom we were in contact.

“No survivor is trustworthy until deprogrammed, and I’m not too sure about Karyn after speaking with her,” Mark answered. “I am in touch with Ross Perot’s sister, though, and she suggests we hand deliver a packet of information to them right away. Our previous attempts to send Perot information through the mail system failed and the documents apparently were confiscated. We’ll need to travel to his headquarters in Texas to deliver them personally this time. Besides, she has agreed to talk with me when we get there.”

“I thought Texas was Bush’s headquarters,” I commented. “Is Perot from there, too?”

“Perot is in Dallas and Bush is out of Houston. Their close proximity provided Perot a close up view on Bush that inspired him to run against him. He knows a lot about mind control, the CIA's corruption in the drug industry, and how elections are rigged. His extreme wealth bought him so much airtime on TV, though, that it is going to be difficult for them to slip this election past the pubic eye. He's causing problems and subsequently waking people up. This is a great opportunity for us to connect with a major movement against Bush's New World Order."

"It sounds good," I said apprehensively. "I like what Perot is saying, and the fact that he is running a secret underground for some mind control survivors. But I don't like the thought of going into Texas so close to elections!"

"Get used to the idea," Mark advised. "We're scheduled to speak in Houston on the day before elections."

"What?" I exclaimed.

"US Customs Agents, Border Guards, and local police are frustrated with the CIA slapping National Security on every drug bust they make at the Mexican border. They want to know why these criminals are going free. They also want to know more about mind control, because they realize the drug couriers they are busting are robotic, have superhuman strength, and suffer from amnesia. The information you've turned into Customs has given them their first insight into what is going on, and they want us to address a forum of agents and cops the first week in November. They opted to hold this seminar at election time believing Bush and Clinton would be too busy to interfere. Either way, we're invited to speak."

"Wow." I swallowed hard. "Whatever it takes to survive and make a difference for Kelly. At least its public exposure in the most effective area we can spread information. They need to know how the groundwork for NAFTA is rooted in drugs and corruption to equalize our economies for the New World Order. If the right people know about it, maybe they can stop the erosion of our economy before we reach third world status like Mexico, plus stop the CIA's War on Drugs from being launched against citizens."

“Working with law enforcement will only help our credibility,” Mark went on. “Credibility is all we’ve got, and we’ll need every bit of it to affect Kelly’s case. This conference where we’ll be speaking is sponsored by a national organization of local, state, and federal law enforcement from all across the country as well as from the US/Mexican border. This can only help our cause.”

I sipped my coffee and thought for a minute. “I’m not a public speaker,” I said, realizing my lack of professional speaking techniques. Presenting Kelly’s need to the Tennessee Legislature did not qualify me as a public speaker.

“Neither am I!” Mark chimed in. “I worked under a Top Secret Security Clearance for years because I could keep secrets and my mouth shut! Now I’m supposed to become a government whistleblower and tell all? This is hard for me, too, but we have no choice. It’s our only chance for survival according to our supporters with Intelligence I’ve been talking with. They also gave me a contact number for an underground newspaper in Florida called the Outpost of Freedom[7]. It is just now being formed to expose government corruption, and I’m going to write a story for them on mind control for their first issue. It is expected that the Outpost of Freedom will spawn similar underground sources of news for the growing Patriot movement in this country. With mainstream media censored from reporting truth and focused on social engineering propaganda, it is up to citizens who can still think free to arm each other with truth. Besides, maybe by writing this story it will make it easier to speak about it.”

“Public speaking can’t be too hard,” I consoled him. “Since it’s not about us, the focus will be on the information we present. Our challenge will be to present it in a way that makes them want to hear it and absorb it.”

“According to statistics, 50 things out of 100 are normally remembered, but 1000 points of a presentation out of 1000 can be remembered if it’s presented right.”

“Even if we present it right, can people retain it long enough to take action?”

“Memory retention is at an all time low due to social engineering,” Mark agreed. “But if people can think to ask the question, they must be waking up beyond social engineering expectations. This is a prime opportunity for us to begin sounding the alarm to wake up more people.”

“We need more than a whistle to blow,” I said, referring to the literal interpretation of ‘whistleblower.’ “This wake up call needs to resound around the world, and we can’t count on the media to amplify it. We have a challenge in front of us, but I’m betting we’ll succeed. I believe in humankind. I believe in truth.”

“Truth always prevails.” Mark swallowed the last of his coffee before going inside to start writing his article for the Outpost of Freedom.

Chapter 28
WHERE HAVE ALL THE CHILDREN GONE?

“Where have all the children gone?” was the title of Mark’s explicit and revealing article for the Outpost of Freedom. It would be some time yet before it was printed while this prototype for Patriot newspapers was organized and funded. Mind control was rampant throughout the private sector of the US, and many children were affected. Kelly’s case was among the first to surface in the courts, yet it certainly wasn’t the only one. Mark and I personally knew of hundreds.

Underground networks were rising up all across the country to deal with the devastation wreaked on society by the vast proliferation of MK Ultra mind control. Public outcry by citizens concerned with a failing justice system and corrupt government was censored from mainstream corporate media. Meanwhile, abused children were being returned to their handlers by court order for so-called ‘Reasons of National Security’. This gross injustice caused the formation of numerous reputable organizations like Believe the Children, V.O.I.C.E.S., and Justus Unlimited.

Underground networks such as Faye Yeager’s[1] provided temporary safe havens for survivors fleeing abusers and/or the corrupted justice system. The government’s attempts to stop Faye Yeager through prosecution and public persecution only fueled the determination of survivors and their supporters to keep vital undergrounds such as Faye’s in tact.

More and more of these undergrounds were contacting Mark and me seeking tips on how to help the numerous dissociative survivors fleeing their abusers. Many were walking right back into their abuse base since they could not maintain conscious memory of who they were running from. Some were murdered. Our phone rang round the clock with desperate pleas for help.

One mother Mark and I met with, Bernadette MacArthur, had used the underground networks in conjunction with fleeing the country with her five precious children. Four of them reportedly had been horribly abused, and when the corrupt court system threatened to perpetuate it, Bernadette, pregnant, fled all the way to Turkey with them in 1988. Brilliantly maneuvering through Europe and Mexico, she slipped back into the US and Faye Yeager's underground in 1989. Determined to surface and 'normalize' her children's lives, Bernadette appeared on national TV and began speaking out. To further their safety, she then joined the Sheriff's Department and worked her way up the chain of command achieving the rank of Major. This extraordinary mother went to extremes to protect her children and ensure their freedom! Additionally, Bernadette taught Sheriff's Department personnel how to identify mind control survivors, satanic victims, and occult ritual sites. Her highly acclaimed accomplishments paved the way for others, while providing a backdoor into the undergrounds for those on the run. Unbeknownst to her, Bernadette saved the minds and lives of countless survivors while saving her own children.

Another validated mind control victim struggling to become a survivor frantically contacted us from Switzerland. She claimed to work for the UN, and was highly intelligent. She sought coping skills to help her think to survive. Victims of mind control cannot think to escape, nor think to survive, and require outside intervention. They must be free of their abusive families and controlling environments in order to become survivors, and this particular victim was no exception. We never heard from her again. Many died in their struggle to break free of the chains that imprisoned their minds.

I felt fortunate to have survived my White House/Pentagon level MK Ultra mind control existence to be lovingly lifted from it by Mark. Without him, I could not have reclaimed control over my own mind and life, and neither Kelly nor I would be alive. Where there is life, there is hope. Mark's and my hope for Kelly's rehabilitation fueled our determination to make a difference for her at all costs. Now that I could think to be the nurturing, loving mother I knew myself to innately be, forced separation from my daughter was intolerable.

The desperation I felt was reverberating throughout the country and world in the hearts and souls of parents and their children with similar plights. It was as though we emerged from the fires of hell blazing a trail to freedom, and found ourselves in a world frozen in fear and apathy. Humankind had been left out in the cold, numb to the reality of government secrets that were slowly eroding the foundation of life. The shining light of truth began to melt away decades of social engineering, superstition, ignorance, and lies. But the process was slow, and survivors in desperate need of immediate help and understanding turned in panic to the undergrounds.

The trail weaving through Karyn's Underground led us to Perot's sister and our scheduled meeting with Presidential Candidate H. Ross Perot. As we drove up to his glass skyscraper empire in Dallas to deliver the information packet as requested, Mark and I noticed armed guards on the rooftops, in the bushes, behind the trees, and everywhere we turned. They appeared ominously robotic, carried rifles and machine guns, and patrolled their post like those who guard the White House in DC.

"You'd best wait in the car while I deliver this," Mark said, obviously concerned for our safety. "I don't know how long I'll be since I'm supposed to meet with Perot's sister, but I doubt it will be long. I hope we didn't waste our precious gas money driving here because this isn't looking good."

"Maybe he has all these guards because elections are next week and his family's life was actually threatened," I offered as Mark parked the car.

"These guys look programmed," Mark told me, confident in his assessment. "In which case I know how to handle them, so you just sit tight. They'll be interested in what I'm doing, and will only watch you in the car from a distance. You'll be perfectly safe as long as you stay right here."

I watched as guns pointed toward Mark when he emerged from the car and strode towards the elaborate entrance with the packet in hand. It was only a moment before I saw him walking through the green glass catwalk that connected the entrance building to Perot's headquarters. A guard walked across the roof directly above him, keeping his weapon trained on Mark through the glass ceiling until he disappeared from my view into the headquarters.

I felt eyes on me while I waited, and noted several guards across the perfectly manicured landscape watching my every move just as Mark predicted. This place looked more like Emerald City in the Wizard of Oz movie than it did campaign headquarters for Ross Perot. With armed guards robotically marching everywhere, I began to wonder just who Ross Perot really was and if his underground was another catch net for mind control survivors rather than an escape.

I wasn't alone with my thoughts long. Mark soon emerged from the building, smiled as he casually saluted the guards at the door, and got back in the car. "Done," he said, starting the car and backing it out of the parking space in seemingly one movement. "They have our information and we're out of here."

"What happened?" I was curious.

"I'll tell you," he said, saluting the gate guards as we left the premises, "as soon as we are out of range of the monitors." He pulled off his necktie, tossing it in the back seat. After a few more minutes, he began. "Those guys appear to be Special Forces[2], which made it easy for me to deal with them. I spoke their language and knew how to avoid setting off their alarms. Still, I was scanned and screened on the elevator while I rode it up to Perot's office. When the doors opened, there were a dozen machine guns pointing at me. I said, 'at ease' and walked across the room to Perot's secretary, who took the information. Apparently, she was expecting me, and thanked me by name for the packet. When she didn't mention a meeting, I didn't either. I just got back on the elevator and left."

"What do you think Perot will do with the information?"

"Well, he obviously already knows about mind control," Mark said. "I'm betting we don't ever hear from him or Karyn's Underground again."

We didn’t. But then, we weren’t waiting for a response. We were too busy struggling to survive to ensure Kelly’s safety. My persistent attempts to see Kelly were continuously met by locked doors. I knew that Commissioner Grunow, despite his threats to keep me from Kelly, was not the keeper of the keys. This was much bigger than he.

November 1st, Mark and I packed up our documents and paperwork and drove to Houston for our presentation at the National Cult Intervention Network seminar for law enforcement. Also presenting information that intermeshed with ours was the National Crime Commission Information Clearing House for Police, and Greg Reid’s Youthfire.

A survivor of incest and occultism himself, Greg Reid had cause to be aware of mind control ops that transported our nation’s missing blonde haired blue-eyed children over the Mexican border and on to various Arab destinations[3]. Every border guard, Customs official, and police officer in attendance was aware of this mind control ring. Photos of Columbian and Saudi private jets full of traumatized children were in abundance, yet “National Security” prevented them from bringing the perpetrators to justice.

Greg Reid's highly structured and documented efforts featured his search for abductee Johnny Gosch, as well as his success in freeing a group of small children from a holding pen near the border- only to be rebuked with “National Security.” Everyone agreed that “National Security” was threatening the security of our nation and its children, and this seminar was intended to discover why. By sharing information, the problem was clarified and solutions formulated.

While speakers in accordance with standard law enforcement tactics presented “just the facts,” it was the discussions between presentations that furthered understanding. The very concept of pedophilia was as difficult to grasp for hardened law enforcement officials as it is for the average person, despite the fact that they saw the widespread devastation. Having grown up in an environment saturated with pedophiles, and having been around high-level politicians and pedophiles such as George Bush, I shared my insight into their justifications.

Multi-generational sexual child abuse is such a common cause of the proliferation of pedophilia that Hitler/Himmler research focused on this genetic trait for mind control purposes. While I personally could not relate to the idea of sex with a child, I had parents and brothers and sisters who did. I still believe that George Bush revealed today's causation of the rapid rise in pedophilia through justifications I heard him state. The rape of a child renders them compliant and receptive to being led without question. This, Bush claims, would cause them to intellectually evolve at a rate rapid enough to "bring them up to speed" to grasp the artificial intelligence emanating from DARPA. He believed that this generation conditioned with photographic memory through abuse was necessary for a future he foresaw controlled by technology.

Since sexual abuse enhanced photographic memory while decreasing critical analysis and free thought, there would ultimately be no free will soul expression controlling behavior. In which case, social engineering was underway to create apathy while stifling spiritual evolution. Nevertheless, to short sighted flat thinking individuals such as Bush, spiritual evolution was not a consideration anyway. Instead, controlling behavior in a population diminished by global genocide of 'undesirables' would result in Hitler's 'superior race' surviving to claim the earth. Perceptual justifications such as these that were discussed at the Bohemian Grove certainly did not provide me with the complete big picture. It did, however, provide a view beyond the stereotyped child molester in a trench coat that helped in understanding the vast crimes and cover-ups being discussed at this seminar in Houston.

"Why do you believe the New World Order elite are *un*concerned with humanity's spiritual evolution when Catholic Jesuits are clearly involved?" A weasely-looking man in a black trench coat posed the question to me between speakers. He claimed to be a spy associated with Mexico's former President dela Madrid. Mark and I were scheduled to speak next, as soon as this lunch break concluded. Mark watched this uninvited guest closely, as did every other cop and Fed in the room, from the podium while he arranged his documents before speaking.

"Just like good people don't think to look for the kind of criminal activity being discussed here today, the powers-that-be cannot think to consider the human spirit," I answered. "They are following a road map established by a computer, and spirituality is not part of its programming."

He smiled and took a drink of his coke, his black eyes snapping. "But we are talking about Jesuits, not New World Order elite. Jesuits are Catholic monks who live only in the spirit."

"You said yourself that the Jesuits are involved with the New World Order elite in your initial question," I reminded him. "And the New World Order is computer driven. Rather than listen to church rhetoric, research for yourself to learn that Jesuits, the Intelligence arm of the Vatican, are the same ones who supported Hitler. There is a faction of Catholics dedicated to furthering the church's political agenda that believes they will be the one world church in the New World Order. Clearly that is not about spirituality. Things are seldom so black and white."

He chuckled, his snapping black eyes throwing sparks of genuine laughter while he slapped his knee. "That's exactly what dela Madrid told me!"

"Did he tell you why he masquerades as a lizard as well?" I said, doubting his sincerity.

"He's no more a lizard than he was a President," he said, smiling. "It's all an illusion." Quinde reached into the pocket of his trench coat to pull out his wallet. All eyes were instinctively on him, making sure he didn't pull a weapon. Everyone was armed at this seminar. Even Mark, who knew I was capable of handling Quinde regardless of his agenda, stood poised for an instant. Thumbing through a stack of various business cards tall enough to match any occasion, he chose one and handed it to me.

"Herbert Quinde," he said, like I was supposed to believe it. "Miguel dela Madrid sent me in to talk with you."

The details he provided regarding dela Madrid indicated to me that either he knew him well or was actually sent in by him as he claimed. He voiced sexual details that only dela Madrid and I would know, and then said; “he knows you wouldn’t think to say anything bad or personal about him.” He attempted to lock in his message with keys to my old programming that had long since been deprogrammed and diffused.

Unaffected and eager to present the facts as previously planned, I joined Mark near the podium. Everyone took a seat, pulled out their notepads and pens, and listened attentively while Mark spoke. He armed them with specifics on how to identify and handle mind controlled drug curriers, how mind control creates seemingly superhuman strength that knows no bounds, and why ‘national security’ was hindering their efforts to prosecute.

When Mark finished speaking, I provided background on how I was conditioned for MK Ultra to work on a White House/Pentagon level during the Reagan-Bush Administration. By understanding my experience, they gained insight into the components of mind control, as well as who at the political top was sanctioning this criminal activity. They already were acutely aware of Bill Clinton’s cocaine operations, and knew that this so-called ‘election’ was only an illusion of change. Their point of reference for understanding the details Mark and I presented allowed for advanced discussions that effectively armed them for more than a ‘war on drugs.’

In addition to the information presented on mind control and CIA drug ops, I explained how I had been used for the groundwork of NAFTA. Quinde’s mouth dropped when I revealed details regarding dela Madrid that he believed he had silenced, and I watched his paradigm shift when he realized I had truly been deprogrammed. Many New World Order secrets and personal reputations were staked on the belief that I could not be deprogrammed to remember that which I was supposed to forget, and the reverberations from my apparent recovery unnerved many MK Ultra perpetrators. In addition to realizing their secrets were no longer safe, many gained an expanded view of their Need-to-Know that caused them to consider the strength of the human spirit and re-evaluate their goals. Obviously artificial intelligence from DARPA and Sandia Laboratory, despite the vast intellect and technology involved, was lacking a human element. Those at the seminar who risked their lives every day on the front lines of the so-called ‘war on drugs’ were strengthened in their resolve after gaining a clearer view.

Most important to me personally, was knowing that Kelly was safer for our efforts. Law enforcement in attendance from Louisiana would be watching Wayne Cox, and support from various police organizations nationwide concerned for the welfare of children would only prove helpful. The flow of America’s children across the border to New World Order destinations was understood, and slowed with exposure. Shining the light of truth on secret activities always forces change. And positive change through public awareness remains the ultimate justice.

After the seminar on the night of elections, Mark and I watched the foreseen results on our motel tv while Clinton was ushered in as President. Bush’s acknowledgement of his so-called defeat was brief, yet revealing to those with eyes to see and ears to hear truth. “I’m going hunting early this year,” he announced.

Chapter 29
SODOM AND GOMORRAH

An abrupt knock on the door of our hotel room woke us up early the next morning. “Open up!” A voice shouted. “Sheriff’s Department!”

Mark relaxed and shoved his pistol back under his pillow, grabbed a robe and opened the door.

“You’re going to get yourself killed doing that shit,” he told Deputy Dave. Dave Rossi, who had hosted the NCIN conference, smiled.

“I needed to catch you before you left town,” he said. “I’ve got to talk to you. What you and Cathy know needs to be heard in a community in Northern California where I’m working on a case. It involves mind control, and the whole town is devastated. My phones are monitored, so I don’t want to talk about this by phone.”

“We’ll meet you in the coffee shop in twenty minutes,” Mark told him, closing the door.

“Twenty minutes?” I flung the covers from Mark’s side of the bed inviting him back in. “I suppose that’s enough time.”

“No it’s not,” Mark argued playfully. “We need to be dressed, packed, and out of here by then. And I’ve got to take a shower and wake up.”

I jumped out of bed and ran for the shower ahead of him. “Join me if you want to,” I called.

Twenty minutes later we were downstairs, our hair still damp, tossing our bags in the car. Deputy Dave walked up, balancing three large coffees and a sack of donuts.

“Let’s talk right here,” he suggested. “Everybody in the coffee shop knows me. This is important.” We took the coffee and leaned against the car, enjoying the morning sun.
Deputy Dave reached in his pocket and produced a photograph of children and their parents picketing outside of the Marin County Daycare Board. Their signs read, “Why does the FBI protect Aquino?”

“Where is Marin County?” I asked. My geography was still atrocious.

“Near the Presidio[1],” Deputy Dave began. Aquino was stationed at the Presidio army base, and by 1987 had been under criminal investigation for sexually abusing children in the daycare. The Presidio Daycare scandal was infamous, and even the appeals judge refused to esponge Aquino’s criminal child abuse record[2]. “Aquino’s on the Marin County Daycare Board.”

“How can Marin County justify having a suspected satanic child molester on their board?” I was astounded.

“Obviously the children in the area are wondering the same thing,” Deputy Dave answered. “The whole town is in a daze. Satanism, child molestation, missing children, mind control, injustice through the courts. I’m telling you, these people need help just to cope with the PTSD. You could give them coping skills, Mark. And the information you have could clarify why cover-up is so prevalent and why Aquino is allowed on their Daycare Board. Understanding might help them survive and solve their nightmare.”

“I’m told Aquino owns the building that houses the Marin County Daycare Board,” Mark injected.

“The Presidio is pretty close to the Grove[3],” I said, the picture becoming even clearer from my perspective.

“So are Petaluma and Santa Rosa where these children in the photo are from,” Deputy Dave said. “The case I’m working on involves mind control of a child who claims Aquino abused her. She has stun gun prod marks and claims to have been sexually assaulted at Bohemian Grove. And that’s just the beginning. Another mother, Denise Beaumont, has a lawsuit before the Santa Cruz Grand Jury regarding molestation of her daughter and government cover-up. Her case includes a massive letter writing campaign reaching out to many of the same people in DC that you did, from Louis Sullivan at the Department of Human Services to the White House.”

I thought a moment. “The vicinity around the Grove would feel safer to the attending Dignitaries with the people traumatized and controlled.”

“ I talked with Denise this morning, and she said that she would gladly devote her time and resources to setting up your speaking engagement if you will agree to it. What do you think?”

Mark thought about it a moment. “We’re not public speakers, nor are we authorities.”

“No one knows it all, Mark,” Deputy Dave told him. “But between you and Cathy, you know more than most.”

“I’m not a therapist. Offering recovery from PTSD would be practicing without a license.”

“The fact that you obviously helped Cathy reclaim her mind is widely known. Mental health professionals don’t even know what ritual abuse is, let alone mind control and recovery from it. People respect your insight. I’m not asking you to be a therapist; I’m just asking you to share what you know. If you were on the front lines of a war and saw your buddy bleeding, you’d help stop the flow of blood without consideration to whether or not you had a medical license. This is no different. If you saw what I’ve seen in that community, you wouldn’t even give it a second thought before helping. These people are devastated.”

Mark and I exchanged looks, communicating a decision that didn't need words. "OK. When we talk on the phone, we'll talk around this subject and mislead anyone who may be listening through phone taps. Cathy and I are already broke financially, so someone will need to cover our expenses."

"That will be arranged. There is a local TV news reporter who is active on this case. I'll put her in touch with you. Her name is Carol Frank."

We finished our coffee, and thanked Deputy Dave for hosting us in Houston. "Thank you, for speaking. I know my life has changed, and the way everyone else is talking, their lives changed, too. Kelly's picture is on the wall of my office where it will stay as long as it takes to secure her freedom."

Mark and I got in the car to begin our long drive back to Tennessee. "A whole community devastated?" Mark said to himself as though grasping the size of the problem.

"I thought the whole world was like the environment I came out of," I said, "until you came along and rescued Kelly and me from it."

"So why drag you back into it?"

"You're not dragging me, we're doing this together by choice. Big difference. These people should know they are being heard and understood.

That is their first step toward hope, and people need hope to live. How well I know!" I smiled.

"There are a lot of people pinning their hopes on this so-called change of Administration," Mark said.

"They need to base their hope on truth, not illusion."

"Hope, Arkansas produced an illusion," Mark smiled at the irony. "The media has made a big deal out of the fact that Bill Clinton is from Hope, Arkansas."

"This 'appearance of change' was most likely planned prior to when I first heard about it in 1984[4]. It was hard enough for me to grasp the concept of Clinton being a governor since I perceived him as a drug lord. Now he's President? I know for a fact that Hillary wears the pants in their relationship, and their relationship is more like business partners than husband and wife. I don't believe she'll take a back seat to him even for the public eye. She'll redefine the role of 'First Lady'."

"She's not a lady anyway," Mark said. "She's more man than he is."

I laughed. "Homosexuality will undoubtedly rise in this Administration. I don't know how they can hide their sexual preferences from the public eye."

"The media can spin any illusion they want to," Mark reminded me. "Besides, they have a child. They must at least be bisexual."

"Just because my sexual experience was with Hillary doesn't mean that's all there is to her," I agreed.

"And homosexual males don't engage in the kind of oral sex Bill did with you, either," Mark furthered his point. "So why do you say homosexuality will rise during their Administration[5]?"

"Because they both openly support it," I said having witnessed/experienced both of them engaged in homosexual activity[6].

"You correctly predicted the rise of heroin while Bush was in office," he said.

"And people still don't think to ask why his Yale Skull and Bones fraternity name is 'Poppy.' Since Clinton is more heavily involved in cocaine ops than he is Bush's heroin ops[7], the price of coke and crack will probably drop in this country while availability soars. "

Mark agreed. “The Presidency switched parties all right, from a heroin party to a coke party with all the same players involved.”

“Except for the kids Bush used and abused,” I said. “Neither Hillary nor Bill believe in pedophilia. From my point of view, that is a major difference between the Bushes and Clintons. Other than that, they’re playing the same DARPA-Sandia Labs computer game.”

I reflected on my experience at Swiss Villa that I had deprogrammed and written out in detail. In typical criminal fashion, Bush intended to covertly videotape Clinton having sex with a child as blackmail backup. Despite the friendship and New World Order goals they shared, they had their differences. The biggest difference I had cause to witness between the Bushes and Clintons was that neither Bill nor Hillary believed in sexually abusing children. Bush had delivered his most convincing ‘justification’ speech while offering to share Kelly with Bill, anchoring it to Clinton’s Order of the Rose allegiances. The idea of compromising him through blackmail had offended Clinton, yet he was obviously disgusted with Bush for attempting to sell him on “evolutionary justifications” as to why he should be sexually active with Chelsea, if not Kelly. This conflict between the two ran much deeper than sexual preference. Where Bush adhered to pedophilia as the means to an “evolutionary” end, the Clinton’s voiced belief in genetic engineering and cloning as the means to the same end.

“The conflict of sexual interest between the Bushes and Clintons doesn’t preclude the fact that they share the same end to their means,” I commented. “I wonder if Clinton’s perception of genetic engineering and cloning over sexual abuse and mind control is simply the next step in DARPA’s generated plan. Neither route to so-called ‘evolution’ deals with the strength of the human spirit.”

“When people learn what is behind aliens, cloning, and mind control, they’ll know what on earth is going on,” Mark said. “With truth comes understanding, hope and solutions. One thing is for sure; this Administration will continue to divert people’s attention as far away from that reality as humanly possible. It’s still up to the people to do their due diligence and embrace the truth in order for necessary changes to occur.”

“Our responsibilities just expanded,” I added. “This next speaking engagement should result in a lot of good people waking up to reality, finding their inner strength, and reverberating the message. I just hope change can come in time to help Kelly.”

We rode in silence.

When we arrived back in Nashville, Kelly’s circumstances hadn’t changed. Vanderbilt was still battling its allegiances between the DIA and the welfare of the children in the court system. Neiswinder had officially turned in his resignation, Mitchell was nowhere to be found, Nurcum refused to speak to us, and my attorney didn’t know anything about Kelly’s well being.

Mark’s and my letter writing campaign had yet to overtly impact Kelly’s case, although it had put us in touch with hundreds of similar cases across the nation. This resulted in significant networking with mental health and law enforcement professionals, investigative media personnel, and numerous organizations that were springing up all over the country. While mainstream media remained silent on the issue of ritual abuse and mind control, the people were abuzz with information sharing.

Our upcoming speaking engagement in Santa Rosa, California put us in touch with numerous concerned professionals and parents. As our public profile increased, efforts to contain us rose proportionately. After the NCIN conference in Houston, Mark and I were networked with the so-called Missing Children’s Foundation and it’s founder Roy Stephens. Mark quickly discovered Stephen’s association with attorney Tim Stone and quickly sidestepped all connections[8]. Tim Stone had been attorney for Jim Jones of the Jonestown massacres where CIA mind control and cover-up prevailed. Mark’s ability to navigate us through CIA containment experts in these precarious times strengthened his public image to the point where he was considered a measuring stick indicator of who was honest and who was corrupt. Mark did not appreciate his fast growing reputation since he preferred a low profile. At the same time, I was excited at the prospects of the public choosing a man of integrity, justice, peace, and love to lead them from the dark.

On a personal level, my attorney continued to blindly accept “legal” directions in Kelly’s case as they unfolded. She informed me, “Nashville’s new mayor, Phil Bredeson, organized a new child welfare oversight group called A.C.C.T. They are meeting tomorrow to discuss Kelly’s case and we need to be there.”

At least I would be able to find out something about Kelly. I had not been permitted to see her nor speak with her since the harmonic incident at Vanderbilt. This was the longest, by far, that I had ever been forced apart from her with no communication and my heart ached desperately to ensure her well-being.

The plan of care drawn up by A.C.C.T. was encouraging. On paper it at least appeared as though their focus was on Kelly and that their intentions to reunite Kelly and me were genuine. Placement for Kelly was being actively pursued in an effort to free her from Vanderbilt Psychiatric. After Kelly reported CIA drug ops to Dr. William Mitchell, she was reportedly subjected to high tech means of affecting her brain activity in an effort to “erase her memory entirely.” According to A.C.C.T.’s reports, this resulted in Kelly’s above average intelligence to plummet to what they termed “learning disabled[9].” I was devastated by the news. Still, I was forbidden to see or speak with my daughter.

“If you continue to hopelessly grieve, “ Mark advised, “you won’t be helping Kelly. You’ve got to turn negatives into positives in order to relentlessly persist and give voice to Kelly’s needs. I suggest you find a way to turn your grief into motivation, and let your love for her carry you forward for her sake.”

Mark’s wisdom pulled me through my depression, and I relied on my strength of spirit to renew my energy and hopes. This battle wasn’t over, and like I had told Kelly, “Its not over ‘til we win.”

My renewed strength never faltered when I met with my attorney the next week and she told me, “You are supposed to be paying child support. The cost of Kelly’s court case and therapy is in the millions of dollars, and you are responsible for paying it or you face jail time.”

“Pay it with what?” I asked. Mark and I barely had enough money for gas to drive to her office to be told that. “And why should I have to pay for being separated from my daughter while she is abused by the justice and mental health systems? This is absurd.”

“Absurd or not, it is a court order.”

I went upstairs to see Scott Rosenburg. “I’m the one the court has ordered to prosecute you for the money, and I refuse to do it. It’s against the law. The judge is in violation of several laws by ordering me to it. Don’t worry about this,” he assured me. “I know you have your hands full with Kelly’s dire circumstances right now. It will be months before this issue is addressed in court, and I already have my paperwork in order to stop this nonsense. It is obvious to me and others concerned with this case that someone high up in politics wants to silence you and Kelly, and anyone who supports you.”

January 25, 1993 a fire broke out in the Stahlman Building one floor beneath Rosenburg’s office. Arson was suspected[10]. Although files were destroyed, Rosenburg was uninjured. Around the same time, he also narrowly escaped serious injury in a severe automobile accident involving his family. Circumstances were suspicious. Rosenburg’s determination to positively impact Kelly’s case only rose.

February 3, 1993, Mark’s article “Where Have All the Children Gone” was printed in The Outpost of Freedom and spread across the nation the same day we were to speak in Santa Rosa, California. When we disembarked from our airplane in San Francisco, an unlikely, disheveled character holding a sign with our names on it greeted us, “Welcome to Sodom and Gomorrah.”

Chapter 30
MARIN COUNTY, CALIFORNIA

“Carol Frank sent me,” the wide-eyed young man said as we tossed our luggage in the trunk of his car. “I’ll be driving you to Petaluma, and am grateful for the opportunity to talk with you on the way.”

He pulled into San Francisco’s bumper-to-bumper traffic. “The Petaluma Parks and Recreation Building is reserved and set up for your speaking engagement tonight. Since residents from Santa Rosa are also coming in to hear you, we placed loud speakers outside for those who can’t get in the building. You are needed here, and I’m proud to be the first to thank you for traveling all this way to help our community.” He blinked his tears away. “My parents sexually abused me, my Catholic church ritually abused me, and I don’t remember what happened to me in Viet Nam. Yet it’s not for me that I’m so grateful you’re here. It’s for the children. There is still hope for them.”

“We have a hotel room reserved for you that adjoins Dave Rossi’s room,” he continued. “He arrived a few hours ago. I can take you straight to your room, or we can stop by Carol’s apartment first. She wants to talk with you before the event begins.”

Carol Frank’s apartment was in an old building in a wealthy residential area of Petaluma. The young, blonde haired blue-eyed beauty welcomed us warmly. Carol had just returned home from work and was still dressed in her TV news attire. Munching on a carrot stick, she offered us a cup of tea.

“I first learned about Aquino from a concerned mother in Santa Rosa who called the television station with one of the most horrific stories I’ve ever heard. You’ll meet her. Her name is Denise Beaumont and she arranged most everything for this event. Anyway, I began investigating and found out how widespread pedophilia and satanism actually are! It’s not limited to poor hill folk or a lone stranger on a playground like I thought; the richest, most influential people are involved. We even have a judge here in Marin County that is rumored to be a satanist! The more I looked, the more I learned that what I really didn’t want to believe was real.” Carol’s blue eyes widened as she leaned forward to whisper, “I found out its happening right here in my own back yard! My father, who is Air Force Intelligence, lives around the corner. When I told him what I discovered, he advised me to forget about it!”

Carol was obviously suffering from PTSD, as was the fellow she had sent to pick us up from the airport. Mark was providing both of them with coping skills as I excused myself to use the bathroom. As I walked through Carol’s apartment, I couldn’t help noticing that her “own backyard” was a public graveyard. I shuddered.

When we arrived at our hotel room later that afternoon, Mark told me he had noticed the graveyard, too. “No matter how you look at it, that is gruesome,” he said. “It’s not as bad as having learned about her father working for the Air Force Intel, though. We had best use extreme caution while we’re here.”

I slipped out of my travel clothes to shower while Mark unpacked our bag to retrieve the clothes we would wear for speaking that evening. There was a knock at the door, and I grabbed a towel and ran for the bathroom as Deputy Dave identified himself.

“Don’t shoot!” he hollered. “It’s me!”

“Who’s ‘me’?” Mark hollered back, as if he didn’t know.

“You’re Mark!” Deputy Dave laughed. “Unlock the door between our rooms from your side, and I’ll come in through there”

“You’re the cop, you pick the lock,” Mark said, unlocking the door and swinging it open.

“They only taught us to bust doors down.” Deputy Dave walked in, greeting Mark warmly. “Let’s leave the door open between us. I’ve been tipped we’re going to have some trouble.”

Mark said, “I hate trouble. But I love readjusting trouble makers.”

We left for the Community Center as soon as we were dressed. People were already walking towards the Center in droves, every one of them appearing dazed and traumatized. “From the look in the eyes of the people, this looks like a war zone,” Mark commented.

“Or Haiti,” I said. To me, Marin County was reminiscent of Haiti[1] during Baby Doc’s reign with its slow, unblinking residents.

“You see why I wanted you to come here,” Deputy Dave solemnly agreed.

We found our way to the speaking podium, nodding a greeting towards the people already assembled. As we spread out our documents and information resources for anyone wanting copies, a young disheveled mother approached us. “I’m Denise Beaumont,” she said warmly embracing us. “Thank you for coming. These people are my friends and neighbors, and we desperately need help. I know you hold a key piece of this puzzle that could empower us to actually make a difference for the sake of the children. We’ve just been running in circles up until now, not knowing which way to turn.”

While Denise made last minute microphone adjustments and briefly spoke to the gathering crowd, Mark and I stepped outside to talk. We found ourselves in a crowd that was even larger than the one inside. “This community is reminiscent of the one I grew up in!” I exclaimed. “It seems everyone is affected[2].”

A tall, handsome young father holding his infant son strode up to us. “I can’t stay,” he announced, looking over his shoulder. “But I had come by here tonight to thank you for helping the rest of these people. They’re good people who don’t deserve what is happening. Neither does my son.” Tears silently poured down his rugged cheeks. “Maybe you can help them avoid what is happening to me right now. The court just ordered me to turn custody of my son over to my ex wife. ‘National security’ was invoked in the judge’s chambers. I couldn’t even testify that my ex is a practicing satanist, her boyfriend is CIA, or that I caught her fondling my son,” he hugged the beautiful, sleeping baby closer. “I refuse to let her abuse him any more. No one should have to leave their home, their job, and everything they know to disappear into an underground just to keep their child from being abused. Maybe by raising awareness you can prevent others from having to do what I’m doing tonight.” With his child clinging to him in a tight hug, Peter Tscherneff[3] turned and disappeared into the night.

Absolutely determined and motivated to make a necessary impact on Marin County, Mark and I went back into the building. Mark shared his knowledge and wisdom with compassion, and I watched as truth opened eyes to awaken people en masse. They learned the causation and the cure to trauma based mind control, and how to survive CIA cover-up.

When it was my turn to speak, the zombie-like appearance of the people was already lifting. I began sharing what I knew from behind the scenes of the New World Order regarding MK Ultra, including how Lt. Col. Michael Aquino’s so-called “power of satan” was actually a scientific formula involving a stun gun. I explained how compartmentalized memory is the mind’s sane defense to trauma too horrible to comprehend and how writing out memory changes the emotionally incomprehensible to logically comprehensible. The truth that set me free could free others from fear since people fear most what they don’t know. Armed with truth, Marin County could effectively take a stand for their children’s sake, my child’s sake, and the sake of humanity as a whole.

By the time we left the Petaluma Parks and Recreation Center, the people of Marin County were abuzz with information sharing and plans. The same people who had appeared traumatically dazed were now awake, aware, and motivated. While Deputy Dave helped us pack up the car to drive back to our hotel rooms, Mark took me aside to tell me about a man who had approached him while I was speaking.

“He flashed his Identifications of CIA/DIA/NSA[4] and asked to speak with me outside. He told me, ‘I’m here to deliver a message. I don’t know you, but I am aware of people who do know you that are betting you will succeed in getting the word out publicly on mind control.’ When I told him that National Security has already been invoked on this case, he said, ‘they always do that. Just don’t give law enforcement any cause to come after you or contain you. Never use a courtroom as a forum. There are a lot of people behind the scenes who applaud you for what you’re doing and are keeping a close eye on everything. Mind control is much bigger than most people could imagine.’ We exchanged other pertinent facts, then he vanished into the night.”

“That was kind of him to share support and encouragement like that,” I said, feeling the gravity of our circumstances.

Physically exhausted and emotionally drained, Mark and I rode in silence while Deputy Dave talked excitedly as he drove us back to our hotel. “You accomplished more with this community than I dreamed you could, and my hopes and expectations were high,” he said. “It looks to me that this community is being socially engineered and controlled to ignore the atrocities emanating from Bohemian Grove and through Aquino and the Presidio. Now that the people know they can’t count on their self-appointed so-called ‘elected’ official for help and change, they can think to refuse to follow them.”

“When people lead, leaders follow,” I commented as I so often did.

When we got back to our hotel room, our door was open. Mark and Deputy Dave immediately drew their weapons, working in synchronization to locate the intruder. Right behind Mark was always the safest place for me, and I followed him until both hotel rooms were cleared. Mark motioned for me to stay put on the bed while he followed Deputy Dave who was effortlessly climbing out the window. Several minutes later, they returned, discussing the CIA intruder who they learned fled his room two doors down after ransacking ours. Assuming our room was bugged, Deputy Dave clicked on the TV while he and Mark talked. Ironically, a documentary depicting Barry Seal's CIA drug running was airing, and was right at the point where his fate was sealed for murder in Arkansas

A sudden knock on the door prompted Mark and Deputy Dave to draw their guns again and assume defensive positions. It was William Jasper of the John Birch society.

"I just stopped by to give you a copy of my book Global Tyranny Step by Step[5] since it ties in with what you are saying." William Jasper continued, "And to thank you for having the fortitude to speak out on mind control."

"Come in," Mark said, gesturing him in.

"Everybody else is," Deputy Dave muttered under his breath as he shoved his weapon into his holster.

William Jasper walked in. "I can see how you've survived," he commented while Mark put his gun up, too.

Before we could all sit down, there was another knock on the door. Deputy Dave rolled his eyes, sighed, and drew his weapon again while Mark did likewise and answered the door. A few locals asked if they could come in for a minute.

"We won't stay. God knows you've done so much already." A tall gentleman said. Behind him, we saw Carol Frank among the group filing into our room. "I guess you know Carol," he kept talking nervously, "since she's covering your story for local TV news."

"I realize that you don't mean 'covering it' as in 'cover-up' like most TV news does," I smiled, attempting to lighten the mood with literal interpretation.

"Oh, Carol can't talk about my case on TV," he quickly answered. "If she could, I would get my daughter back. But Aquino's involved and Carol isn't allowed to talk about the Presidio or mind control. Or satanism. A Catholic priest abused my girl, you know. It all seems connected somehow."

I knew from my own experience how comforting it is just to have someone understand and care, and I found my energy rise to meet his need while Mark and Carol talked.

Another knock at the door interrupted us. "How did so many people find out where we were?" Deputy Dave complained as he drew his gun again.

"We followed you," the tall man answered matter-of-factly. Somehow it amused me since I wasn't under any illusions of safety just because Deputy Dave was with us.

"There's no place to run and no place to hide," I quipped. "Or at least so I've been told."

Five distraught women entered the room, somewhat unnerved by the arsenal displayed. "Why the guns?" one asked.

"We had an intruder and…" Deputy Dave began.

"Call the police!" another woman squealed, causing Deputy Dave to roll his eyes again. After all, he was dressed in full uniform.

"You can stay at my place," Carol kindly offered as though that would be safer. "I'll be driving you to the airport anyway after tomorrow's interview."

"What interview?" Mark asked.

"A friend of mine is flying in from LA," she explained. "He works with Prime Time, 20-20, and Sixty Minutes. When he learned that the local library would be stocking videotapes of your presentation tonight since it's so important to the community, that cinched it. He's on his way. He'll be here at 10AM, which will give you nearly four hours with him before we have to drive to the airport."

Mark and I exchanged looks, agreement passing between us. “Do you believe it will actually help spread the word on mind control?”

“Oh, yes,” Carol responded enthusiastically. “People who couldn’t see you tonight or were stuck outside are counting on the library to provide the tapes like they promised. Plus the library is offering copies of your documents and resources as well. They know the CIA is infamous for confiscating materials from libraries and tracking who reads what, so they are duplicating everything. Our library here is on the side of the people.”

“They are in my county, too,” William Jasper chimed in. “We’ll network with your library for copies. The people have grown weary of big government intervention, and the libraries are comprised of people just like us who refuse to tolerate it anymore.”

Mark elaborated on his question, “I was actually referring to tomorrow’s interview. Do you believe this reporter can actually get past Jack Valenti and national security media censorship to broadcast the interviews?”

“He fully intends to,” Carol said. “It may take awhile, but in the meantime the information will be right there for other reporters to educate themselves with. That way, when the time is right, they will be poised and ready to get the word out. It frees them to reveal other pertinent stories as well.”

“Like CIA cocaine ops?” someone asked. “That’s what my daughter was programmed for.”

Despite being tired from our long day, we talked on into the night offering hope and help to the desperate people who filled our room.

After only a couple hours of sleep, Mark and I arrived at our appointed rendezvous for our interview in a wealthy residential neighborhood. Intrusive black helicopters dotted the sky, circling the house for the next four hours while Mark and I answered questions for the well-informed reporter. “We can still use this footage,” he assured us, “despite the helicopter noise. Everyone is pretty much onto that form of harassment anyway, so it will only lend more credibility to your story.”

When we were through, the reporter asked me to step outside where it was a bit cooler away from the hot lights of the camera. Tears slid down his cheeks as he said, “I promise you your story will be told, but we have to overcome censorship first. So many people are affected by mind control these days that it shouldn’t be long until we penetrate media blackout. Until censorship is overcome, though, you can rest assured I’ll be doing all I can to publicly provide a point of reference for understanding this information when it is released.”

He blew his nose and wiped his eyes. “I know a lot of other reporters who are dedicated to this cause. They’ve covered numerous stories on satanism, missing children, corrupt judges, and CIA cocaine operations only to have them censored before they could be aired. We have archives of pertinent information to which these tapes we made today will undoubtedly be added. At least until censorship is overcome these videos will be educating other reporters.” He gestured toward the annoying helicopters still circling. “And we’re all tired of this nonsense!”

“I’m sorry for what has been done to you,” he told me with compassion, “and I assure you all men aren’t like your abusers. Most of us are more like Mark, although I must admit he is one of the most phenomenal human beings I have ever met. I’m glad he came along in your life and rescued you and your daughter. Not only for you, but for the thousands of others like you.” He was sobbing now. “Like I said, I promise you, your story will be told. It must be told or…” A helicopter circling especially close dipped down, drowning out his words and his sobs.

Mark walked up and informed me that two women who had just arrived needed to speak with both of us. After a warm hug, I left the reporter’s side and followed Mark back into the house. Both women were mothers of children caught up in mind control cover-up, one of which paralleled Kelly’s and my case. She, too, had volumes of documents and evidences whereby it was inexcusable that justice had not prevailed. The other mother conveyed a story that touched me so deeply it undoubtedly will continue to motivate me with reverberating passion forever.

This mother was very weak from the final stages of cancer and chemotherapy, and tears slid down her pale gray cheeks as she told me her story. When she reported sexual abuse of her three daughters, the local court system took custody of them. The children appeared dissociative identity disordered from their ordeal, yet were reportedly denied therapy and placed in Foster care "since the mother was dying anyway." When she finally was granted brief visitation with her precious daughters, they looked dazed and robotic with no memory of her or their sexual abuse. Mind control was apparent to this mother, and she struggled to give voice to their plight to no avail. She explained how love and concern for her children had kept her alive far longer than her doctors thought possible. She embraced me and said, "Now I can die in peace knowing that you are out there talking, raising awareness with the same passion for justice and love for children that I have. Thank you. Please keep talking. Please remember my daughters."

Carol Frank arrived to drive us to the airport with no time to spare. She sped through San Francisco rush hour traffic, only to have her car quit on the Golden Gate Bridge. We later learned that her gas tank had been sabotaged with sugar, and there was no fixing her vehicle. As cars whizzed past us, she miraculously coasted onto an exit ramp that sloped downhill. Fortunately for us, a taxicab seemingly appeared from nowhere and picked us up. We barely caught our flight, and the airplane's doors closed behind us. As Mark and I settled into our seats, each of us was acutely aware that we had just survived the unsurvivable once again. It seemed only moments ago when we were greeted with "Welcome to Sodom and Gomorrah." We left Marin County feeling ab*soul*utely committed with a purpose bigger than life to bringing the reality of mind control to light… for the children's sake.

Chapter 31
BEHIND YOUR EYES

My arms ached to hold my daughter, and my heart beat in rhythm to my sobs. Upon returning from Marin, I learned that Kelly had been transferred to the farthest point in the state of Tennessee without my knowing. “At least she is free of Vanderbilt Psychiatric Hospital and Dr. Mitchell,” Mark comforted me. “Charter Lakeside in Memphis is affiliated with the same chain of Charter Psychiatric Hospitals that Charter North in Alaska is. This one is even accredited with treating dissociative identity disordered children.”

Still, I reflected on how the mother in Santa Rosa dying of cancer found her daughters programmed and amnesic once she was finally granted visitation. I wondered if Kelly could think to remember me after her atrocious ordeal at Vanderbilt that rendered her “learning disabled.” It furiously frustrated me that I was forbidden visitation and was left to rely solely on the telepathic connection we shared to assess her condition. I sensed that our connection was intact and that she shared my frustration. Verbal confirmation of our telepathic sense would be as comforting to me as I was sure it would be to Kelly, though.

“We’ll go into town tomorrow to do all we possibly can toward reestablishing visitation,” Mark assured me. “Perhaps Edith Hammons can at least find out her condition through the Organized Victims of Violent Crimes.”

The next day, after exhausting every possible means of gaining visitation, we stopped our Post Office Box to collect our mail. Then we dashed over to the Copy Shop to see Billy.

“A fax just came in for you, Mark,” Billy announced when we walked in the door. “It looks really important.”

“Is it about Kelly?” I eagerly asked.

“I’m not sure,” Billy answered kindly. “It doesn’t appear to be about her, though, since it is from Canadian Special Intelligence Services.”

Mark read the fax while Billy continued. “It’s a shame you and Mark can’t do with Kelly what Peter Tscherneff did with his son.” Peter Tscherneff’s[1] story had recently reached national news since he was being criminally pursued for fleeing with his child. Peter was severely PTSDed when we spoke with him in Marin, which could cloud his judgment and significantly increase his chances of being caught. Still, Billy believed that publicity and subsequent public outcry could only result in protection for Peter’s son even if he were caught.

“I’m not so sure he’ll succeed,” I cautioned. “Besides, with Kelly’s programmed respiratory failure that wouldn’t be possible for us.”

“That’s not even the half of it,” Mark added, looking up from the fax he was reading. “Cathy and Kelly live under constant threat of being killed if they are together. I have been assured by trusted agents from different Intelligence Agencies that the threat is real since someone in DC fears their combined testimonies will bust the case wide open. It is also said that their abusers are hoping that Cathy will lose her mind being separated from Kelly.”

“They don’t know me,” I said, “or they would realize my love for Kelly only strengthens my resolve to logically prevail rather than emotionally collapse.”

“They’ve underestimated all of us,” Mark told Billy. “Their arrogance will ultimately be their downfall. The best thing we can do for Kelly is to incite public outcry by bringing her plight to light the way we are doing it now. ”

Shifting subjects to the fax he held, he asked Billy if he could use the Copy Shop fax machine to send a response immediately. “Of course,” Billy told him.

Mark scrawled a short response requesting phone contact later that evening. While he wrote, I read the fax, which was stamped “URGENT” in bold letters across the top. It said, “Greetings Mark. A recent development has prompted me to fax this to you. I have some information that will be of concern to you personally.” It contained pertinent contact information and a signature, along with a P.S. that read, “Please destroy this fax. VERY IMPORTANT.”

“Thanks,” Mark told Billy as he sent the fax “We’ll need to get home to catch this phone call when it comes in.”

Later that evening when the phone rang, Mark answered it. While I was anxious to know what it was all about, I had long since learned that eavesdropping was counterproductive to understanding what actually was transpiring. The imagination can fill in the blanks based on insecurities of the moment making what is heard misinterpreted. After a silent pause, I heard Mark cheerfully say, “Sure. Not a problem.”

Despite wanting to hear good news, I drew no conclusions and waited for Mark to share his information with me. “It seems we spooked Mikey Aquino out of his boots when we spoke in ‘his own backyard’ in Marin County,” he told me. “Canadian Special Intelligence Services caught wind of a hit[2] that has been put out on us as a result. Our friend with CSIS is quite concerned, and told me that Mikey is no longer welcome in Canada until the case against him is resolved. I assured him I’d take care of the problem on this end immediately.”

I was confident that Mark could avert the situation. He was light years ahead of Aquino intelligence-wise, and I looked forward to seeing him inevitably outthink him. We sat down to open our mail.

“Beth Vargo of Believe the Children sent us an encouraging letter,” I announced. Beth Vargo’s letters were always a source of strength and hope to me, and provided insight into in the magnitude of what was being done nationwide on behalf of abused children.

“Excellent,” Mark responded. “Here’s another letter from Gordon Thomas. He really appreciates what we’re doing to expose mind control, and would like us to send more documents. I only wish he wasn’t defending the Vatican.”

Gordon Thomas’ book Journey Into Madness[3] was bringing the reality of mind control to the forefront. It was rumored that he befriended singer Sinaid O’Conner during the course of her deprogramming and recovery from the extensive Catholic abuse that inspired her infamous Saturday Night Live[4] expose’ of same. “Isn’t it ironic,” I noted, “that Gordon Thomas lives in an old monastery rectory in Ireland?”

“It seems logical to me,” Mark answered. “What better place to gain a clear view and still be a Vatican apologist?”

“Well, the term ‘rectory’,” I pointed to the heading on Gordon Thomas’ stationary, “is a term that the students at Catholic Central[5] joked about. It was accepted knowledge that Priests sexually sodomized kids in the ‘rectory’, which to our literal minds was derived from ‘rectum’ and ‘wrecked ‘em.’ Likewise, we interpreted the terms ‘altered personalities,’ ‘altered states,’ and ‘alter boys’ as derived from sexual abuse on church altars. What an ironic twist that Gordon Thomas would expose such abuses from a ‘rectory’!”

“How widespread do you believe Catholics sexual abuse by Priests actually is?” Mark questioned.

“Enough that girls in Catholic uniforms are synonymous with pornography and sexual promiscuity,” I stated. “If sexual abuse of children by Priests isn’t common knowledge, it should be.”

“It will be,” Mark firmly stated. “Gordon Thomas and Sinaid O’Connor are among a growing number of people speaking out. Even Aquino is proving to be a significant downfall to the Catholic church rather than a recruiter for the Jesuits, CIA, and DIA[6] as intended."

I turned back to our stack of mail. "We have a letter here from a girl in California requesting specific information," I told Mark. "Her name is Sue Ford and she is asking for copies of my deprogramming notes." I frowned, "Reading them can't be healthy for a victim, which she claims to be, since she would still be highly suggestible. I wonder how she even learned about my notes?"

"It would have to be through mental health therapists since they're the only ones circulating that information," Mark responded. "Let me see that." I handed him her letter. He was only part way through reading Sue's letter when he pointed to the words 'Project Monarch.' "Yes, it has to be through mental health since so few people are familiar with that term. She obviously already knows of your past since she is using your language. 'Project Monarch' is proving to be an ideal way to track where highly suggestible victims are getting their information."

"Judging by her handwriting[7]," I observed, "she genuinely appears to be suffering from a dissociative disorder."

"But her verbiage is not conducive to mind control," Mark argued.

"I'll give her a call and see what this is about," I said, reaching for the phone.

A young man with perfect diction answered the telephone number provided on Sue's letter. "Rod Robinson," he cheerfully said.

"My name is Cathy O'Brien and I'm attempting to reach Sue Ford."

"Cathy!" Rod exclaimed as though he knew me. "Sue is right here. We've been looking forward to connecting with you. I am an author writing a fictional book on mind control that incorporates much of your information that Sue was able to obtain through her therapist."

“I was responding to her request for my deprogramming notes,” I began. “If she is a victim of mind control, though, it would not be in her best interest to have my notes. She needs to learn of her past from the inside out, not from outside input.”

“Oh, I agree,” Rod assured me. “She is a victim of incest, not mind control. When her therapist told her about you and your case, I became very interested since I learned about mind control in Hawaii. My father was stationed in Alaska as a pastor in the Air Force. Yes, he sexually abused me. But it was the mind control atrocities I witnessed and their extensive effects on the military that compelled me to write my book. Mind control must be exposed, and this fictional account I am writing isn’t about anyone specifically, it simply introduces the concept to people in a palatable way they can accept.”

“How do you happen to be in California with Sue Ford?” I asked.

“I met her on the beach in Kauai while she was vacationing and we became friends,” he explained. “We could relate to each other because of the incest we experienced. She has been diagnosed with MPD[8]. I’ve been so busy writing I haven’t had time to find out if I’m MPDed like I seem to be. Anyway, Sue supports my work as an author. When she returned to California to resume her therapy, I told her I’d come to visit. Well, here I am. What perfect timing, too, since we found you, a real survivor of mind control, with information I can use to anchor my book in reality. Thank you for surviving and having the heart to speak out!”

“It is love for my daughter that motivates me,” I said. “Her situation is deplorable.”

“It is for the children that I am writing this book,” Rod vowed. “That’s why I want enough accurate facts to incorporate into this story to actually help stop child abuse. Can you send the information Sue requested?”

“Yes,” I answered. “I will send it to your attention, though, as long as you promise me you won’t share such details with Sue right now. Even though she wasn’t likely exposed to mind control, she is still highly suggestible from abuse horrific enough to result in her current diagnosed condition. She has already picked up on the term ‘Project Monarch’ and used it in her letter, which validates her suggestibility. So please, Rod, make sure these documents I send you don’t hinder her personal progress.”

“Wow,” Rod’s voice quavered. “You have so much compassion after all you’ve been through that you still care about Sue when she didn’t experience a fraction of what you did.”

“She obviously experienced something bad if she is suffering from a dissociative disorder,” I responded. “Just because her experience and mine are not the same doesn’t make her trauma any less. Over the line is over-the-line regardless of the extent, and it sounds like you both may have crossed it.”

“I’ll find out someday,” Rod said. “If this book sells the way I believe it will, then I’ll take the money from it and see a therapist myself. I’m doing OK for now, though.”

“It sounds like it,” I said. “I really appreciate what you are doing to positively impact society with what you know. I’ll send the information right away so you can take it with you when you return to Hawaii.”

“I’ll be leaving next week,” Rod said, “but I hope we talk again sometime. I thank you from the bottom of my heart for all you are doing for the children’s sake. Sue thanks you, too.”

When we hung up, I went to fill Mark in on the conversation. He was deep into composing a note of response to Aquino’s attempt on our lives, though, and I certainly did not want to disturb him. A few minutes later he showed me the letter he had written.

“I know someone who will make sure Aquino reads this,” Mark said, smiling.

The letter began: “This is the voice in your head and the guy behind your eyes.” When I finished reading it, I became more excited than ever.

“There is no way he can ignore this!” I laughed.

“It will haunt him,” Mark assured me. “He should know better than to go into a battle of wits unarmed and without sufficient back-up. My friends are above his friends, and he will stand down.”

“It is too cool that you told him he is ‘nothing special” and just another ‘psych clone’ spinning deceit from ‘behind the wizard’s curtain’ that is being exposed.”

Mark sealed the letter in an envelope. “He’s ‘mind’ now that I’m behind his eyes.”

Chapter 32
HEALth

Mark made arrangements with one of his ‘guardian angel’ contacts to have his message personally delivered to Aquino, while I sat in a doctor’s office. Experience taught me to listen to my body rather than rely on a doctor to diagnose or tend to my health. This routine visit was simply for renewing the prescription I had to treat the gnawing pain in my belly. I felt fortunate to have survived the total digestive failure my abusers believed would kill me, and was pleased to know how the power of the mind can be used for healing. After all, since perpe-traitors could program spies to die before they could think to reveal secrets, the reverse could be used for maintaining or regaining health.

“Ms. O’Brien,” the doctor said solemnly. “I cannot in all good conscience write you a prescription for a simple drug like Anaspaz when you are, in fact, dying.”

“No, I’m not,” I began.

“Yes you are!” he argued. “Your lower intestine is dead and you soon will be, too.”

“I’ve heard this for years and know it is not true,” I told him. “All I want is a refill on my prescription to help calm the pain in my belly. Are you denying me relief?”

“Are you denying that you’re dying?” he retorted.

I couldn’t help but smile. “There are those who would like to believe I’m dying, and apparently you’re counted among them. But the fact is, regardless of anyone’s belief, I am alive and am simply asking for relief. Relief from your belief. Or relief while I die. Either way, all I want is a prescription.”

“Fine!” He scrawled out a prescription, ripped it from the pad, and tossed it to me. “Don’t bother coming back here to see me.”

“How could I come back if I’m supposed to die? Wow, that’s a spooky thought.” The doctor’s eyes widened in horror. I jumped down from the examining table and strode out the door.

Mark was already in the parking lot when I emerged from the doctor’s office. As I climbed into the car, we both asked, “How’d it go?” Then said, “You first.” I waved the prescription.

“He doesn’t want to see me anymore,” I said.

“Aquino can’t help but see me.” Mark said, “I’m behind his eyes now.”

“The doctor said I’m dying.” I knew Mark knew better. Mark had, after all, literally saved my life several times using the power of the mind with love.

“Aquino only wishes he were dead, but I’ll haunt him there, too.” Mark drove the Pacer towards the Copy Shop. “I’m going to drop you off at Billy’s while I meet with another spook who will reinforce the message that Mikey[1] is playing with fire this time. That fat little narcissistic satanist doesn’t want to go out in a blaze of glory, so he’ll recant his threats and diffuse the hit he put out on us. Deputy Dave PTSDed[2] over this, so I want to make sure Mikey knows ‘he has no where to run and no where to hide’ because ‘we’re watching him from behind his eyes’.”

“Deputy Dave PTSDed?” I asked, concerned. Mark and I had seen so many good, strong people become casualties on the front lines of this mind war.

“I noticed he was showing signs of PTSD when we were in Santa Rosa,” Mark said with compassion. “It’s not the death threats and averted hits that sent him over the edge, it's the children. He's seen too many children horribly hurt, and can't deal with it anymore. He's so depressed he's despondent and irrational, and his focus is totally gone for the moment. His job is far too dangerous to allow for the kind of mistakes PTSD causes. So, he's taking a little time off and using some of the coping skills we talked about to pull himself back together. He's going to do some writing which not only will help him recover, it will also help the cause."

We drove the rest of the way in silence.

Billy was quite busy when we arrived at the Copy Shop, so I walked to the nearby pharmacy to get my prescription filled. Then I retrieved our mail from the Post Office and settled into the employee's backroom while Billy tended his customers. I pulled out my notepad and began writing. With so much Catholic abuse being discussed, memory of my encounter with Nicaragua's Daniel Ortega[3] surfaced.

Alex Houston was traveling for the CIA aboard NCL's cruise ship in the summer of 1985, and I had cause to be with him. Houston's bad ventriloquism act provided him cover for the CIA drug ops he was actually working, while the Handwriting Analysis[4] lectures that I gave provided my excuse for being there. In reality, I would be boarding a small plane bound for Nicaragua while NCL docked in their Yukatan, Mexico port-of-call. I had been programmed with a message from the White House to deliver to Nicaragua's Commandant Daniel Ortega.

As I wrote out my memory in photographic detail, I smelled the smells and sensed the senses of the event. It all felt so real and close, almost as though I were there again. Ortega was unlike any other contact I made during my tenure as an MK Ultra mind controlled slave. I sensed his strength of spirit and soul conviction, and he exuded an energy of love. How could this be? The modest room where I met with him was lined with weapons, and ashtrays overflowed with cigarette butts and a few marijuana roaches. I had been conditioned to abhor marijuana above all else, since the government's concern with the herb's mind-altering and expanding properties could disrupt delivery of messages like this one to Ortega. Of course, at the time I could only perceive marijuana as the “evil weed” I was told it was. Likewise, I should have perceived Ortega as the violent warmonger I’d been conditioned to believe he was; yet his powerful presence conflicted with my pre-programmed perceptions. The connection I sensed was bigger-than-life, above life’s conditions and events of the moment. I couldn’t think to question or wonder under mind control, but the questions that rose while deprogramming continue to date[5].

As I wrote out the message I delivered to Ortega, I recalled it complete[6] with the voice inflections of my programmers, which were used verbatim in my delivery. The message was a combination of Vatican based threats and bribes, all of which were to convince Ortega to accept New World Orders in the name of Catholicism. Ortega’s view of Catholicism apparently did not include a political agenda, however. In the course of his response, which automatically photographically recorded in my brain, he suggested that the picture of the New World Order that Reagan painted lacked depth. And likewise, the Catholic Jesuit role in that New World Order was just as shallow. His message[7] to Reagan clearly denounced the New World Order.

Billy burst through the door of the back room, warmly greeting me. “Oops,” he interrupted himself. “I didn’t realize you were deprogramming.”

Billy had been present on numerous occasions while I was deep inside my head deprogramming, and was always respectful of the process.

“It’s OK,” I assured him, setting down my pen. “I just completed what I needed to write anyway. How are you doing?”

“Great, now that I see you and Mark are safe,” Billy said. “After the fax ya’ll got, I was a bit concerned.”

“Mark took care of it,” I smiled. “And he’s further reinforcing our safety right now.”

Mark burst through the door as though on cue. “That didn’t take me as long as I had anticipated,” he announced. “Mikey and his legions of academic morons won’t be bothering us anymore.”

“Great!” I said, throwing my arms around Mark in a big hug.

While Billy and Mark talked, I gathered up my paperwork to leave. “Where are you going so fast?” Billy laughed.

“Home,” I smiled, giving him a quick hug. “We’re going to celebrate.”

“What are you celebrating?” Billy asked good-naturedly, opening the door for me.

“Life!” I exclaimed.

Mark smiled at Billy, “Like we do every day.”

On the way home, I excitedly told Mark about my deprogramming notes on Daniel Ortega. “He’s true-to-soul!” I gushed. “He could make a powerful difference for humanity with his stand against the New World Order!”

“Whoa,” Mark cautioned. “He’s a communist military dictator whose people are at war.”

“This is bigger than politics,” I insisted. “Admittedly, I don’t understand his politics[8], but I know he is a man of conviction and peace. He stands strong against the New World Order, and someday that will matter far more than political differences.”

“I’d like to see what you’ve written out when we get home,” Mark said as he drove us out of city traffic and onto the winding country road. “You’re drawing some serious conclusions from limited experience.”

“I realize that,” I assured him. “But my senses were even stronger then than they are now, and that is worthy of consideration. Ortega is a powerful spirit who defies the global elite. He is a fighter for freedom.”

“Freedom by whose definition?” Mark asked. “One man’s freedom fighter is another man’s terrorist.”

“Innate freedom, within soul’s realm of love,” I answered. “Not freedom by political definition, but rather freedom that comes with free thought. He opposes mind control.”

“So does Bill Clinton,” Mark reminded me. “Look into Ortega’s politics. Expand what you think you know. I am not arguing your point that we need to put aside differences and unite to overcome the New World Order. Rather I am saying that expanding perceptions is necessary for all people everywhere so another form of dictatorship doesn’t fill the void left when these criminals are finally removed from leadership!”

Long drives proved to be an ideal time for in depth conversation or for play, as well as for reflecting and thinking. Mark’s and my relationship was so comfortable and secure that our discussions were as varied as our points of view. Our life’s circumstances had raised our perspectives and priorities above and beyond what others seemed to argue about. When people learn to think beyond TV to what really is going on in the world, they will change their priorities and perspectives, too! Everyone is on his own learning path, and there is no need to change someone who is daring to think beyond social engineering. Mark’s point about Ortega was valid whereby I would research more. Yet my hopes for dismantling New World Order controls in time to unplug DARPA and Sandia Labs technology rested in humankind’s setting aside their differences for the sake of their likenesses in peaceful, spiritual evolution.

“How can humanity unite in truth when ‘National Security’ secrecy keeps us divided?” I wondered.

“The 1947 National Security Act must be abolished,” Mark answered. “That should be goal one after people regain control of their governments. Then they can unplug and defuse DARPA.”

“It’s almost a catch 22,” I concluded. “People need truth for strength of spirit to unplug computerized Artificial Intelligence that is suppressing truth!”

“People have no time to lose,” Mark agreed.

“According to the doctor, I don’t have any time left either,” I said. “Why do doctors insist on giving me negative news? Is it due to their extensive education through drug- company paid medical schools?”

Mark answered. “More and more doctors are expanding their narrow education focus to learn about cures emanating from the private sector. They study and work hard for degrees as MDs, PhDs, etc. and in the process are taught to listen only to others with similar education credentials. Yet it is becoming increasingly obvious that their education deliberately includes DARPA generated plans for controlling and thinning the population, while pertinent healing facts are omitted. They are livid. Those who became doctors to help people rather than make money are rising, while doctors like the one you saw today are losing patients.”

“I lost my patience with him today!” I assured Mark. “My health is improving at an astounding rate considering that you and I are applying what we know towards my healing. All I wanted from that doctor was an edge on this tummy pain while I am in the process of healing. Mentally focusing away from pain during intense times like these is difficult because I don’t have time to be dissociative!”

“Saying you don’t have ‘time’ to be dissociative is an oxymoron,” Mark reminded me. Dissociation is opposite of awareness, and is therefore timeless.

“You’re right,” I laughed. “In reality, I don’t have ‘time’ to hurt. Choosing to use the Special Forces ‘no time to bleed’ program in direct association with my health must be better than any prescription!”

Mark agreed. “Since the subconscious mind can be programmed to stop Special Forces servicemen from bleeding when shot or injured so they can continue their mission, we know the mind is capable of responding. If the mind can respond to outside manipulation, it certainly can respond to our own spirit-driven health choices and directives."

"Obviously," I said. "Neither of us has had a cold in years because we really don't have time for one. That healing mechanism works! People do not have to be traumatized and programmed to accept this healing realization."

"Getting them to realize it is the challenge," Mark told me. "The pharmaceutical companies that fund med schools don't want this fact realized, and therefore the information is suppressed. Many pharmaceutical companies and doctors make money by treating symptoms rather than causations. When causations are understood, cures are oftentimes a given. Cures don't make money. Why was Aspartame released into the population despite evidence of the damage it causes while Donald Rumsfeld was CEO of Searle? Why do you think George Bush was on the board of directors for Eli Lilly[9] drug manufacturing? To counteract the mass genocide he perpetuates? Why do you think politicians are so healthy and live so long? What do they know that they aren't telling us? I'm not saying this is all a conspiracy to thin the population, but pertinent health information should be public knowledge rather than deliberately suppressed. If this information were taught in schools, unethical drug companies would loose their control on the world."

"If people do consciously realize their innate ability to heal," I elaborated, "they could allow it to sink in on a subconscious level through meditation so it becomes autogenic. Meditation is at least as deep as hypnosis, isn't it?"

"Yes," Mark agreed. "Meditation, like real prayer, for all practical intent and purpose is self hypnosis. And it is much safer! Finding an ethical, trustworthy hypnotist to deepen a trance is risky. If people knew the dangers of allowing a stage hypnotist to play with their subconscious, that nonsense would be outlawed."

"Alex Houston is a good example," I said. "People would think twice before seeing a hypnotist to stop smoking let alone pay them to play with their subconscious drivers!"

“Any habit control through hypnosis is like trusting drug companies to cure you,” Mark asserted. “Habits have causation. If a person stops smoking through hypnosis, the cause is not being addressed and will manifest itself through another habit or new emotional problem cropping up.”

“Is that why people gain weight when they quit smoking?”

“It can be, if the reason they smoked is due to an oral fixation,” Mark explained. “When trauma like incest occurs before age five, it usually results in a dissociative disorder and manifests itself through heightened sexuality, addictions, habits, etc. If the habit is stopped through hypnosis, the underlying causation will seek another route and memories may begin to surface. Hypnosis is serious business and should never be used as entertainment. Meditation like prayer is much safer and ultimately more effective.”

“Why do so many Christians oppose meditation?” I asked.

“Because they are taught to oppose it,” Mark answered. “Think about it. If a cult church leading people outside themselves in order to control their perceptions were to allow their congregation to go within themselves for answers, they would lose control and money!”

“Meditation is only heightened prayer,” I began. “Through meditation, people would realize that, like peace, freedom and unconditional love, healing is already within. Church teaches that God knows no time, so it seems logical that everyone would embrace that timeless space through meditation and accept the healing that already exists there.”

“Truth naturally exists in that same space,” Mark furthered. “Once you learned to control your own mind and direct your own thoughts, you were free to consciously direct your own subconscious!”

“I know the ins and outs of my own brain extremely well now, thanks to your helping me exercise my brain. By reaching and stretching into other regions of my brain, I learned to think and choose for myself. I chose healing. With your love strengthening my choice to heal, we healed my eye after the optometrist said I was going blind[10]. Which eye was that?” I joked. Confusing location as another healing tactic component. Sometimes it is better to simply ‘forget about it.’ Even well intentioned questions like ‘how are you feeling now?’ can result in counterproductive focus. “We healed the damage Cheney[11] did to my jaw.” Dick Cheney violated me under mind control, but I refuse to let the past intrude on my present. The same subconscious ‘mental oilcan’ was used on my jaw that was used on my wrists and ankle joints to overcome the arthritis setting in. It is phenomenal the way my body has healed from torture. “What they used for bad, we used for good. When the reality of mind control is successfully brought to light and fully understood, people can use the information to free humanity from all kinds of ailments.”

“The positives from learning about mind control far outweigh the negatives,” Mark agreed. “Good people have a right to the information on mind brain function. Once they realize the truth, they can assume the healing.”

“Healing is a given,” I said. “It is within. It is within the realm of unconditional love as is peace, freedom and wisdom. The common factor of all religions, politics, and humankind is within. Assuming this truth can heal the world!”

Chapter 33

*T*REASONS OF “NATIONAL” SECURITY

“The elevator is still not functioning properly after the fire,” Mark and I were warned as we stepped into the Stahlman Building’s elevator to ride up to Scott Rosenburg’s office. The doors closed before we could get back off. We listened to horror stories from other people on the elevator with us as it creaked and groaned its way up to the 11th floor. We pried the doors open with our fingers when it stopped, and we stepped out into Scott’s busy office.

“I’m glad to see you,” Scott greeted Mark and me warmly. “We’re nearly ready for the March 17 court hearing. There is no legal way you can be charged with child support or with paying Kelly’s accumulated mental health costs.”

“That’s a relief,” I said. “There is no way I can pay, and I certainly cannot afford time in jail.”

“There is one question I do need an answer to,” Scott said thoughtfully. “What reason can I cite for your not working a standard nine to five job?”

“That is impossible,” Mark injected. “Any routine she keeps like that could prove deadly. We’ve been advised by my contacts with Intelligence to avoid any and all routines. A job is out of the question.”

“I understand that,” Scott empathized. “Especially since my family and I were following our usual Sunday routine when we were in that car crash that was no accident.”

When Scott and his family had nearly been killed last winter, Mark and I were astounded by their narrow escape. Mark shook his head. “A job is absolutely out of the question.”

“Besides,” I said. “I’m still deprogramming. It would be difficult to shift my focus outside myself when I keep my head up my past so much these days.”

Rosenburg smiled. “I realize that, too,” he assured us. “But I cannot submit either excuse to the court since their explanation would be censored. Everyone in court knows your circumstances anyway. What I need is a medical excuse.”

“Psychiatric confirmation of Cathy’s condition could legally work against us,” Mark explained. “Diagnosis terms for recovery from mind control and DID would ultimately prohibit her from testifying in court in the event this case ever goes to trial. I’m sure that is exactly what is wanted right now to keep her quiet, but it’s not going to happen.”

Referring to my medical circumstances I said, “It would be wrong to submit the negative doctor’s diagnosis on my digestive system, eye, hearing, and jaw when Mark and I have used the power of the mind for healing. And my vaginal mutilation carving wouldn’t exactly be a reason to not work.”

Scott winced. “I am confident we have a strong enough case without the medical. I’ll see you in court on the 17th.”

When the 17th arrived, I did not know what to expect and wished that Mark hadn’t been banned from the courtroom. Even though the courtroom was packed, the only one present that had the fortitude to support me was Scott. And he was scheduled to testify against me.

Scott began, “Your Honor, if I prosecute Ms. O’Brien for debts owed on Kelly’s institutionalization or for child support, I would be in violation of my own honor, oath of office, and numerous laws. You, too, are in violation of…" Scott opened the large law book he carried with him, citing various laws he had marked for this occasion.

Judge Shookhoff listened, fidgeting in his chair. Then he interrupted Scott to say, "Laws do not apply in this case for reasons of national security."

Stunned silence filled the courtroom. Then pandemonium broke out and court was dismissed. I ran out the door of the courtroom to where Mark was impatiently pacing, and burst into sobs. Alarmed, Mark began rapidly escorting me to the car, asking what happened.

"It's over," I sobbed, believing things couldn't be worse. Mark started the car and began backing out of the parking lot. "Shookhoff just invoked national security on the case!"

"What?!" Mark stopped the Pacer.

"When Rosenburg cited which laws were being violated, Shookhoff said, 'laws do not apply in this case for reasons of national security!" I sobbed.

"I'm not believing this," Mark said, his eyes filling with tears.

"Me either!" I blew my nose.

"I mean, this is the best news I've ever heard!"

"What?" I asked. Mark turned me to face him.

"National security can only be invoked in judge's chambers," he explained. "It is a matter of public record if it's said in open court. He said this in open court?"

"Yes," I said, still not grasping the magnitude of what just happened.

"Shookhoff may well have just saved our lives," Mark excitedly assured me. "He totally validated yours and Kelly's case by invoking national security in open court.”

“He wouldn’t do that,” I argued. “Shookhoff is obviously against us.”

“No, he is not,” Mark said. “Up until now he has been forced to comply with the Feds, and he just broke free of their controls with this statement. In essence, he breached national security to invoke national security in open court!” I hadn’t seen Mark so happy and excited. “You’re right,” he continued. “It is over. You just won.”

“It doesn’t feel like it,” I said.

“Just wait and see,” Mark said, hugging me close. “Now that you are free of court imposed hindrances you’ll be able to affect Kelly’s case more than ever.”

“How?” I asked. “Her Constitutional rights and basic human rights are still being violated. She cannot send or receive mail, take or make phone calls, and we can’t even see each other! How is this a win?”

“You’ll see,” Mark said. “Right now your emotions are blinding your logical ability to see clearly. Understandably so. You’ve been through a lot today. Let’s go home and let this settle in. I’ll cook you a nice dinner, massage your feet and hands, and we’ll relax a bit.”

I reached in my purse and clicked off the tape recorder that I’d had running, removed the tape and handed it to Mark.

“And celebrate,” Mark added when he saw the tape. “I’m going to do everything I can to get today’s court records, although they most likely were instantly sealed. It doesn’t matter, though,” he smiled. “You’ve got the tape!”

Mark stopped by the Post Office on the way home, pausing long enough to poke his head in the door of the Copy Shop. “Billy!” he exclaimed. “The judge just invoked national security on the case in open court.”

“No way!” Billy said, smiling big. “Isn’t it a violation of national security to publicly invoke it?”

“He did it anyway,” Mark announced. “And we’ve got it all on tape. Shookhoff just saved our lives.”

“Do you think he did that on purpose?” Billy asked.

“No,” I began.

Mark interrupted. “Yes, I believe so based on a few things I know. We’re going home to celebrate!”

It took some time for the reality of what had transpired to set in. It seemed to me that since revoking the National Security Act was our focus, the judge could only hurt us by invoking it. Slowly I began to realize how this move had validated our case. Additionally, Rosenburg explained that the orders for child support were in limbo as a result whereby there was no need for me to worry about paying. Best of all, I soon received a phone call from Abbott Jordan at Charter Lakeside in Memphis.

“Ms O’Brien,” Abbot Jordan began, “I am Kelly’s therapist at Charter Lakeside, and what she tells me does not coincide with what the state tells me. My concern is for Kelly above all else, and I realize that I may be in violation of court order by telephoning you. National security clouds Kelly’s court case anyway, so I chose to follow my heart and talk with you.”

“How is Kelly?” I eagerly asked.

“She misses you,” Abbott Jordan told me.

Tears of relief silently streamed down my face. She remembered me. This was a good sign. “How is her health?”

“She had an appendectomy recently,” he informed me. Why hadn’t I been notified through the court, my attorney, or the state? “But she recovered fine, and her asthma is being maintained with inhalers.”

“Does she talk about her past?”

“No,” he told me. “She doesn’t seem to remember anything. It would benefit her tremendously if you and I could talk. I need some history on her in order to treat her therapeutically. I can see she has been severely traumatized, yet don’t now how or why.”

“Isn’t that in her records?” I was sure it was.

“Her records are sealed,” Abbott Jordan told me. “All I know is that what she says about you consciously and subconsciously is in direct conflict with what the state reports. Even her sand trays and other therapies indicate there is more going on with this case than meets the eye. Now I’ve learned national security is covering up something, and I cannot find out what.” His voice quavered. “I do know love when I see it, though, and Kelly loves you and misses you.”

“Can I see her?” I asked, my heart leaping in my throat at the possibility.

“I’m sending you a letter from Kelly,” he said. “She apparently wrote it some time ago and just now entrusted me to get it to you. I gave it to Katie Finney to give to you.”

“Oh, no,” I groaned. Katie Finney was a state worker with the Department of Human Services, and I doubted I would ever see the letter.

“She assured me she would deliver it to you,” he told me. “She is the one who told me about national security being invoked on your case. I understand from Kelly that Katie is not a friend to either of you, but I believe I can trust her with delivering Kelly’s message to you. She was quite moved by it, especially in view of the national security incident in court.”

“When can I talk with Kelly?” I pleaded.

“I will tell her we talked, and that you would like to speak with her,” he said kindly. “I know she wants to talk with you. In the meantime, get that letter from Katie. I’ll be phoning again soon.”

When I finally received Kelly’s letter in early April 1993, it was tattered and dated September 1992. She had obviously carried it around with her for months before entrusting Abbott Jordan to get it to me. It read:

“Dear Mom,

I miss you very, very much. I’m trying to get it arranged for you, me, and dad for a visit. V.C.A.P.H. (Vanderbilt Psychiatric Hospital) put a whole bunch of shit in my head; making me believe that you don’t love me, that you abandoned me. I’ve cried for the past 3 weeks almost every day and night. I wish you would write back if this letter ever gets to you. I gotta go. I love you; and remember these two lines always…’Its not over till we win’ and ‘Everything I do, I do it for you.’

It was signed with three big hearts and ‘Love, Kelly’

Chapter 34
SEVENTEEN LITTLE CHILDREN

“What does ‘National Security’ have to do with the documented rape and molestation of a child’s mind and body?” was the question raised to State and Federal Government by people worldwide. After the 1947 National Security Act was induced on Kelly’s case, the letter writing campaign that Mark and I had previously started took wings and thousands of letters poured into the State of Tennessee and Washington, DC. Additionally, people from around the world were writing letters of encouragement to Kelly and sending her gifts. Since she could not receive her mail, the letters and packages began accumulating.

Most importantly, Abbott Jordan telephoned again. “Kelly would like to talk with you.”

“Great!” I exclaimed, eager to talk with her. “Please put her on the phone!”

“I would rather you come in for a visit,” he said. “So would Kelly. I am taking advantage of the fact that ‘laws do not apply in your case due to national security’ to circumvent previous court orders and allow for visitation.”

“I can see her?” I asked in disbelief, disappointed that I wouldn’t be talking with her immediately by phone, yet thrilled by the possibility of actually seeing her.

“You may want to keep this quiet,” he cautioned. “We don’t want anyone petitioning the court to stop this visitation. I need to schedule you to come in and give Kelly’s history to Charter’s Administrator anyway, and you can see her then. Can you come in the first of next week?”

“Monday?” I hoped. If we didn’t have enough gas money to get to Memphis, I knew we would come up with it someway. We had three days.

“We’ll see you then,” Abbott Jordan said cheerfully.

“Hug Kelly for me,” I implored, “and tell her I love her.”

“Will do,” he said and hung up the phone.

Early Monday morning, Mark and I packed a few peanut butter sandwiches to eat along the way to Memphis since we didn’t have a dime to spare. The cost of gas alone was half a month’s budget to us. We loaded our briefcases full of documents into the Pacer. “Have you got the tape recorder?” Mark asked. I held it up. “Extra batteries?” I dug through my purse and held those up, too. “Cookies?” Of course. I had baked Kelly’s favorites, wishing that we could afford to bring her clothes, books and gifts.

“Kelly won’t care what you bring or don’t bring,” Mark reminded me. “She just wants to see you.”

“And you!” I assured him.

“I don’t know what to expect there,” Mark said sadly as he started up the Pacer. “It has been so long since I’ve been allowed to even wave to her across a parking lot, let alone talk with her, that I can only hope Abbott Jordan will allow me to see her, too. Either way, you’ll at least get to visit and find out how she’s doing.”

The long ride to Memphis gave us both time to think. We drove in comfortable silence, occasionally holding hands. By the time we arrived, I was equally nervous and excited to see Kelly. First, Mark and I met with Charter’s Administrator for what seemed an eternity. Then we met Abbott Jordan, who appeared as soulfully kind as he had sounded on the telephone.

“Mom!” Kelly cried, running to greet me with a big hug. “Dad!” She hugged Mark, sobbing now. “I missed you both so much,” she gulped between sobs. We cried, too, reassuring her of our love.

“All I kept thinking was ‘it’s not over till we win’,” she said. “I knew they were lying to me at Vanderbilt.”

“I did everything I could to see you,” I assured her. “They would not let me in the door, telling me that you refused to see me. I didn’t believe them either. I know you better than that.” We all cried and hugged, and even Abbott Jordan wiped his eyes.

“Kelly told me you all were close,” he said. “I could see she was telling the truth. Why is your family torn apart?” Mark and Abbott Jordan talked together while Kelly and I caught up on each other’s lives.

“I kept sensing you were thinking of me,” Kelly acknowledged as we discussed our telepathic connection. “And I knew you missed me like I was missing you. I told Abbott Jordan nothing could keep us apart because our love is bigger than life.”

Aside from our separation, Kelly remembered nothing else about her Vanderbilt experience. I did not push for answers, or inquire about her past. Instead, we talked about her recent appendectomy, her relationship with Abbott Jordan, and her new friends while we ate the cookies I’d brought. Charter staff explained I could not bring food[1] into the facility, but made an exception for now. I couldn’t leave any, though, and Kelly was eating as many as she could hold, savoring every bite. When it was time to leave, we knew that we would be seeing each other again soon. Still, it was painful saying goodbye.

On the ride home, Mark explained that his time with Kelly would be limited to warm greetings because any visitation between them could disrupt our time together. Abbott Jordan knew he was walking a fine line to allow visitation. “Besides,” Mark consoled me, “you and Kelly should have every possible minute together.” His eyes could not hide his own disappointment, and I lovingly caressed him. Such unselfish love.

“When Abbott Jordan asked why I couldn’t help Kelly the way I helped you, I explained how Kelly’s victimization differed from yours,” Mark explained. “He really appreciated the information. I told him that, in essence I took the mental handcuffs off you and handed you the key, whereas I don't even have the key to Kelly's technological programming. Hers is more like a magnetic lock that requires a computerized electronic key. Technological mind control is light years ahead of trauma based mind control, and he understands that now."

"Had he heard of harmonic programming?" I wondered.

"He knew a bit about HAARP[2]," Mark answered. "He began researching it after hearing rumors that HAARP may have played a role in the LA Riots[3]."

"If anything good could come of such violence as the LA Riots, it would be that people at least began researching HAARP," I commented. "And Rodney King's infamous plea 'can't we all just get along?' still resounds long after the riots died down."

"Between Operation Just Cause's blatant use of harmonics on Noriega, and the LA Riot rumors regarding HAARP, harmonics is becoming a household word now," Mark agreed. "It gives people like Abbott Jordan a point of reference for understanding Kelly's high tech mind control."

"How did you explain to him why our family has been so unjustly and immorally torn apart?" I inquired.

"I told him who and what we are up against, which he said fit with what Kelly claimed," Mark explained as he drove. "Apparently Vanderbilt could not make the reality of Kelly's past go away despite their reported attempts to 'harmonically erase her memory'. I also explained to him about her respiratory programming, and the magnitude of the threats to your lives if you are together. He understands that these obstacles can be alleviated and dealt with in time, and is therefore determined to persist in reuniting our family. He realizes legalities won't be easy to work through under the circumstances, but nevertheless will be making all the right recommendations to free her from the system."

“That is a relief,” I sighed. “This is the first time we have had someone working with her who is genuinely on our side.”

“What did you and Kelly talk about?” Mark eagerly asked.

“Mostly we caught up with what has been going on since we saw each other last fall,” I began. “Apparently there was a bit more discussion by the Department of Human Services regarding an exorcism, and Kelly insisted that she was not possessed by their belief system.”

“She said it that way?” Mark wanted to know.

“Yes,” I smiled. “I don’t know how much clearer she can express herself than that. Anyway, that whole occult mess seems to be over with and she is really glad to be free of it.”

“After all she deals with in life,” Mark commented, “She certainly didn’t need that nonsense, too.”

“What concerns me now,” I told him, “is that she has started her periods and is worried about getting pregnant. Apparently she has been ‘getting along with her peers’ a bit too well. We had a great talk about that, though. She explained that she has some difficulties living true-to-soul at all times since she is still switching personas, especially after Vanderbilt. Love is a strong anchor to living true-to-soul, which she realizes is where her innate identity is found. By being here to reassure her that she is loved and is love, it helps strengthen her resolve to live true-to-soul.”

I continued. “Through us, she has seen what a loving relationship can truly be, and said she doesn’t want to settle for anything less than what we share. She knows I am happy and well cared for, and admires the fact that you don’t treat me like a sex object. By being you, Kelly has learned more about love than a lifetime of therapy could have taught her! She is already so wise at 13 that she chooses to soulfully express her sexuality through love only. That is quite a healthy choice considering sexual abuse heightened her drive the same way it has every other sexually abused child institutionalized at Charter. I told her how proud I am of her and for her. But until she actually lives true-to-soul always like she strives to do, I'd still like to have her put on birth control pills."

"That's a good idea," Mark agreed, "considering the hormones raging between all those sexually abused kids."

Mark and I talked the rest of the way home; deciding what each of us could do to best benefit and strengthen Kelly under the circumstances. The next time we went to Nashville, I approached the subject of birth control with DHS worker Katie Finney. "Teach her some morals instead!" she screeched at me.

How could a social worker dealing with abused children every day be so ignorant? "I would like to have that opportunity," I retorted. "If Kelly were free of your custody and I were raising her, this wouldn't be an issue!"

I was outraged. Most of all, I was disgusted that Kelly was so misunderstood while she struggled to heal herself and live true-to-soul. Obviously Katie Finney did not even know Kelly, or she wouldn't have made such a ridiculous statement. As usual, it would be up to us to make the best of a deplorable situation.

Deplorable situations were becoming commonplace in America these days[4], jolting many people from their comfort zones. The rich were getting richer, the poor were getting poorer, and formerly middle class citizens were plummeting toward third world poverty level. Justice was bought and sold while government corruption reigned supreme. Crime escalated out of control while the CIA's booming cocaine, crack, and heroin industries [5] turned our street corners into a blood bath.

Citizens began meeting in basements, churches, schools, community centers, anywhere they could gather to discuss how to right the wrongs in society. Global Education[6] was eroding human morals at such a rapid rate that home schooling was fast becoming the common alternative. People unplugged their TVs and video games in an effort to maintain free thought. They turned to underground newspapers, radio, and word of mouth for truth even before the internet linked their voices. As fast as people united to take their country back, their organizations were either infiltrated to divide them or were slandered by the press. Militias were termed White Supremacists, patriots were termed extremists, school kids were turned into gangs, and aware citizens were titled UN-American conspiratists. Mind control weaved throughout society's woes, and was the common thread that should have tied everything together making sense of the chaos.

But mind control was being covered up for "reasons of 'national' security".

Meanwhile, war was waged against US citizens. Psychological warfare tactics were aimed at the populace to keep them shooting at each other, while horrifying examples were being made of high profile patriot leaders. Nine months previous, US Federal Agents had stormed the Idaho country home of Randy Weaver, murdering his son and his wife while they scrambled for their lives. Weaver's supposed crime? Attempting to unify citizens according to the US Constitution and take back the American government from a self-appointed New World Order elite. Rather than terrify the public into submission, this inhumane murder of Vicki and Sam Weaver only served to awaken more people to the reality that something very wrong was happening to u.s. all.

Now trouble was brewing again, and it was only a matter of time until violence exploded sufficient to traumatize much of the populace. People are easiest led while PTSDed from trauma, and a horrific standoff in Waco, Texas had been playing out for days on every television station. A banner with reverberating meaning reading 'Can't We All Just Get Along[7]' waved from the Waco compound while the media slaughtered their image.

8AM on April 19, 1993 our telephone rang, waking us from a deep sleep. Mark listened to the desperate plea for help on the other end. The standoff at the Branch Dividian compound in Waco, Texas had reached a pinnacle, and 83 people were trapped inside willing to die rather than surrender to government controls. Bill Clinton's newly appointed Attorney General Janet Reno claimed the people were victims of cult brainwashing. The Branch Dividians[8] vowed they would not comply with government mind control tactics. Since Mark was now nationally recognized as a leader in deprogramming, he was called on to help. The stage was already set for destruction, however, and Mark wisely sidestepped an attempt to burn him with the rest in order to help Waco's survivors sift through the ruins of their lives. By the time Federal Agents (General Wesley Clark[9], 2004 Presidential contender, led) were through with their unprecedented raid, seventy-four people were murdered and burned alive. Among the dead were Seventeen Little Children[10]. Nine people miraculously survived, including one brave soul, David Thibodeau[11], who dared to speak out afterwards.

We were a nation under siege, and Mark and I did not want to become casualties on the front lines of this mind war. For Kelly's sake, we needed to keep the proverbial spotlight of truth shining bright. For the sake of survival in these tumultuous times, we needed to keep a low profile.

I knew the idea of taking Kelly and running like Peter Tscherneff did with his son was only an emotional temptation and not a logical answer. The wisdom of this difficult decision became even clearer when Peter was caught after only four months[12], incarcerated, and his precious son turned over to the very ones he'd fled. Ensuing media coverage of his arrest was deplorable[13], as it attacked nearly every moral issue parents nationwide were standing against on behalf of the children. This brave, young man and his son paid the ultimate price of being used as public examples.

“If only Peter had stayed to listen to us speak in Petaluma that night,” I said as I read another slanderous newspaper article denouncing him, “he would have heard us warn about the very catch net operation that ensnared him.” The names in the article I was reading were all too familiar.

“Even if Peter had stayed and listened to that information,” Mark asserted, “chances are he would have been caught anyway. Peter was so PTSDed that he was destined to make a fatal error in judgment. His high public profile made him a media target that ensured he would be caught and publicly crucified.”

Despite extreme efforts to divide and conquer the people, many resilient Americans were more determined than ever to stop the erosion of freedom.

People who could still think to ask questions were demanding answers.

TV talk shows like Oprah Winfrey's began to flourish. Oprah was no longer just a local Nashville girl with a talk show, she was becoming a household name. True to her word, awareness of incest and child abuse was rising in proportion to her popularity.

While pioneers like Oprah tread lightly through censorship, key stories that could make a world of difference were ignored or slandered by mainstream media. Mark and I learned that Michael Jackson's sister, LaToya, was in deprogramming and recovery from the MK Ultra abuses permeating the Jackson family. LaToya's valiant efforts to speak out after writing her book, Growing Up in the Jackson Family[14], were denounced by the media to the point where she fled a televised interview in tears. Mind control survivors were being intimidated into silence just like the reporters who were silenced in the wake of Danny Caselaro's demise. The Jackson story was stifled along with other key events that went against DARPA generated social engineering controls.

Outside the controlled media spotlight that portrayed u.s. as apathetical and compliant, the patriot movement was in full swing and growing strong. The Waco tragedy did more to unite people than divide them, as evidenced by the song I was listening to on the radio. Singer songwriter Carl Klang[15] gave voice to America and touched my soul as he sang,

"Seventeen Little Children, don't it make you wonder why?
Seventeen Little Children, how could they deserve to die?
Maybe we should stop and ask ourselves, have we become so blind?
Will Seventeen Little Children finally open up your mind?
Open up your mind."

Chapter 35

THE*RAPISTS'* MISTAKES

“Remember that fellow that came from Alaska to see us a couple of months ago?” Mark asked.

Of course I remembered. I had been heavy into deprogramming at the time, though, and had stayed focused on writing while Mark visited with him and his sister. “Yes,” I answered. “He was as big as a grizzly bear and smart as a fox.”

“That’s the one,” Mark acknowledged. “His sister just contacted us to see if we want to do a cable TV interview with a friend of hers in Huntsville, Alabama. Apparently the information you turned in regarding the Johnny Lee Picnic scam and murder in Guntersville checked out. Between the details that were validated in Alabama, and those that her brother verified in Alaska, there is sufficient evidence for the broadcast. Do you want to do it?”

“Sure,” I replied. “But I am a bit concerned about going back into ‘NASA city USA[1]’, especially to do an expose’ on local TV.”

“No need to worry,” Mark assured me. “The political connections and support that you just gained are as strong as it gets. Besides, most folks in Alabama are not like the criminals you knew, and are reputed for their rebel attitudes and independence from the Feds instead. Alabama’s state motto is ‘We Dare Defend Our Rights’. You’re likely to find more like-minded people there than anywhere else in the country.”

“Let’s do it,” I said.

While we readied ourselves for our trip to Alabama, Sue Ford contacted us from California. “I am working with a group of therapists who would like to meet you,” she said.

“Are you working with them, or are they working with you?” Mark wisely asked, aware of Sue’s diagnosed ‘MPD’ condition.

“I am working on my PhD. in behavioral psychology,” she answered, avoiding the question. Mark waited. Sue cleared her throat. “They have questions, you have answers, and I have two airline tickets if you will come to California. Just say when, and I’ll cover all your expenses.”

“Wait a minute,” Mark said. “Who are these therapists and how did they learn about us?”

“Most of them worked the aftermath of the McMartin case, are familiar with mind control, and know you were in Northern California this past spring,” she answered. “Plus Rod told them about you when he was here.”

“That’s a lot of money being spent for a vague purpose,” Mark said, suspecting more cause behind her explanation. “Is there another reason?”

“I would like you to help me,” she admitted. “The more I researched and studied psychology, the less I healed.”

“You have to heal from the inside out,” Mark advised. “Not through outside input. Based on what I’ve seen, your memory may already be contaminated with other people’s experience. I’m not sure what I could do for you, especially since I am not a qualified therapist. Practicing without a license is a serious charge that I am not willing to face for anyone.”

“My offer still stands,” Sue told him. “There is a whole group of professionals out here that want to hear what you have to say, credentials or not. Think about it and let me hear from you.”

On the drive to Huntsville, we briefly discussed the possibility of traveling to California again. Yet it was on the way back after successfully completing the cable TV broadcast that we made our decision. Many doors had opened for us in the state of Alabama, and we were contemplating the possibility of eventually moving there.

“If we make any money through donations while we’re in California,” Mark said, “it might be enough to relocate. The support and protection Alabama offers seems too good to walk away from.”

“Maybe we could even have Kelly transferred there,” I hoped. “Abbott Jordan would cooperate with a plan like that.”

“It’s risky,” Mark said. “NASA still poses a threat even though the Governor is clean. For us, NASA’s backyard is a safe place to be. For Kelly, we’ll have to see what mental health has to offer. We’ll take it slow, and in the meantime I’ll accept that offer to fly out to California.”

When we arrived back at Mark’s mother’s house, she announced as usual, ”That man called again.”

“What man, mother,” Mark asked kindly, smoothing the hair from her eyes.

“That man with the newspaper.”

“What man with the newspaper?” Mark was curious now.

“Oh, you know,” Melba said.

Trying to be patient, Mark asked, “With the Tennessean? The Nashville Banner?”

“You know damn good and well what I’m talking about!” she retorted.

Mark threw up his hands. “If you think of it, mother, let me know.”

“How dare you talk to me like that!” She turned around and stomped back to her room, slamming the door.

“Welcome home,” I smiled, reaching for the teakettle. “How about a cup of tea?”

“Sure,” Mark answered as he thumbed through the stack of mail poking out of the trash can, retrieving envelopes addressed to us. “Hey, this one looks interesting,” he said, noticing the El Paso Times return address.

Mark walked down the hall to his mother’s bedroom and knocked gently on the door.

“Go away!” Melba called.

“Was ‘that man’ with the El Paso Times?” he asked her anyway.

“I told you he was! Go away!”

“Thanks, mother.” Mark walked back into the kitchen to show me the article that ran July 19, 1993 pertaining to a major cocaine bust at the El Paso border. A brief note accompanying it explained that the information we discussed at the Houston NCIN conference resulted in this bust. The reporter was fired for running the story, but it was too late. The news was already out, ‘thanks to us’. The front-page photo revealed hundreds of kilos of coke stamped “Clinton.”

“They don’t label cocaine,” I laughed.

Mark agreed, “Regardless, somebody in the chain is implicating Clinton’s involvement in the drug industry. The more anyone tries to prove this story is a hoax, the more they will find out it is the real thing. And no matter how you look at it, that’s a lot of coke!”

“Stories like this one could derail NAFTA,” I hoped. “If people realized our self-appointed government leaders are behind the ‘free trade’ of coke and heroin over the border, the ‘war on drugs’ could actually be won. NAFTA would no longer be a steppingstone to the New World Order, and we could share common ground with Mexicans in peace!”

"Unite with 'illegal aliens'?" Mark said, sarcastically using a socially engineered diversionary term intended to keep people divided. "You're such a 'liberal'."

"I do not fit in the confines of a socially engineered label," I playfully protested. "You're playing semantics with me. I'm saying that people need to put labels, semantics, and socially engineered divisions aside to unite against the bankers and technology spinning our world."

We took Sue Ford up on her offer, and were soon absorbing the attitudes and atmosphere of her wealthy Hollywood Hills suburb. The Clinton Administration's plan to divert, bore, confuse, and divide the people through revising the voluminous verbiage of NAFTA had little effect on Southern California's citizens. The locals weren't the least bit concerned over "Mexican's taking their jobs" or "illegal aliens" sneaking drugs into the country. It was accepted knowledge that the CIA ran the drug business, and to compete with them was suicidal. Perspectives were a bit more realistic so close to the shared border where Mexicans and Americans alike freely lived above propaganda's social engineering.

"People get more sun in their eyes here in California," Sue explained as she drove us from the airport to her apartment. "It clears their vision. That's why I wanted to bring you here, so you can tell us what we can do about what we are seeing."

"What would you like to see accomplished?" Mark asked.

"My therapist needs some direction," Sue answered. "She says she has gone as far with me as she can, and I know I'm still switching personas. She has agreed to meet with you tomorrow after you speak with the group of therapists I've assembled."

Inwardly, I groaned. Meeting with therapists all day while jetlagged did not sound pleasant to me. Mark must feel the trip, too, and would most likely prefer to not hit the ground running.

“I’m right in the midst of a divorce,” Sue continued. “I have to be in court the next day and would appreciate it if you would be an expert witness for me.”

“I’m no expert,” Mark began, “and I haven’t witnessed anything yet.”

“Oh yes you are!” Sue exclaimed. “I need you to explain about MK Ultra mind control’s Project Monarch.”

“I’m not even going to ask why,” Mark told her. “The answer is no. Absolutely no. You apparently brought me here under false pretense, and I refuse to compromise my integrity for your agenda.”

“I’ll pay you,” Sue began.

“That’s a bribe. Look, let’s get one thing straight,” Mark was smiling his dangerous smile already and we weren’t even to Sue’s apartment yet. “You can give me a donation proportionate to every second I spend giving you coping skills for your *dis*order, but I will not take your orders. I agreed to meet with your group of therapists, which I will do. And after meeting you, yes, I would like to talk with your therapist.”

We pulled into Sue’s gated community, and carried our bags up to her apartment. The apartment was oddly devoid of décor, personal effects, and the kind of triggers most DID multiples surround themselves with. “You can sleep on the futon,” she told us. “We’ll get an early start in the morning.”

Neither Mark nor I sensed any privacy and were uncomfortable discussing our immediate circumstances. There was no need to anyway.

The next morning after a nice breakfast of fresh California fruits and coffee, we drove to our Woodland Hills Office Building meeting. The group was small and comfortable, and we discussed everything from the McMartin case to Waco to the devastation in Marin County. We talked about the Clinton Administration, CIA cocaine and heroin ops, Poppy Bush’s widely known pedophilia, and mind control.

“We know mind control is the primary weapon system for ushering in the New World Order,” one therapist admitted. “What can we do about it?

How can we treat the survivors filling our offices? What do we do with their testimonies?”

“It’s not what is remembered that is important,” Mark began. “It’s how it is remembered that counts. Content is irrelevant until after the survivors heal. Then it’s up to them to choose what they want to do with their knowledge. Your job is simple. You don’t have to be an investigator, a lawyer, a judge, or jury. All you need to do is provide the tools for healing, and help them deal with reality along the way.”

“But reality is so horrible!” another therapist said. Her wide eyes indicated she was most likely suffering from PTSD, as was most everyone else in the room.

“It can be if it is dealt with emotionally,” Mark explained. “If it is dealt with logically, the emotionally incomprehensible becomes comprehensible and healing occurs. Reality becomes easy to deal with. Encourage your clients to write out their memory. The very act of moving a pen requires the logic portion of the brain, shifting compartmentalized memory over to logic as its being written out. This way, a victim need not suffer abreaction by reliving their experience and re-traumatizing themselves. Nor do they traumatize you by telling you about it! It appears to me that each of you could benefit by using this method to deal with reality yourselves and overcome PTSD.”

“We know we’re PTSDed!” another therapist chimed in. “We’ve diagnosed each other and held our own group therapy!”

“Group therapy is another point,” Mark said. “DID/MPDs are highly suggestible from trauma, and their memories are easily contaminated. They need to shut off the TV, put down the books, and go within to find their answers in order to write it out. Listening to other survivors only confuses and tangles their memories with everyone else’s.”

A therapist who agreed relayed a quick example. “I began one group therapy introducing myself as the therapist, and a client said, ‘My friend thought the brochure said you were ‘the rapist’ and wouldn’t come.’ This literal interpretation took on a life of it’s own, instantly eroding trust for me. Everyone present began talking about ‘the rapists’ and the whole session was disastrous.”

Mark chuckled in understanding. “Why hold group therapy anyway when each DID/MPD is a group within themselves?”

Everyone laughed. “Group therapy may be effective for some things,” Mark continued, “but it is counter productive for dissociatives.”

“I attend group therapy three times a week,” Sue said. “It’s comforting to me knowing others go through more hell than I do.”

“How can you compare yourself to others when you haven’t remembered what you’ve been through?” one therapist asked her. “Most people are traumatized by hearing what happened to others.”

“Enough so to PTSD,” another therapist added. “I’m going to start treating myself for PTSD using the methods Mark discussed. And group therapy for dissociatives is history in my office. No wonder it never produced positive results. I thought I was doing it wrong!”

“Has Mark determined if you’re a Project Monarch mind control victim?” someone asked Sue.

“That is a leading question,” Mark cautioned. “Anyone who is highly suggestible gravitates to such leading questions, which could result in false memory.”

“I need to talk with you about that,” one of the more prominent therapists said. “The False Memory Foundation is a significant problem. They can destroy minds and lives faster than we can heal them. Look what happened with the McMartin case.”

Everyone nodded in agreement. “Check the backgrounds of those who originated the foundation and you will find more CIA pedophiles than you would in a Catholic church,” a voice emphatically stated.

“It depends which Catholic church you’re referring to,” someone said, causing laughter to lighten the subject.

“We all could lose our license because of this cover-up organization,” a therapist said. “We really do need your advice.”

“Consider what I’ve already said,” Mark answered. “It’s not your job to be investigator, provide expert court testimony, or be judge and jury. Above all, do not act like an attorney and ask any leading questions ever. For example, rather than ask ‘was that daddy in the clown suit[2] who raped you?’ Ask, ‘who was in the clown suit?’ Rather than ask, ‘did he touch your private parts?’ Ask ‘what happened next?’ Never provide outside information or introduce terms like ‘Project Monarch.’ Don’t ask for ‘names and ages’ of alters, it furthers the dissociative divisions. Above all, never ask ‘how does that make you feel?’ They were dissociated from emotionally ‘feeling’ then, and associating with it now is misleading and counter productive to reintegration of their memories. Ask ‘what do you think?’ This stops abreaction dramatics. Since your clients will be writing out memory anyway, your questions need not be spontaneous and will be limited.”

“What if they ask us the questions?” one woman wanted to know. “I’ll use Sue as an example, if that’s OK with you.” Sue nodded. “She asked us what we knew about Project Monarch.”

“Turn the question back around. Ask her what she knows and how she learned it,” Mark replied. Mark turned to Sue. “How did you learn about it?”

“My therapist has documents…” she began.

“Wait.” Mark put up his hand to stop her, and turned back to the group. “Her therapist is obviously making a mistake right there sharing other people’s information and documents with her. If it is not information from the inside, ‘forget about it’,” he advised, exemplifying with literal terms. “Then, after you deal with your client, research it for yourself. If you know the therapist, phone him for copies of the documents and tip him to his error. All you therapists need to unite and re-educate each other. The False Memory Foundation is capitalizing on therapeutic error to discount all survivors’ testimony and cover up CIA pedophilic crime.”

“If we had known this during the McMartin case,” one therapist said, “the children would have been regarded as credible. They weren’t being asked the wrong questions; they were being asked the questions wrong. And the kids suffered the consequences for therapeutic ignorance. What you have taught us today must be incorporated into educating mental health professionals. I don’t know why they didn’t teach us in school…”

“Ewen Cameron,” someone injected. “Dr. Ewen Cameron, founder of the APA, worked for the CIA in MK Ultra and had cause to suppress this information! Leave it to someone from the Intelligence community to reveal the truth he suppressed. Considering that we’ve all been trained to only accept information from others with similar education credentials to ours, we’re fortunate to learn the truth. Thank you for sharing with us, Mark. We’ll all use our credentials to spread the word amongst our colleagues.”

Everyone nodded in agreement. After Mark met privately with several of the therapists, we drove over to the office of Sue’s therapist. Her primary concern was with the False Memory Foundation, who was threatening her license due to Sue’s case. “Whether they are covering up for the CIA or if I’ve done something wrong, either way I’ve done all I can for Sue. Maybe she needs to start over using your methods for healing.”

On the drive back to her apartment that evening, Sue stopped at a Convenience Market and bought several notebooks in which to write memories according to Mark’s methods.

Chapter 36

THANKS FOR THE FALSE MEMORIES

“I need a fresh start,” Sue was telling Mark. “With the money I was awarded in my divorce, I can afford to relocate. I want to be where you are, write out my memories, and heal. Rod is traveling back to the states to finish his book, and he can meet me in Tennessee just as easy as he can come here. I’ll help pay living expenses up to $500 a month, which is a fraction of my cost to live in this apartment. You could move out of your mother’s house and we’ll share an apartment.”

“Cathy and I are going to take a walk,” Mark told her. “I’ll give you an answer when we get back.”

We walked for hours. The pros and cons of Sue’s proposal were complex. “We could move to Alabama,” I began.

“For God’s sake we’d have to live with her,” Mark countered. Neither of us liked that idea. We kept walking and thinking.

“She could heal, and stop being a professional ‘victim’ or ‘survivor’,” I said. “Through your wisdom, she could learn like I did that blaming others and dwelling on the past is a cop out to living. Maybe she would even become an asset to society.”

“Sue is who she is, multiple or not,” Mark said. “Reintegrated, she will still be Sue only more focused.”

“Since her memory is contaminated, do you believe she can still reintegrate?” I asked.

“That’s the pertinent question,” Mark answered. “I was talking with Dr. Colin Ross of the ISS&D[1], and he was saying that the best way to counter the False Memory Foundation is to infiltrate them and heal them from the inside out, so-to-speak. In the process of our conversation, I told him about Sue and raised the question, ‘which is worse, being a victim of abuse, a victim of bad therapy, or both?’” He seems to believe that is irrelevant with application of proper healing techniques.”

“You could prove that theory by encouraging her to heal by writing out her memory.”

“She claims she has been writing out her memories for years,” Mark informed me. “The journals she presented to me to review were comprised of lines from movies, books, and a half dozen old conspiracy stories that have circulated around therapists’ offices. She would need to learn how to accurately write out memory from within without outside input. You two wouldn’t be able to discuss your victimizations.”

“She shouldn’t vocalize while she’s writing anyway,” I reminded him. “I won’t have a problem not talking with her.” I smiled.

“I hear you,” Mark said. “That’s what concerns me. What price would we pay to live with her and help her heal? And heal from what? Linguistically her subconscious language indicates she is role-playing a mind control victim to draw attention to a dissociative disorder. She either is deliberately perpetrating fraud or is indeed a victim of false memories from her therapists.”

“If we go to DC to testify before Congress like we are supposed to in August,” I pointed out, “maybe we’ll be so focused on that it won’t matter.”

“This is what we had hoped for, in a way,” Mark thought aloud. “Why does this open door look like a brick wall?” Tears slid down his face. “I’d rather share a home with just you. I’ve looked forward to that ever since we moved into my mother’s.”

As I wiped the tears from his cheeks, they began sliding down mine. “Me, too,” I admitted. “Maybe this is a stepping stone.”

“Or a stumbling block,” Mark replied. We sat down on the curb under a streetlight and thought it over, dreading the decision that seemed to already be made.

Sue leased an SUV sports utility vehicle to pull a small trailer over 2000 miles to Tennessee, and handed Mark the keys. The drive across country seemed to take an eternity, despite Sue quietly writing most of the way. While I gave Mark a break and drove awhile, he looked over Sue’s recent journaling.

“This reads like a fantasy story,” Mark told her.

“You’re looking at content,” Sue accused.

“No,” Mark countered, “I’m referring to how you’ve written this. What you write out is for your benefit only. It is not written to be read by others.

Actual deprogramming looks more like…” Mark looked around for one of my ever-present notebooks. Turning to me he asked, “May I show Sue what deprogramming looks like?”

“Of course,” I answered. “My notebook is in the backseat.”

Mark retrieved it and randomly opened it. “See how disjointed this is?” Mark asked her, pointing to the side notes, varied handwriting from different personas, incomplete thoughts, and notes of intrusive memory flashes. “It is not written for anyone to read, but rather to pull down compartmentalized barriers in the brain. By writing out memory this way, you’ll regain access to all of your mind at once.”

“I never fill in the blanks with what ‘might’ have happened in order for it to read smoothly,” I elaborated. “Eventually, the picture comes together much the way a jigsaw puzzle does. By asking myself questions like ‘how did I get there’ and ‘where did I go afterwards’, I gain more pieces and eventually the memory is complete. It is important to write out one memory compartment, or one personas' memory, and then expand the insight."

By the time we arrived back in Nashville, Sue was actually writing out memory. She continued writing while Mark and I packed up our few belongings for our move to Alabama. We kenneled our red Chow guard dog, Tong, our two remaining pet raccoons Tycoon[2] and Marty, and our huge white wolf dog who recently had adopted us, and put them in the Pacer. Then we caravanned vehicles for the short journey to the tiny, two bedroom house we had located on the outskirts of Huntsville. The quasi-rural neighborhood would be ideal for memory recovery, while the lack of big city distractions would allow for inward focus.

Mark and I used the house's tiny office for compiling the documents and paperwork we would need to testify before Congress in August. When the Permanent Select Committee of Intelligence Oversight officially postponed our testimony until the next spring, Mark and I shifted our focus to generating income instead. Sue's contribution to household expenses rarely covered the rent and utilities, which left no extra cash for fuel to travel to see Kelly in Memphis. Nor did we have cash for groceries. Sue's personal wealth was extravagant, yet the gourmet foods she stored in our refrigerator were off limits to us. When her constant additions to her wardrobe overfilled her closets, there was plenty of room in ours.

Mark and I were resourceful, and together we began repairing and reconditioning old motorcycles for resale. There was nothing Mark couldn't fix, and it exercised my brain just to work beside him. We enjoyed working together as much as playing together, and this means of generating enough income to sustain us was a pleasure. I knew there was no limit to the amount of money Mark could make under normal circumstances, but our situation was not yet conducive to routine living.

One time when we went to visit Kelly, another child had asked her why we didn't bring her presents. Kelly quickly replied, "My parents are too busy making a difference to make a buck." Indeed, that's exactly what we were doing.

Occasionally Sue and I would take a break from work to play tennis together. Competitive sports were not my interest, but I enjoyed the physical challenge of tennis. After playing for hours one hot afternoon, we sat down in the shade to drink our water. I relayed a story to Sue about a tennis tournament I'd been in. "While Alex Houston played golf in the annual Charlie Pride Pro-Am Golf Tournament in Albuquerque, New Mexico, I joined the ladies for a tennis tournament. My partner[3] and I made it all the way to the championship finals. We ended up in second place after a two-hour play off because we were laughing so hard at our opponents. They were angry and disgusted with us for laughing, and the madder they got the more we laughed."

"That's not funny," Sue said.

"It was funny because the water coolers were filled with beer, and neither of us drank beer," I told her. "But the Albuquerque afternoon sun was so hot, and we were so thirsty we drank some. It went straight to our heads and cost us the tournament. Having such a good time meant far more than any trophy ever could have."

"Didn't they have coke?" she asked.

"Only the cocaine variety," I answered. From my experience, CIA cocaine ops were what Charlie Pride[4]'s tournaments were really all about. Part of the cash generated was laundered through his bank in Dallas, Texas. Pride was tied into the same Savings and Loan scandals that Neil Bush[5] had been caught in. Even Bush Jr.'s baseball "bud" Nolan Ryan[6] owned a bank associated with CIA black ops. Additionally, the drug running I was involved with was channeled through Albuquerque's LA Dodger baseball training camp and profits laundered through local Catholic charities. Charlie Pride's annual Pro-Am Golf Tournaments covered it all. With respect to Sue's mode of heightened suggestibility, I kept these details to myself.

"I won a tennis tournament once," Sue told me. "Reagan met me afterwards and accessed my sex programming."

“Did you write this out?” I asked, concerned with Sue voicing possible memory.

“Of course,” she assured me. “Reagan bought me drinks and dinner, and then we took a long romantic walk on the beach.”

“Why did you get to eat and drink while under mind control?” I asked. I knew that three days of sleep, food, and water deprivation were an integral part of MK Ultra trauma based mind control, especially before being prostituted to the likes of Reagan.

“Why did you get to drink at the tennis tournament?” She countered.

“Because we had been there for a week, and this was the last day,” I answered. “I wasn’t programmed for the tennis tournament, Houston just wanted me out of the way for a while.”

“Well,” Sue said defensively, “I can’t help it if Reagan didn’t like you and that he was in love with me.”

When we returned home, I told Mark about the conversation. “I didn’t mean to be therapeutically incorrect opening up conversation,” I told him. “And I didn’t know how to respond to what she was saying.”

“Reagan doesn’t love you,” Mark teased. “How does that make you feel?”

“Between the tortures and traumas,” I laughed, “I don’t think Reagan liked me any better than Cheney or Bush did. Why does Sue say things like that?”

“Ego,” Mark answered.

“What is that?” I wondered. My own ego had been shattered before it developed, leaving me to find my true identity at soul level after I’d deprogrammed.

“Perception of self,” Mark simply defined.

“Perception of self based on social engineering and what others say?” I asked. It seemed that ego was outside of self while true-to-soul identity was within.

“Sue’s massive ego makes it difficult for her to heal completely,” Mark told me. “It is a challenge for her to deprogram when she is constantly comparing herself to others. I’ll have a talk with her about this again tonight.”

Later that evening when Mark brought up the conversation, Sue demanded, “Tell me the components of mind control, then.”

“You need to remember for yourself,” Mark encouraged her, just in case there was some remote possibility that she had been exposed to mind control.

“I have a degree in psychology,” Sue reminded him. “I have a right to this information. Besides, Rod needs it for his book so he can include accurate information on mind control.”

“I’ve already talked about this with Rod by phone,” Mark told her. “And he agreed not to discuss it with you until after you reintegrate.”

Sue stomped to her room and slammed her door. Over the next few weeks, she continued to reintegrate and heal from incest despite herself. Rod came to visit as planned, and expressed more excitement over Sue’s healing process than she did.

“This is absolutely remarkable!” he exclaimed. “I can see she has fused and may even be reintegrated by the time my book comes out!” Rod was in the final edit stages of his novel on mind control, and asked Mark for his input. They spent hours going over the manuscript, which provided Mark a prime opportunity to give Rod coping skills for the childhood abuse he had endured. Rod’s trust for Mark was as pure as his commitment to helping others.

One evening we were all gathered around the dining room table celebrating Rod’s completion of his book.

“How ‘bout a beer?” Mark offered, peering into the refrigerator.

Rod declined. “No thank you. I’m high on life.”

Mark laughed. “I used to get high on life but I built up a tolerance.”

We all laughed, enjoying Rod’s last night in Alabama. Sue was solemn, however. “You all act as though you believe you can change the world,” she accused.

“Actually I’d rather just make a difference,” I replied lightly. “Isn’t that what life is for? To make a positive difference?”

“I’d want to make some kind of contribution to humanity,” Rod said, “even if I had never heard of mind control.”

“It’s not so easy turning the negative of mind control into a positive,” Mark agreed. “Raising awareness does make a difference, though.”

“Since my experience was only incest,” Sue complained, “I guess I have nothing to contribute.”

“Sue,” Rod reminded her. “You healed. You have fused and are on your way to total recovery. You live with two of the finest people on the planet, and have contributed to my book through your experience.”

“I want my name on the cover then,” Sue demanded.

“OK,” Rod told her. “I’ll tell you what. If you’ll do the leg work on getting this book printed and pay half the printing cost, you can add your name to the cover.”

Sue brightened, excited at the prospects. “Really?” she asked. “My name can be on the cover of Starshine?”

“Right after mine,” Rod smiled. “You’ve got the manuscript right here. When you solidify a deal to have it printed, I’ll wire you half the money.”

The day after Rod returned to Hawaii, Sue was sitting at the kitchen table asking what alias she should use on the book. “Why not use your real name?” I asked, not comprehending why someone who had suffered from a dissociative identity disorder would want to create a new identity.

“For legal reasons,” she responded. “’Brice Taylor’ sounds like a real name.” It never occurred to Mark, me, or Rod that Sue would eventually remove Rod’s name from his book entirely, ironically change the title to “Thanks for the Memories,” and keep all the sales profits. Sue’s conniving means were more focused than ever now that she was reintegrated.

“You were right!” I told Mark. “Before you started working with her, you said that ‘Sue is who she is, and reintegrated she would still be Sue only be more focused!’”

“I really wish I wasn’t right as often as I am,” Mark said.

“But this is important information for mental health professionals just the same,” I said, still excited. “For one, a person can heal from false memories; and for two, all multiples are not nice when they do heal. Why do you think she is stealing Rod’s book?”

“I want to know why she is creating a new identity for herself,” Mark answered.

One afternoon after playing a round of tennis, Sue and I were talking under the shade tree. “I knew Michael Jackson,” she told me.

Considering that she was from Southern California, that seemed viable enough until she added, “I had sex with him all the time.”

“Sue,” I reminded her, “Michael Jackson was busted for pedophilia last December.”

“If he was a pedophile, he would be in prison,” she stated.

“It’s sad that his reputed MK Ultra mind control victimization has been overlooked by the press,” I responded. “I really thought mind control would penetrate media censorship this time, and still cover-up surpassed justice. Mark says the ‘gloved one’ is a huge cash cow that they haven’t finished milking into poverty. He really needs to be stopped now for his sake and the children’s sake. Understanding his circumstances would make a world of difference.”

Among those Mark and I networked with, Elizabeth Taylor was highly respected for her quiet activism against mind control. It was no surprise when she whisked Michael off to a highly specialized hospital in the UK to have him deprogrammed. The media spotlight was still on him for his blatant pedophilic actions, however, and the CIA could not allow for the press to discover the causation. LaToya had already been silenced, and there would be no limits to how far the government would go to cover this up. When Mark received a tip from an Intelligence contact to watch a televised broadcast at 3AM, we tuned in. Elizabeth Taylor’s press agent was raising public awareness to his and Ms. Taylor’s plight. Their lives were on the line since the CIA had stormed her residence and physically extracted Michael Jackson before he could be deprogrammed. Once again mind control was covered up at all costs.

“Mind control is the perfect defense for any crime,” Sue speculated, smiling.

I shuddered at the look in her eye. “When someone gains awareness while healing from any level of dissociation, they become responsible for their actions.”

I packed up our tennis equipment and drove back to the house to tell Mark what had transpired. He was as appalled as I was. “She plans to release Rod’s fiction book as her reality so she can use mind control as a defense against any crime.”

“Mind control is not a defense,” Mark said. “It’s a factor.”

“Against what?” I wondered. Stealing Rod’s book? We didn’t wait to find out, and asked her to leave immediately.

Chapter 37

TRUTH MAKES U.S. FREE

One evening we received a phone call from our friend in Alaska. “There is an herbal tea on the market that may actually heal your digestion,” he announced excitedly. “It revives intestinal action, bringing it back to life.” My tummy still gave me difficulties at times, and I was eager to try this tea. “It is pricey, so I’ll have my sister bring some to you since she lives nearby anyway,” he assured us. Sure enough, she brought me a ‘lifetime’ supply of the tea, which worked wonders for my health. These two wise and thoughtful friends touched our lives in many ways.

They introduced us to their circle of friends, which seemed to infinitely expand like ripples in a pond, encompassing good ol’ boys and political activists all the way through State and National politics. It was healing for me to encounter so many aware people on so many social levels who were actively making a positive difference with their knowledge. Everyone I met without exception held these two in highest esteem and respect. Among those we met was an attorney by the name of Larry Becraft. Becraft was primarily focused on tax issues[1], yet provided invaluable insight and advice on our situation.

Larry Becraft is an ambitious, tall, handsome man with a powerful presence and booming voice. Never have I heard anyone speak so forcefully to say the gentlest, wisest things. Becraft strode all the way across his Huntsville office in two giant steps, exercising his agility to maneuver through strategically scattered stacks of papers and legal documents to clear off a few chairs.

“Have a seat,” he boomed, flashing his boyish smile. I watched him like a bug under glass, curious how any attorney could possibly be clean. Larry Becraft was highly respected and widely known, and he and Mark got along as though they'd been friends for years.

"How 'bout a cup of coffee?" he offered, searching underneath a pile of papers. I suspected he was searching for the coffee maker and declined. "Ah hah!" he boomed, pleased with his discovery of an ashtray. He promptly lit a deliciously fragrant cigar, offering one to Mark. "This clutter is organized," he explained. "I don't have a secretary or a separate room for filing all these papers while I work on them, nor do I have the time to properly present myself as a conventional attorney." Becraft's unpretentiousness was appealing. His long legs stretched comfortably out in front of him while his toes wiggled free in a pair of sandals.

"I appreciate you taking the time to meet with us today," Mark assured him.

"I'm glad for the break, actually," Becraft said. "Ever since I set precedent in that groundbreaking tax case against the Feds, I've had more cases than I can juggle."

"It looks like you're in the same position we are," Mark told him, looking around at the obvious lack of funding. "People wake up when they're hit in the pocketbook, so by the time they turn to you or me for help, they're broke."

Becraft flashed that smile again. What judge could possibly resist that winning smile? "We aren't awarded cash when we win a case, either," he elaborated. "We just keep the Feds from helping themselves to more of our money. It's hard to make ends meet under circumstances like these, but as you know, success isn't always measured in dollars. Someday, someone with money will come along and empower us to accomplish even more for the people of this country."

"We just received noticed that our testimony before Congress has been postponed again," Mark told him. "With Bud Cramer[2] on the Oversight panel, we've probably been postponed indefinitely."

“You need to be prepared for that contingency,” Becraft advised. “Compile all that information you were prepared to present to Congress and put it in book form.”

“We’re not authors,” Mark protested.

“This isn’t about writing a book,” he wisely explained, “it’s about having pertinent information ready to release en masse.”

“With certain members of Congress censored from hearing it for ‘reasons of national security,’ how can we release it to the public?”

“This country needs positive change through public awareness,” Becraft answered. “Congress obviously isn’t going to make the necessary changes, but the people will. Everyday they are waking up and gaining a point of reference for understanding what you and Cathy have to say. This case should be tried before the court of public opinion anyway so its not just all swept under the rug.”

Becraft paused a minute, thinking. Then he lifted a corner of the Turkish rug covering the wooden floor of his office and extracted a handful of papers. He smiled and laid them on a stack near his desk. “I knew I’d find those,” he muttered before continuing. “Footnote and reference as many facts as you can.”

“Look, Larry,” Mark told him. “That won’t be so easy. For one, most of the information Cathy has reported is still classified.”

“She hasn’t taken an oath of secrecy,” he countered. “A ‘Rite-to-Remain-Silent’ program does not constitute an oath. Laws of sedition do not bind her. If you can’t prove the facts as right, let researchers try to prove them wrong. I already know they can’t find fault with her facts.”

“Dates and times are most likely off a bit, though,” Mark argued. “Since she had no concept of time and consequently no sense of distance under mind control, certain dates and places still need validating through legitimate investigation. We intended to point that out when we presented the facts to Congress."

"So tell the people that," he said. "The facts can all be validated through expanded thinking and concern for truth. The point is people need to know about mind control. They need to know what is happening to this country's education, mental health, and justice systems. They need to know what the New World Order agenda is about before NAFTA makes economic slaves of all of us. Armed with truth, there is no way to lose."

Mark nodded in agreement. "Truth is mightier than the sword."

"And granddad's squirrel gun," he added. "The militias need to know what they are up against in order to be as effective as this country needs them to be."

"Granddad's squirrel gun is no match for DARPA," Mark agreed. "Squirrel guns in the hands of potentially 200 million people have the Feds sweating, though."

Becraft smiled. "They won't be able to disarm this country. There are too many people already awake, aware, and armed."

"If the latest TV polls tell the people they are disarmed, they might blindly follow it," Mark speculated. "People are what they're told, and they love to be told what the majority is doing so they can do it too. It's a socially engineered herd mentality."

"Follow the leader," Becraft nodded, setting down his cigar. "Only the leader is an illusion. A lie. I'm telling you, we need to get the truth out there."

"When the people lead, leaders follow," I quipped.

"The people better get to leading," Mark added, standing up to leave.

“Get that book out,” Becraft said.

On the way home, we discussed Becraft’s advice. Commenting on his character was first, though.

“I’ve never seen an attorney with true-to-soul projection,” I told Mark as he started the drive back home. “He is purely unpretentious.”

“I’ve never seen one so intelligent,” Mark said. “And wise. Rather than perceive Larry Becraft as an attorney, I see him as a strong man with integrity and a fine sense of justice.”

“And a brilliant mind,” I added.

“His intelligence is off the scale,” Mark agreed. “That must be how he can stay so clean swimming in a pool of scumbag attorneys. He’s definitely unique, and I sure am glad to have legal advice I can trust.”

“So how do we write this book?” I asked.

“Like he said, we’ll write it from the documents and deprogramming notes,” Mark reiterated. “We’ll pick and choose pertinent validated facts according to what will best give people a clear understanding of mind control. Knowledge is our only defense against it, so we will make sure the knowledge we share is comprehensive.”

We drove in silence, thinking through the task at hand.

Finally, I said, “We need to know the pulse of the nation, what it is that is waking folks up and why.”

“Radio is an excellent medium for determining that,” Mark reminded me. “It is a resurrected technological artifact whose time has gone and come again. Now radio has fast become the voice of the people.[3]”

“Maybe by speaking out on some of these radio shows, taking questions, and getting feedback we’ll have a better feel for the pulse of the nation,” I ventured. “Through networking like we have, we already know key issues with which people are concerned.”

“Like Global Education?” Mark elaborated.

“Exactly,” I responded. “We know many people are home schooling their children since the education system is failing so miserably in the areas of applicable intelligence and morality.”

“We know hundreds of kids are missing or are being returned to abusers by a failed justice system,” Mark continued. “We know militias are gathering strength, that people refuse to pay taxes to a government that doesn’t represent them, and that the CIA has taken their drug war to our streets. Plus video games are creating violence the same way they erode critical analysis for combat in the military. These are all points of reference many people are gaining.”

“People seem to be aware of the Masonic connection,” I commented.

“We should be careful with that,” Mark warned. “Most Masons don’t even know what is going on until they get higher up in the organization.”

“Like 33rd degree?” I asked, not really understanding the levels of Free Masonry I was exposed to throughout my MK Ultra victimization. “Byrd was 33rd degree. So was Reagan.”

“Even that isn’t so black and white,” Mark elaborated. “Byrd climbed his way up, and Reagan was given an honorary degree through the global elite. Either way, the 33rd degree is granted as an honor rather than earned.”

“What about Traficant?” I asked. “I know he is a Mason, only he’s connected into the Order of the Rose branch. And he’s not even a Jesuit that I know of. What about VanderJagt and Ford? They were part of my grandpa’s Masonic Blue Lodge in Michigan that launched me into MK

Ultra. I’m not really sure where the Order of the Rose and Free Masonry converge. Especially since the Catholics pretend to oppose Masons.”

“Catholics oppose Masons the same way they oppose satanism,” Mark observed. “The faction of Catholics you were exposed to need the negatives to create a need for their solutions and visa versa.”

Talking about it seemed to be clarifying the confusion. “The Mormons I knew were exactly the same way! The only secret society I know of that spanned Mormons, Catholics, CIA, Jesuits, and Masons was the Order of the Rose.”

“That would be your answer then.”

“But people only have a point of reference for Masons,” I complained. “Or for the Illuminati, which I never even heard discussed around DC. How will people know what I’m talking about when I say ‘Order of the Rose’?”

“People absolutely must expand their knowledge,” Mark pointed out. “They need to think out-of-the-box.”

“The TV box?”

“No,” Mark chuckled. “Well, yes, that too. I was referring to the box social engineering has locked them into. In order for them to effectively combat the invisible menace that has permeated society, they need to learn to recognize it. Labels don’t get it. Even as we are speaking, you qualify ‘Catholics’ and ‘the Catholics you were exposed to.’ We’ve talked about various levels of Masonry. People want to point at one certain group because they’ve become lazy in their thinking. To realize it is more than just one group, and that the individuals comprising the groups have various levels of knowledge and involvement, and that those individuals are all on their own learning path and may expand out of their current Need-to-Know, takes a bit more thought than some people can think to give.”

“People need discernment,” I agreed. “They need spiritual evolution before they incite revolution. How are we going to explain this in the book?”

“We won’t,” Mark answered. “We’ll give them the absolute facts and let them figure it out. With the meteorical rise of NSA’s internet they can now instantly look such information up for themselves.”

I gulped. Could people wake up in time? Could they gather their strength of spirit? “Wisdom outthinks a criminal mind every time,” I ventured.

“Truth makes u.s free,” Mark said, turning onto the county road leading to our house. “Let’s arm them with truth and we’ll have done all we can.”

Chapter 38
PULSE OF THE NATION

Key people were being murdered by the Clinton Administration at such an alarming rate that the term “suicided” evolved into “Arkacided.” Arkansas, Clinton’s home state, was littered in bodies and awash in the blood of both Bill’s and Hillary’s associates. When the Clintons took office in the White House, the war zone that always accompanied them extended to DC. An infamous document known as the ‘Clinton Hit List’ began to circulate among the people of the United States. Law enforcement was forced into protecting a corrupt system rather than the people, and the corporate controlled media was cowering to censorship. Citizens quickly learned to inform and protect themselves while militias organized and grew in an effort to meet the escalating needs of the people.

Bill Clinton’s Mena Airport drug operation spawned more deaths than just the infamous murder of drug dealer Barry Seal[1]. Two teenage boys, Kevin Ives and Don Henry, were murdered after apparently stumbling onto the Mena drug operation[2]. Their remains were found on the railroad tracks in accordance with Wayne Cox’s m.o.[3] At least six people investigating or attempting to expose this horrendous crime were murdered, still in accordance with Cox’s m.o.[4] I had already reported to law enforcement that I had witnessed Cox murdering people on the same pivotal stretch of railroad tracks in the course of Bill Clinton’s Mena CIA drug ops. At great risk to his life, Arkansas Deputy Sheriff John Brown confirmed those murders and more around Mena. Few survived the Mena massacres until pertinent documentation circulated among the people[5] thanks to the efforts of concerned civil servants like John Brown. Since then, John Brown has become an elected Sheriff.

Clinton corruption emanating from Arkansas stunk so bad that an Independent Council was formed to investigate the criminal activity.

While most US citizens sought to arm themselves with truth, some felt hopeless and became desperate. August 13, 1994, a small Cessna airplane deliberately slammed into the White House. Subsequently, the American people lost more rights. Patriot rallies were growing in numbers and frequency, including key gatherings such as the Branch Davidian memorial in Waco that was intended to be an annual event. “We Want This Country Back[6]” and “Just Say No to the N.W.O.” were cries that resounded across the country, yet the voice of the people was replaced in the media by DARPA generated social engineering propaganda.

Blood flowed from the pulse of the nation, and only truth could heal the wound. Mark and I obtained a computer that was little more than an electronic typewriter, and began writing our first draft of TRANCE Formation of America according to Becraft’s suggestion. Rarely did we take a break from this task, as we felt a strong need and urgency to contribute what we knew to humanity. To do anything less would make us a part of the problem rather than part of the solution. Our choice was clear.

Meanwhile, I received a letter from my court appointed attorney Jean Crowe September 16, 1994. Abbott Jordan’s recommendations to have Kelly transferred to the best therapy[7] in the country resulted in dispute from her abusers. ACCT, the oversight group who had transferred Kelly to Charter Lakeside and Abbott Jordan’s care, intervened on yet another placement for Kelly. This time she was transferred to a Christian based institution in Knoxville, Tennessee called Jabneel. Jabneel was closer in proximity to our new residence in Alabama, yet I was distraught over Kelly’s being transferred from Abbott Jordan’s care. Admittedly he had accomplished all he could with Kelly without necessary supportive technological remedies, yet his compassion and understanding proved invaluable. Nevertheless, Kelly was transferred and Mark and I immediately went to see her and to meet with her new caregivers.

The warmth, compassion, and kindness with which we were met at Jabneel were encouraging. Children were the focus of Jabneel’s staff rather than federal funding, which meant they could not easily be threatened, bribed, or coerced into cover-up. Kelly was devastated that she had not been returned to her loving family and was still in a holding pattern. She was ready for positive progress, and Jabneel looked like more of the same to her. We walked outside to talk.

"We can talk free!" I exclaimed, while Mark tended to staff inside. "I don't know who these people are, but they obviously care about you and our family unity."

Suddenly, Kelly looked up and brightened. "A horse!" she exclaimed, slowly moving toward the fence that separated her from the stallion. The stallion pricked up his ears and his eyes softened as he walked toward her. The Horse Whisperer[8] had yet to be published, and Monty Roberts[9] was relatively unknown. Yet Kelly's ability to communicate with animals, especially horses, was a natural. All it takes is true-to-soul humility[10], and Kelly's was evident.

She looked at me, her eyes dancing. No words were exchanged since she and I did not require them for communication any more than she and the stallion did. She slipped under the fence to tenderly caress her new friend. The stallion appeared to be as pleased as she was. "Maybe this won't be such a bad place after all," Kelly announced when she crawled back under the fence.

By the time Mark and I left Jabneel, we felt confident that Kelly would be cared for. This was small consolation for not raising her ourselves in our loving care, yet it helped all of us to deal with the adverse circumstances.

We resumed writing as quickly as we arrived back in Alabama. Progress seemed slow since we were eager to release the truths we were privy to. The need for information continued to escalate while America was being scrutinized globally for it's corporate driven political criminal corruption that was oozing around the globe.

The warring and economic hazards that had been generated for decades since John F. Kennedy was assassinated paralleled the adverse environmental impact. Bush Sr.'s noncompliance[11] with the 1992 Earth Summit in Brazil left the rest of the world astounded by US apathy, while HAARP and global warming remained unchecked. Tides were turning, glaciers were melting, rain forests were burning, ocean reefs were dying, storms were raging, and that was only the beginning. The Clinton Administration was not helping to save the planet either. Senator Byrd's "Clean Air and Water Act" continued to line his pockets with payoffs while corporations polluted both air and water, and environmentalists were portrayed as moronic terrorists by the media.

Spooks from around the world began contacting us. Mark's reputation as a measuring stick for who is honest, who is corrupt, and who is an infil*traitor* now extended out of the country. His integrity and tenacity were infinite, earning him the respect of all who knew him. "You've become an urban legend," a spook told him. "At a time when the rest of the world needs to see an American hero emerge from its ashes, you rise like a phoenix."

Mark was never one to adhere to such images. He was too busy. When he began to feel the weight of the world on his shoulders, he turned to a respected friend and mentor. "We've got to go to DC," he told me.

I gulped, but did not question his decision. He certainly knew the pros and cons of our traveling into Washington, DC. Not only had I survived my preconceived terror on our first trip into Huntsville, Alabama, we now lived there in relative safety. Besides, I consoled myself that we would get to see Kelly in Knoxville on the way back from DC.

It was early December when we drove up to Colonel Fletcher Prouty's mansion in the DC suburb of Alexandria, Virginia and knocked on the door. No answer. "He's expecting us," Mark told me. "You stay here and I'll go around front and ring the bell." I waited, assuming Mark had roused him. A few minutes later, I heard him approach the door where I stood. He swung it open, warmly inviting me in to join him and Mark.

I gasped and nearly fell back down the steps. Fletcher Prouty looked amused, the corners of his mouth turning up and disappearing in his wise, wrinkled face. His eyes twinkled bright, flashing white light like a laser penetrating my being. His energy was more powerful than any I have ever encountered, and it was an energy of pure love. Again, he invited me in. I found my footing this time, and gratefully went inside.

Fletcher Prouty's sitting room was an elaborate library of highly polished rose wood, with books stacked haphazardly everywhere. Obviously his personal library was well used and not intended for ornamental display. "I want to see TRANCE in my library soon," he told us, motioning us into easy chairs. Mark sat across from him where they could look each other in the eye as they talked, so close that I could not hear a word from where I sat. Did Col. Prouty know my hearing was defective? It was a profound privilege, regardless, just to sit in the same room while these two wise spooks conversed. Apparently they knew each other well. As their conversation became animated, I still couldn't hear a thing and smiled to myself. Undoubtedly Fletcher Prouty did know this, and had held private conversations in front of others before. He was a spook's spook, and I felt as though I had just entered a Robert Ludlum[12] novel.

He stood up, moving with the kind of fluid blur of agility that only martial artists knew, and picked up a book from his desk. He pulled a pen from his pocket and wrote in the book, handing it to me with a smile. "Thank God you survived," he said, and sat back down to talk further with Mark.

I looked at the cover of his book. I read: The Secret Team, the CIA and its Allies in Control of the United States and the World by L.Fletcher Prouty[13], Col.U.S.A.F. (Ret.)[14] Every spook I had ever met was "retired," I mused. The back cover read:

"…he (Prouty) spent his last nine years of service in the Pentagon as the official Focal Point Officer--first for the Air Force, and then for the entire Department of Defense with the CIA. All CIA military activities were thus channeled through him. Not being a CIA man, he was exempt from taking the oath of secrecy. Being the Focal Point Officer put him in a very privileged position: in effect, Prouty has far more knowledge of CIA activities than almost all members of that organization."

Wow. I had had no clue, and certainly never encountered the likes of Fletcher Prouty while in the Pentagon with Dick Cheney[15]. I only knew a bit of his history; that Fletcher Prouty had worked very closely with JFK[16] and was deployed to the South Pole at the time of the assassination to ensure he was out of the way. At the same time, Prouty notes that George Bush, Sr. was in Dallas. I wanted to know more. Prouty asserted that Kennedy's assassination in essence signaled a hostile take-over of the United States, shifting power from the Presidency to the CIA. Reality sunk in while I sat in his library. Fletcher Prouty could make a world of difference with what he knew and learned while earning the confidence of the Secret Government from his Pentagon position.

In the 1992 Preface to the Second Edition of The Secret Team, Prouty wrote:

"Like it or not, we now live in a new age of 'One World'… This is the fundamental game of the Secret Team. They have the power because they control secrecy and secret intelligence…"

This man "thanks God that I survived" when his knowledge and insight could ultimately change the world for the better? If only people knew that this man who held the key to America's future was pure love energy in motion. Wisdom. Peace. The truths he knew indeed would set us free. And Fletcher Prouty was revealing all to anyone with eyes to see and ears to hear.[17]

Mark and I left Fletcher Prouty's residence, and decided to lighten up by taking a few photos around DC before returning to Alabama. Since we were already in the vicinity, we drove by the CIA first and acted like ignorant tourists clicking pictures. When CIA security reprimanded us and demanded the film as we knew they would, Mark laughingly reminded them, "The CIA doesn't own the highway, do they?" and left. We took photos of the Department of Justice where "The Price of Freedom is Eternal Vigilance" is carved in stone. Walking across the mall to the Smithsonian, we saw a few vendors selling forbidden souvenirs. We bought several bumper stickers including "DARE to keep the CIA off drugs" in response to their popular "DARE to keep kids off drugs" program. I chose one that read

"DARE to think for yourself" and we even bought the ever-popular "We're Not in Kansas Anymore[18]" bumper sticker for posterity. Mark laughingly held up a tee shirt for me imprinted with the FBI's Federal Witness Protection Program emblem and the words "You Don't Know Me." The Feds certainly didn't know me, or they would have realized I would speak out and tell their criminal secrets.

"I'll take you to a nice restaurant for dinner," Mark said. Of all the times I had been in Washington, DC during the Reagan Bush Administration, I had never once been allowed to eat due to mind control. Mark knew this, and opted for a fine seafood restaurant reputed to be the best in DC. We counted out the last of our spending money, and went inside Phillips' Restaurant.

"The name is right," I said, referring to Mark's gourmet chef abilities. The dinner was good but I'd been spoiled by the best for years, and I realized for the first time that going out to dinner would always be secondary to what I could eat at home.

On the long drive home, silence was as comfortable as our conversations. A few memories had surfaced as though they were yesterday after being to so many familiar places, and I wrote. My programming was no longer accessible, and I did not trigger the way I used to. The bits and pieces I remembered now only filled in the blanks, rarely even changing my perceptions. We talked very little about Mark's conversation with Fletcher Prouty, focusing only on the strong points. Col. Prouty looked forward to the release of TRANCE since he, like Becraft, could not foresee certain members of Congressional Intelligence Oversight allowing us to testify in April as planned. Prouty shared former President Truman's disdain over the 1947 National Security Act, and diligently sought to have it repealed. Our case was one more reason why he opposed the National Security Act. Ironically considering the position he held in the Pentagon for years, Prouty was a proponent of truth and denounced secrets above all else.

"On The Secret Team's Acknowledgement page," I ventured, "I noticed reference to a TV producer by the name of Al Levin."

“He and his bother Marc Levin are a powerful team working behind the scenes,” Mark answered before I completed my question. “Blowback Productions[19] will undoubtedly continue to emerge as a true voice of the people.”

Knowing that Fletcher Prouty was providing ammunition to those arming the front lines with truth in this mind war was comforting. Win was inevitable.

It was the next day before we reached Knoxville and stopped to see Kelly. As always, it was bittersweet seeing her, enjoying every moment we had together before being separated again. Her caregivers at Jabneel were fully aware that National Security had been invoked on Kelly’s case. They shared our frustration that Kelly was denied the available, though suppressed, qualified technological rehab she so desperately needed. Instead they provided her with the best coping skills they could. Much of what they offered, they learned from Mark while Kelly and I talked.

We walked outside, enjoying the fresh air as we aimed towards the fence where the stallion Kelly befriended was eagerly waiting for her. I reached in my purse and pulled out a carrot I’d brought, which Kelly offered him once she slid under the fence. The best therapy and counseling Kelly received was in her silent relationship with the stallion. It occurred to me that under any circumstances, her natural connection to horses provided the deepest healing she could experience[20] outside of her loving family.

Our visit ended much too soon, although all the time in the world would not be enough, it seemed. Mark and I still had a long drive ahead of us. We hugged Kelly and began the journey home.

The phone was ringing off the wall when we got back in. We had only been gone a few days, yet we received numerous calls. “Where ya’ll been?” Billy asked. Even though we didn’t see him very often since we moved from Nashville, our friend at the Copy Shop was as close to us as ever. “I’ve got a box full of mail to ship you,” he told us. “I’ve been collecting up all the mail from your Post Office Box, and it’s accumulating fast. You have correspondence from all over the world in here. What are you two up to?”

Mark briefly filled him in, explaining our progress in writing TRANCE and international interest it already stirred. After chatting a few minutes, he hung up only to have the phone ring again. This time it was our former neighbor who lived near Mark's mother. "Melba's doing really well," he assured us. "I look in on her all the time. There's been a few detectives come by looking for you, though it's nothing like it used to be when ya'll lived here," he drawled. "I really miss you, but I must admit I don't miss the noisy helicopters. They left when you did."

"Maybe Fort Campbell rerouted their flight pattern," Mark suggested.

"Yeah, right," he laughed. "Just one more of those coincidences, huh?"

"Could be," Mark chuckled. "I think they rerouted them over our house here in Alabama." They talked a bit more before Mark hung up.

"Black helicopters are a popular topic of conversation these days," he told me as I finished unpacking our bags. "I've grown so used to them now that…" The telephone interrupted him.

I picked it up this time.

"Is the book ready?" Becraft boomed into the phone, causing me to fumble it.

I put it back up to my ear, "We're working on it."

"I heard you met with Fletcher." What? I'd heard him, but surely he didn't mean Fletcher Prouty. We hadn't told anyone. Noting my hesitancy, Becraft continued. "The man's a saint." Yes, he must mean Fletcher Prouty. I knew our phone was monitored, and didn't know how to respond.

"Just a minute, please." I said, handing the phone to Mark as though it were a hot potato. Mark apparently was as comfortable with the conversation as Becraft was, and I relaxed. I wasn't sure how Becraft had learned of our meeting, but the thought of him having one of those inaudible quiet conversations in Fletcher Prouty's library struck me funny. I was still smiling when Mark hung up and explained to me that Becraft heard Fletcher Prouty talking about MK Ultra on the radio earlier that day. “He’s getting the word out,” Mark was saying as the phone rang again.

This time it was a serious call from a group of psychiatrists and psychologists in Texas who were hosting a mind control seminar in March. They wanted us to speak. Mental health professionals from all over the country would be in attendance to further their educational credits. Mark’s reputation had spread, and he was reputed to be the authority on mind control. Apparently several papers had been submitted to the APA by psychiatrists referring to Mark’s knowledge, and I was regarded as the model for recovery. It seemed that the group we spoke with in Southern California were true to their word in circulating the information under their credentials. Therapists had reached an impasse in treating survivors of mind control, mostly due to the False Memory Foundation. It was widely known that Mark had proved with Sue that recovery from False Memory was possible. His knowledge was in demand by the mental health community, and they were willing to host us for the Dallas event.

“Most disturbing,” he was told, “the number of survivors has swelled to epidemic proportion. We need your help.”

Mark agreed to talk with them further. In the meantime, we stayed focused on writing TRANCE. The need for truth was epidemic nationwide.

Chapter 39
CAN YOU THINK TO CARE?

“How am I supposed to speak to an auditorium of shrinks?” I asked.

“You’re giving voice to survivors like Kelly who can’t think to speak for themselves,” Mark wisely replied. “What would they want therapists to know so they can heal like you have?”

“Will they care to listen?” I wondered. “Somehow, having hundreds of shrinks condescendingly pull their glasses down to scrutinize me is unnerving.”

“You know as well as I do that the CIA contains many of their crimes by locking people up in mental institutions,” he reminded me. “They tried using Cynthia Turner-Graham to lock you up until we sidestepped it. Having hundreds of shrinks earning educational credits listening to you speak is instant credibility. The CIA can’t even try to use that method of containment on you anymore. Hundreds of shrinks validating your recovery is pretty powerful. Congress can’t ignore it, plus that will be nice to have when TRANCE is published.”

“We need something to wear,” I laughed, noting Mark’s usual attire of a robe. Clothes were not our priority, each of us preferring comfort.

“You’re a fine one to talk,” Mark joked back. I was very comfortable in my own skin.

“Well, shrinks are not going to listen to us looking like this,” I mused. “I’ve got a few things to wear, but I had better lose some weight so I can fit into them.”

“You’re not fat,” Mark noted.

“I know,” I answered, referring to old Charm School programming methods of ‘think it and become it’. “’I am thinner’. Besides, if I stand at attention I automatically lose five pounds.” I threw my shoulders back.

“Oh, that looks great,” Mark said sarcastically. “March in there with a militant stance to speak out on recovery from mind control.”

I giggled. “It’s pretty hard to care about appearance when looks are only skin deep.”

“People are conditioned to listen to speakers who are dressed a certain way,” Mark told me. “We need to appear confident and look more like them and less like us. Appropriate attire would be conservative clothes.”

“They’re shrinks,” I protested, “Can’t they see in our eyes that we are confident and sincere?”

“They’re not going to look at your eyes if you go in there that way!” Mark and I joked and played, adjusting to the idea of speaking publicly to professionals when neither of us lived egotistical pretense. It wasn’t about us, anyway. It was about the information, which we needed to impart in the most comprehensive manner possible. Just the same, I taped a note on the fridge that said, “Eat ‘light’ at night,” and one on the bathroom mirror that said, “Why weight?” Using old Charm School methods to subconsciously adjust my perceptions to produce results of my choice seemed a form of justice in itself.

By the time we arrived in Richardson, Texas for our speaking engagement we were ready. Sue Ford had been invited to set up a booth under the pretense of selling Rod’s book, when in fact all the shrinks already knew she was the prototype of recovery from false memory that was perpetuating a charade. Mark and I were so busy that we barely had time to acknowledge her presence. “No one is buying anything,” she whined. “All they want to do is talk.”

“You’re right,” Mark cleverly alerted her, “No one is buying it.” Sue still didn’t get it.

Speaking was easy once we started. This elaborate symposium was different than from conversing with therapists or offering answers to a devastated community like Marin. Sure enough, as soon as I began to speak, an auditorium of shrinks pulled their glasses down in unison to examine me the way they were taught. Only I wasn’t intimidated. According to APA statistics, 90% of those accredited in mental health had gotten into the business to learn what was wrong with them. This certainly disrobed them in my eyes! After Mark and I made our initial presentation, we held questions and answers, which actually proved to be fun and informative.

We answered the usual questions like “why are you still alive?”

“Wisdom outthinks a criminal mind every time,” I responded. “Aside from that, people need to consider the strength of the human spirit and examine their own spiritual beliefs for answers.”

Mark was more practical than philosophical, offering an answer more suitable to their mind set. He explained the power of the mind and subsequent healing methods used to literally save my life in clinically intellectual terms.

One psychiatrist, obviously uncomfortable standing before his peers took the microphone, blew in it a few times deafening the crowd, then yelled into it “Can you hear me?” Satisfied that all was well, he asked, “Aren’t you afraid of the CIA?”

“Why?”

“They threaten our license and our lives, and we’re just helping people. You two are telling their secrets,” he elaborated while others shook their heads.

“They have as much power as you give them,” Mark answered. “Kind of like ‘satan’ does.” We had already discussed Lt. Col. Aquino[1] and his ‘power of satan’ MK Ultra mind control techniques. Everyone present was familiar with Aquino due to the vast number of survivors they were treating who had been adversely affected by him and/or his satanic offshoots. For this reason Aquino’s former girlfriend, Linda Blood, who wrote the book The New Satanists had been invited to speak at this symposium as well. Mark’s answer incited a few chuckles.

“They are crucifying Bennet Braun,” someone shouted.

“The CIA is notorious for making examples out of their opposition on the forefront,” Mark reminded them. “Whether he is right or wrong, Bennet Braun is their example to mental health professionals the same way Danny Casolaro was to reporters and the media; the same way Peter Tchernev was to concerned parents; and the same way the Branch Davidians were to patriots. If we cave in to their threats, they win.”

“Now you’ve become a threat to them,” someone said, taking the microphone. “Aren’t you afraid to be on the forefront?”

“Mark and I were never perceived as a threat to them until it was too late,” I said. “My abusers believed I would die, and that even if I did survive they believed that I couldn’t recover. Many government secrets and personal reputations were staked on the belief that I could not be deprogrammed to remember that which I was supposed to forget. By the time they realized their error in judgment, we had already reported their secrets to every branch of law enforcement in the country. Again, wisdom outthinks a criminal mind every time. These criminals are intelligent, but they are flat thinkers. They lack depth, they lack soul, and therefore they lack wisdom.”

“Those who do have wisdom,” Mark injected, “learned through Cathy’s recovery that their conclusions on robotic mind control were erroneous, and it shifted their paradigms making them among the strongest supporters we have. They have turned against their flat-thinking peers and are now threatening them. While we may never know the true identities of our new friends in Langley, we know they are aware that we know where covert support is emanating from.”

“How do you know you’re not under mind control now?” A female psychiatrist asked into the microphone, then pulled down her glasses awaiting my response.

“I know who I am,” I answered while my mind sorted through a million more explanations. “I know where I’ve been and I have constant conscious awareness with the ability to think ahead.”

Someone else stood, “Its clear to see that you and Mark are very different personalities. How did you reestablish your identity after being without one for so many years?”

“Once I regained free thought, I gained free will and soul expression,” I began. “I never thought about myself according to other’s perceptions or how society wanted me to project, which is my perception of what ego is. Since my ego was shattered prior to age five, collecting up those pieces didn’t make much sense. So I’m just me, true-to-soul. It feels so good to be free to be me, that I celebrate that freedom everyday.” I smiled. “I suppose that makes freedom a condition of the soul rather than contingent on outside influences.”

The next psychiatrist to take the microphone defensively folded his arms across his chest, making it awkward to ask his question. Somehow, he still raised the microphone to ask, “You said you recovered by making the emotionally incomprehensible logically comprehensible through writing out memory. I get the point, but are you capable of emotion now? It seems ludicrous that you would smile when you obviously should be in tears.”

“When I smile, it is a positive emotional expression,” I began with a smile, then got serious. “The most horrible torture I ever endured was seeing my daughter abused. When she was taken into Tennessee custody, it was as though that abuse continued. Only now I could think to make a difference for her. Of course I cried. I cried rivers of tears and only found myself drowning in them. I wasn’t helping my daughter. Negativity is immobilizing, so I shifted that emotion to logic in order to positively affect her situation. It is ludicrous to apply ‘normal’ emotion to an abnormal situation. Instead, I chose to make a difference for her and other mind control survivors like her by logically imploring you and your peers to care to help. I couldn’t make that point if I were sobbing.”

“Ask your clients what they think, rather than ‘how does that make you feel’,” Mark suggested. “You will get logical answers rather than illogical tears and tantrums. It’s no wonder so many of you report violent reactions from survivors of ritual abuse when you’re indirectly challenging your patients to become illogical.”

One negative responder spoke up, “When are you going to tell me something I don’t already know?”

Mark flashed his infamous smile[2] and said, “I know you and I know you have never recovered a single survivor, so when are you going to apply what you know?”

“How do you deal with forgiveness issues without emotion?” an elderly therapist asked me.

“I understand my abusers,” I explained. “Understanding is more powerful than forgiveness. Forgiveness equates to condoning child abuse whereas understanding arrests it. Equally as important, neither guilt nor rage becomes an issue with understanding.”

Mark injected,” The therapists’ idea of confronting abusers and forgiving them can be dangerous physically and psychologically to survivors of mind control, whereas understanding can help them heal and thus protect them.”

A young woman stood. “I understand the problems group therapy would create for MPD survivors due to their heightened suggestibility. Are there other ways to avoid false memory?”

“Hypnotic regressions are counterproductive,” Mark began.

The young woman interrupted, “Didn’t you use hypnosis on Cathy?”

“Absolutely not,” Mark assured her. “That would be like drowning a fish! She was already tranced and needed to be *de*hypnotised. As I was saying, hypnotic regressions are counterproductive. ‘Rebirthing’ and re-parenting that is so popular among you right now only further entrenches divisions the same way ‘naming’ personas does. These guided image tactics have proven to lead to false memory. Above all, never ask leading questions.”

“Cathy,” an adversarial shrink said, “Since Mark has an intelligence background and knows so much about mind control, did you see him around DC?”

“It’s a good thing I’m recovered,” I responded, “because that is a leading question.”

Everyone laughed, a few people clapped.

“I wish I had met Mark back then,” I continued, “because my daughter and I would have been rescued even sooner.”

Everyone was laughing and clapping, and a few even stood while the shrink shrank in his seat.

Someone wearing a ‘Project Monarch’ tee shirt took the microphone. “When a survivor tells us they were victims of Project Monarch, how do we find out if it is a false memory or real?”

“The same way you would deal with any MK Ultra mind control survivor,” Mark answered. “Have them write out their memory, and begin by deprogramming the program first. Tell them to ask themselves what they know about ‘Project Monarch’ and how they learned it. This same method will help them identify screen memory and even hypnotically induced scrambles. By following the guidelines for deprogramming that we talked about today, anyone can heal from any level of trauma, false memory, or programming.”

“When a client has mental blocks, what can be done to trigger their memory when we don’t know what the triggers are?” he elaborated further.

“Wearing a tee shirt like that might help,” Mark quipped, while laughter rose again. “Seriously,” Mark continued, “they are likely to be wearing triggers themselves. Pay attention to their obsessions and fixations. The easiest way to determine potential triggers is to have your clients make collages. Suggest that they clip pictures and headlines, words, phrases, anything that captivates their focus, and collect them in a box for a week or more. What they clip is important, but how they assemble their collages is even more revealing. Cathy brought copies of her collages with her if you care to see them.” The collages circulated the rest of the afternoon.

I was asked, “To what single thing do you most attribute your ability to heal?”

“Love,” I quickly answered.

“’You said that without free thought, there is no free will. And without free will there is no soul expression.’ If love is soul expression, how could you love before you healed?”

“Mark gave love first,” I explained. “Not necessarily to me since he didn’t know who I was any more than I did. I’m saying that he is love, he exudes love, the magnitude of his caring to rescue my daughter and me is proof of that love. His love energy strengthened my spirit to want to heal. His love gave me hope and the capacity to trust. Love is the most powerful force in the universe, and I attribute my healing to love.”

“We can’t love our patients the way Mark loved you,” someone said, causing laughter.

“Your tone suggests you are referring to sex,” Mark replied. “Whether you do or you don’t have sex with your patients, you are likely to be accused. Multiples are notorious for initiating sex, switching personas, then suing for rape. When you deliberately cause abreaction by asking ‘how does that make you feel?’ or by asking leading questions, or even by twisting words like ‘sex’ and ‘love’, you could be endangering your reputation, your license, and your liberty as well as hindering your patient’s recovery.”

The therapist grew serious and presented the statement again in a reasonable tone. “We can’t love our patients the way Mark loves you.”

“You can gather your own strength of spirit to care to help them heal,” I replied. “Through caring comes understanding, and being understood is a major step toward recovery for any survivor. Knowing that they aren’t clinically crazy, that what happened is the mind’s sane defense to trauma too horrible to comprehend, gives them hope. Your genuine caring and understanding gives them the strength to trust and heal using the methods we’ve discussed today such as writing out memory. Love comes in many forms, and caring is one of them. Again, that is exactly the kind of love Mark first displayed to me.”

The Mind Control symposium proved to be highly successful, and it was deeply rewarding to know that other survivors would heal because of it.

Chapter 40
EVOLUTION OVER REVOLUTION

“Is the book ready yet?” Larry Becraft boomed through the phone again.

“I wish,” I answered. “It’s taking longer than I ever anticipated.”

“I wish it was ready, too, because I need copies to take with me to Waco,” he said. “I’m scheduled to speak, and this year’s patriot rally memorializing the Branch Davidians promises to be even bigger than it was last April 19. David Thibodeau[1], one of the only survivors to not be locked up after the massacre, is scheduled to speak, too. I intended to give him a copy of TRANCE.”

“Please extend our warmth just the same,” I told Becraft.

“Carl Klang[2] is going to be there to sing Seventeen Little Children,” he said solemnly, drawing a deep breath.

“I hope he sings it so loud that it can be heard all the way to DC so Janet Reno and Clinton hear it, too,” I said. “And while he’s at it, I hope Carl sings Wheresoever Eagles Gather[3] and We Want This Country Back loud enough to heard down the road by the Bushes.”

“We do need to hold a rally like this in DC to demonstrate the peaceful intent of the people,” Becraft agreed. “The people need to be heard.”

“They’ll be heard loud and clear during Rolling Thunder[4],” I laughed. Every Memorial Day tens of thousands of bikers roar through DC in tribute to Viet Nam Vets, POWs and MIAs[5]. “Both events deal with mind control, if you think about it.”

“People need to think about it,” Becraft agreed. “Which is why I really wish ya’ll had TRANCE ready. This event in Waco next week is going to be huge.” He paused, then asked, “Is Mark around?”

I interrupted Mark’s writing to give him the phone. I knew he’d want to talk to Becraft.

It seemed everyone we knew was converging on Waco to discuss ideas for preventing such a massacre from ever happening again. That very day—two years to the day on April 19, 1995-- the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City was blown up, killing168 people and maiming more. The media blamed the patriots for what was deemed a “malicious” attack. The citizens of the United States were devastated. No one wanted to believe that their government had declared war on its people. Yet wars are won in the minds of the people, and psychological warfare had been launched in 1947 with the birth of the CIA and the National Security Act.

Traumatized, people became compliant. Terrorized, they became afraid to gather in large groups. Fortunately the internet was coming into wide use giving the people a means of communication within the ‘safety’ of their own homes. People turned off their TVs. They denounced CNN, making the same point by either referring to it as the “Clinton News Network” or the “Criminal News Network.” Instead they turned to radio and shortwave, patriot newspapers and word of mouth. The people desperately needed and were seeking a voice.

Soon after the Oklahoma City Bombing, Mark and I began receiving phone calls requesting us to speak. People needed answers as much as they needed a voice, and they received neither through the media. TRANCE was nearly ready for publication and, believing it would be in print that spring, we accepted a small tour out west to promote it.

Mark, whose vast history leading the highest levels of aviation and tourism marketing in the country, was concerned about promoting a book like TRANCE. Since we were US Government whistleblowers, our ‘freedom of speech’ was contingent upon following strict laws and regulations. Self-publishing was a must.

We had already witnessed the government influencing big publishers to pull key books off the market such as Linda Blood's The New Satanists[6]. This book, once featured in Walmart stores across the country was quickly pulled from the shelves. Other pertinent books fell prey to CIA censorship, and we were determined to avoid that pitfall at all costs. Self-publishing meant we assumed all costs and promotion, and we desperately needed both money and exposure to accomplish our goal of bringing the reality of mind control to light. "I feel like I'm positively marketing all hell breaking loose with a negative budget," Mark said.

I agreed. "Waking people up to the reality of mind control when we only have a 'whistle to blow' is a challenge."

"Perhaps this small tour out west will help get us started," Mark hoped.

"Maybe we'll earn enough money then to run a few ads," I suggested, thinking of the numerous alternative news sources that were now flourishing. Clay Douglas' The Free American[7] newspaper to the internationally popular Nexus Magazine[8] would provide a wide range of readership.

"By law, we can't advertise," Mark explained. "As whistleblowers we have to rely on others to spread the word. If we keep the title of the book simple and confined to one word like TRANCE, it would be easier for others to pick up on it."

"I realize you're the marketing expert," I told him. "Still, TRANCE Formation of America clarifies the fact that the American people can not think to stop the atrocities of the criminals in control of our government. Look what happened to the people of Nazi, Germany since mind control was not figured into global public perception. With computerization and DARPA's technological advancements, Americans are even more mind controlled than the Nazis were. If other countries understand that fact, perhaps they will have compassion. It is my hope and intent to enlist positive help from the world and avoid World War III."

“The facts in TRANCE will do that once they read it,” Mark argued.

“People tend to judge a book by its cover,” I said. “And even those who don’t read it will get the point if we title it TRANCE Formation of America.”

“If people hear the title rather than read it, they are likely to misspell it and fail to read it or get the point,” Mark cautioned.

I respected Mark’s marketing expertise, and understood the difficulties compounded by not having an advertising budget.

“Can we title it ‘TRANCE’ with ‘Formation of America’ as the subtitle?” I asked.

Mark smiled and hugged me. “How can I deny you anything, especially that? You have had everything in your life controlled and decided for you up until now. Obviously this is important to you. It won’t be easy, but I’ll make it work. Besides, academics gravitate to long book titles, and we certainly are meeting a lot of them!”

The editing of TRANCE was expertly completed; the task of indexing, footnoting, and referencing done; and the $50 cover artwork was being assembled for maximum impact. The old familiar question of ‘groceries or stamps?’ was replaced with ‘what haven’t we sold that we can sell in order to print?’ Time dragged on as we sought resolution, while at the ‘same time’ it seemed to fly towards our scheduled speaking engagements out west.

The time had arrived for us to tour out west, and we had no books. Nevertheless, we embarked on the speaking circuit as arranged. The woman who had structured the talks, Eva Vail, was a Mormon refugee in search of answers. After being led astray by a controlling belief system, she was having difficulty finding her path within. Her assistant, Marta Brown, was her stability, inspiration, strength, and reliable friend without whom the whole event would have crumbled much the way Eva’s mind had for her beliefs. For me, Marta was an instant forever-friend and soul sister.

Marta was raised in a Catholic orphanage where abuse and trauma prevailed unchecked by a local public whose vision was clouded by Catholic religiosity. Her Mexican American heritage of Lakota and Pascua Yaqui Tribes bordered between history's justification for slaughtering natives and ignorance of a Catholic faction hell-bent on domination. Marta survived the orphanage, turning within for solace and peace to where she found spiritual wisdom of the ancients[9]. True-to-soul she became strong enough to function brilliantly through the dissociative structure of her traumatized mind. No therapy nor love was given to her, save for the relationship she naturally developed with animals. Her kinship with all life included horses, eagles, dogs, birds, and every other living creature that thrived in nature as she did, embracing the gifts that Mother Nature freely gave.

Marta shared Mark's and my dedication to truth, and turned our otherwise disastrous first speaking tour into a profound success. The two weeks we traveled across country together seemed to have no beginning or end, but rather was a bigger-than-life experience that would reverberate for years to come.

We spoke to parents devastated by atrocious circumstances similar to those in Marin County, California; an assembly of Mormon refugees in Salt Lake City; victims and families of victims of varying levels of mind control; and a wide range of patriots, citizens, and militias. Afraid to gather in large groups, people quietly assembled in basements, schools, churches, and barns. We traveled by van through some of the most beautiful country in America to reach them, from the plains of Montana through the mountains of Idaho, down the coast of Washington state and Oregon. Between destinations we talked for hours, discussing the beauty of the spectacular scenery; each speaking event, the people in attendance and their communities; social engineering and people's point of reference for understanding mind control; human values, ancient spiritual wisdom, animals, and more.

In the Northwestern section of the US, the prevalence of military mind control and the widespread Mormon based alien and satanic themed controls were second only to a powerful combination of the two. We heard numerous reports of "lizard aliens" in combat boots who drove military vehicles. Likewise, “satan” wore military attire and black trench coats ala Lt. Col. Michael Aquino’s initiates. The discussions I’d heard as a child from Michigan’s Governor George Romney[10] regarding the mergence of CIA, Nazi, and Catholic mind control techniques to create a powerful means of control for his Mormon church apparently came to fruition and the devastation was horrific. Each presentation of information along the way focused on that community’s primary concerns in an effort to positively impact the people with truth.

Each stop was different, yet the common thread weaving through society’s woes was mind control. Mark and I personally experienced the pulse of the nation and hearts of the people and responded in kind. Our discussions while driving between destinations were profound, sometimes lightened with laughter and personal insights.

At one point while Mark was driving, I noticed a red convertible sports car slowly passing along side the van as though it were a replica scene from the movie Family Vacation[11]. The beautiful young driver flirted with Mark, who was deep in thought and oblivious to her actions, her revealing attire and flowing blonde hair. I laughed at the scenario and promptly nudged Mark. “Look outside your window!” I giggled, watching his astonished expression at the girl’s obvious beauty.

“What is the matter with you!” Eva Vail shrieked, turning in her seat to face me as she continued a verbal tirade admonishing my lack of jealousy. I was perplexed since I hadn’t been socially engineered to sexist divisions and preconceived notions. After all, why shouldn’t Mark see this beautiful distraction from a long monotonous stretch of highway? Was I supposed to believe he would leave my side to join her in the convertible? Wasn’t monogamy a natural choice rather than a control? Was I immoral, as Eva perceived? This event was significant to me since I realized for the first time that the security of Mark’s and my relationship was far removed from the trivial rules, regulations, and values society perpetuated. The way I saw it, jealousy was a negative that truly had no place in our relationship. Why should it? Jealousy was no part of love.

Mark softly explained, “Cathy now knows security that doesn’t include jealousy.”

Marta and I resumed our light conversation, deeply discussing people’s pursuit of riches, social status, and ego driven goals. “Some people spend their lives enslaved to the economy so they can ‘own’ land, display wealth in terms of a house, jewels, and ‘things’, and enjoy life after they retire,” Marta was saying. “I believe in the wisdom of the ancients that no one ‘owns’ the land our creator has provided.”

“Even if they spend their hard earned money on land,” I agreed, “it is not theirs to take anywhere.” We peered out the van’s windows, appreciating and enjoying nature’s beauty fully even though we hadn’t paid for it.

“A field of maize (corn) was more valuable to Lakota and Pascua Yaqui tribes than accumulated ‘things’ are to wealthy people since it would sustain life,” Marta continued. “Sun and rain was more important than a structure segregating people from nature.”

I pondered Marta’s perspective. “Since people couldn’t control nature, maybe they needed to control whether or not they experience it.”

“So they could experience what instead?” Marta asked, laughing. “Retirement? People work all their lives so they can begin to live after they’ve become old, slow, and embittered from decades in pursuit of shallow values. Materialism is the downfall of man. Its no wonder life has lost meaning. People need to remember. They need to remember what they have forgotten through generations of living outside themselves.”

“Humankind needs a spiritual evolution,” I agreed.

“Evolution[12] over revolution,” Marta said. “That’s why we’re out here. That’s our mission. To remind people. When you speak, you teach them how to remember. You know the way since your path has been an extreme from mind control’s total amnesia to true-to-soul awareness.”

Wow. I knew in my heart that Marta was right. This wasn't about politics. This was bigger than life just like our friendship. She was so wise, so selfless, and her vision far exceeded the moment. The US was in tumultuous political turmoil, yet a physical revolution wouldn't guarantee a change of leadership. This wasn't about finger pointing at certain corrupt individuals who took over our government; it was about us all. Spiritual evolution through truth's wisdom was the only way to peace. Wisdom was the only way humankind would think to stop following leaders hell-bent on enslaving us. Attuned with telepathy Marta added, "Freedom is a condition of the soul, not politics."

On our journey, we stopped in Noxon, Montana to meet with John Trochman. Trochman's Militia of Montana was logically founded on US Constitutional law and the Declaration of Independence. Trochman's M.O.M. had become the leader in America's growing militia movement. Since the media spun views to 'maliciously' blame Ruby Ridge, Waco, and the Oklahoma City bombing on people who upheld Constitutional checks and balances designed to prevent hostile takeover of government, I was eager to learn the truth about M.O.M. for myself. I doubted the media's portrayal of Trochman as a violent man who had financially capitalized on the patriot movement, yet I had no idea what to expect. As we neared Trochman's mountain home, I was absolutely astounded by nature's beauty that paralleled Alaska's splendor. How could anyone wake up to soul rejuvenating beauty such as this each day and have the adversarial attitude the media claimed Trochman had?

We crossed a rickety wooden bridge, bounced a short ways down a two-track road through the woods that stopped at an extended aluminum trailer, and climbed out of the van. Where was the wealth? Where were armed guards?

"Hello!" a voice called. A white haired bearded man walked towards us, his worn shoes flopping across the gravel. I was dumbfounded. There was that feeling again, the same one I'd had when I met Fletcher Prouty. A powerful energy of love grew in magnitude as Trochman approached, nearly knocking me over by the time he embraced me. I realized this was my heightened senses responding to soul's discernment in spiritual affirmation.

Chills rose standing the hair up on my arms. Was this that sensation people spoke of when experiencing truth bigger than life? I glanced over at Marta to see the hair on her arms spiked as though reaching to the heavens and smiled. One thing was clear; nothing about John Trochman fit the media's portrayal of him.

"Come on inside," he offered. "For all practical purposes, this is my home[13], my office, my point of operation for M.O.M., and," he paused while happy little children chased around him until he scooped one up in his arms in a hug, "playground for my children."

We walked inside the metal building. "Have a seat anywhere you can find one," he said, gesturing to scattered metal folding chairs. "If I were as wealthy as I'm reputed to be I'd have a luxurious comfortable seat to offer you. You know how it is, though; people devoted to a cause put every penny they have into perpetuating it hoping to magnify their voice."

"And we still only have a whistle to blow," Mark related, then smiled as he asked. "Where are your armed guards?"

Trochman's eyes twinkled. "You know that bridge you crossed coming in? Well, the way I figure it, no military vehicles can cross it like they did in Ruby Ridge or Waco without busting through. And that's the only way in or out."

The conversation between Mark and Trochman was deep, detailed, and intricate as they discussed what was required to take back our government. "Granddad's squirrel gun isn't going to stop them," Mark challenged.

Trochman laughed. "Guns are no match for DARPA's technology. The way I figure it, if every person in the United States stood by the Constitution and Declaration of Independence, we could take back the government. Most people are ignorant, though. Since global education has rewritten history in pencil so it can be erased and rewritten to fit any circumstance, students aren't taught fundamental American values anymore. Its up to us to educate them. When I'm faced with the decision to buy stamps or bullets, I'll buy stamps every time in hopes of getting information out there."

“Arming people with truth is more important than arming them with weapons,” Mark agreed.

“If people have both, they’ll at least know who the enemy is,” Trochman said. “The government doesn’t want us to have guns for a reason, and I figure that is reason enough to have them. If we don’t stay armed, how can we defend ourselves against unwarranted attack?”

“Or against the violence being created in society through social engineering technology video games,” I added. “Video games provide the same technique used by the military to program soldiers in basic training. When it was discovered that only 15% of all people could kill their perceived enemy due to moral considerations, that number was increased through bypassing critical analysis to not think and ‘just do it’. These trained soldiers are not deprogrammed when turned back into society! Now they are still shooting without cause, blasting citizens in public restaurants, post offices, and playgrounds.”

“I am deeply concerned about all the programmed military minds that have been turned back onto the streets without being deprogrammed,” Mark observed. “Even more alarming than what Cathy just said, is that these programmed people are prime candidates for terrorists to re-direct. They’re already trained and highly suggestible, and are being moved into terror training camps within this country and around the world.”

“Mind control is a serious problem,” Trochman agreed. “We have CIA infiltrating the militias through programmed former Special Forces. They are making us all appear violent, diluting the true purpose of organizations like M.O.M. We are proponents of peace, not war.”

“Evolution over revolution,” I said.

“Exactly,” Trochman agreed. “You perpetuate truth from your end, and I’ll persist in doing it from mine. If everyone does their part, we all stand to win back control of our government.”

We left Montana and our whole tour through the Northwest acutely aware that mind control was the common cause of society's escalating problems, while peace was the common solution. Peaceful noncompliance with New World Order controls would naturally result in spiritual evolution over revolution. It was time.

Chapter 41
VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

June 15, 1995 John Trochman spoke before the Senate Subcommittee on Anti-Terrorism. Wisdom outthinks a criminal mind every time, and when it is driven by one as intelligent and soulful as Trochman, even the media's demeaning 'malicious' attack could not overshadow his brilliance. He gave voice to the growing number of awake and aware Americans as he spoke:

It is saddening that this opportunity to address the Senate has risen out of the Oklahoma tragedy. We whole-heartedly denounce this deplorable act of violence. We have and will continue to assist in any manner to apprehend all persons that may have planned and/or carried out that dastardly deed at whatever level they may hide.

At the present time we view the militia movement as a giant neighborhood watch[1]. The movement is made up of a cross section of Americans from all walks of life, with one singular mandate which is public and overt: the return of the Constitution of the United States, and to your oath to defend that Constitution.

The Declaration of Independence gives excellent insight as to why people feel they need to group together and participate in militia/patriot organizations. This document speaks for itself once again as it did over 200 years ago when flagrant injustices continued "out of control" by oppressive public servants.

We request that this document be entered into the permanent record as a partial support document to our statements.

The following are just a few examples as to why Americans are becoming more and more involved in militia/patriot organizations.

The high office of the Presidency has been turned into a position of dictatorial oppression through the abusive use of executive orders and directives thus leaving Congress stripped of its authority. When the President over-rules Congress by executive order, representative government fails.

When government defines human beings as a biological resource under the United Nations ecosystem management program, maintaining that state and local laws are barriers to the goals of federal government, when the average citizen must work for half of each year just to pay their taxes, while billions of our tax dollars are forcibly spent to bail out the banking elite, while our fellow Americans are homeless, starving, and without jobs, Congress wonders why their constituents get upset.

When government allows our military to be ordered and controlled by foreigners, under Presidential order, allowing foreign armies to train on our soil, allowing our military to label caring patriots as the enemy, then turns their tanks loose on US Citizens to murder and destroy or directs a sniper to shoot a mother in the face while holding her infant in her arms, you bet your constituents get upset.

We the people have had about all we can stand of the twisted, slanted, biased media in America who take their signals from a few private covert interest groups bent on destroying what’s left of the American way. We respectfully request that you rely upon your own investigations, steering clear of the media and their rumor-gossip mills of disinformation. Although most everyone in the movement has assembled around the First Amendment “freedom of speech and the right to peacefully assemble” we have not forgotten what our founding fathers have stated about the Second. Former President James Madison- “A well regulated militia, composed of the body of the people, trained to arms, is the best and most natural defense of a free country”; Former Vice President Eldbridge Garry--“I ask what is the purpose of the militia? To offset the need of large standing armies, the bane of liberty.”

Why would he call the armed forces the bane of liberty? Why is the Pentagon waging an active campaign to win over the populace? Why does the military Civil Affairs FM 41-10 seem to be so applicable in America today? Paraphrasing "Steps necessary for the overthrow of a nation. May God be with America as he watches over the shoulders of you who write her laws. A nation can survive its fools and even their ambitions, but it cannot survive treason from within. America has nothing to fear from patriots maintaining vigilance. She should, however, fear those that outlaw vigilance."

Thank you.

Mark turned off the TV and we sat in silence after Trochman's speech.

"Wow," I finally said, wiping tears from my cheeks. "'The Price of Freedom is Eternal Vigilance'. It's etched in stone outside the Justice Department."

"And 'The Truth Shall Make Them Free' is chiseled in stone in the Langley CIA office," Mark added.

"The truth Trochman spoke should restore freedom and Constitutional values," I hoped, fully aware that the voice he gave Americans that day was just a beginning.

After Trochman's landmark speech, American citizens began to feel a bit more empowered. They gathered in strength and in numbers, and cautiously dared to begin assembling again.

Opposition to Global Education was a strong common bond, and homeschooling became prevalent enough to catch the attention of the Federal Government. They quickly organized a counter solution through former Education Secretary Bill Bennett[2], whose editing of a hyped "best selling" book kept him in the media's spotlight long enough to gain a voice. He infiltrated the "homeschooling" movement, writing the "rules and requirements" that wise homeschoolers ignored. Peaceful noncompliance. Parents chose to teach their children truth. Noncompliance was gaining collective strength. Even Germans formerly controlled by Nazis noted similarities between Nazi and US societies, citing education and Hillary Clinton's proposed medical program as copied verbatim from the Communist Manifesto, and called for noncompliance.

Alabama's Independence Day July 4, 1995 was monumental. Governor Fob James listened to the voice of the people and stood his ground against Global Education[3]. Local headlines proudly announced "Independence from Global Ed[4]" while Fob James pointed out that "the Federal Government has no business meddling with the minds of the children."

From experience[5] I knew that Senator Byrd had cleverly and deliberately withheld funding from schools nationwide for years, creating a reliance on federal funding that was contingent upon the Global Ed program. Still, Fob James turned it down, wisely understanding that free thought was more valuable than any amount of money. This brave move was exemplary of what one awake, aware Governor could do for the people's freedom. Alabama remained the only state in the union upholding Constitutional law and state's rights rather than sell out to New World Order controls, for which Fob James would be immortalized in infamy[6].

"You were right about Alabama," I reminded Mark. "You told me the people of this state were the most independent in the country. How did you know?"

"People have more rights than the government since they vote in politicians who represent their views," he answered. "They pay attention to issues and actions rather than political rhetoric."

"How can that matter when votes don't count?" I skeptically asked. Politicians I knew[7] certainly didn't believe in the electronic voting system and never concerned themselves with votes. They attended State Fairs and key fundraising events in order to generate more money, but they always remained confident of their ‘re-election’ based on their connections to corporate controllers and their global elite bankers.

“People pay attention and talk with each other,” Mark began. “Most importantly, they monitor elections on local levels and stay aware of the results of their vote. They know that their local Sheriff has the legal power to accept or reject Federal law enforcement intervention. A major key to Alabama’s freedom is in their local Sheriffs and politicians. They make it a point to know these people rather than vote according to who has the most litter-on-a-stick name familiarity.”

“Is that why the locals are so determined to run you for Mayor?” I asked, suddenly understanding why they adamantly demanded rather than requested Mark’s candidacy.

“They know I can’t be bought off,” he affirmed. “My reputation as a man of justice is why they persist. They don’t really know how time consuming it is for us to do what we do, and therefore cannot understand why I don’t run for office. The people in Alabama closely monitor their local elections. In turn, local politicians closely monitor state elections based on their constituency. The point is people are involved.

The phone rang, and Mark took the call. When he was through, he filled me in on the conversation. “That was Eva Coppililllo,” he told me. Eva was a strong political activist and concerned grandmother who had moved to the United States from Canada some years back. “She is still hot on this NAFTA issue since it involves both Canada and the US, and especially since she knows it is a giant step toward the New World Order.” Eva knew like we did that control and equalization of Mexican, US, and Canadian economies was an integral move towards global dominance. If people didn’t wake up now, the New World Order would quickly become the New War Order as other countries were forced into control of greedy bankers and global elite. “She asked if she could give our phone number to a Canadian activist who wants to sponsor us in to speak. I told her ‘yes’ and that we expected the book to be printed in a couple months so we’d accept a speaking engagement then. She is as eager as Becraft for us to get the book out.”

“There are a lot of people looking forward to the release of TRANCE,” I said, gesturing toward a large stack of mail. “Even in Australia.”

“That’s impossible,” Mark replied. “Do you know who is advertising?”

“Yes,” I answered, referring to one of the letters. “Duncan Rhodes with Nexus Magazine[8].”

“Nexus Magazine is a highly respected international magazine,” he said. “I’m going to look into this and see where Duncan Rhodes got his information.”

Mark soon learned that Duncan Rhodes was recognized as a genius with deep ties into many Intelligence communities. “Duncan probably doesn’t even realize he knows so many good spooks.”

Wherever Duncan Rhodes got it, he got it right. He seemed to know when TRANCE was coming out even before we did. The speaking engagement we had accepted in Toronto, Canada was drawing close, and once again we were waiting on release of our books.

By October 1995, the patriot movement continued to grow stronger by the minute thanks to the powerful push John Trochman gave it in June. Recently, patriot radio shows and newspapers, and even the newer medium of the internet, were abuzz with the actions of one brave soldier who boldly refused to wear a U.N. blue cap. Defying Presidential authority, Michael New[9] stood out among 550 soldiers in his US military olive cap while the rest caved into wearing UN blues. This young man became a hero to the patriots by standing strong for America rather than the New World Order. Michael New was subsequently court martialed and discharged from the US Army for “Bad Conduct” because he obeyed his oath and refused to switch allegiances. Michael New was guilty as charged for loving his country, and American patriots could relate.

TRANCE was finally released only days before our scheduled appearance in Toronto, requiring drop shipment to our speaking destination. A few copies were express shipped directly to us, which Mark and I tossed in the trunk of our packed car and embarked on our journey to Canada.

Driving seemed a wise option at the time since it allowed for us to stop along the way to locate my former "sister" in MK Ultra[10]. Many of the keys to her mind control programming paralleled mine whereby increasing her chances of healing. She and I had been programmed in unison at Traficant's[11] Youngstown Charm School to be prostituted together to, among others, Ronald Reagan, Dick Thornburgh, and Brian Mulroney. [12]

After a surprisingly complex search, we finally located my girlfriend. She was raising five children in a tiny caretaker's shack in a graveyard behind a cult church. She and her children were being maintained under MK Ultra occult traumas. "No one would believe the things I can't remember," she said, her pupils dilating in her big blue eyes. "I'm not reporting to Arlen Spector[13] anymore," she revealed. "Instead, Tom Ridge[14] is advising me and my kids." Knowing she was still maintained by 'terror experts' in MK Ultra mind control due to her five children being actively used was enough to convince Mark and me that her chances of survival were greater without interference. Still, I telephoned her occasionally to keep in touch in hopes that some day this beautiful soul could be helped for 'reasons of Homeland Security.'

When Mark and I drove into Canada, Canadian Border guards subjected us to inspection. While searching our belongings in the trunk, they found our copies of TRANCE complete with numerous references to Canadian Prime Ministers Pierre Trudeau and Brian Mulroney. Mark and I didn't know what to expect while they thumbed through the pages of TRANCE. Finally, one of the guards walked over to us and quietly said, "We need to confiscate one copy of this book, and would appreciate it if you'd sign it. Thank you for bringing such pertinent information into Canada. People on both sides of the border had better wake up quick to the reality of what NAFTA entails." They shook our hands and waved us through.

The group gathered to hear us speak in Canada were not unlike Americans, advertising the event by word of mouth and gathering in a local church.

Information on Trudeau and Mulroney came as no surprise, as many Canadians were already acutely aware of their New World Order agendas. Of major concern to them was the Global Education program. It was so clear that Americans and Canadians shared the same concerns, the same goals, and the same need to unite rather than divide according to media spin. Who drew the line in the sand anyway, politically separating the strength we would have if we all united the way our leaders had? Mulroney, Bush, Salinas, and Clinton were all of the same agenda perpetuated by the same global bankers being run by the same half dozen mega-corporations.

Just as in the United States, people became most concerned and aware that a problem existed in our governments when it hit them financially. People who were waking up first were the ones who didn't have any money, which kept us struggling financially to get the word out on mind control. They bought every book we had in Canada[15] in order to spread the word themselves, which provided just enough money for the long drive back to Alabama.

"I've got an older Gold Wing motorcycle you can have in lieu of a speakers' fee," our sponsor Hugh Hale offered. "I know you two enjoy riding and are capable of fixing up old bikes, so please take it with you. Its too much for me to handle."

Knowing we could fix and sell the bike, we obtained the paperwork and hitched a motorcycle trailer to the car. "We really appreciate this," we told him. "Most of all, thank you for the opportunity to speak to so many fine awake aware Canadians and getting the word out on mind control." The impact we had made in Canada would reverberate for years to come.

Once we arrived at the border, we were astonished and ashamed to see a distinct line of trash, litter, and filth of the US clashing with Canada's pristine environment. US border guards were not so kind, and it took us two days of detainment before we finally were allowed back into our own country.

The Gold Wing motorcycle resulted in a series of trades, sales, and repairs that kept us financially afloat for months. TRANCE was priced to perpetuate the word rather than generate income, which was exactly the mode of operation needed as US Government Whistleblowers.

The advertisement that Duncan Rhodes ran in Nexus Magazine set precedent for others to do likewise, and TRANCE became a popular topic in patriot newspapers and radio stations across the country and worldwide. It's a good thing, too, because cases of books now filled the tiny home we rented.

"Who is going to buy all these books?" I wailed when I saw them. "People aren't going to want to read this. TRANCE was written for Congress!"

"You're right," Mark said. "People won't want to read this and they won't want to believe it, but that doesn't preclude the fact that they will read and believe the elements they relate to. People are asking questions and demanding answers, and TRANCE provides those answers like it or not! Don't be so negative. These books won't be around here long."

Before the first box of books could gather dust, we had to reprint[16]. Mark was right; people did want to know the truth even if it wasn't pleasant. Armed with truth, they became empowered to make a difference for themselves, their children, their communities and their nation. People were ready for change, and public awareness was proving to be the ultimate justice.

By December, Judge Shookhoff scheduled a court hearing to address the issue of Kelly's accumulating mail. The global letter writing campaign that raised the question "what does national security have to do with the documented and proven rape and molestation of a child's mind and body?" had vastly increased after national security was invoked on Kelly's case in 1993, and was rapidly escalating again since TRANCE had been released. In direct proportion to the letters pouring into Tennessee's Governor's office were letters and packages addressed to Kelly wishing her well.

Jabneel supervisors traveled to Nashville with Kelly for the hearing. To her and me, this hearing provided one more opportunity to be together. We hugged each other and sat down, eager to catch up on everything since we'd last seen each other. Closely monitored under the circumstances, Kelly carefully revealed the Constitutional Law booklet that I previously slipped her. When Mark and I had met with John Trochman in Montana last spring, he asked me to give the booklet to Kelly for him if possible. I had, and now I could see that she obviously had read it.

When the hearing began, Judge Shookhoff was apparently frustrated with events and the boxes of mail that had accumulated supporting her. “Far be it from me to ‘violate your Constitutional Rights’!” he told Kelly. “You can have your mail. All of it. And I want you to know why you have received so much mail,” he continued, waving a copy of TRANCE from his Judge’s bench. “I want you to read this book!”

Kelly calmly replied, “It is my Constitutional Right to read what I want. And I choose not to read that book because I need to heal from the inside out, not through outside input.”

I was proud of Kelly for having read the Constitutional Law booklet John Trochman had sent, and most of all for applying what she learned. Above all, she apparently understood what it took to heal and was tending to her own rehabilitation eloquently! This was the first time she had been permitted to speak in court, and Judge Shookhoff was obviously astounded. Court was adjourned.

The Jabneel supervisors who escorted her celebrated her victory, and appeared nearly as excited as I was. Thankfully they had driven a van, and it was now fully packed with boxes of mail. On the way back to Knoxville, they bought Kelly a celebration dinner. Between their understanding and compassion, our visits, and Kelly’s friendship with the horse pastured next door, she was progressing. Best of all, Kelly had been given a voice in court and was heard.

Chapter 42
*S*ELECTION*S*

“Mom!” Kelly squealed through the phone. “You should see the cards, letters, and gifts I got! People really do care! I got a billion stuffed animals, maybe more,” she laughed. “I kept my favorites and passed around the rest. All the kids at Jabneel have cuddly toys now. I got a whole library full of books. Lots of them are horse books, the really nice kind that people put on their coffee tables with the greatest pictures. Right now I’m reading a really good book that a friend of yours sent me. She is so cool. Her name is Marta Brown.”

“I’m not surprised you picked her out of hundreds,” I smiled. “She is a pure loving spirit.”

“I can tell! Have you ever read James Redfield’s The Celestine Prophecy[1]?”

“Not yet,” I told her, eager to hear more.

“You’ll love it! I’ll give you a copy when you get here. Actually, I have three. ‘What a coincidence!’ Three people sent it to me.”

“Do you believe in coincidence?” I asked.

“Not really,” she answered. “I mean, that’s kind of the part I’m reading about now. See, The Celestine Prophecy says when you pay attention to coincidence, you learn they’re really not coincidences after all. They happen for a reason. It helps a person to be aware of what happens around them.”

Already I liked the ‘being aware’ part. “Everybody is on their own learning path,” I told her, “so are coin cidences something to learn from or something to emotionally respond to?”

“Learn from,” she quickly answered. “Personally, I don’t let outside influences direct my feelings. I’ve been stuck around a lot of crazy people and when I stay true-to-soul and strong in who I am like we’ve talked about, their craziness doesn’t drive me crazy. I think ‘coincidence’ is more like the fact that I got three of these books. Three people thought it would be helpful to me. And I ‘coincidentally’ chose to tell you about Marta, because she feels closest. I feel a connection to her and I don’t even know her.”

“Her senses are heightened like yours are,” I said. “And she telepathically communicates with animals[2]. Maybe you picked up on that some how.”

“Oh, Mom,” Kelly said seriously, “I can feel the love from all these people. You should see my letters. Some say they are praying for me, others are more direct in sending love straight on, a bunch of people are beaming me blue lights,” she giggled. “Some toss crystals, a few are holding church services for me, and most meditate on sending me love. There are even native tribal ceremonies held in my name[3]! You know what is the coolest thing? It doesn’t matter what they believe in, I can feel it all! Best of all, I could feel it before they told me! I wonder if that’s what it feels like to God’s Love energy? It wouldn’t matter what name people call God when it’s the Love energy that counts.”

“Unconditional Love,” I concluded. “That is the ultimate power, the most powerful force in the universe. The same energy as your soul. So when you live true-to-soul, you live true-to-love, and there are no limits to what your life can hold! There are no limits to what you can be and accomplish!”

“When I stay true-to-soul and true to the Love energy that I am inside, then prayer is like a directed telepathy to God’s Love[4] energy that makes it brighter, which makes me brighter when I stay tuned in! What if everybody in the world did that at the same time?” She asked, obviously enjoying her own profundity.

“Maybe it would create a collective conscious Love[5] energy powerful enough to peacefully change the world for the better,” I encouraged her.

Oh, Mom,” she said, still enthused, “Do you have any extra stamps? I want to write everyone back. I got some really nice art supplies and want to send some people pictures. I’m going to draw something for Marta for sure. Probably a horse.”

“Wow,” I laughed. “What a ‘coincidence’! Marta is also an artist, and she keeps horses on her ranch. She’d love hearing from you. I’ll send you some stamps right away.” Mark and I kept lots of stamps around these days to mail out the copies of TRANCE people ordered.

“Thanks,” she said. “I’d rather you bring them, though, if you can. I’d really like to see you. I wish you were here.”

“You know I am in spirit,” I assured her. “I’m always striving to see you. ‘Everything I do, I do it for you.’ We should be able to come and see you real soon, although tomorrow wouldn’t be soon enough.”

“Or today,” she added.

“Or yesterday,” I topped her. “In order for anything to be ‘fast enough’ for our family togetherness it would have to be retroactive. It’s never fast enough. And there is never ‘enough time’ when we do get together!”

“I know,” Kelly agreed. “It’s a good thing our love is timeless.”

“For real!” I agreed. “Dad and I have to make a quick business trip and we’ll see you as soon as we get back. Hug your stallion for me and all your new stuffed animals.”

“Call me tomorrow?”

“You know it. See you soon. I love you!”

Talking with Kelly is always a profoundly fun experience because she is. I reflected on our conversation, trusting that everyone who wrote her would sense that she was sending love back to them. I sifted through the assortment of stamps, picking out ones I thought she’d especially be drawn to. Perhaps it would help her to focus and actually write folks back as she intended. As absolute as she was in her determination to write them all back, I knew she would only focus long enough to write a few. The rest would either remain an intention, or little by little she may write a few more. Kelly’s ability to focus and follow through on her intentions had been hindered by her Vanderbilt ordeal. I wondered what this would mean for her future if rehab wasn’t obtained for her. Regardless, I rested in knowing she is a strong spirit. She certainly is an inspiration to me!

I sealed the envelope of stamps to mail to her on our way out of town. We had business in Las Vegas and were looking forward to the fun we would have in the process. Mark and I didn’t follow the old adage “never mix business with pleasure.” Our work was intense, and balancing the stress with play seemed natural. And Las Vegas was ideal for exercising our work ethic economically since neither of us gambles.

In downtown Las Vegas, right near the infamous Vegas strip, Mark and I located the building where we would be doing live, in-studio radio. Our host was Lou Epton[6], a wise and clever political activist dedicated to truth whose wit was brighter than all the lights of Las Vegas. Lou was once a successful Hollywood character actor who looked like he still belonged in front of a TV camera rather than a radio microphone. Yet his radio audience was enormous, dedicated, and reflective of his vast intellect. Lou Epton was making a difference, and Mark and I were pleased to be a part of his show.

On the air, we talked about TRANCE and our personal experiences that led to its release. The second part of the show, Lou took callers who kept his switchboard lit up in an effort to ask questions. His listeners asked questions regarding home schooling; how to personally recover from the trauma of tragedies like Waco and the Oklahoma City bombing; how to help loved ones suffering from dissociation; how to think above and beyond media spin and social engineering to take back our government; Clinton's 'hit list' and CIA cocaine crimes; HAARP, NAFTA and the New World Order; and every other pertinent issue facing American society that was addressed in TRANCE's documented facts.

As US Government Whistleblowers, Mark and I were limited to talking only about our experience. Since mind control was the common thread weaving through society's woes, this allowed for a wide range of topics to discuss. Laws of sedition slightly limited what Mark could discuss regarding his experience in Intelligence, yet his insights on the history of mind control and international ramifications were significant. Members of the Intelligence Community would call in to Lou's show to ask Mark questions that I couldn't begin to answer, while others asked questions directly pertaining to my experience under mind control on a White House Pentagon level.

One caller curious about the increasingly strange relationship between Bill and Hillary Clinton wanted to know about Independent Council Ken Starr's[7] revelations of Bill's affairs with Gennifer Flowers and Paula Jones. From my experience, I perceived Bill and Hillary to share a strong friendship and business relationship. Since I knew them both to be bisexual[8], the media hyped 'affairs' could not be what they appeared. I called them a "perversion diversion" from the real crimes Bill and Hillary were guilty of. Hillary's act as a jilted wife was a deliberate "division decision." Knowing the Clintons and social engineering tactics, the illusion was created to separate her from Bill in the public eye so that she would eventually run for President as intended. Just as Bill went into the office of President as a "Democrat" to make the public feel they had a change from "Republicans" leading them into the New World Order, Hillary would be the illusion of change from male Presidents.

We went to station break, and I summed up their relationship to Lou as I pulled off my headphones. "Hillary is with Bill for his head, and he is with her for her brains." We began laughing, which increased my need to relieve myself of the coffee I'd been drinking.

“The ladies’ room is across the way,” Lou explained. “Since the rest of the building is closed for the night, you’ll need to walk outside to reach it.” He handed me the keys. It was nearly midnight and I needed to hurry in order to wrap up tonight’s radio show after the break and ran across the lot.

“Catty!” A foreign voiced boomed as I watched the biggest man I’d ever seen in my life quickly emerge from a van. I turned around to retreat back to the safety of Lou’s office, and the man began running after me. “Catty!” He called again in a heavy accent, “I need to speak with you.”

Lou was already at the door, his eyes twinkling as usual as he opened it for me.

“Vuk,” he identified the giant Serbian. “You frightened her. You forget you are a big man.”

“I wanted to catch Catty before the show concluded,” he said. “I saw her, and thought she was leaving.”

“Actually, she needed to use the ladies’ room and doesn’t have time now,” Lou said, looking at his watch. “We’re back on the air for the conclusion. Have a seat,” he told the Serbian while we dashed back into the studio for our final remarks. Mark and I thanked Lou for hosting us on his show, and he invited us back. After his closing remarks, we removed our headphones and switched off the equipment. Lou handed me the keys again with a smile, and began closing up the studio while I dashed over to the ladies’ room. Mark walked over to talk with Vuk.

When I came back out, the studio was closed and Mark, Lou, and Vuk were already in the parking lot talking and laughing like old friends. I joined them long enough to learn that Vuk was a Serbian spook closely associated with the world court in The Hague. He needed videotaped testimony, and arrangements were made for him to visit us at our home in Alabama the next month.

Mark and I bid Lou good-bye and returned to our budget hotel exhausted. We ignored the harmonic lure of the casino with ease as we wearily made our way to our room. Besides, as Mark wisely quips, 'You will eventually loose playing another man's game.'

"I'm hungry," I complained as we stretched across the bed. "I'm so tired, though, it doesn't matter that we don't have money for dinner."

"I'm so tired it doesn't matter that this bed is hard," Mark added, and then laughed when he discovered the outdated bed-vibrating device bolted to the nightstand. "One quarter would solve all our problems. We wouldn't hear your stomach growl over the noise of this contraption, and it would bounce this bed as though it had springs."

"Save the quarter," I said, joining in his laughter. "Let's bounce the bed ourselves."

The next day, we were scheduled for an afternoon radio broadcast with Rod Remlin and Lance Schofield, whose radio station was affiliated with WWCR, World Wide Christian Radio. Their makeshift studio was in Rod Remlin's home, which was a gorgeous upscale home in a suburb outside of Vegas. Mark and I immediately felt at home with these two, and the radio shows we did with them were the most comprehensive solution based broadcasts ever. No wonder their listening audience was so big!

Our conversations were often so deep and interesting that it was easy to forget we were on the air. After all, the truth was the same whether we were speaking it or talking it. Rod Remlin and Lance Schofield were the same way, and the numerous callers lighting up the switchboard wanted to join in our conversation.

Former Mexican President Carlos Salinas deGortari was currently seeking asylum in Ireland while his brother, Raul, was serving 50 years for their drug running and murder. Nevertheless, Salinas was selected to become President of the World Trade Organization for the New World Order effort[9]. Back in the '80s when I was being used to lay the groundwork for NAFTA[10], I understood the close relationship between Salinas, Cheney and Bush, Sr. It was pre-determined years in advance that Salinas would take the office of President of Mexico while Bush became President of the US and Brian Mulroney Prime Minister of Canada so the three could usher in NAFTA.

What did this say about elections? Based on everything I witnessed and experienced behind the scenes of the New World Order, elections were rigged and pre-decided. In third world countries where electronic ballets were not in use, the United States sent in "vote monitors[11]" to ensure turnout was as planned. In these volatile times, many Americans were realizing 'elections' were appointed and the subject was a focus of talk radio.

What did this say about Salinas? That he not only was a proven traitor to his country, he was a traitor to his brother with whom I knew he was in the drug business[12], and a traitor to the world.

What did this say about Cheney? That if US political crimes against humanity and/or the environment were occurring, he was in the loop giving orders while hiding behind his corporate interests such as Halliburton.

What did this say about Bush, Sr. and Brian Mulroney? That they were self appointed leaders misleading their countries into New World Order controls.

No, I did not believe in elections any more than did the politicians and world leaders I was associated within MK Ultra under mind control. Global elections were based on a much bigger agenda formulated by DARPA technology and funded by a few world bankers and global elite. Based on what I knew, Bush, Jr.[13] was expected to follow Bill Clinton into the Presidency, and Hillary soon would follow him, keeping it all in the family of dictators-- unless people woke up, wised up, and elected to become actively involved in politics from the local level on up.

"The Secret Government went into place in 1947," Mark explained to a caller. "As did the National Security Act. The Constitution of the United States was founded in truth and justice for all, not for a few self appointed secret leaders operating on the philosophy that 'secret knowledge equals power.’ Secrets have now compounded to the point where people no longer think to ask the right questions. Technological secrets emerge as technological control. Ask what HAARP is about. Ask about DARPA. Ask now while you can still think to do so because technology is breeding itself through computerization and it’s time we took it out of the hands of the Secret Government.”

“Why are we following leaders we didn’t elect?” I asked. “The criminals in control of our information, our technology, and our country are intelligent, but they lack wisdom. They never counted on the strength of the human spirit. They never counted on anyone telling their secrets. Their arrogance is their downfall. Wisdom outthinks a criminal mind every time. We didn’t elect our leaders, but we can elect not to follow them through peaceful Gandhian noncompliance.”

Carl Klang’s We Want This Country Back[14] faded in, bridging us to the next segment of the worldwide broadcast.

Chapter 43
COLLECTIVE CONSCIOUS EVOLUTION

“Are you conscious of the international concern you have raised with your case?” Vuk asked, savoring another bite of the gigantic 42 oz steak Mark bought and prepared for him. “The World Court in The Hague is very interested in what you have to say. By the time I am through keeping the appointments I have with your Justice Department and government leaders of countries I will not identify in this house…” Vuk interrupted himself to savor more of Mark’s exquisite cuisine. He closed his eyes and moaned, dabbing the corners of his mouth with his napkin. “Did you know your house is bugged?”

“They bug people for far less in this country,” Mark smiled. “C’mon Vuk. What do you think this is, a free country?”

Vuk laughed, leaning back in his chair. Our inexpensive dinette was not capable of supporting such weight. Not that Vuk was overweight for his size, it was just that his size was gigantic and muscled. The chair groaned as the metal twisted.

“I’m sorry,” Vuk apologized. “I’ve broken two of your chairs and fear you won’t ask me back for more of your cooking. Mark, you are the finest chef in the world. I know. I’m qualified to make that judgment since I have sampled cuisine in the finest restaurants all around the world in my travels. I would fly to United States, to Alabama, just for dinner right here. I will bring chairs.”

Mark chuckled as he replaced Vuk’s chair. “I’m sorry I don’t have a strong chair to offer you,” he said. “There is no money in whistleblowing, though, and we all make do with what we can afford. This dinette was free. And you are free to come back and see us anytime you choose, my friend.”

Vuk had fast become a friend while we were in Vegas, and that friendship only solidified more since his arrival in Alabama. Vuk was a spook's spook on a mission and it was deeply encouraging to know a spy of his stature shared our passion for spreading the truth revealed in TRANCE. "We will succeed," Vuk vowed. "Kelly is all the reason in the world to make sure of it. You, too, Catty. But Kelly, she is my motive." Tears filled his eyes from his intense sincerity.

Armed with a case of books and videos of recorded testimony, Vuk hugged us good-bye. "You will hear from me again soon," he promised.

And we did. Vuk did come back to Alabama on occasion 'for dinner' and proved to be a powerful ally in our quest to incite peaceful change.

The phone rang. "We need to buy some more books from you," a dear supporter of ours from the mid-west told me, then hollered, "Wally, pick up the phone. Cathy's on the line." Wally and June Midkiff were among the finest people Mark and I had met. This loving pair was absolutely dedicated to helping spread the word on mind control at all costs. Their fixed retirement income didn't stop them from passing copies of TRANCE to their local politicians, townsfolk, and other patriot groups they supported. They were living proof that age had nothing to do with compassion and concern for the future. They had enjoyed the best of America when it was free; back when it ended wars rather than started them. They cherished US Constitutional values and were appalled to see them eroded and replaced with New World Orders. While many Americans were lulled to sleep by apathy and complacency, June and Wally stayed vigilant, sounding the wake up call. They were alarmed by the criminal takeover of American government, and were actively dedicating their all in terms of time and money to restore truth and justice to their country. They chose to do it through supporting us, among others.

As I hung up the phone, it rang again. It was Wes Mann[1]. "I need some more books," he said. "How soon can you ship me some? I sold out at the festival when one of my speakers, David Icke[2], talked about you guys. " Wes Mann was highly respected throughout Canada for the annual festivals he hosted in spectacular British Columbia. He brought in speakers from all over the world who shared his passion for freedom. Wes was a political activist who was making a difference, and books from the various speakers he brought in were sold through his Preferred Network[3] year round. During his festival, people traveled from all over Canada to camp on his pristine wilderness land, dine on his sister's infamous fine cooking, and attend the seminars hosted by dozens of sought-after speakers. The event was huge and always successful. Mark's and my personal respect for Wes is bigger than life. The childhood he survived is the most horrific I've ever heard, and he dealt with his past in order to move forward and strengthen others with truth.

The phone rang again. Something needed to be done about this constant intrusion that had grown in direct proportion to our success in bringing the reality of mind control to light. Yet our success as whistleblowers was not reflected in our finances. "We need a code-a-phone," I called to Mark who was working in the other room. "Or a secretary."

"We can't afford either," he hollered back good-naturedly. "I'll answer it."

It was Larry Becraft informing us of a rally being organized for Washington, DC. "A friend of mine in California is structuring the event right now and wants to know if you'll speak. It will be held on the mall lawn in front of the Capital on Labor Day Weekend."

"Of course we'll be there," Mark assured him. "We wouldn't miss it."

"Come by my office," Becraft said, assuming our phone was bugged. "I'll give you an information packet."

That was uncharacteristic of Becraft to suggest a visit unless he had something to tell us that he didn't want to say over the phone. He certainly wasn't one to waste his time any more than we were, so Mark agreed to meet with him right away to find out why he really wanted to see us.

"I've got a message for you involving evidence on Operation Watchtower," he tipped us. Through a series of connections, it was arranged for us to pick up boxes of documents detailing George Bush, Sr.'s Watchtower cocaine and heroin routes. Retired Brigadier General Russell Bowen was once an integral part of this operation. He worked directly under Bush until he turned whistleblower through his 1991 book The Immaculate Deception, The Bush Crime Family Exposed[4]. It was widely known that the Mexican and Caribbean drug ops I had worked under MK Ultra mind control tied directly in with Watchtower. These documents and evidences could prove invaluable to us since General Bowen was leaving the country in disgust and frustration with the lack of justice. Bush, Sr. had locked him up in a Federal Prison until he agreed to leave the country.

Numerous Intelligence insiders like him were telling all to those with eyes to see and ears to hear truth. Rodney Stich's book Defrauding America[5] tied in with Russell Bowen's book and testimony as well as Col. Fletcher Prouty's[6] revelations. Gaylon Ross[7], formerly associated with the National Security Agency, publicly updates his global identification of Who's Who of the Elite[8] in order that people know who their self-appointed leaders are. The truth has been and is out there for the growing numbers of awake and aware people seeking it.

The US Government deliberately operates far in advance of what they finally allow the people to know, whereby forerunners like Fletcher Prouty were literally ahead of their time in their revelations. With truth "ahead of time" and Americans "losing time" due to high tech mass mind control, bridging the information gap would require timeless spiritual evolution. The criminals in control of our country knew this, and were counting on fear, trauma and superstition to keep people from gaining the spiritual strength necessary to outthink them. They feared the collective conscious[9] wisdom that begins with truth. Again, their shallow flat-thinking and egotistical arrogance had not accounted for Intelligence insiders having the strength of spirit to collectively tell their secrets and launch the evolution.

Equally as influential were the vast number of government contractors operating on a Need-to-Know who expanded their knowledge with truth. Free thought allows for the capacity to think beyond oneself to a bigger picture and now they, too, were talking and/or applying peaceful noncompliance. Scientists from all over the world concerned with environmental and technological issues were also sharing information, organizing, and applying solutions. The Organization of Concerned Scientists[10] extends through international think tanks where collective conscious awareness continues to escalate at a rate that can only be attributed to wisdom. Such spiritual evolution continues to collectively rise while truth is shared, peaceful noncompliance is applied where effective, and change is made from within.

When Barbara Trent accepted her Academy Award for her 1993 documentary The Panama Deception[11], she didn't wear a designer gown as she walked up to the podium and brilliantly explained that whistleblowers never profit because their passion is so strong every penny is dedicated to furthering their effort. So it was with Mark and me. We chose to amplify our voice by working exhaustive hours speaking out on radio and in person all over the country and worldwide. We met a vast array of people who were waking up to make a difference whenever and wherever they could. Many of these fine people were converging on Washington, DC with us Labor Day weekend.

Mark and I located a budget motel an hour's drive from DC, and were unpacking our bags when we were startled by a knock on our door. It was our friend Perry Ferrell, who had driven his Prevo bus half way across the country to attend the rally. Perry's autistic son, Glenn, is pure unconditional love due to the exemplary thought communication[12] they share.

"What are you doing in this budget motel?" he asked. "I booked you a room at the Watergate Hotel. C'mon. Nobody will 'bug you' there."

We laughed at Perry's clever joke, which was typical of his ever-present wit. The Watergate was infamous for the bugging incident that cost Nixon his Presidency. Perry's generous offer not only would be luxurious and a convenient walking distance to our speaking engagement, it promised to be fun considering he and his entourage were staying there, too. It was quite stressful for me to be speaking right in front of the nation's Capitol knowing that every member of Congress had a copy of TRANCE--including my former abusers! The fun that always accompanied Perry would certainly provide the perfect balance to the stress. To me, “balance” was always tipped to the good in keeping with universal justice.

Our room at the Watergate was spectacular, bigger than our house in Alabama. And the bed was absolutely unforgettable. Mark and I were out on our balcony when someone knocked on the door, and I made my way through our elaborate room and hallways to answer it. It was Perry. “Can you see all those ‘suits’ guarding my room?” he jokingly called to Mark, who was still outside on the balcony.

“No,” Mark answered, looking around and noting the armed guards strategically placed on the premises’ balconies and rooftop. “Seriously, isn’t that Bob Dole’s suite that the guy in dark sunglasses is guarding?”

The Watergate was infamous for its political ties. Perry laughed, “I thought they were all guarding my room while I take you to dinner.”

Dinner was even more fun than it was delicious, and the horrors and traumas I had experienced in DC faded far into the past. This positive experience gave me just the edge I needed for speaking the next day, loud and clear enough for Byrd, Traficant, the Clintons, and all the rest of DC to hear.

Early the next morning we set up a table near the stage from which to sell TRANCE after speaking. Dozens of friends, activists, and patriots we had come to know were setting up their tables and booths as well while Carl Klang fine tuned the sound system for us all, then soulfully began singing. Charlena Alden had done a commendable job organizing and structuring the event. National TV was expectedly absent, but international news groups were in abundance. All weekend long, speakers and music resounded through DC. We connected with other speakers, made new friends and embraced those we already knew, signed books, and gave numerous interviews while crowds of people gathered around.

“Hey girl,” a familiar voice said. “I rode the bus all the way to DC for this event.”

“Dana!” I exclaimed, hugging my friend. “I didn’t know you were coming. Where are you staying?”

“I found a room over at the shelter,” she answered. Dana was street-wise and resourceful, but it didn’t seem right that this gorgeous peace activist should stay in a shelter. “Sleeping isn’t why I’m here anyway. I wanted to experience this rally and contribute anyway I can.”

“Our friend Perry Ferrell got us a room over at the Watergate where no one would ‘bug us’,” I told her, laughing. “It’s a huge room and I really wish you’d come and stay with us. Come on,” I pleaded. “A gorgeous girl like you belongs at the Watergate.”

Her big eyes twinkled at the reverberating meaning. “Maybe,” she said, always independent. “I appreciate the offer anyway.” She took off her backpack to show me the brochures she had brought depicting Kelly and telling her plight. “While you’re speaking, I can pass these around.” Typically, Dana was always doing something significantly profound.

Dana had attended a seminar months before where Mark and I were speaking, and we became instant friends. We shared a connection beyond words. Literally! Dana’s soulful telepathy was familiar, as though we had known each other forever and our futures would remain inner-twined. Her childhood was the kind that hindered most, but Dana did not relate to the ‘victim space’ any more than I did. Instead, she turned the negative of her past into positive action.

She opened her heart and her home to help others find their inner strength just as she had. Such strength was needed these days more than ever in order to thrive in an increasingly difficult society. Sexually abused children often grew up to become exotic dancers, porn stars and prostitutes which exposed them to a whole new world of problems. Dana was there to offer shelter, understanding, healing, peace of mind, and rehabilitation from addictions to CIA cocaine, heroin, and crack. Her humanitarian and political activism was exemplary, and I was thrilled that she had joined us in DC.

The sun was rising high, as was the temperature, when Perry offered to buy us all cold drinks and snacks. “Come with me,” he suggested. I hesitated until Dana said she’d fill in for me at the table to help Mark sell books. “I’ll watch after her real close,” Perry assured Mark, aware of concerns for my being in such close proximity to my abusers.

DC shopping was primarily located underground, and Perry and I opted for the market under the Watergate. Just beyond the prestigious lobby were escalators to the market, and we rode them down. Perry’s arms were already full of cold drinks when he located a shopping cart, which he continued to load with snacks and a cooler. While he filled the cart, I explored the small market wondering what gourmet goodies filled the shelves to cater to the rich and famous that shopped there. A few minutes later, Perry caught up with me, breathless. “I couldn’t find you!” he exclaimed. “Where did you go? There are only three isles in this store. I thought the Feds carried you away or something. How would I explain that to Mark? I promised I would look after you.”

The whole thing seemed ludicrous to me, but Perry was genuinely shaken as he paid for the items and we went out the door with the shopping cart full of refreshments. Never one for rules, regulations, and social protocol, Perry paused at the bottom of the escalator long enough to aim the cart before pushing it onto the moving stairs. “I already lost you once, and I refuse to leave you here while I carry these purchases sack by sack,” he explained as the shopping cart clattered and rattled loudly along the escalator. It was so wrong, especially at the Watergate, to make such a noisy spectacle of ourselves and I laughed myself to tears. I was doubled over laughing by the time the escalator reached the lobby and Perry slammed the cart over the hump and onto the Watergate’s expensive carpet. He nonchalantly tipped the doorman as he told him to return the cart downstairs. The doorman was astonished, wondering how he would accomplish such a maneuver while we climbed into the cab. The derelict shopping cart looked ridiculously out of place in the lobby of one of the most prestigious hotels in the DC, and I was still laughing when we arrived back at the rally.

It was nearly time for Mark and me to speak. It was such an honor and privilege to speak beside the likes of Larry Becraft[13], Gaylon Ross[14], David Icke[15], Jack McLamb[16], Dr. Stan Monteith[17], Michael New[18] and dozens more in front of our nations capital, our peers, crowds of people and international news groups. Mark's and my presentation of facts centered on repeal of the 1947 National Security Act, which threatens the security of our nation and world[19] by covering crimes against humanity. Mark's focus was more pointed, whereas mine extended to Kelly.

"Harry Truman," Mark was saying to the crowd," had only one regret in his Presidency, according to his sister's testimony, and that is signing the National Security Act into power. Truman felt he had been tricked into signing it, and foresaw it as the downfall of the country he loved and served so well. The 1947 National Security Act fully allows for the takeover of the American government by a secret government, or shadow government as it has been called. Here in the United States of America we have laws, Constitutional Laws, and the Bill of Rights enabling we-the-people from succumbing to such takeover; yet the National Security Act overrides them all. We don't need more laws to stop the proliferation of these criminals in control of our country and their blatant child abuse, mind control, erosion of justice, drug dealings, murders, genocide, and dominance of the world's technology and resources. We only need to repeal the 1947 National Security Act!"

Applause was thunderous. After all, every issue being presented at this rally ultimately came down to the final point that the National Security Act needed to be repealed.

I spoke out with a passion, giving voice to the numerous mind control survivors like Kelly who couldn't think to speak out for themselves and were being denied justice and rehabilitation for so-called "reasons of national security." While I brought the issue of mind control to light and gave voice to Kelly's plight, Dana distributed hundreds of flyers. Kelly's precious image complete with our family motto "It's Not Over Until We Win" was circulating everywhere, thanks to her. As usual, Dana's work continues to reverberate since people in turn circulated even more copies of their flyer to further raise awareness of Kelly's plight and the reality of mind control.

When Carl Klang saw Kelly's flyer, he excitedly told me, "'It's Not Over Until We Win[20]' is a song of inspiration that I feel the need to write for Kelly." Carl is soulfully profound with deep insights, which he eloquently expresses in song. It's no wonder he was fast becoming an international favorite as well as an American icon for the patriot movement. The powerful song he wrote for Kelly became a global anthem song of deep encouragement to her for years to come.

By the time we returned to the Watergate that evening, we were all exhausted and excited. "I'll take you to dinner," Perry generously offered again, leaving us off at our room while he went down the hall to his room to dress.

Dana knocked on our door as we started to get ready for dinner. "I decided to take you up on your offer," she announced, "at least long enough to take a shower."

Perry playfully whistled to Dana from down the hall, loudly inviting her to join us for dinner. A young man who was also approaching her looked disappointed as she gracefully accepted, and turned back toward the elevator.

"You'd better come in here," I laughed, swinging the door open wide. "I'm so glad you decided to come."

"Wow," she exclaimed, her soulfully eyes shining as she looked around the room. "Who would believe I'm here at the Watergate about to dress for dinner, when all I have in my purse is a bus ticket!"

"You could be as wealthy as you want to be," I assured her. "Just because your helping people takes precedent over making money doesn't mean you couldn't be rich enough to live here."

"I was offered that much money on the way up here," she laughingly admitted as she took off her backpack and opened it up. "I must look like some kind of holistic whore or something wearing jeans and a peasant top at the Watergate." She pulled a small bundle from her pack, which unfolded into a beautifully detailed forest green hemp dress. “I’m not much on glamour,” she said, holding up the dress against her delicate frame, the deep green accentuating her beauty. “What do you think? Can I wear this to dinner?”

I hugged her tight. “Your unpretentiousness epitomizes what a woman should be!” The shower was open, and Dana went to get ready while Mark emerged from the dressing area of the bathroom, looking handsome and refreshed. We walked out on the balcony to talk while Dana prepared to join us for dinner.

“Carl Klang is writing a song for Kelly,” I excitedly told Mark.

“And we have invites to do more radio shows than I can count,” he added. “Did I see you doing an interview with Dutch National TV?”

“I know they were among several I did today,” I answered. “Spanish TV wanted to interview you. Did they catch up with you?”

Mark and I had each been so busy that it was necessary to fill each other in on the day’s activities. Dana was ready in no time, and joined us on the balcony. “Collective consciousness[21] went global today,” she said, seemingly summing up our conversation as Perry arrived to take us all to dinner. Dana picked up a copy of TRANCE and slipped it among the classics in the room’s elaborate library as we went out the door.

Chapter 44

THE TURNING OF THE TIDE

The next morning we began selling copies of TRANCE and related documents as fast as we spread them out on the table at the rally. Vast numbers of people were in attendance, despite the US media's lack of coverage of the event. Word had spread, and Carl Klang's soulful songs filled the air, drawing in scores of DC tourists who happened upon the event as well.

Author and speaker David Icke had flown in from England, and made his way through the crowds to speak with us before the event officially commenced. "David!" I exclaimed, throwing my arms around him in a warm hug. "It's good to see you."

"I had business in the country anyway," he said, "so I diverted my trip a bit so I could participate in the rally."

Mark pulled up an extra chair, inviting David to join us. "Will you be speaking?" he asked.

"I just met with Charlena Alden and she's working me into the schedule right now," he told Mark. "She wanted to know what I intended to speak about since this event is Constitutionally oriented and focuses on the Bill of Rights. I told her I'd speak briefly on who I know to be in control of your government since the same New World Order elite are leading Britain as well."

David was an author who had written a book titled "And the Truth Shall Set You Free[1]," which clearly shares our common ground. In his book, David identifies the global elite and their New World Order, and provides solutions based on spiritual evolution. Professionally, David is an author and public speaker whereby he is not bound by the laws governing whistleblowing that Mark and I are. Personally, David had been a friend for some time and offered significant moral support to Kelly. I updated him on her circumstances.

“The stallion next door to Jabneel is the best therapy for Kelly since he keeps her focused on natural spiritual values,” I was explaining. “What you told her about spirit being stronger than genetics was one of the most powerful, healing statements she’s embraced. I’ve taken the liberty of expanding your statement a bit further to include spirit being stronger than program. Of course, the trick of it is to keep her focused spiritually true-to-soul despite her adverse circumstances. Having the stallion next door really does help. The more she lives true-to-soul, the more free thought she has. The more free thought she has, the more she heals!”

“She is a powerfully strong spirit,” he smiled.

“In light of that realization,” I said, “my friend and I were discussing the misuse of ‘exorcism’ on mind controlled multiples…”

“Who is using exorcism on multiples?” David interrupted to ask.

“The State of Tennessee,” I answered. “How we know that is a story in itself. Anyway, my friend is highly intelligent, whereby it is logical that she is highly spiritual. She fully understands that mind control is exactly that, control of the mind.”

“While you were mind controlled, where was your spirit?” David asked.

“It was as though my spirit took flight to a safe loving space while my body was being used and abused,” I answered. “I know from experience that without free thought, there is no free will, and without free will, there is no soul expression. Just because a mind- controlled victim cannot think to soulfully express their spirit does not mean the spirit is possessed. Even I didn’t posses it under mind control! Once I regained free thought and free will, pure spirit was again soulfully expressed.”

“Considering that Kelly’s spirit is light,” David thoughtfully said, “and her abusers are dark, darkness cannot overcome light.”

Mark paused from book signing to add to our conversation. “It is a physics fact that dark cannot overcome light. Light is visible radiation and dark is absence of light.”

I smiled. “My wise friend used the analogy of two rooms, one light and one dark. Light shines into the dark under the door between them, yet darkness cannot penetrate the light. By this principal, possession is an impossibility.”

“The belief of possession is dark and fear-driven,” David concluded, “while spirit is light and love-driven. Fear cannot overcome love, yet love can overcome fear.”

“Fear can only possess the mind, and the people I knew in DC are acutely aware that fearful people do not think clearly and therefore are easily led,” I explained. “So they deliberately generate fear, then point the way to run.”

“Problem, reaction, solution,” David quipped, quoting from his own book. I whole-heartedly agreed. “It keeps people in the dark as to what truth is.”

“There is good and bad in everything,” David said. “Every organization becomes infiltrated, from religion to governments. After being misled and kept in the dark so long, people forget how to identify who’s who.”

I said, “That is what the criminals in control are counting on. Again, they failed to consider the strength of the human spirit. When people shine their spiritual light, so to speak, it clearly reveals the truth and overcomes their dark secrets.”

David thoughtfully said, “Spirit naturally overrides any darkness they generate.”

“Wow,” I took in David’s simplistic message and savored it a moment. “I’ll tell Kelly you said that. She already adheres to unconditional love, and identifies the essence of her being in light of that unconditional love. This will logically define what she knows about living true-to-soul, taking it to the next level to naturally override their dark program.”

“We are all multi-dimensional beings,” David expanded, “and she needs truth on all levels.”

“The kind of high tech harmonic programming that Kelly endured is just another means of control that is faster and more precise than trauma-based mind control,” I began.

“How does harmonic programming work?” David inquired.

Mark, who understood the scientific aspect of harmonics, turned to David to explain. “Everything on this planet vibrates at a certain frequency as exemplified by the wear-ring on the bottom of antique glass. When harmonics change that frequency, such as those emitted by an opera singer, crystal glass will shatter. To further this example, consider for a moment how a favorite song incites certain feelings and sentiments. The harmonics responsible for inspiring such emotion are actually vibrating the neuron pathways of the brain. This is why an old favorite song can stir memories such as ‘we fell in love to that song’. Harmonics have now been perfected to deliberately vibrate neuron pathways to compartmentalize memory in MK Ultra programming. Laboratories developing electronic mind control techniques in the ‘70s and ‘80s referred to the application of harmonics as brain training.”

David nodded his head in understanding, and I continued my point, “Just because harmonics are more advanced technologically does not mean they advance further into the being. Harmonics still can’t penetrate the light and touch the spirit.”

“All Kelly needs to do is realize and embrace that truth,” David assured me, his eyes twinkling. “When she realizes she has a whole world of people beaming their spiritual love light to further brighten her path, she can confidently steer herself again. She inspires collective conscious love with her truth.”

I hugged David, the knowing passing between us that Kelly was free and it was only a matter of time until she assumed that knowing, too.

Mark, who was speaking with Dr. Stan Monteith[2], sensed the moment and smiled. “It looks as though you two just solved the world’s problems. We’re doing the same thing over here.” Dr. Stan laughed, and they resumed their conversation.

“Back to the global scope of problem, reaction, solution,” I said, “Consider that the problem is secrecy, the reaction is superstitious fear, and the given solution is follow the leader.”

“The herd mentality,” David added, wisely capable of condensing a world of truth into a few words.

“Exactly,” I said. “Consider that the government is years ahead of us through suppression of their secret advancements. They generate fear by perpetuating superstitious conclusions that keep people diverted from the truth and looking the other way. By the time people finally do see secrets surface such as the Stealth fighter, they superstitiously conclude they are seeing an alien space ship. This makes people feel helpless, as though they cannot do anything about the situation and they look to the government for a solution as anticipated.”

Mark joined back in our conversation. “Who says aliens aren’t microorganisms encased in a growing crystalline environment that don’t even need a spacecraft? Invasion of the mind though mind control is worse than any alien invasion could be anyway. It is ridiculous that people fear what they don’t know, and jump to superstitious conclusion rather than seek the truth. Besides, what would aliens do that the secret government isn’t already doing? Take over the world? Perpetuate mass genocide?”

“Aliens could be transdimensional,” I added.

“Or lizards,” David added.

“They’re not lizards,” I began. “That’s too simple.”

“What about George Bush, then?” David asked. “”You talk about him turning into a lizard in TRANCE.”

“Not really,” I countered. “I said he created an image of turning into a lizard.”

“TRANCE was written for Congress,” Mark reminded him. “Congress already knows about the holographic generators that produce such an image. It wasn’t necessary to beleaguer the subject to them because they already know it is a hoax. Testimony has already been provided to Congress regarding the equipment Bush used to perpetuate the illusion.”

“There are numerous similar accounts around the world regarding lizards,” David said. “I’ll be including them, and yours, in my next book which will be released next month[3]. With numerous people talking, there is truth to this somewhere.”

“The truth lies in the program to deliberately generate fear,” I said. “I’ve heard Bush discussing the fact that people autogenically respond to snakes and lizards by freezing in fear. By capitalizing on that natural reaction, they expect to perpetuate the fear that keeps people diverted from the truth and easily led.”

“Where did Bush get the idea?” David asked.

“I’m not sure who started it,” I answered. “But I do know it was discussed and decided at the Grove that this lizard alien theme would render people helpless to do anything about mind control, wars, ecological and economical depletion, division, diversion, genocide and everything else leading them into the New World Order. Since these perpe*traitors* can’t possess the human spirit, instinct is as close as they can get. This is why they control innate human response like maternal instinct, survival instinct, religious instinct, and instinctive ‘freeze’ response to serpents. Plus, spies are often referred to as ‘chameleons’ due to their ability to blend into any environment, and this theme blends in with their training. The lizard alien theme was spread throughout the military along with Aquino’s satanism.”

“That’s why you hear so many mind controlled victims recalling in photographic detail that these lizards wear combat boots,” Mark added. “’Just like satan does’. When alien spacecraft looks like Top Secret military aircraft, and when satan drives a military jeep, that’s a pretty good clue it’s a mind control program.”

“Why are so many people talking about it then?” David asked him.

“The answer resides in the influence science fiction movies and TV series have programmed into their highly suggestible minds for over forty years,“ Mark explained. “Dragons have been a primary feature of folk lore for thousands of years within all cultures starting with the Asians. To add subliminal strength to this, bear in mind that more people have died from venomous reptiles than from all wars and plagues combined. People are genetically programmed to fear reptiles. When mind controlled victims spew this program, it either destroys their credibility or perpetuates the fear. Either way, the Bushes win. We need to get the truth out there.”

“I’m presenting all the possibilities in my book,” David said. “Lizard aliens provide a point of reference for considering the possibility that aliens are among us.”

“You can say whatever you want to,” Mark agreed, “because you are an author. We have to stick to the facts by law because we’re whistleblowers. If you put your spin on Cathy’s experience, we’ll have to answer questions outside her realm of experience. That is a precarious position for us to be in as whistleblowers.”

“If I say ‘that wasn’t my experience’ then people will think I’m arguing with you, and you’re my friend,” I pleaded with David. “Or people will assume I’m saying there is no such thing as aliens and accuse me of perpetuating cover-up. I do believe in the plausibility of alien life forms both less and more advanced than us. There must be intelligent life out there somewhere! Who knows? There may even be aliens who generate love rather than fear."

David thought a moment. "This really isn't yours or mine to resolve. Rather than perpetuate fear and terror, global governments should be uniting to investigate and understand such phenomena as crop circles, crystal skulls, sightings, and abductions."

"And publish the findings!" Mark wisely added. "There may indeed be alien abductions based on what we've been seeing when we travel. There are some very credible people saying some pretty bizarre things- some of which are very positive! Not everyone talks about lizard aliens in combat boots! Personally, I think different species have incorporated into our society for generations to the point where it's normal now. Consider the numbers of scientists[4] and government officials adamantly claiming that aliens concerned with humankind's survival infiltrated our military installations after we dropped the nuclear bomb."

"Knowledge doesn't fit into a box," I furthered. "Discussions I heard at the Grove pertained to dimensions and 'they are us in the future' attitudes. They believe they can surpass time through DARPA's computerization to reach into artificial intelligence's future knowledge. Dimensions to them are dimensions of knowledge that keeps them ahead of time."

"It's time they realize the proverbial Wizard's curtain has been pulled back to expose them and their secrets," David stated, referring to Oz theme mind control programming.

Mark injected, "As I recall, the word 'wizard' is spun from the word 'lizard'."

"Oz programming is rooted in their dimensional perception," I agreed. "Politicians really are out of touch with the people, which is another reason why DC is regarded as 'over the rainbow' from the rest of u.s. When we look behind the curtain, we see it is simply men pulling levers and pushing buttons on a computerized illusion. They selected humankind's destination, obtained the roadmap, and stayed the course; never counting on people to turn on their heart lights and steer clear of their inhumane plan."

"Love's frequency is higher than their energy of fear," David asserted. "If people would keep their love light on, they'll maintain their freedom."

"Like Kelly," I smiled.

"Kelly is an inspiration to all of us," David said, rising to tend to his own flourishing book sales. "The tide is turning[5], and she is on the leading edge. Give her heaps of love from me when you see her."

Chapter 45
BACK TO THE FUTURE

By the time we left DC, Mark and I had solidified friendships and numerous speaking engagements. The ride home provided Mark and me the luxury of discussing the magnitude of events, conversations, and contacts we had made over the weekend.

“I never thought I’d live to see the day when we would speak on the lawn of our nation’s Capital,” I began. “Being free to think to tell their secrets right in their own backyard is an ultimate universal justice!”

“Calling for repeal of their 1947 National Security Act shroud of secrecy in their own backyard is rewarding, too,” Mark said as he turned onto the freeway out of DC. “It is impossible for the shadow government to hide secrets when the spotlight of truth is focused on them.”

“I like David’s statement that it is difficult for people who are left in the dark to clearly see who is good and who is bad. In light of your powerful sense of justice and truth, you’re naturally regarded as the measuring stick of discernment. If everyone gathered their strength of spirit and faced the truth like you have, the global elite’s New World Order would be history.”

“I know who to trust because I know how to trust,” Mark stated, matter-of-factly.

“You realize truth with wisdom, then act on it through your powerful sense of justice,” I assessed. “Your formula for discernment is bigger than life!”

“It hasn’t solved Kelly’s need for the available qualified rehabilitation,” Mark frowned. “The National Security Act has yet to be repealed.”

“You gave Kelly the ability to gather her strength of spirit and strive to live true-to-soul despite being denied technological rehab,” I reminded him. “She never knew what love was until you rescued us with your pure, unconditional love. Love is the most powerful healing force in the universe, and I am deeply grateful to you for freeing Kelly and me to realize it.”

Mark thought it over, still frowning. I persisted, “As her mother, under any circumstances I would want her to know and live love above all else!”

“To quote David,” Mark said, “We’re all multidimensional beings. Kelly is an extreme multidimensional being, so to speak. She needs and deserves rehab on all levels. All that stands between her and available rehab is the 1947 National Security Act! It needs to be repealed in order that harmonic technologies are put in the hands of good people.”

“Since Roswell happened in 1947, I wonder if repealing the National Security Act will result in the emergence of truth about aliens and dispel the lizard illusion,” I pondered.

“I’m not one to believe in coincidence, especially where DC is involved.” Mark drove up the ramp to the highway home. “History proves the world changed in 1947, and knowing the details could stop history from repeating itself. Something changed in 1988, too. I don’t know what—aside from the obvious.” He squeezed my hand. “It appears to have been the beginning of something positive. People began waking up.”

“I know!” I smiled. “Kelly and I weren’t the only ones waking up. Something pivotal seems to have occurred in 1988 according to reports from others. It’s almost as if another group of ‘aliens’ or ‘angels of old’ came in to save the sleeping planet. That’s just speculation, of course, yet there must be something to it. Isn’t it a bizarre ‘coincidence’ that the DeLorean used in the movie “Back to the Future[1]” traveled through time when the speed reached 88 mph, and that you rescued Kelly and me in a DeLorean in ‘88?”

Mark smiled. He was used to me attaching my lofty ideals to his logic. Our differences always proved fun. “The CIA became official in 1947 along with the National Security Act, the Roswell incident, and Congress' approval of the CIA's Project Paperclip[2] and Project Cinderella[3]."

"Every politico I knew regarded Roswell like Montauk—no cause for concern because they had the public diverted!"

"Montauk was about a top secret weapon system and mind control," Mark told me. "My brother-in-law was one of the leading scientists working on global submarine detection using sea water as the conductor of sonar waves. His doctorial thesis on this won him a job as an assistant for Werner von Braun[4]. The literal interpretation being voiced by the mind-controlled victims who worked on Montauk was that the government was warping time! Keeping this relatively simple technological defense development secret made it necessary to maintain strict secrecy at Montauk Point Naval Air Station. The workers there were exposed to mind control and given the time-warp cover story."

"Like with the Philadelphia Experiment cover story?"

"Sort of," Mark smiled. "The Montauk story took on a life of its own since the truth wasn't available until 1982 when Japan's Toshiba[5] Corporation handed over the technological specifications to the Soviets on the screws or propellers of three classes of submarines. There also exists another technology for making soldiers, tanks and airplanes appear 'invisible' based on liquid crystal display technology. Now I hear stories of 'invisibility' and 'time travel' knowing full well that the 'invisibility' factor is actually technological and 'time travel' is suppression of DARPA's futuristic knowledge!"

"Does DARPA deal with the Illuminati, Masons, and Sir Francis Bacon?" I asked.

"I don't know what all DARPA knows," Mark laughed. "I can tell you've been talking with David, though. Why did you mention Sir Francis Bacon?"

“Senator Byrd often did,” I answered. “Sir Francis Bacon weaved through his dialogue, from the Rosicrucians to the Bible, Shakespeare and the Constitution.”

“That is interesting,” Mark said. “Sir Francis Bacon is rumored to have written Shakespeare, edited the King James Version of the Bible, and brought Freemasonry into this country while it was being founded.”

“The first amendment of the Constitution calls for Separation of Church and State,” I said. “We both know that is an illusion.”

“Church controls what government doesn’t,” Mark elaborated. “And government controls churches through the 501(3)(C) tax exemption. Any church that fails to follow government mandate dictating what they can say and who to support loses their tax- exempt status. The churches have become the ‘great whore’ as the Bible[6] predicted.”

“I know through Billy Roy Moore’s Lords Chapel that certain evangelists are mind controlled to religiously lead people where the government instructs. This includes brainwashing the people to believe God leads this New World Order agenda, and to mule drugs for the CIA under the guise of ‘missions.’ This fact is difficult to bring to light when people are programmed to believe a stand against religious cults is a stand against God. Even many who turned away from the church seeking a spiritual path were absorbed by a New Age religion. Anytime people seek answers outside themselves, they become misled. The truth is within.”

“It is interesting to note that the organization supposedly overseeing so-called Separation of Church and State was formed in 1947,” Mark informed me. “Sir Francis Bacon’s influence on both the Constitution and Bible should incite their scrutiny.”

“Sir Francis Bacon sounds like an influential part of history,” I concluded.

“So is Rasputin,” Mark said. “And Hitler. And Bush. And Nostradamas. Each had access to secret knowledge, and each used it for their own ‘game.’

History will just keep repeating itself until people wake up and control their own destiny.”

“Evolution over revolutions,” I quipped. “People can learn from history or from DARPA’s futuristic plan. Either way, the truth will lift them from the circles they’re revolving in now.”

“History is being re-written,” Mark reminded me. “You said so yourself. And DARPA is covered up under the blanket of the 1947 National Security Act!”

“It all keeps coming back around to the same thing,” I noted. “Until truth comes to light, the National Security Act keeps people in the dark, hiding the truth. Revolution doesn’t bring about change, it only keeps people spinning in circles under the illusion of change.”

“Which is why we need a worldwide spiritual evolution,” Mark said. “That way, the light automatically dissipates the dark, revealing the truth. Once people know the truth, they can repeal the National Security Act, regain control of their government to unplug DARPA and HAARP, and release rehab for Kelly and a world of others in need.”

“Yes,” I agreed, excited now. “We can peacefully solve so many problems by assuming our own rights. People will stop following the leaders they didn’t elect. They can stop fretting about the concentration camps[7] being built across the country and take control of them. They’re ours anyway.

Our tax dollars paid for them. The military can choose to stop fighting other people’s wars, and allow peace to happen.”

“You’re right,” Mark said. “The same ones controlling war are controlling peace—by force. ‘Peacekeeping forces’ is an oxymoron.”

“All of humankind must exert evolution now,” I suggested. “The few who are awake and aware are proving their actions aren’t enough to overcome the global elite yet. The path to collective conscious evolution is within. It is within us all to gather the strength of spirit necessary to evolve."

"I agree that is where change must begin," Mark said thoughtfully. "World peace begins within, freedom begins within, and wisdom begins within. Then it all must be applied on this level. That's what I was saying about Kelly. She is healed on a spiritual level, yet applying it on all levels requires her to stay true-to-soul at all times. Being wrongly and unjustly institutionalized, then forced to 'get along with her peers' isn't conducive to living true-to-soul at all times!"

"She knows this," I responded. "It is a struggle for her under her circumstances. Once she is free from the system and society's ignorance, perhaps she will find herself in an environment that allows her to be true-to-soul *all*ways."

"I hear what you're saying," Mark solemnly affirmed. "Yet repealing the National Security Act would result in freedom from struggle under any circumstances."

"That statement reverberates with national and international[8] meaning." I thought on it for a moment.

Mark spoke up. "Remember when we were at the Global Science Congress last year, and top brass from McDill Airforce Base came in and attempted to trigger your old MK Ultra programming?"

"Of course!" I assured him. "When their triggering didn't work, their paradigm shifted to realize I truly had been deprogrammed. The expression on their faces was better than any justice a court could deliver."

"How would you describe what it was like before you were deprogrammed when you did respond to a trigger?"

"A knee jerk reaction," I said. "There was no way not to respond. Mind control is more powerful than a blink response when pepper is thrown in your eyes. It’s more like not blinking plus stopping tears from forming in the peppered eyes. Kelly battles that kind of response every day.”

“Kelly is the brightest shining example of spiritual evolution I’ve ever known,” Mark told me. “There is no excuse for anybody anywhere to not wake up, face the truth, and evolve. When they do, they owe it to Kelly and all others like her to assume control of technology and release the technological antidote to her condition. Technology doesn’t preclude the spiritual, it should emerge with truth as people reclaim their lives.”

“I hear you,” I said, wiping my eyes. “I hear your words and your soul intent. You are the brightest shining example of reverberating evolution I’ll ever know in this life.”

We drove most of the way home in uneventful, peaceful silence, each of us deep into our own thoughts. Before returning to Alabama, we stopped to see Kelly who was still flourishing under the care of her stallion friend and Jabneel staff. She had written a brilliant article on subliminals in the course of her Jabneel schooling titled The Invisible Menace, What You Don’t Know is Hurting You, and presented me with a copy.

“Dad and I met hundreds of people in DC who acknowledge you as their greatest inspiration,” I told her. “With your permission, I’d like to share this article with them.”

“Of course,” Kelly said, matter-of-factly. “They probably already know about subliminals, though.”

“You’d be surprised what people don’t know!” I laughed. “You and I gained significant insight with our experience! Speaking of significant insight, David Icke sends his love.”

“You saw David?” she squealed. “Did you hug him for me?”

“Of course,” I assured her, and proceeded to convey our discussion to her about spirit, light, and soul.

“When you say ‘soul’, you’re talking about that love light inside of me, right?” she asked.

“Of course,” I answered. “What is your perception of the word?”

“The church here says spirit is God, and soul is his spirit in us.”

“What do you say?” I asked.

“That God is love energy, which is the same love energy shining through me.”

“I like your definition!” I exclaimed. “People tend to play semantics with words, and having two words with inner-changeable meaning keeps people bickering when they really agree. Your definition of love energy is clear.”

“I like ‘love energy’ because it is a univer*soul* name for ‘God’ that crosses all religions and names, including Buddha, Allah, and the rest.”

“Is that term accepted in church?” I asked.

“I don’t know what is accepted in church,” she honestly answered. “All I know is I’m expected in the church. So I sit there, and go within my self and think. I was thinking about my poem ‘God Save Us From Religion’ and how God’s love energy doesn’t really act. It’s up to people to save themselves and their children from religious abuse by allowing that love energy to flow through them and strengthen them to take action. I like not ‘blaming’ God when its people who are to blame for not stopping the abuse. Some people still need religion and it’s up to them to clean it up. Being here has given me insight into how some people still need religion.”

“How’s that?” I asked, astounded by Kelly’s spiritual evolution and compassion for others’ needs despite her circumstances.

“One of the kids is institutionalized here because his alcoholic father beat him so bad. Now his father quit drinking and goes to church. He’s a better man for going without alcohol. Maybe he couldn’t have quit without his church’s support,” Kelly thoughtfully said. “At the same time, though, there is another kid in here whose abusive father went to court and swore on a Bible that he was a Christian and they believed him. Now the kid is locked up while his abusive father is free.” Kelly was silent a moment. “I wonder why ‘swearing’ on a Bible means you’re telling the truth?”

“People must go within for the wisdom to discern truth,” I answered. “We’re all on our own learning path, though, and some people still need rituals.”

By the time we left Jabneel, Kelly was hopeful and excited about having her article printed. I assured her she was making a powerful difference herself and others just by being herself true-to-soul.

As we completed our drive back to Alabama, I shared Kelly’s definition of soul and spirit with Mark. “Besides, I like the way her ‘love-energy’ definition is a direct, constant connection that clarifies the meaning of life! What would you say is the meaning of life?”

“Consider the source,” Mark instantly replied. I laughed, pondering the reverberating meaning.

“You defined life’s cycle in three words!”

“Dr. Stan[9] runs circles around my profundity,” Mark smiled. “I really enjoyed talking with him at the rally. He certainly is a profound individual with vast knowledge. I’m looking forward to doing radio with him when we get back.”

“He has a radio show?” I asked.

“He’s reputed to be one of the best,” Mark assured me. “After talking with him, I can believe it. His Radio Liberty is broadcast from Monterey, California. Since he’s in relative close proximity to the Grove, he’s already had callers to confirm much of what you’ve been saying.”

"I heard Alex Jones[10] was the radio host with the most on the Grove."

"He is well respected," Mark confirmed. "Dr. Stan is 'multi-dimensional' so-to-speak in that he knows the solution to the world's problems is ultimately spiritual. He typifies the type of brilliant scientist who is a devote Christian. His expansion of topics and knowledge extends even further. I can mention any remote topic, and he instantly spews a dozen cross-references that confirm it. I'm telling you, his intellect is powerful. Doing radio with him is going to be a pleasure."

"Is he bound by Clear Channel controls?" The Clinton Administration's 1996 Telecommunications Act deregulated radio stations in an effort to stifle the people's communications through a corporate monopoly to control the airwaves.

"Clear Channel cannot even stifle our friend Bill Boshears of the Scizone[11], and he's working right in it at their Cincinnati, Ohio headquarters!" Mark clarified. "There certainly is no stopping Dr. Stan. He already broadcasts on shortwave, FM stations across the country, and internet. He makes hard-to-find books like TRANCE and audio/videotapes readily available. He knows how to get the truth out there without being censored. The internet is fast becoming the people's source of truth these days, and Dr. Stan has a history of being on the leading edge securing humanity's future. He broadcasts radio over the internet!"

"I only spoke with him briefly at the rally," I told Mark. "And briefly was long enough to determine he has a powerful presence and is a man of integrity. With you confirming what I sensed, being on his radio show will be a pleasure. Do you know how he got into radio?"

"By caring for humanity and being concerned with what he sees happening to our country," Mark answered. "He is a retired successful orthopedic surgeon who chooses to contribute to humanity through Radio Liberty[12]. He could be retired in luxury in Hawaii, though he chooses to sound the trumpet of alarm at his own expense. Dr. Stan is a real practicing Christian."

“It is fascinating to learn how people from all walks of life choose to bring truth to light through radio, newspapers, and books,” I said. “These people are taking positive action. Look at Clay Douglas. He is a seasoned biker who has seen it all and done it all, and is now devoting his all to humanity through The Free American[13] newspaper, website, and radio; plus he hosts some of the best preparedness seminars in the country!”

“He might print Kelly’s article,” Mark suggested.

“Clay has been so good to Kelly, I’m sure he will, too,” I agreed. “David Icke will likely spread it all over Europe like he has TRANCE. Carl Klang embraced our family motto at the rally and is writing a song for Kelly called “Its Not Over Until We Win.” He already has a solid history of successful airplay, so Kelly’s song should skyrocket up the charts. With Carl’s song and Kelly’s article circling the globe, collective consciousness will rise!”

“The collective voice of the people is demanding a stop to the CIA’s blatant crack, coke, and heroin distribution,” Mark informed me. “That voice has been amplified by a retired Los Angeles cop named Mike Ruppert. He is as relentless as we are, and the information he puts out on his website is impeccable.”

“Which website is that?”

“It’s copvcia[14]. Because of the likes of Mike Ruppert and his website, the Clinton Administration is being forced to address the issue of the CIA’s involvement in the drug industry[15]. This pertinent fact is emerging along with other key issues that further validate TRANCE for people. I don’t know how they can continue to contain it all. No wonder the CIA has over 55,000 operatives in the US alone. It takes a lot of manpower to plug a sieve.”

“Have you heard any feedback on the detailed information and documents we submitted to the Independent Council?” I asked. It had been some time since we had turned in requested documents and facts substantiating details in TRANCE to the investigators of Clintons’ scandals.

“I don’t expect to hear back from them. I’ve been assured Ken Starr received the package, though. Apparently the package you mailed John Brown regarding your account of Ted Shackley’s involvement with Bush and Clinton’s drug ops never did reach him. He has your testimony, though. All this is adding to the charges against the Clinton Administration.”

“It still astounds me how Germans familiar with Nazi mind control tactics and policies are alerting the American people,” I said, referring to their campaign against Hillary Clinton’s proposed health care plan and Global Ed. “They are literally trying to stop history from repeating itself!”

“Circles and cycles,” Mark said. “Round and round we go. History is destined to repeat unless people rise above the revolutions with spiritual evolution!”

Chapter 46
ALERT PEOPLE!

“The CIA is investigating itself[1] to determine whether or not they are involved in the drug business,” someone in the audience was saying. “I wonder if the information detailed in TRANCE is among the 500,000 documents they are reviewing?”

A wise and alert sheet metal worker named Bill Mahkovitz had invited Mark and me to speak in his hometown of Santa Cruz, California, and we were on the questions and answers segment of our presentation. Bill Mahkovitz was among the growing number of Americans who felt compelled to take action against the persistent erosion of US values. His Australian born wife did not want to believe TRANCE at first, yet she believed in her husband and supported his determined effort to bring Mark and me in for a seminar. Bill and Claire[2] Mahkovitz are representative of what good people can do to arm loved ones and their community with truth. They were bringing a precious child into this world, and they wanted to ensure the world was stable enough to raise him in.

“I’d like to see those 500,000 documents,” I replied. “How the CIA can review that much evidence and still ‘just say no’ to their obvious involvement is absurd. The average drug dealer on the streets knows the CIA runs the drug business these days. Either the dealers are with the CIA, or the war on drugs is against them.”

“Mike Ruppert[3] explains this well on his website at www.copvcia.com,” Mark said as most people in attendance nodded their heads in agreement while a few others quickly made note.

“Why are drugs still illegal when the CIA distributes them?” someone asked, prompting laughter throughout the crowd.

“We have more people locked up in this country for victimless crimes right now than we have throughout history,” Mark responded. “Most are political prisoners of the CIA’s so-called ‘war on drugs’ that has been waged against all of us. For example, over 646,000 citizens are arrested each year for marijuana use, despite several states upholding the votes of millions to legalize it medicinally. Privatized prisons have become an obscenely profitable business that has compromised our system of justice much like the cop who is paid a commission for writing a traffic ticket.”

I added, “If drugs were legal, how would the CIA fund its black budget?”

“500,000 documents proving the CIA’s involvement in the drug industry indicates to me that someone besides you is speaking out,” a young man stated. “Why don’t we hear from other recovered MK Ultra victims?”

“They are being heard from[4],” I assured him. “Kelly and I certainly aren’t the only ones affected. Mental health professionals and law enforcement are overwhelmed with the numbers reporting sexual abuse and mind control abuses.”

“According to mental health statistics, the average pedophile sexually molests 298 children,” Mark injected.

“We hear from other victims in various stages of recovery all the time,” I continued. “Some were abused by perpe*traitors* I’ve named, and not just the high profile ones. For example, Paul Bonacci of the Franklin[5] case has named Alex Houston as one of his sexual abusers and MK Ultra programmers while he was in the Boys Town Catholic orphanage. Alicia Owen, also of the Franklin case, was imprisoned like so many others on so-called perjury charges due to classified MK Ultra mind control. Seidina Reed, the victim mentioned in TRANCE[6] who was routinely prostituted to Saudi Prince Bandar Bin Sultan[7], began legal procedures that were reportedly silenced under the 1947 National Security Act.”

“Not everyone who comes running out of the proverbial fires of hell wants to be a fireman when they emerge,” Mark explained. “Cathy and I know one young lady who therapeutically overcame the mind control conditioning of a religious cult, extreme psych abuse by her mother, and extensive traumas by the KKK[8] in order to freely pursue her own choices in life.”

“Lisa, the remarkable girl Mark cited, now successfully teaches English to foreign retarded and autistic children by compassionately utilizing her heightened telepathic skills to span language and mental barriers,” I added. “Many victims can’t think to recover so well. Those like Loretta Lynn, for example, should be honored for living the love she is despite ignorant people turning a blind eye and a deaf ear to her subliminal pleas for years. The more you know, the more you see and hear. Another victim claiming ‘no one would believe the things I can’t remember’ is counting on people like yourselves to wake up and make a necessary difference for her and her five children so they can recover from decades of Pentagon-level abuse.”

“Cathy is the only vocal recovered survivor of MK Ultra speaking today,” Mark explained. “This doesn’t mean that there aren’t numerous recovered mind controlled survivors submitting information. Neither Cathy nor I are public speakers, we’re whistleblowers. It’s not easy speaking out. Yet we’re exercising our freedom of speech today to ensure free thought for future generations.”

“Some people are grouchy when they wake up,” I admitted. “They’re not always kind. Love and concern for my daughter compels me to speak out, and the love that Mark and I share strengthens me.”

“Are you and Mark married?” a conservative woman wearing a huge crucifix asked accusingly. “I’m not sure I want to hear about love from someone who’s not married.”

“I’ll tell that to your Catholic Priest who teaches marriage counseling!” someone shouted at her.

A young woman gently shifted the subject. “I understand that you were forced to marry your MK Ultra handlers. Who arranged for these marriages?”

“My former owner in MK Ultra, US Senator Robert C. Byrd,” I answered. “My daughter was born while I was still being tortured and traumatized by my first handler, Wayne Cox. Once mind control conditioning was established through him, Byrd ordered Kelly and me to be transferred to our second handler Alex Houston. Byrd assured me that I would be bound to him through my forced marriage to Alex Houston, which he demanded occur on the anniversary of the Kennedy Assassination. Byrd deliberately took full control of me on the same date that the secret government took control of our country.”

“What ever happened to Wayne Cox?” she asked.

“Cox’s blatant serial killings tie directly in with CIA Black Budget drug operations, which is why he remains free for so-called reasons of national security despite the vast amount of evidence proving his guilt.”

As always, I was asked, “How is Kelly doing?”

In the course of updating them on her circumstances, I mentioned Kelly’s article. “’The Invisible Menace; What You Don’t Know Is Hurting You’ has been published around the world in various newspapers. Her insight into subliminals is significant due to her awareness, which raises the question why are we allowing corporations to manipulate our minds through high tech ads loaded with subliminals[9]? We pay to be manipulated when we purchase their products.”

“A half dozen Corporate monopolies are taking over this country,” Mark warned.

“Learn how our minds are subliminally manipulated through her article,” I suggested. “It is published in Clay Douglas’ Free American newspaper[10], among others.”

“Should we outlaw subliminals in advertising?” someone asked.

“We simply need to educate ourselves since no one can legislate against people’s suggestibility levels,” Mark said. “That is what advertisers understand best. Knowledge is our ONLY defense against subliminals the same way it is against mind control. Think twice before you respond to an ad, and think logically. Pay attention rather than pay corporate sponsors by purchasing their products.”

“Outlawing subliminals would not necessarily undo generations of conditioning caused by high tech advertisements, anyway,” I added. “It may be that intrusive disruption of conscious thought through such advertisements every eight to twelve minutes has contributed to the rise in Attention Deficit Disorder. Combined with video games, our kids have grown up in a culture of constant subconscious bombardment that disrupts conscious thought. This is a possibility worth looking into. Again, raising awareness is key.”

A distinguished gentleman stood. “For years I have donated to Boys Town and Covenant House believing I was helping the children. When I was alerted to the corruption, I looked into it myself and saw it was true. Now I wonder how in the world I can help the children in a way that actually benefits them.”

“Believe the children,” I began. “Keep your eyes, ears, and heart open to their individual need and respond accordingly. When you choose to empower individual activists like Mark and me through your donations, stay vigilant. See the difference your money makes.”

Mark injected, “Every time you donate money, just like every time you cast your vote, stay aware of the results.”

“You talk about Bill and Hillary Clinton being bisexual,” another participant began. “It is a disgrace to our country to have homosexual activity being promoted from the White House. We have gay celebration week in our schools now. I would like to lead the cause against homosexuals.”

A few people cheered and I quickly said, “Homosexuality is often a ‘result’, not a ‘cause’. To take on a cause, first consider the cause of it. Look through the eyes of love to find the cause rather than succumb to socially engineered hate. Childhood sexual abuse is one such cause. Let’s stand against their abusers. It is time we put our differences aside and unite against those socially engineering us to divide. United we stand, divided we fall.”

“Then why did you bring up the issue in TRANCE?” the participant persisted.

“In reality,” I answered, “I was stating the facts.”

“TRANCE was written for Congress,” Mark reminded them. “It is well known inside the beltway of DC that the Clintons are bisexual.”

“It is my experience that they are bisexual, leaning toward the homosexual end,” I continued. “This fact is important in view of the media’s current perversion diversions leading people’s attention away from the crimes against humanity of which the Clintons are actually guilty. When I included information about their sexual preference in TRANCE, it certainly wasn’t intended to incite emotional response. Instead, it provides crucial details necessary for understanding what we are actually seeing today. Hillary isn’t the jilted wife she is being portrayed to be. This separation of the sexes ideology with the Clintons is a social engineering tactic to, among other things, create the illusion of division in order that Hillary can further her own political career in the future.”

“Think beyond TV’s spin,” Mark cautioned.

“I’ve heard rumors that Hillary has Bill Clinton under mind control,” someone said. “Is there any truth to those rumors?”

“Absolutely not!” Mark and I exclaimed in unison.

I continued. “No one under mind control has the capacity to cleverly lie and creatively twist words like Bill Clinton does! The more you understand about mind control, the easier it will become to identify victims. Victims can eloquently deliver a speech over and over using the same words, same voice inflections and gestures, the same dramatic pauses as programmed, yet cannot think to spontaneously respond to questions charismatically.”

Mark furthered the explanation. “Especially questions pertaining to dates, times, geography, or even how to spell simple words like ‘potato’. People under mind control are literal, and are therefore incapable of playing word semantics, misleading others, and spontaneously telling a blatant lie the way Slick Willie does.”

A polite young man stood. “Our country is being overrun by Mexicans since NAFTA. We’re loosing jobs and paying for their welfare. How are we supposed to ‘look through the eyes of love’ while we’re going bankrupt?”

“Have you ever been to Mexico?” I asked. “They have available medicine there that is affordable. They sure can’t get that here, especially through our failing welfare system. And they have more fresh produce than we do. Admittedly, the freshness of our produce has improved since Mexicans came here to show us how to farm and harvest it properly. It is expensive, though, and I sure don’t see Mexicans reaping the financial or health benefit of our genetically engineered foods. NAFTA was deliberately designed to economically enslave us while the rich get richer. Social engineering segregates us from the Mexican people, who we ignorantly blame for our demise while their leaders and ours deliberately enslave us to New World Order controls. This was the plan in the mid-1980s that I know of, and it is coming to fruition because we allow ourselves to be diverted by hate. Don’t listen to what politicians say, look at what they do. They are united in dividing we the people. Divided we fall. Let’s all unite, put the blame where it belongs, and stop the economic and ecological destruction of our planet and lives.”

“When the people lead, leaders follow,” Mark added while folks clapped and cheered.

A middle-aged woman stood up, “Jon Benet Ramsey[11] was murdered last December, and after reading TRANCE it is clear to me that she was probably under mind control. Stun gun prod moles were found all over her body; she was dressed age inappropriately with a plastic smile and pupilary dilation; a perverse pedophilic sex act on Christmas killed her; her mother was Miss West Virginia[12]; her father was a military subcontractor like your father; and the whole case is being covered up! Does your case tie in with hers in any way?"

"Yes," Mark answered, then turned to me. "Excuse me for answering this question first since it is directed to you." Turning back to the audience he continued, "Ongoing investigations make this a very sensitive subject right now since a copy of the military training film 'How to Create a Mind Control Slave Using a Stun Gun[13]" was found in the Ramsey house. Cathy was used in a military training film by that title. Also, a manifest from the ferry traveling between Traverse City, Michigan and Beaver Island registers Jon Benet's father and Cathy's father on the same ferry ride."

I injected, "My younger brother was nick-named 'Beaver' after this so-called religious Michigan retreat. Beaver Island is in close proximity to the Ramsey household in Charlevoix[14], where Jon Benet also held the beauty pageant title."

Mark continued, "Beaver Island is an identified mind control-training center associated with the Jesuits. People working for media mogul Rupert Murdock[15] have this evidence. Let's see what he does with it."

"We'll never see what he does with it!" someone skeptically shouted.

"He'll investigate it the same way the CIA is investigating itself!" and "He'll cover it up!" were voiced.

"Recently when I saw my daughter, Kelly," I quickly began in an effort to minimize pandemonium, "she cried when she said, 'the only difference between Jon Benet and me is that she can't be abused anymore'. Jon Benet's murder has prompted rumors of mind control and caused people to think to ask questions the media won't answer. People are learning that the media is as controlled as Jon Benet appeared to be."

The question was asked, “Did her mother, Patsy Ramsey, kill her daughter like the media suggests?”

Mark answered the question with a question. “Isn’t it ironic that John Ramsey married a ‘Patsy’[16]?”

“That precious child did not die in vain,” I said, solemnly. “Her memory lives on in all of us. How many more have to die before people in this country wake up and stop pedophilia, mind control, and New World Orders?”

“A whole new generation of mind control slaves has been recruited since Cathy and I have been speaking,” Mark added.

“Knowledge is our ONLY defense against mind control,” I said. “Please, help us spread the word for Kelly’s sake, Jon Benet’s sake, and for the sake of humanity’s future.”

“Buy copies of TRANCE and arm your loved ones with truth,” Mark continued. “We’re not making money off this. TRANCE is priced low so that those of you who are economically challenged like us can afford to get this crucial information out there. In deed, it is truth that makes us free!”

Bill Mahkovitz came up to the podium and hugged us both while the crowd stood in applause. “I’d like to thank Mark and Cathy for coming out here tonight to share what they know with all of us so that we can be more effective in our own efforts to take back our government and our lives. I wish they’d have brought more books, though. We’ve only got three left and they’re hard to find since TRANCE is self-published to circumvent censorship. Mark, where can these folks get a copy[17]? I’ll buy a case of books from you and do what I can to make them available. Where else can these folks buy TRANCE around here?”

“Through Dr. Stan Monteith,” Mark suggested.

“OK, Dr. Stan has some. Tune into Radio Liberty or go to his website at www.radioliberty.com. Thank you all for coming out here tonight.”

“Thanks, Bill!” someone shouted going out the door. Carl Klang’s latest music release “It’s Not Over Until We Win[18]” was being played through the sound system as people gathered their belongings. Most people stayed awhile to ask personal questions and talk. Communities like this one were reliant on individuals like Bill Mahkovitz to unite them with cause and arm them with truth.

Bill and his family have grown very dear to Mark and me, and represent why we continue to speak out. We finally left the auditorium together, exhausted. On the ride back to our hotel room, we discussed the event. “Why is acceptance of truth contingent upon us being married?” I asked, genuinely perplexed.

“It isn’t,” Bill Mahkovitz replied. “People are socially engineered to accept things one way. It’s like why you have to dress up to speak. People need to expand their thought and deepen their values.” He thought a moment. “I know you two are married, but when is your anniversary?”

“The end of December sometime,” I answered. “Do you know the date Mark?”

“I don’t know,” he told me. “I suppose we could look on the back of our wedding photo.”

Bill Mahkovitz started laughing. “You two just don’t argue about conventional things, do you? Couples hold it against each other if one of them forgets the Anniversary date.”

“We haven’t quite honeymooning long enough to pause for an Anniversary,” I told him.

“Claire and I can relate,” he chuckled.

“In the future,” Mark said thoughtfully, “we would be wise to ask people to write out their questions. With today’s issues so volatile, folks are getting emotional.”

“I thought we were going to have an anti-gay protest there for a minute,” Bill Mahkovitz agreed.

“By writing out their questions,” I added, “it could help keep them focused logically, too. I think this is a brilliant idea, Mark.”

“We’ll do questions and answers that way from now on,” Mark said. “They can make note of their questions while we speak.”

“Next time you come back to Santa Cruz,” Bill Mahkovitz said, “I’ll have paper and pencils ready to hand out as they come in the door. You will come back, won’t you?”

“Absolutely,” Mark agreed.

“I’ll start alerting people now,” he said.

Chapter 47
IN LIGHT of INSIGHT

“The Feds came in, flashed FBI identification, and started shackling us kids,” Kelly was telling Mark and me when we learned Jabneel had suddenly been shut down in July 1997. “They started loading us in vans. Most of the kids were totally freaked out. I am so used to abuse by the Feds I calmed the other kids down with jokes and stuff. I told them what Mom taught me about ‘change your thought, change your mood’. Anytime emotion overwhelms my thinking, I use that to logically refocus. It helped them, too. A few of my friends even started singing ‘It’s Not Over Until We Win[1]’ with me while they transported us. By the time they unloaded us from the van shackled and chained together, we were singing ‘Swing Lo, Sweet Chariot[2]’. One of the Feds tried not to smile. I saw him.”

“What excuse did they give for closing down Jabneel?” I asked Kelly, swallowing my rage.

“No one knows for sure. You can ask my new house mother and she’ll tell you ‘it’s the devil’.” Kelly had been immediately switched over to a group home without any court procedures. “All they did was take my records. Everybody saw them do it[3].”

“Did they arrest Jabneel staff?” Mark wondered.

“Nope,” Kelly answered. “They just chained us kids, boxed up my records, and locked the doors.”

Kelly’s new ‘house-mother’ came over to greet us and provide explanation. “It was the devil,” she assured us.

“Do you know anything about dissociative disorders?” Mark asked her, noting her pupilary dilation and blank stare.

“Huh?” She asked. “Kelly will be attending High School in the fall, and they need you to provide her school records.”

“Tell the Feds to turn them over,” Kelly advised her matter-of-factly.

“Maybe you are familiar with the old term ‘Multiple Personality Disorder’,” Mark persisted.

“Huh?” She asked absent-mindedly.

“Are you familiar with child abuse?” I asked her.

“Of course, everyone here is abused. We don’t allow any satanism or drugs in our house, though,” she assured us as half a dozen tattooed, pierced teens with various shades of neon hair walked by.

“Who buys their clothes?” I asked, noting occult-theme tee shirts on every one of them.

“They do,” she answered. “Once a month I take them shopping with the $10 the state gives them to meet their needs.” She wandered off, leaving us alone again.

“That’s like the blind leading the blind,” Mark muttered.

“I’m working with a new horse,” Kelly announced. “His name is Breeze[4]. The owners put him out to pasture after a bunch of satanists got hold of him and turned him mean. He’s not mean. His owners just didn’t care to understand him. They didn’t even comfort him. He knows I understand, though, and trusts me now. I ride him all the time.”

Kelly’s ability to telepathically communicate with animals[5] was proving to be the only positive outlet she had in her occult-saturated placement. Even when she began attending public high school, satanism prevailed there, too. True-to-soul, she couldn’t be controlled by the religious means surrounding her.

Back in Nashville, I immediately arranged for a meeting with the Department of Human Services in an effort to obtain Kelly’s records as requested by her high school.

“We’ve restructured and are now the Department of Children’s Services,” I was told by a state worker. “You can get Kelly’s records released through the Feds who closed down Jabneel.”

“Obviously that is not possible,” I said. “Please at least call the high school and explain to them that they can meet with me. Right now they won’t even allow me in the building because they believe there are court orders prohibiting it. You and I both know that is absurd. In the meantime, they are counseling Kelly that she cannot graduate with her class unless her records are provided. The pressure this puts on her is enormous, in addition to being in a public school for the first time in years.”

“No.”

“That wasn’t a question. Where is your logic? Where is your compassion?” I asked, only to be met with blank stares and no results.

By October Kelly took matters into her own hands, fleeing pressure, injustice, and one of Knoxville’s common murderous occult rituals. Along with a friend, she hitchhiked nearly 200 miles to Nashville where she was found sleeping under a bridge. The phone call she placed to me moments before when she arrived was apparently illegally monitored, and local police picked her up before I could respond. She was thrust back into state institutions.

“We’re going to place Kelly in Try[6]-Angle House,” the Department of Children’s Services informed me. “She is in lockdown right now and you are prohibited from seeing her.”

“Kelly has been through a strenuous ordeal and needs comforting,” I pleaded. “We need to see each other.”

“Ms. O’Brien,” a new DCS worker assigned to Kelly’s case said, “If it is any comfort, I’ve been going over Kelly’s records and see where she has already accumulated close to twenty-five thousand dollars in her State Bank Account from Social Security[7]. When she turns 18, this money will be released to her to ease her back into society. Perhaps she can even obtain the type therapy you seek.”

“Even if I believed you,” I told her, “it doesn’t help Kelly today. Today, she and I need to talk if you would please…”

“No,” she said, looking at her watch and gathering up her papers. “This meeting is adjourned.”

In order to cope with the magnitude of Kelly’s ordeal, I wrote letters to her daily and began venting through poetry. The poems were usually for and about her, focusing on hope, love, and *soul*utions. I found that by writing, I could still shift the emotionally incomprehensible to logic the same way I had in deprogramming. My poetry proved to be a therapeutic means of coping I would utilize for years to come. In addition to this, I thrust myself into work.

Mark and I were speaking out on the radio and through seminars that were beginning to extend internationally. The volumes of paperwork and books filling our tiny house finally broke the foundation in two! Our landlord was not pleased, and refused to refund our renter’s deposit when we were forced to leave. As whistleblowers, Mark and I had devoted our all to spreading the word in a manner conducive to survival and maintaining our right to speak out. It was a precarious balance, yet we were determined to survive at all costs! Loosing our deposit was understandable yet difficult under the circumstances.

“I’d rather go without gas and groceries than align with any organization that would fund us and can be infiltrated,” Mark told me as we sat on the steps figuring out our next move.

“Every day we survive is one more day I get to be with you,” I said, holding his hand. “I’d rather spend time with you than spend money any day!”

“OK,” Mark smiled. “Now that we have that issue resolved, what are we going to do about it?”

“You’re asking me?” I laughed. “What do I know about making money?”

Mark’s eyes twinkled. “I’m serious!” I said, fully aware of what he was thinking.

“So am I,” he said, rising to go back inside. “Maybe an answer will come to us.”

That evening our friend who inspired our move to Alabama phoned and we told her our dilemma. “There is a big vacant house on my property that you two could fix up if it would meet your needs. It needs some work, but it certainly is large enough for spacious living quarters, an office or two, and a storage area for your books and documents.” The next day she showed us the house and we immediately began the process of relocating.

“At least it’s brick and won’t break in half,” she laughed as we moved our tons of documents and books in. Her attitude was positively bright, and I grew to learn many points of wisdom from her through the years.

“If this house was a shack I would love it for the soul-rejuvenating nature surrounding it!” I exclaimed, hugging her with delight. “Thank you so much for sharing it with us!”

It would be a full month before we finally got all the vines pulled off the windows and bricks to even see the complete house. The electricity needed rewiring and the plumbing needed replacing, yet Mark and I were no strangers to work. Especially when it was a labor of love. When the lights came on and we could finally see our home, I was astounded by its beauty and strength. It was a magnificent home, and Mark and I felt privileged to live in such a peaceful and serene setting. Waking up to soul rejuvenating beauty each day makes the hardest of times lighter, and we relished every moment.

We built new cages for our raccoons, who thrived in their new environment. Our coons immediately made friends with the neighboring wild coons, and soon we had dozens coming up to visit every night. The wildlife in the wooded area around us soon realized we were attuned to them and their needs, and our yard turned into a wildlife sanctuary! In addition to the coons, we had fox, beaver, eagles, bobcats, squirrels, chipmunks, deer, and even an occasional bear. The deer would sleep on the porch the way moose had in Alaska, and they felt as at home with us as we did with them.

The wild ‘coons soon became jealous of our pet raccoons, and wanted a cage of their own. Cages were regarded as protection from outside intruders rather than containment, and the wild coons soon claimed the small have-a-heart trap we used for treating sick animals. They would lock themselves inside when they were hungry, expecting we would feed them[8]. After treating a few wild coons for fleas and worms, word apparently spread among them that the trap was the place to go for assistance. One time when the door didn’t shut properly, the coon inside held it closed until we tended his needs! Mama coons began bringing their new babies up for worming and snacks. Never once did they steal or destroy anything. Coons are very intelligent and polite when they are cared for.

Being attuned with nature kept life in perspective. Everyday I took our blonde chow dog Moses for a walk—or rather, he would take me. Moses had adopted Mark and me prior to our move. The tiny house that broke in two was right in ‘tornado alley’ where tornados were commonplace. After one such violent storm, Moses wandered into our yard seeking medical attention for a snakebite. Mark treated him, and he deeply appreciated it. Moses’ intelligence was high, and his telepathic communications were met with understanding. The more he interacted with us, the stronger his communications became to the point where he had no need to bark, jump, slobber, or act like a dog. He was one of us and he knew it. Because of his unique characteristics, he fit right into our new home environment and soon became our constant companion. Moses abandoned his instinct to hunt in favor of inner-communicating with wildlife, which added to the peace of our environment.

Our new home had a huge office, which proved ideal for balancing the intensity of our business with nature's wildlife pleasure. TRANCE was soon ready for reprint again. "You wondered how we would sell the first printing," Mark reminded me. "Now we're needing to reprint again. We didn't make quite enough profit off the last run to pay for this printing. We need to come up with some cash."

"We should raise the price of the book," I suggested. "At least it will perpetuate itself that way."

"No," Mark said thoughtfully. "We need to keep it affordable so people are able to help us spread the word. Mind control is the common thread weaving through society's woes and more people are realizing it everyday."

"Who would believe we are broke?" I asked. "You have successfully marketed TRANCE to where it is already reputed to be one of the best selling self-published book ever. We're making a significant positive difference bringing the reality of mind control to light."

"Not enough for Kelly, yet," Mark said sadly. "Her situation is deplorable. She is nearly 18, soon will be free of the system and we still haven't obtained her right to qualified rehab. The National Security Act has yet to be repealed! Maybe by going global with the information we can incite action. The internet has proven to be the perfect tool of mass communication on a global scale."

"I know you are good at making something from nothing," I admitted. "There isn't anything you can't fix or build. Still, it astounds me that you built a computer by dissecting our old one when it wasn't even made for internet use. Your applicable intelligence is why TRANCE will soon be going global. No wonder we need to reprint! We better go pull some of the motorcycle parts in the garage together and build a bike to sell so we can afford to reprint. Demand for TRANCE will rise even more with Clinton going through impeachment."

“Do you really believe ‘slick Willie’ will be impeached?” Mark laughed.

“He’ll probably just redefine ‘impeach’ the same way he has redefined ‘sex’ and everything else,” I complained.

“The media has redefined the whole country,” Mark said. “It used to be that art imitates life. Now life imitates art. Wag the Dog[9] proved that.”

“How do you think the media got the jump on the whole Monica Lewinsky[10] scandal?”

“The Mossad may be able to answer that for you. I can’t,” Mark informed me.

“If Clinton gets impeached,” I said, “it will be for all the wrong reasons. The perversion diversion will have worked! That’s not tolerable! People need to realize truth or the same people will stay in control.”

“Even if people did learn,” Mark said, gathering up tools to work on a motorcycle project, “they’ve got to restructure the voting system before they could get their own choice in office. Everybody already knows the majority didn’t vote Clinton into this second term.”

“Remember that caller on Clay Douglas’[11] radio show?” I asked, carrying tools out to the garage with Mark.

Mark laughed. “That was funny. Everybody was complaining that they didn’t know anyone who voted for Clinton and that drunk called in and slurred, ‘I’m the one who voted for Clinton.”

“Unless Clinton redefines ‘impeach,’ maybe the voice of the people will at least be heard to vote him out of office.”

“I wish people would learn truth before Bush Jr. assumes office,” Mark said as he began to assemble a motorcycle from a box of parts.

“If people don’t wise up,” I said, “they’re going to keep it ‘all in the family’ of dictators as planned. Look at how Poppy Bush’s sons are already lined up to assume office with Governor Jeb running the drug capital of Florida, and Governor Jr. in Texas ready to claim the Presidency.”

“Bush has been running this country a long time,” Mark acknowledged. “He was head of the CIA when they took control of the country during Ford’s Administration.”

“At least Ford didn’t pretend to be elected,” I noted. “Reagan only acted like President while Bush ran the country. Everybody in DC that I was exposed to knew Bush ran the country with Cheney[12] right beside him. Was there even the illusion of an election when Bush publicly assumed office after Reagan?”

“You don’t remember?” Mark asked.

“No!” I smiled. “I was a bit distracted waking up from mind control and going to the top of the world with you.”

“Well the rest is history anyway,” Mark smiled.

“History that was planned in 1984 when Bush tapped Clinton to follow him!” I complained. “This nonsense has got to stop or Poppy will be pulling Jr’s strings next!”

“Speaking of which,” Mark said screwing a part into place, “pass me that nut. This motorcycle should be ready for sale in time for us to reprint TRANCE.”

By the time we were ready to reprint, the motorcycle was sold. This provided just enough extra income for us to tend to Kelly’s disastrous release from the Tennessee system. She was missing again.

I knocked on the door of Try-Angle House and social worker Suzanne Boone answered the door leaving the chain in tact.

“What do you want?” she asked through the crack.

“My daughter,” I said. “Where is Kelly?”

“You find her,” she retorted. “When you do, tell her I sold her clothes and hope chest full of trinkets.”

“How can you be so heartless?” I asked. “Those girls in there are counting on you.”

“There is nothing I can do for any of them,” she answered coldly. “Or you. The system isn’t working.”

“Then find your voice!” I snapped. “Make a difference!”

Mark was aware of how the CIA operates and utilized his insight to locate Kelly. We found her quivering in a CIA sponsored crack house after being sent to Fort Campbell, Kentucky for (obvious) reported traumatization. Holding a weapon in plain sight, Mark kept the owner of the crack house in his sights while Kelly gathered her clothes. I led my daughter from the house while Mark backed slowly away to join us in the car. We sped away.

Kelly thanked us and thanked us for rescuing her from that hell, and conveyed a horrifying story of recent sordid abuse by the State of Tennessee that led to that moment. Sobbing hysterically, she reported being taken to Fort Campbell where they train and program the 101st Airborne. Next thing she knew, she was in the crack house and we were leading her into the car.

We knew we were all in grave danger until Mark shook the tails following us and drove us safely out of Nashville. Pausing to regroup and plan our next move, we all shared the knowing that we just survived the impossible again.

“So what do we do now?” we pondered as we shared a fast food dinner in the car.

“I have a friend,” I told Kelly, “who can keep you safe and hidden right now. She is streetwise and profoundly soulful. She’s been working for you behind the scenes for years, and loves you very much. Her house is never the same, and always has different people in need like you coming through. She has assured me that her doors are always open to you, and I know in my heart it’s the safest choice we can make right now.”

“Can we see each other there?” Kelly asked.

“Yes!”

“It feels right to me,” Kelly said, curling up in a fetal position in the backseat and sleeping until we arrived.

“Dana!” I greeted my beautiful friend.

“You’re taking me up on my offer?” she smiled. “Everything will be fine. I’ll take care of her like she’s my own daughter.”

“In light of your insight,” I hugged her, “I know you will.”

By the time Mark and I slipped away, Dana and Kelly were sitting lotus-style on the floor doing Yoga together like a couple of best friends. “This is a peaceful way to relax,” she was telling Kelly. “Soon you’ll be able to dream[13] again.”

Chapter 48
GLOBAL WARNING

“It is a new day, and people worldwide need to realize that the days of operating on a Need-to-Know basis are over,” our friend with the United Nations was saying. “Socially engineered narrow views are no longer an excuse for ignorance. Now that the truth is realized, wisdom demands action. People cannot bury their heads in the sand anymore.”

“They’ve buried their heads in the sands of an hour glass and time just ran out!” I agreed.

Our friend, whose name is most likely an alias anyway, is working toward positive change within the United Nations. I had sufficient cause to doubt there could be any good people within the CIA or politics, and learning that there was proved to be deeply encouraging. Now I had the privilege of witnessing positive change within areas of the UN corrupted by global elite hell-bent on mass genocide through AIDS, vaccinations[1], and immunizations[2]. Scientists working on this level learned the truth, expanded their Need-to-Know and took action. They won by making the necessary positive differences and those criminals at the top dictating their actions didn’t even know it.

“The good guys have already won and the bad guys don’t know it yet!” Mark said.

“When the people lead, leaders follow whether they realize it or not,” I concluded.

Mark and I were traveling on an international speaking circuit that positively provided us an expansive view of global perspectives. The problems with global elite's version of the New World Orders had been identified, and solutions were now being implemented. People of vast wealth were seeking new ways to invest their money free of the old school global elite who had been in power too long. They were determined to fund peace, not war; freedom, not slavery; education, not propaganda; truth, not secrets.

Mark and I fit in well with these wealthy folks despite our obvious financial differences. I always understood that Mark was fully capable of generating as much money as anyone, yet, like Kelly said, "he's too busy making a difference to make a buck." Personally, I knew nothing about spending money let alone investing it. Yet, we were sharing what we knew with these wealthy folks from all over the world who sought to invest in humanity's future rather than the global elite's history. After all, I did know Senator Byrd who held the purse strings on the most powerful country in the world. And he was selling US and all of humankind out to global controls by funding wars, genocide, and environmental destruction.

Scientists[3] with microscopic focus on internal mechanisms of our planet were alarmed by this destruction and were organizing. They needed to make their voices heard in time to sound the global warning. Glacierologists studying the earth's history frozen in the North and South Poles were watching it melt away before their eyes, and wanted to know why. They learned that Global Warming caused by burning hydrocarbon fuels is destroying our planet along with HAARP. Thirty million years of ecological balance has been disrupted! The melting of the glaciers is causing a world of change. As history melts, the future becomes clear. There will be no future unless people take action now. How could these Glacierologists make their voices heard when people seemingly didn't care to understand their scientific language?

As whistleblowers, neither Mark nor I could speak out on anything other than what we knew from experience despite the vast view we were gaining. Besides, my limited English did not include speaking fluent science, academia, computer speak, attorney, or fluent anything that had big words indigenous to specialized focus.

Wisdom naturally spans all language barriers through collective conscious spiritual evolution. In order to gain eyes to see and ears to hear from other walks of life beyond our own, spiritual evolution must begin within. After all, the sociopaths responsible for destroying our planet are vastly intelligent; yet lack the wisdom that comes with spiritual evolution through truth and power of love. Their source of power is secrets, hatred, war, and wealth from fossil fuels, chemicals and drugs. Now we know that oil consumption is primarily responsible for destroying our planet's ecosystem. If we don't wake up, wise up, and evolve, mother nature will take care of herself with weather that grows more violent by the minute. Acting on spiritual evolution's wisdom, we can all learn from each other and unite in purpose light years ahead of political and religious differences.

The more Mark and I traveled, the more I relied on telepathic communication to span language barriers. Children all over the world are naturally the easiest to reach because ego hasn't yet artificially separated them from reality. Society's conditioning and educational academic credits have not yet closed their ears and eyes. Religion's pious differences have not yet confused their pure soul wisdom and unconditional love. Everywhere we went, I focused on the children to learn from them their culture, priorities, and purpose. As I looked into the children's eyes, I saw a future bright with promise.

For over a decade I have noticed more and more children being born with love's wisdom in their soulful eyes. Is humankind genetically evolving to save the species? Is this an indication that the spiritual evolution has already commenced bigger than life? Could it be that evolution has already occurred in the timeless spiritual dimension to be realized on earth in these tumultuous times? The answer is within, and seeing this truth reflected in the children's eyes around the world is profound. Look within yourself to realize your own truth, and then look within the children's eyes to see theirs. Spiritual evolution already is, all we need to do is real-eyes it.

BALI, INDONESIA

“If we learn to expand our thought beyond what we think we know by understanding how mind control works, we could prevent history from repeating itself with World War III,” Mark was telling an auditorium of over a thousand attendees from around the world. The 50 foot tall giant screen behind him amplified his image so all could see the sincerity reflecting in his eyes. An elaborate million dollar sound system amplified his voice, so all could hear the magnitude of his message. Elaborate Indonesian woodcarvings and spectacular foliage decorated the resort where we were speaking, which amplified the soul. Bali proved to be the spiritual Mecca[4] it was reputed to be.

“World War II’s Nazi Germany was a warning from history,” Mark continued. “That warning was stifled under the 1947 National Security Act. Nazi and fascist scientists were being transported to the United States through Project Paperclip[5] since America wanted to learn the mind sciences that spelled the demise of Germany. There is no ‘beating around the Bush’ that the folks funding Hitler were building the foundational structure of his New World Order. Follow the money and at some point you’ll arrive at the Vatican. MK Ultra was a powerful combination of what the Catholics had long since learned about the effects of trauma on the human mind, Nazi mind control techniques, and advancing CIA technologies for refining psychological warfare.”

The foundational history Mark laid provided folks with a point of reference for understanding my part of the presentation, and how I came to recover. Between the two of us, the reality of mind control became irrefutably comprehensive.

“Many government secrets and personal reputations were staked on the belief that I could not be deprogrammed to remember that which I was supposed to forget. The flat thinking criminals in control of our country that were in control of my mind never counted on the strength of the human spirit. They never counted on the power of love. They never counted on what could happen when a good man like Mark Phillips got hold of their secret knowledge and used it to free a mind rather than control one. Just like we can’t think like they do, they can’t think like we do. For as intelligent as they are, they lack wisdom. And wisdom outthinks a criminal mind every time."

Our time in Bali was highly successful both in terms of sharing information on mind control and gaining an inside view into Indonesian culture. Unlike most Indonesians, Balinese are primarily Hindu and were living light years beyond the tumultuous violence brewing among their Muslim neighbors. While Mark and I experienced Bali's peace, nearby East Timor's tensions were being fueled by oil-greedy outside influences. Nevertheless, the smiling people of Bali remained soulfully moral and thoughtfully accommodating. Looking into the eyes of the children provided a view into another world. A world where people naturally lived spiritual values attuned to nature. I expanded my own vision to look into the eyes of the adults, and was astounded to see an even wiser version of the children's eyes; still joyful and free of egotistical pretense. No wonder Bali is a spiritual destination when it is so clear to see peace and freedom in action[6].

OSAKA, JAPAN

Mark had been recovering from extensive spinal surgery for less than 30 days when we spoke in Japan. In the United States, the prognosis for his survival was minimal and recovery nil. Surgery was unattainable for us anyway since we could not afford the necessary insurance, let alone the hundreds of thousands of dollars hospitalization required. Medical services in the US were based solely on money, and the medical system had collapsed and failed without compassion for the needy. We turned to Australia and found the most advanced medical care available. No amount of money can buy health and happiness anyway, and we were elated to learn Australia knew this, too. Mark's surgeon understood that the subconscious never sleeps, and was mindful that discussions during surgery only affirmed healing. Recovery was regarded as important as surgery, and it could easily take a month before Mark could walk out of the hospital.

Mark's attitude toward healing was positively impatient, though. "I don't have the time nor the financial resources to spend a month in the hospital," he told his surgeon.

"When you can walk, you can leave," he assured Mark, totally confident that that would take weeks. Three days after surgery, Mark rose from his bed and took his first steps. By the fifth day he dressed to leave, much to the astonishment of his surgeon. "I can't even write this up for the medical books," he exclaimed knowing he would jeopardize his medical license to document something so miraculous[7].

When Mark spoke in Japan, he was a walking, talking manifestation of the mind's healing power with love. People listened intently to what he said; fully realizing he knew what he was talking about!

For me, Japan was a celebration of Mark's healing and an extension of my own resolve to surround him with pure love. At first I believed my inability to connect with the Japanese people was due to my own focus on caring for Mark. Japanese segregated Mark and me from them the same way Americans had treated blacks in the '60s, seating us in the back of restaurants away from them. They exuded an accusing aloofness that I would have misunderstood entirely had it not been for the children. I looked into the children's eyes, and they showed me the way to their soul. Generations of war, control, and technological focus had taken its toll, and I looked beyond the pain to their peace. It was as though they vibrated at a different frequency. Once the children revealed it, I began connecting with adults as readily. I learned a powerful lesson. Looking into their eyes, I saw our future unless we wake up and evolve to stop the warring. Disdain for Americans was disdain for our warmongering ways, and the Japanese as a whole had learned that war is not an answer after their attack on Pearl Harbor in World War II and the resultant atomic bomb retaliation. The trauma of the atomic bomb attack[8] seemingly thrust them into a nation of thought communication that collectively is rising toward peaceful evolution.

BC, CANADA

Western Canada's soul-rejuvenating pristine beauty, vast wilderness land, and Native heritage tend to displace the intensity of social engineering aimed at the Canadian people. Native Canadians, like Native Americans, maintain their history of wisely discussing current events with an eye on the future. These Natives, commonly referred to as ‘Indians,’ do not recognize the imaginary line drawn in the sand politically separating Canada, the US, and Mexico anymore than they do the continental span of the Hopis and Tibetans. Traditionally uniting to strengthen their soulful wisdom, these profound natives sidestep television’s social engineering, Global education, and political propaganda to quietly and peaceful assume their respectful place in history’s future.

Likewise, small communities of people sparsely populate Canada’s wilderness whereby personal interaction provides hope for their increasing evolutionary stand against the New World Order. The 1997 CBC Broadcast of “The Sleep Room” reflected Canadian intolerance of US generated mind control, keeping citizens aware of the CIA’s MK Ultra atrocities perpetrated at their Allen Memorial Institute in Montreal since the 1950’s. Nevertheless, much of the urban population is still being blindsided by the systematic use of mass mind control’s technologies as is reflecting in the eyes of the children.

“Our children are being misled through Global Education,” one concerned parent was saying. Mark and I were often brought back into Canada to speak, and were concluding another presentation in Vancouver. “History is being rewritten and human values ignored while information is downloaded into our children’s brains through computers. What are the ramifications of education methods such as these?”

“Creativity is lost,” Mark began, “as is a capacity for critical analysis of the information. This results in a robotic compliance without question and an inability to productively apply what is learned. A New World Order mindset of compliance is being manufactured through your children.”

I added, “During the 1980’s, I worked under US Education Secretary Bill Bennett who was actively implementing Global Ed on a national and international scale. My personal association with Former Prime Minister Brian Mulrooney was due to his direct involvement in this Global Ed effort. While he and Bill Bennett both were dedicated to Catholic Jesuit mind control methods, Brian Mulrooney emphatically initiated the use of technological harmonic computerization in the classroom."

A young man asked, "Which is worse? Catholic Jesuit manipulation of religious values to instill controls on the children, or harmonic technological controls?"

"I am personally aware of former Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's manipulation of Canada's education system using Jesuit means," I answered. "This is not to say all Catholics are guilty of ill intent any more than are the educators who implement such means on the children. Personally, I believe that those who are not guilty of abusive mind control means will rise to stop those who are. Pierre Trudeau's Jesuit mind control influence in the school system, churches, and politics are widely recognized and abhorred, as are Brian Mulrooney's. The devastation Trudeau wreaked on Canada's children and society became further entrenched through the computerized harmonic technologies Brian Mulrooney imposed. Between the two forces, manipulation of your children's minds demands your awareness and immediate action to stop it."

"Good people don't think to look for criminal activity of this magnitude," Mark continued. "Therefore, it is up to each and every one of you to inform others in your community to raise awareness."

"Look into the children's eyes," I advised. "I have. A flicker of hope shines through their tears that someone will see their need. They not only reflect mind control abuses, they also reflect the kind of sexual abuse being deliberately perpetrated through the churches for the purpose of mind control. Child prostitution is skyrocketing in Canada. Why?"

An elderly man responded, "Understanding mass mind control methods gives us the edge we need to be effective in stopping the abuse of our children. Apparently we have been slow in waking up, and our children have paid the ultimate price. As a society, we have lost our way through superficial materialism, treating our children like possessions for trade.

Child prostitution and pedophilia have become so rampant that we can no longer close our eyes in light of the truth.”

Individuals within Canada frustrated with their government’s systematic cover-up of child abuse are taking positive action. Peaceful noncompliance with New World Order war/terror tactics and controls is becoming commonplace. People are raising awareness and their voices for the sake of their spiritual freedom, their children, and their future.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES

“Today we are donating computers to Manila’s school system that are free of Global Education tactics in order that the children learn truth that can be applied with wisdom.” This announcement was met with thunderous applause by the recipients, as well as by the wealthy seminar participants who had found yet another productive way to invest their money in humanity’s future free of the global elite. They knew that tax-deductible donations to major charities reached the greedy and not the needy, and that the best way to contribute was through caring. Caring to see the need and personally respond to it.

Manila was a poverty-stricken city that was rich in wisdom. The people had a soulful history that opened their eyes to the reality of today’s world. They clearly saw a future of hatred, enslavement, and control through the warmongering global elite, and were in the process of peaceful noncompliance while Mark and I were there in 1999. The people of Manila were predominantly Catholic having succumbed to charities out of necessity as most third world countries do. Yet local newspapers reported extensive pedophilia in the church, pointedly referring to it as child abuse and not homosexuality as diversion demanded. Rather than file lawsuits against the Catholic Church, they sidestepped it by building their own churches free of ‘thought control.’ While Mark and I were in Manila, the Pope was forced to address the issue with the noncompliant Philippine people calling for cessation of child abuse and thought control in the Catholic churches. They printed his statement, and built their own churches anyway with the money they were no longer sending to the Vatican.

Likewise, they sidestepped Global Ed. Due to their poverty, the average child did not grow up being conditioned by Sesame Street[9] or video games to robotically accept information being pumped into their brains at warp speed. Since Global Ed was designed to increase their learning capacity while decreasing their ability to critically analyze, the high tech process was not compatible with Manila's soulful children. They rejected the onslaught of information, which Mark cleverly likens to drinking from a fire hose, and unknowingly rejected the way history was deliberately rewritten in the process.

The wealthy seeking investments in humanity's future embraced the opportunity to meet the needs of the Philippine children themselves. The computers would allow these precious children to learn truth at their own pace while gaining computerization's communications that would link them to the rest of the world.

Everybody is on their own learning path, and mine feels extremely privileged. Universal justice, which is always naturally tipped to the good with love being the most powerful force in the universe, was providing me an expanded global view after blindly following orders under mind control. Through this extreme experience, universal justice reverberates as Mark and I volunteer our lives to participate in the worldwide evolutionary process. This donation of computers to the Philippine people exemplifies what can be accomplished when we care to see the need and respond ourselves.

RIMINI, ITALY

"Cathy and I have been fortunate to travel around the world several times speaking out on mind control," Mark was saying to the crowd gathered near Rimini, Italy while translators rapidly interpreted his words and cameras rolled. "It is encouraging to find the rest of the world more awake and aware than they are in the United States."

A young man stood to ask his question, which was interpreted. "Cardinal Law[10] is in Rome today to meet with the Pope regarding the rampant pedophilia in the Boston Archdiocese. Are Americans aware that mind control is involved?"

"After speaking out on the Boston[11] connection for over a decade, it is encouraging to see the first step being taken toward justice," I began. "However, the US media not only fails to address the issue of mind control, they are diverting people's attention away from the issue of pedophilia by calling it homosexuality. Many of the survivors of Catholic abuse and their supporters are aware that mind control is the underlying issue. The public is not."

Mark elaborated further. "Repressed memory of childhood sexual abuse usually begins to surface around age 30 when natural electro-chemical changes occur in the brain. The is a widely known and established fact. The fact that the Vatican placed a ten-year statute of limitations on reporting such abuse eliminates a vast number of their victims from joining the class action suit. Neither Cathy nor Kelly is eligible for compensation under this rule. How many others are being ignored?"

"Please," I added, "I encourage each and everyone of you to pose this question to the Vatican. Ask how many victims of Catholic abuse are being ignored in accordance with the Vatican Child Abuse Policy[12]. Feel free to specifically cite Kelly and me as examples[13]."

Many people in the audience made note while the young man said, "Please repeat that specific policy."

"Thank you for making note of this. The Vatican Child Abuse Policy is considered so secretive that many lives were lost attempting to bring this truth to light for the children's sake. The billions spent and lives lost covering up the recent Vatican Banking scandal are only secondary to The Vatican Child Abuse Policy. Please ask how many victims like my daughter and me are being deliberately ignored under this Vatican Child Abuse Policy."

Decades of Catholic related abuse in Italy left the people acutely aware of the atrocities emanating from the Vatican. They evolved above and beyond the abuse, proving that knowledge is truly a powerful defense against mind control. Their insight has yet to stop the Vatican from taxing them, yet it did serve to protect their children. Wise and aware, Italians proved to be highly evolved peaceful people rather than the Catholic mobsters I had been conditioned to expect. Looking into the children's wise eyes was a delight, and they assumed telepathic communication in keeping with the lifestyle they knew.

"We choose to not watch television in Italy," someone else was saying. "Our news we discuss. It is understood here that Bush does not run America. It is obvious he is managed and controlled, and that his father and Dick Cheney set the world stage while Karl Rove directs him[14]. Do Americans know this?"

"No," Mark and I answered together.

Mark elaborated first. "The whole country PTSDed after the 9-11 tragedy. As you all know, trauma leaves people more easily led. People in the United States have yet to learn about mind control, and therefore could not safeguard themselves from traumatic effects. In the event someone did think to look into mind control, the Freedom of Information Act was immediately revoked and 100,000 documents on MK Ultra reclassified. Of course, Cathy and I had already obtained copies during the few months they were declassified, which we make conveniently available on CD Rom[15] everywhere we go in an effort to raise awareness of mind control. Knowledge is our only defense against mind control, and Americans were rendered defenseless against the controls imposed on them after 9-11. Traumatic bloody images played over and over and over again on TV while orders were given to send money that has yet to reach the victims. Between images, people were bombarded with fitness commercials to keep them focused on a physical reaction. They could not think to think for themselves or gather strength of soul to ask pertinent questions. Questions like 'why is Bush hunting terrorists in oil reserves' when all he needs to do is look in his own backyard."

"Or the mirror," I added. "In 1995, TRANCE[16] had already detailed that Jr. was being trained for the Presidency by his father and Dick Cheney. A wealth of pertinent information could come to light if only Jr. were deprogrammed and could think to tell what he knows! Events Bush, Sr. and Cheney discussed at the Bohemian Grove in the mid 1980's are unfolding today with Jr. as acting President. Jr. is evidence of mind control's sliding scale, as well as a manifestation of his father's and Hitler's dream. Jr's brother Jeb Bush had assumed Governorship in Florida, where it was decided that Jr. had been 'selected' President. ABC news even inadvertently released pre-determined election results the day before elections! Americans knew Bush Jr. was placed for a reason, and that war was imminent. Bush, Sr. and Cheney were hunting oil, and 9-11 gave them license to do it."

"Fossil fuels are causing global warming," an elderly man said. "Bush and Cheney are destroying our planet. Do Americans realize that oil is no longer a necessary fuel source?"

"Yes," Mark answered. "Many have died attempting to make alternative fuel sources available. Bush-Cheney oil companies are powerful. Prior to 9-11, Americans were adamantly opposing their oil-drilling destruction of Alaska's pristine wilderness[17]. They were asking questions regarding Area 51's propulsion technologies[18]. Their voices were silenced after 9-11 while the media focused only on trauma rather than solutions."

This discussion was furthered during lunch, which is an integral part of Italian culture. Lunch breaks last two to three hours, with many businesses closing for the daily event. Soon thereafter, even more time is devoted to dinner. Italian cuisine is reputed to be the best in the world, yet it is not so much the food that is their focus of attention as it is the conversations shared with meals. Talking is animated with Italians gesturing much of the time with their hands rather than eating. Talk is intense as they walk to and from eating establishments, many of which are quaint outdoor cafés.

Mark and I determined that all the walking and gesturing Italians do must contribute to their fitness. The whole time we were in Italy, we did not see any obese people. Americans are growing heavier and heavier, which appears to be resultant from genetically engineered foods. Italian food feels as satisfying as it tastes, whereas food in America has seemingly lost its ability to satisfy. When one Italian explained that American food was prohibited in Italy, I quickly realized that genetic engineering of food would have to soon cease for economic reasons[19]. I affectionately refer to Italy as “Eatily.” It is during their sharing of meals that their lives are enriched with the truths that they share with each other--free of TV spin.

FIRST LIGHT, FIJI

A new day dawns first in Fiji! Sun shines there before it reaches anywhere else on the earth, and I certainly can understand why. I would shine there first, too! Fiji is living proof that all of humankind’s fondest hopes and ideals for a utopic shambala can be realized in light of love, peace, and wisdom.

Mark and I joined friends for a life enhancing ‘Blue Lagoon Cruise’ in Fiji at the turn of the millennium. This perfect time to experience the first light of the millennium was enhanced by timing bigger than life!

“Hey mate,” our Maori[20] forever-friend Kane Robinson began when we returned from our cruise, “does time feel distorted to you? I feel like we just left, yet were there forever.”

“I feel like we just ‘arrived’ at some kind of major spiritual level,” I observed as we disembarked the yacht.

“Life will never be the same,” Mark agreed, carrying his snorkeling gear. “It just got better.”

“All of my values have changed,” Kane commented. “And I already feel richer for it. It is as though everything we’ve ever worked for is already realized, and now we simply need to go through life’s motions to achieve it in real-time.”

“Kane, I don’t know specifically what the future holds,” Mark admitted. “Yet I am confident it is all in order, that you are forever an integral part of our lives, and that success is absolute for all of us.”

“Its like everything came together while we played!” I exclaimed. “I’ve experienced missing time before, and this wasn’t like that. I remember everything, and yet there is no structure of time in my mind as though we had some kind of profound spiritual experience beyond time.”

Life still felt surreal when we gathered for dinner at our resort on the ‘main island’. The Fijian people gathered to bid us farewell, soulfully singing a joyous song as they danced and clapped. “We will see you again,” they warmly said, hugging us as though we were one of them. They recognized our transformation, and knew that we were of like mind and spirit.

The Fijian people are peacefully happy, enjoying daily life in their utopic heaven. Nature’s beauty surrounding them is soul rejuvenating, from the sandy beaches and palms to the pristine shorelines and mountain peaks. Snorkeling revealed yet another dimension to their peaceful island paradise, and Mark and I forever cherish our shared experience in their crystal clear waters. We joined hands, floating as one in bliss and ecstasy while the spectacular Fijian waters teamed with life around us.

Fijian children reflect the wisdom of the ancients in their eyes while they play in joyous abandon. Thought communication is a given, and is so much a part of daily life that it is accepted norm. I sensed no language barriers with them or their elders. On various Fijian islands, there is no electricity or life’s complications that accompany such ‘conveniences.’ Therefore, there is an absence of social engineering, video game diversions, pollution, greed, and crime. Best of all, Fiji’s natural resources are within their people, nature’s simplistic beauty, and abundant fruits, vegetation, and kava kava.

There is no oil to exploit or war over. The Fijian people have gone to great lengths to keep the New World Order from absorbing their paradise in the future by creating an illusion of violent cannibalistic history. I learned this history while sitting among them on one remote island near the boarded up shack of a Catholic church. “The missionaries built this structure,” an old man was saying as he passed around the kava kava, “and told us it was our temple for worshipping their God. They promised us money and wealth. How can we be richer than this?” He gestured to the paradise around us. “Why do we need a wooden temple when our bodies are our temple? Why worship God over there when our god is within? We sent them home.”

Mark and I never really left Fiji. We took it with us in our beings, forever changed by the knowing that heaven on earth was a reality. It seemed illogical that all of humankind hadn’t already embraced this sharing kinship with all life the way nature intended. On the flight back to Australia, Mark and I felt no need to reduce our Fijian experience to words and blissfully shared the knowing between us.

OZ

What a trip it is to me that Australians call their home Oz, yet it truly is unlike the rest of the world. Australians are unpretentious true-to-soul people who exhibit no shame or false pride. War must really annoy them since such nonsense really isn’t their space, unless their precious children are threatened or abused in any way.

Mark and I call Australia our second home. We have spent much time there, and experienced many of its cities from Sydney to Adelaide to the Gold Coast. Everywhere we have traveled in Australia we have found the strongest people on the planet, soul-wise and otherwise. One minute they may be wrestling a crocodile, and the next cuddling a koala.

While Mark rehabilitated from his spinal surgery in Adelaide, we met with individuals within the Australian government concerned with US influence on their country and within their military bases. MK Ultra mind control was on the rise in the military bases they shared with the US, and survivors were emerging en masse seeking answers.

“US National Security is suppressing pertinent facts on mind control and, subsequently, recovery from it,” one official explained. “How can US controls encompass the globe?”

“Any country that has a peace treaty with the US is subject to the tenants of the 1947 National Security Act,” Mark replied.

“When mind control survivors mention what may have happened in Roswell in 1947, Nellis Air Force Base’s Area 51, or advanced propulsion technologies, US National Security is always invoked,” one high-ranking mental health official reported. “Why have so many of Area 51’s Top Secret military operations relocated to Australia[21]?”

“Over the past few years, an increasing number of Americans began snooping around Area 51 and asking questions,” Mark replied. “When they unearthed evidence of advanced propulsion, the coal and oil corporations running our country who suppress emergence of such technologies simply shifted locations. Obviously, your leadership sold out and allowed for relocation of Area 51 to Pine Gap[22].”

A wide-eyed individual whispered, “I thought aliens were behind this.”

Mark smiled. “If they are aliens, they obviously need our help to overcome oil corporation suppression of their environmentally friendly propulsion technologies.”

“Aliens or otherwise,” I excitedly added, “it is humankind’s soul wisdom that is required for taking necessary effective action against those flat-thinking war and oil mongers who hide behind the National Security Act. It is up to each and every one of us to raise awareness to stop them from destroying our fragile ecosystem, suppressing emerging technologies, and from using MK Ultra mind control methods to ensure their secrecy.”

Upon conclusion of our meeting, one government official declared, “Between the 1947 National Security Act, mind control, and HAARP, solutions such as you and concerned others[23] offer must be implemented immediately in order to stop the destruction of our planet and lives. I assure you, many of us join you in controlling our own destiny, and dissention from within the highest ranks of government has begun.”

Recently Mark and I were in Sydney visiting with our dear friends Kane and Justine. Neena Love, who had been on the Fijian cruise with Kane and us, came by to share her recent revelation. She had artistically written: The day I surrendered to nothing less than love even the sky could set no limits to where my heart could soar! Her precious children Amber and Soul (Love) were flourishing in light of their mother's deep insights and ambitions, and it proved rewarding for me to know this world would be a better place for them and all children everywhere by the time they grew up. We all knew that Australia was pivotal to realizing this world of change.

It appears that Australia is roughly 20 years behind the times of the US in terms of social engineering, technology, and governmental corruption. This means that Australians are capable of thinking freely with sufficient ability to prevent what has happened in the US from happening to them. Australians are learning from America's demise, and change has begun. They clearly see the effects of mass mind control, and collectively understand that this tool of the New World Order is an invisible menace that is unwelcome in their lives. The global elite has taken hold of Australians much like the proverbial handful of sand; the harder they squeeze, the less they hold. Neither Mark nor I have ever met an Australian who would willingly stash his cash in someone else's pocket like Americans did. Australians are not apt to forfeit their fun and independence to succumb to slavery at a time in their history when they are emerging into world markets and leadership in their own right. Australians are awake, aware, and sounding the alert across their land in order to maintain their precious way of life. They know that knowledge is our only defense against mind control, and that maintaining freedom of thought is essential to their future. Awareness is key. And awareness is rising down under.

EPILOGUE:
ASSUME Y*OUR* VICTORY!

The United States was originally designed as a "global melting pot" of various nationalities, cultures, and heritages where genetics naturally combined in peaceful union. Americans were born from the best of everyone, inspiring strength of spirit, character, and intellect. Through DARPA's and Sandia Lab's computerized social engineering, this innate strength and spiritual freedom was slowly politically redefined into materialistic comfort zones…

Until 9-11. Terror designed to shock Americans into compliance slowly began losing its initial hold while that original "global melting pot" strength of spirit rose from the ashes. Comfort zones devastated by terror and the ensuing "homeland" national security and Patriot Acts forced a sleeping populace to awaken. Most Americans now realize that corporately-controlled news and contrived polls do not represent their views, and they are re-emerging into their communities and/or utilizing the internet to communicate truth and inner-act with each other. They are asking questions and demanding answers, acutely aware that wisdom outthinks criminal minds and computerized artificial intelligence.

Appalled by war and environmental disasters, the people of the United States join with the rest of the world in putting aside differences long enough to stop this Global Elite's version of the so-called New World "Order". Global communications such as the Internet, humankind's unified purpose, and worldwide spiritual evolution makes planetary unity an inevitable natural reality. Yet globalization as it is being imposed on us through the New War Order and it's Patriot Acts is not our choice any more than are its self-appointed leaders. If it were up to US, our so-called leaders would be impeached; as in removed from office according to the definition of “impeach” before Bill Clinton redefined it. Never before in the history of the United States have so many people called for impeachment. National news does not give voice to this vast majority of Americans. Instead, people are being misrepresented in a deliberate effort to socially engineer the world into believing it wants environmental destruction, war, financial devastation, slavery, and mind control.

Revolution is not an answer. One man’s terrorist is another man’s freedom fighter, and violence of any kind can be perceptually defined either way. “Fighting for freedom” is akin to the term “military peacekeeping forces”. Violence is not necessary for humankind to realize and wisely claim the freedom, peace, and strength of spirit that already is innately within each of us.

Expanded thought is necessary for seeing beyond social engineering’s perceptual distortions, word-play conflicts, and confusion. Through MK Ultra mind control’s dark tunnel focus, I no longer could see that good people existed in this world. I lost hope until Mark helped me expand my vision in light of love and truth. Likewise, good people did not think to look for such inhumane abuse as mind control. People divided by what they know and don’t know become even more isolated by secrecy. Divided we fall. Now that truth has come to light, humankind’s vision becomes clear. The more we know, the more we see that mind control is the common thread weaving through society’s woes and global tensions. We are bound to be set free by realizing this truth.

It is within each one of us to seek the truth and act on what we know. The latest corporately contrived news and polls that divide are not going to tell us that we are one and have won. Another illusion of political difference is destined to be displayed in an effort to replace our leadership with more of the same unless we wise up and real-eyes that neither race, gender, religion, political party, name recognition, nor wealth represents true change. Change must come from within soul’s realm of unconditional love where our likenesses far outshine our differences. People all around the world want the same things: peace, love, health, and happiness. Through our shared likenesses we all stand to make the true difference in changing our leadership. When the people lead, leaders follow.

We have a choice. Either we spiritually evolve together, or our planet’s revolutions will spin us into violent destruction and Mother Nature will buck us all off this planet. Quietly reflect on the possibilities[1]. Expand your vision and find truth within yourself in order to understand others. Live your true in-sight in light of love. Through vigilance we can freely maintain positive, evolutionary change for the sake of our planet’s survival and history’s future, for the sake of our children, and the sake of humanity as a whole. You are now empowered to become a part of the soulution. In deed, it is a new day. Exert evolution NOW and peacefully ASSUME YOUR VICTORY!!

ABBREVIATIONS:

CIA, Central Intelligence Agency FBI, Federal Bureau of Investigation DIA, Defense Intelligence Agency DEA, Drug Enforcement Agency
NSA, National Security Agency
TBI, Tennessee Bureau of Investigation CID, Criminal Investigation Division CSIS, Canadian Special Intelligence Services NASA, National Aeronautical Space Administration DARPA, Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency HAARP, High Altitude Auroral Research Project MPD, Multiple Personality Disorder DID, Dissociative Identity Disorder ISS&D, International Society for the Study of Dissociation APA, American Psychiatric Association APA, American Psychological Association NLP, Neuro Linguistic Programming NAFTA, North American Free Trade Agreement CDC, Center for Disease Control BCCI, Bank of Credit and Commerce International JPL, Jet Propulsion Laboratory (aka Jack Parson’s Laboratory) NCIN, National Cult Intervention Network DCS, Department of Children’s Services DA, District Attorney
LA, Las Angeles (California)
WWCR, World Wide Christian Radio MOM, Militia of Montana
NCL, Norwegian Caribbean Lines CBC, Canadian Broadcast Corporation CNN, Cable News Network
GNN, Guerilla News Network
NCAP, National Coalition Against Pornography VIP, Valley Institute of Psychiatry VOICES, Victims of Incest Can Emerge Survivors S.W.A.T., Special Weapons and Tactics FCC, Federal Communications Commission SRAs, Survivors of Ritual Abuse POW, Prisoner of War
MIA, Missing in Action
D., Democrat
R., Republican
NWO, New World Order (oftentimes makes “D” and “R” obsolete)

ACCESS DENIED
For Reasons of National Security

From the authors of the cult classic TRANCE Formation of America. With their lives and liberty on the line, TRANCE was hurriedly condensed from courtroom testimony into a book form and privately published by the authors in September 1995.

ACCESS DENIED For Reasons of National Security is the rest of their true life's story, which required 16 years for the authors to survive and 3 years for them to write. This book is an amazing testament to the strength of the human spirit and one you will never forget for as long as your thoughts remain free.

While TRANCE has become known worldwide in many licensed translations as one of the most successful US government whistleblowers' books ever written, it was never intended for the public who had no reference for understanding mind control nor was it to be considered a book. Rather it is what it is, a true and to date uncontested document for the US Congressional Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence Oversight. TRANCE is Cathy O'Brien's documented testimony she provided to US courts, US Congress, and the United Nations Commission on Human Rights Abuses of her existence as a CIA MK-Ultra mind control project's slave.

ACCESS DENIED is a real book of answers, solutions and positive hope for all of u.s. and our allies around the world. This book was written for everyone and especially for the thousands who have read TRANCE and were left to imagine pertinent details that could not be included.

- How did Cathy recover from being tortured "out of her mind" until age 30 when intelligence insider Mark Phillips triggered and rescued her and her daughter Kelly away from their CIA operative handler?
- What are the documented details of how Mark & Cathy survived the state and federal and Congressional judicial gristmill aptly called the criminal justice system*?
- Last but not least, what are the facts as to how Mark & Cathy were able to survive long enough to globally expose the criminal acts of some of the most politically powerful people who are still in control of our planet to this very day?

ACCESS DENIED is a whistleblowers' living guide to success.

[1] Central Intelligence Agency and Defense Intelligence Agency.

[2] CIA's Mind Control Project.

[3] "Project Monarch" was reportedly one of over 125 long-term research genetic mind control sub-program of MK Ultra focused on multi-generational abuse base families, aside from being considered an urban myth since it has yet to be declassified or available through US Freedom of Information Act.

[4] D. West Virginia, President Pro Tempore of the Senate and head of Senate Appropriations for many years, Byrd has been in office longer than I've been alive.

[1] Histamine reaction can be severe, resulting in bubbling, bleeding skin, scars, and even death. www. goldbaum.net/balance/Whats_Histamine.html

[2] 1984 CBS, Inc.

[3] Bill Clinton also has held the position of Arkansas Attorney General.

[4] www.assumption.edu/webVAX/mena/Roberts7May96.html, "Double Crossed" Barry Seales' story.

[1] Post Traumatic Stress Disorder. PTSD is a basis for mind control and oftentimes is deliberately induced leaving a person highly suggestible and unable to think for themselves. Many Americans PTSDed after 9-11, as did citizens of Germany after the 1933 attack of their government's Reichstag.

[2] Harmonic technologies in mind control have now advanced to reach deep into the subconscious to control breathing, heartbeat, blinking, etc. whereby programming has replaced the cyanide pill to ensure spies die with their secrets.

[3] The term "multiple personality disorder" was misleading and was often confused with schizophrenia, whereby the more appropriate term "Dissociative Identity Disorder" was accepted by the mental health community.

[4] Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency.

[5] Charter's founder and chairman of the board resigned 3 years previous due to suppression of information and what he termed "the CIA's involvement" with his hospitals, re: www.psyfin.com/articles/charter.html.

[6] Post Traumatic Stress Disorder

[7] Chapman was later implicated in a sexual child abuse investigation scandal, Anchorage Times.

[8] www.centeroflight.com, Muskegon's resource center for vast numbers of local survivors of incest and/or Catholic abuse.

[9] March 16, 1997, the Muskegon Chronicle newspaper began a series detailing Muskegon as the pedophile capital of the US www.mlive.com.

[10] Dr. Colin Ross, Bluebird; Deliberate Creation of Multiple Personality by Psychiatrists, Manitou Communications 2002, available through www.radioliberty.com.

[11] Linda Hunt, Secret Agenda: The United States Government, Nazi Scientists, and Project Paperclip 1945-1990, New York, St. Martin's Press 1991.

[12] After 3 generations such traits may result in genetic encoding and autogenic behavior.

[13] Ford's Presidential Cabinet consisted of Dick Cheney as Secretary of State (now Vice President), George Bush, Sr. to head the CIA (United Nations, Vice President, President, his Jr. now acting President), Donald Rumsfeld as Secretary of Defense (now Secretary of Defense), and Jack Valenti as Press Secretary (now head of the Motion Picture Association).

[14] The Republican National Committee headed by VanderJagt put George Bush ,Sr. into the office of President.

[1] Father Burtner of Portland, Oregon.

[2] The Sleep Room, Canadian Broadcast Corporation 1997 TV broadcast.

[3] Marischen was implicated in the same child abuse investigation ring as Anchorage Police officer Jack Chapman, Anchorage Times.

[4] She appeared on America's Most Wanted TV show in 1989.

[5] Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is commonly referred to as Mormon. Wayne Cox also professes to be a Mormon, and Kelly and I were occult ritually abused within the Mormon church and programmed to participate in CIA cocaine ops that were utilizing Mormon Bishop's warehouses to store and package cocaine.

[6] Max Kitchens' position was directly under the head of US Customs at the time, William Von Raab.

[7] Eagle River/Chugiak is only ½ hour drive in the ice and snow from Anchorage.

[8] Carol Marshall, Chapter 15, Part 2, The Last Circle. www.lycaeum.org/books/book/last_circle/o.htm [9] George Romney's son, Mitt Romney, moved from Utah to become Governor of Massachusetts during the course of Cardinal Law's Catholic pedophile scandal. In 2004, Governor Mitt Romney's relationship with Bush Jr spawned speculation of his replacing Cheney as Bush's running mate in 2004 enroute to his planned 2008 bid for President.

[10] Mormon Bishop Glen Pace, in an effort to expose the wide spread systematic mind control proliferating throughout the LDS church, released an inner office memo exposing this deliberate crime 7-19-1990.

[11] B.K. Eakman, Educating for the New World Order, Portland, Oregon, Halcyon House, 1991.

[12] Bullet-proof Kevlar lined briefcase.

[13] "Louis Jolly West, the Master of Clockwork Orange Mind Control is Dead," New York Times, 1-8-1999 Jolly West was called in on such infamous mind control cases as Sirhan Sirhan, Oswald, Charlie Manson, and Timothy McVeigh.

[14] Years later, Hassan retracted this statement as ordered.

[15] Conspiracy Theory, 1997, www.conspiracytheory.warnerbrothers.com.

[1] "Cramer on 'Top Secret' Panel," The Huntsville Times, March 13, 1994; Cramer was promoted to US Congress and its Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence Oversight.

[2] TRANCE Formation of America, www.TRANCE-formation.com.

[3] Pp. 109, 124, 134, TRANCE, www.TRANCE-formation.com.

[4] Video by this title was reported to have been found at the JonBenet Ramsey household after her 1996 murder, and her autopsy proved stun gun prod marks on her 6 year old body, "Stun Gun Said Used in Ramsey Killing", December 20, 1997, Los Angeles Times.

[5] P. 109, TRANCE, www.TRANCE-formation.com.

[1] Our stay would last from 1990 to 1993.

[2] Over-active histamine often accompanies mind control trauma and dissociative disorders.

[3] Chapter 13, "Operation Shell Game," TRANCE, 1995.

[4] Chapter 12, "Operation Carrier Pigeon," TRANCE.

[5] Ibid.

[6] Ibid. p.150

[7] Harmonics drive lyrics deep into the subconscious, which is one reason why hearing a certain song will bring back memories of "falling in love" or other significant events that occurred at the time.

[8] "Dibble and the Devil," The Currier-Journal, Louisville, Kentucky, 6-18-90.

[9] Mark and I stayed so busy surviving the impossible all these years, that making a living financially has yet to be realized. Perspectives and priorities change under circumstances such as ours, while sex and food are still out of this world!

[1] Congressional Courier.

[2] Russell S. Bowen, The Immaculate Deception; The Bush Crime Family Exposed.

[3] Chapter 12, "Operation Carrier Pigeon," chapter 13, "Operation Shell Game," TRANCE.

[4] By 2002, US Customs was replaced by "Immigrations and Customs Enforcement Bureau of the Department of Homeland Security."

[5] Drug Enforcement Agency.

[6] "NAFTA is now openly referred to as the 'North American Drug Agreement' by US Customs…", William Von Raab, http://db.uwaterloo.ca/~alopez-o/politics/narcosys.html.

[7] Press Secretary under former President Ford, now head of the Motion Picture Association of America. Michael Powell, son of Colin Powell, is currently Chairman of the Federal Communications Commission [1] Jeff Merritt, TRANCE Formation of America, p.40.

[2] Country music entertainer, p. 180, TRANCE.

[3] P. 127, TRANCE.

[4] Pp.169, 170, 171, TRANCE, www.radioliberty.com, Dr. Stan Monteith.

[5] Chapter 20, "New World Order of the Rose," TRANCE.

[6] Chapter 27, "Hotel California," TRANCE. www.TRANCE-formation.com.

[7] Chapter 28, "'Free Trade' of Drugs and Slaves at the Juarez Border," TRANCE. www.TRANCE-formation.com.

[8] FBI Special Agent Brad Garrett was transferred to the Wash. DC bureau where he was lead investigator in the death of White House deputy counsel Vince Foster, the murder of White House intern Mary Caitrin Mahoney, key federal prosecution witness in the murder of Aimal Kasi at CIA Headquarters, and lead investigator in the Chandra Levy case. P. 229, TRANCE. www.TRANCE-formation.com.

[9] As US Attorney General and head of the Justice Department, Dick Thornburgh decided which cases would be investigated or covered-up by all Federal Agencies including the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Drug Enforcement Agency, and Customs. Thornburgh was Governor of Pennsylvania during the Three Mile Island nuclear disaster and subsequent cover-up, and was a mind controller and sexual abuser of mine as detailed throughout TRANCE.

[10] Garrett had been flown in from Washington DC, although he purported to be with the Nashville office.

[1] Chapter 24, "A-Hunting We Will Go," TRANCE.

[2] Chapter 9, "Ronald Reagan's American Dream, a Pandora's Box of Nightmares," chapter 10, "'Commander' Dick Cheney and Reagan's 'Hands On Mind Control Demonstrations'," TRANCE, 1995.

[3] Ohio Congressman Jim Traficant, now serving an eight-year sentence in a Pennsylvania Federal Penitentiary, told the American public he supported their right to bear arms while voting against it, etc. Chapter 7, "Charm School," TRANCE, 1995.

[4] Chapter 14, "Clinton Coke Lines," TRANCE, 1995.

[5] D. Indiana, Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, Subcommittee on Intelligence Policy and National Security, Subcommittee on Terrorism & Homeland Security, son-in-law Sen. J. Bennett Johnston.

[6] Former Governor of Pennsylvania appointed to head Homeland Security.

[7] "Silence Equals Death," TRANCE, www.TRANCE-formation.com.

[8] pp. 174-82, Randy Riese, Nashville Babylon; p. 180 TRANCE.

[9] Any relation to Keith Whitley?

[1] Wayne Cox, too, remains free for so-called "Reasons of National Security" despite vast evidence against him.

[2] Thornburgh was Governor of Pennsylvania during the Three Mile Island nuclear disaster and subsequent cover-up.

[3] P. 102, TRANCE.

[4] 10-26-90, Luton Mental Health Center.

[5] Thornburgh was forced to resign from his position as Attorney General in August of 1991 amidst a cocaine scandal in his DC office.

[6] From Tim Roemer's Evansville, Indiana district.

[7] bullet-proof Kevlar lined briefcase.

[1] Ironically within days of Kelly's admittance, Cumberland House changed their logo to depict a child with Monarch butterfly wings, signifying that they now housed MK Ultra Project Monarch mind controlled children. The sign remains there to date.

[2] Senator Al Gore becameVice President under Bill Clinton, and Presidential hopeful thereafter.

[3] Multiple Personality Disorder, or as it is now termed, Dissociate Identity Disorder.

[4] Pp. 134-5, TRANCE. p.83 Randy Reise, Nashville Babylon.

[5] Loretta Lynn's maiden name, Coal Miner's Daughter, Warner Books, 75 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, NY 10019, 1975.

[6] Linda Blood, The New Satansists, Warner Books 1994.

[7] "The McMartin Nightmare", cover story 2-5-90, People Magazine.

[8] Later AOL-Time-Warner.

[1] Bay of Pigs Invasion, 1961.

[2] Bush, Jr. overrode this Constitutional law in 2001 with a Presidential Executive Order after 9-11 making it "legal" for the CIA to assassinate any foreign leaders out of step with Poppy Bush's New World Order.

[3] D. Tennessee, on the Senate Appropriations Committee under Byrd.

[4] Those inside the beltway of DC consider Sasser a 'rubber stamp'.

[5] President Bush, Sr.

[6] R. North Carolina Senior Senator Jesse Helms, whose compassion strengthened me over the years.

[7] In a later conversation, Kelly explained that she had been convinced I would not be tortured if she would take it instead. I had been instructed that Kelly would not be tortured if I would take it. Neither of us succeeded in protecting the other, yet it was a significant revelation to us both to learn the truth.

[1] Their mother's name was Valerie Vasquez.

[2] A manifest from the ferry to Beaver Island showed my father and John Ramsey, JonBenet's father, to be on the same boat to this obscure mind control programming camp.

[3] Previous documentation of the vaginal mutilation carving turned into US Customs had recently resulted in North Little Rock, Arkansas' detective Rakoin and corner Nowyski contacting us regarding Cox's known involvement in local railroad track murders and a female body vaginally carved according to Houston's m.o.

[4] I was also monitored so I wouldn't say 'Wizard of Oz' or 'President,' or speak of the past despite my knowing Kelly had to learn of her past from the inside out rather than through outside input in order to heal.

[5] This education program was designed after the one imposed on Hitler's Youth. Learn more at www.radioliberty.com.

[6] Chapter 21, "Global Education 2000," TRANCE. Bennett also held positions as US Drug Czar, professed Jesuit, Bohemian "Grover," Home schooling authority, and MK Ultra mind control programmer.

[7] Pp. 179-81, TRANCE. Lamar Alexander is also a former Education Secretary, and has been a Presidential Candidate.

[8] Pp. 174-82, Randy Reise Nashville Babylon.

[9] Pp. 134-5, TRANCE.

[10] www.deliberatedumbingdown.com. Charlotte Iserbyt.

[1] J. Allen Boone, Kinship With All Life, republished in 1976 by Harper-Collins Publishing, People who have been abused oftentimes connect strongly with animals, and excel in careers centered around them. Carol Gurney, The Language of Animals; 7 Steps to Communicating with Animals, Bantam-Bell Publishing, a division of Random House, 1540 Broadway, NY, NY 10036, 2001.

[2] Kelly maintains that being separated from her family by the state was most traumatic to her.

[3] I later learned that the pay-off money was federal and not from my father.

[1] Recent statistics showed 1 in 5 Afghanis, after generations of brutal warring in Afghanistan, suffers from PTSD dissociation, which is considered to be the prime basis for mind control.

[2] Carol Gurney, The Language of Animals; 7 Steps to Communicating with Animals, (Bantam-Dell Publishing division of Random House, Inc. 1540 Broadway, New York, NY 10036) www.animalcommunicator.net.

[1] John Grinder and Richard Bandler, Trance-formations: Neuro-Linguistic Programming and the Structure of Hypnosis.

[2] The Invisible Menace: What You Don't Know IS Hurting You, by Kelly, published in magazines and newspapers worldwide in 1996.

[3] Thought communication is honest by nature, conveying a reality rather than a conglomeration of words.

[4] P. 992, The Almanac of American Politics 1992.

[5] Traficant was silenced during his 2002 criminal trial, resulting in his conviction and 8 year prison term.

[6] Fort Campbell, where 101st Airborne are trained.

[7] Numerous indirect threats to our lives by Joe Rodgers, delivered by Metro Police, were confirmed when Mark and I attempted to address the issue with him at his Nashville office.

[8] The CIA often uses fake business fronts for their operations, toy manufacturers and office supply stores being among the most popular.

[9] Australian Psychiatrist Dr. Nurcum.

[10] A newly formed child advocacy group for children tangled in the Juvenile Court system that had taken on Kelly's cause.

[11] Chapter 8, "The CIA's War on Drugs; Eliminating the Competition;" chapter 12, "Operation Carrier Pigeon;" chapter 13, "Operation Shell Game," TRANCE.

[12] P. 152, TRANCE.

[13] Caribbean beacon system established for CIA drug ops.

[14] Bush's son, Jeb, is currently Governor of Florida (despite hailing from Texas), during which time the so-called 2000 Presidential elections were "recounted" and Bush Jr. was put into the office of President.

[15] Drug Enforcement Agency

[1] A term describing Mark's spook/spy friends.

[2] Loretta Lynn's son and Hurricane Mills home were located in the same district in which we resided.

[3] "Lynn gets probation in cocaine sale, 3-time felon's turning point'" March 27, 1992, Nashville, Tennessean.

[4] P.125 TRANCE.

[5] Chapter 8, "CIA's War on Drugs Operation, Eliminating the Competition," TRANCE.

[6] Pp.154, 156 TRANCE.

[7] The Carefully Crafted Hoax, self published booklet Box 30165 Lincoln, Nebraska 68503.

[8] Paul Bonacci.

[9] Houston displayed an honorary "key" to this infamous Catholic children's home in Nebraska on his den wall since he frequented the place so often.

[10] "Is George Bush the World's Leading Child Molester?" November 1991, Inside News, PO Box 311, Maleny, Queensland 4552 Australia; Bush was not allowed to debark Air Force One on a trip to Australia due to extreme protests regarding this issue.

[11] People Weekly, February 5, 1990.

[12] April 29, 1992, L.A. California riots, police and government corruption reported to be cause in riots that inspired the brutalized Rodney King's infamous plea "Can't we all just get along?"

[13] 1988 Paramount Pictures.

[14] Federal Communications Commission.

[1] Harry V. Martin, "Federal Corruption INSLAW, Napa Sentinel, 1991, www.sonic.net/sentinel/gvcon7.html.

[2] www.lastcircle.com, Carol Marshall, The Last Circle, available through. www.tomdavisbooks.com/ebooks/lastcircle.

[3] "Was writer the victim of a DC conspiracy?" August 14, 1991, The Boston Globe.

[4] Chapter 13 "Operation Shell Game," TRANCE.

[5] The Bank of Credit and Commerce International that Houston dealt with.

[6] Neither offered any support or assistance.

[7] Linda Blood, The New Satanists, 1994 Warner Books.

[8] "Attorney General to quit in summer," The Tennessean, June 5, 1991 note: included on his "potential successor list were John Ashcroft, Ken Starr, and his Deputy Attorney General William Barr.

[1] Dr. Anthony Casolaro, a physician in the Washington, DC suburbs.

[2] "See no evil, Why are the media ignoring the strange death of Danny Casolaro?" The Boston Phoenix, September 6, 1991.

[3] Harry A. Martin, "Federal Corruption INSLAW, Napa Sentinel, 1991, www.sonic.net/sentinel/gvcon7.html.

[4] www.bushlibrary.tamu.edu/papers/1991/91080900.

[5] "Papergate? Dick Thornburgh's 258 mystery boxes", Atlanta Journal-Constitution, December 19, 1993.

[6] Thornburgh went on to become UnderSecretary General for the UN '92-93, and Chairman of Space Technology and Science Institute, www.ssti.org/board.htm.

[7] William Barr, www.fas.org/irp/commission/testbarr.htm.

[8] Barbara Trent, The Panama Deception, 1993 Academy Award Best Documentary, the First Academy Award for a documentary film. www.empowermentproject.org.

[9] Special Weapons And Tactics Police Force.

[10] Dead On Arrival (to hospital)

[1] The Child Advocacy Organization that was overseeing Kelly's case which Debbie UpChurch.

[2] The 5th Amendment of the US Constitution stipulates that a person could remain silent in court on the grounds that answering questions could be incriminating.

[1] National Security Agency

[2] Chapter 24, "A Hunting We Will Go," TRANCE.

[3] "Freeing the mentally ill was a terrible mistake," The Huntsville Times, July 22, 1997.

[4] The 1998 book by Peter and Rochelle Schweizer, Disney, The Mouse Betrayed; Greed, Corruption, and Children at Risk, Regnery Publishing, Inc, One Massachusetts Avenue, NW, Wash.DC 20001 was considered highly controversial and resulted in the murder of the author. Bratcher was speaking out nearly a decade before it's release!

[5]"Of Mice and Manassas", SPY magazine, October 1994.

[6] The military even keeps their own hotel there.

[7] Chapter 6, "United States Military & NASA Mind-Control Training", TRANCE.

[8] CIA training center in Virginia.

[9] Wear antivirus firewalls if/when seeking further information online regarding DARPA!

[1] New York Times, CIA's infiltration of "white witchcraft" cults throughout North America introduced blood trauma into their rituals expanding into Satanism.

[2] www.militiaofmontana.com.

[3] Chapter 18, "In the Mean Time," TRANCE.

[4] www.radioliberty.com.

[5] Chapter 23, "Whirled Vision," TRANCE.

[6] Chapter 17, "About Faces," TRANCE.

[7] Secret Service testimony verifies details.

[8] L. Frank Baum, The Wizard of Oz.

[9] Chapter 13, “Operation Shell Game,” TRANCE, p.145.

[1] Martha Child’s hand was the first out taking the cash payoff that Bob Anderson had doled out claiming it was from my father.

[2] “Judge used cocaine jury prospect says,” The Tennessean, 6-29-94. Judge Brothers was repeatedly caught up in cocaine scandals and money laundering. “Nebel asks federal judge to look into prosecutors,” The Tennessean, 3-5-94. “No action likely in Brothers allegation,” The Tennessean, 6-30-94.

[3] Dr. Colin Ross, Bluebird, www.rossinst.com

[4] CBC’ The Sleep Room.

[5] Oprah claimed that, while she was censored by the network from broadcasting our case, she would remain dedicated to making a positive difference for abused children.

[6] Chapter 12, “Operation Carrier Pigeon,” and Chapter 13, “Operation Shell Game,” TRANCE.

[7] “Noriega Guilty By Saturation, for jury, witnesses credible,” USA Today, April 10, 1992. “Noriega Goes on the Defensive, calls his conviction political,” USA Today, July 13, 1992, “Noriega Receives 40 Years,” Washington Post, July 11, 1992.

[1] Experience proves that mail disruption is not the fault of USPS Postal employees who oftentimes voice complaint over unwarranted government intervention in their reputable business.

[2] “Lynn gets probation in cocaine sale, 3-time felon’s ‘turning point’,” The Tennessean, March 27, 1992.

[3] Ibid.

[4] http://www.soaw.org and www.personal.umich.edu/~lormand/poli/soa/panama.htm [5] Chapter 14, “Clinton Coke Lines,” TRANCE.

[6] North American Free Trade Agreement, Chapter 16, “Operation Greenbacks for Wetbacks,” TRANCE.

[7] www.nathanielblumberg.com/neil.htm

[8] Chapter 24, “A Hunting We Will Go,” TRANCE.

[9] Bush often used the voice of Fred Rogers of the popular children’s TV show “Mr. Roger’s Neighborhood” to gain the confidence of children. Chapter 15, “No More Beating Around the Bush,” TRANCE.

[1] Shelter for the homeless, among other public services.

[1] Chapter 25, “Bush Baby,” TRANCE.

[2] Norwegian Caribbean Lines cruise ship.

[3] Chapter 23, “Whirled Vision,” TRANCE.

[4] Linda Blood, The New Satanists, Warner Books 1994.

[5] Canadian Secret Intelligence Service, and Cult Watch Australia were among them.

[6] Ross Perot, Presidential Candidate in 1992 until his family’s life was reportedly threatened.

[7] www.outpost-of-freedom.com

[1] Redbook, February 1993.

[2] Mark learned from his former associates that Perot is in violation of the US Constitution by having his own standing army of Special Forces types sitting in Mexico.

[3] Chapter 28, “’Free Trade’ of Drugs and Slaves at the Juarez Border, TRANCE.

[1] Chapter 26, “New World Orders,” TRANCE.

[2] Aquino v. Stone, Cite we 768 F.Supp. 529 (E.D.Va. 1991).

[3] Bohemian Grove, www.TRANCE-formation.com

[4] Chapter 14, “Clinton Coke Lines,” TRANCE.

[5] Hillary often campaigned at Gay and Lesbian rallies, marched in parades, “Gay Celebration Week” was declared as part of Global Education, etc.

[6] P.154, 155 TRANCE.

[7] By my experience, Bush’s heroin ops out of Afghanistan were heaviest.

[8] Investigator Gary Caradori and his son lost their lives July 11, 1990 when this same route was not sidestepped by the Nebraska Leadership Conference.

[9] Vanderbilt’s abusive, intrusive technology adversely resulted in brain stem damage that continues to date.

[10] January 25, 1993, “Stahlman Building blaze ‘suspicious’,” The Tennessean.

[1] Chapter 23, “Whirled Vision,” TRANCE.

[2] Throughout the years, Marin County continuously surfaces in the news with such cases as an infamous. murder of a young child, www.pollyklaas.org, and as the hometown of Taliban ‘recruit’ John Walker. Lindh who became a controversial prisoner of the US war on Afghanistan.

[3] “Anti-Pedophile Sought in Kidnapping,” The San Francisco Chronicle, February 12, 1993.

“Tennis Pro Arrested for Fleeing with Child,” The San Francisco Chronicle, June 8, 1993.

“Daycare Foe Faces Kidnap Charges, “The San Francisco Chronicle, August 13, 1993.

[4] It is rare, though not uncommon that spooks high up in Intelligence have more than one function, the most common being (Federal Bureau of Investigation) FBI/CIA. This particular spook had Identification for Central Intelligence Agency, Defense Intelligence Agency, and National Security Agency.

[5] William F. Jasper, Global Tyranny Step by Step, 1992. Western Islands, PO Box 8040, Appleton, Wisconsin, 54913.

[1] “Anti-Pedophile Sought in Kidnapping”, The San Francisco Chronicle, February 12, 1993.

[2] A contract to kill.

[3] Gordon Thomas, Journey Into Madness, the true story of secret CIA mind control and medical abuse, 1989 Bantam Books, ISBN# 0553-28413-4.

[4] 1992, www.rollingston.com., re: Sinaid O'Connor.

[5] Muskegon Catholic Central is where I attended high school.

[6] Defense Intelligence Agency’s military intelligence and Special Forces.

[7] Chapter 9, “Ronald Reagan’s American Dream: A Pandora’s Box of Nightmares,” TRANCE. I had been trained by the CIA to analyze handwriting, which is a science as accurate as the graphologist. In my case, having learned while under mind control with a photographic memory, my handwriting analysis skills were still considered to be precise enough to be used as evidence in court.

[8] Multiple Personality Disorder, the outdated term for Dissociative Identity Disordered.

[1] ‘Mikey’ is a commonly used demeaning nickname for Michael Aquino.

[2] Post Traumatic Stress Disorder.

[3] Chapter 22, “My Contra-bution,” TRANCE.

[4] The CIA uses expert handwriting analysis to determine whom to hire, whom to trust, whom to fire, etc., as do other agencies and US courtrooms.

Handwriting analysis has been refined to an exact science.

[5] http://news.excite.com/news/ap/011105/19/nicaragua-election.

[6] Pp.183, 184 TRANCE.

[7] Pp.184, 185 TRANCE.

[8] I was still experiencing that 'Rip Van Winkle' time warp feeling since I was still catching up on the real world beyond what I'd been programmed to perceive.

[9] "What US Drug Company Produced Heroin and LSD?" USA Today, June 5, 1991, p.8A.

[10] Chapter 31, "The King and Eye," TRANCE. I understood this to be the definition of 'remote viewing'.

[11] Chapter 10, "'Commander' Dick Cheney and Reagan's Hands On Mind Control Demonstrations," TRANCE.

[1] Since many institutionalized children reportedly responded to sugar with heightened energy, sugar had been replaced with Aspartame. Aspartame was being reconsidered by Charter hospitals, however, since the lethargic, apathetical response it created was proven to have an adverse effect on health, mental health, and American society as a whole. Aspartame was the only drug I personally suffered withdrawals from after mind control, as it was deliberately used in copious quantities to incite compliance. Aspartame was manufactured when Donald Rumsfeld was CEO of Searle, and approved despite vast adverse proof during Rumsfeld's tenure on Reagan's transition team. www.newswithviews.com, www.pharmcentral.com, http://alkalizeforhealth.net/Lsweetdebate7.htm.

[2]High Altitude Auroral Research Project. Holes in Heaven video by Paula Randol-Smith, www.haarp.com;Angels Don't Play this HAARP by Dr. Nick Begich and Jeane Manning, Earthpulse Press, 1995.

[3] May, 1992.

[4] "The United States, How the West was Stunned", The World's Most Dangerous Places, by Robert Young Pelton, Harper Collins 1998.

[5] Ibid, "Drugs, War's Bastard Son".

[6] Educating for the New World Order, B.K.Eakman.

[7] Infamous Rodney King quote from the LA Riots.

[8] Were 'Dividians' chosen to 'Divide' the United States allegiances subliminally as well as overtly, or is the name 'coincidence?' Were "Dividians' divided from Waco since George Bush, Jr. 'coincidentally' resides there? Or because Waco houses a Top Secret Delta Force mind control training camp?

[9] Google search on Wesley Clark leads to numerous accounts, including www.radio.weblogs.com [10] www.klang.com

[11] A Place Called Waco, A Survivor's Story by David Thibodeau, Public Affairs Publishing, 1999. Thibodeau lists the names of 21 children, while Carl Klang refers to "17 Little Children," while other sources refer to 23 children including 2 unborn fetuses. Numbers vary according to perceptual definition of a child. Regardless of the number, innocent children were killed.

[12] "Tennis Pro Arrested for Fleeing with Child," The San Francisco Chronicle, June 8, 1993.

[13] "Petaluma Father Not Alone, Fear of Satanism Across the Nation," The San Francisco Chronicle, June 12, 1993.

[14] LaToya Jackson, Growing Up in the Jackson Family, Century Publishing, 1992.

[15] Seventeen Little Children by Carl Klang, 1993. www.klang.com.

[1] Huntsville, Alabama is often referred to as 'NASA City USA' and 'Nazi City USA' due to Werner VonBraun's NASA Space and Rocket Center influence.

[2] Pedophiles always find cause to be around children, working boys and girls clubs, parading themselves as clowns. Many children report abuse by clowns.

[1] International Society for the Study of Dissociation

[2] All of our pets had keen sense, and none of them liked Sue.

[3] A victim of CIA/Jesuit MK Ultra mind control who worked under Governor Bill Richardson.

[4] P. 126, TRANCE.

[5] www.nathanielblumberg.com/neil.htm.

[6] P. 198, TRANCE.

[1] http://home.hiwaay.net/~becraft We the People Foundation for Constitutional Education, Truth-in-Taxation Hearing 2-27 & 28-02 www.givemeliberty.org

[2] Former Huntsville District Attorney Bud Cramer, who already actively covered up our case resulting in the 1991 threat to our lives, was now a US

Congressman on the Intelligence Oversight committee. “Cramer on ‘top secret’ panel”, The Huntsville Times, March 13, 1994.

[3] This was prior to the 1996 Telecommunications Act deregulating radio stations allowing for the Government controlled Clear Channel to monopolize the airwaves.

[1] www.assumption.edu/webVAX/mena/Roberts7May96.html, “Double Crossed” Barry Seale’s story

[2] Obstruction of Justice, the Mena Connection, Integrity Films.

[3] Modus operandi, or mode of operation.

[4] P. 105, TRANCE.

[5] The Mena Cover-up; Drugs, Deception, and the Making of a President; The Clinton Chronicles; The Death of Vince Foster, Citizens for Honest Government films.

[6] www.klang.com

[7] Dr. Bennett Braun of the ISS&D was reputed for his work with children until he became a casualty of the cover-up, while Dr. Richard Kluft and Dr. Colin Ross were considered the best in the country for adults. Since Kelly was a minor, Braun appeared best until legal difficulties engulfed him.

[8] Nicholas Evans, The Horse Whisperer, 1996 Dell Books, 1998 movie.

[9] http://www.montyroberts.com/mrilc. Monty Roberts, The Man Who Listens to Horses, 1996, Tutor Publishing.

[10] www.taoofequus.com, and www.americanhorsetrainersgroup.com use and teach this John Lyons’ method.

[11] A decade later, President Bush Jr. echoed his father in noncompliance by rejecting ecological sustainability www.observer.guardian.co.uk/worldsummit2002

[12] Robert Ludlum, The Bourne Identity, Bantam Books.

[13] L. Fletcher Prouty, The Secret Team; the CIA and its Allies in Control of the United States and the World, Second Institute for Historical Review Printing, 1992.

[14] United States Air Force Colonel, retired.

[15] Pp. 142-3, TRANCE.

[16] Fletcher Prouty was depicted as “Mr. X” in the 1991 film JFK.

[17] The Collected Works of Col. L. Fletcher Prouty CD Rom, available through www.prouty.org/cdrom.html.

[18] A popular quote from the Wizard of Oz befitting of DC's illusion.

[19] CIA, America's Secret Warriors, Discovery Channel, www.discovery.com and www.levinproductions [20] Linda Kohanov, "The Tao of Equus; a woman's journey of healing and transformation through the way of the horse," New World Library 2001. www.taoofequus.com [1]"A-queen-oh" is the proper Italian pronunciation, tho most are familiar with his attempted diversion from his Jesuit affiliation/agenda by pronouncing it "A-keen-o".

[2] When faced with any threatening situation, Mark smiles knowing full well that the threat will soon be neutralized.

[1] David Thibodeau, A Place Called Waco, A Survivor's Story, Public Affairs Publishing, 1999.

[2] http://www.klang.com.

[3] Randy Weaver's Ruby Ridge Idaho mountain home was stormed by Federal Agents resulting in the murder of his wife Vicki and son Sam in 1992.

[4] www.rollingthunder1.com.

[5] Prisoners of War, Missing in Action.

[6] Linda Blood, The New Satanists, Warner Books 1994.

[7] www.freeamerican.com

[8] www.nexusmagazine.com

[9] Lakota genetic heritage.

[10] Chapter 2, "The Rite to Remain Silent," TRANCE.

[11] Family Vacation, National Lampoon, 1983.

[12] www.consciousevolution.com.

[13] His other trailer was private.

[1] Neighborhood Watch is an organized nationwide action by citizens to protect themselves and their neighbors since they could no longer rely on law enforcement who protect a failed justice system rather than them.

[2] Chapter 19, "E.T. Phone Rome," TRANCE.

[3] State of Alabama Resolution HJR 353.

[4] Many names were assigned to this Federal control of schools in an effort to dodge protests. Names include 'America 2000,' 'Outcome Based Education,' 'Goals 2000,' and 'Global Education.'

[5] Chapter 21, "Global Education 2000," TRANCE.

[6] The forces in Washington, DC would soon launch a monetary affront that would force Alabama to accept Global Ed, overriding Constitutional state's rights as they so often do now.

[7] TRANCE.

[8] www.nexusmagazine.com

[9] http://mikenew.com Daniel New, Michael New: Mercenary or American Soldier, American Sovereignty Action Project publisher.

[10] Chapter 20, "New World Order of the Rose," TRANCE.

[11] Chapter 7, "Charm School," TRANCE.

[12] Ibid.

[13] Pennsylvania Senator on the Judiciary Committee and Senate Subcommittee on Anti-Terrorism whose influence began diminishing after Trochman's speech in '95.

[14] The Pennsylvania Governor, now head of Homeland Security since 9-11.

[15] Now available though our friend and Canadian Distributor Wes Mann at www.preferrednetwork.com

[16] A wonderful lady in Alaska loaned us enough money to reprint.

[1] James Redfield, The Celestine Prophecy; an adventure, Time Warner 1993.

[2] J. Allen Boone, Kinship With All Life.

[3] "Coincidentally" years later, Mark and I were privileged to attend one such ceremony in her name, and the native American (Hopi) leading it called on "the Great Coordinator of Coincidence" to clearly lead the way!

[4] After being abused by religion, Kelly refers to a supreme being as "love energy" rather than a religious name.

[5] www.spiritualhorizons.net

[6] www.KLAV1230.am.com

[7] www.1997/gen/resources/players/starr/lewinsky.com

[8] www.TRANCE-formation.com

[9] www.mexconnect.com/mex_history/jtuck/jtsalinas.htm

[10] Chapter 16, "Operation Greenback for Wetbacks," TRANCE.

[11] This is not to say all "vote monitors" were aware of their purpose beyond a Need-to-Know. http://news.excite.com/news/ap/011105/19/nicaragua-election

[12] Ibid.

[13] I knew in 1986 that Bush, Jr. was being groomed for the Presidency while at the CIA MK Ultra mind control training camp on Mount Shasta. When he assumed the office of President in 2000 according to plan despite forewarning people since 1990 and officially through TRANCE by 1995, the American public knew he stole the "election" in his Texan brother's "home state" of Florida yet felt powerless to stop him after the 9-11 trauma. Now Hillary is suddenly a Senator from "the World's Capital" of New York, ready to move into Presidential position as planned unless people reclaim their country and lives now.

[14] www.Klang.com

[1] www.preferrednetwork.com

[2] www.davidicke.com

[3] www.preferrednetwork.com

[4] Russell S. Bowen, The Immaculate Deception, the Bush Crime Family Exposed, America West Publishers 1991.

[5] Rodney Stich, Defrauding America; Dirty Secrets of the CIA and other Government Operations, Diablo Western Press, 1994.

[6] Col. Fletcher Prouty, The Secret Team; the CIA and Its Allies in Control of the United States and the World, Institute for Historical Review, 1973.

[7] www.rie.com.

[8] Robert Gaylon Ross, Sr., Who's Who of the Elite; Members of the Bilderbergs, Council on Foreign Relations, Trilateral Commission, Skull and Bones Society, Committee of 300, RIE Publishing, always updated and available through www.rie.com..

[9] www.consciousevolution.com

[10] www.UCSUSA.org

[11] Barbara Trent, The Panama Deception, 1993. www.empowermentproject.org

[12] Thought communication is a natural to autistic children whereby they respond well to therapy with animals, particularly horses. www.taoofequus.com [13] www.givemeliberty.org

[14] www.rie.com

[15] www.davidicke.com

[16] Police Against the New World Order.

[17] www.radioliberty.com

[18] www.mikenew.com

[19] The 1947 National Security Act affects all who have treaties with the US.

[20] www.klang.com

[21] www.spiritualhorizons.net

[1] David Icke, And the Truth Shall Set You Free, Bridge of Love Publications, 1995. www.davidicke.com [2] www.radioliberty.com

[3] David Icke, I Am Me, I Am Free; the Robot's Guide to Freedom, Bridge of Love Publications, 1996. www.davidicke.com [4] www.disclosureproject.org

[5]David Icke, The Turning of the Tide, audio and videotapes of his presentations available at www.davidicke.com [1] Back to the Future, Universal Pictures, 1985.

[2] The importation of Nazi and Fascist scientists into the US.

[3] Control of the media.

[4] Founder of NASA.

[5] Reagan asked Congress to ban all Toshiba products indefinitely.

[6] Revelations; 17

[7] Newsweek

[8] The 1947 National Security Act binds any country that has a treaty with the US.

[9] www.radioliberty.com

[10] www.infowars.com

[11] www.scizone.com

[12] www.radioliberty.com

[13] www.freeamerican.com

[14] www.copvcia.com

[15] www.bayarea.com/mia/mercurynews, September 24, 1996

[1] www.bayarea.com/mia/mercurynews.com

[2] In addition to being a horse affectionado, Claire keeps their International Import "Outback" business thriving.

[3] "From the Wilderness," www.copvcia.com

[4] Dr. Colin A. Ross, Bluebird; Deliberate Creation of Multiple Personality by Psychiatrists, Monitou Communications 2002. www.rossinst.com

[5] The Carefully Crafted Hoax.

[6] P.31, TRANCE

[7] P. 142-144, 215, 31 TRANCE

[8] Ku Klux Klan racist organization utilizing violence and murder. Senator Byrd's political records prove his ties to this criminal racist organization.

[9] Awareness of the use of subliminals rose, prompting outrage by 2000 when Bush, Jr. was forced to defend his ads by (mis)saying, "I did not use any subliminables in my campaign."

[10] www.freeamerican.com

[11] www.rockymountainnews.com/Ramsey.

[12] Senator Byrd's state. Beauty pageants are highly political.

[13] P.126, TRANCE.

[14] 5-11-2004 The Associated Press reports John Ramsey's bid for Michigan State House of Representatives.

[15] Fox TV.

[16] A 'patsy' is someone who is set up to take the fall for a crime.

[17] www.TRANCE-formation.com

[18] www.klang.com

[1] Carl Klang's song for Kelly was receiving airplay nationwide, raising awareness of her plight that resulted in more letters to her from all over the world. Carl's song was a powerful encouragement for Kelly at a time when she needed it most.

[2] Old slave hymn.

[3] Testimony was provided to that effect. Kelly's records were never returned, making it impossible for her to graduate or continue schooling.

[4] Kelly's success with Breeze became widely known throughout Tennessee and Kentucky, prompting her reputation for telepathic healing communication with horses.

[5] www.taoofequus.com

[6] In NLP, "try" is considered a non-productive negative that is avoided by aware mental health professionals.

[7] It "disappeared" by the time Kelly turned 18.

[8] The raccoons refused all genetically engineered foods and anything containing aspartame!

[9] Wag the Dog, New Line Cinema 1997.

[10] www. 1997/gen/recourses/players/starr/lewinsky

[11] www.freeamerican.com

[12] Chapter 24, "A-Hunting We Will Go," TRANCE 1995. www.TRANCE-formation.com

[13] There is no ability to dream or hope under mind control.

[1] In 1981, Senator Byrd adamantly ordered that Kelly's childhood vaccinations be immediately stopped. Vaccination, The Hidden Truth, Taycare Pty Ltd, video@vaccination.inoz.com

[2] Over 24 Billion Dollars already donated through the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation is used to find and fund scientific solutions to world health crisis including AIDS, immunizations, vaccinations, education and more. www.csmonitor.com/2003/0925/p01s04-woaf.html.

[3] www.UCSUSA.org

[4] Perhaps there is a more appropriate term than this that appropriately spans all religion, but I used this word because it's the one I know for a physical destination for spiritual purposes.

[5] Linda Hunt, Secret Agenda; The United States Government, Nazi Scientists, and Project Paperclip 1945- 1990, St. Martin's Press, 1991.

[6] Violence resultant from 9-11 does not fit the attitude and atmosphere of the Balinese people, which raises questions as to the political agenda that upset their balance.

[7] Mark continued to heal "110%" in no time.

[8] The movie Pearl Harbor had been media hyped to an extreme just prior to 9-11, causing history buffs to delve into the causation. The trauma allowed President FDR to drop the atomic bomb and join WWII the same way 9-11 spawned Bush-Cheney oil wars.

[9] Senator Byrd funded Sesame Street through Melon Bank's Endowment for the Humanities as it was structured to manipulate the minds of the children and prepare them for Global Ed. This was not the intention of Jim Henson, as the conflict his opposition to Byrd's influence was significant just prior to his untimely death.

[10] December 13, 2002, www.tdlm.org/News5/resigns.htm

[11] Chapter 1, "My Introduction to Humanity," TRANCE.

[12] The Vatican Child Abuse Policy from 1962 to date.

[13] Vatican contact information: av@pccs.va, phone: +390669881022, fax: +390669885373, address: Pontificio Consiglio delle Comunicazioni Sociali, Palazzo San Carlo – 00120 Citta del Vaticano (do not write "Italy" on address as nation of Vaticano is ‘separate’. Thank you) [14] “Double Exposure,” Vanity Fair, January 2004.

[15] MK Ultra files available through www.TRANCE-formation.com

[16] Chapter 24, “A-Hunting We Will Go,” TRANCE.

[17] By September 11, 2003 the Alaska was threatened with oil drilling again.

[18] www.disclosureproject.org

[19] By November 2003, the Vatican declared genetically altered foods would be used to feed the hungry much to the disdain of those in the know worldwide. Among those in the know is the Union of Concerned Scientists. www.csf.colorado.edu/archive/2000/food/msg00000.html. www.ucsusa.org

[20] New Zealand native

[21] www.rajon.com/area51/html/pinegap1.htm

[22] Federation of American Scientists, www.home.manyrivers.aunz.com/stingray/pinegap1.htm

[23] Union of Concerned Scientists, www.ucsusa.org

[1] www.spiritualhorizons.net

Contact Mark and Cathy direct for book/bulk book orders
TRANCE008@hotmail.com

https://svalispeaksagain.wordpress.com/accessing-part-2-preventing-access/

Svali Speaks Again

Healing from ritual abuse and mind control

- Mizpah: Svali Speaks Again
- About
- Contact
- Blog
- Articles
- Book Info

Accessing Part 2: Preventing Access

Now that the problem of accessing has been defined, what can the survivor, and their helper do, to prevent reaccessing? Especially with the knowledge that early in therapy, reaccessing occurs in nearly 100 % of survivors? It is very common for survivors to be given cover memories that they “broke free” or that the cult abuse ended earlier in life, while in reality, they have been continuously cult active. It is common for survivors to be reaccessed or have cult contact of some kind, until the amnesia starts coming down.

The cult does not just “let people go” when they become adults, or enter therapy. Instead, the accessing will often increase during this time, as cults or government agencies do not want to lose members.

With this knowledge, the survivor will need to find out which parts are currently in contact with the cult. One way to do so is to give up all phone, email and online activity for a period of time, such as two months. The parts who are currently contacting will probably complain loudly, or the survivor may even become suicidal. The person may become restless and feel a huge urgency that they are “missing something important” in emails or online (the survivor will always have legitimate sounding reasons for continuing online and phone activities, such as checking bank statements and paying bills, but behind these is their programming to recontact running). The Christian presentation, with support, then has the opportunity to bring truth to these parts and help them break out of their cult-trained beliefs.

The desire to stop cult contact must come from the survivor themselves. While it may be obvious to the therapist and others that the survivor is being reaccessed, they will be oblivious to this fact, and will become very angry/defensive/hostile if confronted about this.

It can be helpful to educate the survivor and their parts on why it is a good idea to stop cult (family) contact. Some reasons to do so include:

- The survivor gets hurt
- Loved ones of the survivor get hurt when they are accessed
- Accessing impedes healing, because parts get retraumatized
- It is an extremely poor Christian witness to people who are still in the cult
- It is an extremely poor Christian witness to the survivor’s own parts
- It is a lifestyle of extreme duplicity

- The survivor has to actually hurt others during a reaccessing session
- The survivor may be forced to accept agendas against their therapist and other s
- Cult loyal parts that recontact will be rewarded for contact, which actually increases the bonding to those reaccessing, making healing more difficultThere are always significant traumas and double binds behind recontact programming, and the therapist will want to help the survivor look at these issues. Cult loyal parts will have difficulty stopping recontact if they believe that failure to do so results in the torture or death of someone they love. This is where the ability to trust the LORD with the safety of double binds is so important. Saying, "LORD, I give my double binds to you," does not at all ensure that this is being done. Instead, HOW the double binds were installed, and with whom, and the specific vows to protect the double bind will need to be remembered. Often, these vows are elicited by the survivor watching a double bind being tortured; unable to take any more, the survivor will cave and agree to stay in contact. They will have no memory of this event, since they will also agree to forget the event, or else their loved one will be tortured. This is why consistent memory work and dedication to healing and looking at the events that run recontact programming inside are so important. If the survivor is an international survivor (one who was hosted in several countries as a child and adult) their primary double binds will likely be in another country, and they may be amnesic to them. This will also need to be looked at. Breaking double binds with the American family may not be sufficient to stop reaccessing if there are unconscious double binds elsewhere.
- The survivor's first programmer/trainer will often be their primary double bind. They will often be completely amnesic to whom this person actually is. Their systems will be invested in protecting this person above all others, and so they will disclose other people as double binds first. The true double binds often will not come out until later in therapy. This is where accountability can help. Until the survivor is aware of and has broken their recontact programming, and has truly dealt with their double binds, outside accountability can help prevent reaccess. Safe accountability would be either a non-dissociative person, or a survivor who has broken their own double binds and recontact programming and is co-conscious with their most loyal cult parts.
- Survivors who are in the early stages of healing should never be asked to be accountability for another survivor's safety. They will be completely unaware of the fact that they themselves have a strong recontact agenda, which can include helping other survivors "reconnect" with family (cult) members, or others. A safe accountability person should be made aware of the survivor's safety plan (any survivor should have a safety plan, if they are serious about stopping reaccessing). This will include awareness of any phone calls and texts made and received, and any online activities of any kind; for instance, the survivor may ask the accountability person to be with them and watching at all times that they go online. Failure to have accountability jeopardizes both the survivor and others that they could impact. While it can be a "bother" to have accountability, the alternative can be much more painful. Once the survivor stops Internet, phone and other contact, and has accountability in place, they may actually feel worse for a period of time as they are breaking the programming. The programming is actually being drawn out so the survivor can look at it: they may feel suicidal or depressed, or shaky for a period of time. This will pass as the programming is broken.
- Stopping Astral AccessIf the cult cannot reach the survivor by physical means, they will attempt to do so spiritually, often through astral projection. These demonic spirits will appear, often in the middle of the night, to the survivor, and will frequently appear as double binds/loved ones. The astrals may appear to be in great distress, and will attempt to "blackmail" the survivor into recontact with messages that the loved one is being tortured, or sobbing that they miss the survivor. The survivor will need to discover and close the spiritual doors that allow spiritual access. This process will include:

- Finding out which parts inside have the job to maintain spiritual contact with loved ones in the group.
- Why they want to continue this contact
- What these parts believe will happen if contact is stopped. It is common to feel immense fear at first, at the thought of stopping astral contact, since the rituals and programming done around this is extensive, and starts in infancy. Spiritual parts may attempt to punish the survivor for attempting to stop it, until they become aware of the danger of continuing it.
- Once all doors are closed, both spiritually and physically, parts may start feeling safe enough to come out and disclose to the survivor, and heal. This includes getting rid of the demonic spirits that sit within the parts whose job is to maintain astral contact, and resolving the traumas that they have undergone.
-

Over time, astral contact will lessen as the survivor learns to use their authority to stop the contact. Simply commanding an astral to depart in the name of the true Jesus is sufficient to make it leave; doing this builds faith in the survivor's parts and witnesses to them over time, and they will be more and more willing to turn to the Christian God instead of to the dem

Share this:

Twitter

Facebook

Loading...

Blog at WordPress.com.

Svali Speaks Again

Healing from ritual abuse and mind control

Mizpah: Svali Speaks Again
About
Contact
Blog
Articles
Book Info

Accessing: What it is and how to prevent it

The following is from my new book

One issue that survivors often face is attempts by the group they left to re-access them. This article was written to help survivors understand what accessing is, and the steps they and their therapist can take to prevent it from happening.

What is accessing?

Accessing is the deliberate contact of a survivor by the group (or affiliates) that they left, in order to intimidate and frighten parts into doing their cult jobs. Access may be as short and simple as a single sentence in an email that scares a part into shutting down therapy or withdrawing from healthy support. It can also be more complex, for instance, a survivor returning to a cult facility for hours for reprogramming.

If a person was raised in an organized group, they will have programming put in to make them accessible by the group. This is considered base-level programming to prevent their leaving.

How is accessing done?

Accessing is done by several methods, depending upon the stage of healing and awareness of the survivor.

One misconception people have is that accessing is done by mysterious, scary "bad" people who follow the survivor around and try to harm them when out and about. But the number one person who accesses the survivor is the survivor themself. They will have recontact programming installed that makes them become extremely anxious if they do not have regular contact with their cult handlers.

Cell phones are the number one method of accessing used by the cult. All survivors who have left an organized group will have programming in place to contact cult members by phone, or to receive messages or calls from cult members by phone. The survivor often will have absolutely no recollection that they received a text or message from the cult (this is how the amnesia linked to this programming works).

Who contacts the survivor? In most cases, the person's immediate family will be the members of the group chosen to contact the survivor. This could be a mother, father, aunt, uncle, brother, sister, children or grandchildren, or other family members. Texts back and forth about "family matters" will often have hidden messages or cues within them, reminding the person's cult parts of their jobs, and the programmed threat that goes with them.

Examples: "Your family really loves you" is a frequent cue to cult-loyal parts to remember that only the cult can love them.

"I love you and miss you" can be a cue that if the person does not re-contact, that the person's double binds will be put into danger, or tortured.

"We haven't heard from you in a while" is an even stronger message that the person's cult parts need to contact, or someone they love will get hurt.

Often, cute videos of family members are sent as reinforcements of the fact that if the person tries to break free, or their parts stop doing their old jobs, the people in the video will be tortured. There may be subliminals in the background reinforcing this message on an unconscious level.

The person's cell phone bill will not show the more blatant or direct cult calls or texts, because there are special codes that can be entered in that ensure that the calls are not recorded by the phone company.

To break this re-contact programming, the individual's presentation (or host parts) needs to show the programmed parts that it is entirely possible to disobey the programming directives. This involves breaking the program by

1. parts realizing there are options besides the directives

2.parts giving up programmed lies for truth. The presentation parts may want to choose for a period of time to give up phone contact with cult-active associates or family members, until the person is sufficiently healed to be able to relate without being accessed. If the person chooses to give up their cell phone (which should be done in order to break the programming, at least for a period of time), the group will then attempt to access the survivor by other methods. They will usually go to email or online next, since most people stay "connected" in these ways. Emails with triggering subject lines from people the individual knows and trusts will appear around this time in healing. This is because most accessing occurs from people the person has known and loved most of their life. The individual has no idea that these members of their family, or church, or group of friends, is a cult member, since they will be amnesic to this fact until the parts begin coming forward and sharing information with them.

1. Subliminal Programming: whenever a survivor uses technology such as a smart phone, goes online, plays video games, or watches current TV programs, they will be fed subliminal messages and images designed to fire off their NWO and other programming. These subliminals are part of Project Alexis, which was designed to prepare the world for the rise of the NWO. The images are fed at a speed of .03 microseconds (faster than conscious sight can see), with extremely rapid audios paired as well. Once a survivor of cult programming signs into their email address, or visits Facebook, or signs into Amazon, or any other sites online, the subliminals linked to their profile will begin automatically feeding through their browser (there is no "safe" browser or operating system that can prevent this). Images of family members being hurt, and other distressing events, will be flashed by faster than the survivor can visually process. Ads with cues and triggers will also be displayed, and the individual may be completely unaware of this fact until they begin healing and working towards co-consciousness. It becomes a “catch 22” in many ways: the emails, texts and subliminals frighten parts into not disclosing about family members, and the person is left wondering why their parts are not talking to them, or sharing much in therapy. The failure to disclose and amnesia keep the survivor in constant contact with cult members, while they are completely unaware of this fact. As a result, their cult parts continue to do their jobs, while the person’s presentation has no idea that this is going on. If a person chooses to give up their cell phone, and to go completely offline (or only limited online use with full accountability, i.e. someone watching while they check their bank statement, etc.) then the attempts to access by other methods will escalate.

2.
3. Common forms of attempted access at this point will include visual triggering by a visit from a family member if the individual is still in contact, or the cult placing someone who looks very similar to a double bind in view of the person. This could be a child who looks very much like a beloved child or grandchild standing next to the survivor at a store; or individuals who look just like a family member showing up when the survivor is in a public place. These are meant as nonverbal warnings: “If you don’t obey us, this person will get hurt.” These double bind lookalikes may also quickly sign messages to the survivor that they may be amnesic to (such as “help me” or “save me”) in order to trigger their recontact programming. Cards by postal mail with threats may arrive; or voice mail messages with triggers may be left on a message machine. If the person has international presentations, mail addressed to the name of one of the other presenters, or a child or loved one from the other countries, may show up (i.e. “How odd, this mail came here and I don’t know anyone by that name.”)Visual cues may be placed in the survivor’s surroundings: a bouquet of flowers that has a special meaning; a special perfume on a card, or a ‘gift” of a food that has a specific meaning to another presentation may appear. If the above do not work, then attempts at physical abduction may be attempted as a last resort. Often, the survivor will be taken somewhere by someone they know and trust, that they are unaware of as being a cult member, and physical accessing will then occur. If the survivor has too much co-consciousness to allow this, then physical threats and abuse may occur when the survivor is alone or in a vulnerable state. Along with all of the above, the cult will also attempt spiritual access of the individual trying to break free. Dreams, threats and messages via astral projection may be given while sleeping, or even while awake, through demonic means. It is important that the individual prays about any open doors or parts with double binds that were programmed to stay in contact with loved ones who are cult members in this way.
4.
5. Why is accessing done?
6. Internal jobs
7. As mentioned previously, these jobs could include both “internal”, “spiritual” and “external”/”physical” jobs;
8. Accessing is done to make sure that the person’s cult parts are continuing to do their jobs and that the presenters continue to remain clueless and amnesic. Continued access will cause continued amnesia and dissociation.
9.

- Making sure that the person’s dissociation/amnesia is intact
- Protecting/guarding classified information or parts inside

- Blocking the person’s healing
- Undoing the person’s work in therapy
- Wearing out helpers
- Sending warfare and division internally and externally
- Participating in full rituals internally and calling on the demonic

External jobs

- Participating in rituals
- Active physical agendas against Christians and those helping survivors break free
- Sabotaging other survivors’ safety or healing
- Assignments like research and assassinations
- Training of younger cult members
- Reporting to the cult
- Disseminating misinformation
- Discrediting other survivors and therapists

The person will normally be completely unaware that they have been triggered, or that their cult parts are doing their jobs, until later in healing.

Next, we will address a common question that survivors ask regarding accessing.

If I pray, and ask that my Christian Host or presenters be present, could I still be accessed and unaware of the fact?

Yes. Why? Firstly, because the LORD does not set aside free will in the survivor, including the free will of parts who are still compliant with cult orders or who still want to protect loved ones in the cult way. Also, the Christian host, while a true believer, is often programmed to allow access and may have taken vows of amnesia and access, i.e. the Christian host/presentation is double-minded. Thirdly, the survivor often has a False Christian presentation that takes over the prayer that prays to a false “Jesus” or “God” before the Christian presenters (who pray to the true Christian God) have a chance to pray.

While the Christian presentation can pray, if other cult programmed parts that the Christian presentation is amnesic to rotate out due to a trigger or cue, the person can still be accessed and be completely unaware of this fact.

Here are two examples from real life. At one time, I took an accountability person (another survivor in therapy) with me each time I went to visit my children in another state (there was a custody battle, and at the time, I was only allowed supervised visitation with her children due to the risk of my abducting them in order to get them away from their abuse). Each time, my accountability person and I, as well as trusted church support members, would pray for my safety and ability to stay in my presentation and not lose time during the visitations.

Throughout the visits, I would pray continuously for safety with my accountability friend On the way home, after each visit, I would thank the LORD with great relief for safety, and the fact that “nothing bad happened” during the visits, and gave praise reports to my church about how the LORD protected me and my friend, and answered our prayers for safety.

It wasn’t until years later, and with more healing and deeper internal communication inside, and the amnesia dropping, that I discovered to my great distress that during each visit with my children, I had been accessed, tortured, and reprogrammed during the entire time. My accountability partner had been programmed to not remember these facts either. This is one reason why in general, other survivors do NOT make good accountability for a survivor.

The "safe visits" were actually cover memories that my Christian presentation was told to believe, or my children would be tortured and/or killed. Because I loved my children, there was a huge investment in not remembering, and so I had no idea of what actually happened during the visits. Memories of taking my children shopping were dealt with by cult members placing the items "purchased" in my car, and quick photos during the last hours of the visit were taken, with each photo staged to show different "fun activities" with my children.

In actuality, each visit was reaccessing and reprogramming by the cult, with orders given to not remember the accessing and to come again in several months. The amnesia at the time was utter and complete, with absolutely no hint of what was actually occurring during the visits. My belief that the visits were safe, and that nothing bad had occurred, was real – and mistaken.

Another example: One survivor who had broken off all contact with her family due to cult memories of them had a short meeting with her brother at a local grocery store. She timed it and had a accountability person come and get her at the end of 15 minutes, to ensure that the meeting was short. She and her brother walked around the store and talked a little. During that meeting, completely unknown to the Christian presentation despite prayer, her brother gave a message to her cult parts. Due to the message, for months her cult parts strongly attempted to sabotage some very important matters for the person. These parts shared what happened only six months later in therapy, after much trouble.

Asking the Christian presenters/Host if the survivor was safe during a time period may not work for several reasons:

- The false Christian Host was the one actually out praying and reporting how the trip went, and the survivor is completely unaware of this fact
-
- The Christian presentation/Host has been heavily programmed to sabotage healing and keep cult contact up. They will be completely unaware of this fact. The person's day to day Christian presentation/Host may be the most heavily programmed part of the person, and they will not know this at all. The cult will not leave Christian parts unprogrammed; and in fact, will make sure these are the ones that maintain recontact.
-
- It can be helpful to educate the survivor and their parts on why it is a good idea to stop cult (family) contact. Some reasons to do so include:
-
- The desire to stop cult contact must come from the survivor themselves. While it may be obvious to the therapist and others that the survivor is being reaccessed, they will be oblivious to this fact, and will become very angry/defensive/hostile if confronted about this.
-
- With this knowledge, the survivor will need to find out which parts are currently in contact with the cult. One way to do so is to give up all phone, email and online activity for a period of time, such as two months. The parts who are currently contacting will probably complain loudly, or the survivor may even become suicidal. The person may become restless and feel a huge urgency that they are “missing something important” in emails or online (the survivor will always have legitimate sounding reasons for continuing online and phone activities, such as checking bank statements and paying bills, but behind these is their programming to recontact running). The Christian presentation, with support, then has the opportunity to bring truth to these parts and help them break out of their cult-trained beliefs.

-
- The cult does not just “let people go” when they become adults, or enter therapy. Instead, the accessing will oftenincrease during this time, as cults or government agencies do not want to lose members.
-
- Now that the problem of accessing has been defined, what can the survivor, and their helper do, to prevent reaccessing? Especially with the knowledge that early in therapy, reaccessing occurs in nearly 100 % of survivors? It is very common for survivors to be given cover memories that they “broke free” or that the cult abuse ended earlier in life, while in reality, they have been continuously cult active. It is common for survivors to be reaccessed or have cult contact of some kind, until the amnesia starts coming down.

Share this:

Twitter Facebook

Loading...

Create a free website or blog at WordPress.com.

https://svalispeaksagain.wordpress.com/2018/07/08/alice-in-wonderland-programming-part-2-crazy-alice-and-black-alice-programming/

Mizpah: Svali Speaks Again
About
Contact
Blog
Articles
Book Info

svalispeaksagain 8:23 pm on July 8, 2018

Tags: mind control (69), occult (13), programming (60), ritual abuse (65)

Alice in Wonderland Programming Part 2: “Crazy” Alice and Black Alice Programming

Trigger warning: this post contains information about programming that could be triggering to survivors of ritual abuse and mind control.

Crazy Alice Programming

A part of the Alice in Wonderland (presenter) programming is the “Crazy Alice” programming, which is meant to warn the Alice controller (a presentation controller) to never allow memories to come up, or they will be labeled “insane” and extreme abuse will occur. This is often the root of insanity fears when a person first starts remembering their past; the presentation controllers know that if they remember, Crazy Alice is supposed to present.

In this setup, the child (now called “Alice” and dressed in the typical blue dress and white pinafore) is taken to a “mental institution” that looks like one from 400 years ago, where the “inmates” are chained, and who rant, rave and curse at her. The child is left there for days, with her only food being rancid water and rotten cabbage. The inmates (actually cult actors) hurl feces at her, verbally abuse her, and the custodians sexually abuse her while she is chained to the wall because of her “insanity” (remembering).

Because she is “sick”, and “mentally ill” Alice is taken regularly down to the basement for “treatment” which consists of electroshocks, drowning, and being held over a rat pit filled with hungry rats that are allowed to bite her feet and ankles. The child is told repeatedly that “remembering” or “telling” will have her labeled “crazy” and that she will be taken to the institution (or one similar) for “treatment.” This is part of developing the presenter amnesia and vows to never remember (or seek treatment).

During the hospital stay, a team of doctors in white coats walk through the ward and stay with Alice, and the head doctor (usually, a primary programmer) says “Alice is my favorite patient” and “I will do everything possible to help you get well.” Alice keeps a stuffed rabbit with her (“foo foo”) who at night seems to come alive and sexually abuses her (this is done with a hand puppet). When Alice reports the abuse the next day, the doctors look at her sadly, and insist that she is “sick” and “needs more treatment.”

There is a special room in the “hospital” for the religiously insane, with Bible studies and church meetings, where Alice is raped and abused by the “Christians” and “Jesus” in the hospital. After several weeks of this treatment, “Alice” is pronounced “cured” (e.g. this part is heavily traumatized and has learned to never disclose what is going on, and to promote presenter amnesia) and is allowed to leave.

This “hospital” is also part of the presentation re-programming. If the presentation amnesia begins to break down, and the individual remembers, the “doctors” (programmers) will come internally and take the parts that broke programming to the “hospital” internally for treatment (reprogramming).

This is also linked to recontact programming as well. The presentation is often programmed that if there is too much programming breakdown or remembering, to believe they are “sick” and “need to go to the hospital right away.” This is meant to get the survivor to an “approved” hospital or treatment center where they can be accessed, and reprogrammed.

Black Alice Programming

In another version of Alice programming, Alice has a “dark side” that comes out and kills everyone around her in a killing spree. The terrified presenter wakes up to a room full of bloody bodies, and is told that if she ever remembers, the “evil” inside of her will “escape” and she will kill her loved ones. This is a particularly cruel form of amnesia programming.

Black Alice wears a black dress, black stockings and shoes, and a white pinafore (covered with blood stains). She lives in Nightmare Wonderland, a black and terrifying version of the white wonderland. In Nightmare Wonderland, the prime terrors are re-enacted time and time again, such as rats that chase the child, large stinging insects; black woods filled with horrible creatures, huge caterpillars that look like maggots able to sting, etc. The woods and other areas of this wonderland (which includes a large cemetery) are also filled with dead bodies and rotting corpses, and zombie-like creatures chase the child.

Black Alice has often taught to “love death” and insists that she loves killing, and death; she has often been forced to have sex with dead bodies, and cannibalizes them as well. This controller terrifies the white presentation, who fears that she will come out if they “lose control” (e.g. by trying to break programming, or remembering too much).

During her creation, Black Alice is heavily tortured and traumatized by everyone around her except the dead in the room; the dead bodies are her only “comfort”. She has a rabbit called “Edward” who hates all living things, teaches her how to kill to protect herself (rewarding her with sex) and later encourages her to “kill, kill, kill” to give him something to eat. Edward is Black Alice’s only friend, and protects her in a nightmare world.

Black Alice is also a part of the child’s assassin programming, since for simple jobs she can switch out and do a kill, and the white presentation will be completely amnesic.

The individual needs to realize that “Crazy Alice” is not crazy, but traumatized. She and the others in the “hospital” have been programmed with scripts, and the traumas need to be recognized, worked through, and resolved. This is true for Black Alice as well: she is not “evil” but a very traumatized, very young child who was frightened and wanted protection. These are very difficult memories to face, and the presentation will often experience a lot of anxiety working with these parts due to the fact that these are their own controllers.

The traumatized parts can heal, and will be relieved to talk with someone who is safe. They may fear being hospitalized, or alternatively, may insist that they go to a hospital for “treatments”. If possible, it is best that the individual has a safe person stay with them until this programming is worked through, and they realize the traumas and fears that drive it.

As with any other program, there will often be threats to both the individual, or to loved ones, if this program breaks (the individual’s loved ones will have to go through the “treatments” or torture if Alice refuses, etc.). Bringing the trauma memories to conscious remembrance, and refusing to act on the programming, will often help it break, as the individual processes the emotions.

Share this:

Twitter Facebook

Loading...

Related

Alice in Wonderland Programming: Part 1: White Alice Programming
June 30, 2018
In "healing"

Vatican book part 10
June 11, 2022
In "healing"

Book Part 7
November 18, 2021
In "healing"

Leave a Reply

Enter your comment here

← Dealing with Harassment: Part 1

Hybrid Labs: Fact or Myth? →

Create a free website or blog at WordPress.com.